Budget 'tools' to keep state out of the red

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — By signing his name, Gov. James R. Thompson Wednesday gained two powerful weapons, he hopes will keep the state's $1 billion budget out of the red this fall.

The Republican governor said his plan is considered crucial by the administration in its budget-balancing effort during the fiscal year that begins July 1. Both bills were signed during a news conference during the Illinois General Assembly's waning hours two weeks ago.

One measure delays for a year $1 million in state welfare payments to hospitals that treat the poor.

The other bill, drafted by some lawmakers to be Thompson's No. 1 request of the just-ended special session, gives the governor broad new powers to dip into proceeds of the state's planned lottery and other sources and use them to balance the budget.

Thompson said he could use the money during the Illinois General Assembly's last session.

Thompson's budget office expects the General Fund to run $1 billion in the next year from state income, sales, utility and other taxes, federal aid, lottery sales and other sources.

The fund pays basic, day-to-day state expenses including payroll for 150,000 state employees.

Jeffers, a native of Mount Carmel, said she did not know whether she's won yet but kept her chances increased on Saturday night when the top 10 contestants were announced.

Jeffers is one of 28 who qualified for the next round of pageant which will be held in Chicago later this month.

Jeffers said that she was prepared for the pageant for the last 10 months.

"I've done as much as I can," she said, "but I've never made it into the top 10." She added that she was happy with her place in the competition.

Jeffers' family is also very supportive of her efforts, said her mother, Sandra Jeffers.

"She's very proud of her daughter," Jeffers' mother said, "and she's always happy to hear how Jeffers is doing in the pageant."
Ira D. White; absent for Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was the question in power. Saddam Hussein, said the Baghdad government and to topple the regime of President Saddam Hussein, said the sources, who asked to remain anonymous. "The Iranians not only want their pound of flesh in revenge for Iraq's invasion of Iran 22 months ago, but they obviously want to humiliate Hussein and perhaps see him replaced by a fundamentalist regime," said one specialist.

News Analysis

A major question in the minds of U.S. analysts is whether the Iraqi forces, which were beaten back by Iranian territory they conquered, will "pull up their socks" and fight effectively on their home ground. According to American intelligence specialists, the Iranians have a clear edge in motivation, including what was described as the falsification of revolutionary guards who threw themselves at the Iraqis in human-wave attacks. The Iraqis, as the other hand, were accused as inept and badly led fighters, the sources said of the performance earlier in the war.

Both the U.S. and Iraq are likely to be hostile to the United States. U.S. analysts said the American state in the war at the upper end of the Persian Gulf is in the impact its outcome will have on the security of U.S.-supported, Arab regimes in the region, including Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

"There is worry that a victorious Iran might then turn on Persian Gulf countries which supported Iraq.

Iranian forces have surprised American analysts since the beginning of the Iran-Iraq war with their ability to sustain heavy fighting even though they have been cut off from American arms, spare parts and training since the fall of the Shah.

"They've done much better in keeping things going than we have expected," said a U.S. military source.

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz, headed for swift confirmation as secretary of state after a unanimous endorsement by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared Wednesday he is prepared to develop "as constructive and beneficial relationship as possible" with the Soviet Union.

The panel, recommended Shultz 16-0 after a second day of questioning over his appointment, and Chairman Charles Percy, R-Ill., said he would try to get an confirmation by the full Senate before the day was out. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was absent for the vote, but Percy said he was certain that Helms also favored Shultz.

As for the unusual step of taking his question immediately to the Senate floor, requiring unanimous consent from his colleagues, Percy declared: "It's urgent that we have a secretary of state." Along by the committee's embrace of certain in the wake of the committee's embrace.

In his typical low-key manner, Shultz said the United States should neither seek confrontation with the Soviets nor shrink from criticizing them. And he linked the U.S. relations to Moscow's behavior.

"I think we should make it clear that, depending on Soviet behavior and how they conduct themselves, we are prepared to have a constructive and beneficial relationship as possible," Shultz told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in the second day of his confirmation hearings.

The attitude Shultz expressed toward the Soviet Union is virtually identical to that of former Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr., although it was stated without the noisy anti-Soviet bombast that usually accompanied Haig's comments.

Speaking almost in a monotone, Shultz said the Soviet Union "is militarily powerful and has exhibited a willingness to use its military power with brutality." This Soviet readiness to use military force has "a certain bully-like quality to it" that puts fear in weaker nations, he said.

He declared that the United States must have the military strength to confront and discourage Soviet aggression around the world. But he said being strong also means having the self-confidence to undertake negotiations when they are called for.

GOP plans strategy for fall election

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House advisers are devising a fall campaign strategy that places top priority on Senate races and concentrates President Reagan's time in the West and South, where they believe he can make a difference.

Reagan could help candidates in Tennessee, Mississippi, North Dakota, California, Texas, Florida, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada, according to a White House official, who asked not to be identified.

Reagan will not help in Ohio, Michigan, with its high unemployment rate, and Maryland, a largely Democratic state, the official added. Though he could help in Maine, said Vice President George Bush, he would be more effective because of his ties to the state.

Lebanon calls on forces to withdraw

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The government of Lebanon, struggling to assert authority over its war-torn land, called Wednesday for the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces and the formation of a multinational peacekeeping force to supervise the Palestinian evacuation.

After meeting in Lebanon's shell-pocked presidential palace, the Cabinet issued a statement bemoaning closely to the personal ties exerted by the United States to secure the Lebanese cease. It was the first time the Lebanese government, which has not controlled its own territory for seven years, had formally announced its position on the crisis.

The University's cheerleaders also act as judges in selecting cheerleaders at local high schools as a way of bettering their rapport with local communities, he said.
A recruiting program to get more people involved with the Saluki Spirit Committee is also being planned for the coming school year, Sparks said. People interested in working on the committee may call 536-3503, he said. Currently, he said, only six students serve on the committee. He also said he hopes that all the committee's plans for fall semester will be completed by mid-August.
The Saluki Spirit Committee was organized at the beginning of August 1981 by Bruce Swinburne, SIU-C's vice-president of student affairs, said Jean Paratore, assistant to the vice-president. Swinburne is in charge of athletics at SIU-C, Sparks said.

Council passes Cedar Lake rules
Boats powered by motors of more than 10 horsepower, houseboats and jet skis are prohibited at Cedar Lake, according to new rules approved by the Carbondale City Council.
The regulations also prohibit skiing on the lake. Swimming rules have also been changed to coincide with the operation of the Poplar Camp Beach, which opened in May. Swimming is permitted only in the designated beach area, and neither scuba diving nor snorkeling is allowed.

According to the rules, no alcoholic beverages, glass bottles or "pop-top" cans are allowed at the beach. Team sports, such as volleyball, are prohibited on land at the beach. Flotation devices are allowed, but floaters must remain in the roped-off swimming area.
The beach is open from 10:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day weekend. If capacity as determined by the lake superintendent is reached, the beach will be closed until the crowd is lessened. Life guards will be on duty during all open hours and will enforce all rules.

New rules have also been written for use of Cedar Lake property. No firearm use is allowed, and no hunting or trapping will be permitted. Motorized vehicles will be allowed only on surfaced roads, and horseback riding will be permitted only on surfaced roads or bridle paths. Bridle paths will be marked with signs and will be closed from November 1 to April 30 of each year.

For foreign students in the U.S., scandal in Congress is shocking

By William Jason Yong Student Writer

Editor's Note: The writer is a Malaysian student who has been in the United States for five years. He is a junior, with a double major in political science and journalism.

"You wouldn't like to visit that place."

"That doesn't surprise me. Many politicians are like that."

"What do you mean, politicians? I'm talking about Congress."

An outsider newly arrived to the United States may have a naive attitude towards Congress. Some do not know what Congress is all about.

Those outsiders who are familiar with Congress may be somewhat shocked to read about the recent sex scandal on Capitol Hill.

There are many outsiders who view Congress with high esteem. They see Congress as the seat of America's political system. That image may be somewhat tarnished by the recent stories of sex scandals and corruption.

The sort of freedom that American Muslims enjoy is absent in many Third World countries. That's why the severe criticism of government policies and blatant criticisms of politicians, which are common in American politics, are unthinkable in other countries.

Outsiders feel that the scandal involving high school pages who run errands for Congressmen could have been avoided.

Some six years ago, the House Education and Labor Committee held hearings to discuss the Capitol Page Program. Questions were raised on the adequacy of the program.

A MAJOR ISSUE that is unfolding is the lack of sufficient supervision of the pages during their off-school and off-duty hours. Rep. Bill Goodling (R-Pa.) said he once lived in the same building that also housed some of the pages, and found the experience "frightening."

An outsider has the impression that the teenage pages are being exploited. The steps taken to establish a body to look after the well-being of these kids has progressed at a snail's pace.

Many of the pages, who are as young as 15, come to Washington without any prior experience in how to cope with living away from home.

Washington is a city with a highly-developed political environment, and we don't know how these young pages can cope with the lifestyle here.

A bill introduced by Paul Simon in 1977, calling for a creation of a Page School Board made up of members of both houses, died at the end of the 95th Congress. Simon reintroduced the bill in 1979, but it failed again.

Many outsiders would say that debating over the AWACS sale or the budget is no more important than looking after the welfare of the pages.

Rep. Frank Annunzio (D-Ill.) introduced another bill in August of 1981 to create a U.S. Capitol Page Board to supervise the education and welfare of the pages. Tn; bill arrived too late for action in the 96th Congress.

PRESENTLY, NO ONE has been entrusted with the responsibility of looking after the pages, though an unclassified, defined responsibility exists.

Simon said, "A scandal has been brewing as a result of our failure to be specific in delegating responsibility. Congress should establish a board to look after the education and welfare of the pages."

It may be true that if a specific, well-defined supervisory board is not established to look after the education and welfare of the pages, then Carter may remain the only page whose parents know she is being well looked after.

Saluki enthusiasm’s the name of the game

Pep rallies, halftime events, cheerleading clinics. SIU-C’s Saluki Spirit Committee deals with them all.

The committee’s basic responsibility is to review and determine the activities of SIU-C’s cheerleaders, pep band, pompon squad and mascot. Tom Sparks, a senior in public relations, is this year’s committee chairman.

The Spirit Committee is also a way for students “to be a part of a spirit-type organization,” said Mindy Doggett, the committee’s advisor and fiancé.

The committee tries to send a representative to each of the men’s and women’s athletic events. Sparks said. He also said men’s football, basketball, track and baseball and women’s softball, track and gymnastics are the programs that receive the most emphasis by the committee since these are the sports that traditionally receive the most student spectator participation.

Sparks said the committee’s plans for the 1982-83 school year include adding to and further refining some of last year’s activities. SIU-C’s activities were trial and error, he added, but for being an inaugural year, “things went rather well.”

Some of the activities Sparks said he’d like to continue during the 1982-83 school year include pre-football games pep rallies and halftime shows at basketball games.

Last year’s pep rallies, held at the Free Forum area, generated increased attendance and awareness of the football games, he said. He also said the committee had their own separate spirit section at.

and they were the inspiration for "Charming Sally," the winner of the Sixth International Biennial Play Competition for a New American Comedy, sponsored in part by the Department of Theater.

The plot of "Charming Sally," by Tim Kelly of Hollywood, Calif., was suggested by the story of the Italian Company of Players, and the difficulties they faced in the American colonies in the 1720s.

As the winner of the competition, Kelly will be presented a check for $1,000 before the opening performance of "I Ought to be in Pictures," at 8 p.m. Thursday in the McLeod Theater.

The competition is sponsored by the Consolidation Coal Company, Midwestern Region, the SIU Foundation, and the SIU-C Department of Theater.

To be eligible for the contest, the winning entry must be full-length comedies with American settings, characters and/or issues, and never before published or produced.

Kelly, a playwright and screenwriter, has published numerous works including "Four for the Price of One," "Uninvited," "Everything's Jim Dandy," and "The Adventure of the Clouded Crystal."

Do you know an “unsung hero,” a co-worker, friend or acquaintance at SIU-C who is quiet, yet alive better for others?

If you do, it’s now possible to get that person the recognition he or she deserves, by nomination for WTAO’s SIU Salute, a daily radio program that recognizes people who serve the University community, according to Jerome Glassman, president of WTAO.

“Meet people in Jackson County know that SIU-C is the main source of their success,” said Glassman. “We believe the SIU Salute is the main source of their success.”

The program will recognize students, faculty, staff, alumni, volunteers, benefactors and others who serve the University, according to Glassman. The SIU Salute will be broadcast daily at approximately 7:45 a.m., 10 a.m., 11:45 a.m. and 4:45 p.m. Daily.

Nominations can be submitted to WTAO by mail. Send nominations to: WTAO, Post Office Box 389, Murphysboro, Illinois, 62966.

Two secretaries honored with Outstanding Service Awards

Two veteran secretaries have been named recipients of the University's third annual Outstanding Service Awards for Civil Service Employees. Chosen from a University-wide group of nominees were Henrietta Miller, Morris Library administrative assistant, and Joan Marks, secretary to the College of Liberal Arts. The two winners, who have a combined total of more than 41 years of service at SIUC, were honored at the annual Civil Service Awards Banquet on Tuesday night.

The award, established in 1966, is given to SIUC civil service workers for University and community service "above and beyond the call of duty," according to Carol Emme, chairperson of this year's Outstanding Service Awards Committee.

Mrs. Miller, a 19-year veteran, is a 26-year staff member who has been a member of several University committees and organizations including the Library Affairs Administrative Council, Friends of Morris Library and the U.S. Grant Association. For the past 20 years, Mrs. Miller has served as coordinator and chairperson for Rockford High School class reunions. She has been an active member of the PTA and the Women's Caucus and recently was nominated as president of the local chapter of the Professional Secretaries Association.

Miss Marks of West Frankfort joined the University staff in 1969 as a secretary in the English department. Since 1977 she has been a secretary in the office of the dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

She is a former chairperson of the Civil Service Employees Council and a representative to the Employees Advisory Committee.

State board says Illinois in need of more doctors

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Even though Illinois is spending many more dollars on medical education, and more students are entering medical schools, there still are communities with too few doctors, the Illinois Board of Higher Education was told Tuesday.

Board members, meeting at Rock Valley College, also were told that Illinois, too, has too few doctors for minority groups.

A detailed study, prepared by the board's medical education committee, outlines problems and proposes solutions.

It suggests that each year the state offer $10,000 scholarships to 100 students. In return for each year of schooling, the recipients would practice medicine for a year in an area with a shortage of doctors.

"They can see what life in a rural area of the state is like, and it's not bad," said committee chairman Jane Hayes Rader of Cobden. "But, you have to see it to know that.

The scholarship program also would help minority students, many of whom are the hardest hit by rising medical education costs, the study said. Medical students now spend from $10,000 to $20,000 a year for tuition, fees and living expenses.

It said the state should continue to give top priority to programs aimed at getting minority students into medical schools. Only 50 of the 1,200 new students last year were black. Proportional representation would have been 175.

Mrs. Rader said Illinois increased its spending for medical programs 17 percent from 1968 to 1980, while other education spending rose only 22 percent. That helped boost first-year medical enrollments from 700 to 1,200.

But, two-thirds of the doctors would have graduated from Illinois medical schools left the state, and those who remained often did not establish practices in areas of great need.

The federal government says 31 rural Illinois counties have a shortage of doctors, as well as parts of 18 others.

Award-winners were chosen by a committee of the Civil Service Employees Council. Fifty-one other civil service employees were also honored at the banquet.

Baby sitter awaits test results

By MELISSA JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
BLUETOWN, Fla. (AP) — Rubella, a disease that can cause mental and physical handicaps, has been "shooting snakes or rats.

"It's weirdd all right," said Cloud, a long-time resident of Blumtwon. "It's a sort of plump ghosty.

"Down on the steps of Calhoun County's modern brick-and-concrete courthouse, a baby sitter was determined to talk about the recent death of 19-year-old Travis Coleman.

The woman said he had been "shooting snakes or rats." We're still just waiting to get baby for Travis before, and even bought him "milk and snacks.

"I can't solve a case with a jackknife and sand in my shoes," said Falling. "I've exhausted all possibilities.

The woman said he had been leaving the investigation to a task force appointed last week by the State Medical Examiner Commission.

The four-member task force will coordinate investigations in the three towns where the children have died, said Wallace Graves, commission chairman.

Some residents of this poor, rural area 50 miles west of Tallahassee already have their own theories.

"People had even been saying she was studying witchcraft," says Jean Murphy, a courtroom observer.

Miss Falling knows about the whirled peppers and pointing fingers. She says she can feel coldness from those she has known for years.

"I'm just interested in finding out what is real," she said outside the Calhoun County Health Center, where her blood and fluid samples were taken for an analysis at a state lab in Tampa. "If I have something I wanna find out.

So does Travis Coleman's family.

The baby's 17-year-old mother, Lisa, initially suspected her son was just a dream too early from a Tallahassee hospital where he was treated for pneumonia. "The baby was dead. Now she's not sure.

"If she wasn't guilty, she'd talk to us," says Miss Coleman, sitting in her family's ramshackle silver trailer in South Blumtwon and talking about the baby sitter.

"To me she acted like she loved Travis," Miss Coleman said, explaining Miss Falling had baby-sat for Travis before, and even bought him "milk and snacks.

"The way I feel, I feel Christian causes the baby's death. She knew she had some kind of disease and she told us nothing," says Karl Schmidt, the baby's grandmother.

"She is a 19-year-old, unmarried person," said Falling, "and I would guess she has had a belfull of publicity," says Virgil Mayo, a public defender who represents her on bad check charges. Miss Falling pleaded innocent this morning at a preliminary hearing.

The child was rushed to a Tallahassee hospital where she died of encephalitis, a brain inflammation.

One year later, cousins Jeffrey Merick Davis, 4, and Joseph "Joe Boy" Spring, 2, died a few days apart of myocarditis, an inflammation of the heart muscle.

A few months later, 8-month-old Jennifer Daniels died in Miss Falling's arms while the baby's mother, Geneva Burnett, was present. No apparent cause of death was discovered.

"We don't hold it against Christian," she says.
Serving on food cost can be profitable

It pays to have some type of strategy when grocery shopping, otherwise you could end up spending a lot more for your groceries than you should.

Rosemary Walker, assistant professor in family economics and management, said that people use "different rules of thumb" when they want to save money and time grocery shopping.

"Being careful in your shopping can make a big difference in your budget over a period of time," Walker said.

Last fall Walker and Brenda Cude, assistant professor in family economics and management, conducted research on the effectiveness of strategies most often used by shoppers.

Trained surveyors using several different strategies collected price and size data of 19 specified products at three of the largest supermarkets in Carbondale, according to Walker.

The 19 products were randomly selected from a trade magazine that listed grocery products and health and beauty aids used in 50 percent or more of U.S. households. The list included three personal care products, three luxury products, canned fruit and vegetable products and other food items. However, meat, fresh produce and paper products were not included. Walker said she believes that most people use a combination of strategies and the effectiveness of the strategies depends on the person and how he values his time.

"We think that consumers are interested in spending less, but they're also interested in their time," Walker said.

Of all the strategies used in the research, unit pricing, in which the shopper buys the product with the lowest price per pound or ounce, was found to be the cheapest if done correctly. However, unit pricing also takes more time than other strategies because of the amount of price comparisons it involves, Walker said.

Research at the supermarkets in Carbondale showed that a shopper has to make 231 price comparisons at one of the stores and 272 and 308 comparisons at the other two, she said.

Unit pricing excluding generics was also used. However, this strategy also takes a lot of time, according to Walker.

Some strategies might work better at some stores than others because some stores don't carry as many generic, sale items or store brands as others do, Walker said.

However, Walker said she isn't suggesting that a person go from store to store using different strategies. She said she assumes that most people have been to the store that they shop at regularly, especially students who don't have transportation.

Other strategies used in the research included buying the largest size of a product that has the lowest price per unit buying generic products available or buying the store brand with the lowest price per unit.

Buying generic products was found to be almost as cheap as unit pricing, according to Walker. She said that some people don't like to buy generic products because they are under the impression that they are of lower quality than brand name products.

"We know that nutritionally they are equivalent to brand name products," Walker said.

"We recommend at least trying them if you're concerned with your food budget.

The other three strategies used were buying sale items, buying the size with the lowest price per pound of the brand you prefer and buying the largest size of your favorite product without any price comparisons.

Shoppers should be careful when using sale products because there are times when items that look like they are on sale really aren't, Walker said. She said she doesn't consider it much of a sale when a product that originally sold for 50 cents each is advertised as an sale at 30 cents.

There are other things shoppers can do along with different strategies to help reduce their food costs. For example, doing a shopping list can help. Walker said studies have shown that people who shop with lists spend more at the checkout counter than those who shop without a list.

However, in the end, those who shop with a list save more because they buy what they need at one time and shop less often.

An instructor course and instructor-training course will also be available. The last day of registration is Tuesday. Contact the Heart Association at 407-3217.

Mrs. Rochberg-Hallon, who is an expert in the field of Assyrian history at the University of Chicago, said she plans to use the grant to make at least "one trip a year" to London to the British Museum. There she plans to study the fragments of the 7th Century B.C. clay tablets on which ancient Assyrians wrote their predictions of their future.

"Another, a Chicago composer who received $28,000, said, "I'm still coming out of a daze." "MacArthur Prize Fellows receive grants that absolutely no strings attached. They can use them in any way they want to," said Gerald Freund, director of the grants program.

"The purpose is to free these exceptionally talented individuals from economic pressures and from other impediments to pursue their own goals," said Freund, former dean of humanities and arts at New York City's Hunter College.

He emphasized that none of the winners applied for the nominations, and that "direct applications and self-nominations are not accepted."

The group includes people in such different fields as theoretical physics, filmmaking and anthropology, according to John E. Corbally, president of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, a philanthropic organization.

The group includes 60-year-old Conlon Nancarrow, who composes primarily for player piano; Harold Moses, a graduate student at Harvard University, and 59-year-old Dr. Francesca Rochberg-Hallon, a University of Chicago historian.

A total of $4 million was given to the 19 under the program, through the will of the late John D. MacArthur, who died in January 1978 after making a fortune in the insurance business and real estate. The individual grants range from $24,000 to $60,000 annually, and from a total of $72,000 to $120,000. Of the winners, nine are in their 30s, six are in their 40s and four are 50 or older.

"It's really unbelievable," said University of Chicago historian Rochberg-Hallon. "I feel overwhelmed and honored by this award."
Nicklaus said he "had a touch each of the world’s true leaders." Watson, the current world’s No. 1 golfer, said: "I’m fine with Nicklaus, the gritty American, who won."

Nicklaus, generally regarded as the finest player this ancient game has produced, appeared to have a record fifth U.S. Open title in his pocket until Watson’s minor miracle of a chip-in birdie turned things around a month ago in California.

It was the fourth time Nicklaus had been beaten in a dramatic, major-tournament, head-to-head confrontations with Watson, the gritty 32-year-old redhead whose triumph in the American national championship re-established his position as golf’s current leader.

And, of course, it raised the possibility of future confrontations, perhaps in this storied old event that begins Thursday on the Royal Troon links, which stretches 7,067 yards along the Firth of Clyde.

Nicklaus, appearing just a bit tight and tense as he often is when he’s playing well and going into one of the game’s biggest events, was the fourth time he had won it. Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles and playing very well this year, was the second choice at 1-1.

"I’ve played pretty well most of the year," said Nicklaus, who has won once, lost once in a playoff and has three second-place finishes in a limited schedule this season. "I’m not unhappy with any part of my game. I’m playing well enough to win.

Watson, at 32, Nicklaus’ junior by 18 years, was relaxed and confident as he tee’d off for his final practice round and be, like Nicklaus, said he was fully recovered from a recent physical problem.

Watson missed a day’s practice early in the week when the recurrence of a chronic problem with the little finger of his left hand prohibited him from gripping the club. "I’m fine now. No problem," said Watson.

Nicklaus said he “had a touch of the flu” over the weekend but has recovered and “should be 100 percent” for the opening round.

Tom Weiskopf, however, remained a question mark.

Weiskopf, who won the British Open in 1973, the last time it was held at Troon, St. Louis, is a three-time winner in the United States this year. Rogers and Nelson have played very strongly in their last few starts. Floyd, often a challenger in this event, said he is “playing well enough to win.” And Kite, who last year led the American PGA Tour in both money-winnings and stroke average, is a constant threat.

McArthur Press Foundation offers grants for research in various aspects of astronomical music.

Mrs. Rochberg-Halton said she also plans to use the grant to learn Greek, since some of the British Museum tablets and texts are written in Greek. She said she also will continue her work at the Oriental Institute and publish articles on various aspects of astronomical music. She discovers in her studies of the Assyrian tablets. Chicago composer Shapey said, "I'm still coming out of a daze," after learning of his grant. "What's next?" he asked, "looking up to me in a psychological thing. I know I'm a failure, and I'm guaranteed, in a sense, that I will want to take a year off, and do a special project, now on." Is he sure of that? "If he had one in mind, I think it would be a second thought," adding that for the past two years he's been working on that. "I've got the work I've been doing all along."

The late head of music at the University of Chicago and has composed symphonic works for the Chicago Symphony, and various musical instruments.

The grants program was begun last year when 42 recipients were awarded a total of $10,000 in grants, and the foundation expects to name another group later this year or early next year, he said.

The amount of the grant varies with the recipient's age. Mrs. Rochberg-Halton, a president of the University of Illinois, is just 29 players. However, in the Canadian PGA last week, he lost a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole, saying, "My trouble has been my putter," said Mrs. Rochberg-Halton.

Barrett's best finish was 25th in the Tournament of Champions, where he was 153, 10,000 in pursuance and contingency money. He is expected with the riders competing for more than $15,000 in purses and contingency money.

The winner of Seaside, California, continues to lead the Winston Pro Series points chase after 10 events so far in 1982.

The $125,000 guaranteed, at 11 a.m. with time trials starting at 8 a.m., and the race at 3 p.m. Reserved seat tickets are priced at $12.50 and $10. There will be no admission to the grounds without a race ticket.

Road races scheduled

This weekend will be a busy weekend for running enthusiasts in Illinois. Two 10,000-meter road races are scheduled for Saturday, July 21, at Champaign and Marion.

The Carbondale Park District, in cooperation with the 50th Anniversary of the American Motorcycle Association and the Southern Illinois Bicycle Club, will host the 10,000-meter road race and the two-mile fun run. The events will start in Evergreen Park beginning at 7:30 a.m.

Participants will be competing for first, second and third place trophies, age categories for both men and women. Ribbons will be awarded to all finishers in the 10,000-meter road race.

Mary Ann Hines Rowe of the Carbondale Park District will be in charge of the race and will be responsible for all activities.

The Swamp Fox Track Club and Pepsi Cola will sponsor the Peoria 10,000-meter race on Sunday, July 22, at 7 a.m. The race will begin at Marion Junior High School and follow a course in the 10,000-meter area.

Trophies will be given to the top male and female finishers, while the first three runners in each category, across the finish line will receive cash awards.

Two motorcycle racing professionals in the world will be on hand to compete for the fifth running of the American Motorcycle Association Quonset Mile National. The event is expected with the riders competing for more than $10,000 in purses and contingency money.

"I've been trying to work it out more for motorcycle racing," he said, "but not this kind of stuff."
