'Heaviest' attacks hit Iraqi positions

United Press International

Allied forces hammered away at Saddam Hussein's troops from the air, sea and land Tuesday in what one top official said was one of the "heaviest" attacks on the Iraqi front line so far in the war.

The strikes brought reports from American pilots that they destroyed four more mobile Scud missile launchers in Iraq for the second straight day.

British and French defense ministers visited Washington to discuss the future of the war with President Bush and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, a day after Bush announced the air war would continue for a while before a decision on a major ground attack would be made.

Even as a Soviet diplomat pursued peace talks in Baghdad, Iraq was defiant and said it had taken the worst and was ready to smash the U.S.-led forces.

Marine Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal of the U.S. Central Command in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, said the battleship USS Missouri in the Persian Gulf joined Marine air and artillery units and Saudi artillery and multi-launch rocket systems to bombard Iraqi positions in Kuwait.

A senior military source in Riyadh described the operation as "the heaviest coalition-initiated attack on the front lines" of the war. He said three battalions of Saudi artillery and one U.S. Marine artillery battalion were involved in the three-hour operation and that the Missouri fired 18 rounds.

Army Lt. Gen. Tom Kelly, speaking at a Pentagon briefing, called it a "healthy day of bombing." He added that because allied planes were going after hardened targets — such as those shielding Saddam's tanks — more bombs were needed to take them out.

Saudi Col. Ahmed Al-Robayan, spokesman for the coalition's United Arab Forces, said the

Budget cuts may hurt SIUC

Proposed reduction may cost University up to $1.4 million

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

In his Jan. 15 inaugural address, Gov. Jim Edgar said education would be one of the top goals of his administration.

Monday, Edgar asked Illinois universities to cut use of state appropriations by 1 percent.

The proposed cut could cost SIUC $1.4 million, but unusual phrasing in Edgar's announcement has University administrators unsure of what he wants.

SIUC Chancellor Lawrence Pettit

met in Chicago Tuesday with Edgar's education officials to obtain additional information, said Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs.

In the past, the governor had asked universities not to expend their general revenue, but this time the cuts could involve more, said University President John C. Guyon at a Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday.

"If taken at face value, (the cuts would be) $1,380,000 for SIUC," Guyon said.

That figure includes tuition and University revenue, which may not be included in the cuts. The confusion comes because Edgar did not specify what the appropriations include, he said.

Guyon said in the past, revenue appropriations have not included tuition revenue, but Edgar's statement Monday called for a 1-percent cut from total appropriations.

He said he will meet with the University budget committee each Monday to look at what can be done.

Staff reductions will not be part of University budget cuts, but some current vacancies probably will not be filled, Guyon said.

Wilson said University deans and vice presidents already were searching for departmental cuts in case of a rescission.

"It wasn't hard to see the state is in a bad financial situation," he said.

Although the proposed cuts were the talk of the day, local legislators were quick to point out they were only proposals.

State Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said the cuts must be approved by the General Assembly which will not officially look at Edgar's budget until next month.

F-15 Eagle 'top gun' for Air Force

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

The Navy might have its top gun, but the Air Force thinks its iron eagle is the best at prowling for Iraqi targets.

The F-15 Eagle is considered possibly the best fighter plane in the world, said Jeffrey Rhodes, aeronautics editor for Air Force Magazine.

"The Navy might argue for their F-14 Tomcat, but the only thing comparable to the F-15 is the Soviet Sukhoi SU-27, but it's not a match," Rhodes said.

Two types of F-15s are used in the gulf, the F-15E and F-15C, he said.

The Air Force has 72 of the E series F-15s, which are the latest of five F-15 types. Each are designed for different roles.

"The E is an entirely separate animal," Rhodes said. "It is considerably heavier than the others and is used to destroy ground targets deep inside enemy territory."

A lot of the extra weight comes from the increased weapons load on the F-15E. A single plane carries more than 24,000 pounds of weapons.

"One F-15E carries more bombs

UI hopes meningitis outbreak finished

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) — University of Illinois officials said Tuesday they have treated all the close associates of two students who died of a rare blood disease related to meningitis but stopped short of saying the outbreak is over.

Staff at the university's McKinley Health Center have dosed more than 3,700 students with the antibiotic Rifampin to protect them from meningococemia, an infection of the bloodstream similar to meningitis.

"We can't say it's over yet, but we can say we went one night without another case," said Dr. Rod Kingston, McKinley's medical director. "We certainly hope it's over."

Kingston and Stanley Levy, the university's vice chancellor for student affairs, said an eight-to-10-day incubation period would have to pass before officials are certain more students are not affected.

The first victim, 19-year-old Gregory Mank of Belleville, died of meningococemia Saturday night at Carle Foundation Hospital in Urbana. A second student, 19-year-old Brian McDonnell, of Darien, died early Monday at Carle.

As 35 clinic volunteers worked to notify about 850 friends, classmates and roommates of the victims, thousands of other students jammed into the health center seeking treatment. Hundreds more went to hospital emergency rooms

Blood drive cut short by one day

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

The staff at the SIUC blood drive has decided to cut this Friday off the schedule.

The drive has been shortened because the Red Cross staff is needed for other blood drives scheduled in the region, said Matt Bond, operations chairman of the Blood Drive Steering Committee.

He said the demand for the staff at other drives was not anticipated.

To make up for the cut, an extra day will be added to the SIUC blood drive taking place in April, he said. In addition, the hours on Thursday will be extended until 7:30 p.m.

Vivian Ugent, coordinator for area blood drives, said the goal for the drive has been changed from 1,950 to 1,650.

On Tuesday, 427 pints of blood were collected at the drive operating at the Student Center. The daily goal was 400. The three-day total of

Athletic study table attendance 'disappointing'

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Although seats at the Arena are pretty well taken, seats at the athletes' study tables have been plentiful.

A report on athletes' attendance at study tables, recently compiled by the SIUC Athletic Department, shows that some Salukis are dogging their academic opportunities.

The report covered 15 weeks of the fall 1990 semester, 40 nights of study tables. The tables ran three times a week for three hours a night. Sometimes study table couldn't be held because of the fall break and holidays. The maximum an athlete could have attended was 120 hours.

The average hours attended by SIUC athletes was 26.08 hours, out of the 120 hours. The average nights attended was 14.06 nights out of the 40 nights.

Of the 75 athletes required to attend (those who have a grade point average of 2.25 or lower) 16 never attended a single session.

"I'm disappointed that more students didn't avail themselves to this opportunity," Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West said. "We have tutors there to provide help. It's like the old saying, you can take a horse to water, but you can't make him drink."

The Athletic Department would not release attendance figures on specific sports. Both the men's and women's basketball programs have their own study tables, head women's basketball coach Cindy Scott and men's assistant basketball coach Rodney Watson said.

"I can provide the administration with the attendance data," Assistant Athletics Director Nancy Bandy said. "After the report of poor attendance after the first five weeks (of last semester), little improvement was made. But the attendance has improved this semester in some sports, but not all sports."

Last August, the Academic Advisory Committee proposed penalties for athletes who are academically required to go to study tables, but fail to attend. West presented this proposal to the SIUC coaches, who rejected it as too strict.

The proposal stated that one miss would result in a warning to the athlete, two misses would result in a warning to the athlete and coach. A third miss would result in the athlete being barred from a practice, while a fourth absence would result in the athlete being barred from a competition.

"I don't think they are overly harsh rules," Bandy said. "If we are following the philosophy of student first and athletes second, they aren't inappropriate."

The study table attendance report will be addressed at a meeting of the AAC Feb. 20, but committee Chairperson Mary Beth Skelly said it might not be addressed in detail because it's the first meeting of the year.

Bandy plans to give the study

Saluki men to face streaking Sycamores

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

The Salukis travel to Indiana State tonight to face any one of 14 Sycamore teams Coach Bates Locke has put on the floor this year.

The Sycamores have had 14 different starting lineup combinations this season. Locke has started 11 players in 1990-91. The Sycamores' record is 10-13 overall, 5-7 in the Missouri Valley Conference, but at home Indiana State is 7-2.

Tip-off is at 6:30 p.m. CST, since Indiana State is located in the Eastern time zone.

ISU has won four of its last five games, including victories at Drake and Wichita State. The Sycamores' only loss in the five-game stint came at the hands of Creighton, which squeaked by with a 3-point victory.

"Indiana State is for real. They proved that with wins at Wichita and Drake and have lost a couple close ones on the road," SIUC coach Rich Herrin said. "We're catching Indiana State when they are playing the best basketball they've played in the last four or five years. They are a very hot basketball team."

The Sycamore attack is balanced all the way down the lineup. Senior Eddie Bird, the brother of Boston Celtics' Larry Bird, leads the team

Trump will stage title fight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Evander Holyfield's heavyweight title defense against George Foreman will go forward as scheduled April 19 in Atlantic City, N.J., the promoters and Donald Trump confirmed Tuesday.

Trump delivered Tuesday morning—via limousine—a payment of approximately $2.3 million to fulfill the $3.3 million total on his $11 million site fee he was required to pay up front before the fight.

Initially, this upfront money was to be paid in scheduled installments but last Wednesday the flamboyant Trump—facing serious financial problems lately because of a downturn in the Atlantic City casino market—threatened postponement or cancellation of the fight, breaching his contract.

Dan Duva, Holyfield's promoter, had received payments of about $1 million to that point and was to receive an installment of half a million over the weekend. To cure the breach, Trump had to get the balance of his $3.3 million to Duva's attorneys by Tuesday morning.

Trump had tried to reduce the site fee by invoking a "war clause" in the contract, claiming big-spending gamblers from overseas would not fly in to the United States for the bout because of the war in the Persian Gulf. That ploy infuriated Duva and Foreman's

Rozelle agrees press does not have rights to all Pentagon information

NEW YORK (UPI) — Former NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle says he supports the Pentagon in its skirmishes with the press over covering the Persian Gulf War.

Rozelle, widely considered a public relations expert who built the NFL into a force in American sport, says the press is seeking military information to which it has no right. He also says the American people agree with him.

"I, personally, disagree totally with the media position," he said. "In effect, we've already had some questions. 'When are we gonna start the ground war?' You know, it's like saying, 'Well, Tuesday, about 4 o'clock, sir.' You can't do that. I don't think the public wants it."

"I disagree with the networks and the print media's strong demand and outcry about censorship," Rozelle continued.

"Because it's not a Super Bowl game. It's a damn war."

"I think it's the media competing with itself, you see. I do disagree with that and it's one thing I think about when I see war news."

Rozelle, now a consultant for the league, made his comments Monday night before being honored by the New York Sports Museum and Hall of Fame. He owes much of this niche to a knack for public relations.

Named NFL commissioner in 1960, Rozelle presided over the league's growth from 12 teams to 28. He steered the NFL through a merger with the American Football League, and helped give the Super Bowl the stature it enjoys today.

His one major error—some call it a lapse in judgment, others a public relations blunder—was allowing NFL games on the Sunday after President Kennedy's assassination.

Rozelle entered sports publicity while in junior college and at the University of San Francisco, then became publicist for the Los Angeles Rams. He was also a junior partner in a public relations firm for a couple of years.

In 1960, the NFL made Rozelle a compromise choice as commissioner, and he made a decision that influenced sports history.

"The league office at that time was in a suburb of Philadelphia, Bala Cynwyd, and I moved it immediately to New York—One Rockefeller Plaza," he said. "I knew that that was where we had to be if we were going to get the nation's media behind you."

"We had a very small staff then and I remember one of them saying

Pirates offer Bobby Bonilla $3.1 million for one season

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Pittsburgh Pirates president Carl Barger said Tuesday talks were continuing with the agent for Bobby Bonilla, who is scheduled for arbitration Thursday, and denied a report that the outfielder had rejected the team's latest offer of a $3.1 million, one-year contract.

The Pittsburgh Press reported Tuesday that Bonilla and agent Dennis Gilbert rejected the offer, which is $350,000 less than Bonilla's arbitration figure but $700,000 greater than the Pirates' arbitration figure.

Barger did not deny the amount of the contract offer but said that Gilbert had not rejected it to him. "We have not heard from them," he said.

"There is no news," Barger added. "What you can report is the Pirates and Bonilla's agents are continuing to talk, and the Pirates would like very much to avoid arbitration if at all possible."

"We're getting towards the 11th hour, but we still have tonight and tomorrow."

Talks between the two sides switched from a multi-year to a one-year format late last week after Bonilla, runner-up in the National League's 1990 Most Valuable Player balloting, rejected a four-year, $15.5 million offer.

The Pirates have been struggling to get out of red ink since a public-private consortium purchased the money-losing team from the Galbreath Family and Warner Communication in late 1985.

Britain agrees with Bush; no ground war in Iraq yet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — British Defense Minister Tom King, concurring with President Bush, said Tuesday there needs to be "some significant reduction in Iraq's military capability" before the allies begin a ground war. King made the remarks during a picture-taking in the Oval Office at the start of a meeting with Bush. Earlier the president had met with French Defense Minister Pierre Joxe. The president announced Monday that he had no plans to authorize a ground offensive against Iraq, and the air war, now in its 27th day, will continue "for a while." King and Joxe flew to Washington to confer on Persian Gulf war.

Space policy guidelines aimed at private sector

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an effort to nurture the fledgling private U.S. space industry, the White House Tuesday outlined the government's commitment to helping companies become more involved in space technology. In a statement issued by the White House press office, President Bush said he had approved the new U.S. Commercial Space Policy Guidelines, which are "aimed at expanding private sector investment in space by the market-driven commercial space sector." The guidelines resulted from a nine-month review by Vice President Dan Quayle and the National Space Council.

Lebanon asks U.S. to force Israel to withdraw

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Lebanese government wants the United States to pressure Israel to withdraw from occupied southern Lebanon, Defense Minister Michel Murr said Tuesday. "The role of the United States is to convince Israel to implement the U.N. Resolution 425 which calls for a complete withdrawal from the south," Murr told United Press International at his office in the Defense Ministry. Last week, the government dispatched 3,000 soldiers to take over confrontation lines with Israeli troops north of Israel's self-declared "security zone."

Early childhood intervention needs $75 million to work

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A report sent to Gov. Jim Edgar Tuesday recommends the state spend $15 million for each of the next five years to meet the educational needs of toddlers and infants who have developmental disabilities. An 11-member committee has studied early childhood intervention since the Illinois House passed a resolution on the issue. Among its recommendations, the task force said Edgar should create an ombudsman for early childhood intervention in the governor's office. State Sen. Joyce Holmberg, D-Rockford, a co-chair of the panel, said programs to help children who are likely to develop educational disabilities will help over 56,000 children in the state.

Law caps interest rate for Desert Storm troops

CHICAGO (UPI) — A 50-year-old federal law sets a 6 percent interest limit on outstanding loans of reservists and National Guard members called to active duty for Operation Desert Storm, Illinois Treasurer Pat Quinn said Tuesday. Quinn said the law applies to all outstanding financial obligations incurred before the August invasion of Kuwait by Iraq — when the callups began. "It covers their auto loans, student loans, VISA bills — everything," Quinn said. He said those called to military duty need only send to their lenders a copy of their active duty orders and the lenders must adjust the interest rates accordingly.

Student Government to make trustee rules

By Amy Cooper
Staff Writer

Student government leaders decided Tuesday to assemble their forces by the end of the week to create specific student trustee regulations.

Undergraduate Student Government President Lissa Kuethe and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Charles Ramsey will choose three students from each organization to draw up a proposal for trustee qualifications.

Kuethe and Ramsey said they would have the committee chosen and set a meeting date by Friday.

After the committee proposes a set of rules for the trustee, it will be presented to both the USG and GPSC for a vote.

In several memoranda, Jean Paratore, associate vice president for student affairs, and Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, requested student trustee criteria be established.

Paratore asked the student governments to establish eligibility requirements for the period the student trustee serves.

Her suggested rules include minimum number of credit hours, minimum GPA, ability to serve within USG or GPSC, and the ability to serve as an officer of a registered student organization.

She said a more specific set of rules must be in writing, because it is currently unclear if a trustee must be a student to hold the office.

"The intent is clear that the trustee should be a student, but it needs to be clarified," Paratore said.

Ramsey said he would like to establish rules on trustees during the next few weeks that would take effect at the spring 1992 election.

But Welch said he wanted something completed for the 1991 student trustee election on April 18.

"We need to do this now," Welch said. "Why don't you come up with something and present it?" Kuethe, Ramsey, Welch, Paratore and USG Senator Michael Parker were the only people present at the meeting.

SIUC Student Trustee William L. Hall, who called for the meeting, was not present.

Hall said he called for the Tuesday meeting because Welch said he planned to bring the criteria issue to the SIU Board of Trustees if the student governments did not agree to draw up criteria.

Welch said he had no intention of bringing the issue to the board because he said he felt student governments would comply.

Hall said Welch later realized that the board legally could not take any action to establish trustee rules because it is the students' responsibility.

"He seems to understand that student trustee election laws require the students to do it, not the Board of Trustees," Hall said.

Hall said Welch does not have the authority to change the student criteria law, which is part of Illinois revised statutes.

When Welch announced he had no intention of going to the board, Hall said he no longer had a reason to request the meeting.

Hall said he feels there is no problem with the criteria for trustee elections.

"The rules as they are are sufficient," he said.

Currently, trustee election eligibility rules state that a candidate must be at least a half-time student in good academic standing with the University.

The candidate must have completed one full semester as a student prior to the semester of the election, and must not hold any elected office in USG or GPSC, Welch said.

The criteria establishes rules for the time of the election but it does not apply to the time after the election, Kuethe said.

Sculpture display provides tranquil scenery, sitting spot

By Stephanie Steiner
Staff Writer

Peace and tranquility do exist on campus. One just has to know where to look.

The Sculpture Garden, located behind the University Museum, is a place where people can go and just relax, said Bob Dehoet, University Museum education coordinator.

Red, yellow, blue and a variety of browns add color to the Sculpture Garden's geometric and abstract works of industrial art.

The concept of the Sculpture Garden arose in the late 1970s, when the museum staff wanted to do something with the unused and overgrown grassy area behind the museum, Dehoet said.

"The staff decided that since the area wasn't being used, a sculpture garden would be a natural way to use the space, especially since the space is so close to the museum."

So, in cooperation with SIUC's Board of Trustees, the museum staff decided to use a portion the museum's funding to create the Sculpture Garden, he said.

Dehoet describes the atmosphere

"...the sculpture garden would be a natural way to use the space, especially since it is so close to the museum."

—Bob Dehoet

of the garden as contemplative and meditative.

"The experience people get from the sculpture garden is different from what they would get in our galleries," he said.

"The sculpture garden doesn't give people the intense experience, which we hope to have in our galleries. People just like to wander around in the relaxed environment (of the garden) and many feel that's what gives the garden a special quality," he said.

Dehoet also feels that the garden has a greater effect on people when the weather is good.

"In the middle of winter, we only have about three or four tours scheduled a week," Dehoet said. "But when May rolls around, we are able to take the tours outside into the Sculpture Garden, where we are able to show people that museums aren't just inside a building."

Two of the 11 pieces in the garden, "Starwalk," by Richard Hunt, and the "Memphis Bench," by James Wallace, were purchased by the museum.

The remaining nine sculptures were donated to the University Museum; seven by master's of fine art students and two by outside donations.

Most of the industrial art pieces in the garden are made of welded corten steel, Dehoet said.

"We hope to have additional funding in the future, so we can include sculptures of different media, such as stone and cast metal, in the garden," Dehoet said.

"Also, with additional funding, we hope to extend the garden to the visually impaired and the handicapped," he said. "Right now it is accessible, but through landscaping, we want to make it even more accessible for them to get into the garden and really enjoy it."

Off-track betting plan needs careful review

SOME LOCAL residents are asking city officials to hold the reins on the proposed off-track betting facility. The city's task force voted unanimously Monday to support the off-track betting parlor in Carbondale. But some residents are claiming if the facility is approved by the City Council, the parlor may do more harm than good. The economic benefits from building the off-track facility are inviting. The track in Springfield employed 26 full-time and 41 part-time people in 1989 and brought in more than $16 million that same year as well.

THAT KIND of extra revenue and new jobs would be a welcomed change to the slumping economy. But opposition is fearful that the facility could create more problems for Carbondale that couldn't be amended with money. Gambling addictions that could be nurtured and even encouraged if the facility was located in Carbondale have been a primary concern of officials at the Wellness Center. But it's not the city's job to safeguard residents against potential damaging activities—or is it?

THE APPROVAL of the proposed off-track betting facility will prove itself as either an economic blessing or another problem Carbondale doesn't need. The 11-member task force, which consists of members from the Chamber of Commerce, Carbondale Business Corp. and the Convention and Tourism Bureau, reported its support of the facility Monday night. It is a decision the City Council needs to make after careful consideration on every community aspect.

Quotable Quotes

- "We hated to come back but we ran out of bombs."—Capt. Dewey Gay said of the allied attack Monday on the port city of Basra.
- "I picked up Newsweek out of the mailbox and said 'there's Ben.'"—Angie Middleton said in reference to seeing her son's picture on the cover of Newsweek.
- "The first thing I had to learn when I came here was patience."—Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan said about his early days in Carbondale.
- "Take a bath, get a job and get a life."—Former Iranian hostage Kevin Hermening said to anti-war protesters who booed him after a support rally.
- "...a bit of a damp squid."—Rolling Stone Bill Wyman said of his failed marriage to 19-year-old Mandy Smith.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. When a multitude of letters on the same subject are received, editors may select a few letters that are representative of those letters for publication. Every letter must be signed and submitted in person by its author or authors. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department, others by address and occupation or position appropriate to the nature of their letters. Letters for which authorship cannot be verified will not be published.

College students favoring war would falter when forced to fight

SOME PEOPLE ARE puzzled by the pro-war attitude of America's college students. During the Vietnam War, students were among the most zealous peaceniks. But now, "support the president" groups are springing up on campuses all over the country. Pro-war rallies are drawing big, enthusiastic crowds. Some campus papers carry articles by students deriding peace activists as naive, unpatriotic, sniveling cowards.

So experts are trying to probe the hearts and minds of these hard-nosed students to see how they got that way. And there are many theories.

Curious myself, I asked Dr. I.M. Kookie, one of the world's leading experts on lots of stuff, if he had any insights.

COULD IT BE, I asked, that this generation of students could be trying, even subconsciously, to make amends for the shabby way many Vietnam veterans were treated?

"Anything is possible," Dr. Kookie said. "But based on my clinical research, I would have to say, nah, no way."

Then could it be that they have somehow become a genetic throwback to earlier generations that were willing to rally 'round the flag — those who came of age in the Great Depression and fought World War II, and their younger brothers who quietly went to Korea, even though they didn't know where it was?

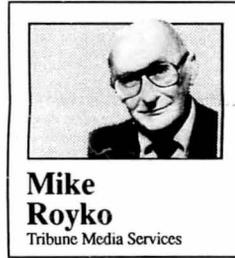

"That's possible, too," Dr. Kookie said. "But according to my studies, forget it."

Then what is behind their surprising enthusiasm for the war?

"To understand that, you have to have a background in mass psychology, which I do, among many other subjects. And it is very hard to explain it in terms that non-experts can understand."

Yes, but I'll try. "OK. Then tell me this. What scares most people more than anything else?"

"Snakes? Or maybe big bugs? Or footsteps on their roof at night?"

"Yes, those are all scary. But the thing that scares people the most is ceasing to be."

Ceasing to be? "Yes. Or in scientific terms, croaking."

You mean dying? "Yeah, you could put it that way. When somebody is murdered, it gets in the paper. But if they are scared by a snake or a bug, who cares?"

I see your point. "SO LET US LOOK back to the students of the Vietnam era and what motivated them."

We all know that. They were against war. They were appalled by the mass destruction and waste of life.

"Yeah, some, maybe. But most of them were appalled by the chance that it was them who might, to use another scientific term, be zapped. Remember, we had a draft."

Yes, but those who stayed in school were deferred.

"Sure, but they couldn't all stay in school. And they couldn't all get jobs teaching in inner-city schools so they'd be deferred. And most of them didn't have enough clout to get themselves into some National Guard outfit with the politicians' sons and the professional football players."

Are you saying the students' anti-war movement in those days was based on personal fear?

"Not all of it. Maybe 90 percent."

That is a harsh judgment. "Maybe. But after the draft was abolished, most of those inner-city schoolteachers said: 'Bye, kids, I got to go make a buck.'" But what about today's hard-nosed students? How do you explain their attitudes?

"I THOUGHT I explained it. There is no draft. So except for the ones who are in reserve outfits that got called up, there's no chance that they'll get zapped. Their lives aren't being disrupted. They don't have to go teach slum kids or run away to Canada or do anything but watch the war on TV."

"And so far, it's a neat and clean war, except when CNN shows some Iraqi kids in hospitals. And even then, a lot of people figure that those kids were hit by Baghdad taxicabs and Saddam is just faking it."

You seem to be saying that if we still had the draft, their attitude would be different.

"Yes, that's fair to say. I think that if we had a draft, instead of bravely signing petitions saying they support the troops and president, and telling TV reporters that they are a new, different generation, they would be having fits of hysteria, jumping up and down, screaming and hiding in their closets."

"SURE THEY SUPPORT the troops. Because the troops are there instead of them. And they support the president because he says there won't be a draft. The day he says he's running short of warm bodies and is drafting them, they'll start putting up old Abbie Hoffman posters."

Do you have any scientific data to support your theory? "Sure. Lots of it. You can check it out yourself."

How? "Whenever there is one of these pro-war campus rallies, and they strut around saying they support the prez, and we are fighting for democracy and to stop the spread of whazits and the threat of whoozits, go up to the students and ask them one question."

What question? "When are you going to enlist?"

pints collected is 887.

The personalities behind the numbers flocked to Ballroom D of the Student Center on Tuesday, and the pace of people coming in made the day pass quickly, Ugent said.

Laurie Barriga, sophomore in forestry from Lisle, sat at a table to relax after giving a pint of blood.

She was replenishing her system with miniature chocolate chip cookies provided by the Red Cross.

"Everyone will probably need blood at least one time in their life," she said. "I hope when I need blood, it will be there for me."

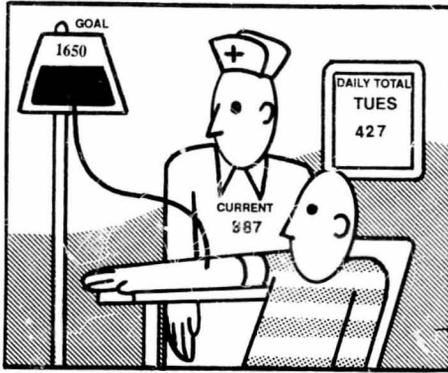

David Reinhardt, graduate student in Spanish literature, wore a tiny red pin on his shirt. It was the shape of a blood drop and displayed the Red Cross logo.

Reinhardt, 35, said he gave blood for the first time just before he turned 18.

"I was so excited, I had such a charge," he said. "I was happy, knowing that I had done something good."

Although many volunteers at the blood drive belong to one of 20 organizations such as fraternities, sororities or registered student organizations, a handful of volunteers sign up as individuals.

Leslie Kottle, junior in Microbiology, spent all day Tuesday doing jobs such as sending information on the blood drive to SUC faculty and staff.

"I've always thought the blood drive was a good cause," she said. "This time my schedule worked out so that I could help."

"A lot of people just don't realize all the work that goes into something like this. It is not anything like we call the Red Cross and they come out to do a blood drive."

"The are so many aspects. It comes down to organization in every respect."

The Red Cross must collect 763 more pints to meet its new overall goal. Today's goal is 400 pints.

Donors can give blood from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. today, and from 10:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Thursday, in Student Center Ballroom D.

operation was a "good test for the command and control system for the whole joint forces, taking into consideration the differences in language and training..."

Ground fighting was reported to be minor during the previous 24 hours, military officials said.

U.S. F-15 pilots reported destroying four mobile Scud launchers in Iraq, Neal said, and a fifth exploded before a squadron of F-16s could attack it. Discussing the fifth launcher, Neal quipped, "What we think is that one of the Iraqi technicians was checking the fuel line with a match."

The attacks on the Scud launchers followed three Iraqi missile launchings late Monday and early Tuesday, two on Israel and one on Riyadh.

Neal said 675 allied air sorties were mounted Monday against Iraqi positions in Kuwait and the road, rail and bridge network supplying them in Iraq. He said 225 strikes targeted the Republican Guard, "about six" of them by U.S. B-52s.

Neal said the virtually incessant allied air attacks have led to maintenance problems for Iraqi equipment "across the board" and "makes them really nervous as to what's ahead."

"This air campaign has continued on for 27 days. Is there much more? Je saying, 'Well it won't last much longer.' And it just keeps coming, day in and day out, 24 hours a day," said Neal.

But a high-ranking Iraqi official said his country has absorbed the main shock of nearly a month of allied air raids and advised the United States and its allies to withdraw from the Persian Gulf or be smashed.

Iraq "has absorbed the main shock and is now tackling the problem of (U.N.-imposed) economic sanctions," Amman Radio quoted Iraqi Parliament Speaker saadi Mahdi Saleh as saying.

"The Iraqi army is now on a maximum state of alert and able to destroy the allied forces," he said on the Jordanian radio.

"He could be testing to see what kind of feelings he presents," Woolard said.

It's no secret Illinois is in financial trouble and cuts will have to be made, said state Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher. But by establishing priorities the cuts could be less severe.

"My guess is it's only a proposal; it may be modified greatly," Rea said.

"I do know there will have to be some trimming of the budget, but it will take the least from education and health and human services," Rea said.

"We do have somewhat of a financial crisis. The balance is at an unsafe level," Rea said. "It's going to be tough to make a cut."

Rea said he did not think there would be cuts from tuition, because past appropriation cuts were only for general revenue. Edgar may have proposed the cut to make universities more efficient.

Edgar said in the past he would cut the state's budget by eliminating unnecessary spending in the government rather than cutting straight at the program. The proposed cuts for university budgets may be an attempt to make universities look for ways to halt needless spending, he said.

and rockets than a B-15 bomber did in World War II," Rhodes said.

The C series is the fighter of the group, continually looking for enemy aircraft to engage.

"They go in with the bombers and look to shoot things down," Rhodes said.

Saudi Arabian Air Force Capt. Ayedh was flying a F-15C when he shot down two Iraqi F-1 Mirage planes heading toward Allied ships in the Persian Gulf, Rhodes said.

Top speed on the F-15C is 2 1/2 times the speed of sound, and the heavier F-15E tops out at twice the speed of sound, Rhodes said.

Saudi Arabia has 62 F-15s and the Israeli Air Force has 51. The only other nation besides the United States to have F-15s is Japan, which builds them under U.S. license.

The Japanese have 187 F-15s,

173 built in Japan, Rhodes said.

Only one F-15, an E series, has been lost in the gulf war, Rhodes said. The plane was shot down by ground fire.

The planes are manufactured by McDonnell Douglas and became operational in 1974.

The F-15C costs about $31 million, and the F-15E costs about $42 million, Rhodes said.

complaining of flu-like symptoms.

"I think everyone is scared," said freshman Krista Blume, one of many students who went for the antibiotic.

The university distributed free bottles of antibiotics to anyone who asked but that policy will slowly be discontinued, Levy said.

"What we are finding is that a lot of people are coming in thinking they need (the drug), when in fact they do not," he said.

Doctors are still trying to determine if there was any link between the two victims that may have contributed to the spread of the disease.

Officials at Indiana University in Bloomington, Ind. said they had prescribed antibiotics to three friends McDonnell had visited over the weekend even though the students showed no symptoms of the illness.

Dr. Barry Fox, a specialist in infectious diseases for the Carle Clinic Association, said he was "99 percent sure" that a 20-year-old female student admitted to the hospital for observation Monday did not suffer from the disease.

Attention all students who paid the student activity fee for Fall 1990. You may seek a refund of $1.00.

Who is eligible?
All students who paid the student activity fee for the Fall 1990 semester are eligible for a refund.

Why am I eligible for a refund?
One dollar of your Fall student activity fee goes to fund this campus' membership in the Illinois Student Association. ISA's policy requires that its fee be both refundable and authorized by a campus-wide student referendum.

Why did it take so long to find out about this?
In the spring of 1988 students voted to create a one dollar annual ISA refundable fee. After considerable debate and the creation of a policy on voluntary fees, the Board of Trustees of SIU chose to raise the student activity fee by one dollar per semester rather than create an ISA fee as had been done by the Board of Regents and the BOT of the U of I. The ISA portion of the fee was received by ISA in January.

How much is the refund?
The refund is one dollar and will be paid from those funds received by ISA from this campus. Until all refunds have been processed these funds will not be used by ISA and are being kept in a separate account.

What happens to my dollar if I don't seek a refund?
All dollars collected from students who don't seek a refund are used to fund the operations of the Illinois Student Association's such as rent, equipment and supplies for its office in Springfield, salaries for its staff, and travel expenses. ISA represents students in higher education and works to ensure that students' interest are considered and protected as public policy is developed. Over 95% of ISA's budget comes directly from Illinois students to ensure accountability to students and independence from others. ISA is non-partisan and does not contribute to electoral campaigns or political parties.

Is there a deadline? How do I get a refund?

Sagging economy conjures up job security fears

NEW YORK (UPI) — Concerns about job security were up sharply in a recent study of labor and employment issues at American companies facing higher unemployment rates and a sagging economy.

Following benefits, the nation's top concern, and wages, the second most pressing issue, job security ranked third in a study of American management executives taken in 1990, up from seventh the previous year, officials said.

One-third of the respondents ranked job security third when asked to list the important issues facing their own company, indicating a 74 percent increase over a survey taken in 1989.

The study on workplace issues in individual companies was taken by Jackson, Lewis, Schnittler & Krupman, the nation's largest labor and employment law firm representing management.

The firm surveyed nearly 1,000 managers in five months last year in Boston, San Francisco and New York City, as well as in suburban New Jersey, Westchester and Long Island. A margin of error for the sample was not available.

Of the respondents, 68 percent represent companies which employ over 250 people. More than half of the companies, 53 percent, are national in scope and 83 percent are not unionized.

In addition, employers were increasingly concerned with health and safety issues in the workplace, the survey showed.

"The sharp increase in concern about job security, which our survey shows, reflected and anticipated the business slowdown and resulting layoffs," said Philip Rosen, one of the firm's partners in New York.

"With layoffs come lawsuits, and both employers and employees need to understand the implication of legal action; half of the executives surveyed say their companies were hit with wrongful discharge suits in the past year.

Monetary settlements, excluding legal fees, totaled between $10,000 and $100,000 47 percent of the time."

Care must be taken in the discharge of employees to avoid court action and so good employee relations are not "sacrificed for short-term gains in a slowdown," Rosen said.

Agendas also must be set up to handle issues of child care, job training, the environment and civil rights with a keen eye on pending legislation, the firm said.

New initiatives like video display terminal rulings in San Francisco and the Americans with Disabilities Act, which goes into effect next year, also must be addressed by business, said Michael Lotito, another partner working in San Francisco.

In addition, employers must satisfy employees "so that their businesses can survive a recession and still have skilled people on board to compete in the U.S. and around the world," Lotito said.

Other key findings based on the responses of 922 management executives were:

■ The fourth and fifth areas of concern were substance abuse and cases of age, race and sex discrimination brought against companies.

Carnival craziness: Mardi Gras lively despite raging war

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An estimated million Mardi Gras revellers poured into the streets Tuesday to party and watch parades and each other in a daylight climax to an annual pagan ritual neither a recession nor the Persian Gulf War could subdue.

Mardi Gras, or Fat Tuesday, is the last day of Carnival a time of self-indulgent excesses before the Christian penitential season of lent that begins on Ash Wednesday.

Although the war could not stop Mardi Gras — the holiday is too important to the economy and psyche of New Orleans — it's influence was everywhere apparent.

As in evidence as the traditional green, gold and purple Mardi Gras bunting, American flags and "Support our troops" signs were draped from French Quarter balconies and along parade routes.

Ingenious costumes and "Make Mardi Gras Not War" buttons in carnival colors also reflected the conflict.

For this one day, Paul Arceneaux, a caterer from nearby Metairie, La., became a human Patriot missile launcher.

Dressed in a red jumpsuit with military patches, flags and patriotic slogans, Arceneaux had silver cardboard boxes mounted on each shoulder, similar to the boxcar-looking weapons used in the Middle East. A missile was emerging from one of the boxes.

"It seemed like the thing to do," Arceneaux said. "I'm looking for SCUD missiles. I found one already. It's a target-rich environment."

Shortly before noon, jazz clarinetist Pete Fountain and his Half Fast Walking Club reached the French Quarter after starting out several miles uptown. Fountain and his 200-member group were dressed in traditional Greek costumes with vests and white skirts.

In the gay area of the French Quarter a man dressed in black leather, with the seat cut out of his pants, sported a tattoo of an F-15 fighter on his right buttock.

A family of three ambled through the crowd dressed as a bathroom. The father had a cardboard toilet attached to his chest, a picture of Saddam Hussein on the opened seat. A sign said

"Send Hussein down the drain."

The mother supported a bathroom sink, complete with soap, toothbrushes and toothpaste. The son was surrounded by a shower curtain and strips of clear plastic water coming from the shower head.

Taking advantage of the fifth consecutive day of mild spring-like weather, tens of thousands of people began staking out choice parade viewing sites in the residential uptown areas around midnight. They set up tents, fired up charcoal grills and made makeshift beds of lawn chairs.

The median of Oak-tree lined St. Charles Ave., where normally the nation's oldest streetcar line runs on two tracks, was jammed by daybreak.

Vision of 'new world order' old dream of Baha'i religion

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

"New world order" is a term used in speeches by President George Bush to describe his vision of the post-gulf war world.

But the same phrase also was used in the mid-1800s by Baha'u'llah, the Arab founder of the Baha'i religion, local Baha'i followers said.

John Kurianowicz, a local Baha'i member, said Bush's use of the phrase is nothing new.

"The term 'new world order' has been in use in the Baha'i community for over 100 years," said Kurianowicz, a Carbondale businessman.

"And it's not just a political world order or an economic world order," Kurianowicz said. "There is a need for a renewal of the spirit of a man."

HE SAID BAHAI'ISM is a faith that touches on social, political, and spiritual issues, realizing that the three are often interconnected. The Baha'i concept of God is "an unknowable essence" which is the source of all things.

The Baha'i faith began in what is now Iran in 1844, founded by Baha'u'llah, a philosopher and teacher whose name in Persian means "the glory of God." He wrote most of his teachings while imprisoned, said Michael Wagner, officer of the SIUC Baha'i Club.

"He was sent to prison in various countries throughout the Middle East and lived most of his life in prison," Wagner said. "He died in Haifa, in what is now Israel, and the Baha'i World Center is there."

Baha'u'llah's teachings spoke of "collective security," a measure by which nations could band together to ensure continuing peace, Wagner said.

"ALL THE NATIONS of the world would organize," he said, "and if any one nation transgressed, the other nations would rise up.

A nine-pointed star is the symbol of the Baha'i faith.

"The idea is to create a situation where transgression does not occur," he said.

The Baha'i faith, with more than five million followers worldwide and about 110,000 in the United States, has no clergy and no organized religious rituals.

The faith is spread through infrequent door-to-door "mass teachings" and Baha'i radio broadcasts from a North Carolina station, Wagner said.

THE BAHAI' FAITH is organized around certain principles including the elimination of prejudice based on race, sex or culture; the unity of religion, which asks all faiths to recognize that they worship the same God; and the elimination of the extremes of poverty and wealth that create inequalities between people and nations, Wagner said.

The faith has suffered persecution since its beginnings, Wagner said. Most recently, Baha'is in Iran were imprisoned and executed with the rise of the Ayatollah Khomeini's government in 1979.

Baha'is is seeking to leave the country were denied exit unless they renounced their faith, Wagner said.

Ronald Precht, director of Baha'i's Office of Public Information in Wilmette, said the faith teaches a kind of social evolution by which the world's troubles will eventually be ended.

"WORLD PEACE is inevitable," Precht said. "Though humanity will have many problems reaching this goal, those problems are part of humanity's adolescence and must be dealt with."

Baha'is are hopeful but realistic about the coming new world order, Precht said.

"We don't believe that everyone will be walking around playing harps and kissing strangers on the street," he said.

"To Baha'is, there has been great progress made in the last few years in the recognition of the need for world peace," he said. "We applaud any leader who makes steps toward that goal."

The belief in world peace as an inevitability does not prevent Baha'is from actively participating in peace projects, Kurianowicz said.

He said the Baha'i International Community has consultative groups working with the United Nations and the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and is represented at most conferences on human rights.

Although the gulf war is an important issue, it is not a primary concern for Baha'is at this time, Wagner said.

"TO REALLY establish peace in the world, we need to build and work for peace constantly," he said. "To just focus in on being against war is not enough. Peace isn't just an absence of war."

Kurianowicz quoted from Baha'u'llah's teachings, which regard all humanity as one individual and each person as a part of that individual.

"...If pain or injury afflicts any member of that body, it must inevitably result in suffering for all the rest," he said.

Sentencing 'out of line' for Bakker; judge possibly violated guidelines

United Press International

A federal appeals court Tuesday tossed out the Rev. Jim Bakker's 45-year prison term — imposed by a judge known as "Maximum Bob" — on the grounds that the judge may have violated sentencing guidelines and been prejudiced.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Bakker's conviction for defrauding his followers but said U.S. District Judge Robert Potter of Charlotte, N.C., was out of line in his sentencing remarks, which included a comment about "money-grubbing preachers."

The appeals court also said Bakker's crimes had been committed before federal sentencing guidelines were imposed. Under those guidelines, Bakker would have received a 10- to 12-year sentence.

Don Wooters, director of Christian Campus Ministry, said he found Bakker's original sentence excessively harsh.

"When you consider that the average murderer gets four years, and a rapist gets maybe two years, I would say the sentence was out of proportion to the crime," Wooters said.

He said Potter's statement about Bakker reflects a general stereotype of religious leaders.

"I think Jim Bakker and others of his genre have been used to give preachers a very bad name," he said. "Of course, you could also pick one bad lawyer and say the whole legal profession is corrupt."

Other Carbondale religious leaders were unavailable for comment.

Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye, who started her own church in Orlando, Fla., said she was overjoyed by the ruling. She spoke with psychiatrist Basil Jackson on his radio show on WTMJ in Milwaukee after Jackson, who testified at Bakker's trial, called her with the news.

"Yes, my daughter just called me," Tammy Faye said in a phone call from Florida. "She's screaming and crying and screaming, 'Mom, mom, mom.' I'm just delighted. I feel like if we could even take it to a higher court we could prove my husband didn't commit fraud. I am just delighted at what happened. This is very exciting to me."

Tammy Faye said she wanted to talk to Bakker, who is in the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., but said, "I can't call him. I wish I could because I'm so excited. Probably one of the inmates will tell him."

There was no immediate word on when a resentencing hearing would be held for Bakker, who was a cellmate of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche for a month.

Bakker's appeal was handled by noted attorney Alan Dershowitz, who argued sentencing standards were developed because of judges like Potter, who is known as "Maximum Bob."

Dershowitz said Potter showed his prejudice when he said of Bakker during sentencing: "Those of us who do have religion are ridiculed as being saps for money-grubbing preachers or priests."

Hundreds visit tomb to remember Lincoln

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Hundreds of people Tuesday honored Abraham Lincoln in the annual, somber ceremony at his burial site and one politician said Lincoln's spirit should especially be remembered while the nation is at war.

Twenty-one leaf wreaths with red, white and blue bows from six states and numerous American Legion organizations were placed at the foot of Lincoln's headstone inside his tomb at Oak Ridge Cemetery. President Bush also sent a wreath made of carnation flowers to honor the 182nd anniversary of Lincoln's birth.

The 57th annual pilgrimage, hosted by the American Legion, attracted hordes of tourists from several different states visiting the city Lincoln called home as an adult.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who has written a book on Lincoln, spoke of the importance of recognizing Lincoln's spirit in a time of international war in the Middle East. He said Lincoln, who is credited for his success in the Civil War, recognized the necessity of national unity and felt compassion for the families of soldiers fighting to preserve national beliefs.

"He is the only leader we have had in wartime who was particularly sensitive to casualties on the other side) and it is one of the things that I think we have to continue to convey to people in Iraq and elsewhere," Simon said. "Our plight, our struggle is not against the people of Iraq. We do not want to inflict damage, we want to see that a principle is upheld and that is that dictators cannot take over other people."

Simon said Lincoln's belief in freedom for all people is the reason America is involved in the Middle East. He said Lincoln should serve as an inspiration to all Americans, including U.S. troops in combat. The ceremony began with a representative from the American Legion asking the crowd outside the tomb's entrance to take a moment of silence for Lincoln.

An immediate hush overcame the onlookers as eyes closed and heads bowed downward.

Keaton 'Woman of the Year'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Diane Keaton, who won an Oscar in 1977 for "Annie Hall," collected another honor Tuesday — the brass pudding pot awarded annually to the Hasty Pudding Theatricals' Woman of the Year.

The actress, who has been featured in all three "Godfather" movies as well as a string of Woody Allen films, rode in a parade through Harvard Square in subfreezing weather. With her in the open limousine were actors from the Harvard theatrical society — the oldest undergraduate organization in the country — dressed in drag.

"This is insane!" Keaton, 45, said as she took the theater company's stage to accept her award.

With a big lipstick smudge on her cheek and dressed in a baggy black pants suit reminiscent of the outfits her character wore in "Annie Hall," Keaton received the brass pot from the president and vice president of the organization.

She also was given various souvenirs from her movie roles — including a large Mr.

Goodbar to commemorate her role in "Looking for Mr. Goodbar" and a live lobster reminiscent of the crustaceans that plagued Keaton and Allen in "Annie Hall."

"This is sickening," Keaton said, ducking as Hasty Pudding President Mo Rocca waved the lobster in the air.

Each year, Hasty Pudding Theatricals recognizes two performers who have made "a lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment." Clint Eastwood of "Dirty Harry" fame, the former mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea, Calif., and the group's Man of the Year, will be honored in a Feb. 19 ceremony.

Previous recipients include Katharine Hepburn, Steven Spielberg, Steve Martin, Kathleen Turner, Sean Connery and the late Lucille Ball. Glenn Close and Kevin Costner were last year's honorees.

Keaton was asked whether she had any advice for Eastwood, known for his tough-guy roles and the infamous line, "Go ahead, make my day."

"I think Clint can take care of himself," she said.

Loony toons, Water's films scheduled for Wednesdays

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

Students who need a place to spend their spare time on Wednesdays can join the Student Programming Council in "Hump Day Toon-In" and "John Waters Week."

Every other Wednesday SPC will present a "Hump Day Toon-In."

Today, SPC will show nine different classic Warner Brothers cartoons from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

Al Reitz, SPC film chairman, said the "Hump Day Toon-In" alternates with the "Hump Day Cafe" when bands play in the Roman Room.

He said they (SPC) came up with the idea as a program for commuter students. He said because so many students who commute cannot go home between classes, the new program will help pass the time.

Reitz said Jan. 31 was the first time SPC showed cartoons in the Student Center.

"There was more than 200 in revolving attendance. People were staying until the last possible minute, then running to class at five minutes to the hour," Reitz said.

The "Hump Day Toon-In" and "Hump Day Cafe" are free and open to the public.

"We leave the lights halfway lit so people can study at the same time," he said.

If the program succeeds, SPC may show other cartoons and slapstick films such as "Mr. Magoo," "The Three Stooges" and "Little Rascals."

SPC buys the rights to show the films from movie distributors.

Also on the SPC agenda, Feb. 14 to 20 marks "John Waters Week." SPC will pay tribute to the filmmaker by presenting "Desperate Living," an X-rated film from 1977 and "Cry Baby," a 1990 PG-13 film starring Johnny Depp, Iggy Pop, Traci Lords.

Ty Humphrey, video chairman at SPC, said Waters has made films since the late 1960s.

In 1988, Governor Donald Schaefer declared Feb. 14-20 as John Waters Week in the state of Maryland, where waters resides.

"He's a doctor of trash. His motive is to be rude. He works on 'shock value,'" Humphrey said.

In the past, SPC has shown two other Waters films, "Pink Flamingos" and "Female Trouble."

His other films include "Cry Baby," "Hair spray," "Polyester," "Desperate Living," "Multiple Maniacs," "Mondo Trasho," "Eat your Makeup," "Roman Candles" and "Hag in a Black Leather Jacket."

Through the years, his films have been featured at the Cannes Film Festival, Rio de Janeiro Film Festival and Reykjavik Film Festival.

"There are two sides of John Waters. Until 1981, he was doing very rude, crude and lewd movies. His visuals are tasteless," Humphrey said. "Now, in his later movies, like 'Hairspray,' his themes are tasteless."

According to a John Waters biographical article, he has always tried to leave the audience gagging in the aisles.

Waters has also written the book, "Shock Value, a Tasteful Book about Bad Taste."

FNN to be sold to joint venture

NEW YORK (UPI) — Financial News Network Inc., the business cable TV service, said Tuesday it has tentatively agreed to sell its media business to a joint venture formed by Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. and Dow Jones & Co. Inc. for an undisclosed price.

FNN, which was put up for sale three months ago, said the sales price is less than its total liabilities, which the company previously disclosed as including $88 million in leasing debt, $50 million in bank debt and other liabilities.

As a result of the expected shortfall from the deal's proceeds, FNN plans to file a Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy protection proceeding to facilitate the transaction, spokeswoman Amber Gordon said.

FNN said it expects the deal to close within three months, subject to a definitive agreement, approval by the FNN board of directors and antitrust clearance from the federal government.

The announcement also said FNN plans to enter into a management agreement under which the Westinghouse/Dow Jones joint venture will operate FNN until the transaction closes. Gordon said however, it is unclear when the management agreement would go into effect.

FNN provides 24-hour programming to 35 million homes on cable systems in the United States and Canada, including business and sports news. Its media businesses also include the syndicated program, "This Morning's Business" and FNN Business Radio.

FNN is 47 percent-owned by Infotechnology Inc., which controls 97 percent of United Press International. FNN and Infotechnology together own 51 percent of The Learning Channel Inc., an adult educational cable network, and other media properties.

All the companies in the Infotechnology family were put on the sales block in November following the appointment of an interim management team charged with restructuring both Infotech and FNN debt.

The management team has used Wertheim Scarodler & Co. Inc. as its investment banker.

Cultural show entertains many at 1991 festival

The cultural show at the 1991 International Festival featured traditional dances performed in native costumes from 16 international student organizations.

SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, who served as one of the judges for the cultural show, said he liked the performances. He said judging which group was the best was very hard because of the diversity of the cultures represented.

"It's like comparing apples and oranges," Pettit said.

Winners of the events were the Filipino student organization in the exhibition of arts and crafts, the Korean student organization for the fashion show and the Bangladesh student organization for the cultural show.

Many college students are unhappy with their bodies. Lack of accurate information and cultural pressures to have the idea look contribute to fad dieting and eating disorders. Through services offered on campus learn how you can improve your body image and manage your eating.

Drug puppies

Canine drug-detectors stopped cold

WASHINGTON (UPI/States) — Stephen Hamel and Ann Marie Shenko thought they had a great idea: Train dogs to sniff out drugs and then open a drug detection service offering confidential searches for everyone from parents to principals to private businesses.

But the government wasn't so keen on the Florida couple's plan. And late last week, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency denied them permits to obtain the drugs needed to train their dogs.

The problem, according to DEA officials, was the pair's intention to keep their findings confidential. Hamel and Shenko had no plans to notify law enforcement authorities of their discoveries.

"Say you have a factory," Shenko said. "We'd make arrangements with the factory to take the dog in, do what we had to do and, if we found something, we'd just give it to the manager and say, 'Here you go.' He could do what he wanted with it, and we'd go off on our merry way."

"We weren't doing this to turn people in," Hamel added. "We were doing this to provide a service and get people some help. Let's not turn on the flashing lights."

That was all the DEA had to hear.

Noting also that the two applicants, who share a house in Sarasota, have no law enforcement background and no known experience handling drugs or drug-sniffing dogs, the DEA investigators who did background checks on the application recommended the permits be denied.

The agency offered a hearing at which Shenko, a realtor, and Hamel, a sales representative for a boating club, could appeal the rejection and present evidence supporting their request. The applicants didn't show up. The die was cast, they said, and there was nothing that they could offer that might change the DEA's mind.

DEA officials admitted as much. "What happens to the drugs? they find? asked DEA spokesman Bill Ruzzamenti. "These people would not be authorized to handle it, dispense with it, dispose of it. Who's to keep it out of the control and grasp of children? Those are pretty real issues."

Shenko and Hamel believe the decision is unfair, but have no immediate plans to appeal the matter. Their plans, which were months in the making, have "fizzled" since it became apparent that the DEA would reject the application, Hamel said.

The pair argued that their idea, in addition to having tremendous business potential, would be a formidable weapon in the war on drugs. Parents, private school administrators and business owners reluctant to pursue known drug problems because of potential legal and publicity repercussions would be freed to recognize and correct those problems, Hamel said.

Bush optimistic about recession, says solid recovery in near future

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, stressing the inherent strength and flexibility of the U.S. economy, sent to Congress Tuesday an optimistic economic outlook that calls for a solid recovery from the recession.

The administration projects real economic growth to be about 0.9 percent this year with the recession continuing through the first quarter before a recovery begins near the middle of the year.

"My administration's economic policies are designed both to mitigate the current downturn and to provide for a solid recovery and the highest possible rate of sustainable economic growth," Bush said in his annual economic report to Congress.

The president's report, prepared by the Council of Economic Advisers, comes at a time of war, recession and depressed consumer confidence.

The dramatic change of events, however, has not dampened the Bush administration's outlook for a resumption of the nation's economic expansion.

"In my economic report last year, I stated that I looked forward to the 1990s with hope and optimism," Eush wrote in this year's report. "Despite the economic events of 1990, we have reason for both hope and optimism in full measure as the nation approaches the next American century."

Banks offer plan to save failing insurance fund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The banking industry Tuesday presented federal regulators with a $10 billion plan to bolster the weakened Bank Insurance Fund, which is in jeopardy of running out of the money it needs to protect depositors.

The proposal is the result of a high-level summit between banking regulators and leaders of several major banking industry associations.

The plan, outlined in a letter to Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, calls for the fund to borrow up to $10 billion on an "as needed" basis through the bond issuance.

"Our associations would commit to work with bankers throughout the country to purchase these bonds," the letter said.

War reports to Arab people confusing; media controlled

By Sherri L. Wilcox
Staff Writer

Hussein Yousri Amin traveled from Egypt to Little Egypt this week to lecture on the history of Arab journalism and its influence on the Arab people during wartime.

Amin, assistant professor of film and television at Hewlan University in Cairo, Egypt, is visiting the SIUC College of Communications and Fine Arts.

Amin said the Arab population is receiving confusing reports on the war in the Persian Gulf. He attributed this to the fact that half of the information the people get through the media is transmitted by Islamics who oppose Saddam Hussein, and the other half from Communists who support him.

"Egypt has only two television networks, and they cover 99 percent of the population," Amin said.

Amin said that the Egyptian government controls 99 percent of the broadcasting and print media. Although he agreed that national controls are necessary during wartime to reduce the risk of espionage, Amin said that he feels the current governmental controls on the media are unjust.

"Even though Anwar Sadat offered more freedom to the press than the Arab world had seen before, licenses for radio and television broadcasting are still given out only if the government is repaid with "good behavior," Amin said.

He said that good behavior generally meant adhering to government restraints on the publications and broadcasts.

Amin was born in Alexandria, Egypt, and worked nine years for newspapers, radio and television stations throughout Cairo.

In 1982, he came to the United States. He received a doctorate in broadcast communications from Ohio State University in 1986.

In addition to his professorship, Amin is director of the Television Center at Hewlan.

He is an assistant professor of mass communications and journalism and an associate at the Adham Center for Television Journalism at The American University in Cairo, Egypt.

He speaks Arabic, English and French, and has published about 40 books and articles on Egyptian communications and mass media.

"Egyptian dialect makes the country a leader for communications in the Arab world," Amin said. "Each Arab nation can understand Egyptian broadcasts, while they may find communication difficult between other nations."

He said television and radio make up most of the media in the Arab countries. Newspapers are not as popular because 55 percent of the Arab population is illiterate, he said.

He said four months ago, France gave Egypt a satellite station that will give the nation access to an international channel.

Amin said the government of Egypt had spoken of bringing in Cable News Network, but would need the ability to retransmit the broadcasts so the government could block out any information it did not want its people to view.

"There are opposition broadcasts and opposition party newspapers in Egypt, but even those are written with the consent of the government," he said.

"There isn't any underground newspaper. People must have the money to print a publication, and the people in the Arab world do not," he said.

Amin said that the primary qualification for an Arab journalist is not talent, but loyalty to the government.

"They just report what the government wants them to say," he said.

Box-office off to strong start

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Moviegoers, attracted by smash hit "Home Alone" and a strong slate of new releases, have boosted ticket sales so far this year to levels well above those of the previous two years.

Daily Variety reported Tuesday that ticket sales for the year up to Feb. 3 had reached $464.6 million, up sharply from $425.5 million for the same period in 1990.

Total box-office for the top 10 movies during the Feb. 8-10 weekend, led by the opening of "Sleeping With the Enemy," was $48.2 million, up 43.6 percent from the same week last year. "Sleeping With the Enemy," posted the best debut ever for a movie in February.

Many Americans ignorant about business, profits

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — An educator claims many Americans understand little about how business functions, which in turn places undue pressure on the economy.

"Until Americans fully understand where jobs come from, and that the main source of their job security is the profits that come from the success of their companies' products or services in the market, their motivation to help improve productivity will be lacking," writes management professor James A. Lee in the current issue of Business Horizons.

Business Horizons is published by the Indiana University Graduate School of Business.

In his article, titled "The High Cost of America's Economic Ignorance," Lee soberly writes that "the more people we educate, the less they know about profit rates and related economic facts."

In 1945, the American public estimated that manufacturers made 18 cents after taxes on each dollar of sales; the actual figure was seven cents. That year, 250,000 college degrees were conferred nationwide.

By comparison, in 1986, the public's estimate of after-tax profits per dollar of sales had climbed to 32 cents; the actual figure was four cents.

Economic ignorance is not limited to profit rates on sales. Polls show that many overestimate returns on investments.

"Who in their right mind would put money in a savings account if he could earn 20-40 percent after taxes on General Motors stock? It then becomes clear that the nature of the overestimate is an emotionally conditioned attitude," Lee writes.

Factors contributing to this malaise include organized labor and additions to the social studies curriculum over the last 40 years that tend to crowd out subjects that would help students understand the business world and economics.

Bombing raids sear Saudi sky, scar silent sands

SAUDI ARABIA (UPI) — In the desert, the night sky is dazzling. The air is clear. There are no city lights to block the starlight, the moon and the meteors as they blink and die. The great spiral of the Milky Way wheels unobstructed across the middle of the heavens in a spray of stars.

Staring at the great explosion of light, one imagines how that same night sky looked to thousands of years of Bedouin nomads who trekked his trackless wasteland before the discovery of oil.

But these nights, the sky flickers with more than the stars and comets and the meteors that the ancients also watched.

These nights, the sky is alive with red and white flickering lights that sail northward in silence high above the land until they're nearly out of sight, vanish, and then return southward.

Not far behind the flickers are the muffled roars of jet engines — the motors pushing northward the fighters and bombers carrying death to Iraqi soldiers dug in Kuwait and their own land.

For weeks now, those planes and the thunder of their bomb runs have been a fixture in the night. But lately, the swarms of planes seem too numerous to count, and the bombing has thundered almost uninterrupted at night. At the front, the earth shakes: in the rear, rumbling punctuates sleep. Even in the daylight, the noise and number of planes is increasing.

Clearly, the multinational forces trying to kick Iraq out of Kuwait have stepped up the bombing in preparation for a ground assault.

Marines at the front watch the night sky from trenches they've dug in the sand. On their backs in the mummy sleeping bags they call home, they watch the red and white flashes move north, disappear, and return.

They know the flashing lights mean the planes are friendly — on the premise hostile aircraft would not announce themselves with lights.

They know, too, the planes returning south are lighter than they were northbound — that they have just bombed other soldiers sharing that same night sky in trenches much like their own.

Some of the Marines say they can see the flames. All of them say they hear the explosions and feel the thunder of the bombs through the trenches. The planes have helped them fight their enemy and maybe saved their lives.

The pilots are prouder a crescent of mines the Iraqis have planted in Kuwait — some half million of them, it is said, many brought from Western nations, many from the Soviet Union.

They are also taking out troops, tanks and artillery as they soften up Kuwait for allied forces, whose worst enemy so far has been the cold, the rain, the boredom, the loneliness of some five months plus of living in the sand thousands of miles from home.

Unlike peacetime, USO flooded with donations for troops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Virtually forgotten for years by the American public, the USO is now flooded with donations and volunteers eager to offer soldiers and their families a host of new morale-boosting services.

They're still serving coffee and donuts at USO centers around the world, but the troops of Operation Desert Storm and their families at home are also getting free phone calls, help with home repairs, emergency grocery money and an array of emotional support programs — all funded with donations.

Since Operation Desert Storm began in August, donations have been "way up," according to Amy Adler, spokeswoman for USO world headquarters in Washington. "Everyone is thinking of us," Adler said. "Shopping malls have given us the money from their ponds. A little boy at a school in Iowa wrote us he's having a sale to raise money. One law firm gave us the money they would have spent on happy hour after work. During Christmas a lot of offices skipped their Christmas parties and sent us the money."

In addition to such individual donations, the USO coffers have suddenly swelled from numerous corporate benefactors. In September, Adler said, five major corporations — Coca Cola, American International Group, AT&T, ARCO and Anheuser Busch — each gave $500,000 grants to seed the USO's Gulf Crisis Fund.

Other firms have given "in kind" donations, Adler said, such as 5,000 Sony Walkmans for the troops or the Montgomery Ward department store chain's "better than a letter" program allowing soldiers and their families to film and send videotapes to one another for free.

And then there is Bob Hope and several other celebrities who have donated their talent to entertain the troops for USO shows.

USO officials have no firm estimate of the donations it's received since August.

Saudi Arabia: No oil shipments sent to Jordan

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Saudi Arabia has refused a Jordanian request to resume shipping crude oil to the Hashemite kingdom because of its support for Iraq, and indicated Tuesday it is not happy about coalition member Syria's decision to supply Amman with refined oil products.

"We will not be resuming oil shipments to Jordan," a Saudi official in the Middle East told United Press International.

The official, who in line with local practice asked that his name not be used, said Syria is responsible for its own decision to ship refined products to Jordan.

"It is up to sisterly Syria to decide. They know our reasons for stopping the oil," the official added, indicating unhappiness about the deal.

Saudi Arabia halted crude oil shipments to Jordan in September, shortly after Iraq invaded Kuwait, in what Arab diplomats saw as a protest against Amman's pro-Iraqi stance. Saudi Arabia's official explanation was that the Jordanians were unable to pay for the crude.

Jordan then shored up its supplies with more crude from Iraq, bringing the oil overland in tankers under an agreement reached with the United Nations Sanctions Committee. Jordan said it needed the Iraqi crude to keep its economy ticking and was in any case not paying for it in cash. It said Baghdad was supplying the crude at $16 a barrel to pay off old debts.

But recent allied raids on Jordanian oil trucks and damage to the main Baghdad-Amman highway has made it difficult for the debt-ridden nation to receive oil from Iraq.

The route was the main source of crude oil for Jordan, with some 200 trucks carrying 8,000 tons of oil a day. Allied raids on the highway have killed at least eight Jordanian drivers and destroyed 31 oil trucks, reducing supplies from 60,000 barrels a day to less than 10,000 barrels in the middle of winter.

The Nicosia, Cyprus-based Middle East Economic Survey reported Monday that Jordan only had two months of oil left.

Dolphins sign injured Fullwood

MIAMI (UPI) — Brent Fullwood, a running back released by the Cleveland Browns in December, signed with the Miami Dolphins Tuesday, and then underwent knee surgery.

Fullwood, Green Bay's first-round pick out of Auburn in 1987, played for the Packers from 1987-90 before being traded to Cleveland for a seventh-round draft choice in October. The Browns placed him on waivers Dec. 24.

Fullwood underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee and Dolphin physician Dr. Dan Kamehl said the procedure was successful.

"I really appreciated all the support I received from the entire Dolphins' organization from Don Shula all the way down to the medical staff," Fullwood said.

"They treated me with respect both in my signing and the surgery. The knee really feels good, and I plan to contribute to the Dolphins in 1991."

table attendance report to the members at this meeting so they are prepared to discuss and possibly act on it at the next meeting.

Study tables are just one of the services the Athletic Department provides to athletes. The athletes have available tutors for one-to-one assistance. Some coaches believe that this is more effective because attending a study table doesn't mean an athlete is studying.

"Study tables are a strong suggestion that some haven't taken advantage of," Athletics Director Jim Hart said. "It's not an end-all. There is no fool proof plan for athletic academics. We think the best way to monitor an athlete is to look at class attendance. But some classes don't take attendance or the instructor doesn't care. So it's hard to get that information."

Some schools, however, don't believe that study tables are the most effective tool for assisting athletes in their academic endeavors. At Indiana University, they enforce study table attendance, but say that time spent with tutors is more effective.

"If an athlete misses a study table, we tell the coach," said Indiana University Director of Academics Elizabeth Kurpius. "We provide the service and they (coaches) provide the discipline. It (study tables) is not a big thing. The tutors are more important."

"But we don't have attendance problems, because our coaches are strict. Coach (Bobby) Knight (IU basketball coach) doesn't believe in study tables; he prefers using tutors. But Coach (Bill) Mallory (IU football coach) is very strict on study table attendance."

West said tutors are on hand at SIUC study tables. Tutors and study tables aren't always used, she said.

"I wish some of the coaches would encourage, or actually demand players to attend," West said. "Some coaches need to do that. Some are wonderful in that respect, but some aren't as energetic about it."

While the AAC meeting probably will not make immediate changes to the study program, Hart said the Athletic Department has been thinking about possible changes, such as the attendance regulations proposed by the AAC in August.

"We've been giving it thought," Hart said. "We need to get greater attendance, to do something that everyone in the department can take advantage of. It could come down to mandating punitive actions for poor attendance. That could very well be the next step."

to me—he lived right near there—and he said, 'Why do you want to move to New York? A lot of people will be bothering you. Here, they won't bother you.' So I said, 'Well, I want to be bothered.' You want to expose the office to the media."

More than three decades later, Rozelle looks at a world in which public relations has grown. The gulf war, for example, involves perceptions as no other conflict ever has.

"Whether good or bad, there has to be public relations, because the communications media is so broad today," he said. "As an example, like everyone else, I was watching CNN, and a spokesman is asked questions, Pete Williams."

"And you have to have some awareness of public relations, or they ask a question and 'It's none of your damn business.' Obviously, that's not a very good reply. You have to be skilled at saying, 'Unfortunately, that's something we can't divulge at this time but I'll give you what I can on it.'"

The level of modern public relations raises questions: at what point does PR become mind control? What is the danger, if any, of the richest companies hiring the most skilled people to put out a message on a media that reaches millions of homes?

"I don't think most people use it for that (mind control), or attempt to use it for that," Rozelle said. "You do it to put your position obviously in the most favorable light. But you have to accomplish this partly by leveling. You have to establish credibility. And other than in war, you have to give as much information as you can, including where you've made errors."

"Where you have misuse of public relations, obviously I don't think it's good. But I think in today's society, you have to have a public relations program if you're in the public's attention. It's how you exercise it. And certainly you can't say that a big company, IBM or Exxon, shouldn't have public relations. You're gonna get questions, you're gonna get scrutinized."

"But I think they've got to be candid, open, and try to put things, of course, in the best possible light. But by being honest."

in double figures is sophomore Greg Thomas, averaging 10 points a game. Senior Dewayne Brown pitches in 9.8 points a contest.

Underneath, senior Mike Land rules the roost for Indiana State, pulling down 4.7 rebounds a game. Land has started 20 of ISU's 23 games, more than any other Sycamore.

"They run a very balanced attack," Herrin said. "Any one of 11 players can hurt you on any given night. We better come to play or we'll come home with a defeat. I'll tell you that right now."

Indiana State came to the Arena Dec. 30 and walked away with a 75-62 loss. Sophomore center Ashraf Amaya led the way for SIUC, pumping in 22 points. Senior forward Rick Shipley contributed with 15 tallies and eight rebounds.

The road has not been a friendly place for the Salukis this season. On opponents' courts, the Dawgs are a mere 1-8. Their only victory was a 84-57 trounce at Illinois State.

The Salukis are 6-5 in the Valley, 12-10 overall. With Southwest Missouri State and Creighton at the top of the MVC standings at 9-3, SIUC's chances of repeating at regular-season champions are slim.

"We could still win the Valley, but we'll need help," sophomore guard Tyrone Bell said. "We still have five regular season games left and we're definitely in control of getting the third seed in the (MVC) tournament and that's very important."

Bell is coming off a career-high 19-point game Saturday when the Salukis defeated Tulsa 77-60. The game was the first time Bell was not in the Salukis' starting lineup this season.

Senior guard Sterling Mahan continues to lead the Saluki attack with 17.4 points a game. Inside, Amaya (14.5 p.p.g.) and Shipley (13.5 p.p.g.) have dominated most opponents on the boards. Amaya is averaging 9.1 rebounds and Shipley is pulling down 8.5 a game.

"We made some adjustments. I'm very happy with the adjustments," Trump said.

Duva said the willingness of other Atlantic City casinos to come

NCAA says UTEP 'lost control'

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — Texas-El Paso President Diana Natalicio said Tuesday the NCAA, following a 14-month investigation, had accused the school of losing, "institutional control," of its basketball program.

Natalicio said the Miners' basketball program had been cited for 13 violations of NCAA regulations in a letter received by school officials last Friday.

Among the alleged violations were the purchase of an airline ticket for a player and the offering of free legal services.

"The information contained in this inquiry is based upon the NCAA enforcement staff's review of the program during the past year," Natalicio said at a news conference Tuesday.

The NCAA has given UTEP until May 7 to respond to the charges. The NCAA's Infraction Committee then would review the university's reply from Jan. 27 through 30 in Monterey, Calif.

Coach Don Haskins did not attend the news conference.

"It didn't seem appropriate to bring an innocent person to this," Natalicio said. "We did not invite him."

Natalicio said the NCAA considered six of the 13 alleged violations to be major.

Athletic Director Brad Hovious said that among the charges, the NCAA alleged:

- A graduate assistant coach helped in the tutoring and scheduling of a pre-entrance test for a prospective player.

- A coach provided rides to summer jobs to several players.

- A coach arranged free lodging for a player's family and a coach bought the player's family breakfast.

- Players used athletic department telephones for long distance calls with the knowledge of some coaches.

- A representative of UTEP's athletic interests provided an airline ticket to a student-athlete.

- A representative of UTEP's athletic interests provided legal services to a student-athlete without charge.

- Representatives of UTEP's athletic interests had contact with prospective student-athletes during the recruiting process.

The report also alleged there is a, "lack of institutional control over the basketball program."

The investigation began after former Miner players told newspapers in New York and Los Angeles UTEP provided them with free use of cars, cash gifts and food.

Stefan Edberg returns in top form

BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Sweden's Stefan Edberg demonstrated his determination to recapture the world No. 1 at the $600,000 Donnay Open tennis tournament Tuesday night with a sparkling 6-0, 6-4 first-round victory over compatriot Magnus Gustafsson.

"I have every confidence," said Edberg, who is seeded to meet world No. 1 Boris Becker in Sunday's final. "I am feeling superb. The week will be tough. But my next match against Pat Cash doesn't worry me too much."

"What Becker will do does not bother me a bit. I am concentrating on tennis, on my victory in Brussels. The same applies for the ATP rankings. Boris had a chance to grab the top spot and he took it. That's it."

The Swede has a chance to regain the top spot from Becker at the Brussels tournament. The German holds a 133-point lead over Edberg and 240 points will go to Sunday's winner.

Becker took over the top slot by winning last month's Australian Open and is the defending champion here. He is scheduled to begin play against Alexander Volkov of the Soviet Union on Wednesday.

Meanwhile, German Carl-Uwe Steeb, last year's losing finalist, suffered a 6-2, 7-5 first-round defeat against a fired up Ronald Agner of Haiti.

French qualifier Arnaud Boetsch, 174th in the world rankings, caused a minor upset Tuesday with a 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 victory over Austrian Davis Cup international Horst Skoff.

But Boetsch is unlikely to survive the second round where he meets seventh-seeded American Michael Chang.

Bullets' Williams activated after 14-month absence from game

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The Washington Bullets Tuesday activated forward John Williams, ending a 14-month layoff that began with an injured knee that led to a rehabilitation dispute with the team and substantial weight gain.

The 6-foot-9 Williams was added to the roster in time for Tuesday night's game in San Antonio against the Spurs, the team announced.

The power forward has not played since he tore ligaments in his right knee during a game Dec. 2, 1989, against the Utah Jazz.

Williams, in a telephone interview from San Antonio with Washington radio station WTOP-AM, said "it feels great" to be back on the team.

"There's only so many people who make it to the NBA and I'm one of those guys again," he said.

While in his hometown of Los Angeles during the off-season, Williams and Bullets management disagreed over how the knee would be rehabilitated. While idle, Williams' weight neared 300 pounds.

Bullets owner Abe Pollin stepped in and reached an agreement with Williams for his return to Washington. He came back one day before the current season began, and has been getting himself back into playing shape since, losing nearly 40 pounds.

Williams, 24, was Washington's first-round selection in the 1986 draft after he played two seasons with Louisiana State. In four NBA seasons, he has averaged 13.5 points a game. In the 18 games last season before his injury, Williams was averaging 18.2 points a game.

If Williams picks up where he left off last season, the Bullets' playoff chances will be greatly enhanced. Washington came out of the All-Star break in third place in the Atlantic Division.

Joe Morgan testifies in suit against police

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Major League Hall of Famer Joe Morgan testified Tuesday in a civil rights suit against police that he was forcefully arrested in 1988 by an officer who told him "I'm going to show you what authority is about."

Morgan said he was trying to make a phone call at International Airport when an undercover Los Angeles Police detective grabbed him by the shoulder, spun him around and said "I'm conducting a drug investigation and you're part of it."

Morgan, 47, testified that, as he moved to get his wallet from his nearby attache case and prove his identity, the officer grabbed his neck and forced him to the ground.

"I said 'why are you doing this,'" Morgan testified. "He said 'I'm an authority figure and I'm going to show you what authority is all about.'"

Morgan testified that the officer then handcuffed him and clasped a hand over both his nose and mouth, preventing him from breathing as he was forced into a nearby room.

After several minutes, Morgan managed to clear up the confusion and was released, he testified.

As a result of the incident, the former Cincinnati Reds second baseman, who was inducted last year into the Hall of Fame, filed a civil rights lawsuit against the Los Angeles Police Department and the detective, Clayton Searle.

In the suit, Morgan, now a television sports commentator and businessman in the Bay Area, contends that police unfairly targeted him in their narcotics investigation because he is black.

Last April, a federal jury rejected Morgan's case, but the judge who had presided over the trial quashed the verdict after ruling she had failed to instruct jurors that Morgan had been illegally detained by police.

Searle's account of the arrest contradicts Morgan's. The 20-year police veteran contends Morgan made "animal noises" and was verbally and physically abusive during the arrest.

He says Morgan hit him and only

Davis signs one-year deal; becomes highest paid Oriole

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Baltimore Orioles avoided salary arbitration and signed newly acquired slugger Glenn Davis Tuesday to a one-year contract worth $3.275 million, the team announced.

The deal makes the 29-year-old first baseman the Orioles' highest-paid player. If not for Davis' deal, All-Star shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. would have been the best-paid Oriole with his $2.466 million salary in 1991.

The pact with Davis removed the need for a salary arbitration hearing in New York that was scheduled for Thursday, Valentine's Day.

Davis was asking an arbiter to award him $3.65 million for one year, the highest request from a player since salary arbitration began. The Orioles were offering
