Soviet aggression linked to Vietnam

Editor's Note: This is the second part of an interview with William Hardenbergh, professor of political science, about the crisis in Afghanistan. Hardenbergh, an authority on the Mideast, says the Afghan situation is an isolated move on the part of the Soviets, not another step toward control of Mideast oil or a move to secure a warm water port. He said the pro-Soviet government in Afghanistan is in danger and the Soviets hope only to quell the rebel forces before removing their troops. The following is a verbatim transcript of the interview.

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Q Why did the Soviets originally move into Afghanistan?
A. To support their friends. They moved in under the same assumption that we moved into Vietnam, that is they assumed it could be handled relatively inexpensively, and it's turning out to be very damaging for the Soviets.

Q How will India react to the U.S. plan to supply Pakistan with military aid, since the two nations have traditionally been bitter rivals, especially now that Indira Gandhi, who leans toward the Soviets, has regained control in India?

A. The response has been in opposition, but so far has been very moderate. It must be remembered that all this happened during an Indian election campaign. I think the Indians understand the problem.

Q What kind of government did Afghanistan have before the first pro-Soviet government of Taraki took over?

A. It was a kingdom until 1973, and a very remote one. The whole area directly around Kabul, which is the only area I have seen, is very remote and backward. It's the old, old Asia, and has had very little influence from the outside. It's a bloody land. Politics has always been bloodshed, and the King is the least prepared, the least adept of rulers. The Daud government took over in 1973, and they tried to be nice to everybody, because they were so weak. Taraki took over in 1978 in a military coup, and it was a completely local thing. The Soviets didn't know it was going to happen, and here they found that in Afghanistan they had a pro-Soviet bunch, people with lots of Soviet connections, and they thus thought that they had no choice but to support these people. What they didn't anticipate was that there would be a massive rebellion against the government. I suspect that the move toward the Soviets was initiated within Afghanistan, but it may have been a complete Soviet plan. Once the rebellion started, and once the things in Iran started happening, I think the Soviets got concerned that it (Moslem rebellion, because at least 20 million Moslems live in the U.S.S.R., Hardenbergh estimated) was going to happen in their own country. There really have been elements of an Islamic religious revival right across the world. There are evidences of it in the Soviet Union, too, and I'm convinced that they've become concerned about the existence of an Islamic awakening.

Q Is there a possibility that these Soviet Islamics could start a rebellion of their own in the future? Do they have the resources for it?

A. Nobody seems to think they could. It's a very efficient regime for repression. I suppose it's not beyond the bounds of possibility, but it seems unlikely.

Q Besides what appears to be a favorable geographic location, does Afghanistan really have anything to offer?
A. It is several hundred miles closer to the Persian Gulf and the oil fields and the Arabian Sea, at least. It's a country made up of nomads and small peasants, and there is only now emerging a very rudimentary kind of economy. It's as ancient a market as almost anything I've seen in Asia at least since the early 1960s.

Q The Soviet line is that they were asked to come in. Do you think there was any truth to that?

A. Oh, sure. They were asked to come in originally by Taraki, but I think that their argument would probably be that the people who assassinated Amin (Hafizullah, past leader who was reportedly killed in the takeover by the latest pro-Soviet group of Babrak Karmal) were the ones who asked for the Soviet involvement. I think the argument would be that these people first overthrew and executed Amin, and then asked the Soviets to come in. I think the Soviets would be a lot happier if the whole thing had never happened.

Q To sum up then, do you think the Soviet expansion to the Persian Gulf is an overreaction?

A. Yes, I don't think they'll go past the Afghan borders.

Computer crunch eased

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

The recent installation of a $1.1 million computer in the Wham Building may resolve what SIU-C officials and students have termed the "computer crunch of last fall."

The IBM computer, which will be partially paid for by funds made available by the bond retirement fee, is linked to the University's old computer and should improve the work capacity of the system by about 80 percent, Computing Services Director Barry Bateman said.

Last semester, the system became so "bogged down" with work from academic and administrative users that a job which "should have taken the computer 15 minutes to complete was coming back in three to five hours," Phillip Spielmacher, assistant director of Academic Computing, said.

"The situation was real bad," said computer operator Mark Williams, recalling the final weeks of last semester when academic demand on the computer was heaviest. He said students working at the computer job station in Faner Hall "sometimes waited half a day for the computer to complete a job."

Just about every day the computer became saturated with work and shut down, sometimes two or three times a day," he said. "We'd get calls over at Wham every two hours from students asking us to restart the system because the communication lines were cut off."

Spielmacher said, "During the peak use periods at the end of the fall semester, the problem was that the old computer devoted too much time trying to keep track of the tasks it was supposed to complete rather than actually completing the tasks."

Bateman said the addition of the computer should enable the system to handle the work load of the estimated 200 to 300 students using the computer daily.

He said it will also be capable of handling an increased administrative load, attributable to the new monthly billing system at the Bursar and the

CIPS: Citizens are conserving

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Carbondale and Central Illinois Public Service Company officials have figured out why the electric utility tax revenues that the city collects is $76,086 less than expected — Carbondale residents are conserving.

The city and CIPS began looking at the gross revenue figures and tax records in October, after city reports indicated that the revenue from the tax Carbondale charges on city residents' electric bills was substantially less than had been previously estimated.

Paul Sorgen, finance director for Carbondale, said CIPS began checking its accounts to see if all of the customers within the Carbondale city limits were being assessed the 5.44 percent municipal tax.

News Analysis

After checking records in Springfield, CIPS officials told Carbondale City Manager Carroll J. Fry and Sorgen that all of the accounts were being taxed. Carbondale residents were simply conserving electricity.

Residents were "absolutely not dropped from the tax rolls," Sorgen said.

At a City Council meeting Jan. 21, Fry told council members that CIPS records indicated that the "Carbondale District has shown an increase, and Carbondale, which makes up 60 percent to 70 percent of the district, is down (in revenues)."

Fry said that if CIPS did not provide some answers to the problem, he would ask for an audit of the books in Springfield.

Sorgen said that in 1978, when CIPS first initiated the summer differential — an increased rate for electricity during the summer months when consumption is higher — people began conserving.

Since the city's budget is predicted from past years' revenue reports, Sorgen said this decrease in electricity usage was not taken into consideration.

After looking at the revenue reports from 1978, Sorgen said the city "just has a bad revenue estimate" for the electricity utility tax.

Sam Poe, public relations officer for CIPS in Springfield, said CIPS' gross revenue for 1978 and for a portion of 1979 were higher than CIPS expected since a coal strike forced the

More than $3,000 worth of stolen items was recovered by police last Friday. The "goods" were linked to three recent Lewis Park burglaries.

Police find $3,000 in stolen goods

By Leanne Waxman

A Lewis Park Apartments groundskeeper was arrested and an estimated $3,000 in stolen property was recovered recently in connection with three burglaries at Lewis Park.

Lee H. Parker, 606 S. Logan St., is being held in Williamson County Jail on charges of possession of stolen property after a routine check of items pawned at Pap-American Imports, 124 S. Illinois Ave., uncovered stereo equipment that was taken from a Lewis Park apartment last week.

Carbondale Police Lt. Terry Murphy said Parker may possibly be linked with additional burglaries in Carbondale as a police investigation and identification of recovered property by victims continues.

Parker, 46, had been employed at the Lewis Park Apartment complex on East Grand Avenue for about three months according to Lewis Park manager Mark Lopez.

Parker was arrested in Cambria. Stolen property was confiscated in Cambria as well as the Carbondale pawn shop, Murphy said. Property that police linked to Parker was also recovered from residences in Cambria.

About $1,000 in stereo equipment was taken from a Lewis Park residence last Tuesday when a bedroom intruder fled after he awakened a resident. Another Lewis Park residence was burglarized and about $1,000 stereo equipment taken last Wednesday while residents slept.

Stolen property was recovered from a burglary of the Lewis Park business office which occurred Dec. 11. About $1,000 in office equipment was taken, according to police.

Police also linked stolen property to a Hester Street burglary which occurred over Christmas break, Murphy said.

Parker, who was convicted of murder in 1954, is being held without bond because the possession of stolen property charges for which he was arrested is a parole violation, according to the Carbondale Parole office. Parker was originally sentenced to 75 years and was paroled in October.

Anderson's staff optimistic about Iowa caucus vote

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

Although presidential hopeful John Anderson received just 4.1 percent of the Republican vote in the Iowa caucus Jan. 23, the campaign staff of the Illinois congressman does not consider the results a defeat, according to John Wade, staff assistant on Anderson's campaign.

Wade, a former research assistant and administrative intern at SIU-C, took a break from his campaign duties in Washington last week to visit the caucus.

"Our objective in Iowa was to increase national awareness of Mr. Anderson. I think we achieved that in the televised debate prior to the caucus," Wade said.

Several observers of the presidential race have referred to Anderson as "the most qualified candidate for the office." Wade said, yet in the same breath they say that Anderson cannot be elected.

"Our goal is to organize those people who feel that Mr. Anderson is the best qualified candidate to an effective support group. We feel that Mr. Anderson can be elected with well-planned organization," he said.

Wade, 25, said Anderson is the "only presidential candidate directly addressing the issues," such as the oil crisis.

Wade said Anderson is not afraid to support measures that are unpopular with the public if he feels the measures are necessary. Wade cited as one example of this Anderson's proposal to add a 50-cent tax to gasoline prices.

Anderson couples the gasoline tax plan with proposals of payroll tax deductions, business tax rebates and Social Security benefit increases. According to Anderson's figures on the package plan, individuals earning minimum wage would receive an annual break of about $194, if they drive less than 5,720 miles per year.

According to Wade, Anderson feels environmental and economic concerns cannot be treated as individual issues. Economic studies indicate that a large gas tax could save 600,000 to 700,000 barrels of gas per day, or about 10 percent of the current daily gasoline consumption in the United States.

Wade said another aspect of Anderson as a candidate that attracted him to the campaign is the fact that Anderson is a Christian, but that "he doesn't wear it on his sleeve as some other candidates have."

Wade said he became interested in Anderson as a political figure several years ago when Anderson said in a speech "if we truly are to regard ourselves as his stewards, it seems there is something innately Christian about conservation."

According to Wade, Anderson is a candidate who seeks to "revitalize American goodness," and who offers the voters his plans to do so.

"As a political activist, I will continue to be involved in campaigns where the candidates are clearly and intelligently discussing issues and defining solutions before they are elected," Wade said.

Wade was involved in Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign in 1976, but chose not to support Carter in 1980 because he feels Carter failed to fulfill his 1976 campaign promises.

According to Wade, in the area of civil rights, Anderson takes the "perspective of human dignity," which Wade feels is often not emphasized by politicians.

Wade said Anderson is concerned not only about U.S. policy regarding human rights in foreign countries, such as the hostage situation in Iran, but also human rights guarantees in the United States.

He said the real test of Anderson's chances will come in the Feb. 26 New Hampshire primary, Anderson's strongest area will probably be the "snow belt," the states sweeping down from New Hampshire, through Massachusetts and Illinois and up to Wisconsin, Wade said.

A goal of the Anderson campaign is to get people to vote in the primaries, Wade said.

"It is only at this point that the people have actual choices as to who will be the presidential candidates. In November there will be only two to choose from," he said.

City aims for minority count

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

A loss of federal aid since 1970, caused by an undercount of the city's blacks and other minorities when census figures were compiled, has persuaded city officials to aim for a more accurate count in 1980.

But, according to Norvell Haynes, a candidate for precinct committeeman on the northeast side, correcting the undercount this year, and thereby increasing the city's aid, is not necessarily the best thing to do for the black community.

Haynes said a committee with 17 members, including four leaders from black neighborhoods is planning to discourage blacks from answering census questionnaires.

Since the amount of aid the city receives is based on population, Haynes said, "if people in the black community don't get counted, they won't get the money. It's not doing them any good when they do get it. They just sit down and don't do anything constructive with it."

Haynes said the problem is not simply because too many black people are unemployed,

Norvell Haynes

"The ones that are employed are not doing a damn thing. I've seen too many black people who get jobs that are relevant to the community, and then they just sit there and do nothing," he said.

About 7.7 percent of the city's minorities were not accounted for in 1970 census figures because, at the time, the Bureau of the Census was not using people from minority groups to assist in the counts in their own neighborhoods, said James Danridge, a community services specialist for the bureau.

The undercount caused about a 7.7 percent loss of federal aid during the past 10 years, Jack Hanley, Carbondale's director for economic development, said.

According to Equal Employment Opportunity Officer Cleveland Matthews, a portion of the city's census committee, including representatives from neighborhood associations, religion, labor, education, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will devote their time to encouraging minority participation in the 1980 census.

He said he expects the census to show that there are 20 percent more blacks in Carbondale than 1970 figures indicated.

An inaccurate count might have been caused by the suspicions of minority group members and the general population as well, Matthews said, since many people "have a fear about a loss of privacy. People have a thing about the government snooping on them."

Matthew said community leaders working on the minority count will stress the confidentiality of the questionnaires.

IBHE request may not be adequate

By Chuck Hempstead
Staff Writer

A 7 percent increase in the cost of goods and services recommended by the Illinois Board of Higher Education for fiscal year 1981 may not be adequate, according to two University administrators.

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, said, "It's hard to say at this time, but it'll be cutting it pretty close."

Adopting a stronger stand, Robert E. Gentry, vice president for financial affairs, said, "No, it won't be adequate. This will just be another year when the money doesn't keep up with inflation. Once again we are faced with adopting one of three options: belt-tightening, resource reallocation, or a deterioration of services. This has been going on for quite a few years. Whatever flexibility in the budget we may have had is gone now."

The IBHE unanimously approved and forwarded to the legislature a budget request of $1.16 billion for fiscal year 1981, an 11.3 percent increase over this year's budget.

Components of the budget include a 9 percent faculty compensation increase; a 7 percent increase for the cost of most goods and services; and between a 13 and 18 percent increase in the cost of utilities, depending on the type used at each campus.

Commenting on the accelerated costs, IBHE

Executive Director James Furman said, "These inflation-driven components account for over 80 percent of the recommended operating budget increases for public colleges and universities, and are in line with the various projections of inflation for next year."

"Getting control of energy costs," Furman said, "is a problem second only to staff compensation for Illinois colleges and universities. The cost of energy quadrupled during the 1970s and the rate of inflation is not slowing down."

"Finally," Furman said, "we have again recommended funding for food production and research projects designed to deal with the worldwide food crisis."

personnel payroll system, which will consolidate all the University's payroll information into one data file.

The addition, which was installed Friday, includes a main computer, a computer memory and disk drives. The computer memory and disk drives are attached to the system for increased data storage space, Bateman said.

Bateman said the life expectancy of the addition, taking into account the increasing growth in computer use, is two to three years, although plans for replacing the whole system are in the making.

Five years ago, 12 courses required students to work on the computer, compared to 45 courses now, Spielmacher said.

In the same period, the number of students using the system increased from about 800 to 5,000, he said.

The number of cathode ray tubes on campus, used for both academic and administrative access to the system, has increased from 12 to 300 in the past three years, he said.

Bateman said, "In 18 months to two years we hope to replace both of our computers with a single IBM model which has not come out on the market yet."

He said the IBM would have four times the capacity of the present system "at quite a bit less cost."

The establishment of the bond retirement fee last year enabled the University to free $263,500 in retained tuition funds, which is to be used for academic purposes.

utility company to purchase coal from out-of-state at higher prices. The electric fuel adjustment, a figure that is added to the customer's bill as the price of coal fluctuates, accounted for this increase, Poe said.

Poe said that CIPS' revenues have decreased recently because of the milder summer and winter weather Carbondale experienced.

CIPS officials refused to release the gross revenue figures for the Carbondale district or for the municipal taxing district. The city also refused to release the records until after the council meeting

Feb. 4, at which time the reports become public record.

However, by taking the 5.44 percent municipal tax rate and the $278,499 the city has received in taxes from May through November, it was projected that CIPS collected $5,119,466 in gross revenues for Carbondale residents.

The city expected to collect $589,000 in electric utility taxes in 1979-80. At the end of November—seven months into the budget year—the city had only collected $278,499 for a $76,086 shortfall. According to the budget, the city anticipated collecting $354,585.

Results of the Iowa caucuses reflect campaign organization

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

The results of the Iowa caucuses are not a forecast of voter sentiment, but rather a reflection of efficient campaign organization, according to David Derge, professor of political science and former SIU-C president.

"The winning camps had very successful and efficient organizations," Derge, a former political researcher said Monday. "The results of the caucuses do not forecast the popularity of the candidate with the voters, but forecast the strength and motivation of the campaign personnel."

Voters in Iowa's 2,531 election precincts gathered in schools, churches and libraries to vote for Democratic and Republican candidates. In the Democratic race, Carter had a 2-1 win over Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, and in the Republican race former United Nations Ambassador George Bush edged passed Ronald Reagan with a 6 percent lead.

Southern Illinois Republicans said last week that Bush's organization was the key factor in his upset of Reagan, who was the leading GOP contender. Meanwhile, Bush opponents tried to minimize his victory by agreeing he had a superior organization in Iowa.

The Iowa caucus is only the first part of the state's four-step process of nominating candidates for the national convention. Participating in the vote were members of county convention delegations, who will choose delegates to later conventions, and those delegates will pick the national delegates who will finally participate in the national convention.

The results of the Iowa caucuses will have a big impact on the fortunes of the individual candidates, said Derge, who was a pollster for Richard Nixon during the 1968 presidential campaign. Voters who contribute money to political campaigns will give more weight to the results than the average voter, he said, because money-giving voters want to "be on the right side."

"Big contributors to campaigns are more affected by the votes cast in Iowa," Derge said. "Kennedy is probably having a worse time now than before the Iowa caucuses."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported late last week the Kennedy for President campaign in Illinois will stop paying staff members and rely solely on volunteer help. The national campaign manager said not paying staff members would last, in effect, indefinitely, or until the campaign experienced an upswing in contributions, it was reported.

About 200,000 voters turned out at the Iowa caucuses, which is more than the number of voters who turned out for the 1976 primary in New Hampshire. However, Derge said there still are voters who don't feel strongly enough to vote in a caucus. The more traditional voter will participate in a primary and not a caucus, he said.

Student Center offers Western Union

By Steve Grant
Staff Writer

Western Union telegraphic money orders can now be received through the Student Center check cashing service, the result of a service expansion beginning this semester.

Arac Griffin, business manager of the Student Center, said the service receives only telegraphic money orders and is available for students, faculty, staff and guests of the University.

"After careful consideration, we decided to install the Western Union service on a limited basis mostly to accommodate students who frequently encounter problems when cashing checks for large sums of money," Griffin said.

When using the service, the sender must specify that the money order be sent to the SIU

Western Union service. If not, it may be sent to the other Western Union services in Carbondale, such as the Saluki Currency Exchange, said Mary Dean Patterson, head cashier of the Student Center check cashing service.

The service is available Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Sundays and holidays from 11 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Carter: Strong defense a must

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Monday the United States must spend a record $142.7 billion next year on strengthening its defenses "to contain Soviet aggression and assure U.S. security in the face of growing Russian military power." The president told Congress he could not ignore "the implications of terrorism in Iran or Soviet aggression in Afghanistan."

Only last week, Carter asserted in his State of the Union address that the United States would consider a Soviet effort to gain control of the oil-rich Persian Gulf area as a threat to U.S. vital interests and that America would act to repel such an effort.

"Our forces must be increased if they are to contain Soviet aggression and continue to assure our security in the future. This will require a sustained commitment over a period of years," he said.

Kennedy urges price freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, seeking to rejuvenate his presidential campaign, called for on Monday a six-month wage and price freeze and immediate gasoline rationing.

And the Massachusetts Democrat, whose loss to Carter in the Iowa precinct caucuses last week prompted speculation about the future of his candidacy, declared he was in the race to stay.

Kennedy's gasoline rationing plan follows the lines of the president's standby proposal which Congress approved last year. Kennedy supported the standby rationing plan.

But this was the first time he has advocated mandatory wage and price controls. Kennedy said his proposed controls would apply not only to wages and prices but to profits, dividends, interest rates and rents.

A poll published over the weekend in the Boston Globe showed Carter leading Kennedy, 56 percent to 31 percent, among Democratic voters in New Hampshire

Saudi Arabia ups oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia, the largest member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and the supplier of about 7.4 percent of U.S. oil needs, told customers Monday it has increased its base crude oil price by $2 to $26, Exxon Corp. announced.

The 8.3 percent increase in the price of Arabian light crude, the traditional benchmark on which other OPEC prices are based, was retroactive to Jan. 1 and had been expected by many analysts.

Criticism misses irony, satire

This letter, which is in reply to John Amberg's letter in the Jan. 22 E.E. is in defense of Howard Klehm. Mr. Klehm has graduated and is not around to defend himself, so I will do the honors.

Having debated the athletics fee increase with Mr. Klehm and having lost on all counts, you will be glad to know, Mr. Amberg, that I will be the first in line to pay my dues and respects to the athletics department.

How sad that yours was the reply Howard expected. I'm sure you must be a serious student to defend the athletics program so sincerely. However, I suggest you write to Spoon River College—perhaps they can offer you a correspondence course in satire and irony. Better apply for the 100-level course.

Mr. Klehm's "horror" was purposely forced and exaggerated, so you might recognize his mockery of those who would denounce the fee increase.

Howard, you and I agree. SIU athletics has long deserved the money it needs to properly offset increasing costs of supporting our fine program.

Perhaps Howard will write a letter spelling out his position, and leave out the mockery of those too short-sighted to recognize the benefits of a strong athletics program.

In the mean time, Mr. Amberg your defense of Mr. Dempsey is wonderful. Don't ever stop voicing your opinion.

But please, please look around you. Absurdity is everywhere, and people will always be using it to make a point. You will never know with whom you stand if you don't know what those who can laugh are laughing at. Or even worse, when they're laughing. — Gail Prather, Senior, English

Happy birthday, Tom Paine!

Nick Sortal

Editorial Page Editor

Thomas Paine?

Oh yeah, he's the dude with Common Sense. Well, it seems there's more to Paine than the history books mention in their three or four lines devoted to the author of "Common Sense," the United States' first call for independence.

In fact, some of the adventures Paine went through in 1793 while in Paris helping to draft a new constitution for France bear a resemblance to a certain little crisis over in Iran.

The story goes like this, according Thomas D. Schwartz, assistant professor of English:

King Louis XVI of France was catching flack for being cruel to some of the common people, much like the Shah of Iran was getting heat from the Iranians. In fact, everyone in France wanted the King's head (except maybe some of his relatives, business partners and golfing buddies).

Enter Thomas Paine. He suggested clemency for King Louis XVI by shipping the King to America, which made Paine about as popular as an American in Tehran would be after suggesting that the Shah wasn't such a bad guy after all.

(King Louis XVI had helped out the Americans by giving them equipment for the revolution, much like the Shah had helped us in getting oil, Schwartz said.)

The French radicals were so upset about the idea of using America as a grounds for saving Louis XVI's skin that Paine was thrown in jail, and scheduled for the guillotine.

French prison guards designated which people were to be executed by making a mark on the outside of the prisoner's door. Paine's door was open when the jailer passed by, and the guard (obviously no Albert Einstein) mistakenly marked the INSIDE of the door, which Paine then closed. So when it came execution time, Paine was passed over because there was no mark on his door.

Paine was released 10 months later, and came back to the United States.

What would Paine do about the Iranian crisis today?

"I think he would support Kurt Waldheim's attempts to work out the crisis. He would deplore the Iranians' actions and consider them an act of war, but even before then, he would have been screaming bloody murder about the Shah," Schwartz said.

Paine's 243rd birthday will be celebrated on campus Tuesday. A free program will be held at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium. The program features a one-man play performed by the personable Frederick Williams, assistant professor of foreign languages, who will portray Paine.

One of the most touching scenes in Williams' presentation comes when Paine has been released from prison and is writing a letter to George Washington, who had been Paine's friend. In the letter, Paine asks Washington why he had not helped to free him from the prison in France.

Several essays and speeches will also be presented, including the presentation of "Tom Paine and Human Rights" by Vice President for University Relations George Mace.

Although Paine fought for women's rights, child labor laws and abolishing slavery, he was unpopular because of his religious commentaries. (Paine especially spoke out against clergymen, who at the time were using passages from the Bible to support the use of slaves.)

Teddy Roosevelt went so far as to call Paine "that filthy little atheist." Paine did believe in God—he was just against traditional religions, saying instead that he preferred to make his fellow man happy.

Despite his fights for human rights, Paine got himself into trouble with the American people for his outbursts against organized religion.

"I guess the only person Paine could be compared with is Andrew Young," Schwartz said. "They both were more interested in human rights than national interests and they both were somewhat hotheads."

One might even say that at times, Paine didn't use Common Sense.

Separate opinions from facts

In brief reply to Mr. Marcianowski's letter in regards to nuclear weapons appearing in the Jan. 23 edition of the Daily Egyptian:

—ERDA ceased to exist on Oct. 1, 1977. Strange it should have a billion-dollar budget in 1980:

—President Carter halted all reprocessing of commercial nuclear power plant fuel shortly after taking office. That was April 7, 1977.

Your other "statements" are equally as accurate. If you want to write letters, you should separate opinions and not present them as fact; or at least, have some vague knowledge of what you are writing about. — Gerhard Jaspers, Radiation Safety Officer

'National hysteria' strikes U.S.

During the President's recent State of the Union address two of the phrases which received considerable applause were those asking for increased defense spending and for renewed registration for a draft.

Obviously these were moves calculated to correspond with the popular sentiment of the times. Public opinion has been orchestrated towards favoring military concerns.

The situation in southwest Asia has produced a wave of national hysteria, a sense of helplessness and a desire for revenge against somebody.

Although the situation calls for anti-Soviet postures and the national mood appears to dictate that defense spending be increased, we must not let this sense of urgency cause our nation to lunge blindly towards reinstating the draft.

The return to an all-volunteer military was a tremendous victory for the supporters of human dignity and civil rights for all Americans. It took from the Chiefs of Staff, the Defense Department hierarchy, the Armed Services Committees and other masters of war, and gave to each American the right to decide when circumstances demand their service, and perhaps their lives.

I am confident that should that time come America's youth would act in the same way the minutemen did more than 200 years ago. But the present situation is no reason to make our young generation subject to the whim of the multi-national oil conglomerates. If they want a mercenary force they have the money to hire one. — Jeff Neigel, Senior, Political Science

'Red tape' devours roommate

Well, he's gone now. My new roommate of four days has packed his bags and moved back home. When he left, he had not yet attended a single class. But he tried.

I suppose John's problems started when he tried to change his schedule. He wanted to completely revise it. But when he tried to sign up for new classes, a "Red Tape Monster" swallowed him whole. There was an error in his records, or for some reason he was actually ineligible to attend SIU. Or so we guess. What the actual problem was, he never did discover.

John spent his first three days down here standing in lines and making phone calls. He was continually being referred to other offices and other departments. Finally, when most of us were getting our first assignments, John decided to go back home. He just gave up. And even that took some doing, since he also wanted his housing downpayment back. That small task proved just as difficult, since he didn't even know why he had to leave.

When he left, he had only a few things certain in his mind: He was being involuntarily dropped, he was not re-enrolled and couldn't, and he would look for a job when he got back home.

I felt so discouraged to see him shake his head in quiet dismay. His high hopes of finally going to college were set back by I don't know what. And neither does he. — John Fillipitch, Junior, Radio-Television

Audition a tense experience for radio-TV hopefuls

By Ken MacGarrigle
Staff Writer

Radio and TV futures are often decided in 90 seconds.

They're called auditions and they separate the haves from the have-nots. During a minute-and-a-half, the future of many SIU-C broadcasting students is permanently shaped.

The competition is fierce even on the college level in such a competitive field. Hopefuls sink or swim in a very short and pressure-filled span of time: the audition.

Radio auditions were held last Wednesday at WSIU Radio. Some 113 students vied for 32 full-time staff positions. The next night, 81 arrived to compete for 45 TV slots open this semester. Gayle Simpson, a junior in radio-television, was at both auditions.

"You don't know what they're looking for," she said, moments after her TV tryout. "You sit there not knowing when to start or anything. When you're done this voice comes across (the studio intercom) and says 'Thank you.'"

"It went so fast," Simpson said, shaking her head. "It seems like such a short little thing and you realize that if you blow it, even a little bit, you may blow something big for the rest of your life."

The auditioners arrive an hour before they're scheduled to go on, just to keep things running smoothly, they're told. What it does instead is build the tension to an even higher level for the students waiting to perform.

"The longer you wait, the more nervous you get," said Mark Hillenbrand, a junior in radio-television.

They line the hallway outside the studio, anxiously re-reading their script aloud, over and over: "Although reports from autopsies might be sketchy..."

Some pace. Some laugh and make small-talk with friends and classmates. Anything to relieve the pressure. Anything to remove the self-doubts.

Steve Bernstein, engineer-news film supervisor for WSIU-TV, tries to keep order among the mass of people. He calls out names, offers encouragement, reassurance and last second coaching for nervous tryout hopefuls.

"Make a smooth transition. Don't just say, 'Now here's my sports. Have a seat, take a deep breath, be comfortable."

Bernstein, a senior in radio-television, says his is the most troublesome job at auditions.

"I remember being one myself," he said, glancing down the crowded hallway. "Even the people who've gone through this before still get nervous. Everybody gets nervous because they know that right across the glass they're watching your every move."

The glass separates the control room from the studio; the judges from the performers. There sit Dave Beedy (WSIU news director), Jann Ingmire (assistant news director), Bob Cyphers (sports director), and Ed Brown (faculty news director) with a cold business like silence. They must choose who will work and who will watch, listen and wait.

"He was five seconds long on each story," Brown says. He shakes his head and jots down a note. Another student forgot something in his script. "Who's Simon?" he asks of no one in particular. "He didn't say who Simon was..." Another note.

Warren Lewis, senior in radio-television, was one of the 81 people who auditioned for the 45 positions at WSIU-TV. Some 113 students tried out for the 32 full-time staff positions at WSIU Radio.

"What's scary for new people is not knowing what to expect," says Bill Andrie, a radio-television sophomore, who last semester anchored an afternoon telecast. "Especially if you've never done TV before. Everyone is nervous for an audition, very much so."

John Phillipitch, a radio-television junior, concurs. He says that auditioning is five times more nerve-racking than performing live.

"On the show once a week you can get away with mistakes," he said. "Here you can't because they're looking for mistakes. You prepare and prepare and its almost all for naught."

After the stories are read, the audition is complete. The control room reaction is always the same. The intercom speaks: "Very good. Thank you." The applicants seem to expect something more, perhaps a booming voice saying, "You're hired!" They file out quietly.

"That was real good. Thank you." The mike is shut off. The applicant walks out.

Miss Black Illinois to tour Iceland, Germany on USO entertainment trip

By Jennell Olson
Staff Writer

When Marquita Grady was named Miss Black Ebonyess at SIU-C in 1973, she and the other contestants were given some tips on poise from Miss Black Illinois, Denise Betts. Grady was so impressed with Betts that she decided she would run someday for the state-wide title.

Last June the 25-year-old speech education graduate achieved her goal. Today Grady is rehearsing for a month-long Miss Black America United Service Organizations Show (an entertainment tour) to Iceland and Northern Germany.

"I'm really excited about the tour," said Grady during a telephone interview from her hotel room in Mishicot, Wis. "I've never been overseas before and I want to see the different cultures and lifestyles, as well as entertain."

Grady, Miss Black Connecticut Sheila Cunningham and Miss Black District of Columbia Vicki Johnson were chosen from a group of 27 women to accompany Miss Black America Varetta Shankle on the tour. Grady said they were chosen primarily for their ability to get along with people.

Marquita Grady

They were also selected because of their singing and dancing talents.

A teacher in career education at Joliet Township High School, Grady is in Wisconsin, preparing for the show until Saturday when they will go to Washington, D.C. for performances at the Walter Reed Hospital and the Pentagon. The troupe will leave for Germany Feb. 5.

Grady, who is on a leave of absence from her teaching job, has found she has other similarities with Betts in addition to being Miss Black Illinois. Grady is teaching at the same school where Betts once worked.

On the tour, the native of East St. Louis will use the stage talents that she developed while a student at SIU from 1972 to 1976. In addition to drama and speech classes, which she credits with teaching her discipline, she performed with the Kutoma Players, a black acting troupe.

Before coming to SIU she studied dance with Katherine Dunham, a dancer who toured the West Indies and converted voodoo rituals into stylized dance.

Grady particularly recalled one SIU speech teacher, Elizabeth Norwood, who stressed discipline and yet "at the same time she was flexible enough to let us be creative." Like Grady, Norwood also left the University in 1976.

"I'd also like to get a master's degree in English, speech and drama someday," Grady said, noting that she would return to SIU if she could get a fellowship. But that is a goal that she said will have to wait.

Hoffman's versatile performance the drive behind 'Kramer' success

By Edward R. Berry
Student Writer

What is it about Dustin Hoffman that we all have come to like so much? Is it his boyish charm or his ability to continuously switch from a totally neurotic mood to complete passivity without losing control of his character? Whatever, he's one it again in Robert Benton's "Kramer vs Kramer."

It's an unpleasant story of a family break-up and the battle that ensues between the parents for custody of their only child. Justin Henry plays young Billy Kramer, who has lived most of his seven years under the guidance of his mother (played by Meryl Streep).

The plot develops as Streep realizes she cannot take the pressures of motherhood along with the role of being wife to a man who is an advertising workaholic (Hoffman). Only after his wife flees from their home for good does Hoffman realize that he never took the time to experience what it's like to be a real father. Now he must serve as a mother, too.

The three main characters

place guilt on themselves for the family break-up. In a unique plot twist, all three look at themselves and realize their own faults instead of blaming each other. They all mature in character while trying to draw together as a family once again.

The relationship between Hoffman and Henry is irresistible. Little by little, the two become a team, a partnership that will never end.

In a scene in which Hoffman must let Streep see the boy for the first time in 15 months, the child immediately runs to his mother's waiting arms. The only thing viewers can experience is the empty feeling inside of Hoffman as he watches his son walk off for an afternoon with his mother.

Hoffman fears the possibility of losing his son, not only for his sake, but for that of his son who has come to love him so much.

Having to love him the various individuals responsible for putting together this splendid film would be easy, but most of the credit must go to Hoffman for another superb acting job. An Academy Award nomination is a must.

Streep, the rising star of the '80s, has a fairly small part, but gives a convincing performance as the woman who wanted to be the mother of the boy she loved and also realize herself as a complete person.

Henry, in his first acting role, offers an excellent performance as the loveable son.

The only reaction anyone can have after seeing this film is that it is one of the finest movies produced in 1979.

Recurring Shoulder Pain Calls For Action Now

BY DR. ROY S. WHITE
Doctor of Chiropractic

Shoulder pain, as a symptom, is easily recognized but seldom understood. Earlier, less acute symptoms provide the tip-off. What often results in the aching, throbbing shoulder is a condition that began as stiff and tender "show" muscles across the top of the shoulders. Left untreated that stiffness and tenderness can progress over a period of weeks to ultimately reach an intensity that is almost unbearable. Burning ache of shoulder can and often does extend into the neck and head.

Obviously, neck and shoulder movement then becomes increasingly difficult and painful. The first serious interest in correction frequently follows the frustration a person has who attempts to shave or comb the hair or shampoo it, as that action can cause an increase in sharpness of pain down the arm and tingling in the fingers.

Ultimately weakness and fatigue, tremor of the arm accompanies the pain and the muscles across the chest may become tender. The symptoms then are all the more recognizable and made more severe by coughing or sneezing. Ultimately, nature

Ultimately, nature responds to the incessant pain with varying degrees of immobility. Shoulder and arm pain constitutes the most frequently recognized symptom of structural defects in the lower neck and upper spine. Abnormally small or distorted nerve openings in the upper spine serve to irritate the nerves which pass through them to supply the shoulder, neck, arm, upper back and chest muscles. It follows that muscles supplied by irritated nerves themselves become tense, painful, and lose their normal elasticity and ability to relax.

The shoulder pain, tingling, and pain across the chest can be only the first of many problems. Upper back aches, headaches, pain and tenderness of the forearm, all are pieces of the composite pie.

Experience has shown that shoulder and arm pain respond to the specialized care offered by the Doctor of Chiropractic.

But the early warning symptoms of pain and tenderness are calls to action. Shoulder and arm pain will probably never permanently correct themselves. Do you have a question? Write or Call... DR. ROY S. WHITE c/o Carbondale Chiropractic Clinic 103 S. Washington Carbondale (618) 457-8127

'Cuba' fails to develop theme, lacks depth

By Jenell Olson
Staff Writer

A Film Review

that take place during the last two weeks of the Batista regime. Jumping haphazardly from one set of characters to another, the story is hard to follow until it comes together near the end.

The story begins with Robert Dapes, played by Sean Connery, arriving in Cuba by plane. Dapes is a tall, handsome, intelligent British soldier who is hired to assist Fulgencio Batista's army against the resistance movement headed by Fidel Castro.

Also on the plane is a greedy American businessman, Larry Gutman, played by Jack Weston. Gutman is in Cuba to invest in a cigar factory and take advantage of the corruption, gambling and prostitution available in a city in which everybody is on the take.

The film sporadically moves from Dapes to Gutman to Juan and Alexandra Pulido, played by Chris Sarandon and Brooke Adams. The Pulidos own the cigar factory that Gutman is interested in. Alexandra is a strong, beautiful woman who manages the business and Juan is a weak and unfaithful husband who is a member of a very important Cuban family.

The action begins to come together when Dapes sees Alexandra, the woman he fell in love with 15 years before (when she was only 15 years old). She refuses to acknowledge him one minute and is in his arms the next. The love story really isn't much of a love story at all. It lacks depth and emotion; much like the rest of the movie.

'Happy Days' crowd readies for gloomier times in future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Happy Days" fans have probably noticed that the days are becoming less happy on that show.

That is to say: The "Happy Days" crew is getting old. The innocent '50s became the turbulent '60s. High School became college. And last week, Arnold's Drive-In burned down.

It's not likely that the series, still strong in its seventh season, will become "Anxious Days," but what was once a light nostalgia trip to simpler times has become something else something that is much more 1970s sitcom than 1950s nostalgia.

The demise of Arnold's last week was the symbolic end of what "Happy Days" was in its beginnings, but the changes have been occurring all along; their seeds were planted by creator Garry Marshall when "Happy Days" began.

"We promised the cast when we started that they would not have to remain the same," says Marshall. "We told them they wouldn't have to play sophomores in high school for 10 years. We've now taken them through four years of high school and three years of college. Their characters have grown with them."

SPC offers trips south during break

The Student Programming Committee's Travel and Recreation Committee is sponsoring trips to Daytona Beach, Fla. and Padre Island, Texas over spring break.

For $170 and a $25 refundable damage deposit, the Daytona Beach trip includes transportation, eight days and seven nights lodging at the Carnival Motel (located on the beach two blocks from the Pier on the main strip) and a beach party. Without transportation the trip costs $140 plus the damage deposit.

For those who prefer to vacation on Padre Island, located south of the Texas coast in the Gulf of Mexico, the trip will cost $179. Without transportation the cost is $101.

Reservations for both trips must be made by Feb. 11. A $50 deposit is required. If reservations are cancelled on or before Feb. 11, a $15 cancellation fee will be charged.

The cost of the trips must be paid in full by Feb. 29.

Talented cast, musicians help 'Eubie!' flow

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor

Briskly paced and presented with extreme professionalism throughout, "Eubie!" a Broadway musical tribute to the work of 96-year-old composer Eubie Blake, proved to be a success on more than one level.

First and foremost, "Eubie!" religiously recreated the spirit of Blake's ragtime compositions that date as far back as 1899. Musical conductor-pianist William Gregg Hunter created a sound that conveyed the spirit of the ragtime era, an element crucial to such a production.

Hunter and his seven-man ensemble's expertise was equaled by the enthusiastic performance of a talented cast with superior singing and dancing abilities. The all-black cast kept the production on a light and witty note. The audience was often laughing and applauding the cast's singing and dancing skills at the same time.

A particularly effective combination of humor and music was achieved during "Baltimore Buzz," an entertaining take-off on a Keystone Kops-like silent movie. The dancing and comedic skills of cast members Keith Alan Davis, Sargent Faulkner, Donna Patrice Ingram, Vernon Spencer, Robert Melvin and Jackie Harry made the scene work.

One of the most impressive comments to be made about "Eubie!" is that the show flows smoothly, which is no small accomplishment when the fact that these compositions were written from the period of 1899 to 1958 is taken into consideration. These songs weren't originally composed to be presented as one Broadway production, but they do sound that way in this show.

"Eubie!" is also successful

A scene from the musical "Eubie!"

when it tries to switch from jazzy ragtime compositions to slower ballad-like vocals. The light "Baltimore Buzz" slid easily and naturally into the slow, heavy opening notes of "Daddy." This style worked again when the humorous interpretation of "My Handyman Ain't Handy No More" flowed into Tony Franklin's lush version of "Low Down Blues."

The sizable cast worked well in the large production numbers as individuals did in smaller groups.

Another attribute "Eubie!" must be applauded for is its presentation of the music of Blake, whose work has gone virtually unnoticed along with most of his black counterparts of the era.

Group seeks members for volunteer activities

Students interested in doing volunteer work — but who can't decide what to do — can drop by the Student Center from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday and possibly gain some help in making a decision.

"It's Your Move" is the name of this get-together of agencies. It is to be held in the south end of the first floor of the Student Center (where the craft show usually is). Volunteers in about 25 booths will distribute literature and answer questions students may have about their agencies. They will also sign up any volunteers.

Operation Move (Mobilization of Volunteer Effort) is sponsoring the recruitment drive.

Design instructor to talk on energy

Richard Archer, an instructor in Comprehensive Planning and Design, will give a lecture titled "Are the Energy Companies Destroying Small Towns?" at 3 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center's Ohio Room.

Archer is currently running workshops teaching farmers to produce alcohol from corn and other grains. The ultimate goal of the workshops is for farmers to become self-sufficient.

Regulations hamper sale of Illinois coal

By Conrad Stuntz
Staff Writer

The recoverable coal in Illinois contains more energy than all the energy in the Mideast, a report on the future of Illinois states, but state and federal regulations are making it hard for Illinois coal producers to sell their product. The report, compiled by a 17-member task force commissioned by the legislature, says that Illinois' 161 billion ton coal reserve is expected to supply 53 percent of Illinois' electric generating capacity by the year 2000.

The state's seven operating nuclear power plants and six others being built are supposed to generate 44.5 percent of Illinois' electric capacity, the report said.

In addition to energy considerations, the report also addressed what the task force perceived as future problems in the state.

Regarding education, the report calls for a re-evaluation of the faculty tenure system standards in response to student population changes that will make it necessary for faculties to meet new needs. College students of the future will be older and more inclined to be part-time students, the report says.

Concerning natural resources, available federal funds for land acquisition, about $1.49 million in 1979, are being used for maintenance and development of existing recreational facilities. The report recommends that Illinois make "developing the tourist potential of Illinois' open lands, 60 percent of which are located in Southern Illinois, a top priority.

"Tourism could be a significant boost to the local economy, which is stagnating because of its dependence on coal," the report says.

In the area of transportation, the Illinois Transportation Study Commission has projected an $8.3 billion deficit over the next five years for maintaining the state's transportation system. All the state's major transportation systems face tremendous rehabilitative costs—$15.6 billion for highways by 1984; $1.9 billion for a public transportation system by 1984; $16.6 million for major railroads; and $645.4 million for airports by the year 2000. The report suggests that the Illinois Department of Transportation develop a long-range plan to maintain the system with an emphasis on expanding public transportation means.

Regarding the economy, the report says, "In Southern Illinois, unemployment has remained high, exceeding the statewide rate of 7.3 percent in 16 of the 26 counties in 1975. With little job growth projected here, many of the state's rural residents may find few employment opportunities."

A deteriorating business climate has contributed to the lack of employment opportunities because out-of-state businesses refuse to locate in Illinois. Instability in the nature of corporate taxes, unemployment benefits and workers' compensation, and state regulations make it difficult for private investors to calculate risks. The report concludes that regulations must be relaxed where possible, the tax structure must be stabilized, and investment incentives must be developed to attract new manufacturing firms.

The coal industry faces some of those same problems, the report says. Increasing demands to follow federal clean air regulations have forced many industries to purchase low-sulphur western coal. Illinois coal has three to four times the sulphur of western coal.

Federal and state regulations have essentially stifled the Illinois coal industry. For example, the report states that the Illinois Commerce Commission's fuel adjustment clause requires a hearing for Illinois coal producers before they can add scrubber costs to a consumer bill. However, it doesn't require a hearing for western coal producers to add shipping costs to the same bills.

These and other regulations coupled with a 30 percent decline in coal production since 1970 have fostered unemployment rates as high as 15 percent in some Southern Illinois coal-producing counties.

Wendy's Chili... more meat than mama's chili

It's full of beef. Not full of beans.

At Wendy's, we make our chili with lots and lots of 100% pure, fresh beef. In fact, every bowl of Wendy's Chili has about a quarter pound of beef in it. And just the right amount of beans to go with it.

It's made from scratch.

Some other restaurants might serve you canned chili. But not Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers. We make chili from scratch, the way you would. With only the freshest beef, beans and tomato sauce plus just the right spices. So you get homemade taste without all the trouble.

Some like it hot. Some do not.

We know some people like their chili hot, and some like it not so hot. That's why Wendy's Chili has a perfect blend of spices to please just about everybody. But if you like it even spicier, pick up a packet of Wendy's special Hot Chili Seasoning so you can make your chili just as hot (or not) as you like it.

Red Cross seeks multiple donors

When they open the doors Wednesday morning to begin the Red Cross blood drive, Water Willis probably will be among the first in line to bare his arm for a good cause.

Willis, a professor of agribusiness economics, has been giving blood regularly since the Red Cross Bloodmobile began making visits to the University in 1973. Since then, he has given 16 units of blood—that's about two gallons, as much as the average person has pumping around in his body.

"We need more people who give that much," Joseph Ragsdale, assistant director of risk management, said. "Almost all of the blood donated in the United States is given by about 3 percent of the people."

Ragsdale coordinates the bloodmobile's three-times-a-year visits which are sponsored by the University staff and faculty. He said giving blood is one of the most painless ways I can think of the help other people."

The Red Cross staff, assisted by volunteers from the Annuitants Association, will be accepting blood donations from 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

Ragsdale said faculty and staff may make appointments to give blood by returning the mailed appointment cards to Personnel Services. Anyone will be welcome to give blood without an appointment, he said.

SIU-C tries to meet a annual quota of about 1,200 pints of blood, Ragsdale said.

New Morris Library Circulation Policies,

Effective February 1, 1980

Grace Period for Overdue Library Materials

January 28-31, 1980

Following a period of extensive study and review, new circulation policies for Morris Library have been written. These policies, which incorporate compromises based upon recommendations from both faculty and student constituency groups on campus, were officially approved by Acting President Lesar on December 3, 1979.

The new policies will become effective on February 1, 1980. Preparatory to their implementation, there will be a GRACE PERIOD from Monday through Thursday, January 28-31, 1980. During this period overdue library materials may be returned without payment of fines. The no-fine grace period applies to all SIU-C students, faculty, civil service and administrative/professional staff, and courtesy card holders.

THE FOLLOWING LIBRARY MATERIALS ARE NOT INCLUDED IN THE GRACE PERIOD:

- Recalled Items
- Reserve Room Items
- Items charged out overnight only or by special permission
- Materials from the SIU-C Law Library or Learning Resource Service

All overdue materials not returned by 12 midnight, January 31, 1980, will remain subject to overdue charges in line with the new circulation policies. These policies appear in the January 24, 1980, issue of the Daily Egyptian, and printed copies are also available in Morris Library.

Thanks and appreciation are expressed to representatives from constituency groups, faculty members, students, the Library Affairs Advisory Committee, the ad hoc Morris Library Circulation Policies Committee, and members of the University administration who have contributed to these policy changes.

STC to sponsor energy workshop

How to cut heat bills and grow fresh vegetables in the middle of the winter will be the main topic of discussion at the public workshop planned Feb. 9 by solar energy specialists in the School of Technical Careers.

Centerpiece of the workshop will be a working 12-by-30-foot solar-heated greenhouse. The event is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the construction technology building on the STC campus near Carterville.

Lewis Russell, coordinator of STC's Solar Energy Project, said the idea behind the clinic is to show people that solar greenhouses can be built without having to spend a lot of money.

"Greenhouses aren't particularly expensive or complicated to build," Russell said.

Russell said the greenhouse eventually will be part of a planned STC solar energy laboratory which will be built near the construction technology site.

THE WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL 35 WATT RECEIVER.

POWER DOUBLING CLASS G

The beauty of the SR-604 stereo receiver:

In normal operation, it delivers 35 watts per channel, both channels driven at 8 ohms, from 20-20,000 Hz, with no more than 0.05% total harmonic distortion. But when it's confronted with a demanding musical peak, it switches over to power doubling Class G amplification, becoming a super power auxiliary amplifier delivering a massive 70 watts per channel.

The result? Clean, unclipped musical peaks and outstanding dynamic range. You'll also like what it does to the tuner section, in critical areas like sensitivity, selectivity and signal-to-noise ratio performance.

The amazing SR-604—super-power, low distortion, all the good things you're looking for in stereo.

Proposed bill would give counties in Illinois 'rain-making' authority

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

Illinois counties may be able to get state assistance to make rain if recently proposed legislation is passed.

Rep. William Harris, D-Marion, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Weather Modification and sponsor of the bill, said that, if passed, the plan will allow counties to create a "rain-making" authority.

"I believe local governments should be given the power to try to modify the weather at times when a drought could severely affect the local economy," Harris said. "Such programs can be costly, but my legislation would provide a 50-50 share of the costs by state and local governments."

The head of the Atmospheric Sciences Section of the Illinois Water Survey, Stan Changnon, said the process of weather modification is very complex but that "simplicistically, it involves altering the physics of clouds to increase their efficiency in producing rainfall."

Changnon, who may be a technical assistant in the program, is now doing weather "pre-experimentation" at the University of Illinois and explained that dry ice or silver iodide can be added to clouds from airplanes. The chemicals "have properties which emulate nature's production of rain," he said.

"They produce the ice crystals that water or ice forms around," Changnon said, "which means we can also produce snow if we want. But the circumstances that surround the cloud-seeding make it full of uncertainty."

Harris and the bill's co-sponsor, Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, hope the program will be approved by county voters if it passes the General Assembly. Harris said some western states have been able to increase total rainfall by as much as 20 percent through rain modification programs.

But Changnon believes experimentation should be done before the legislature approves the bill.

"There have been no major experiments east of the Great Plains," Changnon said. "So farmers, or in this case local and state governments, would be taking a risk in just going ahead with it. It depends on how much of a risk they are willing to take."

"Farmers often invest up to $150 per acre in their crops. In times of drought, where the difference between making a profit and not making one is at stake, they might be willing to invest another 50 cents an acre to have some rain made for them," Changnon said. "But the problem still remains that you might get something and you might get nothing."

Group ready to help elderly with sidewalk snow removal

By Robin Saponar
Staff Writer

Although snow has not been plentiful in the Carbondale area this winter, "Operation Snowbound" is ready to go at the first sign of a snowflake.

"Operation Snowbound" is a volunteer program organized by the Carbondale Senior Citizens Center to assist the elderly by removing snow from sidewalks in front of their homes.

Executive Director Carol H. Johnson developed the program two years ago in response to a snow removal ordinance, passed by the City Council in February 1978. The ordinance requires the snow to be removed on all sidewalks adjoining residents' property within 24 hours after the snow stops falling. Offenders could be fined from $10 to $500 a day for violation of the ordinance if found guilty.

"It would be so much help for the elderly. It's a hard time for them during winter," Andy Fejedelem, coordinator of the program said.

"Some of them have heart conditions or broken bones," Fejedelem, a social service intern, said. "If they slipped on the ice, they could be convalescing from their injuries for a long time."

Carbondale merchants have donated shovels and ice melting supplies to the program. Volunteers are from student service organizations, the Newman Center, the National Guard Armory, the Women's Center, boy scout troops and fraternities and sororities.

About 150 senior citizens have requested assistance in shoveling their sidewalks. The service is provided to them at no charge, yet if the elderly want to pay volunteers, the center accepts donations according to Fejedelem.

He said the program has received quite a few compliments. "The elderly are really grateful. They may donate a cup of hot chocolate or a chat, but it's a great chance to learn about Carbondale in the older days." He added laughing, "Or to reminisce about being home and shoveling your own sidewalks."

The Women's Center was very receptive to recruiting volunteers because, "a lot of the elderly homeowners are women and they might feel more at ease if a woman came to shovel for them, instead of a man," he said.

During the week, volunteers call to obtain the names and addresses of senior citizens needing their walks shoveled from the center and from the Jackson County Network on weekends.

"Last year the snow storm was during break and a lot of students were out of town. There was still a good turnout from the students that were here."

Horse racing a billion dollar business in 1979

CHICAGO (AP) — Racing became a billion dollar business in Illinois in 1979 according to statistics released by the Illinois Racing Board.

Tracks throughout the state handled a record high of $1,026,360,434 during 1979 and early indications through the first three weeks of 1980 indicate that mark will be exceeded this year.

The billion dollar handle for 1979 was for 1,118 days of thoroughbred, standardbred and quarterhorse racing and exceeded the 1978 total of $882,399,514 for 1,015 days.

The handle for thoroughbred racing was $521,298,655; for standardbreds $502,739,168 and for quarterhorses $2,822,611.

Revenues received by the State of Illinois from horse racing totaled $83,715,845 for 1979 or $10,978,555 more than in 1978.

Besides Illinois, the only other states that handled a billion dollars last year were New York and California.

McLeansboro hopes to restore mansion

By Suzanne Longmire
News Editor
and Joan Major
Student Writer

The year is 1890. The magnificent Cloud house in the center of McLeansboro is alive with music, dancing and all the niceties of the very wealthy. The guests are awed at this splendor a fortunate family calls home. This is truly the pride of McLeansboro.

Today, the McCoy house is still awe-inspiring. However, its once lively halls are now still and forboding, befitting the public library it is. The interiors have been altered many times in the past 50 years, but now the changes have a distinct direction. For, with a little luck and determination, and more than a little money, the Cloud-McCoy house may become the house it was that day in 1890.

Proudly in the southwest corner of the McLeansboro Square stands the dignified ancestor of McLeansboro.

A sign at the entrance reads

"McCoy Memorial Library."

The unusual architecture is a mesh of Victorian and Queen Anne style. The construction, done in 1883 by the Reid Brothers in Evansville, was supplemented by the bricks made in the Smith Brickyard in McLeansboro under the direction of Caleb Smith.

Ornate doors adorn the entrance. Once inside, the stately rooms with 14-foot ceilings overwhelm the visitor. The original gas chandeliers still dangle from the ceiling, converted now to electricity.

Oak, walnut, chestnut, maple and red cherrywood beautify the interior. Distributed throughout the mansion are nine fireplaces of which marble from Italy and tile from England form the structure and foundation.

Plush, golden velvet carpet once covered the mansion's floors.

Within the upstairs were five bedroom chambers, servants quarters and a dumbwaiter.

Encased in glass in her original gas chandeliers still dangle from the ceiling, converted now to electricity. became a woman, and then a legend.

When Mary Ellen Cloud McCoy died in October, 1921, she left her home to the city for use as a public library. She also included a provision that the Women's Club would have a home there for meetings. As she also knew the upkeep for old homes is very expensive, she stated in her will that offices could be built on the second floor to defray some of the costs.

The reconstruction began in 1922 when a new staircase was needed to direct people away from the main library entrance to offices upstairs. Several dentists and the city clerk's offices were on the second floor from 1922 to 1935.

An increasing awareness of the historical value of the McCoy house has launched new efforts to restore it to turn-of-the-century condition.

A museum in the house was established about six years ago by the Historical Society. Guided tours are given through the rooms on the second floor twice a week.

The antique articles in the rooms were donated by residents in the McLeansboro area. One the the bedspreads in the museum is 136 years old. One of the rooms in the museum will be a genealogical history room for people to trace their ancestors. Boxes of documents and records have already accumulated.

Also in the museum, is a coal mine exhibit and an Indian artifact collection.

A committee was formed to purchase the carpet and wallpaper, which is authentic of the period.

Members of the Historical Society, CETA workers and hired carpenters did most of the reconstruction for the museum.

Real Estate Club to help orient business students

By Bruce Henley
Student Writer

The Real Estate Club is still a novice among the other organizations in the College of Business but it is not hesitating to get its feet wet.

Formed last fall semester, the Real Estate Club, along with seven other business-related organizations, will answer questions and provide information at the College of Business "New Student Night" to be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

Like the other organizations, the Real Estate Club will have a booth with representatives from the club helping new students understand the club's purpose and some of the activities it plans to sponsor.

The 35-member club was formed by four business students interested in providing current information, recent developments and practical involvement to real estate students. Kevin Swan, senior in business, Fred Sutton, Gary Ahr and George Lang, all graduated, initiated and organized the club.

Recognized as a student organization this semester, the club hopes to have guest speakers from St. Louis and Chicago come and discuss such topics as commercial real estate salesperson of today vestments.

A home-buying seminar, open to all students, is also being planned for this semester.

Internships through the club are also being offered to real estate students. Swan, president of the club, is currently working with Havens Realtors of Carbondale and other realtors in the area are interested in the internship program.

Larry Havens, of Havens Realtors, calls the internships a golden opportunity for potential graduates to experience the business world and gain competitive advantage in the real estate field.

SIU-C now offers four real estate courses. Sponsor of the club, George Karvel, associate professor in accounting, said he hopes to have more diversified real estate courses offered in the future.

Rec Center expands its program, professional trainer to be involved

By Richard Carrier
Student Writer

An expansion of facilities and services offered at the Recreation Building this semester will include a full-time professional trainer and a swimming program for children.

Mike Dunn, a coordinator for intramural recreation sports, said they also hope to acquire a whirlpool bath, find funds to build a climbing wall, and build a Frisbee golf course.

Robert "Doc" Spackman, who was the Saluki varsity trainer for 20 years, will be the full-time trainer on duty.

Spackman will set up 20-minute appointments for students to show them how to take care of injuries and also how to prevent them by proper taping.

"We will be the only school in the nation to have a program like this," Dunn said. Spackman will be available every weekday in the First Aid Room between the racquetball and basketball courts.

Kathy Vondrasek, a graduate student in physical education, will also help students get in shape when she begins a workshop in aerobic fitness at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the center.

"People are interested in getting in shape but they simply don't know how or are doing the wrong thing," Vondrasek said.

Vondrasek said she will assist students in designing a fitness program for themselves and will use techniques, such as a skin fold caliper to measure excess fat on the body, to tell people their ideal weight.

Dunn said there will be a swimming program starting Feb. 16 for dependents of students, employees and alumni who have a pass for the center. The program will provide Red Cross beginning swimming instruction for children.

The fee for 10 lessons is $25 for employees and alumni and $20 for students.

A nine-hole Frisbee golf course is planned for late summer or early fall and will be located behind the building. The area will also have picnic tables and grills set up before spring break, Dunn said.

Possible additions to the center are a whirlpool and climbing wall.

The whirlpool, a therapeutic aid for strained and tired muscles, would have a capacity of about 25 people and would be put in one of the storage rooms next to the pool, Dunn said.

The climbing wall would be built when and if money is available, Dunn said. There would be blocks of wood sticking out of the wall in a maze that people would have to figure out in order to climb, he said.

"We will use all of the safety measures available and around-the-clock supervision," Dunn said. "When its closed we will have a gate to keep people off."

Local tax bills up an average of 9 percent

By T. Lee Hughes
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Despite a highly-touted $1,500 "homestead exemption" tax relief law of 1978, local property tax bills last year skyrocketed by an average 9 percent — the biggest jump in eight years.

Faced with a 13 percent average property tax hike this year, the Illinois Legislature chose last week to give taxpayers another dose of the same "relief" — increase the "homestead exemption" to $3,000.

The action came amid a series of bizarre political flip-flops, a massive local government lobbying effort against more extensive tax relief, and some incestuous hand-holding between lawmakers and locally elected officials.

Gov. James R. Thompson, a Republican, was furiously pushing for immediate approval — in one day if possible — of a ceiling on local property tax increases.

This was the same governor who, at the height of "tax revolt" publicity in early 1978, had opposed the very concept of tax ceilings.

And it was the same governor who early last year had lamented publicly how difficult and complex it was to devise a workable tax ceiling formula.

Meanwhile, Democratic lawmakers who control the General Assembly wound up working just as furiously last week against a property tax ceiling.

These were the same Democrats who in 1978 had proclaimed the "tax revolt" banner as their own.

And they were the same Democrats who last year, amid much fanfare, introduced their own local property tax ceiling legislation and pushed it through the House.

But as the new year began, Democrats were planning no immediate action on property tax relief. Then when Thompson insisted on pushing for a property tax ceiling, Democrats popped forth with a proposed hike in the homestead exemption.

Thompson argued that the increase in the homestead exemption would provide only half the $200 million in relief his tax ceiling promised, and would "do nothing to control local spending."

This was the same Thompson who, in signing the original homestead exemption bill in 1978, had praised it as a way to "put a brake on local government spending."

For citizens who find it difficult to follow the twists and turns in political positions and to figure out the difference between a "homestead exemption" and a "tax ceiling," the confusion is just what the politicians appear to count on.

The taxing structure and proposals to ostensibly provide "tax relief" are so complex that even many legislators and officials don't really understand them.

News stories on the complex proposals become oversimplified, and run under even more simplistic headlines.

It is those headlines — "Democrat Tax Relief Passes," or "Thompson Tax Ceiling Fails" — that appear to cause the politicians to maneuver so furiously, with an eye toward the March 18 primary or some future election.

Woodnapping may be crime of '80s

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Arson was the unexpected big crime of the '70s, burning down parts of the Bronx and Brooklyn to get a better view of Manhattan.

Now it appears that woodnapping will be the crime of the 1980s.

Some folk: will do almost anything to throw another log on the fire.

A few weeks back right in this area a ranger caught a woodnapper leaving a public park area with a pickup truck loaded down with cut logs.

A friend in a neighboring town went off to Oregon to visit his married daughter for the holidays, and when he got back the old woodpile had vanished, right down to the big box of kindling. He locked out, though; they left the back porch hanging on the house and didn't touch the picket fence.

The rage for wood has brought about a new wrinkle in consumer crime: cord fraud.

Connally's campaign contributors include seven major oil companies

The chairmen of the board and the presidents of 41 of the top 200 industrial companies in the United States have made campaign contributions to John Connally's presidential campaign, according to a study released by Common Cause.

Connally is the only major party candidate for president to date who has stated he will not accept public funds for his campaign and intends to rely solely on private campaign contributions.

In announcing his rejection of public financing on Dec. 12, Connally attacked the campaign finance system stating "If none of the presidential candidates take taxpayers' money, we will have taken a giant step toward retaining the electoral processes to the American people where it belongs."

Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause, said, "The voluntary dollar tax checkoff and the Presidential Election Campaign Fund repudiated by Connally have in fact provided tens of millions of average American citizens with the opportunity to play a key role in financing our presidential elections.

"One gets the impression from his campaign finance reports that John Connally's definition of the average American citizen is someone whose name begins with the words 'Chairman of the Board' or 'President,'" Wertheimer said.

Connally's financial backers from the nation's top 200 industrial companies include the board chairmen of seven major oil companies: Exxon Corp.; Mobil Oil Corp.; Texaco, Inc.; Tenneco Oil Co.; Phillips Petroleum Co.; Ashland Oil Co.; and Cities Service Co.

Other leading business executives of the nation's top companies who have contributed to Connally, according to the study, include the board chairmen of AT&T; Caterpillar Tractor Co.; Dow Chemical Co.; Bethlehem Steel Corp; General Foods Corp; Monsanto Co.; McDonnell Douglas Corp.; and Lockheed Corp.

Congress enacted the public financing for presidential elections in 1974 as part of a comprehensive campaign finance law designed to respond to the Watergate scandals. The law provides public funds for eligible presidential candidates, contribution limits on the amounts that candidates can receive from individuals or groups and limits on the overall amounts that can be spent by presidential candidates who accept public financing.

In the presidential primaries, eligible candidates who accept public funds can match up to $250 of each individual private contribution with funds from the voluntary tax checkoff. In accepting public funds, candidates must agree to limit the amount of money they spend during the primary elections.

Carter's budget: more foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's budget includes more money for foreign economic and financial aid programs, while cutting the amount the government spends on military aid to its allies.

The budget for fiscal 1981 proposed $6.2 billion for economic aid programs, compared to $5.9 billion in the fiscal 1980 budget.

Spending on foreign economic aid programs increased across the board except for one category, the Food for Peace Program, which would decline from $1.166 billion to $1.153 billion, Carter said, however, the money will allow the government to ship the same amount of food — 6 million metric tons — as in fiscal 1980.

SMU tankers snuff Saluki challenge

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

According to SIU men's swimming Coach Bob Steele, the Saluki tankers swam their best dual meet in three years Saturday night at Southern Methodist University.

According to the final score, SMU won the meet, 66-47.

Before you begin wondering if the past three years have been pretty grim for SIU swimming followers, you might want to give Steele a chance to explain.

"It was probably the best dual meet we've swum since Wisconsin three years ago."

Steele said, "the races were all pretty close. They're (SMU) a fine team—I'd say about sixth or seventh in the country. But the way we've been swimming, I'd say we've got a chance, maybe not a good chance, of getting getting into the top 10 if we can put everything together."

So despite the dual meet setback, which put SIU's dual meet record at 2-1, Steele was pleased with the overall team performance. Considering that SIU defeated the University of Oklahoma, 60-52, Friday night in a meet Steele described as

"routine." the trip could be labeled a success for the Salukis. But putting it together covers a vital area of the team's performance, according to Steele.

"I think the biggest factor (in the SMU meet) was that even though several of SMU's guys were ill, their freestylers just were stronger than ours. We beat them in the stroke events, but in the frees they just overpowered us."

One such instance came in the first event of the meet—the 400-yard free relay. Although SIU turned in its best time of the season since the Saluki 5-S Meet (3:27.6). It wasn't good enough, as the Mus-angs' standout freshman, Steve Lundquist, grabbed a slight lead over the Salukis' Anders Norling in the second leg of the race and SMU went on to win it.

SMU's Chuck Bauman took a freestyle win in the 1,000 free, as he beat SIU's Mike Brown by six seconds, although Brown's time of 9:27.5 was seven seconds better than his previous best. The Salukis' David Parker finished third.

"Parker has got to get more work with his distances," Steele stressed. "I know he has the ability, he should be swimming in the 9:20's."

"The same thing's going to happen to us in Iowa this Saturday," Steele said of the Salukis' need for improvement in the freestyles. "We have to get our freestyles clicking again."

But there were bright spots at SMU. Kees Vervoorn edged SMU's Randy Burnett in the 200 free by .02 seconds, thanks to a strong finish Vervoorn captured the 200 butterfly in 1:53.3, also.

Inexperienced netters trample Illini

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

Inexperience is not always the devil's advocate. The case in point is the men's tennis team.

Three freshmen and three sophomores don't usually add up to a lot of experience, but for Coach Dick LeFevre, it's all the has.

"We have had a problem with academic eligibility," LeFevre said. "We lost two players last fall and we just lost another one last Friday."

Even though LeFevre's team is young, it had few problems Friday night at the Court Club, when it defeated the University of Illinois, 7-2.

Leading the way over the Illini was Eric Eberhardt. He defeated previously undefeated Joe Leiminger, 4-6, 7-6, 6-4.

"Eberhardt's win was a big one for us," LeFevre said. "It also was important because it was the winning match."

In other singles action, No. 1 man Dave Filer won his match over Jeff Edwards, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5. No. 2 man Brian Stanley won his match easily, beating Todd Black, 6-3, 6-2.

Lito Ampon lost his match to Scott Sommers, 6-2, 5-7, 2-6. John Grief defeated Tom Henderson, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3. SIU's only other defeat came at the hands of Mike Kramer, who defeated SIU's Steve Smith, 6-3, 6-2.

LeFevre said he was not worried about Ampon and Smith's losses because of the extraordinary circumstances surrounding them. Ampon had gone to California over break to get in shape, but ran into several days of rain and could not play. Smith arrived Friday morning from his native New Zealand and, according to the coach, was extremely tired.

The team will travel to French Lick, Ind. this weekend. Other teams involved in the two-day weekend meet are Illinois, Indiana University, and Southwest Baptist College.

NFC captures Pro Bowl, 37-27

By The Associated Press

"I can remember when we seemed to lose this one just about every year, too," Coach Tom Landry said. "Well, now that we've got this one under control, it would be nice to get the same thing going with the Super Bowl."

The "we" Landry talked about is the National Conference. "This one" is the Pro Bowl—which the NFC won Sunday by beating the American Conference, 37-27.

It's about the only thing the NFC can seem to win with any regularity. The AFC has won seven of the last eight season series (the eighth was a tie) and seven of the last eight Super Bowls, too.

Terry Bradshaw, though, displayed a cavalier attitude. Unlike a week earlier, when he won the Most Valuable Player honors for his superb quarterbacking of the Steelers in their 31-19 Super Bowl victory over Los Angeles, Bradshaw wore the goat horns here for throwing two interceptions, both of which preceded NFC touchdowns.

Winning is very important to Chuck Muncie and Archie Manning of New Orleans and the rest of the NFC stars. After all, $5,000 is not something to be ignored. That's how much each winning player received, twice what each loser got.

Muncie was the runaway choice as the MVP in his first Pro Bowl. The Saints' running back, who led all rushers with 71 yards in 12 carries, scored touchdowns on a 1-yard dive at the start of the second period and an 11-yard sweep early in the fourth quarter. And Muncie's halfback option pass to Dallas wide receiver Tony Hill accounted for a third NFC touchdown.

IM team 'cruel' in 97-0 victory

Tight defense? Poor shooting? Both?

For the first time in the history of intramural basketball at SIU, a team was held scoreless. It happened Sunday afternoon when the Whizards rolled over the Mousetha Brothers 97-0 in men's Division B basketball.

"It may have been cruel, but we were going for 100," an unidentified Whizard player said.

Size, shooting factors in SIU's cage recruiting had committed himself verbally to SIU, changed his mind and decided to attend Fresno State. George Morrow, a 6-7 junior college power forward, chose Creighton over the Salukis. John Tomlinson, a 6-5 all-state swingman from Barrington, picked Dayton over SIU.

"We wanted all seven guys we got," Gottfried said. "There were other players we wanted that we didn't get. You're always going to miss out on players."

"There's no question we had a good recruiting year," Gottfried said. "You can't judge a player on one year's performance."

SIU coaches voice views on boycott

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

President Carter's attempt to use an American boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow as a political and psychological blow to the Soviet Union has divided the opinions of coaches and athletes and started debate around the world.

A George Gallup poll last week showed that Americans favor moving the Games out of Moscow by a 3 to 1 margin. The International Olympic Committee has said that the Games will not and cannot be moved because of contractual commitments to Moscow. With this in mind, 56 percent of the polling sample wants the United States to boycott the Games.

The United States Olympic Committee voted unanimously

Saturday to support the president's request that the Moscow games be transferred, postponed or cancelled if Soviet troops remain in Moscow by Feb. 20.

Coaches of men's and women's athletics at SIU have mixed viewpoints concerning a boycott.

"I think it is naive to say that politics isn't part of the Olympics," volleyball Coach Debbie Hunter said. "Munich comes to mind. It's unfortunate that the government has to make a stand against a prestigious event, but I think we will pull together as a nation if we stand behind our words."

"Politics should remain out of the Olympics, but realistically, it is a part of it," said Claudia Blackman, women's track coach. "Our athletes are not subsidized by the government, but instead, by contributions from the American people. If the American people don't want us to go, and if we think of the people and our government as one in the same, then we should pull out."

Women's basketball Coach Cindy Scott echoed that sentiment.

"It's sad when it gets down to this, but in all reality, politics is a part of it, and action should be taken," she said.

Law Hartzog, Saluki head track coach of 21 years, has seen six of his trackmen compete in the Olympics, and he feels for the athletes.

"I have sympathy for the coaches and athletes who trained so hard for the Games, especially those for whom it might be the end of the line, and I agree with others that it could be the end of the Olympics if politics interfere," Hartzog said. "But if we are in as serious condition as I think we may be in Afghanistan, then I would be all in favor of a boycott."

Jan Johnson, assistant track coach and himself an Olympic bronze medal winner in the pole vault in 1972, expressed concern for the athletes' attitudes.

"I know how much the Games mean to the thousands of American athletes who have sacrificed to make the teams," Johnson said. "So far, nobody seems to be asking the athletes how they feel about the situation."

Rick Powers, women's swimming coach, feels the boycott will serve no purpose other than to boost Carter's reelection campaign.

"It will have no effect whatsoever on the Soviet Union. It doesn't make a difference to them, but his appeals to the public may be a difference in his campaign," Powers said. "The only people it will hurt are the athletes. The main thing is, what kind of a deterrent is a boycott?"

"The athletes are pawns in political games to no good effect," Powers said.

Bob Steele, men's swimming coach, is the only coach to have athletes on his squad that have participated in the Games before, although none of his five former Olympians swam for the United States' team.

"It's not going to make one bit of difference to the Russians whether we go and participate or not," Steele said. "They just want our money and our television coverage and technology. If anything, don't let the spectators go and spend money over there."

Gymnastics Coach Bill Meade said, "I think we should boycott the Olympic Games. Speaking from gymnastics, I don't think we would get a fair shake in the judging, it is so political. We were third in the World Championships in December, but I don't see how we could get better than fifth or sixth in Moscow."

Year's first track meet leaves Hartzog hopeful

meets instead of at practice."

The coach was pleased that seven Salukis jumped over 22 feet in the meet.

Freshman Ron Marks began his Saluki track career by winning the shot put with a heave of 51.4. John Smith, another freshman, was second at 49.6.

"I'll be happy if they can become consistent 56-footers," Hartzog said.

Freshman Bob Schoon started his career as a winner, also, capturing the high jump with a leap of 6-8. Freshman Paul Bergkoetter was second and sophomore Bob Nowicki was third.

Schulz, already considered a "veteran" in his sophomore year, took second place in the 1,000-yard run and finished third in the mile run.

Perkins, returning to the team after a one-year layoff, finished second in the 600-yard run and took third in the half-mile.

The Salukis took all nine points possible in capturing the first three places in the two-mile. Sophomore Bill Moran won the race in 9:19.4, followed by Tom Fitzpatrick.

Badminton team captures fifth

In B Flight, Sandy Lemon reached the finals in the consolation bracket also, before falling victim to Illinois State's Jeanne Vernoff.

Freshman Kim Whitney, competing in D Flight singles, received a bye in the first round and proceeded into the winners bracket against Ball State's Julie Dunham. Whitney defeated Dunham, 11-2, 11-3, but lost in a subsequent match.

"The encouraging thing about these girls is that they all are coming right along," Blair said. "Skiera didn't play last fall, and the other two are in their first year as badminton players. The opponents they lost to will know next time they play that they're in for a tough match."

In doubles, the A Flight teams of Lemon and Dinah Devers, Fay Chea and Barb Morris and Skiera and Penny Porter all were victors in their first match, which enabled them to enter the winners' bracket.

"Another important point we must strive for," Blair added, "is to win that first match."

Coach encouraged by first track meet

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

SIU-C track coach Lew Hartzog said last week that his young team needed to get quite a few points from freshmen recruits if the Salukis were to continue their winning tradition.

The freshmen didn't score and the Salukis didn't win.

Following only a week of formal practices after Christmas break, the Salukis traveled to Lincoln, Neb. where they lost to a well-practiced and talented Nebraska squad, 74-57.

"I was a little surprised we did as well as we did," Hartzog said. "We were leading with two events to go. That was a shock."

The Salukis had to rely on their veterans to do the scoring, as only four of the 19 freshmen that made the trip scored points.

"The ones who really did the good jobs are the older guys, DeMattei, Robinson, Lee, and Perkins, who laid out a year,"

Hartzog said. "Karsten Schulz ran like I thought he would and our quarter-milers did a good job."

Hartzog feels his freshmen will contribute more as the season progresses.

"It's going to take them a while. Our older kids have been through this before plus they are a little stronger and older which does make a difference," Hartzog said. "I'm encouraged, I really am. They performed well and will get better."

Clarence Robison impressed Hartzog, winning the 300-yard dash in 31.6 and finishing second in the 60-yard dash.

"Clarence did a super job. I was really shocked that he looked so good considering he just got done with football," Hartzog said.

David Lee turned in his usual fine effort, winning the long jump with a leap of 24-feet 1 1/2-inches and taking second in the 60-yard high hurdles when he was just nipped in the lean at the tape by Nebraska's Randy Brooks, an NCAA qualifier.

"He got beat at the blocks, not over the hurdles," Hartzog said. "David probably only has practiced a start with a gun six times all year."

"He jumped well considering that with no facilities, we haven't had a run off a board this year," Hartzog said. "We have to get our steps down in the Fifth place.

How could anyone get excited over a fifth place finish? Easily, badminton Coach Paul Blair says.

The Salukis compiled a team score of 28, edging Indiana State for the "coveted" finish in the seven team Western Illinois Invitational.

Host WIU took first place, nipping Illinois State, 127-109. Eastern Illinois was third, 85, and Wisconsin-Madison fourth, 58. Ball State was seventh, seven points.

"We had a really good weekend," the second year coach said. "If you look at the teams we finished behind, where we finished is appropriate."

In last year's AIAW championships, the top four teams in last weekend's invitational finished third, fourth, fifth and sixth, respectively. The Salukis finished eighth.

"We could have finished closer to Wisconsin," Blair added, "but their No. 1 player scored a lot of points."

Wisconsin-Madison's Ann French scored eight points for the Badgers by reaching the finals in the A Flight singles winners' bracket. French lost to WIU's Monica Malone, 12-14, 11-9, 13-1.

For the Salukis, three players scored four points each. In A Flight, Cathy Skiera reached the finals in the singles consolation bracket by defeating two opponents in the maximum number of sets before losing to WIU's Judy Vilchuck, 4-11, 11-3.

Meade says ISU defeat gymnasts' poorest effort

By Ed Dougherty

While the Saluki cagers were fortunate enough to end their losing streak Saturday night, the men's gymnastics team was not as lucky Saturday afternoon. The SIU gymnasts compiled their lowest dual-meet score of the season, bowing to in state rival Illinois State, 250.9-243.75, at ISU.

"It was the poorest performance any team has given me in my 30 years of coaching," Saluki Coach Bill Meade said. "There is no way to win in gymnastics committing as many mistakes as we did. It was Illinois State's best performance of the year and our worst performance ever."

SIU, which now has a dual-meet record of 2-3, managed just two firsts during the meet. Bob Barut won the floor exercise with a 9.2, and Brian Babcock won the rings with a 9.35.

"I was pleased with Bob's performance," Meade said. "He won the floor exercise and finished second in the vault with a 9.2. It's too bad his performance was lost in all the other debris."

While the gymnastics team continued its string of losses, two individual winning strings were broken, also. Dave Schieble had scored a nine or better in his last 56 attempts on the pommel horse. He failed to meet that magic mark, falling one-half point shy with an 8.5.

Babcock had his string of consecutive victories in the all-around snapped at four, also. He placed second with a 53.4, just .10 behind the winner.

"It's too bad those strings were broken," Meade said. "I had hoped to use the two strings to attract more people to our upcoming meets."

SIU will face 17th-ranked Louisiana State Thursday at the Arena.

Gottfried: Size, shooting factors in 1979 recruiting

By Scott Stahmer

Editor's note: This is the first of a three-part series analyzing the problems SIU's men's basketball team has had this year.

The time is March, 1977. The place is the Myriad Arena in Oklahoma City, where SIU has just lost to Wake Forest, 86-81, in the semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Despite the loss, the spirits of Saluki basketball fans are high. SIU came within just two games of making the NCAA's Final Four. The future of Saluki basketball appears unlimited.

Nearly three years later, that future seems to lie in ruins. The Salukis are 5-12 overall and 1-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference. Chances for a conference title are all but gone, and, until SIU defeated Tulsa for its first Valley win Saturday, prospects of making the MVC post-season tournament appeared bleak.

Obviously, this is not what Saluki basketball Head Coach Joe Gottfried had in mind when he took the job on May 11, 1978. When the former coach at Ashland College assumed the reins from the late Paul Lambert, he hoped to continue SIU's winning basketball tradition.

Gottfried took a team last year that returned all five starters from the 1977-78 team that went 17-10 and nearly won the MVC crown. However, it took nearly an entire season for the Salukis to adjust to a new system, and SIU compiled a 15-13 record.

"Their (the past coaching staff's) emphasis was on a controlled style of play," Gottfried said. "We wanted to recruit players who fit into a running style of play and we started out last year that way. As the year went on, we reverted back to the controlled style."

The Salukis fussed well over the last fourth of the season, nearly upsetting NCAA runner-up Indiana State twice. However, Gary Wilson and Milt Huggins graduated, and Richard Ford and Al Grant were academic casualties, leaving SIU with a lack of experience.

Gottfried and his assistants, Rob Spivery and Mike Riley, moved quickly to fill the voids created by the departed players. They signed seven recruits—Charles Nance, David Youngblood, Karl Morris, Kent Payne and Darnall Jones out of high schools, and Rod Camp and Edward Thomas out of junior colleges.

"Size was a major factor in our recruiting, and we thought that with Camp (6-11), Thomas (6-9), Youngblood (6-8) and Morris (6-7) we got good size," Gottfried said. "We were looking for shooting ability and even though it hasn't shown up in the statistics, we feel we have good personnel there."

"My philosophy always has been to look for the player who can play the wide-open style," Gottfried continued, "plus has aspirations of getting the degree."

Another priority, Gottfried said, was to overcome the late recruiting start he had gotten when he was hired. The coach signed just one recruit in 1978, Lawrence Stubblefield. However, Thomas and Scott Russ, a sophomore who was redshirted last year, built up the sophomore class.

"I'm a strong believer that if you're going to sustain and improve a program, you have to have three people contributing from each class," Gottfried said. "That's why we had to bring in junior college people."

Gottfried and his staff missed out on several top players. Tyrone Bradley, a guard from Chicago who
