Carter's staff, entire cabinet ask to resign

By Frank Cormier
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's entire Cabinet and senior White House staff submitted resignation offers Tuesday in a stunning continuation of Carter's effort to revive his troubled presidency.

A formal White House announcement read to reporters by press secretary Jody Powell said Carter will review the offers "carefully and expeditiously."

One aide, who asked not to be named and who was among those affected, said he had no doubt the president would accept some of the resignation offers.

Reporters later were given authoritative, if anonymous, word that Carter would not accept resignations of his three members of his national security team: Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

A high-ranking government official, asking that he not be named, said there is no reason to believe the request for resignations from Brown and Vance was anything more than pro forma.

A source said the resignations were requested at a Cabinet meeting Tuesday morning, but it was not clear who did the asking. However, no one at the White House was willing to say that Carter personally solicited the offers to quit.

"They were offered," said one official. "... We felt it would be an appropriate step to take at this particular time."

The development was reminiscent of former President Richard M. Nixon's 1972 demand for standby resignations from all his appointees, including Cabinet members, after he won a

Man killed in Cambria

CAMBRIA (AP) — A 24-year-old Olive Branch man was shot to death by his father-in-law in Cambria after he apparently threatened his mother-in-law with a gun.

Williamson County Sheriff's officials said Robert E. Lipsey was allegedly in a hallway of the Vernon Lence home late Monday night threatening Mrs. Lence with a gun when the 72-year-old Lence came out of a bedroom and shot him with a shotgun.

Authorities said Lence told them Lipsey had broken into the house and began threatening his wife and son.

PCB leak danger uncertain

By Ray Robinson
Staff Writer

University officials discovered last summer that an unknown quantity of potentially toxic fluid leaked from a transformer in the basement of the Health Service, and have since been unsure where the substance went or how dangerous it is.

The fluid, used to cool sealed electrical transformers, is suspected to contain a highly toxic substance known as PCB, according to John Meister, director of SIU's pollution control office. Meister said research, which is still inconclusive, has linked PCB's to almost every kind of human malady except lung cancer.

Meister said stains on the basement floor of the Health Service indicated the fluid had travelled two to three feet to the building's sump. From there, it could have gone into a storm sewer, then a rivulet and finally come to rest in Campus Lake.

But Meister said he did not think the PCB's had gotten that far because, being almost twice the weight of water, they probably sank to the bottom of the sump. He also said the substance tends to become very thick, "almost like molasses in January," when exposed to air.

"It's very unlikely that any of it got beyond the sump," said Meister, "and even more so that any of it got into the lake."

Meister said he thinks the PCB's have been resting in the bottom of the sump since the leak was discovered. However, why the sump has not been inspected for the substance is uncertain.

Meister said cleaning the sump would be "very expensive, involving a whole crew of men."

But when asked about the cost of cleaning the PCB's from the sump, Harrel Lerch, building maintenance supervisor for the Physical Plant, said, "There's not a whole lot of money involved."

Jim Filla, an assistant to Lerch, said the main reason the University has delayed in removing the PCB's is that the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency had not set forth any clear guidelines governing how the substance should be handled.

Larry Ziemba, director of the EPA's Marion office, said that while disposal of PCB's is often difficult, the University could have removed the substance from the sump and stored it at any time.

Meister said the protective equipment used by workers while cleaning up the leak is still being stored in plastic-lined metal drums, awaiting disposal.

Lerch said he expected the

PCB toxic to humans

Animal studies have shown that PCB's (full name polychlorinated biphenyls) can cause abnormal changes in numerous organs, including the liver, kidney, adrenal gland, and spleen, along with the skin, chromosomes and eyes, according to a report by the Illinois Institute for Environmental Quality.

The report lists leaks from sealed transformers as one of the leading causes of PCB discharge into the environment. It recommends that all such electrical units be removed and replaced with ones that do not use a PCB coolant.

Through a process known as "biomagnification," PCB's released into the environment can actually increase in concentration as higher levels of the food chain become contaminated. An extremely simple example of this would be a small fish becoming contaminated through the water, several bigger fish eating five each of the small fish, and a human eating the big fish.

PCB's can also pose a danger to humans through skin contact.

Comparatively small amounts of PCB's can be highly potent. Meister said a company in North Carolina decided to dispose of about 100 gallons of PCB's by having a truck spray it along back roads. That, Meister said, resulted in the contamination of 200 miles of road shoulder.

Successor named

Somoza resigns, flies to Florida in exile

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza bowed to seven weeks of Sandinista guerrilla rebellion and flew to exile in Florida Tuesday.

But fresh fighting broke out when Somoza's successor, a close friend, took charge and apparently decided to cling to power.

The successor, Francisco Urcuyo, was elected by Nicaragua's legislature after midnight as Somoza prepared to fly out of Nicaragua.

At first, he was expected to hand over quickly to the rebels. Thousands in rebel-held areas danced all night when the news of Somoza's resignation spread, and the State Department said in Washington it hoped for a new beginning in relations with Nicaragua.

Then reports spread of Urcuyo's intention to retain power. Diplomatic sources in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital where rebel junta members waited to fly back to Managua, said Urcuyo had let it be known he intended to finish out Somoza's term — meaning he would stay in power until 1981.

Outside rebel-held Masaya, reporters saw a Sherman tank, two armored cars and artillery lash out at guerrilla positions. Government sources reported more fighting in Sapoa and other towns in southern Nicaragua.

Instead of offering a ceasefire, which junta members were reported seeking, Urcuyo went on the radio for 10 minutes and said: "I urge all irregular forces to lay down their arms for the benefit of the country."

Urcuyo's new commander of the Nicaraguan national guard, Lt. Col. Federico Mejia, issued a statement read over national radio that said all officers and soldiers should redouble efforts "in the current fight."

By mid-day Tuesday, four of the five members of a provisional junta named by the Sandinistas had made plans to fly from neighboring Costa Rica to Managua, accompanied by other Latin American diplomats to guarantee their safety. Whether those plans would be carried out in the absence of a ceasefire was unclear.

Sandinista sources in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital, said all Sandinista forces in Nicaragua were alerted to stand by and fight if necessary. They said more than 2,000 heavily armed guerrillas had infiltrated Managua during the previous past 24 hours, ready to fight.

Junta spokesman Manuel Espinoza said, "Urcuyo will be responsible for the bloodbath that is going to follow if he does not turn power over to the new government."

The United States, which for more than 40 years supported the Somoza dynasty, earlier Tuesday promised to expand an airlift to feed Nicaragua's hungry.

University employees to receive pay hike

By Jacqui Koszerek
Staff Writer

University employees will see the result of the 7 percent faculty and staff payhike approved by Gov. Thompson on their Sept. 1 paychecks, Warren Buffum, associate vice-president for financial affairs, said Tuesday.

For most full-time faculty and administrative staff employees, the salary increases will range from a minimum of $75 to a maximum of $325 monthly, he said.

However, since the Board of Trustees approved in June a salary increase formula based on job performance, some of those employees may receive increases less than the minimum amount or greater than the maximum amount, Buffum said.

Don Wilson, budget office director, said civil service workers will also receive merit pay increases. He said a minimum increase was established by the board for each of the 26 civil service job classifications. Beyond that minimum increase, which was set at $95 monthly for the highest level and $35 for the lowest classification, pay increases will be based on job performance.

According to the board's guidelines, the minimum increase for civil service workers can be withheld if "job performance is less than satisfactory."

New or renewed contracts for graduate assistants will include a 7 percent salary increase, since the board's guidelines provide them with an increase based only on the percentage of salary-increase funds appropriated by the state.

Student worker wages are not affected by the board's revised salary increase formula. Student wages will continue to be based on the minimum wage level, according to the guidelines.

Buffum said salary increases for each faculty and staff member would be set as soon as department chairpersons send recommended increase amounts "up through the channels of command."

He said that chairpersons received salary recommendations from the appropriate supervisors, or they made the recommendation themselves.

"The recommendation is then reviewed by the dean. From the dean it goes to the appropriate vice-president. The vice-president carries it forth to President Lesar for final approval," Buffum said.

Wilson said that a "letter of justification" must accompany any salary recommendation that is less than or greater than the $75 to $325 range established by the board.

Tests reveal high level of pollutants in Cedar Lake

By Cindy Michaelson
Staff Writer

Laboratory tests conducted by the city last week of water quality at Cedar Lake's Lilac Lagoon showed extreme amounts of pollutants entering the lake, disputing reports from a landowner there that pollution of the lake had stopped.

Public Works Director Bill Royd told the Carbondale City Council Monday night that allowable levels of several types of pollutants are being far surpassed in the water of Lilac Lagoon, which is the point of entry for effluent from the Union Hill subdivision. The lagoon drains into Cedar Lake.

As a result of the continuing pollution, the council authorized City Attorney John Womick to "vigorously pursue" further legal action against the developer of Union Hills, Egon Kamarasy. The council also authorized Womick to begin litigation against individual homeowners in the event that a letter of warning from Mayor Hans Fischer fails to bring sufficient corrections.

Kamarasy, who is also an assistant professor of political science at SIU, has been embroiled in a five-year controversy with the city over proper sewage disposal in the area. Sewage from homes in the subdivision flows into two lagoons and eventually drains into Cedar Lake, which is the city's main water supply.

At last week's council meeting, City Attorney John Womick told the council he had been informed by Kamarasy that the polluting had stopped. At that time, Womick said he had not personally inspected conditions at Lilac Lagoon.

Boyd reported that the lab tests showed a chloroform count of 91,000 parts per million, while the allowable limit set by the Environmental Protection Agency is 100 parts per million.

Councilwoman Helen Westberg "regrettably" moved for action against individual homeowners after City Manager Carroll Fry pointed out that the homeowners are "intimately involved in the suit and will probably put whatever pressure they can on Mr. Kamarasy" as a result.

According to the terms of the letter from Fischer, the homeowners will have 30 days to comply.

In a letter to the council,

Womick said that two homeowners are in the process of filing suit against Kamarasy "in order to force him to comply with the contractual agreements he made with those homeowners when they originally purchased their property."

Increase in sewage rate OK'd

By Andrew Zlaner
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council approved a sewage rate increase Monday, the first in seven years, which will raise SIU's sewage bill by 92 percent, or about $188,000.

SIU discharges about 1 million gallons of sewage per day, according to John Meister, environmental and safety engineer for SIU. Under the old rate structure, which allowed for volume discounts, SIU paid about 46 cents per thousand gallons. Meister said. The new rate will require the school to pay a flat rate of $1.09 per thousand gallons.

According to Clarence Dougherty, director of campus services, the increase will be "difficult to deal with, especially since it comes in midyear."

He said present utility bills exceed the utility budget, and that funds were inadequate already.

"We have increased the utility budget, but rising costs have cut into those funds," Dougherty said.

He said some services will have to suffer as a result of the sewage increase.

"Routine maintenance such as yard work and painting will have to be cut back, as well as preventive maintenance. We hope that personnel won't have to be cut back. We'll try to avoid layoffs. But when a job becomes vacant through attrition, we just won't fill it."

He said further personnel cutbacks may have to be made, but the full effects of the sewage increase will not be known for some time.

SIU won't be the only user affected, though. Residential users will face a 30 percent increase. According to Meister, the city had no choice but to approve the increase, because of a federal law passed in 1972.

The new rate, called a basic user rate, makes each person and industry pay a fair share for sewage costs, Meister said. He explained that the costs of sewage disposal systems are very large, and the federal government will no longer use taxpayer's money so that industries can discharge sewage at discount rates.

The new rate is necessary because of a $1.027-million grant received by the city in 1976 to build an outfall sewer system on the Northwest side, according to City Manager Carroll Fry.

The city is required to recover the federal share of the outfall sewer. All funds generated by residential users will be used to pay for the Northwest project. Of the money recovered from industrial users, 50 percent will be returned to the federal government.

Road budget approved

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Calling it a "distressingly inadequate" budget for the state's transportation system, Gov. James Thompson announced Tuesday he has signed a blueprint for road and public transportation projects in Illinois.

"I am disturbed with this program from the General Assembly and the people of Illinois should not be satisfied with it either," said Thompson in a statement issued by his office. The governor is vacationing this week at his summer cabin in Wisconsin.

But Thompson slashed $139 million from the measure approved by lawmakers, saying he was putting it in line with available revenues.

State transportation Secretary John D. Kramer also described the budget as woefully short of what the administration says is needed to bolster Illinois' deteriorating road network.

"It is not a very happy assignment to implement the program as passed by the General Assembly," Kramer told a news conference.

The Legislature sent Thompson a program with barely more than half the amount this fiscal year in new road and bridge construction and repair projects as last year's amount.

Situation wanted for unemployed dictator

The Fair Play for Somoza Committee, of which I am honorary chairman, is furious with the Sandanista rebels for having demanded the good general be fired. Whose dictator do they think he is?

For more than 40 years, the United States has devoted considerable time, energy and money to installing and supporting various Somozas as dictators of Nicaragua. And now these Nicaraguans want to heave out the last of them without so much as a by-your-leave from us.

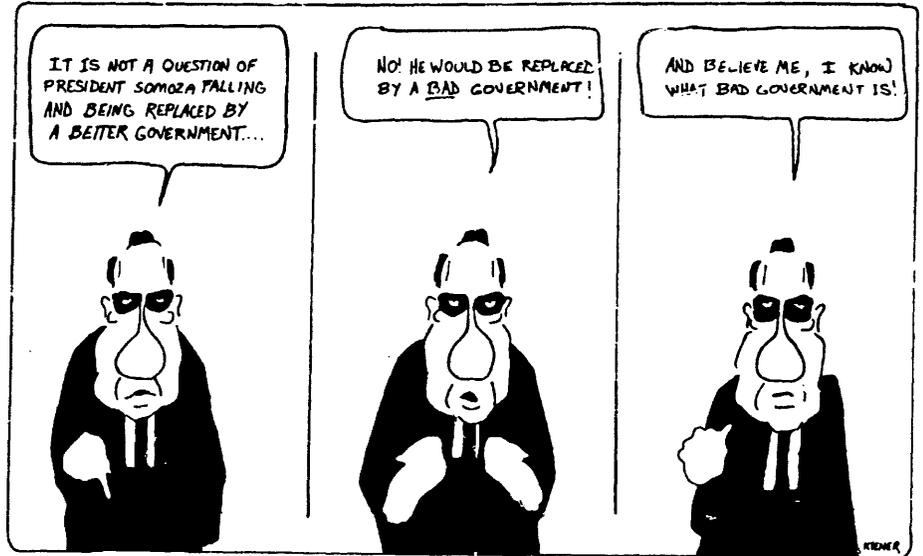

And when we helpfully tell them whom we would like to put in office next, they practically spit in our eye. Talk about ingratitude!

Not only have appeals to their sense of fairness fallen on deaf ears, but their stony hearts have not been touched by Mr. Somoza's sorry plight. Where's he going to go? What's he going to do?

"I've got my education. I might find a job some place," he told reporters the other day, obviously without much hope. "What can a retired general, a retired president do?"

What indeed? After all, Mr. Somoza is 53 years old. It's most difficult for any man that age to change careers—even those with specific skills such as selling magazines or theater ushering. But dictators, however, are totally unprepared to face the real world. Look at the shah of Iran. He's been out of work for six months and no one's even offered him a job as a disco dance instructor.

The fact is that dictators have few marketable assets in today's employment market. True, Mr. Somoza can throw a good parade, but that's spotty work. He does have a big wardrobe of fancy uniforms and he is bilingual. So he might qualify as a doorman in Spanish Harlem, if ever such an opportunity comes up.

By most accounts, he's learned how to draw people out, one way or another, and get them to talk openly about their innermost secrets. But we have too many psychiatrists already. And it's doubtful he knows how to drive a cab.

You'd think his expertise at milking millions out of Washington for planes, tanks and guns would win him a high-level position with a top U.S. defense firm. Unfortunately, they hire only retired American generals.

So here's poor Mr. Somoza. He's devoted his entire life to quashing uprisings, throwing people in jail, silencing opposition, shooting whoever requires shooting and otherwise excellently performing the duties of a dictator—seven days a week, year in and year out with not one iota of sick leave, no paid vacations and now not a single retirement benefit.

Well, he's our dictator. So I suppose it's up to us to find him honest work. Seeing he's fit only for dictating, we'll simply have to look for another spot for him to dictate over.

It won't be easy, though. Seems like there are fewer countries every passing decade who want one of our dictators. It's hard to see why. They're among the best in the business. —Copyright Chronicle Publishing Co. 1979

GSC wants to fill committees

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

Graduate Student Council President Gary Brown says he has a sure-fire way to get graduate and professional students involved in SIU.

"If students complain of being alienated from university policy making—they're incorrect," Brown said, looking over a list of more than 30 GSC committee positions that need to be filled.

"I am convinced that the University really wants student input," Brown said. "There have been many examples where a graduate student has changed the minds of a committee."

Brown said that Lloyd Worley, a GSC member and recent graduate, who sat on the Parking and Traffic Committee for the past year, was influential in obtaining blue sticker parking for handicapped students at the red sticker price.

"The GSC didn't think it was fair to penalize handicapped students who must park in blue sticker parking," Brown said. Brown said students need to get involved not only to help the GSC, but to help themselves.

Students can receive personal benefits by gaining experience working with administration and seeing how the University works, he said.

Brown emphasized that all committees are important, but that there are a few that badly need representatives.

"I'm looking for someone who will sit on the Student Activities Council," Brown said. "I would like the person to be around for a couple of years, so that travel expenses to meetings would be paid for by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, instead of by the students.

Brown said the position is important because this is the student's direct voice to the IBHE.

Brown is also looking for students to serve on the Fee Allocation Board because the funds that allow many graduate students to deliver their papers at conferences are provided by GSC. He said these conferences are a good way of obtaining national recognition for SIU.

"We have many students doing first-rate work. We want to provide the financial incentive and recognition to get them to conferences so students can receive the credit due them."

Blood drive gets 328 pints; region needs 750 pints daily

By Maureen Foster
Student Writer

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile collected 328 pints of blood, says Robert McGrath, president of the SIU Annuitants Association.

The SIU Annuitants retired faculty and staff members, sponsored the blood drive, which was held in the Student Center last week.

The Bloodmobile collected 369 pints of blood during the January drive, McGrath said.

"Naturally, there is a decrease in the summer participation because there are fewer students and faculty on campus," he added.

McGrath, a retired political science professor, said the group sponsors the blood drive three times a year, with the third drive set for September.

"We expect the September blood drive to be better because of the increase of students," McGrath said.

McGrath said the St. Louis region of the American Red Cross provided the professional staff of nine volunteer nurses for the drive.

"There were also 60 annuitant volunteers working four different shifts," McGrath said.

McGrath commended the students and faculty for participating in the blood drive and also implored donors to "come back again."

The Red Cross Mobile Unit Supervisor, Donna Walla, said the blood collected will last up to 21 days and will be distributed to 14 hospitals in the area.

Graduate speech director returns from Canadian psychodrama centre seminar

By Karla Woodsides
Student Writer

Thomas Pace, director of graduate studies for the speech communication department, recently returned from a six-day seminar in Canada concerning psychodrama.

Psychodrama, formulated by Dr. J. L. Moreno, is the expression of intellectual and emotional processes by not only oral communication, but also by movement and gestures, Pace said.

The seminar, held June 22-28, was sponsored by the Toronto Centre for the Study of Psychodrama and Sociometry. Pace said.

The Centre, located in Huntsville, Ontario, has a full-time faculty and offers a variety of seminars throughout the year, Pace said. It provides training and certification for persons interested in action methods of psychodrama, he said.

During 10-hour days, Pace said, he received training in the staging and directing of real life situations and also worked in role playing, role reversal and role taking.

The training he received focused on the expanding of awareness—helping people, through role playing, to be able to better interact with themselves and others, he said.

Pace said that he will use what he has learned at the seminar in interpersonal communication courses at SIU.

Also attending this seminar were nine other people from countries such as Switzerland, Australia, Canada and the United States, representing professions dealing with medicine, social work and education, he added.

Engineers needed, enrollment rises

By Jean Du Bravec
Student Writer

Fall enrollment of the Department of Technology is expected to be well over 1,000, says chairman Leon Dunning, an increase of about 50 students.

While last fall's enrollment was 956, Dunning believes that the increased popularity of the program is due to the high demand for graduates in the technology field and the outstanding teaching provided by the department.

Dunning said that the Technology Department here at SIU is one of the largest departments on campus and its enrollment now is the third largest in the nation for institutions offering four-year technology programs.

The increasing interest and enrollment into the field of technology can also be noted for the average monthly starting salaries of the graduates, Dunning said.

The average monthly salaries for the spring 1979 graduates for each of the specializations are as follows: civil engineering, $1,323; electrical engineering, $1,520; mechanical engineering, $1,490; industrial technology, $1,485; and mining technology, $1,679.

"These average monthly starting salaries are well above the national average," Dunning said.

The department curriculum is thought to be one of the best programs in the nation, and has served as a model for institutions planning similar programs, Dunning said.

"The strongest factor affecting the educational mission of the Department of Technology is most certainly the outstanding faculty," Dunning said.

Faculty members hold academic degrees from over 40 different institutions, and many faculty have extensive industrial and governmental experience in their related academic fields, Dunning said.

Campus Briefs

The Counseling Center is sponsoring a two-hour workshop titled, "The Art of Juggling: The Two Career Family." The workshop will meet from noon to 2 p.m. Thursday in the Counseling Center, Woody Hall, Wing A, Room 302. No pre-registration is required.

The Saluki Saddle Club will meet Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Activities Room C of the Student Center.

Julia King Muller has been appointed dean of student affairs at the University of Missouri-St. Louis following a national search that attracted 112 candidates. Muller is the first woman to hold the position. She is succeeding Conney Kimbo, who accepted a position as vice chancellor for student affairs at the University of Pittsburgh.

The Career Planning and Placement Center will offer a cooperative education program for sophomores and juniors in industrial technology for the fall semester. Students interested in the program may contact Minnie Minnito, Career Planning and Placement, Woody Hall, Wing B, Room 204, or call 43-2391.

Study shows religious cults may be bad for health

CHICAGO (AP) — The religious youth cults can be dangerous to the health of their converts and often lead to emotional and physical problems, says a Massachusetts physician.

Dr. John G. Clark Jr., a Weston, Mass., physician writing in the July 20 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, estimated that between 3 million and 10 million persons are involved in such cults in the United States.

In such groups, he says, "there is an inherent danger, from their techniques and from their doctrines of leviancy, that they can be uniformly absolutist and intolerant, polarized and provocative, simplistic and certain," Clark said.

Clark said that he studied more than 60 persons in all stages of involvement in cults and found that 60 percent "have been substantially and chronically disturbed and unhappy for many years."

"The new youth cults, though usually self-styled as religious for purposes of First Amendment privileges, are increasingly dangerous to the health of their converts and menacing to their critics," he warned.

"Whether political or religious, their belief systems are uniformly absolutist and intolerant, polarized and provocative, simplistic and certain," Clark said.

Clark said that cultists who showed no signs of mental or physical stress probably were susceptible to conversion either because of "aggressive manipulation by a proselytizer or the result of a normal painful crisis of maturation."

The physician reported that among "the most destructive effects" of cult membership is a belief in magic, including faith healing, and a distrust of physicians and modern medicine.

This leads to a failure to seek aid for medical problems. He said many physicians have seen in emergency rooms cases of untreated diabetic cases and broken bones that had been "prayed over."

He said they also have seen infectious and deficiency diseases that result from unclean communal living.

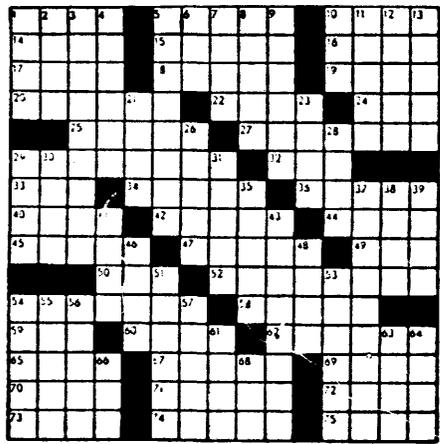

poor nutrition and exposure.

Problems growing out of emotional disturbances ensuing from cult involvement, he said, include drastic personality changes in which converts often seem "drab and dreamy," somewhat expressionless and lacking mirth.

Cars set aside; flock adopts bikes

LOCKPORT (AP) — The Rev. Charles J. Meyer has asked his parishioners to leave their cars at home and ride a bicycle to church next Sunday, which he has designated as "Ecology Sunday."

Meyer, pastor of the First United Methodist Church of Lockport, said Sunday: "Enjoy the environment, save some gas and eliminate some pollution — walk or ride a bike to church next Sunday."

Woodsman builds his dream

QUAWKA (AP)—Make no mistake. That portrait on the wall of the old cove in buckskins with an antique gun in his grip -- that's a picture of the last pioneer.

"That's him all right, like something out of the last century," said Butch Little at the bar. "There's a madness that drives that man, a pure madness. He lives in a world all his own."

The day they hung the portrait of J.J. Comer on the wall at the Candlewick tavern, J.J. himself drove in from the woods, from his world to theirs, to talk about the fort he was building.

It would be a magnificent frontier fort with massive stockade walls, two-story blockhouses, stables and rugged out buildings. It would cover the area of two football fields, a colossal undertaking.

"This is a pioneer dream," he said, and although everybody knew that a project of that size was impossible for one man, J.J. was resolute. He would complete it during his lifetime, he pledged.

So they hung a portrait of J.J. Comer by the bar as a kind of tribute to the frontier virtues of independence, pigheadedness and blind optimism. That's J.J.

"I shoot black powder," he said. "I throw tomahawks and wear buckskins. My dad was a timberman and I'm an outdoorsman living the way I want, and what I want is that fort."

Five years ago, at age 46, he bought five acres of land near the Mississippi River north of Quawka and he began building his pioneer dream, one log at a time.

So far, he has completed one blockhouse and a section of stockade wall, dug a well and erected half of his church. It's not much, but it's a start.

"The average person doesn't understand how long it takes to cut a log, strip it and build something," he said, pointing to a section of pristine wilderness.

"That's where the clubhouse will be. Here I've started my log church. It's going to be a working church, too, with six vines held regular."

J.J. is a lanky man with a long, ruddy face and enormous sideburns, and when he talks he throws his arms out in all directions, especially when he is talking about pioneer history, which is what he talks about best.

"The Sac and Fox Indians lived in this territory," he said. "Lincoln came here during the Black Hawk War when they wanted to run Chief Black Hawk out of Illinois. They finally did. The totem pole I carved over there is my version of saying the Sac and Fox don't live here anymore."

When he is not working on his fort, J.J. paints stripes on roads for the state highway department. He lives alone -- he's divorced -- in an aluminum mobile home, but is quick to say it will go after he constructs quarters fit enough at the fort.

He envisions weekend rendezvous with scores of muzzleloaders, antique gun fanciers like himself, gathering around roaring fires and swapping stories of a long-gone frontier. Even now, he says, he can smell the wood at night and see the buckskin and hear the thump of tomahawks thrown at 30 paces, even though there's much to do, too much.

Beauty Pageant to be held in Marion

By Paula Walker
Staff Writer

Miss Southern Illinois, who could go on to become Miss America of 1980, will be chosen August 4 at the Marion Civic Center. The pageant will begin at 8 p.m.

The winner of the Southern Illinois Pageant will enter the Miss Illinois Pageant the third week of July, 1980, in Aurora. The woman selected as Miss Illinois will compete for the title of Miss America during Labor Day week of 1980 in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Contestants must be between 17 and 26 years old and high school graduates as of Labor Day. They must never have been married or had a marriage annulled, be of good moral character and be a U.S. citizen.

Each contestant in four pageants will compete in four competitions. These include a seven minute private interview with a five-person panel of state judges, a two-and-a-half minute talent presentation, and a swim suit and evening gown competition.

Personality, poise, beauty and talent are the major requirements. Judging will be based on the same criteria considered at the Miss Illinois and Miss America pageants. The judges are qualified people from the state and national pageant system.

The Miss America Pageant Scholarship Foundation is the largest scholarship program for women in the aforementioned age bracket. Miss Illinois 1979, who will be chosen July 21 in Aurora, will win a $3,500 scholarship and an additional $1,000 scholarship for participation in the Miss America Pageant.

Local civic and social organizations are urged to sponsor candidates and encourage young women to enter the pageant. Additional pageant information can be obtained through Dot and Lee Chamness, co-directors of the Miss Southern Illinois Pageant.

Tickets for the pageant, which will be $3 for adults and $1.50 for children, may be obtained through the contestants or at the door the night of the pageant.

A talent preview will be held at 7 p.m., July 27, at the University Mall in Carbondale.

Christie play scheduled

Agatha Christie's thriller "Ten Little Indians," the third Summer Playhouse presentation of the season, will be presented Thursday through Sunday at 8 p.m. at the University Theatre in the Communications Building.

The plot centers around ten people who accept invitations to a weekend in a weird country house without being sure who invited them. The sender's name on the invitations has been mysteriously, illegibly scrawled.

Nearly every one of the guests is killed for having so readily accepted the call: the nerve specialist who performed operations under the influence of alcohol; the spinster who drove a servant girl to suicide; and the detective who caused an innocent man to die.

Book to help instructors with problems of opera

By Paula Walker
Staff Writer

More than 700 excerpts from 100 operas, arranged by voice categories, are contained in the book "Opera Scenes for Class and Stage," by Mary Elaine and Robert Wallace (University Press, $17.50).

The 308-page book, which is to be published Aug. 16, was developed to aid directors in the selection of appropriate excerpts for the available cast and in fitting the performance to the desired length of time. The book, organized and refined by the Wallaces after more than 40 years experience, can solve many practical directing dilemmas.

For instance, if a director has two excellent sopranos and a tenor who should not attempt a major part, the director can, by turning to the table of voice categories, select from those scenes a relatively simple tenor role with the burden of the singing falling to the sopranos.

For maximum utility, the Wallaces provided four indexes in the book: index of Operas; Index of Arias and Ensembles; Index of Composers; and Index to Editions of Piano-Vocal Scores.

IAC makes money recommendations

By Tim Brodd
Staff Writer

The celebrated "tailgate" parties held prior to football games by SIU officials last season may become standard if the University follows suggestions from the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee.

The committee approved a report July 12 that recommended ways to improve the efficiency of athletic department spending and ways to increase funds at SIU.

The report by two IAC subcommittees was sent to George Mace, vice president for university relations and administrator in charge of intercollegiate athletics, for consideration. However, the IAC, made up of 13 student, faculty and campus members, is only an advisory body and has no actual policy power.

The IAC is primarily concerned about the large deficits in the men's and women's athletic budget requests for the 1979-80 fiscal year. Men's director Gale Sayers requested $1.9 million and women's director Charlotte West asked for $800,000. If Mace approves the budgets, men's athletics would operate $401,066 in the red and the women's department would operate under a $371,499 deficit.

IAC chairman Willard Klimstra, professor in biology, formed both subcommittees in February for studying ways to cut expenses and increase funds.

In its report, the efficiency subcommittee called for a re-examination and clearer expression of SIU's philosophy regarding intercollegiate athletics.

It recommended the consolidation of the men's and women's athletic administrative staffs, coaches, trainers, public relations people and fund-raising programs. It also suggested the possibility of coordinating the men's and women's programs in recruiting, scheduling, conference affiliation and training.

The funding subcommittee was more explicit in its findings. It said it appears that the school's previous system of governing intercollegiate athletics has been ineffective.

It also said for such athletics to be successful at SIU, they must be viewed as a university and community activity rather than only a university relations activity.

To raise more money for SIU, the subcommittee recommended that beer be sold at outdoor athletic events, and pre- and post-game events be organized as tailgating parties be organized to make the events "fun."

It also suggested the creation of a chief fund-raiser for intercollegiate athletics. Another recommendation was the nomination of a prominent alumnus with extensive business contacts throughout Illinois to act as chairman of an Intercollegiate Athletics Network of Businessmen and Professionals for identifying new revenue sources.

The subcommittee said more advertising is needed; local media coverage hasn't been adequate in promoting SIU athletes. It also said a better public relations image for SIU athletics is needed throughout the state.

In addition, it recommended that Mace's office attempt to secure a basketball television network with either other Missouri Valley Conference schools or corporate advertisers to create an exclusive SIU network. It suggested that men's teams be encouraged to host special events, such as NCAA tournaments, and that a proposal to join a women's athletic conference be approved.

Gottfried enjoys challenge of the recruiting trail

By Mike Monson
Student Writer

When former Marquette basketball coach Al McGuire retired from the game in the spring of 1977, he listed recruiting as the primary reason. "I got tired of chasing after tall, skinny kids in gym shorts," he is reported to have said.

For SIU head basketball coach Joe Gottfried, however, recruiting is one of the pleasures of the game. "I love it," he said. "I really enjoy watching the summer league games, picking out the players' skills and dealing with the parents and coaches. Maybe the fact that I've only been doing it for seven years has something to do with it."

Gottfried and his assistant coaches Mike Riley and Rob Spivery are getting a chance to pursue their pleasure. They left July 17th on a two-week recruiting trip that will take them to Chicago, Pennsylvania and Georgia.

Gottfried personally will be traveling to Chicago and its suburbs with Spivery to observe the numerous summer league games that are going on now. Later, he will move on to a Pennsylvania basketball camp to speak on the topic of "Athletes for a Better Education." In addition, Gottfried will be observing the hundreds of top high school prospects attending the camp.

Gottfried approaches recruiting as a year-round activity, and summer is one of his busiest and most important periods. "Summer is one of the key recruiting periods," Gottfried explained. "This is when we watch the upcoming high school seniors in the summer leagues and make our evaluations of whom we're going to try to recruit."

After evaluating the players that have the skills the Salukis need, Gottfried initiates direct personal contact in the fall. He sees the months of September and November as being crucial in persuading a player to come to SIU.

"These are the months when we're visiting the players in their homes and when the players are coming to SIU to check out the campus," Gottfried said. "This is the best time for both of us because neither of our seasons have started, and the pressure to sign a letter of intent isn't so great."

The November through April period is the next recruiting stage that Gottfried described. "Although we're busy with our team, these are the months when we're maintaining contact with the players that we've already established a relationship with during the summer and fall."

Contact is maintained with top prospects through letters, phone calls, post cards from the road and visits to the prospect's games by the assistant coaches or graduate assistants. An NCAA rule limiting direct face-to-face contact between a school's representatives and a player to three "bumps," or meetings, necessitates such indirect contact.

Gottfried laughingly described the activity of an ambitious graduate assistant on last year's staff. "We had a graduate assistant last year named Chris Wolfe who was so busy helping us with recruiting that he saw us play a grand total of four games," he said.

Information about which high school seniors bear watching is obtained through a growing network of unpaid scouts and through the use of two weekly scouting services available to all colleges for a fee.

Gottfried relies more heavily upon the two scouting services, Dade Bones and B-C Service, in determining whom to recruit. "These two services come out every week," he explained, "and they grade between 400 to 500 seniors on an ABC type of scale. Generally, there's little discrepancy between the two. If a player gets an A from both services, you can be sure he's a blue-chipper."

Gottfried said that he would like to rely less on the services and more upon a network of scouts. But he's only beginning his second season as head coach at SIU; he hasn't had enough time to build up an extensive network.

"It takes time to build up a good network," Gottfried said. "We've got a good scout in Peoria, a couple of good ones around Chicago and several in Ohio (where Gottfried coached at Ashland College before coming to SIU), but it will take four to five years before we can get several top-quality scouts around the country whose opinions we can trust."

"That's why the basketball camps we're holding at SIU this summer are so important," he continued. "This is where we meet the high school coaches who will help us out when they get or see a good player."

One plus that Gottfried uses extensively in recruiting are the abilities of SIU Athletic Director Gale Sayers. "In recruiting, you always try to emphasize your strong points," he said. "We use Gale extensively. In fact, I believe that Gale talked to every one of the seven players we signed this year."

SIU's major recruiting coup this year probably was the signing of 6-11 junior Rod Camp from under the nose of Lefty Drissell of Maryland University.

Gottfried described how he persuaded Camp to come to SIU instead of one of the other 40 schools that were actively recruiting him. "In Rod's case, we probably spent more time with his family than we did with Rod," he said. "We explained to his family that we felt SIU was a good school, both academically and athletically, where Rod would be able to play extensively in his final two years. We told them that we felt that we could give Rod the direction he needed, and they agreed."

Determining who has influence with the sought-after recruit is the key to successful recruiting, according to Gottfried.

"The influence of the family isn't always as important as it was in Rod's case," he said. "Sometimes the most important factor is the player's high school coach. That's what makes recruiting so interesting. You've always got to get to the heartbeat of the situation."

Poll: Public agrees with Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans agree with President Carter that the nation faces a crisis of confidence and that the world is ensnared in an energy crisis, a new Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

But most of the public is not yet ready to say Carter is a strong leader as the United States faces the quagmire of energy shortages, continuing inflation and national malaise. The poll, taken Monday after Carter's speech to the nation

Sunday, found the president's job rating essentially unchanged from that found at the first of May. Americans, deeply worried about inflation and the economy, still rate Carter's efforts at the lowest levels of his administration.

Carter's speech Sunday was a report to the country on what he heard and learned at the "domestic summit" at Camp David, Md., and the unveiling of his initiatives to deal with the energy crisis.

"I want to talk to you right now about a fundamental threat to American democracy," Carter told the nation in his nationally televised speech. "It is a crisis of confidence. It is a crisis that strikes at the very heart, soul and spirit of our national will.

The AP-NBC News poll taken at the end of April and the first of May found almost identical ratings, — 26 percent excellent or good, 52 percent only fair, 23 percent poor and 2 percent not sure.

JFK murder conspiracy probable

By Jim Adams
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy was the victim of a probable murder conspiracy that possibly can be traced to an individual organized crime figure or a small underworld group, the House assassinations committee concluded in its final report Tuesday.

It is possible that individual organized crime leader or a small combination of leaders might have participated in a conspiracy" in the Kennedy assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, the now-defunct 12-member panel concluded.

The committee's final report, culminating more than two years of study and a host of hearings, also concluded a conspiracy was behind the April 4, 1968 assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The report also said there is "substantial evidence to establish the existence of a St. Louis-based conspiracy to f.nance the assassination" of the famed civil rights leader.

But it also said that while investigators raised the possibility of conspiracies in both the Kennedy and King cases, they were unable to positively identify the conspirators.

Three members of the committee dissented from its finding of probable conspiracy in the Kennedy case.

The final report conformed to the preliminary finding.

Danger from PCB leak unknown

sump to be drained and cleaned sometime during the upcoming semester break.

Meister said the cost of testing Campus Lake for PCB's was determined last year to be $600 to $700.

"It doesn't seem like a lot of money," said Meister, "but we made the administration aware of the problem when the leak was discovered and we decided the risks just weren't that great."

Vice President for Campus Services Clarence Dougherty, Meister's superior, was not available for comment this week.

"We'll eventually run our tests," said Meister. "Probably sometime during this fiscal year."

Another fact that remains undetermined is the concentration of PCB's in the transformer fluid.

"We're going on the assumption that it's the highest concentration (500 parts per million) until we know otherwise," said Meister.

Asked what could be done if any of the PCB's were found in the lake, Meister replied, "If you can answer that, you've got a job with the EPA. There's just no good way to remove them."

—Frank Moore, the president's chief congressional lobbyist, may be moved to a new position, perhaps on the campaign.

Carter's staff, cabinet offer resignations

landslide re-election victory. In the end, four Cabinet resignations were accepted by Nixon.

According to sources, Carter was given the resignation offers Tuesday morning during a two-hour Cabinet meeting and at a separate hour-long session with his senior White House staff.

The offers were submitted by all presidential assistants and special assistants, including such White House luminaries as Powell and key Carter adviser Hamilton Jordan.

Also offering to leave were a number of officials who normally meet with the Cabinet, including United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young and Middle East peace negotiator Robert Strauss.

James T. McIntyre, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said he, too, had offered to resign. "Yes, it's true," he said. The staff of Carter's wife, Rosalynn, also submitted resignations, but Vice President Walter Mondale's staff did not.

Although he often sits in on Cabinet meetings, CIA Director Stansfield Turner was reported to have been unaffected by the development.

Previous speculation about possible Cabinet changes has centered on Energy Secretary

James R. Schlesinger, who said earlier Tuesday that he had told Carter weeks ago that he planned to resign "well before" the start of the 1980 presidential primaries.

Other unconfirmed reports have said:

—Gerald Rafshoon, who did Carter's media work in the 1976 campaign and was brought to the White House to help lift the president's sagging image, might leave to work in Carter's re-election effort.
