Doctoral P.E. cut

Program eliminated by IBHE's PQP

By Marc Chase
Administration Reporter

The SIUC Board of Trustees decided Thursday to eliminate the doctoral program in physical education at SIUC despite appeals from the program director and students.

In a recommendation titled Priority, Quality and Productivity, the Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended in the fall of 1993 that SIUC cut doctoral programs in physical education, sociology and political science. The master's degree program in administration of justice and a bachelor of science degree in consumer and family development were targeted for elimination.

IBHE created the PQP process to eliminate programs that are educationally and economically unjustified.

SIUC President John C. Guyon and the University administration recommended to the trustees in June that only the doctoral program in physical education be cut. The trustees complied with Guyon's recommendation.

Guyon was unavailable for comment because he is recovering from triple by-pass surgery.

Benjamin Shepherd, acting president and vice president for academic affairs and provost, said the administration did not recommend the elimination of the doctoral physical education program due to poor quality.

In order to make up for a lack of state funding, the University needed to eliminate programs and use the funds from them for more productive programs on campus.

Shepherd said the program was chosen to be eliminated because it would have the least impact on the College of Education. Shepherd said the program had the lowest enrollment of all programs considered for elimination with nine students.

Trustees, such as William

Norwood, said the vote to eliminate the program was based on Guyon's use of an extensive selection process.

The involved input from several groups on campus, such as student government and the Faculty Senate.

"I have been here (on the Board) for 20 years, and I don't recall an issue coming before the Board this way before," Norwood said. "It is not our usual position to overturn administration decisions."

During the meeting, Ronald Knowlton, chairman of the physical education department, appealed to the trustees to save the program.

Knowlton said the quality of the students produced by the program and the employment rates for program graduates justified its retention. "The rate of employment for graduates from the program is 100 percent," Knowlton said. "In regard to the quality of the program, it ranks in the top 21 (doctoral physical education) programs in the United States."

Knowlton said the support the program received from the Graduate Council and the Graduate and Professional Student Council was proof of strong student desire to retain it.

Patrick Smith, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said GPSC voted to keep the program because its graduates were highly successful in receiving jobs after graduation.

Mark Koehnan, student trustee who voted to keep the program, said he was unhappy the other trustees voted for elimination.

"I was disappointed with the elimination of the program," Koehnan said.

"If the program were continued, improvements would need to be made in enrollment and structure, but the quality was excellent."

Trustees said students who already are enrolled in the program will be allowed to finish their degrees.

Making a splash

Greg Nanos takes a plunge off the 30-foot cliff on Kinkaid Lake Thursday afternoon as his brother Lee tries to find the courage to follow. The two traveled from St. Louis to enjoy the lake, which they say is the best swimming spot this side of the Mark Twain National Forest in Missouri. Lake Kinkaid, located northwest of Murphysboro, plays host to many summer outdoor activities people enjoy such as swimming, cliff diving, boating and jetskiing. See related photos on page 3.

SIUC Chancellor to retire after two-year term

By Marc Chase
Administration Reporter

SIUC Chancellor James Brown announced his plans for retirement at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday after holding the position for two years.

The duties of a chancellor include consulting administrators at both SIUC and SIUE on decisions of the Board of Trustees and making sure the interests of the board are upheld at the two campuses.

Before being appointed permanent chancellor by the trustees, Brown served as acting chancellor for the University in 1986 and 1989. He became permanent chancellor in 1992.

Brown, 73, said he has enjoyed his term as chancellor but feels that it is time to step down.

"I told the Board at the time that they asked me to be the permanent chancellor that I would be happy to do the job as long as it continued to be fun," Brown said.

"The hilarity is no longer as strong."

Brown said he will begin searching for his replacement within the next few weeks.

He said when he finds a qualified replacement he will make his recommendation to the Board, and he will not retire until a new permanent chancellor is found.

A.D. VanMeter, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said he has enjoyed working with Brown and wishes him the best when he retires.

Book reveals University crime rates, safety areas

By Stephanie Moletti
Police Reporter

SIUC gets a "C" on its crime report card, according to a new book on campus safety.

"Crime at College: The Student Guide to Personal Safety" is primarily about personal safety, but one chapter assigns 467 college towns a crime rate.

The crime rate ranks each town on the number of crimes for each 100 residents in the city or county in which the school is located. The figures are from the FBI records from 1992.

SIUC and Carbondale are assigned a crime rate of 6.85, which is considered about average. Jack Dyer, executive director of the University Relations said, he is very suspicious of any kind of rating.

"This is more a rating of the community than the University," Dyer said.

Both James Tweedy, vice president for administration, and Sam Jordan, SIUC police chief, declined to comment.

St. Louis University has the highest crime rate with a score of 14.8. The lowest rate went to the University of Northern Iowa at Cedar Falls with a 1.14.

The authors of the book, Joseph Schwartz and Curtis Ostrander, said the chapter on statistics is not based on campus crime and was not meant to deter students from attending colleges ranked on the higher end of the scale, but to give in-coming students information to trigger questions.

"The rankings were meant as a beginning point, not as an ending," Schwartz said.

"It is meant for students to have the information to go to school and ask what officials are doing to protect them. This empowers them with knowledge."

"The whole idea is to activate the most powerful anti-crime tool we have — the brain," Schwartz said.

Schwartz is a former police reporter from Ithaca, New York. Co-author, Ostrander was a detective with the Ithaca City Police Department.

The bulk of the book deals with issues such as sexual assault and harassment, a college safety test, personal safety tips, how to find a safe apartment and what not to bring into a college dorm.

"The strategies come from Curt's (Ostrander) 20 years on the street," Schwartz said.

The book also discusses what to do if victimized and sexual assault victims' rights.

"We define sexual assault and sexual harassment because they are often thought as the same, but are very different," Schwartz said.

Most of the issues brought up in the book are illustrated with actual events, Schwartz said.

"Hopefully the book will get students thinking about personal safety and crime at college," Schwartz said.

Schwartz said he and Ostrander attempted to make the book informal and positive.

"We don't preach, we show," he said.

"Once you're aware, the battle is half over."

The book is available in bookstores beginning this week.

U.N. INSPECTORS NOW MONITOR IN IRAQ — BAGHDAD, Iraq—The crackling radios and sophisticated communications gear that long filled a 17th-floor room at the Sheraton Ishtar Hotel here will soon be gone, signaling a new stage of work for U.N. weapons inspectors who first came to Iraq three years ago. The transfer of this equipment out of the inspectors' makeshift operations room at the hotel into a new "monitoring and verification" facility that is now nearing completion will also herald a major step toward a possible lifting of the U.N. ban on oil sales by Iraq.

RWANDAN REBELS PROMISE TO SHARE POWER — KIGALI, Rwanda—Rwanda's Tutsi-led rebel forces, now in control of this battle-scarred capital and poised for total victory after three months of civil war, have vowed to share power with the Hutu tribal majority to spare this Central African nation further carnage. The pledge, outlined here in recent days by rebel leaders, is intended to avert tribal retaliation for modern Africa's most horrific atrocity—the slaughter of perhaps as many as a half-million Tutsis and politically moderate Hutus at the hands of Hutu government troops and machete-wielding gangs that has been characterized as genocide by U.N. and Clinton administration officials.

MACY, FEDERATED AGREE TO MERGER ACCORD — Los Angeles Times—Retailing giants R.H. Macy & Co. and Federated Department Stores have reached a tentative merger agreement that would create one of the nation's largest department store chains, industry sources said Wednesday. Although final details have yet to be worked out, the board of directors of New York-based Macy, which owns Bullock's department stores, is scheduled to meet Thursday to review the merger agreement. Under the tentative agreement, Macy and Federated, whose stores include Bloomingdale's, would then develop a joint plan to help Macy emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy court protection, retailing sources said. Federated would take on much of Macy's huge $6 billion debt and Macy's would operate independently under the Federated umbrella.

But that's not the only unusual thing that happens around his house. Five years ago, he says, his wife, Estela, told him that she saw a vision of the Virgin Mary, and the visions continue today. On Dec. 3, 1988, the Ruizes were praying before a portrait of the Virgin that Reyes had painted. Suddenly, Estela Ruiz recalls, she saw a mist. "I thought I was going blind. The Blessed Mother appeared on a cloud. I started screaming and yelling. 'She's here, and she's beautiful.' Our Lady stole my heart." That took some doing. Estela Ruiz is a woman with silver hair, a quick wit and a masters degree in education. She was director of a bilingual education program for the Phoenix public schools when she started seeing visions. "I was a skeptic,"

SIUC student killed in travelling accident

Obituary

By Diane Dove
Special Assignment Reporter

To SIUC students and faculty, Angela Dawn Childers, "Angie" to her friends, was friendly, outgoing and always had a pleasant outlook.

This weekend, friends and faculty will say good-bye to Childers, 21, a senior in management from Marion who was killed in a traffic accident in Australia July 8. Childers had been participating in a six week study abroad program.

The accident occurred at 6:30 p.m., which is about 5 a.m. Illinois time, according to Louise Kreider, program coordinator of the World Affairs Center at Beloit College in Wisconsin, which sponsored the program along with Austroleam of Fort Collins, Colorado.

Kreider said Childers was walking from a shopping mall with 18 other people in the program when she and Cathleen Calderaro, a student from the University of Connecticut, were hit by a truck while trying to cross a street.

Kreider said she thinks the accident may have occurred because the two women were unaccustomed to the traffic in Australia, which runs on the left side of the street.

Terry Bigalke, director of the World Affairs Center, said the truck driver was not charged in the accident, and was found not to be at fault.

Bigalke said the women were crossing against a red light and their view of the road may have been obstructed by a vehicle.

As a member of COBA Council, Childers was dedicated and efficient in her work, according to Linda Seibert, chief academic advisor who worked with Childers in the student affairs office for the College of Business Administration.

"Student groups are often treated fairly cavalierly, but she didn't treat it that way," she said.

Sue Mertz, an office systems assistant in the business college said Childers was a bright, outgoing and upbeat person who was an asset to the student affairs office.

"We couldn't have picked a better student worker to have in the office," she said.

Gregg Wendie, who was Childers' academic advisor in the college, said she was a serious, hard working student who held two jobs — one at COBA, the other at Target in Marion — to put herself through school.

Jim Clancy, a student worker who worked with Childers, said she was a happy person who always made people feel good.

Cindy Knust, an area manager at Target in Marion who worked with Childers in the store's soft-line clothing section, described her as a nice, caring person.

"She would do what ever she could to help somebody," she said.

A funeral service for Childers will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. at Aly Funeral Home in Vienna.

Visitation will be held 6 to 9 p.m. Saturday, and 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday.

Memorials may be made in lieu of flowers to the Angie Childers Memorial Fund, in care of Aly Funeral Home, P. O. Box 455, Vienna, IL 62995.

Childers is survived by her mother Mary Ellen, her Father, Ralph, of Vienna, and her brother Tod.

'Baby Richard' case: People voice opinion

THERE IS AN INTERESTING ILLINOIS CUSTODY case the U.S. Supreme Court will be asked to consider on Oct. 3 when it returns from summer recess. The battle which has become an emotional statewide debate involves the custody of a 3½-year-old child known as "Baby Richard."

The custody battle is between Richard's biological father, Otakar Kirchner, and the adoptive parents, who remain unnamed, that legally adopted Richard. The biological mother of Richard decided to give the baby up for adoption at birth after Kirchner had left her. Kirchner later reunited with the biological mother but was told the baby had died.

Kirchner first contested the adoption May 18, 1991 in a Cook County Circuit Court, but the judge ruled Kirchner unfit. Kirchner appealed the decision to the Illinois Supreme Court Aug. 18, 1993, and the original ruling was upheld. The Chicago Tribune quoted appellate Judge Dom J. Rizze as saying, "A child's best interest...is not to be balanced against any other interest...Courts are here to protect children—not to victimize them."

IT IS TOO BAD THAT NOW AFTER ALL THIS time the Illinois Supreme Court has decided that Kirchner's argument was legitimate—the adoption was invalidated June 16. Why did the seven Illinois Supreme Court justices side with the biological father and not consider what was in Richard's best interest?

Illinois, like most other states, attempts to look out for the adoptive child's best interest. Illinois requires that all adopted children be represented in court by a guardian ad litem. Public Guardian Patrick Murphy was supposed to look out for Richard's best interest, but Justice James H. Heiple made his efforts futile.

Now, the Illinois General Assembly along with Gov. Jim Edgar have taken a major step toward finally addressing this problem. July 3 Edgar signed a bill into law that will require trial courts to hold custody hearings to determine what is in the child's best interest when it comes to custody proceedings. Finally, the child will be considered a human being and not the property of adults. Another significant aspect of this law is that it applies to all pending cases including that of Richard.

THE "BABY RICHARD" CASE IS AN EXAMPLE of the good the media and our politicians can accomplish when they work together with the support of the people. Chicago Tribune columnist Bob Greene began writing articles letting readers know of this emotional custody battle. When readers discovered a 3½-year-old child was going to be taken away from his legally adoptive parents they were upset. Gov. Jim Edgar and legislators heard their constituent outcry and were able to work together and quickly pass a new law to prevent further cases like this from occurring.

A government that responds to the wishes of the people is an example of an effective representative democracy. The Illinois Supreme Court decided Wednesday that Richard can stay with his adoptive parents until the U.S. Supreme Court decides whether or not to hear the case. Perhaps our state justices listened to the people.

Colombia's World Cup losses: Player Escobar, national honor

By James Reston Jr.
Newsday

Pity poor Colombia. The World Cup was supposed to be that country's giant leap forward into world respect.

With the tragic murder of its star-crossed soccer player, Andres Escobar, in Medellin July 2, after its surprising collapse in the tournament, fate has wylaid that tormented country once again. It shows what can happen when a nation invests mere athletes with its national honor and its national salvation.

Colombia had the most elegant of entries in this year's World Cup. Even the fabled Pele declared last December that the Colombia team was the best in the world. The World Cup draw (where Colombia fell into the apparently easy group of the United States, Romania and Switzerland) took place in Las Vegas, only a few weeks after the rooftop killing of the drug kingpin, Pablo Escobar (no relation to Andres).

If the death of Pablo Escobar was the last act in the 10-year agony of crushing the Medellin cartel, it had huge significance for Colombia. The end of a terrible era was proclaimed.

The new era was supposed to begin with the world-class artistry of its athletes. Soccer was to be the next act in national self-respect and international redemption.

In these unlikely ambassadors, the "presidencia" of Colombia saw a way to change the horrid image of its country in the United States. For years, well-meaning Colombians had bridled under the stereotypes: cocaine supplier to the world, poisoner of American youth, home to the world-class Medellin thugs, highest murder rate in the world. It was deeply resented that a few hundred gangsters in Medellin and Cali could determine the reputation of a country.

When the graceful Colombian team walked into the finals, writers and officials told me last January in Bogota and Medellin, the world would see a different Colombia: a complex and colorful land as well as a country of energy, inventiveness and hard work. And Colombians were beginning to look at themselves in a new positive light.

To the Nobel laureate of Colombia, soccer and music are the most positive and unifying forces in Colombian culture.

"Colombia will be judged by the goals it scores," Gabriel Garcia Marquez told me in January in Cartagena, when I asked about the stereotypes. "I am one of the best-selling and most-studied authors in the United States. Nobody says, 'I won't buy one of his books because he comes from that drug-trafficking country.'"

He imagined Colombia's victory in the World Cup would occasion a celebration not unlike the one given for him in Stockholm when he won the Nobel Prize.

And the president of Colombia, Cesar Gaviria, spoke of how economic progress, the discovery of oil in the hinterland, the successes against the Medellin cartel were changing his country's image.

With some pride, he noted that kidnappings in Medellin had dropped from five to three a day.

"We have worked hard to create a more balanced view of Colombia in the United States," the president told me in Bogota. "We see this World Cup event as an opportunity to reach the average American whom we have not been able to reach until now."

With its weighty mission to achieve international respect and deluded by advance sheets that proclaimed the Colombians the most skilled players in the world, the Colombia team came to America and forgot to play.

Their loss to a pesky Romanian team was no disgrace, but the defeat seemed to discommodate the Colombians. Then came the true national humiliation: the 2-1 loss to the United States.

After its balloon burst, the murder of Andres Escobar becomes just another episode of random violence in Colombia. Perhaps high-rollers in the Medellin cartel ordered the killing; perhaps it happened in a spontaneous bar argument. It hardly seems to matter.

To Americans, the murder simply confirms stereotypes. But the thousands who wept over Escobar's body in a Medellin sports coliseum this past weekend were grieving for themselves as much as for a soccer star.

They dreamt of change. They believed in the magic of sport to transform a society where politicians and police have failed. But their hopes for a quick deliverance from their harsh social realities rested too much upon the shoulders of their athletes.

Pity Colombia and Andres Escobar. Solid players sometimes make mistakes. Star players do wilt. Upstarts step forward.

Soccer is a wonderful game, but don't bet your national honor on it.

Sometimes it's better to make the national game a leisurely pastime rather than a passion of love and sudden death.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Women's average attendance drops

By Bill Kugelberg
Sports Reporter

A report recently released by the NCAA shows SIUC is far below the national average and other Missouri Valley Conference schools in drawing fans to women's basketball games.

During the 1993-94 season, an average of 605 fans attended 13 home games at the Arena. This average was up from the '92-'93 season when the team averaged 531 fans per game, but down from the '91-'92 season when an average of 839 fans attended each contest.

Charlotte West, SIUC's associate athletic director, said getting people to attend women's games is about the most frustrating problem she has encountered in her professional career.

"With the quality of women's teams we have had and the lack of people who come out, I just don't know what to do," she said. "We have lowered the prices embarrassingly low and had a lot of giveaways. Maybe it is the attitude that people think if something is cheap then it is not good. But we want to keep the prices low so people will come out."

Tom Davis, marketing and promotions coordinator for Saluki athletics, said there are many reasons why the women's team doesn't attract many fans.

"There are a variety of things that go into how many people attend the games. I can't give one specific reason," he said. "A lot of it has to do with when the games are scheduled. Also, there were two home games that were held after two big snowstorms. But we have increased the average from last year."

According to the NCAA report, which was published in a recent issue of The NCAA News, an average Missouri Valley Conference game drew 1,780 fans.

This average placed the MVC seventh in a list of all Division I schools, ahead of the Big East Conference and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

However, the drawing power of the MVC's Southwest Missouri State, a team which hosted an average of an astounding 8,191 fans per game, accounted for 67 percent of the 195,801 fans who attended MVC games last year.

The season was a record attendance year for the MVC.

Davis said he thinks there are basically two reasons why Southwest Missouri State draws so many people.

"There is a group of women business leaders who have taken the (SWMS) program under their wing and are doing a great job getting support for the basketball team," he said. "Also they have a much bigger group of people to draw from for their games. They have around 100,000 people in the area while we have about 20,000. Their attendance has really increased since they went to the Final Four so they are hanging their hat on that."

The SIUC team drew a total of 7,859 fans over 13 home games last season, of which one contest drew more than 1,000 fans. While on the road, SIUC averaged 1,333 fans as 18,668 watched 14 games with 6 contests drawing more than 1,000 fans.

The women's team used to play in Davies Gymnasium instead of the Arena, but Davis said he doesn't think the switch in venues affects attendance very much.

"Certainly in Davies Gym there was more of an intimate atmosphere because it only holds between 1,000 and 1,200 people," he said. "But Davies Gym had two or three good years and the rest were not all that great, so I don't know if venue plays that big a role."

Davis said the promotions department has tried to bring more fans into the games, and will continue to do so in the future.

"We have racked our brains trying to think of something to get people to attend the women's games," he said. "We will just keep trying different things until we get it right."

West said she thinks this year will be different for the team.

"This year we are going to have a really good team, an exciting team," she said.

"I think we will do it this year. I've pledged to coach (Cindy) Scott that we are going to get more people at the games to watch the team this year. It's a matter of building momentum and I think we just need to get that swell going to start things off."

SIUC grad student owns best kept athletic secret

Lucas goes distance as one of U.S.' top runners

By Doug Durso
Sports Reporter

One SIUC graduate student has quietly made a name for herself as one of the country's leading distance runners.

Heather Lucas, a graduate student in biochemistry, has become nationally recognized in the 5k, 10k and marathon distances.

Don DeNoon, Saluki women's track and cross country coach, said he believes Lucas is one of the top distance runners in the United States.

"She is probably one of the top ten distance runners in this country," DeNoon said.

Lucas said she had always wanted to run since she was little and was just drawn to distance running.

She came to SIUC in January 1992 to earn her master's degree and started to train with DeNoon.

"When I came here Don (DeNoon) let me train with the women's team and told me about some races that I could enter," Lucas said.

Lucas, who graduated from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Washington, said she runs all types of distance races.

"It does not really matter if I run 5k, 10k and marathon races because I like them all, but I usually stick to road races," Lucas said.

DeNoon said Lucas has improved dramatically since her arrival into the area.

"Success has come pretty quick for her," DeNoon said.

"She has worked her way up from the top 100 to probably the top 10 distance runners in a relatively short time."

He said Lucas has worked extremely hard and does not know when to quit.

"She is talented and so competitive even while she is training," DeNoon said. "She does not set any limits for herself in practice and trains as hard as she can."

DeNoon use to train Lucas, but now they run together only about once a week, which DeNoon said is probably a good idea.

"We are both so competitive when we train together we turn it into a race and wear ourselves down," DeNoon said.

Lucas said she runs about 70 to 80 miles a week in training and races in competition often.

"Success has come pretty quick for her. She has worked her way up from the top 100 to the top 10 distance runners in a relatively short time."

—Don DeNoon

"I race a lot especially in the summer, usually once every couple of weeks or so," Lucas said. "However, my first priority is to finish my degree because you never know how long running will last."

DeNoon said an advantage that Lucas has over some runners is that she likes to run in the warmer weather.

Lucas said she really has no choice but to be able to run in the warm weather because of where she lives.

"There are only a couple months a year when the weather is nice for training, usually most of my training is done in hot and humid weather that a lot of distance runners are not use to," Lucas said.

Lucas said she plans on participating in the Olympic Trials, but said the Olympics are unrealistic.

"I definitely want to run in the trials in several different distance events, but the Olympics is really just a pipe dream," Lucas said.

Lucas won a race at the V.P. Fair in St. Louis and will run in the 5k race at Bastille Day festivities in Chicago over the weekend.
