Day care looks to take payment stress off parents

Madeleine Leroux

DAILY EGYPTIAN
MLEROUX@SIU.EDU

Rainbow's End Child Development Center staff members want to make it easier for parents to pay for day care.

Rainbow's End provides care for children 6 weeks to 12 years old on a first-come, first-served basis to university students, faculty and staff.

Dean of Students Peter Gitau said the center is in the process of implementing an easier method of payment through financial aid and payroll deduction, which should be in place by the fall semester.

"We'd like to make it easier for them to (pay)," Gitau said. "We have a lot of students, I think, who pay for everything through financial aid."

Janice Grove, accountant for Rainbow's End, said the process would probably require parents to sign a form giving the center consent to take money out of paychecks or financial aid to cover day care costs.

Gitau said the center has not been able to implement the program in the past because there was no accountant for at least a year. Now that the office is filled, the payment program has become possible, he said.

"I don't think we've had a system that has allowed us to do that," Gitau said.

Professor develops treatment technology

Kathleen Richards

DAILY EGYPTIAN
KLR12788@SIU.EDU

What started as an SIUC professor's chemistry research has turned into a discovery that could revolutionize modern medicine.

Luke Tolley, an assistant professor of chemistry and biochemistry, has figured out a system for seeing how specific proteins work in the body. When used on a more advanced level, Tolley said, the system could be used to determine the most effective treatment for cancer patients.

The discovery, named DIABLA (dynamic isoelectric/anisotropy binding ligand assay), has landed Tolley the Excellence in Innovation Award, which is given by The Partnership for Innovation Center at the College of Business. Research for the project has been ongoing for more than two years, Tolley said.

"With DIABLA, we could take a sample from an individual and test it with all the different possible drugs they use and see which one would be most effective," Tolley said. "This method could be used with cancer patients to test what treatments will be most effective for an individual."

Simply put, DIABLA is a method for identifying certain compounds in a way that has never been done before.

"DIABLA helps us discover and understand how these chemicals affect the body," Tolley said.

Tolley's research started as a cancer research initiative at SIUC.

"Afterwards I figured out that DIABLA was a lot more useful than that," Tolley said.

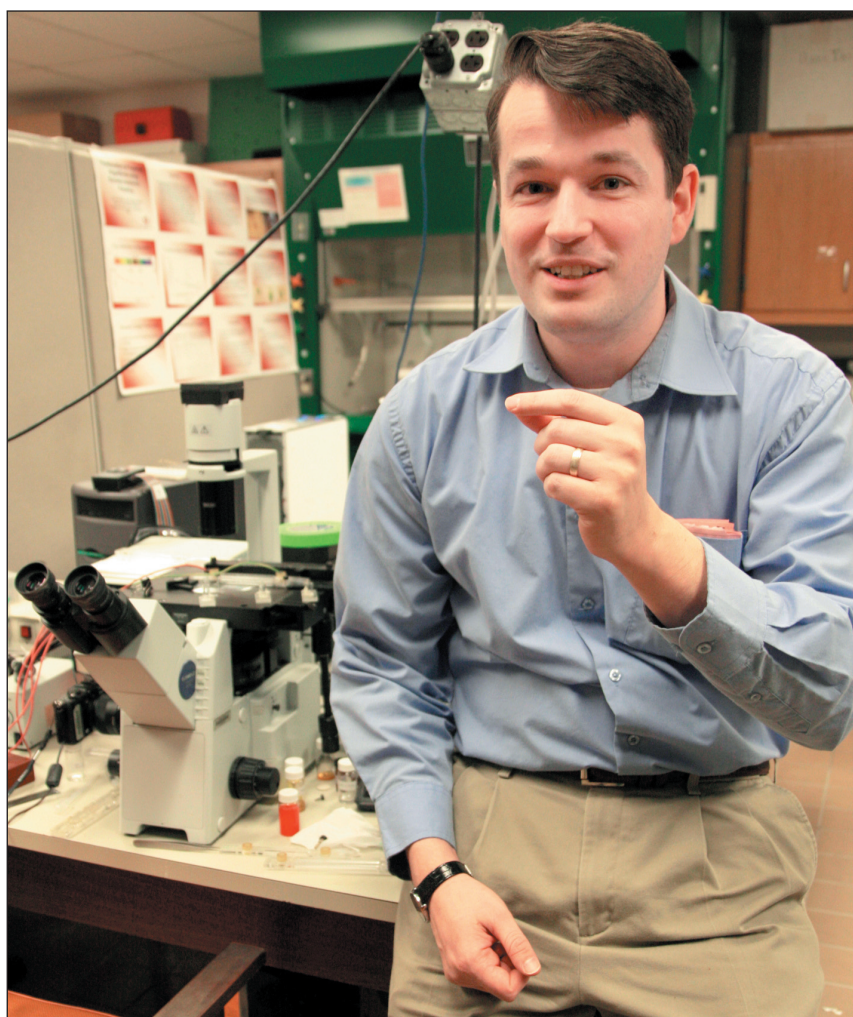

Hanna Shay, a graduate student from McLeansboro in chemistry, worked with Tolley on the project. Shay said the system could be honed and developed for mainstream use.

"It has a lot of potential for the pharmaceutical industry," she said.

The award is given to an invention, process or procedure developed through research at university.

Any innovation developed at the university can be nominated. Tolley was one of 15 finalists for the award.

Maryon King, an associate professor of marketing and a judge for the award, said judges looked mainly for projects that are new, able to be manufactured and useful to the world.

Luke Tolley describes a process called DIABLA, which he invented as a way to identify specific protein targets. He is pictured next to a microscope designed and built specifically for the process.

King remembered, Obama celebrated at dinner

Stile T. Smith
DAILY EGYPTIAN
STS34@SIU.EDU

Though nearly 300 people celebrated Martin Luther King, Jr.'s legacy and Barack Obama's victory, many said there was still work to be done.

Both Obama and King, who was remembered during a federal holiday Monday, were recognized during a dinner held Thursday at the Newman Catholic Student Center.

Keynote speaker Jane Adams agreed the election was a victory, but some obstacles would remain.

Adams, a professor of anthropology, said the election is the beginning of a new era for the United States.

"This promised land we have reached is not the end of history," said Adams, a 1964 freedom fighter and 1960s anti-Vietnam War activist. "Rather, this is the beginning of a new history."

The Rev. Joseph Brown said he was troubled by comparisons between Obama and King.

"I'm getting quite disturbed and tired ... that people say that the dream has been fulfilled," Brown said. "The accomplishment of Barack Obama is an accomplishment of one man in an electoral system who has achieved an incredible triumph. I think Obama's triumph is the triumph of a community."

The night began with an invocation from Brown, followed by a speech from Ken Suzuki, a senior from Moline studying political science.

Suzuki said despite the election of the first black president, the fight for equality is still not complete.

"As I see the inauguration of President Obama — it's a great step forward — but there's still much to be done," Suzuki said.

Brown said he was impressed by the dinner because the university has not always celebrated the life of King.

"When I arrived here 11 years ago, SIU did not celebrate Martin Luther King activities," Brown said. "The whole community can now give the correct time and energy."

Abed Abukhdair, a graduate assistant who coordinated the event, said the connection between Obama's inauguration and King's birthday was uncanny.

"It feels special to have the first African-American president while celebrating the Martin Luther King holiday as well,"

Abukhdair said.

Undergraduate Student Government President Chiquita Watts presented a short film created by the International Student Council about the timeline of events between King's work and Obama's election.

Jess Carter contributed to this report.

The Rev. Joseph Brown congratulates Jane Adams after the end of her speech during the Remembrance Dinner and Inauguration Celebration Thursday at the Newman Catholic Student Center. Along with speaking on her involvement in the civil rights movement, Adams showed a video of her work about rural life in the Mississippi-Arkansas Delta during that time.

Blagojevich calls impeachment trial a 'sham'

MICHAEL TERCHA
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Ray Long
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

CHICAGO — Gov. Rod Blagojevich's criminal defense attorney, Edward Genson, said Thursday that he expects the governor to be convicted and removed from office at next week's Senate impeachment trial.

"I hope not, but as far as I know, the people in the Senate are more likely than not to convict him and he will be removed from office. I don't welcome it, but I expect it," Genson told the Chicago Tribune.

Genson also said that the legal team does not plan to sue to try to stop the impeachment trial from starting Monday or to try to block Blagojevich's removal should the Senate vote to remove the governor from office.

"We had planned to file a lawsuit in the Illinois Supreme Court. We are not doing that," Genson said of the Monday start date in the Senate. "There's going to be no suits filed. I can say that with confidence."

Genson also said neither Blagojevich nor any of his representatives will be at the impeachment trial.

Genson's remarks came on a day when Blagojevich focused on the public-relations battle in advance of an impeachment trial that's just a few days away.

Blagojevich started lining up media appearances for the weekend in an apparent attempt to plead his case with the public.

Speaking to reporters outside his Northwest Side home Thursday Blagojevich accused the Illinois House and Senate of attempting to "thwart the will of the people" by removing a twice-elected governor.

"The impeachment trial is a sham," he said.

Blagojevich said he was being denied due process because he is unable to subpoena witnesses.

For instance, he said he wants to call Rahm Emanuel, President Barack Obama's chief of staff, to testify on his behalf. He noted that Emanuel in a television interview "made it clear nothing inappropriate" was said in his conversations with Blagojevich about naming someone to Obama's former Senate seat.

His comments came a day after he missed a deadline for seeking witnesses, documents or other materials to be used in his defense.

Rikeesha Phelon, spokeswoman for Senate President John Cullerton, called the governor's remarks an "unfortunate sideshow."

Clinton takes helm of State Department

Matthew Lee
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton took charge of the State Department on Thursday, proclaiming the start of a new era of robust U.S. diplomacy to tackle the world's crises and improve America's standing abroad.

Before a raucous, cheering crowd of about 1,000 people, the nation's 67th secretary of state pledged to boost the morale and resources of the diplomatic corps and promised them a difficult but exciting road ahead.

"I believe with all of my heart that this is a new era for America," she said to loud applause in the main lobby of the department's headquarters, which President Barack Obama visited later in the day to underscore his administration's commitment to diplomacy.

With Obama at her side in the ornate Ben Franklin Room, Clinton introduced former Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, as a special envoy for the Middle East. Former U.N. ambassador Richard Holbrooke was announced as a special adviser on Afghanistan and Pakistan.

The posts are the first of several new special envoys the administration plans to create to deal with particularly vexing problems abroad.

Clinton began her first day on the job at the State Department one day after her Senate confirmation.

"This is going to be a challenging time and it will require 21st Century tools and solutions to meet our problems and seize our opportunities," Clinton said at her welcoming. "I'm going to be asking a lot of you. I want you to think outside the proverbial box. I want you to give me the best advice you can."

"I want you to understand there is nothing that I welcome more than a good debate and the kind of dialogue that will make us better," she said. "We cannot be our best if we don't demand that from ourselves and each other."

In her 10-minute pep talk, she spoke of the importance of defense, diplomacy and development — the "three legs to the stool of American foreign policy" — and noted that the State Department is in charge of two of them.

"We are responsible for two of the three legs," said the former New York senator and first lady. "And we will make clear as we go forward that diplomacy and development are essential tools in achieving the long-term objectives of the United States."

Clinton's mandate from Obama is to step up diplomatic efforts and restore the nation's tattered image overseas. She has vowed to make use of "smart power" to deal with international challenges.

Crocker leaving Iraq hopeful, but warns against fast withdrawal

Leila Fadel
MCCLATCHY TRIBUNE

BAGHDAD — Outgoing U.S. Ambassador to Iraq Ryan Crocker said Thursday that the greatest error the United States could make in Iraq would be a hurried withdrawal. However, he expressed confidence after talks with President Barack Obama that the new chief executive won't make that mistake.

"It's one that I do not think the U.S. is going to make," Crocker said. "If it were to be a precipitous withdrawal... that could be very dangerous, but I think it's clear that that's not the direction in which this is trending."

Crocker and Gen. Ray Odierno, the top U.S. military commander in Iraq, took part in a video conference about the war with Obama and Adm. Michael Mullen, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, on Wednesday, the president's first full day in office.

Crocker said that Obama reiterated the words of his inaugural address, in which he said that he'd withdraw American troops from Iraq "responsibly."

During his campaign, Obama pledged a 16-month withdrawal plan. That would mean pulling out U.S. forces more than a year before the Dec. 31, 2011, deadline in the long-term security agreement, which took effect Jan. 1. The agreement can be amended if the United States and Iraq agree to change it.

"We're worried about a too-swift withdrawal," Crocker said. "That's when I think the spirit of compromise, of accommodation, of focus on institutional development, all of that could run the risk of getting set aside."

He said the reaction in Iraq would be, "Uh, oh, we had better pull back, dig the trenches, build the berms and get ready for whatever comes next."

He added: "I'm not saying that that will happen, but I think these are dangers that could happen."

When Crocker arrived in Iraq in March 2007, civilians were being murdered daily and Iraqis were cowering in their homes. Bodies thrown on the sides of roads piled into the morgue at an average of 50 a day. Today, car bombs, assassinations and roadside bombs still kill dozens, but the sectarian warfare is gone.

The U.S. Embassy has moved from the Republican Palace, one of Saddam Hussein's most opulent, to a sprawling 104-acre complex along the Tigris River. The palace, the former symbol of the American occupation, will go to Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki.

This year, Iraq will hold at least four elections and very possibly a referendum on the security agreement. They could change the balance of power in the country and lead to a new political landscape and possibly a new round of violence.

Crocker said that key challenges ahead included determining how much power the central government would have in relation to the regional and provincial governments. Kurdish-Arab tensions in the north remain a destabilizing and difficult problem, he said.

In addition, "Security does have to be maintained. Neither the Iraqis nor we can take our eyes off that ball," he said. "Progress has been really significant, but we cannot underestimate the challenges."

Provincial elections Jan. 31 are a key to stability, as those who fought U.S. forces and the government of mostly foreign exiles for so long now are running for seats in the provinces. Kurds and Arabs are vying for power in Nineveh province, where Kurds dominate the provincial council, and Shiite and Sunni Muslims are competing for Diyala province, where the sectarian violence once was among the worst in Iraq.

Kennedy's decision to drop Senate bid unrelated to uncle's health

ALBANY — Caroline Kennedy withdrew her Senate bid because of a personal matter unrelated to her ill uncle, rejecting the governor's attempt to get her to reconsider, a person who worked closely with her said Thursday.

Kennedy discussed withdrawing from the race with Gov. David Paterson on Wednesday, and Paterson asked her to reconsider for 24 hours, the person said.

But by 11 p.m. Wednesday, the associate said, Kennedy decided she could not take the job if appointed, and she issued a statement shortly after midnight saying she was withdrawing.

UNITED STATES

Geithner approved by Finance Committee despite tax mistakes

WASHINGTON — The Senate Finance Committee has cleared the nomination of Timothy Geithner as treasury secretary despite unhappiness over his mistakes in paying his taxes.

The committee approved the nomination on an 18-5 vote, sending it to the full Senate. President Barack Obama is hoping for quick approval so that the point man for the administration's economic rescue effort can begin work.

The committee vote came a day after Geithner appeared before the panel to apologize for what he called "careless mistakes" in failing to pay $34,000 in taxes earlier in the decade, when he worked at the International Monetary Fund.

INDIANA

Adviser accused of faking plane crash took money, forged forms

INDIANAPOLIS — An Indiana financial adviser accused of trying to fake his death in a plane crash improperly moved money from accounts, forged signatures on investment documents and charged exorbitant fees for years, investors testified at a hearing Thursday.

An administrative law judge in Indiana heard from investors and their relatives who claim Marcus Schrenker bilked them out of hundreds of thousands of dollars before last week's plane crash in Florida.

While that hearing was going on, Schrenker was in federal court in Pensacola, Fla., where he pleaded not guilty to charges of deliberately crashing his airplane and making a false distress call.

IRAQ

Iraq cuts funds for rebuilding while United States prepares to leave

BAGHDAD — Iraq's government will have dramatically less money to spend this year than expected because of plunging oil prices — a dire economic situation that's already forced the country to slash rebuilding plans by 40 percent, The Associated Press has learned. As the U.S. seeks a timetable for withdrawal, cutbacks on spending and jobs could trigger heightened violence.

U.S. commanders have repeatedly warned that without speedy economic development and reconstruction, the sharp improvements in security since the U.S. troop surge of 2007 could be at risk.

A new initiative by the Saluki CEO Corps will team its members with young entrepreneurs in efforts to give its students a better understanding of how small businesses work, said the group's president.

Mike Robinson, president of Saluki CEOs, said members of the group would be teamed with future entrepreneurs competing for 15 grants worth $3,500 to start a small business. The group will work with the grant applicants individually to develop business plans and assist them throughout the competition.

"It's sort of like an internship because you're getting experience and you're not getting paid, but the experience is very valuable," Robinson said. "It's just about training students about how to consult with clients."

Students interested in the opportunity are encouraged to join the organization, Robinson said. Saluki CEOs is open to undergraduate and graduate students of all majors.

"They're doing this operation from the bootstraps, so we can actually take part in counseling these people and help them get their act together," said Jess Schurman, a graduate student from Breese in business and member of the group.

The initiative was announced at the group's introductory dinner Wednesday.

Saluki CEOs is a Registered Student Organization that strives to give its members a better understanding of the business world by providing real-life applications, Robinson said.

Laura Harbaugh, owner of Harbaugh's Café and SIUC alumna, spoke at the dinner about her progression from SIUC student to successful businesswoman.

Harbaugh said she has one piece of advice for anyone who would like to start a business.

"Be prepared to work," she said.

Robinson said the group would participate in a series of five training modules that will better equip its members to handle the day-to-day duties of helping a fledgling business.

Robinson, a graduate student from Carbondale in business administration, said the group was started

Rally marks Roe v. Wade anniversary, new president

Brian Westley
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Tens of thousands of abortion opponents rallied Thursday on the National Mall to mark the 36th anniversary of Roe v. Wade amid concerns they could face political setbacks under the new president.

The rally and subsequent march to the Supreme Court came two days after the swearing-in of President Barack Obama, which many demonstrators said emphasized the need to become more vocal with their message.

Among those attending the rally marking the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion was Kirk Kramer of Cottage City, Md., who held up a sign reading: "The Audacity Of Hope: No More Roe."

Kramer, a Democrat, said he has mixed feelings about Obama. He supports the president's position on Iraq but said he was concerned about statements Obama made during the campaign indicating support for the Freedom of Choice Act, which would overrule many state-level restrictions on access to abortion.

"Our country is better than the war we have fought in Iraq and we are better than legalizing abortion," he said.

In a letter posted on their Web site, organizers invited Obama to speak at Thursday's rally.

"America needs your strong leadership as president of all the people to stop the intentional killing of an estimated 3,000 pre-born boys and girls each day and the brutalizing of mind, heart and body of pregnant mothers," the letter states.

Obama, who did not attend the rally, issued a statement Thursday saying the government "should not intrude on our most private family matters" and reaffirmed his support for abortion rights.

"While this is a sensitive and often divisive issue, no matter what our views, we are united in our determination to prevent unintended pregnancies, reduce the need for abortion and support women and families in the choices they make," Obama said.

A small group of abortion-rights supporters also gathered in front of the Supreme Court on Thursday.

Lisa King of Washington, said she is disappointed that Obama did not immediately move to overturn the so-called "global gag rule," which denies U.S. funds to any international family planning group that provides abortion-related services or information.

"I'm just waiting and seeing really," King said. "I don't have any huge expectations just because he's a Democrat."

She said she worries the abortion issue will be a low priority, given all the other problems Obama faces.

President George W. Bush regularly voiced support for those attending the annual anti-abortion rally. In audio remarks broadcast to demonstrators last year, he said biology confirms that from the start, each unborn child is a separate individual with his or her own genetic code.

THE COUNSELING CORNER

Getting a fresh start for the new semester

Jean Cunningham
COLUMNIST

Each new semester provides a new beginning. You can build on previous successes and use what you have learned so far to do even better. You can also learn from previous failures and make necessary changes. Here are some things to consider as a new semester begins:

Look back on last semester. What went well, and why? What would you do differently?

Get organized. If your class schedule needs changing, do it right away. Be clear about what needs to get done and when. Buy your books immediately and make a plan for study time outside of class.

Be realistic about the number of hours you can work at a job and still go to school. Make sure you know all of the sources of financial aid available to you. Very few students can work full time and also go to school full time, and most will burn out if they try.

Pay attention to your health. No one can study effectively while ill, and missing a lot of class due to illness can hurt you as well. Eat right, get enough sleep and get some exercise. Use campus services such as the health care providers at the Student Health Center to stay healthy and to treat problems as soon as they arise.

Take a hard look at the role drug and alcohol use has played in your performance during previous semesters. Set limits for yourself in terms of frequency and quantity of use. Take a clear, honest look at your friends: Are they struggling in school because of their substance use, and are they encouraging you to party harder and more often than is good for you?

Go to class. Start out right during the first week by attending every class, and then keep it up. Professors and teaching assistants look more favorably on students they see in class every day. If you do need a favor or extra help, you are more likely to get it if your face is familiar to your instructor.

Do not let yourself get behind. It is easy to put off assignments when the semester is new and finals seem far away, but procrastinating catches up with you eventually. It can make for a miserable experience during the last weeks of the semester.

If something in your life is keeping you from being the best student you can be, get help now. The university provides a lot of resources, but you have to ask for help before the semester is ruined. The Wellness Center provides short-term services related to substance abuse, nutrition, sexuality and stress. The Counseling Center provides individual, group and couple’s counseling for a wide variety of concerns.

Both of these agencies will be able to provide help promptly if you come in early in the semester, but our schedules get crowded as time goes on. No one can do much for you if the semester is three quarters gone before you call. We want to work with you right away to insure that this is a successful semester.

Gus Bode says: It’s time to send the DE a letter. Don’t like what our student columnists and editorial board have to say? Want to make your opinion heard on some other university policy? Do something about it.

Send letters to the editor and guest columnist submissions to voices@siude.com, and don’t forget to include your name, year in school, major, hometown and a phone number for verification.

Today's Birthday — Keeping a private diary is a good idea. You'll forget a lot of the details if you don't jot them down. And after the adventure, you can write a book.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 7 — Conditions are tough, but not impossible. Teach what you've learned to others and together you'll find answers. Talk to people who've been through this before.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 7 — You shouldn't make personal long-distance calls on company time. But you do need to talk to a friend or associate who's far away. Discuss business, too.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 7 — A review of your finances should be very interesting now. You might even find a leak or two that you can plug up. That makes it worth the trouble right there.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is an 7 — Discuss your goals with your partner. You don't have to share the same ones. As each of you prospers, the other will benefit, too. It's not easy, but it's worth going for.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is an 8 — All the chores you've been putting off are becoming overdue. Luckily, you're very good at multi-tasking now. Race around and do more than three regular people can.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 8 — You're not alone. Share your thoughts with a person who loves you and means well. Shake off old fears and take on your next challenge. Together, it'll be fun.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Today is a 7 — Give each person a turn to tell what's going on in his or her life, and how the others could help. No interrupting, please, and no jeering or raucous laughter. Work as a team.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Today is a 7 — Go back over old material. The answer you seek may be there. You didn't recognize it before because you didn't need it. Peruse your notes. It'll jump out at you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is an 7 — Keep close count on the money coming in and already in your pocket. Don't assume you have more than you do. That could lead to embarrassing mistakes.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 7 — It's been difficult to express your opinions in words lately. That's no longer the case, although you may want to make a rough draft. Tell your story.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is an 7 — Make time to put together a list and set some priorities. You feel like it all has to get done right now, but that can't happen. Even if you clone yourself.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 6 — Meetings should go well today. Hash over old problems first. Make a list of things to be done and the best person to do them. Keep sorting through the mess; it's easier now.

Editor's note: Last semester, Pulse reporter Audra Ord explored a series of recreation opportunities on campus and around southern Illinois. The following is sister Genna Ord's continuation of the column, which will appear on Fridays throughout the semester.

For student disc jockeys of WIDB radio station, the dream of having their voices heard worldwide is a reality.

Founded in 1970, WIDB is web-streamed radio consisting of two stations: the Revolution, which plays alternative rock, and the Remedy, which is devoted to underground hip-hop.

"This place is just for students that want to have fun and discover and play new music," said Joe Davis, the station's general manager.

Davis, a senior from Olney studying music business, said the station is capable of handling 100 DJs.

DJs can sign up for a show at any time during the week. After a semester of doing a regular rotation show, they have the opportunity of starting their own specialty shows, Davis said. On these, DJs can vary from the rock and hip-hop formats and play anything from gospel to country.

Students can participate regardless of their majors, but the opportunity is particularly beneficial for those who hope to go into broadcasting, said Garrett Callender, music director for the Revolution.

Callender, a senior from Pittsfield studying radio-television, said working for WIDB gave him on-air experience and the chance to work in different positions for a radio station that he could not learn from a class.

One of the things he enjoys most about the station, he said, is the music aspect.

"We play a lot of great bands, and you'll be able to say you heard them first," he said.

JAMES McDONNOUGH | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Ben Griebel, a junior from Belleville studying foreign language, international trade and German studies, works the controls during his shift as disc jockey at the WIDB studio in the Student Center Wednesday. Griebel has been working in radio as a hobby since his freshman year.

Playing an artist's work on rotation is not the only chance to hear them. Callender said he occasionally receives calls from artists WIDB plays to thank the station.

He said he's also interviewed several artists, such as Natalie Portman's Shaved Head.

Travis Past, a junior from Cary studying cinema and photography, said working with WIDB has taught him about people as well as music.

Past, the production director for the station, said he has gained responsibility and communication skills. He's learned how to talk with people within the station but also people outside of it, such as distribution companies and local artists, he said.

But Past said not everything he enjoys about the station is on a business level.

"There's always people, always music, always something to do," he said. "I have some of my best friends here."

Rumors have been circulating about Tom Cruise wanting to develop a film about the recent plane crash in the Hudson River. Cruise's representative said the claim was false, but is anything out of the question with this nut?

How do you feel a film about this event would work out?

Chris McGregor

I don't know who would really want to see a 10-minute long movie where a plane takes off from LaGuardia Airport and then crashes into a river no less than a mile away. I guess it would be better than seeing a two-hour movie with Tom Cruise.

Luke McCormick

Maybe Cruise is planning on heading the animated route and focusing on the geese that caused the crash. I can see the film's tagline now, "From the egg to the sea."

Sean McGahan

Cool it, guys. I heard it was about the true motive behind the Hudson River Hero — averting the conspiracy to attack then-lame-duck President George W. Bush. Cruise has had a recent obsession with films about failed assassination attempts (Collateral, Lions for Lambs, Tropic Thunder). I bet it's better than Valkyrie.

Smith followed up that performance with a team-high eight points and eight rebounds Thursday. She also committed her fourth foul of the game with 10:27 to go in the second half, but did not foul out.

Despite being SIU's leading scorer this season, senior forward Jasmine Gibson has scored 13 total points in the last two games. Against the Sycamores, Gibson scored two points, her lowest single-game total since last season when she scored two points at Indiana State.

"So many people ask me, 'Where's Jasmine?'" Eikenberg said in the radio interview. "I don't know. I hope somebody locates her and she comes back."

The Salukis will stay on the road for their next game, which is 7:05 p.m. Saturday at Illinois State (13-4, 4-1). SIU has won its last three games at Illinois State.

Before the Redbirds' game against Evansville Thursday, they had won 11 of their last 12 games. They also boast the Valley's top scoring offense, at 74.9 points per game, and the top individual scorer, senior guard Kristi Cirone, at 18.8 points per game.

Eikenberg said in the radio interview that Cirone's best quality is her ability to make the players around her better.

"We've got to find a way to contain her," Eikenberg said.

"To me, this is an embarrassing loss. I'm embarrassed, and as coaches we'll make sure we dig down and do what we need to do."

SIU's guards will have their hands full trying to handle the all-around talent of Illinois State and might have to put forth the kind of performance it showed against Indiana State for the Salukis to win.

Freshman guard Kevin Dillard said even though the Salukis' guards have accounted for a good portion of the offense, the team's success lies beyond the stat sheet.

"We've got a lot of chemistry; we really don't look at who scores the most points."

The shift from hosting lesser-known teams last weekend to racing at University of Illinois should be seamless, Warren said.

"My coach always tells me you run every meet like it's your last," he said. "You run every (meet) 100 percent, so small meet or large meet, you bring 100 percent to each and every track meet every time."

The men's sprinters and women's weight throwers are hoping to provisionally qualify for the national championship, especially sophomore Rickael Roach, who said it is all she is thinking about.

"We have to throw far; it doesn't matter what (meet) it is," Roach said. "(It's) all I'm thinking about: qualify, qualify, qualify. That's it."

Warren said there is potential for national qualifying marks in nearly every area on the team as long as the team puts in the effort.

"Just give 100 percent. That's all (we) can do every track meet is make sure every

The star power of New York Knicks guard Stephon Marbury has fallen so far, he is getting paid to stay away from the team. However, Greek basketball team Olympiacos is trying to bring the disgruntled former star overseas. Should he go?

JEFF ENGELHARDT

Sign it, Stephon. If some team wants to pay you $15 million to dribble the ball up court, run around a little, not pass the ball and then take a terrible shot; then by all means sign the contract. You will not be such a burden in Greece either since some of the team won't even understand what you continuously complain about. Josh Childress is awaiting you.

Starbury still has a lot to prove in the United States before he goes abroad. He could be a very valuable component to a team as an expiring contract. If there were any team that needs him the most, it would be one that is trying to clear salary cap space for 2010. Oh, and he's still somewhat skilled; but that's hard to prove when the only time you get playing time is in NBA Live 2009.

Marbury can presumably still play a little, so he could help coming off the bench in Boston, where Kevin Garnett could keep him in check. He's come this far; why not just collect his entire 2008-09 salary from the Knicks and go to the local YMCA every day and demolish average people in pickup games?

Preparation key to Saluki swimming success

Salukis face deep WKU in Saturday meet

Scott Mieszala
DAILY EGYPTIAN
SCOTT@SIU.EDU

SIU swimming and diving head coach Rich Walker said the Salukis' morale is good, despite the team running into tough times.

"They're ready to rest, they've worked hard and they want it tomorrow," Walker said. "The thing is, it's not going to come tomorrow. It's still got a ways to go. So just like a kid is waiting at the top of the steps for Christmas morning, 'Can I come down?' No, you can't come down. 'Aww.' They're ready to go, and it's just not time to open up the presents."

SIU will hold its second-to-last meet before the conference championships at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Edward J. Shea Natatorium against Western Kentucky.

"They're a little bit different than Missouri State," Walker said. "I don't know that on the top end they're as good, but they're deeper, so that makes for a very formidable opponent."

The Hilltoppers' men and women both won their last meet, which took place Jan. 17. The men's team won 149.5-131.5 against Evansville University, while the women won 160-115 against Evansville.

The Salukis returned to action on Jan. 15 against Missouri State. SIU's men lost to the Bears by a tally of 127-116, while the women won 126-117.

Senior Kelly Dvorak, who helped the women's team win in the 400-yard medley relay against Missouri State, said the Salukis are tired and many are swimming multiple events Saturday against Western Kentucky, but it should not be a problem.

"If we want it, we're going to have to fight for it, for sure," Dvorak said.

With SIU's swimmers feeling tired by design, Walker said the key is learning to swim tired.

who won the 50-yard freestyle Jan. 15 with a time of 21.53 seconds, said the key is to recover, stretch more between races and even swim a little more after races.

He also said that he would have to rework his pacing on the 100-yard freestyle and swim faster during the first 50 yards against Western Kentucky. Bousquet finished third in the meet against Missouri State.

As a team, Walker said he thought the Salukis could have finished races stronger against Missouri State, but he hopes that will change against Western Kentucky.

Two of the SIU women's swimmers won weekly honors, as senior Isabel Madeira was named the Missouri Valley Conference swimmer of the week after winning the 100-yard freestyle and 200-yard freestyles during the meet against Missouri State and junior Emily Gable was named the Missouri Valley Conference's diver of the week after she scored 237.97 on her 1-meter dives and 263.11 on her 3-meter dives.

"They're a little bit different than Missouri State. I don't know that on the top end they're as good, but they're deeper, so that makes for a very formidable opponent."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Salukis drop seventh straight game

SIU women's basketball loses 63-37 at Indiana State

Scott Mieszala
DAILY EGYPTIAN
SCOTT@SIU.EDU

Not much has gone well for the SIU women's basketball team since it began Missouri Valley Conference play, and that trend continued against Indiana State.

The Salukis lost 63-37 Thursday at Indiana State, shooting 25.3 percent from the field and committing 18 turnovers in the game. As a result, SIU is still without a win against a conference opponent through six games.

"To me, this is an embarrassing loss," coach Dana Eikenberg said in a postgame radio interview on 810AM. "I'm embarrassed, and as coaches we'll make sure we dig down and do what we need to do."

SIU (4-11, 0-6 MVC) began the second half trailing the Sycamores by nine points and spent all of the half facing a deficit somewhere between six and 26 points. Freshman guard Olivia Lett's 3-pointer 52 seconds into the second half cut the deficit to six, the closest SIU came to Indiana State for the rest of the game.

An 8-1 run a few minutes later in the second half helped Indiana State (9-8, 5-1) pull away and hand SIU its seventh loss in a row.

In the first half, the Salukis held the lead three different times, but lost it for good with 10 minutes, 28 seconds to play. The Sycamores took the lead with a 6-0 run, and after a 3-pointer by senior Erica Smith closed the gap to 20-18, the Sycamores answered with a 7-0 run to end the half.

Saluki guard Jasmine Gibson makes a basket attempt despite pressure from Drake University's Lauren Dybing Saturday at the SIU Arena. The Salukis lost 63-37 Thursday.

JAMES McDONNOUGH | DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU went into halftime trailing 27-18 after committing 14 turnovers in the first half.

Eikenberg said missing layups and free throws has hurt the Salukis, who shot 4-of-7 from the free-throw line against the Sycamores but missed too many layups for Eikenberg's liking.

"Layups make your defense great," Eikenberg said in the radio interview. "You get a layup and suddenly your defense is juiced."

In the Salukis' previous game,

Smith scored 22 points, her second-best single-game total of the season, on 8-of-14 shooting from the field.

TRACK & FIELD

Salukis get ready to run into tough competition

Lindsey Smith
DAILY EGYPTIAN
LGSMT@SIU.EDU

The SIU track and field team hopes to garner more bids for national championship competition as it prepares to face some of the best teams in the country.

After last weekend's season opening run, the Salukis travel to Champaign-Urbana Saturday for the Illinois Invitational. With schools such as University of Georgia and University of Illinois, SIU is faced with some of the best competition in the nation.

Three returning Salukis captured wins at last season's meet, including juniors Nefeteri Williams (women's 1,000-meter run) and Sammy Biggs (men's 400-meter) and senior Bianca Stuart (women's long jump). The Salukis finished second at the meet last year, but head coach Connie Price-Smith said she expects tougher competition this season.

"The teams are going to be different this year than they were last year," Price-Smith said. "I think we had good performances last year and bad performances. This year I'm looking for it to be a little more consistent."

Junior sprinter Stevie Warren said he is eager for the challenge.

"This is one of our first meets where we are running against some big competition. As far as conference-wise, some of the schools from the SEC and the Big Ten will be there. (Running) against some of the best competitors in the country is what I'm really looking forward to this meet," Warren said.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Backcourt battle lies ahead

Guards could dictate winner of MVC showdown

Luis C. Medina
DAILY EGYPTIAN
LCM1986@SIU.EDU

Indiana State made the Saluki guards do all the work Wednesday, fouling out three of the SIU men's basketball team's forwards.

The Saluki guards responded by scoring 46 of the team's 58 points in their 58-47 win against the Sycamores. SIU could move over the .500-mark in Missouri Valley Conference play with a win Saturday against Illinois State, and solid guard play could be the difference in the game again.

WATCH The Sports Huddle for more views on Saluki basketball.

SIU's guards — led by starters Bryan Mullins, Ryan Hare and Kevin Dillard — combine to average 28.1 points per game, carrying 43 percent of the team's scoring load.

Mullins, the team's senior leader, said the guards strong play starts on the defensive end.

"The guards are doing a good job of talking and switching around," Mullins said. "Our bigs are helping us a lot now too, so everyone's moving. Our rotations are getting a lot better and I think it's just starting to click now."

Illinois State counters with a pair of explosive guards of its own. The Redbirds' backcourt stars Osiris Eldridge, the Valley's preseason player of the year. The 6-foot-3-inch junior guard averages 14.8 points and 6.1 rebounds.

Eldridge has been a force on both ends of the court. He has scored in double figures in all but three games and has notched two double-doubles, showing his board crashing prowess by grabbing at least seven rebounds in 10 games.

Teaming with Eldridge in the backcourt is senior guard Chamberlain "Champ" Oguchi. The Oregon transfer leads the team in scoring, averaging 15.3 points per game and 5.8 rebounds per game.

The backcourt pair could cause SIU to have fits if its frontcourt players cannot stay on the court.

With Carlton Fay, Tony Boyle and Nick Evans battling foul trouble, the Salukis used a four-guard lineup to combat the lack of size inside against Indiana State. And while the lineup features guards with the advantage of speed and agility, its lack of a low-post presence makes the team susceptible to giving up offensive rebounds.

Indiana State grabbed 16 offensive rebounds over the undersized Salukis, but only scored 11 second-chance points as it wasted opportunity after opportunity.
