40 Officials Discuss Shift Of ICC Rails

Mayor Blaney Miller and President Morris will be among 40 ICC officials meeting today to discuss the proposed relocation of the Illinois Central railroad tracks.

The discussion for relocation of the tracks, now bisecting SIU’s campus and the community, was instigated by university officials.

Mayor Miller, favoring the relocation, believes, "the re-location would benefit both the city and SIU."

The benefit of the relocation is two-fold according to Miller.

"It would assist in relieving the traffic problem, and provide opportunity for further development of Carbondale," said Miller.

Miller said the area could be used to benefit and beautify the 3,200 acres of a city park, city hall building, office buildings and mechanisms like lots or parking garage."

The University is interested in the idea, both the ICC tracks and U.S. 51 relocated because of the proposed shift of the track including a 17-story women’s dormitory.

Originally the University had planned at least one underpass and several over passes for ICC electric traffic to get across the railroad tracks.

The meeting was to be at 7:30 a.m. in the third floor of the University Center.

Feb. 29 Is Deadline For Preregistration

The deadline for next term’s preregistration is Feb. 29 at noon. After this date, students will be required to pay for their fees at the time they register, stated Marion Treece, director of the registration center.

"Classes are beginning to close rather rapidly now," Treece said. This is another reason why students should be encouraged to register immediately.

Stephenson Says Advertising Appeals to Freedom of Choice

Advertising is an appeal to the wide freedom of choice as it exists in its highest form in America.

This was the message Wednesday of William Stephenson, psychologist from the University of Missouri and a consultant to the D’Arcy Advertising Co. of St. Louis.

Stephenson spoke in Morris Library Auditorium to advertising, marketing, journalism, printing and photography students and faculty members.

The speaker, who holds doctorates in both physics and psychology, emphasized what advertising can do—and what it can’t do.

"It cannot," he said, "solve the basic attitudes of individuals in areas such as religion and politics. Stephenson also disputed critics’ contentions that advertising can create wants and desires that are not already existing within individuals. These already exist, and advertising is designed to appeal to this latent desire, he told the group.

He used the Scottish poet Robert Burns as an example of a man who knew how to live as a human being. Burns’ philosophy was one of economy, Stephenson said, and he used this philosophy as a basis for advertising.

"Consumer choice is one of the most important freedom re­making, and advertising is directed toward persuasion in making this choice," he said.

He illustrated his remarks with a number of examples of his own work as an advertising consultant, including the naming of Studebaker’s "Lark" automobile.

Stephenson used another example of the effectiveness of mass appeal, this was the attempt, largely unsuccessful, to export "democracy." He contrasted this with the successful export of technology and the consumer-type products now known and used throughout the world.
Can Touch-Typist 'Feel' Mistake?
Research at SIU Tests This Theory

By Jack Rechtin
Stop. Close your eyes and bring your finger up to touch the tip of your nose.
Or, with your eyes closed, raise your arms to shoulder level.
Did you land on your nose? Were your arms at the right height?
This illustrates that mysterious sense of kinesthesia, the sensory mechanism that tells you what your muscles and joints are doing.

Leonard J. West, associate professor in the School of Business and the Department of Psychology, is currently investigating the role of kinesthesia in acquiring typing skill.

"We call it 'touch typing'," said West, "but it is really kinesthesia, not 'touch', that enables the expert to type and to sense when he has made an error--without looking either at his hands or the typescript."

West pointed out that one generalization on kinesthesia was stated by Paul Pitts in Stevens' "Handbook of Experimental Psychology." Pitts said, "Visual control is probably very important while an individual is learning a new perceptual-motor task. "As performance becomes habitual, however, it is likely that proprioceptive (kinesthetic) feedback or 'feel' becomes the more important." This proposition, West said, "argues strongly against the conflict with the generalization that we learn what we do. That to learn to type without looking, we must type without looking from the very start."

The hypothesis that West is testing is that "the acquisition of skill is characterized by a progressive decrease in reliance on visual cues, and a progressive increase in reliance on kinesthetic cues."

"To test this hypothesis," West explained, "we needed a means of depriving the typist of his vision. By doing so, we could infer from his performance, without vision, whether he can depend on kinesthetic cues--"feel"--and how much."

"If the typist, without vision, can signal when he 'feels' he has made an error--we will infer that the kinesthetic sense is present and that proprioceptive--or 'feel'--is the first requirement, then we can construct a means of depriving the typist of his vision."

Designer Hideo Koike of SIU's Central Research Shop created a three-dimensional, cardboard shield that hid the typist's hands, keyboard, typewriter and typescript, but in no way hindered the typist's motions.

Working with typists at levels of skill from eight to 80 words per minute, West has secured data from more than 150 typists. These typists were from high schools in Du Quoin, Marion, Herrin, Carbondale and from college and graduate courses at SIU.

Early testing in West's experiment worked for 12 minutes under each of the following three conditions:
1. Under ordinary conditions to furnish a base measure of the typist's speed and accuracy.

2. Under ordinary conditions, but with instructions to retyping immediately any word in which an error was made.

3. Under the same instructions as condition two, but with the data obtained, it should be possible to chart the rate of acquisition of dependable kinesthetic feedback."

"We also said," West went on, "that proprioceptive (kinesthetic) feedback is by nature much slower than visual feedback."

"Perhaps West's findings will suggest that 'eight typists' to the best way to learn at the start."

249 Students Practice Teaching In Illinois

SIU students of education on the Carbondale campus are teaching during the winter term in schools of Chicago and 30 southern Illinois communities.

The student teachers number 249, and come from 121 Illinois communities and seven other states. SIU students went into the Chicago school system for the first time during the spring term of 1963. This term 15 students will teach under supervision of 14 Chicago grammar and high schools.

Largest number, 53, will teach in University School on the SIU campus. This is an educational institution with pupils in both the grade and high school levels that furnishes student teachers a laboratory in which they can go through actual teaching practices under the guidance of experienced teachers. The training of teachers is supervised by the department of teacher training in the College of Education, Charles D. Neal, director, pointed out that teacher training is a requirement for the bachelor's degree in education.

Off-Campus Area Council Planning Mock Convention

The Off-campus Area Representative Council is currently working on plans for a mock political convention to be conducted on campus the weekend of May 22-23.

The event is only one of many being considered by the newly formed council, in an attempt to better organize off-campus residents and provide more opportunities for their participation, according to Tom Ford, supervisor of off-campus housing.

Other plans being considered at the council's weekly meetings are possibilities of sponsoring faculty—student potlucks, foreign student exchanges, square dances, intra and inter-area password contests, and discussions on sex education, moral problems and prospects for world government.

Conventions plans call for student delegates from both on and off campus to represent the 50 states, in selecting a Presidential candidate. The February issue of Householder's Newsletter describes the convention thus: "There, student delegates from all states will gather to thrash out the important issues of our times, to indulge in the pompous oratory, the specuclal demonstra·

British Chief Rejects Cuba Boycott Plan

WASHINGTON -- President Johnson welcomed Britain's prime minister to Washington Wednesday and remarked that the United States and Britain are much like two brothers who enjoy occasional squabbles, "but whose ties are too strong even for that.

Johnson, addressing Sir Alec Douglas-Home in a formal ceremony at the White House, noted that "we are part of an anglo-american community," and that "the U.S. and Britain share a tradition of liberty and a love of freedom that is fundamental to our respective societies.

In an address at the 60th anniversary dinner of the Empire Club of Canada, Douglas-Home said Britain will "be sent to Guantanamo, and that the U.S. will not give that assurance.

The Soviet Union announced that it will not participate in the Boycott Plan, which was initiated by Cuba, and which was designed to protest against British military tours at Guantanamo.

The Soviet chief delegate, Semyon K. Tsaarapkin, declared Wednesday that Nosenko's defection could be "compounded of violence and lawlessness.

The way was cleared for the renegotiation of trade relations between both countries.

No More American Dependents Will Be Sent to Guantanamo

WASHINGTON -- The Defense Department announced Wednesday that no more families of military personnel or civilian employees -- will be sent to Guantanamo, and that the 14,000 dependents who have been brought home gradually over the past two years will be returned.

Asst. Secretary of Defense Arthur Sylvester announced this in a letter to Congressmen. "The purpose of the process of bringing the Guantanamo Naval Base entirely self-sufficient, and to improve the garrison posture of the base.

In the past, there have been about 3,000 Cuban workers on the base. Sylvester said he could not state how many more would be needed.

Guantanamo will be shortened to a year or less, "as has been done in the past for unaccompanied military personnel at remote bases.

Sylvestor disclaimed assurances that several hundred Cuban civilians who have been working on the base will be fired. Overall, there have been about 3,000 Cuban workers on the base. Sylvester said he could not state how many more would be fired.

France Names Pekovy Envoy

PARIS--The Foreign Ministry announced the appointment Wednesday of Claude Chayet, as French charge d'affaires in Peking. He will leave for Red China Tuesday.

Chayet will set the stage for the arrival of France's first ambassador to Red China, who has not yet been named.

The ministry announcement was made by Red China's newly named charge d'affaires, Sung Ching-Kuang, who is expected to reach Paris some time this week.

The way was cleared for the appointment of the charge d'affaires when relations between Paris and Nationalist China were broken Monday, their last communications.

Russian Claims Lured Away By U.S. Agents

GENEVA--The Soviet Union charged Wednesday that Yuri I. Nosenko, an expert on the Soviet disarmament delegation, here, had been lured to the West by U.S. intelligence "provocative activity."

The Swiss directorate blamed Switzerland for loose security and demanded that the Swiss police improve their work.

Swiss reaction was sharp. Rene Heigl, president of the Geneva cantonal state government, called the Soviet statement "slanders, unjust and untrue." He charged the Russians failed to cooperate with Swiss police in the matter and even actively hindered police work.

Warren Commission Shown Photos by Oswald's Mother

WASHINGTON--Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, telling the Warren commission her life story and that of her son, brought photographs but declined to leave them as evidence, Chief Justice Earl Warren said Wednesday.

Warren told reporters at a luncheon break in the closed hearing that the mother of Lee Harvey Oswald offered the pictures on condition that "they would not be shown to anyone.

The commission declined to give that assurance.

Warren is chairman of the special presidential commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

No Russian, German, or American should be lured away by deceitful U.S. agents.

Stevenson Decrees Extremist Activity

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.--Adlai E. Stevenson declared Wednesday night that advocates of extremism in U.S. political life do utd by forming a frame of mind among the ignorant and thoughtless in which extreme courses seem natural.

He recalled that, "in the year that has passed since we last met to celebrate the memory of Abraham Lincoln, another great president has been shot down by a mad assassin, another great leader has been cut off before his work was finished."

He said the tragedy of President Kennedy's death was "compounded of an atmosphere of violence and lawlessness" and gave to the world at large "a picture of malice, passion and violence in America."

Compulsory R.O.T.C. Fades

The University of Illinois is the 8th of the middle west's "Big Ten universities to place military training on a voluntary basis. By recommendation of the university's administration and by unanimous approval of its trustees, beginning next September, male students at Urbana will be permitted to attend military training depending on their choice.

Illinois follows a well- worn trail among the historic land grant institutions which very early in their lives provided, with federal government assistance, mechanical, agricultural and military training. The universities of Michigan and Minnesota have had voluntary reserve officers training for years. The university of Wisconsin and Ohio State put R.O.T.C. on a free-choice basis three years ago. Michigan State took that action in 1962 and the State University of Iowa last summer.

2 Remain Compulsory

Since naval training at Northwestern university is voluntary, only Purdue and Indiana universities, in the "Big Ten," still maintain training for future officers on a compulsory basis.

This trend in the midwest conforms with that in land grant institutions generally. Some 30 have closed officer training on a compulsory basis.

No one would hold that the developing change from compulsory to voluntary military training is a world-shaking matter. Yet some lessons are to be learned. An important lesson is that what was held to be unpatriotic, indeed almost treasonable, at one time may be entirely patriotic at another time.

In the 1930's and 40's, as part of the war against World War I, college and university companies gave rise in a movement to make military training optional. Hitler's overtures ensued, with many students and other students churches ranged against university presidents and deans. Battles raged all the way to trustees and regents. University administrations generally fought off the opposition, kept war department money coming in and the protesting students were put down as an unpatriotic lot and the ministers as misguided idealists. Sauve a Salute

The candidates of "Sweetheart Queen" all missed the boat, campaign-wise.

They should have gazed eastward, toward the Foggy Bottom hangouts of our nation's most accomplished politicians, to observe the newest trend in electioneering—the "non-campaign."

If treadmill campaigning is good enough for our brightest presidential hopefuls, it should be good enough for Suzie Schwartz, would be O.K.

Campus Sweetheart Queen.

If I had been Suzie's campaign manager, I would have posted numerous signs proclaiming, "Suzie Schwartz is not a campaigner." Mr. Schwartz could have held a press conference—in the University Union—at 10 a.m., naturally—at which she read a prepared statement to this effect: "I wish to announce that I am not a candidate, I am not active campaigning, I am doing a great deal to discourage those who advocate my candidacy."

Suzie's statement: "However, any public spirited off-campus beauty must consider it a duty to accept a sincere draft."

I would have put Suzie on radio and television, several times a day if possible, to announce dramatically: "I am not a candidate."

At every public gathering, she would have stated: "In answer to the inevitable questions, let me only say this—I am not a candidate."

In her classes, she might have said: "Despite the latest poll, which claims me to be the overwhelming favorite, I am not a candidate."

There would doubtless have been an interview with a representative of the Chicago Tribune. The Ordinance Picasyme, Suzie's terse comments would have included: "There is a definite lack of talent in the race, but I mustieseat that I am not a candidate."

The last, and respectable, to the lovely winner of the recent Sweetheart contest, she would not have had a chance if Suzie had seen fit to conduct a no holds-barred non-campaign.

My services as non-campaign manager for the next campus election will go to the highest bidder.

If no far sighted candidate cares to make use of my political genius, I may offer his services to any other candidate.

If he can be persuaded to withdraw from the race, he might still win.

The program is a success. Countries in which members of the Peace Corps have worked are pleased. Sending you more, they say. Peace Corpsmen themselves must be pleased. A sense of satisfaction must be theirs, that they not only have helped a stumbling nation back onto its feet, but also that they have helped improve America's position in the eyes of the world.

This Peace Corps Week at ShU. A Peace Corps team is on campus to outline the work of the Corps, to discuss its opportunities, and to explain how students can prepare themselves for possible work with the Peace Corps. Young Day R. Sargent Shriver, director of the Peace Corps, spoke in the University Union meeting room. Meetings throughout the week are featuring Peace Corps speakers.

The Peace Corps is a worthwhile cause. We urge you to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity to become better informed about it. Now is the time.

Students Encounter
African Predicament

The first year at SIU requires quite an adjustment to being away from home but imagine touring a foreign country and being stranded 133 miles from nowhere. Victor Seper and Roger Karak, two SIU design majors, recently encountered this predicament in Africa.

Two of five SIU students who are spending this term abroad had planned to enter the Ivory Coast in Africa but were refused admittance. In a letter Seper said, "Last Saturday Roger and I went by tory to a small town about 133 miles northwest of Kumasi (Ghana) to try and cross the border into the Ivory Coast. Well, we tried for over an hour but to no avail! A Lebanese timber contractor, about 23, saw our plight and even tried to get us over but to no avail after the attempt as well.

to meet the demands and opportunities available," Shriver said. He explained the procedure of the Peace Corps, that a country must request aid before volunteers are sent. The director said that every country, where the Peace Corps has helped, has asked for more volunteers.

He said Afghanistan was originally asked for nine volunteers. Soon, 30 more were requested, then 30 more. Then the cabinet gave the Peace Corps a carte blanche to work anywhere in the country - the first time the Afghan government has done this with an agency from a foreign government. Then Afghanistan asked for 220 more Peace Corps members.

Shriver said that Ghana, currently engaged in kicking Americans out of the country, has asked for 80 more Peace Corps volunteers. He said the members of the Peace Corps have become immensely popular and are reversing the "Yankee Go Home" sentiment.

The director said that careers in the Peace Corps are discouraged in order to keep it youthful, enthusiastic and fresh. He described the "Five Year Flush," in which a person who has served the Peace Corps for five years in any capacity would be released.

Shriver said he was proud that the Peace Corps was truly bipartisan.

"We are one of the few agencies backed by Sen. Henry Humphrey and Sen. Barry Goldwater," he said.

"We are very proud of the Peace Corps volunteers," Shriver said. "Cynics told us at first that American youths could not go into a country and live without cars, television sets and hot dogs."
