Freelance photographer Leonard Johnson displays the latest addition to his collection of political buttons

Donated buttons recapture tumultuous '60s political buttons to the University Museum Wednesday in the name of Sen. Paul Simon.

Johnson wrote for KA, an "underground" student newspaper at SIU-C in the 1960's. He began the collection while attending the University. Johnson said he saved the buttons because he realized he was living in a historical era. "It's very hard to find such items because people don't keep them — they throw them away," Johnson said.

The collection, which spans more than 20 years and contains about 200 buttons, covers controversial issues such as the Vietnam War, the civil rights movement and drug use. The collection also includes two china pipes bearing the faces of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew.

Items range from a rare "Goldwater in '64"' pin to a 1986 "Save American Industry and Jobs Day" pin.

The Vietnam War affected Johnson profoundly.

"People I knew went to Vietnam and didn't come home.

Guyon asks faculty to help trim spending

President John Guyon wants the faculty to help him trim $3.3 million from the budget through reduced spending on maintenance and equipment purchases

Guyon likened his ability to predict exactly what effects the cuts would have on the University to "looking into a crystal ball." The best way to save $450,000, which was cut from the utilities budget, would be to hope for a mild from winter, he said.

Iran says it wants to seize U.S. warships for own use

By United Press International

Iraq said its warplanes f'ew more than 375 miles to attack a major Iranian offshore oilfield in the southern Persian Gulf Wednesday, and Iran said it wanted to seize American warships to use them in its navy. An Iraqi military spokesman in Baghdad said Iraqi jets launched a "destructive attack" on Iran's Rostam oilfield, 90 miles east of Qatar, at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday and returned safely to their bases. The shipping insurers Lloyds of London said it received information that Iraqi warplanes, refueled in mid-air, reached the southern gulf and attacked Iran's Sassan oilfield, 15 miles south of the Rostam field.

Officials accused of poor testing at Chernobyl

MOSCOW (UPI) — Six officials on trial for the Chernobyl nuclear disaster have been accused of allowing a poorly planned test that led to the explosion of the reactor, a Soviet newspaper reported today. U.S. wants facts behind Pakistan nuclear plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department urgently sought an explanation from Pakistan Wednesday for an alleged plot to export materials illegally from the United States that could be used to develop a Pakistani nuclear bomb. F-senate to eye committee votes by undergrads

By Jacke Hampton Staff Writer

The faculty senate will decide in September whether to retain udents as voting members of the undergraduate education policy committee.

An attempt to amend a resolution and allow students to serve only advisory roles on the committee was defeated nine to eight Tuesday.

The resolution allows two Undergraduate Student Organization representatives to vote on committee business. That committee began overseeing the general education program after the general education council was dissolved last

The senate agreed to have separate votes on two issues related to the committee. One proposal will allow the committee to assume the business of the general education council permanently. The other will allow the USO to have two voting representatives on the committee. The committee, comprised of faculty members, makes recommendations on all matters which affect undergraduate policy.

While the views and opinions of the students were generally will welcomed by the senate, a few members were opposed to the idea of giving student representatives a vote. Most said they were opposed because of poor attendance by students, said Marvin Kleinau, professor of speech communications.

"I don't believe the students have demonstrated the desire (to attend regularly)," Kleinau said. "I don't believe it (the vote) is necessary. I don't believe it's essential."

Other members disagreed.
The senate should take an idealistic view and anticipate that students will become responsible voting members, said Gary Kolb, associate professor of cinema and photography.

"I'm not sure tradition is a good basis of judgement," Kolb said, referring to the senate policy of not allowing constituencies outside the faculty to be represented at its proceedings. "Undergraduates are a different constituency. They're essentially the reason for the existence of the University."

Asbestos removal needs to continue

PRETTY SOON, playing hooky will be a matter of self-defense for school children. Although the Illinois Asbestos Abatement Act of 1984 requires the public health department to inspect all public and private schools by January 1988 and remove all asbestos by July 1989, it seems the law will be broken.

The Illinois Department of Public Health requested $2.5 million to finance an asbestos removal program, but its request was denied.

Some schools already have been inspected, but the funds will run out soon. This means more than 5,400 of the 7,000 Illinois schools targeted for inspection won't be. And that means breaking the law.

ASBESTOS WAS USED to insulate buildings until tests showed it can cause lung cancer and respiratory disorders. Since the test results were released, many buildings have been inspected and the asbestos removed.

A 1984 survey by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency showed that one-third of all U.S. schools contain asbestos. Fifteen million students attend and 1.3 million employees work in these schools.

WHEN CHILDREN'S SAFETY is at stake, adults become concerned. This concern was evident when lead paints, which were proved poisonous, were banned after it was discovered that children who ate peeling paint chips became seriously ill. There are many more children who attend asbestos-filled schools than children who eat paint chips, but the safety needs of the larger group are being overlooked by the government. The same government that requires children to attend school.

doesn't seem right to force students to attend schools in which their health could be in danger. Those who choose not to attend for safety's sake should claim hypocrisy on the government's part if it accuses them of breaking the

Lt. Col. Oliver North is credible when he tells congressional investigators that his irregular actions in the Iran-contra scheme were approved by high Reagan administration officials. However, behind the charming front is a man who exhibits contempt for laws duly passed by Congress and signed by the president; who proudly confesses to having deceived lawmakers; who thought it was "a neat idea" to give the Nicaraguan rebels money that legally belonged in the U.S. Treasury.

Worse yet, he has the gall to blame Congress for his — and his superiors' — transgressions. He contends that the House and Senate had no right to ban government aid to the Nicaraguan Contras (and) no real role in foreign affairs — apparently notwithstanding Congress' constitutional role.

Too hot, too wet, all of the above; Weather in Carbondale is the pits

By Dave Wrone Staff Writer

If you don't like the weather wait 10 minutes and it'll change.

It's an old cliche but when uttered in regard to Southern Illinois, it has clout. The weather frequently does fluctuate in Carbondale: from nitense heat to thunderous rainfall, or, for a different slant, from thunderous rainfall to intense heat. That's it. Frank, who ran for SIU from 1982 to 1996, was named All-American seven times during his university career, an ac-complishment no other Saluki

U.S. hardballers need aggression to whip Cubans

HAVANA (UPI) - The U.S. Par American baseball team

Par. American baseball team must be aggressive on the mound and relaxed overall to be successful against Cuba's national team, the American's top pitcher said.

Left-hander Pat Combs, a Houston native and junior at Baylor, is the probable starter for today's opening game of a five-game series at Stadio Latinoamericano. A crowd of about 50,000 — perhans inabout 50,000 — perhaps in-cluding Cuban President Fidel Castro – is expected to sup-port Cuba, the four-time defending world champion. The U.S. team hasn't defeated the Cuban squad in 20

"I don't think any of us has any concept of what it's like to play in front of 50,000 people."
Combs said. "Castro will combs said. "Castro will probably be there and all eyes will be on us. But the main thing we have to do is relax, control the emotions and not do anything different.

"I talked to my pitching coach and he told me not to get coach and he told me not to get caught up in the crowd, just block them out. As far as the Cubans, we know they're going to try to intimidate us. With the kind of pitching we have, we need to go out and be aggressive. The Cubans have a fast team, but if they can't get any runners on base they can't run, and we believe our pit-ching is better."
