Freedom for Mandela increases civil unrest

JOHANNESBURG (UP) — Black leaders of the ANC, vowing to “seize the earliest opportunity” to negotiate a peaceful end to South Africa’s racial conflict, arrived Monday from Cape Town but aides wary of huge crowds awaiting him kept his whereabouts a secret.

As thousands spilled into the streets of the southwestern black satellite city of Soweto in celebration and jammed a stadium in anticipation of his arrival, Mandela’s aides said he would make a brief constituency visit at a small airport north of Johannesburg with an encouragement that he was coming to Soweto. They were quickly whisked away in a private jet.

Aides refused to say where Mandela was staying amid continued speculation about his whereabouts knowing only that he would stay overnight in a house in Johannesburg’s northern suburb.

The African National Congress leader was scheduled to return to Soweto Tuesday after more than 27 years in prison for a welcome rally that many expected would occur Monday.

Dozens of children were trampled underfoot in the public rush to enter the stadium Monday for what tens of thousands hoped would be their first sight of Mandela. No deaths were reported, but more than 10 people were injured, medical sources said.

The United Democratic Front, an ANC-linked anti-apartheid federation, appealed for an end to violence and misbehavior and said a Johannesburg incident in which a black man was killed by a white security guard dated from the violence that erupted when Mandela arrived there.

The guard told police he was wounded by blacks armed with stones and clubs.

Speaking with reporters in Cape Town before his Sunday morning arrival in Johannesburg, Mandela pledged to settle the conflict between South Africa’s whites and blacks at the earliest opportunity through “peaceful negotiations” if the government creates the right climate.

But Mandela stood firm in his political ideology after more than 27 years in prison on sabotage charges stemming from his involvement in the ANC’s military wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe, Zulu for Spear of the Nation.

“He would not win by a stroke of his pen. He was a law unto himself . . . He was always inviting trouble,” said Rich Manigault, a former student leader.

The armed struggle is merely defensive. It’s a defensive act of self-defense . . .

Local legislators uneasy about riverboat gambling

By Lisa Miller

After months of stormy sailing, riverboat gambling finally became a law, but some Illinois lawmakers would like to see it docked normally.

The new law will send 75 percent of the gambling revenues to education, with the remaining 25 percent split between the state and the communities that dock the gaming boats.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said he urged the governor to veto the legislation because it was “the wrong way to finance state government.

“We already have lottery and bingo, and I’m afraid that with the pressure on, that we will be the last-banged casinos in Chicago and throughout the state,” Dunn said.

The legislature will also allow education, with the remaining 25 percent split between the state and the communities that dock the gaming boats.

An extraordinary Congress of People’s Deputies will convene upon to consider this and other matters relating to deepening political reform,” said a statement, carried by Tass about the prime minister’s meeting in the Kremlin Monday.

The decision to hold another session of Congress, months before it was scheduled to convene again after finishing its second session Dec. 24, came five days after the Communist Party away: “the monopoly role and decided to ask the people to approve a presidential system by popular vote.

The 75 percent going to education may sound good, but it will be like the lottery money and will not mean more for education,” Dunn said.

Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said he too opposes the bill and said giving the profits to education is just a “diversionary tactic.

“I don’t believe the money will ever get to education,” Woolard said. “I think the funding for education should come from more stable means besides gambling.”

Gus says it’s the suits vs. the suits; pick a side.

Soviet presidential system to be confirmed

And the presidium recommended that the parliament discuss a proposal for convening a new session of the 1940 Incorporation of Lithuania and Estonia to the Soviet Union.

The surprise announcement of an early Congress session indicated that Gorbachev, fresh from his victory at the momentous party plenum last week, is intent on radicalizing his perestroika drive to transform the Soviet Union into a modern democracy and economic power.

IMC Officials: Valley has its peaks

By Eric Bugger

Staff Writer

It's April 2, 1990 and the tip-off of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament is about to be grabbed by either Missouri Tiger Doug Smith or SIU-C Saluki Terry Jones. Yes, Southern Illinois' very own former star of the glass, Jerry Jones. This year in a showdown unlikely and almost impossible, but is it? Missouri Valley Conference basketball is on the rise, Saluki coach Rich Herrin said.

"Everyone's expectations don't expect to make the Final Four in this year's NCAA tournament, but he does expect to see a rise in the competition in the MVC," Herrin said. "The Valley is a very competitive conference for us to be in," Herrin said. "We want to be in the same conference with a great basketball school such as Bradley. There is great tradition in this conference." Illinois State basketball coach Bob Bender, in his first year with the Redbirds and will take his Illinois State team for six years, is impressed with the MVC. "The Valley is extremely competitive and it always has been. I have always been impressed with the mental and physical toughness of the kids in our league. They attack you, play with tremendous enthusiasm, and they play with a physicality that I think rises above levels of many leagues," Barone said.

"In saying that the MVC is on the rise, in no way should its past be forgotten."

Origining in 1907, the MVC has produced some great basketball athletes. Bradley Brave Hersey Hawkins, Creighton Bluejays Benoit Benjamin and Paul Silas, Indiana Pacers Larry Bird, Southern Illinois Saluki Walt Frazier, Wichita State Shockers Xavier McDaniel and Antoine Carr and Tulsa Golden Hurricane Paul Pressey are just a few of the professional basketball players who have come across the MVC.

But what about the future? As cable television expands so does the concept of collegiate basketball. This year the MVC is a part of two major cable-televised basketball games. National cable giant ESPN, which owns the MVC, will carry seven Valley games.

Dawgs' defense key to winning season

Weaver: Players see defense can win some games

By Kevin Simpson

Staff Writer

Defense can carry a ball club. For the Salukis, defense adds another dimension to their already established arsenal of rebounding and offense.

On the season, the Salukis have outrebounded (42.4 to 36.3), outshot (47 percent to 42 percent) and in the end, outscored (51 to 36%), their opponents on route to posting a 19-5 record. The Dawgs are 5-3 in the Missouri Valley Conference, behind Illinois State, Tulsa and Creighton, all tied at 6-3.

The Salukis are heading into the Valley's stricthen run and control their own destiny with four of the remaining six games at the Arena.

Assistant coach Sam Weaver filled in a vacancy in the coaching staff during the summer and became an integral part of the defensive schemes. At the beginning of the season, Weaver knew the new defensive philosophies would work, but it was a matter of having the players believe in them.

"The players are beginning to see that defense can win for them," Weaver said. "Our record on the road (11-4) is directly related to our ability to guard people on the road." Weaver said that the Dawgs are "just coming out and get after people." There's two ends of the court and if we're going to be a complete basketball team then we're going to have to play both ends.

Speaking from a statistical standpoint, this is the best defensive ball club Herrin has coached at SIU-C. One must look back to the mid '70s to find a team that has been so stingy on opponents' field-goal percentages.

"Defense can carry a ball club," Herrin said. "Our emphasis is on it and we've changed our philosophy, I think Sam Weaver has done a great job with it.

When the Dawgs offense is not clicking, defense and rebounding has picked up the slack. The Saluki offense has managed to shoot 42 percent from the field in its last eight games.

Although the shots may not be falling easily as of late, the Dawgs are 7-1in that span. Overall, the Salukis are 5-2 in games in which they shot less than 40 percent. The Salukis out-rebounded their opponents in all but one of those games.

"If you're hitting the shot then fine, but if you're not then defense has got to carry you," Herrin said. "Defense can cover it" "Defense can be consistent every game out the same way rebounding is. That's two phases of the game that we're very good at," Herrin said.

Positioning is a key ingredient to the Salukis' defensive pressure. With the right positioning on defense, Weaver says, the opponents are forced to take extra long shots or penetrate. As the Salukas downed defending league champion Creighton Bluejays this past weekend — they harassed the Bluejays all afternoon and left them second-guessing themselves.

"We concentrate on being in position and checking shots," Weaver said.

Saluki women in running for conference crown

By Greg Scott

Staff Writer

The Saluki women's basketball team remained in the hunt for the championship with two victories on its recent road trip.

The Salukis, 10-5 in the Gateway, defeated Drake 69-48 Thursday and Northern Iowa 75-61 Saturday.

The winner of the regular season Gateway title will host the post-season tournament. The Salukis are currently the number one seed by virtue of their sights set on playing in front of the home fans.

"Everyone's hopes are still real high," junior guard Alison Smith said. "The want it, win and host tournament.

The Salukis' victory Thursday was only their third in 11 tries or consecutive games entering Thursday's game at Bradley and held a two-game lead over SIU-C and Illinois State. But Southwest lost to fourth-place Bradley 67-45.

Scott says the Gateway race is getting exciting.

"Things are getting more and more interesting in the conference race," Scott said. "We just need to keep winning and hope for the best. No one can afford to take anyone for granted no matter what their record is."

Next Game at Home

If the Gateway regular season ends today, Southwest Missouri State (11-2), SIU-C (10-3), Illinois State (9-3) and Bradley (9-4) wouldn't advance to tournament action.

Eastern Illinois, the Salukis' opponent Saturday, still is in the hunt. The Panthers are 7-6 and in fifth place.

Scott likes the way her team is playing.

"I'm pleased with the team," Scott said. "We're still young and we make mistakes, but the kids are working very hard. We are just going to keep going and it get one by one.

Southwest, SIU-C and Bradley have five games remaining and Illinois has six games remaining.

The first-place Bears have home games remaining against Drake Friday and Northern Illinois Sunday. The Bears are 10-0 at home this season, but they end the season with three road games at Eastern Illinois (Feb. 22), SIU-C (Feb. 24) and Wichita State (Mar. 3).

The Salukis play their next three games at the Arena against Eastern Illinois Saturday, Illinois State and Tulsa. Southern Illinois State plays four of its last six at home. Bradley plays its next two on the road before ending the season with three home games.

In a Feb. 4 telephone call Colleen Heimstead said the Salukis are confident but they can't look past the Bears.

"It's going to be a challenge, but we know we have to win all of our ball games and just play well. I think we can, if we just take one game at a time."

Poshard blasts R.A.C.E after groups withdraw
Congressman ‘doesn’t care’ about groups’ decision

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, said he won’t miss the groups which pulled out of a committee organized to contribute ideas concerning the management of the Shawnee National Forest.

The Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists and the Association of Concerned Environmentalists, closely related organizations, said at a news conference Monday night the groups would pull out of the Citizen’s Advisory Committee.

The announcement was made at a news conference prior to the committee’s monthly meeting in Venus last night.

“If they don’t want to work with all the other groups, that is their choice,” Poshard said.

The committee is made up of representatives of the Forest Service, local governments, citizens’ groups and other parties with a stake in the management of the forest.

Pomona resident Bill Cronin, R.A.C.E.’s representative on the committee, read a prepared statement at the news conference charging not only R.A.C.E’s management of the forest by the U.S. Forest Service but a lack of appropriate action by Poshard.

“Mr. Poshard feels that establishing the CAC usurps the need for an investigation (of the Forest Service),” Cronin said. “This is what we, R.A.C.E., must protest and protest loudly. The CAC is a sham.”

Cronin also said the intended purpose of the exchange of ideas required R.A.C.E’s leaving the committee.

“We had no choice,” Cronin said. “The forum isn’t there.”

Poshard, who organizes the group, said the Shawnee Forest is the single biggest project currently being undertaken in his office.

He also said the two groups aren’t willing to work within the framework of a democratic system and members of the group see their answer is the only answer.

Cronin claimed the monthly meetings, which began in the late summer of last year, have been controlled by the Forest Service and that the minutes of those meetings don’t accurately reflect what happened at the meetings.

R.A.C.E.’s main argument has been against commercial timber harvest within the forest.

Poshard said R.A.C.E is being selfish and they want their ideas to become the rules—now.

“R.A.C.E. feels if you’re not operating on their time frame, you’re ignoring them,” Poshard said.

Poshard said he is “sorry” RACE members feel as they do, but offered little other sympathy for their cause.

At the beginning of the 7 p.m. meeting, Poshard explained the conversation before the meeting to the 20 or so people seated inside the courtroom.

“If R.A.C.E. wants to operate on their own, they can operate on their own. We’re trying to find solutions here and I frankly don’t care (about R.A.C.E.’s actions),” Poshard said. He was met with hearty applause.

R.A.C.E. member Joe Glisson, Pomona, reiterated the statement Cronin made that R.A.C.E is in the process of filing a lawsuit against the Forest Service. Glisson said the suit should be filed “in a couple more weeks.”

The meeting finally got to the scheduled business of how roads and trails in the Shawnee Forest should be managed under a revised management plan.

The disheartened, former members of the committee left before the meeting began, with Glisson saying they had nothing to say to Poshard.

English department thrust into limelight

The English department, tucked away in the concrete confines of Faner, has been showing off lately. While the English department was being reconstructed to include more of the creative writing segments, dust was swept away from some notable faculty members and their works.

Forty faculty members strong, the English department has gained prestige during the last few years. Its recipe: a strong, dependable crew and a few polished performers.

Among the best of them are Rodney Jones and J. Richard Russo, associate professors of English; Donald Hays, assistant professor of English; and Richard Lawson, associate professor and publishing photographer.

Most recently, Jones, considered by some to be one of the leading American poets of this century, is in the running for the National Books Critic Circle award with his latest collection: Transparent Gestures.

Among his most honorable, Jones won the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation award in 1985, including a $25,000 grant.

Russo, author of two books, Mohawk and The Risk Pool, has taken a year-long leave of absence from teaching to work on another novel.

Film Rights To his first two successes have been sold. The rights to Mohawk, written in 1986, were sold to Lights Year Entertainment, New York. The Risk Pool rights were sold to 20th Century Fox, and Russo is expected to write the film script.

Russo's novels have been published in the United States and in England.

New to the University during fall semester 1989, Hays encountered huge success with his most recent novel, The Hangman’s Children. His first novel, The Dixie Association, was published in 1984 by Simon and Schuster.

Lawson, author and distinguished photographer, came to the University in 1963. He co-authored, Fred E. Mergenthaler in Dresden With George Navillano. associate dean of the School of Art and Design. Their next book, a record of a federal art project in Illinois during 1935 to 1945, is due out in April by the Southern Illinois University Press.

Although their contributions are too numerous to list here, these and other members of the English department have generated renewed interest in their field. Congratulations!

Did Douglas really beat Tyson?

Surpss Howard News Service

It will be a travesty if the World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association rule that James “Buster” Douglas is not the world heavyweight champion.

Douglas, a relative unknown, knocked nearly everyone when he knocked out Mike Tyson in last weekend’s championship bout in Tokyo. Douglas dominated the fight except for the eighth round, and kayed Tyson in the 10th.

But the WBC and WBA, which are officially influenced by Tyson’s promoter, Don King, suspended the result pending hearings. In disputing whether Douglas received a “long count” in the eighth round, when Tyson floored the challenger, Douglas was on his feet at the referee’s count of nine, but the referee’s count apparently was out of sync with the timekeeper’s. Tape recordings of the fight indicate that Douglas was up not until about 12 seconds had elapsed.

Nevertheless, under the rules, the referee’s count is supposed to prevail.

Douglas’ domination at the knockdown seemed to indicate that he could have gotten off the canvas earlier but was relying on the referee’s count to determine his action.

Douglas clearly was the winner and deserves the title. The WBC and WBA ought to accept that.

The first clue that we may want to rethink this whole German reunification thing: The Coal-Powered BMW

When I returned from vacation, a co-worker asked me what I thought about a man news story that had occurred while I was away. I told him I hadn’t read it. Looking surprised, he said: “It was in the papers. Front page.”

Then he mentioned a big international development. He told me he had missed that one too.

“Don’t you read papers while you’re on vacation?”

As a matter a fact, I don’t. When I go on vacation, I read five papers a day, plus the various national and international news wires. Below is the line I have news squinting out of my ear.

So when I take off time, I try to ignore the great issues of the day. I figure if something really big happens — the start of World War III or the arrival of Martians — I’ll hear people screaming in the streets and will become informed.

Because most news people are news junkies, my co-worker assumed I was.

You actually don’t read any newspapers?

So I confessed to a dark, dirty little secret. Yes, when I’m on vacation, I read one newspaper. And I read that paper only when I’m away from Chicago.

This requires a brief explanation. It begins with the fact that normally I don’t do the food shopping. So I don’t get into supermarkets.

But while I’m on vacation, I share shopping chores. And as I’m standing in the checkout line, my eyes are drawn to a supermarket publication called Weekly World News.

Because I work for a serious, respected newspaper, I shouldn’t admit this. But I love the Weekly World News.

Recentlly I was involved in a brawl at a tennis court. I was playing basketball on the arena floor and suddenly was hit on the side of the head by a batted baseball. There was a boxing cage on the arena concourse, and somehow, a baseball had bypassed the netting.

It was not clear if the boy was injured. As I sat on the bleachers with ice, someone came to me, told me his name and apologized.

I give the young man a lot of credit. It was not easy for him to face what could have been a very tense situation. Actually, he could have disappeared and nobody would have known the difference. I was certainly in no position to find out who had hit the ball. It was the Kevin in the arena. I don’t know enough character to do the right thing, even in a tough situation.

Congratulation, Tim. Your actions were a credit to yourself and to your team. Thanks for reminding us how to act responsibly.

against the violence of apartheid, Mandela, 71-year-old black leader. "But we remain committed to peace if the government gives us the opportunity."

"If they normalize the situation, we will pull back. We contributed towards the peaceful settlement of the problems of this country," Mandela said, speaking in the garden of Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu's official residence in Cape Town. In the rural province, violence erupted for a third day between members of Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi's im­portant Inkatha movement and ANC supporters. Since Saturday, at least 24 people have been killed and an estimated 2,000 forced to flee homes set on fire by rival groups.

While Mandela has repeated his call for the government to com­pletely lift the 43-month-old state of emergency, a coalition of South African Broadchurch, Monday said the violence in Natal was "one of the chief factors holding up the ending of the state of emergency."

"The need for national reconciliation is obvious, but it cannot be forged from a narrow base," the commentator said. "It must be con­structed over a broad front, span­ning not only racial barriers but also the ideological differences that are found within the particular race, as is to be seen in the last­ on-black violence in Natal."

In Swaziland, hundreds maintained a vigil outside Mandela's home, the fence and a nearby garage adorned with a placard proclaiming: "Poverty to the People, May It Come To Africa" and Mandela is Coming "For Freedom by Victory."

"ANC will conquer! ANC will govern!" rose the chant from young black youths who began jumping and down a section of Vilakazi Street.

By evening the crowd was more than 10,000 and included the estimated 60,000 who turned out in antici­patory of a welcome rally for Mandela Monday at Swetzer's Orlando Stadium. Dozens fainted from the heat, dehydration and hunger after waiting in the sun. UDF spokesman Murphy Morobe said aides were trying to make Mandela's arrival "as dignified as possible" and were trying to "relieve the pressures" of the people surrounding the Mandela house.

Freed unconditionally from life imprisonment Sunday by President Frederik de Klerk, Mandela told reporters in Cape Town he had hopes that negotiations intended to end the country's racial laws were at hand.

"I am confident that if Mr. de Klerk also allows a genuine Free­ State with genuine, independent party with him in the new line he has taken — that he him self wants to normalize the situation as soon as possible — I think that very soon we will see negotiations will be removed and it will be pos­ sible for us to sit down and talk," Mandela said.

money. Illinois residents won't see the to­ber financial effects of riverboat gambling, but they will see the negative side associated with increased crime.

Secretary of State Jim Edgar said if he were governor, he would have vetoed the legislation. Edgar, who is seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomi­nation, said Illinois has enough gamin­bling and he fears people just aren't going to spend the money on gambling.

"I hope I'm wrong about this legislation and it becomes a boon for the state, but I think it will create more problems than benefits," Edgar said.

Edgar said he shared Woolard's concerns and warned of possible organized crime involvement as legalized gambling grows.

Faculty Senate meeting to focus on CCFA dean search

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

The IEA-NEA will raise questions over the procedures in a search for a dean for the College of Communications and Fine Arts at the Faculty Senate meeting in the Missouri Room of the Student Center at 1 p.m. today.

Gretel Chapman, CCFA faculty and IEA-NEA member, said she hopes to persuade the senate not to approve a title change for Marvin Kleinau from acting dean to dean. The change was requested by Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs.

The IEA-NEA voiced its concerns over the matter in a letter to Shepherd. The concerns were over the delays in searching for a new dean and the violation of affirmative action and hiring procedures in changing Kleinau’s title. The letter also stressed that the process is being questioned, not Kleinau.

In other business, the senate will resolve a recreation to Presidents John C. Govan to spend no state or university monies for travel, just unrestricted gift monies and foundation or direct grant monies.

Legislator: SIU-C must improve black minority enrollment levels

By Peter Zalewski
Staff Writer

Enrollment of blacks and minorities can be improved at SIU-C, U.S. Rep. Charles A. Hayes (D-Chicago), said at a lecture here Monday.

"SIU, the second largest university in the state of Illinois in enrollment, can venture to say, can improve the enrollment of blacks and minority students," Hayes said.

"Our educational system is geared towards the elitist part of our society," Hayes said. "Poverty is growing and will continue to grow as we neglect to educate and prepare our young.”

"We need to recognize education as the best defense to this nation for the future," said Hayes. "Our representatives' commitment to give every kid an opportunity who wants an education, to get that education.

The question of where the money will come from to continue a student's education is unclear, Hayes said. He speculated that it was much easier to cut aid to a college it wants to be a part of," he said.

"It's not my position to question (the senate's) decision," Davidson said. "They're doing what they believe is best, but they are making a decision out of the main stream. All the flagship schools in Illinois have separate representation for autonomous social work departments, no matter how small. They're failing to recognize our accomplishments on campus.

A postponed Judicial Review Board election will be held at the meeting. The election was postponed because of changes in format that prevented the senate from getting information at the December meeting, Paige said.

Under new business, Paige said the senate will review a request by the Student Wellness Center that a faculty number be appointed to its drug awareness board. Also under new business, the senate will discuss the addition of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday to the spring academic calendar.

"There's been a big push to take off Martin Luther King Day," Paige said, "but having two Mondays off in the spring, it goes up the calendar.

Paige said placing a second holiday during spring break would give workers in such areas as maintenance a day off, but professors will not lose class days.

The senate will also resolve the voting representation procedure for the School of Social Work at the meeting.

"In restructuring the College of Human Resources, the social work unit was not placed into a college," Paige said. "When the college was abolished, the other units were put in various places. Social work stayed a free-floating department, under the supervision of an assistant vice-president, which removes it from being in a constituency group of the Faculty Senate.

During the last senate meeting in December, a resolution for social work to remain free-standing and still be represented on the senate was voted down because the school did not have the required number of faculty, 25.

"In passing this resolution, (social work) has determined what college it wants to be a part of," Paige said.

Interim arrangements for senate representation could be made at the meeting, Mary Davidson, director of social work, said, but the school wants to remain free-standing.

"It's not my position to question (the senate's) decision," Davidson said. "They're doing what they believe is best, but they are making a decision out of the main stream. All the flagship schools in Illinois have separate representation for autonomous social work departments, no matter how small. They're failing to recognize our accomplishments on campus.

"The thrill of victory. The agony of defeat.

Sometimes sex is a game of conquest rather than an expression of love. "Is this love? She loves me?"

Sometimes it seems sex is more about strategy game-playing than about intimacy.

During your college years, the decision whether or not to have sex may become a priority in your life. The decision is not a simple one and there may be several things to consider while deciding what levels of sexual intimacy is right for you.

Some reasons for not having sex include: A personal/moral belief that sex only belongs in a marriage or serious committed relationship; fear of pregnancy—abstaining from sex is the only 100 percent guaranteed protection from pregnancy; fear of sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS; and fear of being too vulnerable. Whatever the reason for deciding to abstain from sex, building relationships on the basis of friendship can be an exciting experience of intimacy. Sex is not the super glue that holds relationships together. It takes more than sex to develop the trust, understanding and acceptance of each other that will carry a couple through times of vulnerability and changing commitments. If the decision is made to let the relationship grow without sex, it gives time to share, time to get to know each other well, time to share experiences, feelings, thoughts and, most of all, time to become good friends. Relationships built on friendship have a greater chance of surviving and flourishing.

Remember, to have or not to have sex is not a permanent decision. The choice is up to each individual, in their own time, with whom they choose. Each person is in control of their sexuality and life.

The Health Advocate at the Wellness Center has declared the week of February 18 as "Sexual Abstinence Week." Show your support by sharing with a friend why you are not "doing it." For more information call the Wellness Center at 536-4441."

Search for six fugitives moves to Chicago after capture of convict

JOLIET (UPI) — An intensive manhunt for five of six dangerous fugitives who broke out of Joliet Correctional Center focused early Monday on the Chicago area, where at least two of them had relatives.

One of the fugitives, Tommy Munoz, 22, was captured near his house on Chicago's South Side Sunday evening, Department of Corrections spokesman Nic Howell said. An anonymous tip led authorities to the convict.

Munoz was imprisoned on narcotics-related convictions and for intimidating a witness, authorities said.

A nationwide alert was issued for the remaining five fugitives.

"Basically everybody should be very cautious anywhere. These guys are dangerous," Howell said.

Three of the convicts were serving time for murder and are considered "extremely dangerous," Howell said.

They are James F. Allen, 40, of Chicago, convicted of three murders; Dave Rodriguez, 21, of Chicago, convicted of murder; and Daniel Johnson, 24, of Bureau, Ill., also convicted of murder.

Police also sought Terry W. Colburn, 21, Fulton, Mo., a convicted burglar, and Ron Roach, in his 20s, Wyoming, Ill., also convicted of burglary.

The six escaped from the disciplinary segregation unit of the maximum-security prison, 45 miles southwest of Chicago.

Springfield recognizes Lincoln's birthday

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Veterans and state leaders laid 20 wreaths at the tomb of Abraham Lincoln Monday in an annual pilgrimage to mark the 186th anniversary of his birth.

"There is something special about Abraham Lincoln," Simon said. "He has captured the hearts not just of Americans but of people everywhere around the world."

Simon added, "This past year has been a great year for freedom and that's what Abraham Lincoln lived for, what he died for."

Lincoln owned his only home in Springfield and lived in that downtown residence from 1844-60 while he practiced law and served in the Illinois General Assembly.

He is buried with his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, and some of his children at the tomb.

Durbin said Lincoln "embodied the greatness of America," and the Springfield representative called on Americans to use Lincoln's wisdom when planning for this nation's future.

"It's not enough to only recall the life of Lincoln with speeches and warm admiration," Durbin said. "We must remember it with personal dedication, a dedication to apply Lincoln's values to our world today."

West Frankfort woman pushes for 'Coal Day'

WEST FRANKPORT (UPI) — Efforts by a Southern Illinois woman to have a national commemorative day for coal miners has caught the attention of state and national legislators.

A resolution asking Congress to designate Sept. 23 "American Coal Miners Day" was approved last month by the Illinois House.

Rep. Larry Wooldrd, D-Carbondale, said Monday.

The resolution that passed the Illinois House cites contributions by coal miners to the American labor movement and reminds the public about the dangers of coal mining.

John Valenciano, a West Frankfort resident, is circulating petitions in support of the day. Valenciano said his father was a coal miner.

Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Ill., is working to draft legislation that would set aside the day, said Dave Stricklin, a spokesman in Washington for Poshard.

Bush says ‘solid progress’ made in arms negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush declared Monday “solid progress” had been made in the two superpowers’ negotiations with the Soviet Union this past week. Bush said the United States would stand by its latest plan for cutting numbers of troops in Europe.

At a White House news conference, Bush stopped short of promising the two superpowers would be able to sign treaties on new limits on conventional arms and nuclear and chemical weapons at the planned June summit between himself and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

But he insisted that progress was made in all areas during Secretary of State James Baker’s trip to Moscow.

Baker’s trip, Bush said, made “solid progress in pushing the U.S.-Soviet agenda forward. ‘All in all, Secretary Baker’s talks in Moscow accomplished much of what Chairman Gorbachev and I intended when we set out for this meeting’ at the summit in Malta, Bush said.

‘We should take a look and see how Moscow made solid progress in pushing the U.S.-Soviet agenda forward for the June summit here,’ Bush said.

We made progress on conventional arms control, START, nuclear testing and chemical weapons and continued to explore ways to reduce our differences on regional issues, especially concerning Central America and Afghanistan,” he said.

“I’m not sure that there will be three treaties to be signed by the time we have this summit, but I think there is going to be progress on all three,” the president noted.

However, Bush appeared to reject Gorbachev’s counterproposal on conventional troop levels in Europe.

Bush has proposed cutting U.S. and Soviet forces in Central Europe be cut to 193,000. But Bush has suggested that an additional 30,000 U.S. forces be kept in Western Europe.

Gorbachev has countered with a plan that would leave 355 Soviets and United States at the same levels in all of Europe.

“We’re going to stay with our proposal because we don’t see this linkage to that degree,” Bush said.

“We’ve got a big ocean between us and Western Europe. So the argument that we should always have a linked reduction is one I want to get away from now,” the president said. “I think we’ve made some real progress on this.”

Despite the difference, Bush said the two superpowers were not at an impasse over the issue.

“I wouldn’t call it an impasse. This is the way it works when you’re discussing these arms control things,” he stressed.

The president insisted that the “cold war” would end when the United States and the Soviet Union made “solid progress.”

But he said while recent events in Europe and the Soviet Union were “extraordinary,” no one could accurately predict what would happen in the future.

Bush also praised the move in the Soviet Union to open the political process and let other countries also with the Communist Party and said it was another sign of why his administration has supported Gorbachev’s moves for perestroika and glasnost.

On another matter, Bush said he wanted to discuss U.S. sanctions against South Africa with newly freed South African black leader Nelson Mandela and President Frederik de Klerk, but stressed that those economic penalties, as currently written, could not be lessened.

Bush has invited both men to visit the White House and Monday that in separate telephone conversations with the two, they accepted those invitations in principle, although no date had been set.

Thurmond stalks longevity record in Senate service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., seeking re-election at 87, is making some legendary longevity records and proving again that great age is no barrier to Senate service.

Thurmond, who is so strong physically that no Democrat has come forward to challenge him, would become the oldest senator ever elected at 87 years and 11 months.

The record, held by Sen. Theodore Green, D-R.I., is 87 years and 1 month old in 1960. Green left office when he was 93 years and 3 months old after deciding not to seek re-election in 1960.

Thurmond, if he completes the entire six-year term, would be 94 years and 1 month old.

SIU-C has a good deal of student and faculty exchange programs, said Dr. Robert Roubos, director of the School of Music, said, none of them as wide as the one with Germany.

In the last two years things have changed.

Roubos took his first trip with the purpose of establishing communication and could result in a two exchange two years ago, he said.

"Now that Eastern Europe and Germany are free, and officials in both countries have changed, the United States has a wonderful opportunity to build bridges of understanding between our countries," Roubos said.

Roubos believes that music is an excellent medium to bring people together.

"Music is a universal language. It helps in world understanding," he said.

Roubos said he was in Romania and Hungary two years ago to perform in various concerts and while he was there he started to talk to officials of conservatories about possible exchanges.

In Hungary he contacted the Federation of Germanembassys. Prime Minister Hans Modrow's two-day visit to Bonn, amid increasing calls for reunification with East Germany, which have been divided since Germany lost World War II.

In a joint statement, both the West German Social Democratic Party and the East German SPD said a unified Germany could belong neither to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization nor to the Warsaw Pact.

Officials of NATO, the Western military alliance, had earlier rejected a plan by Modrow which called for the neutrality of both countries as a step toward reunification.

The SPD said a decision on the military strength of the new Germany should be made within the framework of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The parties also called for a spring meeting of the four World War II victors — the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

"This conference of the six states should take place in the second half of April, and "must agree to a security-political framework for the unified Germany and steps toward it,"" the statement said.

At a later stage, the conference should be enlarged to include Germany's neighbors, the SPD said in the joint statement.

A member of East Germany's opposition movement New Forum warned Monday in Oslo, Norway, that plans for German reunification were "going too fast."

"In East Germany, we are unable to put economic conditions on our negotiations with our big brother, West." New Forum member Werner Schulz told Norway's news agency, NTB.

"Nonetheless, we think that the New Forum are worried that reunification looks as if it will arrive before we've established our own democratic systems," he said.

He added that people would be forced before 1992, now that Gorbachev has given "a green light," Soviet Communist Party to exert control over establishment of new political parties

BANGKOK, Thailand (UP) — The Soviet Communist Party will control the eventual establishment of new political parties and will finally approve the formation of any parties that pig Soviet nationals against the Communist regime, Prime Minister Mikhail Gorbachev, said Monday.

Rykov, a member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo and widely considered an ally of President Mikhail Gorbachev, said last week's decision to give up the party's constitutionally guaranteed dominance did not mean it would allow the immediate formation of any and all other political parties.

"The Communist Party agrees to the existence of other political and social organizations," and some time later, in the future, it also agrees to the establishment of new political parties," he said at a news conference concluding a two-day official visit to Thailand.

Rykov said there was no need to rush the establishment of new parties "because we still believe that today the driving force of political change is the Communist Party, as it has been historically and it will go on being."

He said new laws had to be passed to provide a legal basis for competing parties "to regulate the establishment and existence of these parties."

"If these parties are for the conservation of our society, for the construction of our society, then they have a right to live, a right to exist," he said.

"But if the parties are for pushing two nationalities against each other, then we think that these kinds of organizations should not be established," he said.

REPORT: Volunteer work a bonus to white schools, but fails minorities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Increasing numbers of Americans are serving as school volunteers, but volunteerism tends to help white schools more than minority ones and is not a panacea for adequate funding, a federal study said Monday.

Volunteerism has been a cornerstone of President Bush's social policies, and the report found volunteers working as tutors or mentors generally have helped students improve their performance and "grow in self-esteem and confidence."

In releasing the study, Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos said his department is increasing funding for volunteer programs and that the administration would soon propose national-service legislation encouraging school volunteers.

"The main conclusion of the ... report echoes what President Bush has been saying since he first took office: Volunteers can and do play a role in enriching the lives of thousands of Americans," Cavazos told reporters.

However, Cavazos said he agreed with the report's finding that volunteer programs can only supplement "a well-education program."

The study said, "Although there is agreement that volunteer help can make a difference, neither school administrators nor the volunteer coordinators believe that any massive infusion of volunteers could make up the shortcomings of an underfunded, poorly run education system."

The report financed by the Education Department estimated the number of school volunteers increased in the 1980s to about 1.3 million and that volunteerism contains a "resource of potentially huge dimensions."

However, much of the growth occurred in private schools. A 1987 study found 1.1 million volunteers in public schools, about the same as in 1985. At the same time, the number of private-school volunteers tripled to nearly 300,000. Mainly minority public schools also wore much less likely to use volunteers than white schools, the report said. The average number of volunteers at schools where minority enrollment was more than 75 percent was 14.9, compared with 31.9 at the average suburban public school.

"Parents (in poor areas) may be less likely to have either the time or the energy to engage in volunteer activity; there may be fewer intact families and fewer parents overall to participate; and there may be less understanding in such areas of the need for and importance of providing volunteer services," the report said.

"It is quite clear that children in such schools have less opportunity to receive any of the benefits that can be obtained from volunteer help. It also can be suggested that the possible benefits of school volunteers to children in such areas, in fact, would be much greater."

Cavazos said the upcoming service bill contained no specific provisions to address the different volunteer rates in white and minority areas. He added, "It's certainly another issue that we're looking at."

"Look at the Big East. Television made them what they are today. They had some good teams, but they really became strong when the national exposure was given to them," DeNoon said.

"We're very excited about our continuing relationship with ESPN," MVC Commissioner Don DeVore said. "The tremendous growth of ESPN and college basketball over the past 10 years goes hand-in-hand, and the Missouri Valley is looking forward to being a part of the second decade of sports coverage by ESPN."

Ladies' track has 17 bests, finishes last
By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer
The women's indoor track team finished last, but not at least at the Purdue Quadrangular meet this weekend.
Coach Don DeNoon, who is looking ahead to the conference championship to be held here in two weeks, saw timely improvement in his club.
"The thing that highlights the meet is the 17 personal bests recorded out of 35 performances. This shows that we're coming together at just the right time," DeNoon said.
He pointed out that the competition at the meet this weekend could prove to be tougher than conference opposition. Purdue was out with 164 points, ahead of Wisconsin 115, Murray State 95 and SIU-C 94.
"I certainly hoped we could do a little better. We finished a point off Murray State for the second time this year," DeNoon said.
"Our two triple jumpers did a real fine job," DeNoon said highlighting the top Salukis. Nicola Moore finished second in the triple jump with a 37 4/12' ahead of third-place Saluki Michelle Williams 36'.
Brandy Mock set her top mark in the 400-meter run by a couple of seconds with a 58.45 time that netted her third.
"Our distance runners Lecann Conway, Dawn Barefoot and Cathy Brown did a real fine job," DeNoon said.
"We have to have better chemistry with our sprinters and have our distance runners keep going the way they're going," DeNoon said.
As for the conference meet, the Dawgs will have the capabilities of Danielle Sciasci, a top point scorer, who stayed home to attend a funeral this weekend. DeNoon estimated his team lost 9 to 12 points due to her absence.
DeNoon and his staff will be using this week to study objectively or a whole and a whole with his team.

"Son of Big Jim Nite"

The league returned to a Saturday game-of-the-week feature for the first time in four years. A total of 10 regular season games will be picked up by Creative Sports Marketing, a national television syndication and production company based in North Carolina. The games are being aired in MVC cities and on SportsChannel of America, which reaches approximately 12 million homes nationally.
SportsChannel Chicago, reaching 1.5 million homes in the Chicago area and parts of Wisconsin, Indiana and Iowa, will contribute to the coverage of the MVC. It will telecast portions of the Pepsi MVC Tournament.
Prime Network also has picked up a total of seven MVC games this season. It reaches approximately 10 million homes, Ron English, assistant director of communications, said.
One additional national telecast involving a MVC team will take place Feb. 28 when Bradley takes on DePaul. The game will be carried live on Chicago-based superstation WGN.
"We try to maximize Missouri Valley exposure, and television is the best vehicle for this," English said.
"We are very pleased with the television packages we got this year. It will definitely help the coaches when it comes time to recruit."

When it comes to promoting the MVC, nothing is more effective than winning," Elgin said. And when the teams are winning they get national exposure on television. The mix can be very rewarding when it comes to recruiting time.
The conference standings also are producing much excitement in the Valley. With Illinois State, Tulsa and Creighton at 6-5 in the conference and SIU-C a half game out at 5-5 the race should create a great deal of media exposure throughout the country.
One characteristic of the MVC most coaches are eager to point out is attendance. The Valley ranked 9th in attendance last year among NCAA Division I conferences. A total of 79,891 fans packed the MVC arenas to watch the eight Valley teams in action. League rivalries attracted more than 100,000 fans to the 56 MVC conference games.
"We don't have figures for this year in order to compare attendance to the past seasons, but from the reports we do have it looks like we will draw more fans this year than ever before," Elgin said.
Men's tennis team battered, beaten on weekend venture
By Eric Burger
Staff Writer

The Saluki tennis team walked into a battlefield this weekend and barely came back. The Salukis went back three losses and three injuries. The team journeyed to Wisconsin and Michigan to compete in four matches in two days. The team did not go without scars. In Wisconsin, the Salukis were defeated by a 6-3, 6-2 loss. However, the Salukis managed to win two matches in total. In Michigan, the Salukis won two matches against Michigan State and Indiana. The Salukis are now 7-7 on the season.

Weyer said, "I think our players did a tremendous job on Saturday. We made the Creighians post-people keep adjusting back and forth. There was just no set tempo that they could throw the ball in the air."

The Salukis are averaging eight steals per game, and at the present rate, last season's total of 203 will be surpassed by almost 40 steals. "You can learn in practice but the players are making it happen in the games," Weyer said. "I think we're finding illness is passing the test. Especially on the defensive end."

Defense is something the coaching staff says should be consistent on a game to game basis. While shooting can have on and off nights.

Effectively you can come out and play each night because it's just an individual effort with a team concept," Weyer said. "I think we should be able to play a good defensive ball game every night."

The athletic ability and personal desire make the Salukis one of the most dominating and physically intimidating teams in the league. Junior forward Rick Shipley led the Salukis in rebounding his first two seasons, but with other players stepping up their game he can step out of the paint more and add to the all-around effectiveness of the team.

"I think it's the mental outlook (desire) of this team," Shipley said. "We know it's an asset and we really work on it. It's just wanting to win and wanting to go out there.

"Everybody knows what kind of player Jerry Jones," Shipley said. "Andrew Amaya goes after the ball as much as anybody does. Freddie can go in and get some rebounds and I like to get in there and mix it up."
