Thirteen-year-old Grace Mitchell is led by the hand toward a group of boys as Natalie Fyffe, 12, helps her along. The junior high school dance was sponsored by the City of Carbondale and the Carbondale Park District at the Carbondale Civic Center. Mitchell eventually danced with a boy, but not on this trip.

Student fees go to fix Student Development error

Student money will pay for a 2-year-old clerical error covered the error.

Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Lawrence Juhlin said the money will gradually be replaced over time with money from the Student Organization Allocation Fee account. The account is made up of student activity fees which are paid through tuition.

Juhlin said the money has to be replaced with student fee money because that is the money that was used.

"It's got to be paid for out of the student activity fee money because that's where it came from," Juhlin said.

This problem was alluded to in the North Central Accreditation report, a report put together by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. According to the report, the NCA had a negative opinion of Student Development based on "...the issue of Registered Student Organizations and the accounting problems associated with the Student Development office."

According to Juhlin, the problem will be solved over time based on enrollment.

Juhlin explained Student Organization Allocation Fee money is allocated to Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council one year ahead of time based on Student Development's enrollment projections for that year.

If enrollment is lower than predicted for that year, because Student Development has already allocated the money, it will not effect USG and GPSC that year.

However, in years when enrollment is higher than projected and more student fee money comes in than has been allocated, this is where repayment of the Pan-Hellenic council debt comes in.

Juhlin said that in years when more money from student fees comes in than expected, Student Development will use that money to pay off the funding error before giving it to USG and GPSC to put in their Student Organization Allocation Fee accounts.

"We're delaying the transaction," Juhlin said. "When our enrollment goes up we will replace the money. We'll get it fixed long before the

Free health clinic in city's future

Eurma Hayes Consortium Board is looking to open a free health clinic for Jackson County residents

ANDREA DONALDSON DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Most residents living in Northeast Carbondale are 200 percent below the national poverty level, and 48 percent of the 160 residents surveyed are medically indigent and cannot pay medical bills, according to an SIUC survey.

SIUC's Center for Rural Health conducted research this fall to assess the need for a free health care clinic to be located in the Eurma C. Hayes Center. The study found many Carbondale residents are without health insurance or medical care, and are in need of medical assistance that a free clinic could provide.

Paul Sarvela, director of SIUC's Center for Rural Health, said the proposed clinic will offer all forms of primary health care and programs on health education.

"Hopefully, it will be equivalent to going to visit your family doctor," said Sarvela.

The Eurma Hayes Consortium Board has been looking at the possibilities of developing a free health clinic for more than a year. Karl L. Larson, community benefits manager for Southern Illinois Health Care and active member of the consortium board, said he thinks the clinic will be a great attribute to the community.

"I think the prospect of having a clinic to serve individuals without health care is something we have needed for a long time," said Larson.

Student leaders want second chance for Halloween 2000

Leaders say changed feeling deserve opportunity

KAREN BLATTER GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Student leaders say SIUC is ready for a second chance at a organized Halloween celebration, citing that the negative tradition for the weekend is dying.

Brian Atchison, Undergraduate Student Government vice president, has been attending SIUC for four years and has seen the activity that occurs on the Strip the weekend of Halloween. He said students who are here now think differently about the weekend than students who attended SIUC years ago.

"Students who are here weren't here four years ago," he said. "They don't relate to the riots on the Strip. A lot know that you are supposed to stand in the street, but closing the bar isn't fair to the students anymore."

Carbondale is once again talking about Halloween on the Strip, and City Manager Jeff Doherty has prepared two recommendations for the City Council that are being reviewed by four city groups.

City officials are concerned about the violent and dangerous behavior that students display on the Strip during Halloween.

Nunn was appointed to the USG position less than two weeks ago to replace former Chief of Staff Micki Notke, who graduated in December. Nunn, who has never participated in USG before, is learning both the ins and outs of his position and USG.

"I've attended different USG meetings in the past to see how things run," Nunn said. "This is my first taste as an executive officer."

USG President Sean Henry, who appointed Nunn, said part of the reason he chose Nunn was because he was new to USG and could bring in some new ideas.

idea to bring this to Carbondale," said Lewin, who got the idea for Bridges from the National Conference on Racism and Justice, an organization in St. Louis that creates initiatives to combat racism.

The group, composed of mostly blacks and whites, met Sunday at the Eureka Hayes Center and plans to meet again next month. Its goal, in addition to discussing race, is to include people of all races and cultures.

The Bridges group meets once a month to discuss issues ranging from the recent Confederate flag controversy in South Carolina to strengthening Carbondale's black economic base. Some members think just coming together in the group is one way to achieve racial progress.

"The only way to solve this situation is by talking," said Edgar Montano, a native of Columbia and Carbondale resident. "Even though we cannot see the results now, we should continue in the community as a whole, promoting this type of activity."

Montano said discussing race issues helped him understand more about prejudice and American culture.

and sharing information," he said.

The group as a whole would like to see racial progress move more swiftly. Lewin especially wants to see more progress for the sake of today's youth.

"I feel we're moving forward, but slowly," she said. "I work with children, and I care very deeply about them. I think it's our responsibility to work at improving race relations. I'd like to move things along a little bit faster."

Bridges' member Darnecca Moultery, a lifelong Carbondale resident, said society may have regressed concerning racial progress because of fears about the issue.

"We used to be a very active community, but now I think a lot of that has changed," she said.

Moultery said being a part of the group has helped get her "chip off her shoulder concerning racism."

"It's helped me a lot because I use to think that all white people were against blacks," she said. "Now I know that's not true."

Lewin and the group are not expecting progress to happen overnight, but they see Bridges as a first step.

"I want people to learn to work together, and this is a very small effort to help accomplish that," she said.

NEWS IN BRIEF

BATON ROUGE, LA.

Student stabs dean

A Louisiana State University student accused of stabbing the institution's dean of students in the head and neck has been charged with attempted second-degree murder.

Police said Marques Smith, 21, a philosophy major, resorted to violence Monday after receiving a letter informing him that he faced university sanctions for altering his grades. Police said Smith attacked the dean, John Baker, from whose office the letter was sent.

The struggle ended in the driveway of Baker's home only after a kitchen knife used in the attack broke, police said. Baker suffered cuts to his head ears. He was treated at a local hospital and returned to work Tuesday. Smith, who was also cut during the fight, received stitches at a hospital before police charged him.

BOULDER, CO.

Protesters demand equal time at career fair

A graduate-student career fair at the University of Colorado at Boulder turned into a battlefield of sorts Tuesday as protesters urged students to look outside big corporations for jobs.

Students, career services staff and university security clashed with demonstrators from the World Action and Awareness Coalition of Equal United Progressives (WAAKE-UP!).

The protest came complete with "Crackers the Corporate-Crime-Fighting Chicken" and an Uncle Sam look-alike, both of whom dashed through hallways, handing out fliers to surprised students.

The three-minute protest ended when a campus security guard forcibly booted Crackers and Uncle Sam out of the building.

WAAKE-UP! members said they would continue their push to show other students that there are alternatives to working for multi-national corporations.

DEVIN MILLER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jennifer Hampson (left) and Thom Miller explore the generational split between parents and children in the play "Three Days of Rain" which will be performed Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at 8 in the C.H. Moe Laboratory Theater.

Pulitzer-nominated play examines relationships spanning generations

STORY BY: TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In 1998, Richard Greenberg wrote a Pulitzer Prize nominated play that details the generational split between parents and children. The play is "Three Days of Rain," and it is being performed Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights at the C.H. Moe Laboratory Theatre in the Communications Building.

Paul Bawek, who is directing this production, said he was attracted to the play's contemporary qualities.

"I enjoyed the generational gap aspect, but the major reason I chose this play is because it speaks to students on this campus," said Bawek, a graduate student from Sacramento, Calif. "Greenberg wrote a great play that speaks to Generation X and Y."

Bawek and his cast faced many challenges bringing this material to life.

"The play demands great versatility and depth from the actors. They're doing a great job with a very difficult piece," Bawek said.

PLAY TIMES
• "THREE DAYS OF RAIN" WILL BE PERFORMED FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND SUNDAY NIGHTS AT 8 P.M. IN THE C.H. MOE LABORATORY THEATRE. TICKETS ARE $5

Myles Gullette, a senior theater performance major from Lexington, Ky., plays dual roles, Pip Wedder and Theo Wedder. He said the challenge was making the father-son characters different yet similar.

"I'm playing a father and son, and I'm trying to make the characters different but with similar qualities... body movement, how they stand and walk," Gullette said.

"They're two different characters coming from totally different perspectives."

Not only does the play challenge the cast and crew, Bawek said, it also puts the audience to work as well.

"Another reason I love "Three Days of Rain" is that it allows the audience to create the third act for themselves," Bawek said. "The audience will have to put the pieces of the puzzle together as they leave... As in life, there are no easy answers."

As for how the play will fare in the Carbondale area, actor Thom Miller, an undisciplined graduate student from Cape Girardeau, Mo., who plays Walker Janeway and Ned Janeway, is optimistic.

"I do think it will do well in this area," Miller said. "It's contemporary enough, and it goes from really good laugh lines to real dark moments."

lives of several people living in San Fernando Valley, Calif.

Anderson first burst onto the Hollywood scene with "Boogie Nights," a bold look at the pornography industry in the late '70s. "Magnolia" is infused with the same cinematic audacity of that film. Anderson's camera whips around in a Martin Scorsese-esque frenzy; the introductory sequence alone contains more dolly shots than I've ever seen in a film; and the soundtrack, featuring songs by Aimee Mann, is moody and provocative. filmmakers. His visual style echoes the rhythms and colors of early Scorsese ("Mean Streets" and "Taxi Driver"), yet his stories bring to mind the work of Robert Altman with their many characters and epic scope.

There is an interesting trend developing in Hollywood recently — the return of epic filmmaking. It seems like audience members can't go to the movies without encountering yet another director's two-and-a-half to three hour opus. What is really surprising about this trend, however, is how great a lot of these films actually are. Movies like Oliver Stone's football drama, "Any Given Sunday," Michael Mann's superb film about contemporary media, "The Insider," and David Fincher's truly brilliant vision of a machismo-inspired apocalypse, "Fight Club" are all excellent examples of films that warrant and sometimes even benefit from a long running time.

Add to that list writer-director Paul Thomas Anderson's latest film, "Magnolia" — a sensitive, but never maudlin, look at the interconnecting

To vividly portray his characters, Anderson has assembled a wonderful ensemble cast including Tom Cruise as a jaded motivational speaker who invites insecure men to reclaim their manhood by "seducing" and "destroying" women, and Jason Robards as his dying father whose last wish is to connect with his estranged son.

The scenes with Cruise's character, Frank "TJ" Mackey, are hilarious and electric recalling the energy of "Boogie Nights." At a televised seminar, Mackey teaches men how to fake being sensitive and how to compose a personal tragedy, all in the hopes of "scoring" with women. The dialogue is crisply written by Anderson, and Cruise becomes Mackey with all the fury of a tornado.

In essence, the film is about the love between a family and humanity's necessity to confront the past in order to achieve transcendence. It's a theme Anderson brings home to the viewer with grace and style. However, I must emphasize that this is a long film that requires a lot of faith from its audience. If you go with the flow of "Magnolia," you'll be taken on a gratifying emotional roller coaster. If you don't, you'll be lost at sea for three hours.

That being said, "Magnolia" is an epic, fascinating film that is well worth the trip.

Northwestern sororities end parties with fraternities

MEG McSHERRY BRESLIN KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

EVANSTON, Ill. — In yet another attempt to erode the sodden "Animal House" image of fraternities, sororities at Northwestern University have voted to stop throwing joint parties at frat houses if alcohol is to be served.

The new policy, which will take effect next fall, is aimed at what for decades have been one of the most popular types of Greek parties at Northwestern and scores of other universities—the fraternity-sorority co-sponsored event. And for years alcohol has been a major part of the culture at such gatherings.

While fraternities can still throw functions with liquor at their houses without sororities if they wish, they'll have to pay for the parties themselves without getting sororities to chip in. They'll also have to work harder to get sorority women to show up, sorority leaders said.

Typically, hosting a sorority was one of the most efficient ways for men to meet and socialize with sorority women.

"By passing this, it forces fuller cooperation with the fraternities and sororities who will have to work together to come up with good (non-alcoholic) events," said Caroline Keating, the student leader of the Panhellenic Association, which governs sororities at Northwestern.

The resolution comes at a time when binge drinking, by some estimates, remains at disturbingly high levels among college students.

Northwestern is among eight sorority systems nationally to have adopted the Panhellenic resolution within the last year. Others include the University of Florida, Southwest Texas State University, East Carolina University, Indiana State University, the University of Texas, the University of Utah and Ohio University.

At nearly every university across the country, it's becoming increasingly tough to drink on campus because of new rules set up to discouage it.

At Northwestern, for example, fraternity parties with alcohol must be registered in advance with the university, and fraternities need to supply monitors, draft and adhere to a strict guest list, and ensure that underage drinkers aren't served.

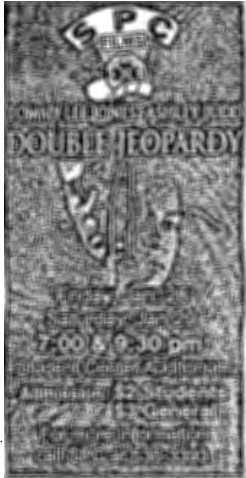

Some fraternity members can attest to the implications of such a strict atmosphere.

Still, some sorority members have lingering concerns. Jessica Tooredman, a junior and a member of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority, said she supported the resolution, as did her sorority. But Tooredman said she still worries that the social environment will become even more limited at Northwestern, a campus filled with overachievers who need the chance to let loose.

"There is a bit of frustration," she said. "College was seen as a place where we could have some fun and freedom, but instead the same rules are applied."

Internet can be mecca for finding jobs

GEOFFREY RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jody Ecklund said the resume and cover letter he posted on the Monster.com website last November has already yielded four serious phone calls from potential employers.

Ecklund, a senior in art and design from Rochelle, is one of thousands of college students across the nation who are turning to the Internet for job searches.

The websites are a mecca of quick-moving information about potential employers, and have the ability to spread a student's credentials to all corners of the globe.

"I think it's a great thing to have," he said. "It was a pretty good search as far as looking for jobs, and it's a lot faster than sending a hard copy."

Director of University Career Services James Scales said Career Services deals with thousands of students each year searching for internships and permanent employment after graduation. He said new online approaches to job hunting are dramatically changing the ways a student goes about contacting potential employers.

"It really broadens the horizons of who a student is dealing with as far as the employers are concerned," he said. "You're dealing with the world, and you're dealing internationally."

Scales said although Internet sites devoted to job searches have been around for several years, the trend began to really surge in 1998.

The multitude of online job sites allow students to reach a larger audience of potential employers. Among the functions most frequently offered are the ability to post resumes and cover letters and the ability to access online databases of different job openings.

An even newer advance, said Scales, is the ability to conduct a virtual interview, which allows students to see, hear and speak to potential employers from all over the globe in real time.

Scales said this new technology is valuable because it allows students to personally meet employers who may not be able to come to Carbondale under normal circumstances.

Janie Irven, professional employment representative at Caterpillar Inc., one of the more than 360 corporations that Career Services directly deals with, said online methods help employers meet a much larger number of candidates for jobs.

Scales said as these online sites are, though, there are still several details they do not provide, such as work conditions, salaries and other issues that may arise in interviews.

"There are some things you need a person for that a machine can't answer," he said.

Irven agreed and said there are still many advantages to the traditional approach of sending recruiters directly to college campuses.

"When on campus we can meet students face to face and we can focus on the degrees we are looking for," she said.

In addition, Scales said, as with any other kind of Internet site, the quality of job-searching sites greatly varies.

"A lot of it has to do with the dating of the material," he said. "Good, strong sites are constantly updated. It all depends on the site."

Scales said many potential employees believed the trend of using online technology to conduct business, such as this, was merely a trend, but it soon became a "forest fire overnight."

"The world is moving very quickly," he said. "We have to be prepared to change the way we think and the way we do things, and we have to be prepared to change on a moment's notice because of the technology."

STUDENT DEVELOPMENT

University shuts down, we're just trying to find an opportune way to do it so everybody gets their budget cut."

In November 1998, USG passed a resolution that mandated Student Development not use Student Organization Allocation Fee money or student fee money to correct the error.

USG President Sean Henry said he is disappointed that Student Development is going to use student activity fee money to account for the error because former Chancellor Jo Ann Argesinger promised USG that money would not be used.

"We feel that the money should come out of Student Development's budget," Henry said. "Argesinger promised us that so money would come out of the activity fee."

Henry said he felt it was not fair to freshmen and other incoming students who were not at the University when this error occurred to have to pay for it.

Juhlin said the only solution for the error is to use money from student activity fees because other University money is to be used in its directed areas.

"The funds in the University are all designated for specific purposes and it's just appropriate to use the money from where the problem occurred," Juhlin said.

Meningitis victim returns to SIUC

Carrie Milnor catches up on life, homework

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Carrie Milnor knows she is lucky to be alive today as she laughs with friends about being airlifted to a Springfield hospital in critical condition in November.

"And the [helicopter] ambulance guy said to me 'this is a mask,'" Milnor laughs. "As if I've never seen a mask before. And he showed me how to put it on; he looked like a flight attendant."

Milnor, a sophomore in physiology from Decatur, contracted potentially fatal bacterial meningitis last November. Meningitis, caused by viruses or bacteria, is an infection of the membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord. The disease is spread through saliva or nasal fluids.

Milnor first noticed symptoms Nov. 27, after Thanksgiving break. It began like the flu, with chills and body aches. A fever of 102 degrees convinced Milnor to seek medical help.

"I just started to get really cold," Milnor said. "I didn't think anything of it. [But then] my lips and fingernails were blue. I had tried to stand up and walk around my room. I couldn't because my legs started shaking and I was real wobbly. When I stood up, I got nauseous so I just stayed in bed."

A friend of Milnor's drove her to Carbondale Memorial Hospital where Milnor underwent blood tests. Because nothing could be concluded from the tests, Milnor was released with a prescription for antibiotics to be filled at Health Service the next day.

The next morning, Milnor noticed something very strange.

"I took a shower and that's when I noticed the spots," Milnor said. "They were all over my body, like little bruises."

Milnor went to Health Services to see a nurse. A doctor there suspected she had meningitis and Milnor returned to the hospital. After two spinal taps, doctors still could not

Bacterial Meningitis

Description: Meningitis, an infection of the membranes covering the brain and spinal cord, can be caused by viruses or bacteria.

- Symptoms:
- high fever
  - chills
  - sweating
  - headache
  - muscle ache
  - stiff neck
  - eyes sensitive to light, pupils may be different size
  - nausea, vomiting
  - red or purple skin rash
  - lethargy, drowsiness, confusion
  - sore throat or sinus infection confirm her condition because of a shortage of fluid around Milnor's spine.

Milnor was airlifted to the Intensive Care Unit of Springfield Memorial Medical Center, where two more spinal taps were done, finally establishing her condition. Milnor began to get scared.

"When I got into the ICU in Springfield, I was like, 'well if it's bad enough that they had to airlift me out to somewhere more specialized and I'm in the ICU... this is really bad,'" Milnor said.

Christie Clow, a friend of Milnor's, did not handle Milnor's hospitalization well.

"I was just scared mostly," said Clow, a junior in clothing and textiles from Oakwood. "I just broke down a bunch of times into tears because I was so worried about her. I didn't grasp the fact that I couldn't do anything to make her better. It's made us all a lot stronger."

Milnor was moved from intensive care Dec. 2, but was kept isolated until her release Dec. 4.

Medical School in Springfield, said Milnor had a good chance of survival from the beginning.

"She was young," Goodrich said. "I can't overemphasize how that's important. When she got here, she was still relatively stable, alert and talking, which is good."

Meningitis patients are administered intravenous antibiotics. Hospitalization is required for patients, who can suffer death, paralysis, hearing loss, speech difficulty or intellectual impairment. A vaccine is available to prevent the disease. About 3,000 cases of meningitis occur each year in the United States, with 10 to 15 percent resulting in fatalities.

Goodrich sees about six outpatient-meningitis cases a year from the

Improvements being made to preserve library's status at SIUC

Five-year plan expected to cost $25 million, increase space

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Students and faculty will, in the near future, have an opportunity to meet and learn with other people from all over the world without ever having to leave campus.

Morris Library's renovation is underway and includes adding a new entrance, which will increase space for a Distance Learning Center. The space increase allows for a room in which classes will be broadcast over the Internet. Internet meetings between departments and universities will also be possible with the renovation.

tion. So Morris Library can continue to grow, more storage space for books, newspapers and journals will be added.

This is all part of a far reaching five-year plan that is expected to cost about $25 million in the short term, according to University Engineer Phil Gatton.

Gatton said these renovations are pending on funding from the state.

But for now, SIUC is in the planning process. According to Gatton, a new freight elevator will be installed in February on the west end of the library to replace the old one. This is a small step in the plans to modernize the library and help in renovation plans.

This month, Morris Library was granted $350,000 from Gov. George Ryan to be used for the installation of the elevator. The funding will also be used to lower the ceiling in the undergraduate library to give better lighting, provide both fireproofing and soundproofing, better thermal insulation and remove asbestos.

Library officials have managed to remove about half of the asbestos in the undergraduate library, but the abatement has been put on hold for now. They will continue the asbestos removal later in the year.

The stage is set for major changes throughout the library. Three years ago, the SIU Board of Trustees gave $1.1 million in planning money to the library that is only now beginning to pay off.

It could mean some initial inconveniences due to workers crowding the area from time to time. This should not be a big concern to most since much of the work is set to be carried out at night to avoid friction between students and workers.

Seven arrested at UConn following disturbance call

MATTHEW CABZEN
THE DAILY CAMPUS

STORRS, Conn. — On November 12, a call to police reporting a disturbance in Buckley North dormitory on the University of Connecticut campus sparked a police investigation that eventually led to seven arrests between Dec. 20 and 28.

Stephen Hogan, Buckley North's fifth-floor resident assistant, was arrested on Dec. 20 on several charges, including possession of methamphetamine, possession of methamphetamine with intent to sell and criminal attempt to possess methamphetamine.

The investigation led to several other arrests in connection with the case.

Jason Malin, Robert Hayden and Jason McCarthy, who allegedly attempted to purchase the methamphetamines and were upset that they had not received real drugs, have also been arrested.

They allegedly held Hogan in his dorm room, demanding their money back.

This caused the disturbance that led to the police investigation. All three were charged with second-degree unlawful restraint.

The investigation revealed that Hogan had received the drugs from his sister, Cassie Hogan, of Pascoag, R.I., an exotic dancer who was trying to acquire money for breast augmentation surgery.

She and her fiancé, Joseph Mooney, also of Pascoag, were planning to deliver $13,000 worth of ecstasy to Jeffrey Petrello, another UConn student, who was a Delta Chi fraternity brother along with Stephen Hogan.

Petrello was then going to sell the drugs, netting approximately $2,000 for Hogan.

They were both inactive members last semester," said Patrick Burke, president of the Delta Chi fraternity. "When we found out about [the incident], the two were expelled [from the fraternity]."

Blicher noted that the items identified on campus that were purported to be methamphetamine were actually over-the-counter medications.

Cassie Hogan and Mooney were arrested in Rhode Island on Dec. 28. "Both of the individuals waived the extradition," Blicher said. They were brought to Connecticut and charged with conspiracy to sell methamphetamines.

The university has seen an increase in narcotics cases recently, Blicher added.

Students give reasons to jump in the SAC

SAC offers students the chance to become a leader.

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

If it was not for a simple advertisement, Jason Green may not be the Student Alumni Council president today.

As a junior, Green knew he wanted to get involved with something, but he did not know what until he noticed a newspaper advertisement for the Student Alumni Council.

Now, a graduate student in business administration, Green said being a member of SAC has earned him leadership experience and contacts. But he also finds it very gratifying. "We do a lot of worthwhile programs and things that are really valuable to the student body at large," Green said.

Along with meeting potential business contacts, students can also expand their social lives. "It's a good group of people that you can consider your friends, but also your colleagues," Smith said.

Kari Harwood, a junior in secondary education from Peoria, said that by joining as a freshman, she was able to meet people through SAC. "Some of my best friends I've made down here have been in the Student Alumni Council," said Harwood.

Being a member of SAC has given Harwood a broader sense of college.

"As a student there is so much more than just school, and SAC brings out other aspects of college," Harwood said.

The SAC was formed to support the Alumni Association and to prepare students for when they will be alumni.

Jenna Smith, Alumni Association assistant director, said the SAC is a leadership organization anyone can take part in. Smith said the variety of projects it takes part in is what makes it attractive.

"The Student Alumni Council is for a student who is looking for somewhere they can be a leader and they can stand out," Smith said. "But at the same time have fun and be relaxed."

Two programs the SAC is especially proud of are the Super Student scholarships and "The 25 Most Distinguished Seniors at SIUC." Through T-shirt and sweatshirt sales, providing

"When I was in the hospital, I couldn't walk," Milnor said. "I mean I couldn't do anything for myself. If I wanted to roll over in bed I had to have nurses come and roll me over. I missed not being able to do anything."

Milnor's illness caused her to miss the last three weeks of the fall semester. The missed school left her with incompletes in her classes, and Milnor is making up her schoolwork now.

Today, Milnor laughs about her single visible scar — a small mark near her collarbone from an intravenous line.

"It looks like I was bit by a vampire," Milnor says.

She frowns as she touches another new piece of jewelry, a necklace with three rings on it representing hope, love and faith. Milnor's mother bought Carrie and each of her friends the same necklace.

Weber wants to repeat history

At least, don't expect the SIU men's basketball team to stroll out of Roberts Stadium in Evansville, Ind. with another 30 point-plus victory over the University of Evansville Saturday night.

I'm not implying that the Salukis (11-8, 5-3) cannot escape with a victory, but it will not be the cakewalk it was last time.

Evansville (15-5, 6-3) was the hottest team in the Valley, winning 11 of its last 12 games prior to Wednesday night's 75-44 offensive shortage at Southwest Missouri State University.

The last time the Purple Aces were beaten that bad dates back to two early December games.

Butler University knocked off the Aces 73-45 Dec. 4 in Indianapolis. Four days later in Carbondale, the Salukis pounded Evansville 82-51, putting them on the wrong end of back-to-back, one-sided affairs.

Now, the Salukis will meet up with Evansville only three days after another 30-plus loss.

"Maybe they'll be mentally defeated," suggested Saluki head coach Bruce Weber.

Don't count on it. There is one big difference this time around. The Salukis are not in Carbondale anymore.

The Purple Aces have yet to lose at home this season, going a perfect 10-0. In fact, they haven't lost at Roberts Stadium in over a year, giving them a 14-game home win streak.

Evansville should be hungry. If Wednesday night's loss did not infuriate Evansville head coach Jim Crews and the boys enough, a fresh reminder of what occurred Dec. 8 should do the trick.

Anyone who knows Crews fairly well, would not have wanted to sit within the same time zone after a defeat like Wednesday night's pummeling by the Bears.

For anyone who doesn't know Crews that well, he is a Bobby Knight protégé. The Indiana University alumnum (76) also served as an eight-year assistant under "The General" prior to taking the Evansville head coaching job in 1985.

To make a long story short, he's not always the most congenial guy. However, like his former tutor, the guy can coach.

So the Purple Aces should be ready to shake off that 15-of-57 (26 percent) shooting disaster in Springfield, Mo., with should being the vital word here.

Remember this is a Missouri Valley Conference matchup, it shouldn't be too hard to figure out the better team.

Don't count on it. Hardly anything would surprise a Valley follower, or NCAA follower for that matter, anymore.

"You never know if you're catching them at the right time or not," said Weber of Evansville.

One thing is for sure. It should be a battle in Roberts Stadium Saturday night when the second-place Purple Aces welcome the Salukis, tied for third place, for a pleasurable weekend invite.

Only time will tell if Weber's crew will infuriate Crews and company once again.

That leaves only one question remaining. If Knight is "The General," should we start calling Crews "Sarge?" Don't count on that either.

Men's Tennis

The SIU men's tennis team is off to Des Moines, Iowa, for the MVC individual competitions Friday through Sunday. All 10 Valley schools will be represented.

The tournament should be a solid measuring stick for coach Brad Itner's steadily improving program, which closed its fall season the third-ranked team in the Missouri Valley Conference.

The Salukis will travel to the University of Evansville Feb. 4 for an indoor meet.

Saluki Softball

The SIU softball players and coach-ers will be hosting a hitting clinic today through Sunday in Davies Gymnasium.

There will be two sessions each for today and Saturday's clinic for 5th through 12th graders.

Today's sessions are from 6 to 8 p.m. and 8 to 10 p.m. Saturday's first session runs from 10 a.m. until noon, immediately followed by a 1 to 3 p.m. meeting.

The clinic concludes Sunday with the youth portion of the camp for children in K-4. That session is scheduled for 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Saluki Swimming and Diving

The SIU men's and women's swimming and diving teams are set to battle Missouri Valley Conference foe Southwest Missouri State University

Saturday in Springfield, Mo.

Saluki diver Randy McPherson was honored this week as the MVC's Diver of the Week after recording his best performance of the season in the one-meter diving competition in a tri-meet against Western Illinois University and Western Kentucky University Saturday in Bowling Green, Ky.

McPherson's score of 258.20 moved him into second among the Valley's best scorers this season.

On the women's side, Daniela Muniz was the lone Saluki to earn a first-place finish in Bowling Green, Ky., in the 200 butterfly.

The meet will be the men's final tune up prior to the MVC Championships Feb. 17-19, while the women's team will compete next weekend at Illinois State University.

McDowell

Beck attributed most of McDowell's troubles to an inability to overcome the tough defenses of the Missouri Valley Conference.

"In high school, she played against a lot of zones and didn't really face very [man-to-man] defenses," Beck said.

McDowell, who is averaging 7.9 points a game while shooting a cold 33 percent from the floor, admits she settles for too many set shots on the perimeter instead of taking it to the basket.

"Defenses are so much better now, even in a one-on-one situation you have to be so much quicker to beat them," said McDowell.

Beck made it clear to McDowell that she wants her to score more and 'mix up her game.'

"She wants me taking a lot of shots, and gets on me for not taking as many shots as I should," McDowell said.

McDowell will get her chance to pick up her game at the SIU Arena Saturday against Evansville. She says it has been frustrating and rather surprising that defenses have been so tough, and her offensive woes have affected her self-confidence.

In SIU's last game, the Salukis lost to a Creighton team that gave a balanced offensive and defensive effort. The Bluejays' bench made a major contribution.

Once again, McDowell struggled, shooting 0-for-7 from the field with four assists and two rebounds.

"We just looked dead and didn't have any energy," McDowell said.

The Salukis (5-12, 2-6) are in real danger of not making the MVC tournament. The top-eight teams qualify for the tournament, and SIU will have to play better down the stretch to be among them.

McDowell would like to see more intensity and cohesiveness from her teammates, and believes she can become the "Molly" of old during the final stretch. She also believes that a confident Molly McDowell can "play with the best of 'em."

Fortunately for SIU fans, her past says she can.

Salukis will shoot for third-straight win, sweep of Evansville Saturday night

JAY SCHWAB
SPORTS EDITOR

The guess is it won't be so easy this time. The SIU men's basketball team caught the University of Evansville on a sluggish night at the SIU Arena Dec. 8, and handed the Purple Aces an 82-51 thumping.

Since that 31-point loss, though, Evansville (15-5, 6-3) has rallied nicely, winning 12 of their last 14 outings. And now, Evansville will have its chance to avenge getting roughed up in Carbondale.

The Salukis (11-8, 5-3) are headed to Evansville, Ind., for a rematch with the Aces Saturday night. The game is the first of a pivotal three-game road trip for the Salukis. SIU, which has 10 regular season games remaining, will then pay visits to Northern Iowa and Drake.

Evansville's recent upswing was slowed by a lopsided loss Wednesday at Southwest Missouri State University. But the Aces are returning home to Roberts Stadium, where they have not lost a game since Jan. 20, 1999, spanning 14 home games. The Aces are a perfect 10-0 at home this season.

CONFERENCE

Every game we're talking like it's our last game, like it's the conference tournament championship game.

While it appears SIU matches up well with Evansville, Saluki head coach Bruce Weber expects anything but another cakewalk this time around.

"Hopefully our kids understand what they are about and we can disrupt their flow," Weber said. "They were playing as well as anybody in the league."

Abel Schrader, SIU junior forward, fitting that the all-time series between the two rivals are so close, as both teams are also similar in some respects this year.

Like SIU, Evansville is not well-stocked in the quickness department. The Aces are, however, fundamentally sound and well-disciplined.

Junior forward Craig Snow struggled for the Aces in the first game against SIU, but leads the team with a 16.7 point scoring average. Snow also grabs an Aces'-best six boards per game.

Another enabling factor in Evansville's success has been sophomore guard Adam Seitz (13.3 ppg), who has come on like gangbusters for the Aces.

"Seitz might be all-conference the way he's played the last few weeks," Weber said.

The Salukis, meanwhile, will have to play solid basketball

Series Notes

The series is docketed at 43, following SIU's 82-51 thumping of Evansville Dec. 8 in Carbondale.

The word on the Salukis:

SIU has utilized a balanced offensive attack during the last two games to bounce back from an embarrassing 91-56 loss at Indiana State University Jan. 19. SIU head coach Bruce Weber is relying on his three senior captains to provide consistent leadership during the three game road trip that begins Saturday.

The word on the Purple Aces:

Evansville is a perfect 10-0 at Roberts Stadium this season and is riding a 14-game home winning streak dating back to last season. In recent weeks sophomore guard Adam Seitz has emerged as another solid scoring threat to complement junior forward Craig Snow for Evansville head coach Jim Crews.

Projected SIU starting lineup:	ppg.	rpg.
#5 G - Ricky Collum (Sr.)	5-11	9.4 4.0
#3 G - Brandon Mells (So.)	6-1	7.2 3.3
#33 G - Kent Williams (Fr.)	6-2	12.7 2.5
#32 F - Chris Thunell (Sr.)	6-9	11.1 7.2
#42 F - Derrick Tilton (Sr.)	6-7	9.6 4.8

Projected Evansville starting lineup:	ppg.	rpg.
#11 G - Jeremy Stanton (Jr.)	6-1	6.0 3.3
#21 G - Adam Seitz (So.)	6-4	13.3 4.1
#42 F - Kyle Runyan (Jr.)	6-6	7.2 2.1
#32 F - Craig Snow (Jr.)	6-7	16.7 6.1
#50 C - Kwame James (Sr.)	6-8	5.2 4.6

Miscellaneous:

Wednesday night's loss at Southwest Missouri State University marks the third time this season that Evansville has been blown out. The last two times came in succession. Butler University defeated the Purple Aces 73-45 Dec. 4, while the Salukis defeated the Purple Aces four days later: 82-51 in Carbondale. Will history repeat itself?

Bottom Line:

SIU had all the answers for Evansville's motion offense the first time around, but Roberts Stadium is a tough venue to walk out of with a victory. Expect a battle.

on the road if they are to stay in the MVC race. Junior forward Abel Schrader, who sparked the Salukis early in Wednesday's 76-48 home win against Drake, said SIU plans to take a no holds barred approach into every game the rest of the way.

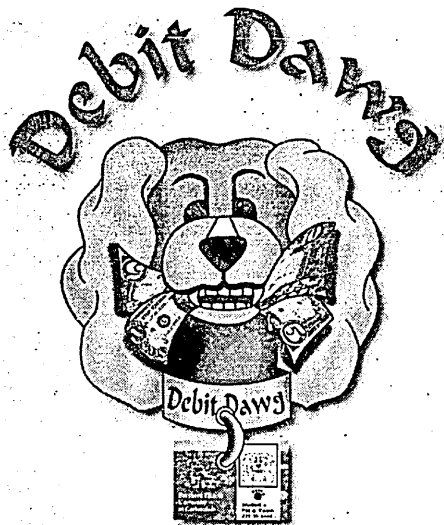

"Every game we're talking like it's our last game, like it's the conference tournament championship game," Schrader said.

"We've got to win because we want the conference championship, we want to be contenders...that's the bottom line really."

Weber is concerned about his team staying fresh, playing three straight on the road at this stage of the season.

On the plus side, the Salukis have received balanced scoring in recent wins against Bradley and Drake. Weber wants to see that trend continue at Evansville, and have his team get off on the right foot on the critical road trip.

"It will be a difficult game," Weber said. "We'll just see what we're all about here this next 10 days."

MINSOOK PARK - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Kim Holloway, left, Molly McDowell and Katie Berwanger sit dejected on the bench during the Salukis' 57-47 loss to Creighton last Saturday. The loss was the fifth in a row and the sixth home loss out of seven this season. The Salukis, 5-12 overall and 2-6 in the MVC, face the Lady Aces, 13-4 overall and 5-3 in the MVC, this Saturday.

SIU hopes to play its cards right when Evansville comes Saturday

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With the SIU women's basketball team currently riding a five-game losing streak, the last thing head coach Julie Beck needs now is the defending Missouri Valley Conference champion University of Evansville Lady Aces showing up on her doorstep Saturday.

However, Beck knows the past is just that, and insists the Salukis (5-12, 2-6) are not thinking about what the Lady Aces (13-4, 5-3) did last year, or even last week for that matter.

"We are more worried about correcting our own mistakes," Beck said. "We are not worried about where [the Lady Aces] are."

Led by third-year head coach Kathi Bennett, Evansville is in a bit of a slide as well. The Lady Aces have dropped three of their last four conference games, including a 79-74 home loss against Drake University Saturday.

"The MVC conference teams are so good," Bennett said. "We definitely hit a tough spot, but I feel our team is playing very well."

The reason Bennett thinks her team is playing so well is because of the Lady Aces' top offensive weapon, Shyla McKibbin.

UPCOMING

THE SIU WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM BATTLES THE UNIVERSITY OF EVANSVILLE 2:05 P.M. SATURDAY IN THE SIU ARENA.

Currently, the 6-foot-1-inch junior is averaging 17.6 points and 9.1 rebounds per game.

McKibbin's cast of supporting starters include sophomore guard Shino Ono, who is averaging 10.6 points per contest, and sophomore forward Lisa Eckart, who is averaging 10.2 points a game.

"Shyla is definitely our go-to player," Bennett said. "Any one of our starters is capable to lead our team, not just Shyla. [Our other starters] make it easier for [McKibbin] to run the floor."

SIU's offensive efforts are weak compared to the Lady Aces'. Only one Saluki, junior forward Terica Hathaway, is averaging double figures with 10.4 points a game.

Senior center Melaniece Bardley is second on the team averaging 8.5 points and 7.8 rebounds a game.

"We are just not scoring as a team," Beck said. "I cannot understand why we can't at least win at home. Our confidence is down and we are frustrated."

It is tough for our players to play well when there are only 300 fans at the games. We are just going to keep on plugging."

Salukis' ace Molly McDowell still holding her card

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Molly McDowell is a winner, no doubt about it.

As the Michael Jordan of Nokomis High School in Fillmore, McDowell led her school to the Illinois Class A championship not once, but twice in as many years. For her efforts, she received the Tournament MVP award, and was voted "Miss Basketball" in the state.

"She's a competitor who hates to lose and knows how to win," said Julie Beck, SIU head women's basketball coach.

Two years consecutively, she made the all-state team, finishing her senior year averaging 21 points per game and becoming the most prolific scorer in a season, and more importantly, in school history.

Unfortunately, her success on the collegiate level has not been immediate.

Since her first game of the season, in which she scored 12 points, McDowell has scored double figures just five times in 16 games.

Unfortunately for the Salukis, McDowell's struggles are symptomatic of the whole team. Inconsistency has been a major problem for the Salukis in the past, and has defined their season thus far.

"It's like we are the most energetic team one game, and then the next we play with no emotion at all," McDowell said. "No one is really playing up to their ability right now."

As a team, SIU has struggled to find chemistry and perform consistently. Beck has been in search of a lineup that can add some life to a sagging offense.

"We just try and put people out there that can score," Beck said. "That's the most important thing."
