SIU-C won’t fight liquor license loss

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

University officials have decided they won’t fight a $26,600 liquor license fee that was levied against the Student Center of the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale campus this week. The fee was levied after the Student Center was charged with selling liquor to a minor.

The license fee will cost the Student Center approximately $26,600 per year. The fee is based on the gross sales of the Student Center and is calculated at a rate of 25 cents per dollar of sales.

SIU-C President Todd Rogers, who is also the Student Center’s board chairman, said the university will not contest the fee.

"We have always said that we would comply with all laws and regulations, and this fee is no exception," Rogers said. "We understand that the state needs to collect revenue from license fees, and we are willing to pay our fair share."
Three youths held, questioned in two Chicago cops’ murders

CHICAGO (AP) — An hour after the death Wednesday of a second policeman who was shot when he and his partner stopped a car, investigators announced they were questioning three young men in connection with the slaying.

Officer William Fahey, 34, shot in the head with his own gun during a Friday night without regaining consciousness. His partner, Richard O'Brien, died Tuesday with three slugs in him.

The names of the three men being questioned were not revealed, and James J. Burns, deputy chief of police detectives, said the trio could be “either suspects or witnesses.”

“The investigation is not closed,” Burns added.

The officers had curbed a car on the South Side after it had gone through a red light when the shooting occurred. It touched off the biggest Chicago manhunt since two policemen were killed by snipers in 1978 in the Cabrini-Green housing project.

More than 100 off-duty uniformed officers and detectives who volunteered to work on their own time joined the search.

They canvassed the neighborhood and checked hundreds of leads that poured in even before two rewards were offered—one of $10,000, offered by “private sources” and announced by Mayor Jane Byrne, and another of $10,000 put up by a police union.

Detective Chief William Hanhardt placed together this account of the shooting after questioning witnesses.

After the car went through a red light, O'Brien and Fahey touched their siren, turned on emergency lights and pulled the car over.

O'Brien, who was driving, approached the driver's side of the car while Fahey approached the passenger side. Fahey noticed the passenger was in sweatshirts, and his jacket was on his lap.

He then ordered the passenger out and patted him down for a weapon. He was then observed faking the passenger's jacket on the front seat of the car.

For an unknown reason, Fahey tried to put handcuffs on the man. Then a scuffle broke out.

Hanhardt said it appeared that the man somehow grabbed Fahey's service revolver, whirled around, and fired one shot from about six inches away. The bullet hit the policeman behind the left ear.

The gunman then swung to the left and fired a shot across the trunk of the car, hitting O'Brien in the chest as he was running around the back of the auto to help his partner.

Six indicted in churchwomen murders

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's U.S.-backed civilian-military junta indicted six national guardsmen Wednesday for the Dec. 2, 1980, slaying of four churchwomen more than a year ago. The guardsmen were suspected of being involved in the murders of the women churchwomen more than a year ago. Whom. colonial spokesmen claimed the guardsmen were suspected of being involved in a plot to overthrow the government.

The ministry canceled a news conference on the indictments, and no Salvadoran official would talk publicly of the case.

The development followed the U.S. Congress' approval last week of a resolution in additional military aid for that war-torn Central American country, where leftist guerrillas are trying to topple the government. At least 22,000 people are believed killed since the Oct. 1, 1979 coup that brought in a new military regime.

A military source who asked anonymity said two other guardsmen also were linked in the case and that one of them could be charged with participation in the crime. The source refused to identify the guardsmen or say if they also had been indicted.

In another development in El Salvador, the country's key active relief agency says it has run out of medicine for 30,000 refugees and that the government is blocking delivery of emergency medical aid from abroad.

Juan Francisco Zamora, president of the Salvadorean Green Cross, says the agency has been waging since October a tug-of-war with the authorities to get permission to retrieve three tons of antibiotics, vaccines and surgical equipment from a customs inspection site.

A separate Green Cross report for permission to import 30 two-way radio, one for each of its field offices caring for a mine, has gone unanswered for the same length of time.

No military official contacted by The Associated Press explains the four-month delay in the permits, which they said usually take four weeks to process.

Federal workers to expect furloughs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of federal workers are being told Wednesday what they must do to stay home one day every two weeks without pay so the government can save money, several federal officials told journalists Wednesday.

The mandatory furloughs, planned to begin in March and April, are part of a government-wide effort to reduce federal spending. Each agency is determining separately whether to require the mandatory furlough days, which would continue until the end of the current fiscal year Sept. 30.

‘Tough choice’ in school bond issue

By Kathy Kamienski
Staff Writer

It’s a pay now or pay later situation for voters in Carbondale High School District 165. That was how Don Yost, district business manager, described the voters’ choice in the $8.25 million bond issue referendum on March 16.

“Admittedly, it’s a tough choice. We can pay now for a new building or continue to pay for the operation and maintenance of three buildings,” Yost repeatedly stressed at a meeting of the district’s referendum planning committee Tuesday.

Yost said representatives of various community agencies and outlying school districts that about $60,000 a year in operations costs could be saved if the district consolidated into one new building. About $8,000 a year could be saved on transportation costs, mostly by eliminating shuttle buses between the East and Central Campuses and the vocational school, Yost said.

Those savings figures don’t take into account massive repairs needed, including roof repairs to older district buildings, some built as long ago as 1921, Yost said. The decision to ask district voters to approve the sale of bonds to construct a 155,000 square-foot high school building has been discussed for nearly three years by the school board, said Superintendent Reid Yost.

The district faces declining enrollment from a high of 1,500 students in 1975 to an anticipated low of 1,000 students in 1989-90, Martin said. That increased costs of maintaining three buildings, Martin said.

For the buildings and programming that would be abandoned if a consolidated school were built, Martin said officials had pursued several options but had encountered a stumbling block. “You can’t sell a building when it’s full of students using it for school,” Martin said.

He said no decision had been made but buyers would be asked two key questions: “What will happen to the old buildings?”

—How much will the bond issue raise property taxes?

Yost said cost figures on how much the bonds would raise taxes were still being calculated. After another referendum committee meeting this week and a school board meeting next week, Martin said, firm cost estimates should be available.

But despite the claim by presidential spokesman Larry Speakes that Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., “put up or shut up,” the White House on Wednesday finally rejected a Democrat’s call for a virtual freeze on Pentagon spending while trimming by half the administration’s 1983 budget.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after President Reagan demanded that his budget critics “put up or shut up,” the White House on Wednesday finally rejected a Democrat’s call for a virtual freeze on Pentagon spending while trimming by half the administration’s 1983 budget.

Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., in his most notable detour to date from Reagan’s game plan, declared the Hollings proposal “interesting and worthwhile.” And his deputy, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, agreed that “it merits a lot of consideration.”

Baker told White House officials privately that he regarded Hollings’ approach worth investigating. Baker and Stevens seemed more enthusiastic than the Senate’s top two Republican leaders, who junked the Hollings idea, the three-year tax cut plan with the White House. Hollings said his alternative could cut Reagan’s projected deficit of $81.5 billion for 1983 to $42 billion, and produce a surplus in 1985, the year Reagan forecasts a deficit of $75 billion.

The plan calls for a one-year freeze on defense spending at current levels, elimination of one-year’s cost-of-living increase in Social Security benefits and government pension recipients, and tax reductions in the three-year tax cut plan.

Congress approved last summer.

Students must fight to stop unnecessary fee hikes

The three proposals to boost student fees by $26.60 a semester next fall are a mixed bag of justifiable and unfair and unnecessary increases.

The proposals, which the Board of Trustees will consider at Thursday’s meeting, call for raising the $45 student medical benefit fee by $15, the $96 Student Center fee by $5 and the $60 revenue bond fee by $10. The increase in the medical fee has merit. The others are rough cuts.

An open line of questioning at the last dip into the pockets of the student body shows that there has been no increase in the medical fee since the summer of 1976, while the costs of hospitalization, qualified personnel, utilities and equipment have been skyrocketing.

So while operating costs have risen, Health Service income has not increased, resulting for small increases resulting from slight increases in enrollment. In addition to helping fund the Health Service, the medical benefit fee also helps to defray the expenses of such valuable programs as the Student Wellness Center and the Alcohol Education Efforts to keep down costs and taxes have also been made, such as selling precess, lowering med sites at cost or slightly above.

One of the facts in this is that, even with the increases, the fee will still be smaller than it is at many comparable universities.

The medical benefit fee is not mandatory. Students who are otherwise covered by health insurance can get a refund. Taken together, these facts make a good case for the need for a higher medical benefit fee. Good care at a reasonable cost is a bargain.

This plan can not be said of the other proposed increases.

Raising the revenue bond fee is a particularly unfortunate proposition. This fee is used to help pay the debt for construction of the Student Center and University housing on East Campus. In effect, it is using the revenue bond fee to increase the Student Center cost of the University’s income. It is also a subsidy paid by all students to those students whose parents have the money to make these payments for them.

This particular hike in the revenue bond fee is part of a six-year series of increases, planned to compensate for the phase-out of student subsidies to be a gradual way of generating tuition without letting the students know. Most students pay their tuition in the fall of each year.

A more equitable plan has been advanced by Debbie Brown, president of the Student Senate. She suggests a $15 increase in accordance housing rates and a $3 increase in the Student Center fee, the latter because of the burden of campus housing debt on residents andtuition costs to students. These hikes will still be a more reasonable way to pay off the University’s debts.

The proposed increase in the Student Center fee seems more a result of lack of prudence on the part of the University administration in not leaving the options open for all possible ways to cut costs other than by letting students pay for them.

The administration said the SIU-C student body has apparently been more sensitive to the effects of fee increases this year than in years past. Student Welfare and Activity Fee at SIU-E, in particular, has seen a decrease.

Student Senate and University Center fee increases, if passed, reduce — yes, reduce — the amount of the $8 aid package that we'd see in our pockets. Student Senate and University Center fee increases are not the only way to solve the problem. There is a need for a fairer method of distribution.

The entire blame for rising fees can not be laid at the feet of the in the past has been conducted by the small group of student organization. Most ideas have been left to die.

If students want to stop the seemingly endless escalation of our cost of education, they must fight it by making sure their voices are heard at registration, and then putting over this miserable fee increase, they must fight it by putting the student body into the student Senate and University organization. Most ideas have been left to die.

Why do I get AM in stereo?

WTTA’s format change seems quite logical to me. Instead of surveys a market and determining that the competition for listeners in this area is stiff and that advertisers would be more interested in a station with the greatest audience.

In fact, the only thing I fail to comprehend about the change is how they got through my FM radio.

Our response to President Reagan’s education policies must be dynamic and immediate.

First, we must change our attitude of powerlessness and indifference. Get your friends registered to vote.

The only thing Reagan understands is votes. It’s obvious he doesn’t care about education, just as he doesn’t care much about the poor, the handicapped, or the elderly. So act now because voter registration is due for the primaries next Monday.

We must work against the right-wing extremism that surrounds and supports Paul Simon, the chief defender of federal aid in education. Simon has stated that he will support any legislation that would work this year.

The budget is the key to making cuts. We must not allow Simon to cut federal aid in education. Vote both sides.

Jan. dream may end in July strike

The impossible dream shared recently by General Motors and the United Auto Workers may become an inevitable nightmare when, next year, UAW and GM negotiate.

Raising costs, a sluggish economy and foreign competition pave way for Detroit reeling. Union and management have rarely seen eye-to-eye on issues, but the relationship took a strange turn when both agreed last month that a loosely based partnership was needed to solve current problems.

The two sat down months before the current contract expired and made far-reaching proposals, expecting the other to make equally far-reaching concessions. The dream was perhaps doomed from the start because of the past relationship between Detroit and the UAW.

The fact that the talk failed goes without saying. The way they sat apart at the 11th hour leaves many observers worrying that a strike or the union is all too likely.

What is needed most is time. Both sides need to fall back and realize just how far they had gone. Once the wounds had healed, both sides could then make a second attempt to work out a solution.

But time is not available. The current contract expires in September, the UAW expires in a few months, and both sides will be starting new campaigns again in July.

Only time will tell if there will be no failure. Such a failure can only result in a strike, which would be like a sub-zero temperatures following a winter snowstorm for the auto industry.

Neither side can settle for a patchwork contract, or if they want the auto industry to again emerge as a viable industry. Both sides agree that the industry must be restructured.

What GM has in mind at heart, both sides realize that prices of American cars must come down, GM must be as desperate as the other auto makers. All three — Ford, Chrysler and GM — are facing the effects of an ailing auto market, but GM/bounced back from its first loss in nearly 50 years to turn a profit in 1981. Chrysler and Ford, however, are not likely to do likewise.

It is also unlikely that GM would agree to protect union jobs that one day would be turned over to automation.

Nonetheless, when the two meet again, they must be willing to make some concessions. Both must be willing to share the blame if they are to work toward a mutual solution.

CONCEIVABLY, the two sides may not even agree on how to go about the contract negotiations. One may want another crack at what was last started last month while the other, hoping to avoid a strike, may want a quickly thrown together contract signed.

It’s naive to believe the bitterness over the current talks can be left on the surface. Let alone forgotten all together.

What was started last month should be completed in July. Both sides should take a part in this discussion, but it will not be a blame game and accusations on the other.

Polish workers still want Solidarity to lead them

by Thomas W. Netter

Associated Press Writer

Gdynia, Poland (AP) - A worker in the V.I. Lenin shipyard looked around, and then spoke quietly when asked about the future of Poland's free labor union. The union was suspended by martial law Dec. 13.

"Solidarity was here, and it will be here," he said.

One after the other, workers standing silently in the bone-chilling winter cold of the shipyard where Solidarity was twice suspended by Poland's premier and party leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, to halt a slide into what he called "counter-revolution.

The workers apparently have decided to hang on for a long time. "We are ready to protect this winter, but one after the other, they have restored the mess,真情 has been spilled in chalk on a door in the nearby port of Gdynia.

"Winter is Yours, Spring is Ours."

The trade unions in this country cannot be confined strictly to unions as the workers said, "They must play some political role, and it has to be part of the world's agenda."

Many workers said they want to fight for their own union, not others, by their own means, and that Solidarity should be seen as their trade union, not a central body.

"I will never join another (state) trade union," said a docker.

"I will never join another (state) trade union," said a docker. "An empty room, a room of my own, a room by myself, a room by Solidarity."

"I can't imagine a Poland without a trade union," added a worker who was found by Solidarity's leaders - Dec. 12 - the day before martial law was declared and many of them were arrested and interned.

"There is a group of people who are discontented, and very strongly so," said Piotr Lapicki, the leader's brother.

"But many of them accept the situation.

"And we have to make sure that the trade union won't be used against the country in our country."

The meeting was for calling the West to Poland to stop the labor union from being destroyed through radio propaganda, another official asserted. "We have to protect the winter, but the spring belongs to the party."

Debate on Poland rages at human rights meeting

MADRID, Spain (AP) - Western delegates pressed for an early review of the European Conference on Security and Cooperation in Western Europe after two stormy days of debate over the Polish crisis.

Pierre Aubert, foreign minister of neutral Switzerland which has played a key role in the military regime in Poland, said that in the present crisis of East-West relations "we believe that the only reasonable action is to quickly subordinate the Madrid meeting to an immediate suspension of the conference for several months."

Aubert asked how the conference work could proceed unless the Helsinki Final Act, which the Madrid conference is reviewing, is "really respected" by all participating states. The final act, signed by most of the countries of Eastern and Western Europe, gives the United States and Canada, for example, a code of international conduct, including respect for human rights.

Some conference sources said the expected suspension of the conference would formally propose a review of the final act. Ambassador Javier Rubi, the Spanish delegation of Spain which is host to the conference, said the Swiss desire for suspension of the conference had been "well received by governments."
Table manners making a comeback

Students learn business of etiquette

Did you hear the story of the employer who narrowed a list of job candidates down to two and then, at a dinner interview with both, chose the one who didn’t spill his food before tasting it?

That’s one of the messages that organizers of a Wine and Dine dinner etiquette program wanted to get across Sunday night in the Old Main Room in the Student Center. The dinner—a tasty feast of French onion soup au gratin, beef stroganoff, broccoli with melted butter served in a white bowl and California green salad—was co-sponsored by the Off-Campus Resident Life Office and the Student Programming Council. Its aim was to indoctrinate about 60 residents of 800 Freeman and Stevenson Arms to prescribed social table manners.

No, not just a reminder of Mom’s warnings against slurping soup from the bowl, but an informal lecture on the accepted communicative and dining procedures that every up-and-coming young job hunter should know.

Some places it really doesn’t matter how you eat or how you act,” David Anderson, the program coordinator, a graduate student in business administration, said.

“But when you’re in the business world there is a socially acceptable way of behaving. This program is for people interested in obtaining etiquette skills so that when they go for their job interviews, at least 50% of half of that interview is conducted over dinner— they won’t embarrass themselves. Employers often have to determine if they want to see if you’ll embarrass the company if you’re hired.”

“Some so many people going for a limited number of jobs. And with skill and experience being equal, you have to have a competitive edge.”

And the consensus of organizers of Wine and Dine was that etiquette on college campuses, once on the decline, is beginning to be valued again as a necessary skill upon graduation. Call it a resurgence of the ‘preppy attitude” or a more conservative trend in just about everything, college students, they say, need to know it. See MANNER Page 7 how to handle themselves when entering the increasingly refined world of life. "There has been a resurgence in interest in this skill of etiquette," Nancy Harris, director of student development said. "And people want to appear more times a week and to be acquainted with what is going on. Our lives are changing, and people want to keep pace with the times." Harris said. Organizers say they've seen a trend toward more attuned to traditional etiquette behavior.

A handout on dining etiquette handed out: "Remove bones, pits, seeds. Bottle caps are not so tight times, unless they want to be. Help those people who can't help but wipe their hands, or have a coat sleeve. Some of the don'ts are:

- Don't break and dump crackers into soup. As a matter of fact, soup requires the use of oyster crackers exclusively. But when using them, don't go overboard and turn your soup into a cream of potato and cracker mess.

- From a handout on dining information handed out: "Remove bones, pits, seeds, etc. from the mouth with the thumb and forefinger. Gristle and other food material should be removed as delicately and unobtrusively as possible with the fork or spoon. The foreign matter should be put in an 'obscure' place on the plate."

Some things about wine: Red wine should be ordered before dinner so it can remain open and "breath." White wine comes chilled and the glass should be held by the stem. With red wine, one can be daring and hold the glass closer to the top. It is appropriate to ask that wine be served to taste the beverage if you're expertise in wine ends with bottles with twist-off tops.

And for Pete's sake, don't drink your beverages from the bottle - it could create the wrong impression.

‘Project Outreach’ making Theater Dept. a library for city

By Abigail Kimmel
Staff Writer

The Theater Department is getting around these days. The department, in an effort to bring theater to the rest of the University and community, has launched an informal program called Project Outreach. Theater faculty member Judith MacLean, coordinator, says she wants SIU-C and Carbondale to know that the department’s knowledge is at its disposal.

“We want to demonstrate our potential as a learning resource to the rest of the University. We need to share our expertise,” says MacLean.

Lyons emphasized that many departments and disciplines can use the theater for educational purposes.

“Right, I’m sure there are people who could benefit from the theater’s professionalism. A philosophy faculty member has asked about some of our students performing for his aesthetics class. But we have to have criteria for the actors who are invited to show. We can’t just take any actors,” she says.

The department’s latest venture into other disciplines involved Lyons and Calvia MacLean, another theater faculty member.

During a presentation by English Professor Richard Lyons for SIU-C’s James Joyce Centennial Celebration, Lyons and MacLean portrayed characters from such Joyce works as “Finnegans Wake” and “Ulysses.” And according to MacLean, they were a “big smash.”

“We were able to attract quite a crowd. We can say we’ve got people who know we’re in the theater and have no idea what we do. We show our presence by doing Chekhov or Shaw or ‘Three’s Company’,” MacLean said.

MacLean has also been involved in another aspect of the program, this one with the Special Education Department. MacLean was contacted by James Geraldo, professor in Special Education, after Crowner twice saw a “Day in the Death of Joe Egg,” which MacLean had directed.

Crowner asked MacLean if the cast members would give another performance to use for a class discussion. They complied, presenting selected scenes filled out with narration. After the performance, MacLean said, there were the usual questions people ask of actors, but with special insights. “They would ask if this or that provided the motivation or if they realized this was happening. Sometimes the actors did and other times not, but both groups learned and saw things in a different light.”

The S.C.R.O.O.P. of Medicine might seem an unlikely partner for the Theater Department, but Donna Falvo, director of Behavioral Science in Family Practice, thought actors might be just what she needed for the residents’ program.

She contacted the Theater Department in the fall to see if any actors would be willing to pose as “bogus patients.” Lyons said, “We were willing to advertise for the program. She said it is good experience for the actors, who must set up a predetermined set of circumstances, such as symptoms, age, histories and dates. The actors must also be able to improvise.

MacLean added that both Judith and I, as well as the whole department, are concerned that the theater is considered ‘hallowed ground.’ We want to show that we’re not pretentious or fools. At least most of us aren’t.”

Home invasion reported by two students

Two SIUC students were robbed at gunpoint in their home Tuesday night, they told the police.

Theresa Gleason told police three men entered her residence, 512 N. Michael St., at about 10 p.m. and robbed her and Rodney E. Ruch of about $50 and Ruch’s watch.

Miss Gleason said one man entered the front door, which was unlocked, and dispensed a sawed-off shotgun to Ruch, who was told to face down on the floor.

Miss Gleason said she heard the two talking and left her bedroom to find two other men outside her room. She said they had entered by breaking in the back door, which was locked.

Miss Gleason said she noticed that one of the men had a bandana, but didn’t know if the other was armed. She said her room was ransacked, and that she had $40 stolen. She said that the robbers left heavy equipment, such as stereo equipment.

Miss Gleason said Ruch was struck in the back of the head the shots were fired, while he was lying on the floor.

This factory just plain fun for children

By Mike Nadolski
Student Writer

At first glance, the words "Bubble Factory" conjure up a variety of images. It could be something that makes soap or maybe gum, or produces soap operas. It could be a new wave musical group. The Bubble Factory, however, is a campus-based group that performs dramas for children in a giant, plastic bubble. The group expanded its program this year to include poetry, puppetry, and storytelling of folk tales and myths.

Students Lori Frankel and Tawdra White, who direct and coordinate the group with faculty advisor Marian Kleinau, feel that this was a necessary change. "The bubble can be used for more things," said Frankel, a senior in speech communication, "and it's time to explore those alternatives. You can only go so far with dramas." Frankel said The Bubble Factory wanted to offer the community more than it has in the past. The project has been around eight years.

Interacting with children in plastic bubbles the size of an average classroom, the performers take children on adventures into their own imaginations, where they can call the shots.

"I've never been in this area of the community that it has in the past," said White, a junior in psychology. "We plan to offer the children an active imagination." The Bubble Factory has enjoyed varying degrees of success since its inception in 1979. The performers, drawn almost entirely from speech department classes in creative drama for children, have presented "bubble dramas" throughout the state of Illinois. Some have performed at area state fairs and many have been invited to perform at many state fairs.

The group has been received with enthusiastic responses, and many parents have come to say that their children have never been in a bubble before. The group has received many letters from the children who have enjoyed the experience. One letter read: "We love the Bubble Factory."

The Bubbl Factory is a group that performs for children with a variety of arts and crafts such as painting, dancing, and acting. They perform in a plastic bubble which is big enough for a small group of children to play in. The group is directed by Tawdra White and Lori Frankel, who are both seniors in speech communication.

The group has performed at many different events throughout the state of Illinois and has received many positive reviews. They have even performed at state fairs and received many letters from the children who have enjoyed the experience.

The group is composed of students from the speech department and performs at schools, nursing homes, and other locations. They are a group of students who enjoy working with children and are passionate about performances.

Robert Resnick, instructor of the Alexander technique, lets Jay Burt, son, r-e Radio-T.V., capture the relaxation technique. It looks like he has the feel of it.

Former music teacher at ease teaching Alexander Technique

By Randy Rendfeld
Staff Writer

Since Professor Emeritus Robert S. Resnick retired from teaching at SIUC last year, he has embarked on what his wife, Jannelle, calls his "labor of love" — his second career.

Resnick, who has taught music (specializing in woodwinds) at SIUC since 1946, still teaches a two-hour class. Listed as Music 361, "The Alexander Technique," it is really not a music course. Any student can take the course, and Resnick also gives small group and private lessons in the technique.

The technique, discovered by F. Matthias Alexander, teaches not to eliminate tension, but to redistribute it, so that each part of the body "functions as it should, in concert with the entire self," he said.

People should "tense only when necessary and only the amount needed to do a particular job," he said. Considering that the Alexander Technique was discovered in the 1890s, it certainly doesn't seem to be just a fad of fashion. Men such as writers Aldous Huxley and George Bernard Shaw and philosopher John Dewey have advocated it.

Dewey, at age 85, after 30 years teaching, decided to take the course himself. He found it so beneficial that he decided to teach a class of his own.

Fischer instructs architects to keep parking garage costs low

By Bob Bonduazast
Staff Writer
Architects for the proposed downtown Carbondale parking garage were warned by Mayor Hans Fischer to keep project costs to a minimum.
Fischer warned the architects at Monday's City Council meeting that any further costs in constructing the garage would put the project above the approximately $14.25 million available from bond sales to finance the garage.
The Council informally accepted preliminary plans for the garage at the meeting.

Pole miners sentenced after strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The martial law regime sentenced four coal miners to jail terms Wednesday for organizing a strike in which nine people were killed in clashes with police.
Authorities also convicted a Solidarity leader at trial that sparked singing of the national anthem in a Warsaw court, and prepared to decimate Solidarity's No. 2 leader in Gdansk.
The Polish news agency said Solidarity member Jaroslaw Wroblewski, a four-year-sentence and three years' loss of civil rights from a Stalinist military court in southwestern Katowice for the Dec. 15 strike at the Wujczine.
Officials say 10 people have been killed since imposition of martial law Dec. 13. One was killed in a demonstration in the Gdansk port of Gdansk, and nine more died when riot police overthrew a protest police line and opened fire to quell resistance.
PAP said Jerry Warzola got 2½ years in jail and three years' loss of rights for the strike, while Adam Skwira and Marian Gluch received three years in jail and two years' loss of rights.

"We are at the maximum expenditure right now," Fischer said. Increased costs would not be permissible because "We don't have the money."
About $700,000 of the money from the bond sale is needed for debt service. Financial Director Paul Sargent told the council.
Larry Church, representing the architectural firm of Carl Walker and Associates, estimated the construction cost at $3.32 million.
City Manager Carroll Fry said.
In a related matter, Fry told the council that offers to purchase the land for the downtown redevelopment project were mailed on Monday, with a summary of the bids for the offer.

The Alexander Technique, Resnick said, is "use effects function."

The three most important words pertaining to the Alexander Technique, Resnick said, are "use effects function." Alexander's usage, inhibition releases, rather than suppress, spontaneous reactions to stimuli, to help the student think about the reaction before doing it, wrote Priscilla Jones, author of a study on the technique. "Body Awareness in Action..."

The technique thus focuses on what is in the body, but how it is done. Resnick said that when a person clutches a staircase, she should not focus on the last step, but on the next one.

To demonstrate how much extra energy people use, Resnick has his students perform a simple task, such as rising from a chair. When most people do this, they tense certain muscles, and then relax by having a skilled instructor tell the subject to think about how to use his muscles, and then guide him out of the chair in a smooth motion, the effect doesn't use unnecessary energy, Resnick said.

Resnick became interested in the Alexander Technique at a music camp in Interlochen, Michigan, where he often teaches students how to play woodwind instruments during the summer. A colleague there introduced him to the technique. Mrs. Resnick has taught the technique could slip musicians reduce nervous tension while performing. Mrs. Resnick also helps her husband teach the private lessons in the technique. She has studied it extensively, but unlike her husband, does not have a teaching certificate because she has not completed the three years of full-time study needed to get a certificate to teach it. She said there are less than 500 trained Alexander teachers in the country.

Glasses of practicing the technique, fell so strongly that their vision was irritated. Alexander, a successful keeper of a store said, was troubled by his poor vision, and Romick said that using a mirror, Alexander put a perch on his head. When he watched, the other of his weight, developed, running on their methods until he

Alexander realized that he was dealing with individual parts of the body with the body itself, Romick said. He was aware of the fact that one part of the body is used in the same way as a whole part of the body has to complete. Thus, some muscles may be weak from "non-doing," others become tense from "over-doing."

The Alexander Technique taught to do this by correct use and release of the legs. The technique is a great instrument, but is useless for the body itself, Romick said.

Students in Music 361 are sometimes caught off guard by their first day of class. Some are sitting with their legs crossed, others sitting with their feet on the floor. The first thing Romick does is to make them concentrate on how they are "holding" themselves.

MONT VERNON, (AP) — Two women employees of a suburban Chicago nightclub testified Wednesday that former University of Illinois Vice President Robert Parker spent them tens of thousands of dollars for sex and companionship.

"He was willing to give it. I was going to give it to him," Nadie Laurs, 20, a dancer at the Tatten Club, testified during the second day of Parker's theft trial.

The manager of the Club Tatten testified that Parker spent more money at her club than any of the other customers.

"He was given to him, he seemed to enjoy himself whenever he came in. He was there to have sex — he was a very good spender," manager Ronald Lunt testified.

Parker was on trial for 167 counts of felony theft in connection with the disappearance of $62,000 in university funds between February 1979 and May 1981. He has pleaded innocent to the charges.

Lunt testified that for more than $40,000 Parker spent on 12 occasions at the Club Tatten, he got a few drinks, companionship, and haircut for about $500 to $5,000. Martin identified 13 checks in amounts ranging from $2,494 to $12,509 that Parker had given the club during the trial.

Parker is accused of writing checks from the U.D. Corp.

after dueling with the money from the University of Illinois in the bank account through phony vouchers.

The U.D. Corp. is a subsidiary of the foundation and was inactive at the time the checks were drawn on the account.

Parker was an officer in both organizations.

Parker's attorney, Arthur

Lerner of Champaign, has said there is no question Parker wrote the checks on money that wasn't his. The issue in the trial will be Parker's state of mind at the time the checks were written, Lerner said.

Miss Laurs and Angelina O'Malley, 30, testified that they met Parker when they worked at the nightclub. Miss Laurs said she was a dancer there and Miss O'Malley said she was a waitress.

Miss Lunt testified that Parker gave her more than $32,000 in checks. She said Parker had sexual intercourse, but that she never gave checks when sex was involved.

Miss O'Malley testified Parker took her to dinner at fancy Chicago restaurants and sometimes to a play. Sometimes, she said, they would later go to Parker's hotel room where they had sex.

Miss O'Malley said she received checks from Parker for more than $10,000. She asked him to write some of the checks to her mother, while others were for her car payments, she said.

Both women testified under an immunity grant with the Champaign County State's Attorney's office.

Miss O'Malley said Parker told her he was involved with Parker Bros. games and with a land development called Estates in Hawaii, and that he told her he was an official at the university.

In testimony Tuesday, Sidney Stafford, university director of internal audit, said Parker told him he became involved with the women because he had been under undue pressure and needed someone to talk to.

Women say ex-official gave 'thousands'

CHICAGO (AP) — Thomas Alva Edison, born 135 years ago today, had only three months of formal education and was eight years old before he got around to "inventing the light lamb." When he did, of course, his words were captured on a sheet of tin foil around a cylinder that could be turned to make a "talking machine." As always, he was proud of his phonograph, the phonograph of his 1,058 inventions. His genius so impressed a suburban service station owner, he offered Edison the use of the garage available about the man and his family began searching for an Edison phonograph.

The old Edison phonograph, now on display at the Maxwell Street market and knocked a bargain. He got it for $5.

That was 25 years ago, and now the 19th-century model is a "collectible" instead of an auto mechanic and one of only a few people in the nation who repairs and restores antique phonographs for a living.

At the family-owned Seven Acres Antique Village and Museum 58 miles northwest of Chicago, Donley has 600 machines, half of them grandchildren in all their various glory and 160 are perfect working order.

He restores and repairs about five each day. His clients range from collectors throughout the United States and Canada to idle antique fanciers who have stumbled across a relic in Grandma's attic.

"It's the fastest growing hobby in the country today," said David Donley, and prices have jumped from 10 percent to 50 percent in the last five years. The more expensive machines are in demand. He has several in the $5,000 bracket. A Victor talking machine with a wood cabinet, was in the $500 category three years ago, he said, but now is $3,000. Therefore he said he has three Edison phonographs and $3,500. Machines much prized for their technical superiority and the beauty of their mahogany boxes. They were produced between 1911 and 1912 and a decade ago were worth $600 in mint condition. Now such machines sell for $3,200 to $4,500 regardless of condition.

Donley, who has made Edison's 135th birthday a special day at his museum, said the most famous tinkerer of all time knew little about marketing.

"Take the RCA Victor dog for instance. I was told now it's $3,000. Therefore the RCA Victor is a cute porch with his ear cocked at the oddest note. The dog's name is Nipper. He belonged to a French painter and was a prop for an Edison company. But they thought up an insult. "So the artist just took off the name 'Edison Phonograph' and replaced it with 'Vic'tor.' The rest is history."

The last bell-shaped Edison was built in 1912. The firm bowed out of business in 1929. Edison himself had always viewed his invention as a machine to be used for business purposes, not as a mode of entertainment, said Donley.

"His competitors didn't share his marketing opinions, especially the firms of Columbia and Victor, who took great pains to sign the best and brightest recording talent of the day," he said.

"But Edison left behind another lasting item. In 1930, he developed the first L.P. record. The rest, too, is history," said David Donley.

Cody expected to retire in December

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal John P. Cody, the embattled leader of Chicago's archdiocese, probably will follow church custom and retire at the end of the year, on his 75th birthday, a church official said Wednesday.

Pete Foote, Cody's spokesman, who was hospitalized recently for a heart ailment, has made no public announcement about his future. However, Foote said, it's likely Cody will abide by church regulations, which recommend that diocesan bishops retire at age 75.

"It seems they just follow in the custom of the church," Foote said. "People close to the cardinal in his 'will set in accordance with the church's general procedures as he always does.'"

On Tuesday, the Rev. Magr. Francis A. Bracken, vicar general of the diocese, told a meeting of 50 diocesan senators, there would be no new subscription drive to the Chicago Catholic newspaper, at Christmas time, as is custom, and the cardinal has made no public statement on the matter. "He has not said how he feels," Foote said.

Cody, who celebrated his 50th anniversary as a priest in December, was released last month from his fifth hospitalization in a year. He is recovering at his New North Side home and has not made any recent public appearances. Cody was treated for an irregular heart rhythm during his hospital stay and was still reported in serious condition when he was discharged to go home. The aging cardinal has a long history of heart trouble and diabetes.

Foote said Cody is doing well and receiving outpatient treatment.

Cody, spiritual leader of nearly 2.5 million Chicago area Roman Catholics, was named archbishop of Chicago on June 16, 1965. The archbishop, who was ordained as a priest in 1961, also served in a variety of church positions in St. Louis, Kansas City and New Orleans. Cody is under investigation by a federal grand jury for the possible misuse of $1 million in church funds to benefit a longtime personal friend, Helen Dolan Wilson. The cardinal has denied any wrongdoing.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new federal budget has set off a storm of opposition from governors who say the domestic programs they would like to see are being stripped down to pay for record increases in defense spending. The depth of concern was indicated by the reservations expressed by several Republican governors who have been strong supporters of the president's economic program.

"I would prefer that there was not so much of an increase in defense," said Gov. Albert Quie of Minnesota. "But I understand this is what the president wants." \[Hunt\] of North Carolina also predicted state taxes would be raised higher by the Reagan budget.

The National Governors' Association held its midwinter meeting in Washington beginning Feb. 21, and Hunt said he would ask the governors to consider an alternative to Reagan's new federalism plan to shift-60 programs to state and local governments.

"I think we'll come up with a much grander swap idea, but it will not be the president's plan," Hunt said.

None of the more than 30 governors who responded to an Associated Press survey offered an unqualified endorsement of the Reagan budget. Several said they were analyzing Reagan's plan and declined comment.

There was widespread opposition to Reagan's plan to increase defense spending by 18 percent. The projected $81.3 billion deficit also prompted concern among governors.
Vanderbilt is netters' next foe

By Steve Metach

Saluki Coach Dick LeFevre expects a tough battle when the men's tennis team meets the Vanderbilt Commodores at Nashville, Tenn., Saturday.

Vanderbilt is a member of the Southeastern Conference, which according to LeFevre is one of the strongest conferences in the nation. The SEC boasts Auburn and Georgia, rank 3 and 4, and the nation last season.

I've never faced a Saluki who would have a tough task trying to steal a double at Vanderbilt. They are ranked 1-0, having already finished two matches this season.

Whether or not Anderson starts Thursday night is only one of the concerns the Salad will have to deal with. Senior Donald Reese and David Thrillick pack enough offensive punch to make for an average match. Reese, 6-9 center, and Thrillick, 6-7 forward, average 14 points per game apiece.

Reese, 6-9 center, scored 22 points against Indiana State to lead the Commodores. Thrillick, 6-7 forward, averages 14 points per game. The Bradley guards for the SIU-C game will be Willie Scott and Barryn Minor. Scott, 6-3 point guard averaging 8.9 points per game, leads the Valley in assists with 130. The 6-3 Minor has averaged 6.7 points per game.

No matter what, the Salad are sure to see 6-7 freshman Vass Williams, either at the guard or the forward spot. Vass said he was the leader of his high school in scoring last year, shooting at an incredible rate of 40.3 percent. He also averaged six points per game at Bradley.

Bradley also will have the home court advantage over SIU-C. On Jan. 11, the Braves barely squeaked by the Salad 63-61 at the Arena.

"We had been on the road for two games prior to the SIU-C game and were up for that one," Versace said. "I think playing at home definitely makes a decided difference.

"In the last SIU-C game it seemed like you could wave a towel at the players and they were back in the game. But, as a coach, that's just one of those things you have to adjust to and deal with."
Salukis romp past Billikens, 69-52

By Keith Maccutti
Staff Writer

In a game which was as exciting as a Tupperware party, SIU's women's basketball team defeated St. Louis, 69-52, Wednesday night.

St. Louis didn't arrive at the Arena until 7:30 p.m., because of an overwhelming crowd which filled the terraces East. Waiting for the Billikens was the biggest excitement of the evening. Although SIU-C won handily, Coach Cindy Scott was pleased with the Salukis' lackluster performance.

"After coaching for a while, it becomes a sixth sense to you — at least I use it anyway," said Scott. "We weren't sharp, simple things like 3, 5 — St. Louis level. It just wasn't a good game."

Scott used two teams in the win, with starters and substitutes making the same scores. The one bright spot in the game was the way of reserve forward Terri Schmittgen. Schmittgen came off the bench to score 20 points and grab 12 rebounds in just 22 minutes of play time. Schmittgen has seen action in just five games this season and has not given Scott something to smile about.

"It was just a good hustler," Scott said. "She's a determined player who needs to develop some upper body strength, but she's going to be a good player. I think she earned herself more minutes out there."

SIU-C never trailed, but only 35-34 at the second half, the Salukis put on a full-court press and built to 17 points. From that point, Scott used her bench to keep the reserves in the game.

Neitherteam shot well. For the game SIU-C hit 44 percent from the field, phenomenal considering the ability of the opposing team to defend against the field goal. St. Louis scored 32 percent.

The win was the Salukis' first last five games and lifted their record to 13-9. The loss dropped the Billikens to 6-8.

SIU-C will be in action Friday night when the Salukis travel to Columbia to contest against Missouri-St. Louis.

Coach uses 'sense' to guide his Braves

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

Brady Coach Dick Versace says he has a sixth sense when it comes to coaching basketball.

"After coaching for a while, it becomes a sixth sense to you — at least I use it anyway," said the controversial Versace. "The situation in which we are playing has a lot to do with how I handle the team. It depends on where we are playing, what we are playing and whether it is a close or a slam dunk."

"All the moves I make or the things that I do as coach because I've developed this sixth sense in coaching. I might not make too many people happy with what I do, but it does work, and it seems to be the best."

Versace's sixth sense has led the Braves to be in the Missouri Valley Conference sharing that position, however, with Illinois. Both have 9-2 MVC records.

What his sixth sense might not be able to do for him, though, is turn around Mitchell "J. J." Anderson, the game's hero against the Salukis in a 71-63 win over the Salukis in a game against the Salukis in which he finished with 18 points and eight rebounds per game this season.

Nevertheless, the senior is expected to start against Iowa State Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Arena. Versace said that Anderson has been playing well in practice and that he will start if he is able to play.

"He could be a real problem," said Versace. "I think he's a good athlete and he has the ability to beat people."

MVC bars Wichita from cage tourney

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

The Missouri Valley Conference has announced that Wichita State University basketball program will be barred from postseason play in the conference for the next two years, according to MVC Commissioner Dick Martin.

The MVC's decision Tuesday came after the National Collegiate Athletic Association put the university on three years probation in 1980 for recruiting violations which occurred in the basketball program.

These violations were the receipt by former players of plane tickets, cash, clothing and use of an automobile, as well as practices and events having the benefits available to recruits.

Information from the two former Wichita State basketball players led to the NCAA's investigation of the Shockers. The NCAA has decided that Wichita State Men's Athletics Director Bill Kellerman and Assistant Director of Athletics Herb Voss are also guilty of recruiting violations and the toughest sanctions by the NCAA or the MVC have been imposed against the Buffaloes.

We could impose further scholarship sanctions if we wanted to, but the compliance committee feels the action taken was appropriate," he said. "We have an enforcement policy and it was enforced." The NCAA, however, has prohibited Wichita State from using one of its athletics scholarships in the 1980 and 1981 seasons. The sanctions imposed by both the Missouri Valley and the NCAA will cut off the school's chances of financial gain through the postseason tourney.
