Landlord files fourth lawsuit against SIUC

Officials say documents do not exist

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A second Freedom of Information lawsuit has been filed by a local landlord against SIUC for allegedly not releasing the names of potential students inquiring about living on campus, an attorney says.

Tom Peters, Belleville attorney for Stan Lieber, Stevenson Arms owner, 600 W. Mill St., said he filed the lawsuit Wednesday because Lieber was told SIUC does not keep records on people asking about living on campus.

In May, Lieber won an FOIA lawsuit at the Mount Vernon appellate court. The suit also requested the names of people inquiring about on-campus living from May 1993.

“There are no records that exist that answer his request.”

Shari Rhode,
SIUC chief trial attorney

“After we won the appellate court case, we then went back to SIUC and asked for the same information but for this coming school year,” Peters said. “My client was sent a letter saying ‘we don’t have any of those documents requested.’ So we filed another FOIA in St. Claire County Court.”

SIUC is appealing the Mount Vernon court’s decision at the Illinois Supreme Court, and a decision on if the a trial is needed will be announced in September.

Shari Rhode, SIUC chief trial attorney, said she has not seen the new lawsuit allegations, but does know what Peters is talking about.

“There are no records that exist that answer his request,” she said.

On May 9, Lieber sent a letter to SIUC Chancellor John C. Guyon stating “Demand is made for a complete listing of any and all records relating to freshman housing inquiries, made for the 1996-1997 school year, including the name, address and telephone number of each and every inquiry received by the University from an accepted freshman from March 1 through May 9.”

On June 26, Guyon replied in a letter to Peters, “I am looking at the specific request contained in your FOIA demand on May 9, and with respect to that time frame, I am advised that there are no documents which are responsive to your request. While there may have been documents responsive to this type of request for times in the past, I am advised that there are none responsive to the time period which is contained in your current request.”

Guyon would not comment on

Students over 21 get single rooms in Neely

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A couch, freshly-painted walls and wall-to-wall carpet make a dorm room look more like a home away from home.

Neely Hall, located in University Park was voted last November, to be a 21-and-over residence hall. The hall will allow alcohol and will have new super-singles on the 17th floor.

Beth Scally, coordinator of marketing and public information, said the new super-singles will have several luxuries that other rooms do not have.

“There are 25 rooms total that will have mini-blinds, carpeting, a couch, a halogen lamp and a refrigerator, in addition to the bed and desk that are in all of the rooms,” Scally said.

Marcell Mitchell, University Housing maintenance employee, said there is a lot of work being done to the rooms this summer before students arrive to move in this fall.

“We have been working hard all summer trying to finish the new rooms,” Mitchell said. “After the rooms are painted we will begin to set the furniture up for the students who will live there in the fall.”

Changes to the rooms were done to encourage students to live in student housing, Scally said.

“We are trying to attract an older population that normally moves off campus—so when Neely was changed into a 21-and-over dorm, we thought it would be nice to try the super-singles,” Scally said.

Steve Kirk, assistant director of housing-resident life, said University Housing has never tried anything like this before.

“We want to make a more comfortable living that would motivate students to take the option of campus housing,” Kirk said. “In a bigger picture we are constantly trying to change with the demographics of the student body and this is a nice option for the older students to have.”

Although the rooms are limited

Prospective students tour SIUC

By Melissa Jakobowski
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As six high school seniors pile into a SIUC van, Missy Lundberg begins to answer questions regarding living conditions, parking and entertainment in Carbondale.

Lundberg, a sophomore in radio-television from Bloomington, is a student worker at New Student Admissions. Besides mailing applications and talking to prospective students, Lundberg gives tours of SIUC to high school students and their parents.

Monday through Friday, Lundberg, one of four student workers at New Student Admissions, climbs into a van and drives around campus pointing out important buildings.

SIUC will hold its annual Senior Day from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Friday. More than 3,000 high school students will be wandering around campus and wondering about their class schedules, financial aid and SIUC in general.

And instead of driving a University van, Lundberg will get to drive a University bus.

“I’ve never gotten to drive the bus yet,” Lundberg confesses. “There are going to be a lot of people to talk to.”

U.S., CHINA TO HOLD HIGH-LEVEL MEETINGS — JAKARTA, Indonesia — China and the United States agreed Wednesday to an exchange of high-level visits over the next few months while also agreeing to disagree over contentious areas such as human rights and the status of Taiwan. In a further sign that the troubled relationship is on the mend, Secretary of State Warren Christopher, meeting here with Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, accepted an invitation to visit Beijing in November, in a possible prelude to a state visit by President Clinton if he is reelected. It will be only Christopher's second visit to China, and will come more than 2½ years after his disastrous 1994 foray during which the Chinese rounded up dozens of dissidents and publicly humiliated Christopher by lecturing him, saying that China's human rights practices were none of America's business. Christopher again raised human rights questions in Wednesday's 75-minute meeting with Qian. But whereas before the Clinton administration made human rights the centerpiece of its dealings with Beijing's Communist rulers, this time U.S. officials were stressing that continuing disagreements with China in some areas should not rupture the overall relationship.

BURUNDI'S PRESIDENT SEEKS REFUGE AT EMBASSY — BUJUMBURA, Burundi — Fearing a military coup, President Sylvestre Ntibantunganya has sought refuge in the U.S. ambassador's home here, plunging Burundi into political confusion and raising fears of more bloodshed between Hutus and Tutsis. The streets of Bujumbura, the capital, remained calm Wednesday night despite conflicting reports concerning the future of Burundi's fragile Hutu-Tutsi coalition government; the fate of Ntibantunganya, a Hutu; and the role of Burundi's Tutsi-dominated military in his flight to the guarded U.S. compound. But even with the quiet streets, uncertainty over who is in charge intensified fears that already inflamed ethnic tensions could once again spill over into the kind of tribal slaughter that has punctuated the history of this small central African country and that of its neighbor, Rwanda. In the last three years, more than 150,000 Burundians have died, and 400 to 1,000 are currently dying each month. Burundi, which won independence from Belgium in 1962, has the same 85 percent Hutu-14 percent Tutsi tribal mix as Rwanda, where Hutus massacred at least 500,000 people, mostly Tutsis, during a six-week period in 1994.

BILL BOOSTS LAW ENFORCEMENT FUNDING — WASHINGTON — The House approved Wednesday a $29.5 billion election-year spending bill that would significantly boost federal spending for fighting crime, drugs and illegal immigration. The measure, approved on a 246 to 179 vote, would fund the Commerce, Justice and State departments, and the federal judiciary for the year beginning Oct. 1. Just as they do on the campaign trail, lawmakers in both parties embraced the crime-fighting aspects of the measure. The bill would provide Justice Department crime-fighting $16.3 billion, a $1.6 billion increase over current spending. That money includes $2.8 billion for enforcing immigration laws, enough to add 1,100 border patrol agents. Drug enforcement programs would get $7.1 billion, including a $75 million initiative aimed at fighting drug production and manufacturing in foreign countries and $56 million to combat drug trafficking along the U.S.-Mexican border. The measure also includes a provision, added by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., that would require the president to seek Senate ratification of any changes being negotiated with Russia in the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty.

Crouch revives '60s sound

By Chad Anderson
DE Entertainment Editor

Like the aliens in the lyrics of his fantasy-based music, Randy Crouch invaded Carbondale last Thursday and provided an oasis in a music scene badly in need of variety. To say he is talented is not enough. To say he is innovative is still not enough. But to say he is the best musician to hit Carbondale in recent years is the truth.

Those who were at Booby's Beergarden, 406 S. Illinois Ave., last Wednesday and Thursday know, but to everyone else, this may seem dramatic and tough to picture.

To see Crouch perform is truly an experience. To describe him is an impossible task. From his previous reviews, many have tried, and failed, to define him. But then, how does one find words to describe a musician who plays the fiddle with the wah-wah peddle, can play the whammy bar of his Fender Stratocaster guitar on the floor with his foot simultaneously (he calls it toe-jammin') and also lists playing the peddle-steel guitar with his teeth as one of his many talents.

During his set at Booby's last Thursday, Crouch covered a number of Stevie Ray Vaughn songs and also performed a number of Jimi Hendrix tunes such as "And the Wind Cries Mary," "All Along the Watchtower," and "Purple Haze." These cover choices are standard songs for a man who enjoys playing distortion as much as Crouch does. At one point in his set, Crouch took his electric fiddle and held it against his Stratocaster, producing a wild feed-back sound and sending shivers down the audience members' spines. The true beauty is that he seems to have found the control of distortion in much the same way as his main influence, Hendrix, did in the late

'60s. "It's the many noises that he (Hendrix) got out of it. There are just so many different sounds you can get out of distortion," he said. "The Marshall (amplifier) is just another instrument in itself. It's got such a warm feeling to it. If you turn it up loud enough, to the point where it starts to back-feed, it almost plays itself."

When asked how he might describe himself or explain his style, Crouch answered humbly, putting into layman's terms what many critics have tried to describe poetically. "I'd just call myself a rock 'n' roll fiddler," he said. "I try to do as good on my guitar as I can, and I try to use the fiddle for rock 'n' roll. I like what one guy described me as, though, 'the original

grunge fiddler

However he is described, Crouch still captures one's musical soul and twists it, making one love everything about pure, amateur music.

His voice is somewhere between a mid-1970s Eric Clapton sound and James Taylor belting out "Steamroller" live. Grungy, yet bluesy. Harsh, yet soothing. Still, describing Crouch seems to be an

Blues Festival stirs souls in Murphysboro

By Chad Anderson
DE Entertainment Editor

The banks of the Big Muddy River could not have provided a more perfect setting for the fifth annual Riverside Blues Festival. Between the dreary, rainy, overcast weather and the lingering smell of opium, incense, the feeling of the blues could not help but find its way into the soul of all in attendance.

Even though the weather Saturday may have kept many concert-goers from attending the festival, overall, the day-long event proved to be a success, both on the musical and business fronts.

According to Robbie Braddock, Murphysboro Park District recreational director, 1,600 people passed through the gates, and provided a large enough crowd to turn a profit.

"The number count wasn't the best, compared to the estimated 3,500 last year," he said. "It probably was not until four or five o'clock that most of the crowd showed up."

Carbondale's own Alright Blues Band kicked off the

Student plays put on stage

By Lisa Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Laboratory Theater is the cocoon of many students' ideas. It breathes life into many dreams, and once again, several students are having the plays they concocted performed.

The Playwrights' Workshop is in full swing again this year with three plays by graduate students.

"Broke," written by Jonathan Graham, was the first of the three plays to start off the series.

Graham said the play shows many stereotypes of generations.

"It's really about the generation gap between the Baby Boomers and Generation X," he said. "One generation trying to take the place of the previous generation. I guess it's almost a coming of age play in the form of a comedy."

Graham said he was fascinated by all the media attention

"I wanted to try writing a comedy and something that wasn't exactly realistic."

Jonathan Graham,

Generation X was receiving, so he felt compelled to write the play.

"For me, as a member of Generation X, I would read some of the things that supposedly described us, and it really didn't describe me," he said. "So, I wanted to play with stereotypes. I wanted to try writing a comedy and something that wasn't exactly realistic."

Eddie Bradley spent nearly two years researching the main character of his play, "An Evening with Ira Aldridge," the second play of the series.

The play is based on a true story of an African-American actor in the 19th century. It portrays an actor who could not do much work in the United States because he was black, but when he traveled to Europe, his career blossomed.

Bradley said he felt compelled to write the play and first wrote it as a performance piece for himself.

"I put nearly two years of research into Aldridge," he said. "The play is grounded in history. I'm basing it on his life, so it's not an original work because it really is what happened to this man."

Bradley said he prefers the production as a play rather than a piece for himself.

"It's nice to be able to sit and watch your own work be per-

Swing band to perform last Sunset Concert

By Chad Anderson
DE Entertainment Editor

With the recent release of the movie "Swing Kids," jazz music has been making a comeback and the sounds of Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller, Frank Sinatra and Cab Calloway have been revitalized.

St. Louis-based jazz band Swing Set will perform the final date for the 1996 Sunset Concert series and provide the audience with a variety of jazz selections containing music from the '30s through the '50s.

The group plays mostly '30s and '40s swing jazz because of the quality of the music, but also enjoys mixing in some of its original songs.

Swing Set's own music is also influenced heavily by early jazz, and a pinch of '50s be-bop jazz.

Band leader and guitarist John Chiecsok said he began listening to jazz in his early 20s, but after gaining an appreciation for the forgotten music of yesterday, he decided swing was more interesting than the later forms of jazz.

"I found some older stuff I enjoyed listening to, and I liked it more than the be-bop stuff," he said. "Swing is more song oriented, and the song-writing in that era is really unmatched in this century. It could be compared to the era of the great composers of classical music."

"Plus," he added, "it's harder than hell to play be-bop."

Chiecsok said the Swing Set's members' carefree lifestyle is reflected in their music.

"Most of our original music is based on jazz music, but we have a few numbers that are Latin, tango and mamba," he said. "We've got three instrumentals that are swing related, and we have a couple that have a Latin feel."

The group consists of five members that range from 28 to 50 years old: Chiecsok on guitar and vocals, Richard Tralles playing bass, additional singing by John Marshall, Eric Shager playing saxophone and Chris Bess adding the sounds of the accordion.

Before the band formed, the five members had played in different

Administration: Respect choice to release names

SIUC HAS FINISHED THE INVESTIGATION reviewing Freedom of Information Act request policies and examining who did not properly use a black marker on documents released for a FOIA request. The request was for the names of students who received legislative tuition waivers. SIUC incorrectly believed the names should have been withheld and marked out the names, but the names could be read when the page was held to the light. SIUC, to appease politicians, paid Frederick Hess, a former federal prosecutor, $8,394 to review the policy of FOIA requests and discover who did not thoroughly mark out the names. SIUC administration should have known which legal counselor was in charge of the marking out of names and not wasted time and money on the investigation. The bottom line is that waivers are awards; were the names should be released.

THE UNIVERSITY IS NOW HIRING HESS FOR an undetermined amount of money to review policy, conduct employee training for preparing, sending and disposing of information for a FOIA request. This is unnecessary for legislative tuition waivers because the majority of the General Assembly and a state judge agree that the names need to be released. The governor said he supports a bill passed by the General Assembly calling for the names to be released.

While some legislators obey the law and do not use the waivers as political favors there are those who do abuse the privilege. Releasing the names ensures honesty among the legislators who hand these waivers out.

EVEN MANY OF THOSE WHO HAVE THE privilege of handing them out agree that the names should be published like any other scholarship or award. By releasing the names it keeps lawmakers in check and forces them to follow the same laws they create. If SIUC wants to appease the politicians, administrators need to acknowledge the legislature's decision.

SIUC athletes among world's Olympic elite

THIS WEEKEND AND NEXT AN SIUC STUDENT and two alumni will have their moment in the international spotlight when they compete in the centennial Olympic Games. They should be lauded for dedicating themselves enough to qualify and be among the elite athletes of the world.

We should feel a sense of pride that athletes from our University are competing in what is a distant fantasy for thousands of athletes across the nation.

The Olympics offer an opportunity for the world to send their greatest athletes to compete, peacefully, in games. It is much more than that for each athlete.

Tuesday night an American gymnast was injured near the end of the team gymnastic event. She completed her second vault attempt despite an injury she suffered on the first attempt. She tore ligaments in her leg and won the gold medal for America. That dedication is rewarded with Olympic medals and our admiration.

WATCH OUR SIUC ATHLETES COMPETE THIS week and next:

- Cameron Wright, high jump, preliminaries July 26 and finals July 28.
- Dora Kyriacou, 400-meter run, preliminaries July 27 and finals July 29.
- Connie Price-Smith, shot put, preliminaries July 31 and finals Aug. 2.

Letter to the Editor

Homosexuality: Disease to be treated

I write in objection to the recent articles about homosexuals. The Daily Egyptian's obvious left bias support for homosexuals is sickening. In four years I have yet to see a balanced report on the subject from the DE.

In 1975 the leadership of the medical community removed homosexuality as a pathology. But that is all they did. All any person need do is sit down at the library's professional journal index and type the word homosexual to have all the professional articles displayed for treating homosexuals. They number in the hundreds since 1975. The message of these articles is consistent. The homosexual is an individual possessed of a psychological and social disorder. Not because that is my opinion. But because that is the position of the professional community.

They also make another important point: Do not submit articles that re-establish homosexuality as a pathology. To any researcher, not to be published is academic death. So one can be certain as to what will not be submitted. It is also clear that these professional journals, the ones policy makers rely on to make law, have abandoned the scientific method in favor of a political agenda. The deceit and moral people of this country need to do what ever they can to see to it that they are not permitted to go away with it.

As for homosexual marriages, they violate state law, and college administrators who permit unlawful conduct on state property need to be held accountable for it. As to the domestic partnership agreements I wasn't aware they existed. I thank the DE for informing me. I am going to make it clear to my elected representatives that I do not think that this is an appropriate spending of tax money. It's sick. The people who accommodate it are sick.

Commentary

If we want safe airports, we need patience

The Washington Post

Security at U.S. airports tightens sharply when there are threats of sabotage, such as the Unabomber scare at Los Angeles airports a year ago. It ratchets up with the danger of reprisals, as it did last October when 10 men were convicted of plotting to blow up various New York City landmarks. Now the pressure is on again after the tragic explosion of TWA Flight 800, in which terrorism rides high on the list of potential causes.

At times like this, many Americans call for and readily accept the delays associated with tighter airport and airline security. But what happens when fears of terrorism fade, as they invariably do? In those calm periods, airport security must remain the top priority, for, unhappily, there's often something moving under the surface that could spell trouble.

Consider: Last May, for example, a guard at the federal Metropolitan Detention Center in Los Angeles was accused of wearing his uniform and flashing a badge to avoid detection at airport security checks, through which he allegedly funneled large quantities of heroin and cocaine. Last February, a motorist skirted a security gate at Los Angeles International Airport, drove onto a taxiway and directly into a departing jetliner with 138 passengers aboard. In November 1995 there were reports that sophisticated thieves had committed 1,707 baggage thefts at Los Angeles International during the year. A favored method was to barge into the metal detector line and simply grab another passenger's carry-on bag after it had passed through the X-ray machine.

None of these instances involved a direct assault on airplane safety, but they exposed airport security failures. Senior U.S. counterterrorism officials say U.S. commercial carriers lag behind foreign airlines in security precautions.

Why? Analysts point to public impatience once the motivation of fear has been lost; they say Americans would never agree to the strict and time-consuming steps of the Israeli national airline, for example.

If the analysts are correct; once the alarm of the explosion of Flight 800 has diminished, ticket prices and time delays will again become the predominant concerns of air travelers. When that happens, it will be important to remember that the LAX motorist could have been a suicide bomber, that the person flashing the badge might have been carrying an explosive or that the people who stole carry-on bags after the X-ray check might have quickly slipped explosives or weapons into the luggage.

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Lawsuit

on the lawsuit while it is pending. The lawsuit filed against SIUC Wednesday is now the fourth Stan Lieber is involved in.

The first lawsuit was filed by Lieber on May 18, 1993 requesting names and addresses of all potential freshmen inquiring about living in University Housing. The case is awaiting the Illinois Supreme Court's decision on whether to hear the case.

The second lawsuit was filed in the 20th Judicial Circuit, St. Clair County in November 1995, on the grounds that SIUC violated due process by changing freshmen housing policy from allowing freshmen to live either in University Housing or University-accepted freshmen housing, which includes Stevenson Arms. On Dec. 14, 1995, the court ordered a preliminary injunction against SIUC and ordered the changes not to happen until the lawsuit is dismissed or the judge changes the order.

Peters said he will be filing motions against SIUC later this week on the preliminary injunction because of noncompliance by the University.

"The problem is, nothing is going on in this case," he said. "I will be filing a motion to compel against the University because I want answers and I will be asking the court to grant sanctions against SIUC."

Peters said if the court grants his request, the sanctions will require action by the defendant.

"Basically, if you don't comply or answer questions and the court grants a sanction, you have to answer, or the court will punish them. The court could make them pay attorney fees, or the court could even close the case," he said. "Unless they give me the answers I am seeking, I will file as many sanctions as possible against them."

A third lawsuit was filed at the same time as the second in the federal courthouse in Benton. The anti-trust statute states businesses cannot fix prices or regulate their businesses to beat the competition. The lawsuit alleges SIUC broke this statute because it controls where freshmen can live. The federal court has not set a date for the trial yet.

Tour

she said the student workers will have to be on their best behavior Friday.

"The attitude is more relaxed in the summer compared to the fall," Lundberg said. "We don't give as many tours. But on Friday, we'll be dressed up."

Lundberg said before new student workers are allowed to give tours on their own, they follow around another worker.

Lundberg's partner, Jeff Hufford, a senior in exercise science from Mount Morris, said the point of the program is to convey the best parts of SIUC to the students.

"You just be honest about different experiences at SIUC," he said. "We send surveys out to parents and students to see what they thought of the tour. So far we've never had a bad complaint."

Hufford said he appreciates when parents go on the tour because they are more talkative.

"Parents ask better questions," he said. "The tour is better when people ask questions. I could ramble on about the 17th president of the University, but that's pretty irrelevant."

The silence in the van prompts Lundberg to keep pointing out buildings. She talks about Lawson Hall and its lecture rooms, she gives some facts about the Communication Building and then she mentions Housing.

When she hears that she will get to walk inside a dorm room, Takisha Jackson, a senior at Bellwood South in Chicago, begins perk up and ask questions.

"Do you get your own bathroom?", she asked. "I hope that you do. I hope the rooms are big."

Lundberg takes the students to a prepared room in Thompson Point, as the students walk out, Jackson explains why she took the tour.

"I have lots of friends that go here, but I've never seen it," she said. "You get a nice video, but that doesn't compare to the real thing."

Lundberg said she tries to talk about issues that she was curious about when she was an incoming freshman.

"I try to focus on Housing," she said. "People want to know where they are going to live, where they will eat. Questions about e-mail are pretty popular."

Lundberg said student tour guides try to avoid questions about the bar and party scene.

"We don't want to talk about anything that will convey a bad impression of SIUC," she said.

As the van nears the end of its tour by South Illinois Avenue, John McNeil, a senior from Providence High School in Lockport, asks Lundberg one more important question.

"What's there to do that's fun around here?" he asked.

and only available to older students, Scally said there is a possibility they will make more super-singles in the future.

"Right now, the 17th floor is kind of a pilot test to see if students will like it," Scally said.

"So far all of the rooms are filled. It turned out to be a very popular option."

Even though all of the rooms are full, Anyele Kwao, a senior in food and nutrition from Chicago, is hop-

Scally said the rooms will be $605 per semester, which is $100 more than regular singles in residence housing.

Temporarily disabled receives new transportation

Disabled Student Services' scooter provides extra help

By Tim Carroll
Daily Egyptian Reporter

In July, Disabled Student Services received an electric scooter that will help fill the loss of their transportation service that had previously assisted the temporarily disabled.

Before July 1, students with a temporary disability could come in and get tickets that provided them a ride from their home to campus and back, Kathleen Plesko, DSS director said.

DSS provided tickets for seven permanently disabled students and 16 temporarily disabled students during this past spring semester.

After July 1, DSS cut the program because the mass transit system had been installed.

"We felt that the service was not utilized enough for us to continue it when there already is a transit system in place," Plesko said.

The problem with the system was that it was not designed to transport people around campus. "No matter where the student

"The scooter will enable a student who has a sprained ankle or broken leg to drive right into class."

Kathleen Plesko,
director, Disabled Student Services had their first class in the mornings they were dropped off at the Student Center," Plesko said.

A donation by the U.S. Information Agency allows temporarily disabled students convenient access to campus in the form of a scooter dubbed the Pride Shuttle.

The Pride Shuttle, valued at $2,495, was donated by the USIA to assist students that are disabled. Originally, the Academic and Professional Programs for the Americas made arrangements for the purchase of the scooter for Cecilia Freire, a former graduate student from Guayquil, Ecuador.

Freire, who was working on a master's degree in education at SIUC, had polio as a child, Kim Killingsworth, LASPAU program adviser said.

"When Freire arrived at SIUC, she found getting from her off-campus home on crutches to her classes challenging," Killingsworth said.

"The scooter was given to Freire to facilitate her education."

Once she was finished, it was understood that the scooter would revert to the institution, Killingsworth said.

Freire graduated this spring but it took a while for SIUC to process the paperwork, Plesko said.

DSS was happy to receive the scooter and plans to put it to good use, Plesko said.

Besides the scooter, DSS also provides rides for those with permanent disabilities and parking passes for the temporarily disabled.

The new scooter will enable a student who has a sprained ankle or broken leg to drive right into their class if needed, Plesko said.

The scooter is available as a rental for a fee, which is not yet determined.

Plesko said that electric wheel chairs cost $10 a day to rent and the new scooter will probably be around $5 a day, paid by the student.

Blues Band kicked off the day by opening the show at 1 p.m. after waiting for the rain to clear, and proved to those in attendance that a college band could keep pace with well-established, touring blues groups. The Alright Blues Band represented the true meaning behind blues music, reminding everyone what the blues is all about — a free forum for expression and music.

One of the biggest surprises of the line-up was the performance of Steve Pecora and the Tonckings. With his cream-colored Fender Stratocaster guitar slung across his shoulder like a weapon, Pecora pleased the crowd with a number of Stevie Ray Vaughn covers and played to the audience's wishes by performing Jimi Hendrix songs such as "Voodoo Chile" and "Hey Joe." His encore was the first of the evening, demanded by the whistling and clapping of an awed audience.

One of the more impressive bands, Phil Guy and the Chicago Machine, was heavily overshadowed by the hype of the main act, Mighty Joe Young. Beginning its set, Phil Guy struck the first note of the group's opening song and just about shattered every pair of eardrums in attendance.

One of Guy's more popular songs was "The Garbage Man Blues." The song contained humorous lyrics about a man "coming home to find his wife making love to the garbage man." With these lyrics, Guy added in his own interjections such as "ain't that the blues" to play to the crowd between verses.

While Phil Guy and the Chicago Machine was surprisingly good, the headlining act, Might Joe Young seemed too rehearsed and show-like to fit in with the other bands.

Greg Meyer, a senior in anthropology from Lake in the Hills, agreed that Mighty Joe Young distanced itself from the other bands because of the group's rehearsed look.

"I thought Phil Guy was real cool," he said. "I thought the last band (Mighty Joe Young) was too flashy, though. The others were real low-key, and those guys created their own encore. I didn't enjoy it as much."

The entire day consisted of a festive attitude, and the crowd seemed ready to welcome any band onto the stage. Other bands on the bill such as Lil' Ed with Dave Weld and the Imperial Flames, the Leroy Pierson Band, and Tawl Paul and Slappin' Henry Blue all provided a wide variety of blues styles. From the wild sounds and look of Tawl Paul to the bluegrass sound of the Leroy Pierson Band, the blues has not had an opportunity in quite some time to present itself in our setting in so many different forms.

"It's nice to be able to sit and watch your own work be performed," he said. "I'm excited when the show is performed. It's nice to witness your own stuff."

The third play is also a historical piece. However, it is about a woman who was decades ahead of her time. "Woodhull," a piece by Liza Lentini, is about a woman presidential candidate in 1872.

Lentini got excited talking about the play written about Victoria Woodhull.

"She was such an amazing woman," she said. "Her ideas were way ahead of her time. For instance she had ideas on birth control. She wanted to run for president and she did, but very little is documented on her because she was such an outcast in her time." Lentini said the play is set around the time when Woodhull was running for president, almost 50 years before women could even vote.

"The play shows how she made money to run and what she went through just to get to the point of being put on the ballot," she said. "Her ups and downs, and even her time spent in jail is included in the play. She was a pretty amazing woman, and I hope this play does her justice."

The three plays are scheduled to run again next week beginning Monday.

"Broke" runs on Monday at 8 p.m., "An Evening With Ira Aldridge" runs Tuesday at 8 p.m., and "Woodhull" closes out the series on Wednesday at 8 p.m. All plays are performed in the Laboratory Theater. Tickets are $4 and can be purchased at the McLeod Box Office.

Crouch

"I just try and do the best I can," he said. "I was really forced into singing because I would write songs and nobody would sing them. I love to sing, though, even though I don't do it very well with my eyes open. I tend to dream, and think about other things if they're open."

A demo tape provided prior to his arrival offered no help in defining his music, although it was an interesting listen. One track on this tape was entitled "Spacewhales." According to Crouch, the song was composed of three separate fiddle tracks in an Austin, Texas studio using, of course, his trademark wah-wah peddle, which distorts and changes the tone of the guitar. As the title, "Spacewhales", may imply, the music is a melody of distorted notes which sound like whale calls, but somehow the echo effect gives it an infinitive feeling of space.

Crouch has been playing music ever since he picked up a ukulele as a small child. In the 27 years since then, he has added the fiddle, which he has adopted as his trademark. His combination of the fiddle, distortion and a wah-wah

"If I could make decent living, I wouldn't really care about making it big. Just as long as I could play for people who enjoyed my music."

Randy Crouch, musician

peddle has earned him a reputation throughout Texas, Tenn., Okla., and now Southern Illinois.

"My music is about fantasy and the environment," he said. "The fantasy part probably started when I saw Fantasia, and they had the flying horses. That really got me thinking about space, and all of that."

"The environment is something I feel pretty strong about. It has an environmental message because we've gotta take care of nature."

Crouch's music covers so many different spectrums, everything from psychedelic rock to country-western, that labels do not stick to him and he resists definition.

"The word psychedelic gets overused, but that's what we really try to do. I want to mean something to people," he said. "If I could make a decent living, I wouldn't really care about making it big. Just as long as I could play for people who enjoyed my music."

Crouch's need to mean something to people and his love of nature are what will bring him back to Carbondale from his hometown of Tahlequah, Okla.

"I can't believe how much fun I had with friends I didn't even know I had," he said. "I'm coming back the first chance I get. I was real nervous about playing because of all the different bands people see every night in all the bars, but for people to dance around the group like that and accept us is a real shot in the arm."

Crouch will release an album in the Carbondale area sometime in August and is also working on recording a live album in Dallas.

Swing

Before the band formed, the five members had played in different groups with a variety of musical styles including reggae, rockabilly and Dixieland, giving the band a broad base to work from when writing and performing songs. Swing Set can even be expected to play some polka music.

"People should expect a lot of harmony and rhythm arrangements, and hopefully some humor," Chicsek said. "Most of all we want everyone to have a good time. We're not a real serious band, and we hope people just have fun and dance."

Swing-Set will perform Thursday at Turley Park at 7 p.m.

Summer movies heat up screen

■ THE ADVENTURES OF PINOCCHIO—Jim Henson's Creature Shop and computer imagery help spin the magic in a live-action adaptation of the family classic, with Martin Landau as Geppetto and Jonathan Taylor Thomas as his creation. (G.)

■ THE CABLE GUY—A baffling combination of "Ace Ventura, Pet Detective" and "Cape Fear" that comes off as a misguided attempt to extend Jim Carrey's range by having him play a demented and dangerous cable installer. (PG-13, dark thematic elements and crude humor.)

■ CELESTIAL CLOCKWORK—An international cast is headed by Ariadna Gil ("La Belle Epoque") as a Venezuelan in Paris pursuing her dream of becoming an opera singer through a forest of wacky characters and subplots. (Unrated.)

■ COURAGE UNDER FIRE—Intelligent, involving and serious, this Edward Zwick-directed story of the search for the truth about a Gulf War battle is as honestly emotional as Hollywood allows itself to get. Though they do not appear together, stars Meg Ryan and Denzel Washington invigorate the film, with Washington especially raising his work to a new level. (R, for war violence and language.)

■ DRAGONHEART—A frustrating combination of the magical and the mundane, this thousand-year-old buddy movie has less difficulty creating a creditable dragon than a recognizable human being. Dennis Quaid stars, Sean Connery speaks for the dragon. (PG-13, action and violence.)

■ ERASER—Arnold Schwarzenegger is at it again, taking lives and saving the world. Here he is a stalwart of the federal witness-protection plan, having to keep Vanessa Williams away from the clutches of doom. It's tough work, and the big guy is starting to look tired. (R, for violent action throughout and some language.)

■ FLED—A standard hard-action thriller enlivened by Laurence Fishburne and Stephen Baldwin in engaging, humorous roles as run-away convicts, neither quite who he is at first seems. Familiar but solid summer diversion. With Salma Hayek and Will Patton. (R, for strong violence and language, and for some nudity.)

■ THE FRIGHTENERS—Directed by the eccentric Peter Jackson ("Heavenly Creatures"), this brash dark comedy of the paranormal gets increasingly unnerving as it goes along. Saucy and scary, it creates the illusion of spinning out of control. (R, terror/violence.)

Hockey club rolls into popularity

By Kevin DeFries
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Three years ago, then-senior classman and northern Illinois native Tom Cory desperately wanted to play roller hockey. However, the climate of Southern Illinois was not conducive to his wishes.

Then, as he was about to graduate, in-line roller skating became a fast growing sport. Suddenly hockey could be played on any hard surface, as opposed to requiring an ice rink and Cory's wish was fulfilled.

While still requiring the movements and skills needed in hockey, in-line skates provided both the flexibility and maneuverability of ice skates.

Cory is long gone from SIUC, but his dreams have developed into the SIUC Roller Hockey Club—the fastest growing and largest Student Registered Organization club on campus.

With membership this past spring numbering more than 120 students, Thom Hoelscher, the club's vice-president, said interest and membership in the club continues to grow.

One of the advanced division team members, Ron Johnson, was goalie this past semester for the "Big Johnsons" team.

"I started playing ice hockey at age five back home in Des Plaines," Johnson said. "I'd never played roller hockey before but I saw a flier for a new member sign up, and joined."

The club has different skill levels for beginners, or advanced players.

"We have three different skill levels," Hoelscher said. If someone says they are a B division player, they already have the fundamentals of the game and probably have played a while.

If they are a beginner, they can enter the C Division. Everybody gets to play and nobody gets cut."

The only division that requires an audition is the advanced A division, Hoelscher said.

The club uses the tennis court on Wall street, south of the SIUC Towers.

Hoelscher said the Recreation Center will be resurfacing, repairing and painting the court in traditional hockey rink style.

Johnson said he is glad they are fixing the court.

"You can't make a really good pass because of the cracks in the surface."

Paul Mallory—The Daily Egyptian

"You can't make a really good pass because of the cracks in the surface," he said. "It will be a much cleaner game after the repairs are done."

Hoelscher said fliers will be posted around campus and there will be notice posted in the DE announcing a sign-up period for people interested in joining the club.

Actual try-outs will be held after Labor Day for the A division.

"If you want to play, get some skates, a stick and come on out. There is a one-time $25 membership fee to cover referee and equipment expenses, but that's all it takes," Hoelscher said.

Lighted McAndrew is bright idea for SIUC fans

God said, "Let there be light, and there was," so it makes me wonder why the powers that be at SIUC have waited almost 23 years to once again approve lights at McAndrew Stadium.

It has been a week since the SIUC Board of Trustees approved a $2.8 million plan to give many of the sports facilities on campus, including McAndrew Stadium, a much needed uplift.

Overall, I applaud the University to show its support for the athletic program here, but the issue of night football should have been resolved many years ago.

Granted, it is hard to justify trying to sell a team that has gone 100-159-1 since the lights which graced McAndrew Stadium were shut off Oct. 20, 1973, but there are plenty of reasons to play night games at McAndrew Stadium.

One thing night games would do is offer those under 21 a place to go on Saturday nights. The University and the city of Carbondale have promised alternative activities to those who were shut out of the bars when the entry age rose to 21 July 1.

This is the perfect alternative, and on top of that, the University does not have to shell out any additional funds to offer it.

Another reason for night football now is it would help pay for the cost of the lights themselves. With games played under the lights, days like Alumni Day and Parent's Weekend would be exactly that — weekends.

Alumni and boosters would come out on Friday, stay Saturday afternoon, go to the Saluki game at night, stay-overnight and leave on Sunday. Not only would local businesses prosper, but with seven home games this season, the

Chris Clark

From the Pressbox

University stands to make a killing.

The Salukis have seven home games this season, and with that there is the increased chance of a winning season and more local exposure for the team. With the improved success, the alumni and boosters may start giving more of their dollars to the football program.

The biggest reason, though, for having night games at McAndrew Stadium is that they are not only sporting events, but community events as well.

On Sept. 3, 1990, Lake Park High School in Roselle held the first night football game in the school's history against Glenbard North. Although I went to the game because my brother was the starting middle linebacker that season, there were hundreds of people present that had no ties other than to have fun with their friends on a Saturday night. Some even came from out of town to witness that game, as well as all the other night games.

The Lancers finished that season with a 4-5 record, but it never really mattered. Every time there was a night game at Lake Park, the stands were full.

The reason I mention this is because Roselle has a population of about 20,000 — similar to that of Carbondale — and there is no reason why the seats at McAndrew Stadium should not be full of screaming Saluki fans every week.

Anyone who has been to a Saluki home game knows that if everyone attending the tailgate parties before kickoff actually went into the "Dawg House," as SIUC football coach Shawn Watson calls it, McAndrew would be full every week.

Sure, this is a bit of a catch-22. I mean, there can not be night games without the money to fund the lights, but there will not be money to fund the lights without night games. It is a vicious circle, and someone had to stop it.

Besides, nothing could be better than to have an early tailgate party, an evening Saluki game and a trip to the Strip at night to celebrate a Dawgs victory.

Between the Lines

Chicago White Sox first baseman Frank Thomas, who has missed the last three weeks with a stress fracture in his left foot, will miss another week before returning to the lineup.

Thomas, who has missed 13 games due to the injury, was available to come back Tuesday, but is still bothered by pain in the left foot.

Thomas had played 346 consecutive games, which was second only to Cal Ripken among active players and has never gone more than two games without reaching base over 876 career major-league games.

Charlotte Hornets forward Anthony Mason was arrested Wednesday morning and charged with assault and disorderly conduct in New York.

According to New York City police, Mason was involved in a verbal dispute with a few people and became emotional and disruptive. When police tried to arrest him for disorderly conduct, Mason resisted and caused minor injuries to two officers.

University of Florida junior running back Fred Taylor has reportedly been suspended for the first month of the upcoming season.

The Florida Times-Union reported Tuesday that Taylor has been suspended for through September by University officials, which would be a four-game suspension. The ruling keeps Taylor out of two non-conference matchups and a road game against Tennessee Sept. 21.

Taylor and reserve defensive backs Damian Hill and Doek Pollard were arrested and charged with petty theft in June when they allegedly stole and resold textbooks.

Minnesota Vikings outside linebacker Ed McCDaniel, the leading tackler for the squad last season, may have had his season end during his first full practice Tuesday.

McCDaniel tore his anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee while making a tackle Tuesday. He will attempt to let the injury heal on his own for the next two to three weeks but will probably need season-ending surgery in mid-August.

McCDaniel led the NFL in tackles for losses the last two seasons. He had 19 stops behind the line of scrimmage last season, six more than his nearest competitor.
