Health care, student budget passed

By Diane Midiah
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Three measures directly affecting the SIU-Carbondale student body met with a positive response from the Board of Trustees Friday.

The board approved a revision of emergency student health care procedures, voted to accept the $175,000 student activity fee and voted in agreement with a new law requiring student representation on the board.

The new law, which was contracted between SIU-C and Shawnee Health Systems, now addresses most student medical problems that cause regular health care visits.

George Mace, dean of students, told the board the lack of round-the-clock coverage at Health Services has created a problem. Mace estimated providing round-the-clock physicians would cost $90,000. The $90,000 contract represents a savings, Mace said.

Coverage under the plan is X-ray and laboratory service, splints, casts, crutches, dressings, excess time charges, patient screening and out-patient emergency service and "urgent care and advice." Students will be allowed to receive prescription drugs from the emergency room, usually in sufficient quantity for 24 hours.

The budget is the first drawn up by the student board since it was established last December.

Both the health care arrangement and the new student activities fee were approved.

In course approval, the board requested students participating to get ratifying members of student government officers and staff to implement the law.

A new student, the chairman of the chief of staff, James Brown, to contact Student Government officers and staff to implement the law.

Alaska pipe delay refused by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - In a resounding defeat for environmentalists, the Senate Friday refused to delay construction of the Alaska oil pipeline and instead approved a study of an alternative pipeline route through Canada.

The vote to begin work on the route appears to abruptly end efforts to slow the proposed route to protect the environment, the White House said.

Still pending, however, is a suit filed by the Wilderness Society and other environmental groups in the state, who have appealed a judge's decision last month to clear the way for construction.

National Academy of Sciences will study the alternative route along the Mackenzie River Valley of Canada, compare the environmental, economic and national security aspects of the two possible pipelines and permit the administration to begin negotiations with Canada, a statement said.

He argued that his amendment would speed development of the North Slope oil fields since Congress would be required to select a route within a year, a decision which he said would not be subject to court challenge.

Environmentalists oppose the Alaska pipeline for fear of massive oil spills. They charge the pipeline itself will be too flexible to rupture because it crosses one of the earth's most active earthquake zones.

River Festival begins tonight

EDWARDSVILLE (AP) - With a birthday celebration and a child prodigy, the Mississippi River Festival begins its fifth season on the Southern Illinois University campus Saturday night.

Thirty-four concerts will be staged, with performers ranging from folk rock to symphonic, before the festival ends Aug. 16.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 people is expected to attend.

A proposal to conduct a contest for the renaming of Post Office Park will qualify in the Carbondale City Council Monday night.

Their recommendations are:

2. Citizens of Carbondale, any age, are eligible.
3. A general advertisement announcings detailed contest would be published in the "Southern Illinoisan" and the "Daily Egyptian" for six consecutive days in August.
4. The city would print or pay for the head of entry blanks.
5. All entries would be held, unopened, at City Hall until the contest is over.
6. Councilmen Jones and Hans Fancher would review entries and select three to five of the best for final selection of a winner by the entire city council.
7. The winner would be awarded a $25 cash prize.
Mosquito abatement is tough job

By Diane Mielke
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A summer job with the Mosquito Abatement District does not carry with it the guarantee of three pleasant months of sunshine and fresh air. Bill Kelley, supervisor of the mosquito abatement crew, says the job is fraught with unpredictable difficulties.

Operating this year with a budget of about $50,000, the Mosquito Abatement District seeks to maintain a small amount of town property, a responsible for maintaining mosquito and keeping weed growth under control.

The area job is probably the most of the mosquitos abatement district's difficulties, Kelley said.

During a two-hour tour around Carbondale, Kelley pointed out land owned by recalcitrant property owners.

A political issue and some of who don't care or can't afford to be cooperative, Kelley's crew must include two lots in Carbondale where property owners had taken measures to thwart the mosquito abatement district's mission of keeping weeds shorter than 12 inches. In one case, a relatively large lot, had been completely disked by the owner. The weeds growth was retarded at first by the disking. Kelley said, but when the weeds began to grow up again, the land was so choppy that the district's tractor can hardly maneuver over it. Kelley said.

In another case, an owner fenced off a narrow strip of land along a creek. The owner moved to include survival of his weeds on ecological grounds, Kelley said. Behind the fence, the weeds stood tall, proud and ugly.

The district's work in weed control "must be kept out of politics," Kelley said. For this reason, there is no personal conflict between an owner whose property is in violation of weed standards and the district. The district notifies owners of a violation by posting a sign on the property. If the weeds are not moved within a week, the district moves in and does the job. The bill goes to the owner—there is a minimum charge of $25.50—and then to the city for collection.

Most private owners are cooperative about mowing, once the violation is noted, Kelley said. The "embarrassment value" of a sign on an owner's property, is often motivation enough, Kelley said. However, he continued, in some cases signs are torn down and the weeds continue to grow.

Signs pop up all over the district through the summer. One may be seen, for example, on an SIU-owned lot at Elizabeth St. near Grand Avenue. Some weeds on that lot exceed six feet. The University has, in the past, been most conscientious about keeping its property manicured, Kelley said. But lately, there appears to be some slippage he said.

If SIU doesn't send out a crew to mow the Elizabeth St. lot by next Tuesday, the district will move in and do the job itself, Kelley indicated that it may expect such enforcement to be a regular procedure, because "we don't play any favorites," he said. SIU may be suffering a lack of personnel and money, Kelley noted, but the University cannot be treated differently than any other property owner.

Property owned by the Illinois Central Railroad is one of Kelley's biggest headache. Scruffy weeds jut up along the IC tracks, especially north of Main Street. The IC rarely does any mowing, although under law, Kelley said, they did pay all their bills for district mowing.

The real problem with the IC tracks right-of-way is dirt and left-over railroad materials piled along the tracks. Mowing is almost impossible around these impediments, Kelley said. Another lot where junk stands in the way of district tractors lies behind the public water works near Wall and Park Streets. Kelley drove into the city-owned lot to point out pigeons, chunks of concrete block, rust full of standing water and a delapidated barn that all add up to a weed grower's nightmare.

A family's residence stands next to this particular lot. In one sense, it is perhaps a good thing that the weeds have grown so high; they hide the piles of assorted junk. On the other hand, Kelley said, the piles are among the weeds' favorite hiding places for rats.

The city-owned lot behind the old McDonald's near Murdale Shopping Center is also hard to mow, Kelley said. This lot, too, is dotted here and there with discarded pieces of lumber. Moreover, the lot is rutted and swampy. Kelley pointed to tractor ruts made when a district tractor made an attempt to widen through the mud.

Attacks Park suffers from a swamp problem, too. Kelley drives his jeep up to the edge of a small, swampy creek that runs through the park, cutting it diagonally in half. The creek provides a place for mosquitoes to breed and snakes to hide, Kelley said.

Board of Trustees fills seven board assignments

The SIU Board of Trustees held its Friday meeting by filling seven board assignments left vacant by recent departures from the board of two trustees.

In May, Dr. Martin Van Brown, Carbondale, whose board term had expired in January, was replaced by Rev. Dan Walker's appointee, Margaret Blackshear of Makensie. Last month, Dr. Earl E. Walker, Harrisburg, resigned from the board to devote more time to his medical practice.

The SIU Board of Trustees also reappointed Edward Brown of Jacksonville. Brown was also elected to another position formerly held by Brown, that of board representative to the SIU Foundation Board of Directors. Rowe was elected to the representative post for a term expiring June 1974.

Besides the two elective posts, Roes was held Friday's meeting of the Joint Trustees Committee for Springfield Medical Education Programs Rowe and Harold R. Fish were appointed to these posts by board chairman Ivan E. Eilof.

Blackshear, the board's newest trustee, was elected to represent the board on the SIU Foundation. Blackshear will serve in that capacity until June, 1975, replacing Walker.

Walker's resignation also led to an election on the board's executive committee. Harold R. Fisher of Grinnell, Ill., was elected to fill Eilof's place on the committee. Victor Shaw, Evansville, was elected as the board's representative to the Association of Governing Boards of Universities.

Who will Deny?

In less than three months, there have been five armed robberies, a reported rape and murder in the Carbondale area, of which the latter might even by called an execution. These events have frightened many people and understandably so. It would seem that while most of the citizenry are deeply concerned over the matter, including those who have concerned themselves to the point of offering a reward for help in solving the murder of Mrs. Colleen Battaglia, various segments of the population have maintained a rather casual attitude toward these tragic occurrences. Others seem bent on pronouncing all the old outcries for more "law and order," and bring their comments with references to "those..."

Of course each position has some merit, yet, it seems apparent that none of these groups have selectively considered all of the obvious facts. Can it really be so easy to forget the James Earl Ray, Richard Speck or Charles Manson and claim? Crime in this country is on the rise right now, if only because of present economic pressures. Yet, there exists an underlying note to the situation.

More and more over the years, we have become a nation of "see-nothing" people, especially when it comes to things on the street. We fear involvement

And yet, the featured possibilities towards what we might see and are not "directly" a part of.

The police are hindered many times in their investigation to find those no longer on the "run" from the victims ever seen anything. And ironically enough, many of us see nothing wrong in this type of outlook.

How does a Colleen Battaglia, or any woman, get involved today in the search for the man in the busy parking lot, and no one sees or hears anything? What must happen to make the "we who are aware of the truth, come forth and aid in it" efforts to resolve such matters.

Taking away the usual arguments of racial differences and holding a few facts up to the light, a note worthy point comes clear. The senseless killing of any person diminishes all persons.

(Unless something is done to alter the course of present actions, to open both minds and eyes alike, we stand an awfully good chance or seeing, or not seeing ourselves destroyed by an atonal failure). "There is no evil, so evil, speak no evil." It would be nice if it were true.

To the Daily Egyptian: The President of Ohio State University recently published by the Daily Egyptian should strike a responsive chord among the faculty of Carbondale Area University during the past two years. We have not seen, nor have we heard from any捻es and administrators, the same interest in educating the "generalists" as they were termed during Nixon's administration.

The interest and recent thoughts of the president of the university is that the faculty is cut off from participation in decisions made by the central administration.

We are still as far as ever from that overblown goal of academic excellence. How are we to get there? What education does not claim to have all that knowledge, but those who do have it? An "excellent" university, one must have an excellent faculty. And the Faculty Association would have to take the place of a dedicated teaching and research faculty. Consequently we must see that the future of the faculty is one of the cornerstones of academic excellence.

It is interesting to compare the salaries of the faculty in the field of Choral Music at the University of Illinois, now shown over 40 percent higher, with the 13.3 percent average at Southern Illinois University is well below those figures.

Those figures have a story to tell. Only strong action on the part of the faculty can reclaim the university for the faculty and define that action is collective bargaining. And it is the only answer to the managerial revolution which is eroding the tradition and blurring the future of the American university.

To the Daily Egyptian:

It does not take long for any visitor to Carbondale to discover within its midst a group of people whose subjective frame of reference would lead one to suspect them of being involved to some extent of this was a recent letter to the Daily Egyptian concentrating on the evils and pitfalls of Witchcraft. (This study is carried on by the well-known circle of people-ability, and white, there was no discrimination, was primarily condemned on the basis of Witchcraft's use and manipulation of supernatural forces.) Unhappily, by the implicit definition of the word supernatural, there are nothing more than universal forces ascribed to a higher power. Any attempt to make a fast back from this national sadness should be recognized as the shoddy opportunism it is.

To the Daily Egyptian:

Open letter to Jerry Bryant:

Sorry, I don't have room in my files for your letter (DE, July 12). Space in my files is reserved for new and open ideas. I can, and have, read Deuteronomy for myself.

I sincerely hope you are not deluded that the first appearance of witchcraft in the quiet and peaceful environs of Carbondale. However, it is not my intention to defend witchcraft, which most philosophical systems regard as a perversion of true spiritual power. Rather, I am alarmed by your condemnation of "supernatural power other than the supernatural power of the Holy Spirit..."

It is interesting to note that Christianity, a relative newcomer as religious systems go, and possibly the most bigoted, intolerant, and totalitarian system yet, is to my knowledge the only religious system which denies to its subjects (and non-subjects) the use of all "supernatural" power save that of the Holy Spirit. Put another way, Christianity forbids the use of precisely those powers which initially made man a successful species. And you talk of putting things in boxes.

As to errors of fact, witchcraft is not a religion. The way to which will yield facts, not myths. And can you really say with a straight face that "History leaves no doubt,...?"

Soup and Watergate

One of the most popular soap operas on TV these days is Watergate. Some people watch it live in the evening, and probably think of nothing else that night. It is also true that some people watch it as a source of comic relief. However, it is not a time that one should go on a "trip" on me, and, paradoxically, even that's a "trip."

USSR going capitalist?

From The Chicago Tribune

Word around Wall Street is that the Soviet Union plans its maiden effort at selling Communist investments to American capitalists. In the works is a giant Russian bond issue, rumored to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars. The endeavor is to raise funds to pay for expanded trade and development of the vast Soviet natural resources.

This flotation raises some incongruous prospects. First, there is the fact that the Communist regime repudiated the World War I Russian imperial bonds. These are still traded here, appropriately enough through the New York investment house of Carl Marks & Co.

Then there are the registration requirements of the Securities and Exchange Commission, calling for disclosure of all unfavorable as well as favorable information in order to inform purchasers to determine if an issue constitutes a sound investment. What constitutes full disclosure in the United States would be interpreted in a Communist nation as revealing state secrets.

Foreign bond issuers are generally required by the SEC to provide such information as the history of the nation, a description of its form of government, and identification of the party in power. Also to be contained in the prospectus is an economic profile of the country—its gross national product, export-import and other trade statistics, and a breakdown of its budget. This is the sort of information the Russians might fancy the Central Intelligence Agency would like to have.

There are other obstacles in the way of the issue. Foremost, of course, is the shaky reputation of Russian securities because of the Bolshevik default on the old czarist bonds. Then there is the fact that the Russians still owe the United States $180,000,000 in World War I debts, for which the Communists disclaimed responsibility.

That brings up an additional hurdle, for the Johnson Act makes it a criminal offense for any private person to purchase or sell government securities of a foreign nation which is in default of a loan from the United States Government.

The act was amended after World War II to exempt members of the International Monetary Fund, but Russia is not a member.

Although some investment bankers feel that investor confidence will be dammed by memories of the default on the imperial bonds, these have been settling lately at $80 to $100 per $100 face value. The explanation is that the recent thaw in U.S.-Soviet relations has spurred belief that the USSR might pay off all or part of the czarist obligations as a preliminary to a Communist offering.

All around, the situation is most peculiar, but some people were not discouraged from buying up German marks after the runaway inflation of the '20s, and, in fact, Franklin D. Roosevelt, before his emergence as governor and president, was one of those who traded extensively in them.

Victory for Secrecy

From the Washington Post

The basic purpose of the Freedom of Information Act is to promote the people's right to know, against the inclinations of federal agencies to keep information to themselves.

However, the Supreme Court has interpreted it differently, holding that, in effect, the law gives executive officials broad license to wield their "top secret" stamps as they wish, immune from public challenge or judicial review. The court reached this troubling conclusion in a case initiated in 1971 by 33 members of Congress who had been denied access to certain documents about Project Cannikin, the underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island, Alaska.

The central issue in the case was how to square two provisions of the Freedom of Information Act on one hand, its requirement of de novo judicial review of agency refusals to disclose, and on the other hand that act's exemption from disclosure for matters "specifically required by Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of the national defense or foreign policy." The Court of Appeals had concluded that, although six of the Cannikin documents were classified, only their secret portions could be withheld.

Thus the appellate court had ordered a district court judge to review the classified materials in camera to see whether any non-secret sections could be separated and disclosed. In a 5 to 3 decision, the Supreme Court rejected this selective approach. The court held that, under its reading of the law, the mere fact of classification is enough to exempt a document from disclosure and to preclude any judicial review of its actual contents.

Congress constructed this roadblock itself, the court argued, by failing to reform the whole secrecy system.

"Indeed," Justice Potter Stewart wrote in a concurring opinion, "it has built into the Freedom of Information Act an exemption that provides no means to question an Executive decision to stamp a document 'secret,' however cynical, myopic or even corrupt that decision might have been."

"If one may or may not have been the intent of Congress, as so often happens, the record is fuzzy. But there is no doubt that Congress will now have to begin itself to recapture for citizens, and for itself, any real control over the uses of secrecy by the Executive branch."

The House Subcommittee on Government Information, chaired by Representative William S. Moorehead of Pennsylvania, held probing hearings last year on the workings of the Freedom of Information Act, and several problems raised by the President's executive order on classification which went into effect last June. The court's decision in EPA v. Mink should encourage Representative Moorehead and others to push ahead on both fronts. At minimum, Congress should clarify the authority of federal judges to review, in secrecy when necessary, any and all material which agencies refuse to release, regardless of the reason invoked to justify secrecy. Without such procedures, citizens will have no way to gauge how the power to classify is being employed, and no way to pry out of the Executive branch the material about important issues which has been classified for no good reason and should be disclosed.

Reward offered for information about slaying, bank robbery

By Sam Donnels
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A $5,000 reward for information leading to the prosecution and conviction of those responsible for the slaying of an SIU student has been offered by a group of Carbondale citizens.

The Colleen Battaglia Reward Fund has been established by more than 100 Carbondale citizens seeking information about the murder.

Mrs. Battaglia was found dead in the trunk of her car Monday. Police have linked the car to the $1,000 robbery of the State Bank of Elkville committed earlier Monday afternoon.

The reward will expire at 11:30 p.m. July 18. Carbondale attorney James J. Zimmerman, who runs the fund, said the time limit was imposed and extended along the disclosure of any information.

Police in Carbondale who viewed a police lineup Thursday could identify as East St. Louis man as one of the robbers of the Elkville bank.

James Fleming of East St. Louis was arrested and charged Wednesday with armed robbery and auto theft. Fleming was questioned about the Elkville robbery, but his car was being driven was seen in the Elkville area before the robbery.

Carbondale Police Chief Joe Fox said police have not ruled Fleming out as a suspect of the bank robbery and murder.

Police are waiting for the results of an investigation of fingerprints found on evidence in the Battaglia car. Police also checked the lobby of the bank for fingerprints.

Economics move cleared by trustees

The SIU Board of Trustees gave the Department of Economics a new home Friday, approving a request to move the department from the School of Business to the College of Liberal Arts.

The request was originated by the economics faculty and approved by the boards of the school and college.

The move was desirable, Robert G. Lauer, department chairman, said, because of the proximity of Econometrics to other social science programs. Only one economics faculty member elected to remain in the School of Business, he said.

The board also heard a report on a new degree program for SIU-C. The new program, leading to an M.A. in Public Communications Arts, was described by Trustee William Allen, Bloomington, as utilizing “interinstitutional methods to apply a broader degree base.” So far, Allen said, the report on the degree program is “well done.”

Regional consolidation moves county draft office to Marion

The Jackson County Draft Board will be moving to 504 W. De Young, Marion, on July 31 because of a reduction in the level of operation, according to Barbara Gwinner, in charge of the Murphy/Borden office.

"The move is due to a consolidation of offices," Mrs. Gwinner said. "Sixteen counties from Mt. Vernon and as far west as Jackson County will be located in Marion. Even though a draft board will not be located in Jackson County, the office will be registered there with the Selective Service." Mrs. Gwinner said.

However, she said, there will be local offices where the men can register.

"Men in Carbondale can register at the SIU Registrant's office."

Mrs. Gwinner said the move will also cause a drastic cut in personnel.

"We've received no official notice as to what people will be located at the Marion office," she said, "but there's not going to be 16 people until the work is reduced." Mrs. Gwinner said.

"Mrs. Gwinner said the center is in place to save the state rent and salary costs."

She added that other states also are consolidating draft board offices.

Shawnee Hills horse club to sponsor appaloosa show

Appaloosa horses were first bred by the Nez Perce Indian tribe, said Betty Caraker, the club reporter. The Appaloosa is a spotted species and it is known for its good disposition.

The Indians believed in raising horses against horse instead of against a fence or a clock, said Mrs. Caraker. This is the way the Shawnee Hills show will be held.

Forty-one classes of horses will be judged and participants are expected from five states, Mrs. Caraker said.

In the morning, starting at 10 a.m., halter classes will be shown. The halter classes will be a beauty contest for the horse.

The performance classes will start at 2 p.m. The first afternoon class will be the costume class. In this class the riders dressed in Indian dress and the horses were painted the same colors, Mrs. Caraker said.

After lunch, the class of open ring classes will be shown. The open classes are judged on the ring according to the rules of the association.

The reining class is a gymkhana class for the horse. The horse must do seven turns and figure eight, Mrs. Caraker explained, and these maneuvers show the horse's control of the horse.

Anyone who enters the show if the horse is registered with the Appaloosa Horse Club in Moscow, Idaho, Mrs. Caraker said. There is a small fee for entering the show as a member of the association.

Trophies will be awarded for first place in every class. Ribbons will be given for second through fifth places. High point trophies will be given in three categories.
Leasure affirms support of temporary appointees

By David C. Miller Jr.,
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Graduate School and the Office of Research and Projects (ORP) are "in good hands." Provost Keith Leasure said Friday

Leasure is carrying out all the functions of a Graduate School dean, while Michael Dengar, acting coordinator for ORP, both men hold the necessary fiscal and statutory power needed for operation of their offices, Leasure said. In addition, Mitchell, associate dean of Graduate School, received a promotion to associate professor of English, effective Aug. 1.

"The new man, who reports to Leasure, is acting in lieu of a formal position being established," Leasure said. Leasure feels it is desirable for one person to take over both slots, although he said the individual sought must have a breadth of knowledge about both offices, and also broad exposure to the "whole act of campus students."

A former cabinet member, Leasure said there are three proposed positions for the new position: one being the IU President David L. Bookbinder, possibly wanting a separate vice president for ORP. There may be an assistant provost's office established for both the Graduate School and ORP, or a dean's office for both may be set up.

The situation is "very fluid" at this point, Leasure said, adding that he does not know when or how action will be taken. The desired office will first have to be defined, and then selection machinery set in motion to find a person for the slot.

Leasure said he expects the Graduate Council to be asked to form a screening committee to aid in the selection of the person. He said the administration does not expect to put the position up from the council in the matter regardless of how the position is defined. The Graduate Council is a body representative of graduate faculty members.

Although Mitchell and Dengar are not the formal holders of those offices, Leasure said there are no substantive issues involved. He said the situation was one of "an administration vacancy needing to be filled," adding that "we're actively working to fill it."

In other activity, council member Howard Webb, questioned the status of Donna Buck as a voting member on the Graduate Council. She was appointed Assistant Provost by the Board of Trustees Friday, and Webb said the council should be looking for an "indication of Buck's relinquishing her voting seat" on the council.

"It's academically inappropriate for a member of the central administration... involved in reviewing the activities of the council, to sit as a voting member," Webb said.

Although Leasure said Buck would be in the same position as deans who served on the council in the past, Webb disagreed on the grounds that an assistant provost has direct access to both the Provost and the President. Webb said he would move to declare Buck's seat vacant, in accordance with the council's operating paper, at the next council meeting.

Doctoral candidate will head prison

By Sam Desmon,
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Allyn A. Steffel, Illinois Department of Corrections director, has announced the appointment of Robert Buchanan as the new superintendent of the Dwight State Reformatory for Women, at Dwight.

Buchanan, who is 77, for the past two years has been supervisor of the Southern Illinois Work Release Center in Carbonale. He will assume his new position on Aug. 1, and thereby become the youngest head of an adult correctional institution in the state and the youngest superintendent in Dwight's history.

In announcing Buchanan's appointment, Steffel said Buchanan was both talented and greatly concerned with his work.

"I am impressed by his high level of motivation, initiative, and creativity," Steffel said. "He (Buchanan) has made the Carbonale center one of the best in the country."

Buchanan succeeds Mrs. Margaret Merriman, now of Joliet, who resigned as head of the women's facility in February. Since that time J. Wayne Alligood, has been the acting superintendent of Dwight.

In 1988, after two years as a football star at the University of Virginia and the earning of a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, Buchanan came to Carbonale from his home in Pittsburgh, Pa., and worked at the Work Release Center for about four years. Prior to being named supervisor in 1971, he was the center's residence employment coordinator and counselor.

Buchanan has a master's degree in correctional counseling from SIU, and had been working toward a Ph.D. in education psychology for the past two years.

Buchanan is married and has a four-year-old daughter. He and the family plan to move Carbonale around late July.

Bike traffic using cycle paths increased on only one street

Bicycle traffic using Carbondale's cycle paths has increased on only one street. Dan Shannon, in charge of studying the hallway system, said in a recent interview that the increase was noticed.

Shannon estimated about 800 bike riders, traveling to Carbondale, between the daylight hours when SIU is in session.

"That would be approximately a bike a minute," traveling to Poplar between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. during the week, he said.

The only cycle path on 8-foot land for 2-way bike traffic which might cause this increase is Shannon said. Students living near Poplar will use it when going to campus because the lane is there," he said.

Shannon said part of the route is not serving its purpose. The traffic Going to the bike path and the Grand Avenue bike route that crosses downtown Carbondale has shown no increase in bike traffic.

"We could use one on Navy and Avenue Avenue, University, Shannon. Shannon said. But these state routes are not easy to get started. Another area with heavy bike traffic in Grand Avenue by Washington Square, Shannon said.

"The problem here, though, is that the street is narrow and the university owns the property on both sides," he said.

Shannon said he is working on a new cycle path feasibility study which will be completed by mid-September.

"The bike lanes are only temporary," Shannon said. "The idea was to look at them and to see how many people use them.

Shannon said the study will contain suggestions for the improvement and construction of bike routes and will be presented to the City Council.

Former student gives music albums

A collection of more than 2,000 long playing albums and 1,000 45-rpm singles—all popular music—was recently donated to the SIU Library by a former journalism student, David F. Fuller, Jr., of Norfolk, Va. who attended SIU as a graduate student in 1971. Has been gathering the music collection since he was student at the school.

He hopes that the collection will be of interest to students and to a more extensive number of books on the recording business, according to Richard E. McCoy director of Libraries. He is returning the books for research, for research, column is he is writing for the Virginia Pilot, Norfolk, Virginia, newspaper, editor.

"There is a growing interest on which he is employed as copy editor. University faculty and students in popular culture that is reflected in a number of new courses on popular music and art forms. McCoy said. The Fuller collection will be especially useful at this time, when our collections are facing severe financial difficulties. The Fuller collection, valued at $10,000, includes records and written by well-known contemporary artists as James Brown, Jr., Jimmy Dykes, Roger Miller, The Rolling Stones, Elvin Presley, Johnnie Ray, Peter Nero, Donnie Warren, Roger Williams, Lawrence Welk and John Wayne.

Head of speech department to retire, move to England

Ralph Micken, chairman of the Department of Speech for 14 years, said he will retire and make England his headquarters at the end of summer quarter.

"I will stay busy in the field of communications, but while retired," Micken said. He will be lecturing, writing and traveling after retirement.

Micken said he has always enjoyed traveling and has been around the world several times. He and his British wife will visit Australia, where they have family and friends, and Micken will complete his work as consultant to the East Army Command in Sydney.

He explained that he initiated a feedback system in the army so all communication would not be sent under command form, from the highest officials to the lowest, but there would be an exchange of ideas between military personnel.

Micken is also on the Communications Board of Education of South Africa in Adelaide.

Micken said he is currently writing a collection of essays on his travels of the last 40 years, including some humorous tales about the British travel lines by ship.

He is author of "Dead Indian Lodge," a volume of Western regional poetry, "Speaking for Realism," a bulletin and professional speaking book, "America in Controversy" a volume dealing with World War America and the League of Nations.

He has published articles and papers on legislative debate in the "Western Speech Journal," "Forum" Speech Journal, "Platform News." A volume of his poetry, "Where a Man Stands" has recently gone to press and may be on the market by the end of summer.

Micken Jr. leaving Carbondale because he feels, "It's too far from everything." Micken is greatly interested in classical rhetoric and said he can do more studying in Europe where he will be closer to Rome and Athens, the start of great civilizations.

Micken said when he came to SU as chairman of the speech department in 1927, he was the fifth faculty member in the department. He said he has seen the department increase four times its size and expand its graduate program. Micken teaches survey of classical rhetoric and British public address.

Micken has taught at Montana University, Iowa State University, Northwestern University and Illinois State University before he came to SU. He said he has also kept contacts with business and professional services and served as consultant in agricultural areas regarding communication.

Ralph Micken and his wife will be living at Saint Anne's-on-Sea in northern England. Micken said he has kept a summer home there for many years.

Herbert Pott, dean of the School of Communications, will meet with the faculty of the speech department to appoint a committee of faculty members, graduate students and undergraduate students to select a new chairman for the speech department.

Remarks by 'witch' doubted by audience

by Glenn Amato
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

His opening remarks were straightforward and simple.

"I'm a witch," he said, and I am a witch.

By the end of Thursday evening's performance, the students at a School of Wicca - witchcraft, a few audience members at the show had already openly challenged the validity of the performance.

"Believe what you want," Holmes said after only one year of study. "Witches have finally begun to emerge into the open, and people are tired of popular misconceptions about the Wicca.

Witches are neither magicians nor sorcerers. Such people believe their magic does not change the course of the world. Witches are usually seen as powerful beings that can turn people in their daily lives.

Holmes, a Northwestern University graduate with a degree in education from the American University, said that as a witch, he was tired of the popular misconceptions about Wicca.

"We are the ones who have turned to the Wiccan faith," Holmes said, explaining his beliefs. "The Christian faith has become more and more conservative, and this is the one way we can come to the people who are interested.

Holmes does not claim that he is a great psychic, but he admits that he has had successful results in many cases. He claims he can help a person with his or her life, and the results are usually positive.

Holmes developed and taught "Teaching Speech," a course at SIU designed for helping teaching assistants to teach speech.

As an accredited degree program in the field of education, the course at SIU is the only one offered in the country. The class is attended by a large number of students.

Beginning classes in guitar have been offered by the School of Music during the past four years. However, instruction was by a graduate assistant and was given at "giving the fundamentals for those preparing to teach in elementary classrooms.

The appointment of John Scannan as instructor may be confirmed by the Board of Trustees depending on the board's agenda.

The class is taught by B.A. and M.A. degrees from California State University at Northridge and has even begun to teach in Spain and Italy. He has given concerts on the West Coast and has done extensive research of the late and virtuoso, ancestors of the guitar.

BEGINNING CLASSES IN GUITAR Have you taught the course in guitar in this private instruction leading to a major in music with an individual in guitar as the principal instrument, he said.

Holmes said the guitar is being popularly associated with popular music and has only recently been studied as a science in America.

College and universities will soon see some thirty assistantships where it is possible to pursue an accredited degree in this field.

Students interested in the program may contact Harold Stuman, assistant professor in music. Experienced guitarists specializing in majoring in music may also take courses under Scannan.

Stuman believes guitarists do not cancel their concepts for playing guitar.

"The Bible," he said, "is the way to your heart and to your brain. Nobody murders the people who carry the big medallions."

Weiskopf, Miller: A two-man show at Open’s final round

Troon, Scotland (AP)—Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus, seeking their fourth British Open titles, each reached 10 under par Thursday and set up a plots of $250,000 on Sunday for the British Open Golf Championship.

Weiskopf, who led the field for the first two days of this ancient championship, trailed Johnny Miller most of the day, roared back, and finally won front again with a 200 total, 10 under par on the seaside Old Course at the Troon Golf Club.

Miller, the 35-year-old who scored a major upset to win the U.S. Open a month ago, closed out his round with a 69-307.

But it was another four strokes to the next player, Bert Yancey, as the international field began to drift back. Yancey, who was seeking his first major title, had a 72 for 311.

Clemente plane overloaded

WASHINGITON (AP)— The National Transportation Safety Board said Friday the plane that carried baseball star Roberto Clemente and four other persons to their deaths in New York was overloaded and had two bad engine failures.

The board also said the plane had not been flown in four months, the flight engineers was unqualified and the co-pilot had six hours’ experience in the type of plane being flown.

Clemente, an all-star out-fielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates, died when the four-engine DC7 crashed after taking off from San Juan, Puerto Rico, on a flight to aid earthquake victims in Managua, Nicaragua.

New Midwest conference?

Chicago (AP)— The possibility of a new athletic conference involving our Midwestern universities has been discussed and hinges on the outcome of next month’s NCAA reorganization meetings.

A meeting on the matter was held recently at Western Illinois University. Other schools at ending the meeting were University of Nebraska-Omaha, University of Northern Iowa, University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, Northern Michigan University, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Eastern Illinois University and University of Illinois-Chicago.

Dick Allen to begin jogging

Chicago (AP)— Dick Allen’s hairline fracture in his left leg has healed satisfactorily, the Chicago White Sox reported Friday, but it was doubtful when the slugging first baseman will return to action.

Due to come off the 15-day disabled list following his injury June 29 at Anaheim, Calif., Allen underwent examination by Dr. Gerald Looff. Sex physicals were also done.

Dr. Looff said Allen, hurt in a first base collision with Mike Epstein of the California Angels, was progressing well but still had tenderness in the slight break below his left knee.

Allen was to begin jogging exercises in soft shoes and to continue whirlpool treatment.

Allen, batting .350 with 36 home runs and 41 RBIs, will remain on the disabled list after the minimum of 15 days until he is ready to play.

Sex manager Chuck Turner said at least he didn’t expect Allen to play before next Friday when the club is in New York for a weekend series with the Yankees.
