Victim's mother testifies in trial

DAY TWO: Defense Prosecution, present opening arguments in Labron Neal case.

KEVIN WALSH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The emotional mother of a teenage murder victim took the stand Tuesday in day two of a double-murder trial that included opening arguments laden with references to gangs and drugs.

Prosecution and defense attorneys presented opening arguments in the trial of Labron C. Neal. The defendant is expected to testify at some point during the trial, which continues today.

Neal, 18, of Carbondale, is charged with six counts of first-degree murder for allegedly shooting two Carbondale High School students in August 1996.

Terrance Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale, and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro were found dead in the pre-dawn hours of Aug. 11 outside a trailer party at Carbondale Mobile Homes on Route 51.

Campbell's mother, Renee Campbell, testified in what was the day's most emotionally charged testimony.

Also testifying were Mitchell's mother, four police officers, a forensic pathologist and a teenager who found Mitchell's body.

As Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec held up a portrait of Renee Campbell's healthy son, she wept, wiping her eyes with a tissue.

She then recounted how her son helped his father paint the house the day before his body was found.

She testified that someone called her home that night to ask if her son had gotten home. Campbell said the caller told her that "a lot of bad things happened out there [at Carbondale Mobile Homes] that night."

Campbell said the caller identified himself as Neal.

When Campbell walked off the stand, her eyes fixed angrily on Neal, who had sat silently with a stoic expression during her testimony.

Earlier in the day, the prosecution and defense presented opening arguments that concluded before lunch.

Wepsiec fired the first salvo in a barrage of accusations placing Neal at the scene of the crime.

"The defendant, Labron Neal, admitted to several witnesses that he shot the boys," Wepsiec said.

Wepsiec encouraged the jury to focus on the testimony of the key witnesses such as LaSean Galloway, who the prosecution contends retrieved the murder weapon after Neal told him where it was hidden.

Wepsiec said that "Galloway will testify that he was told by Neal to wipe it [the gun] down and throw it away."

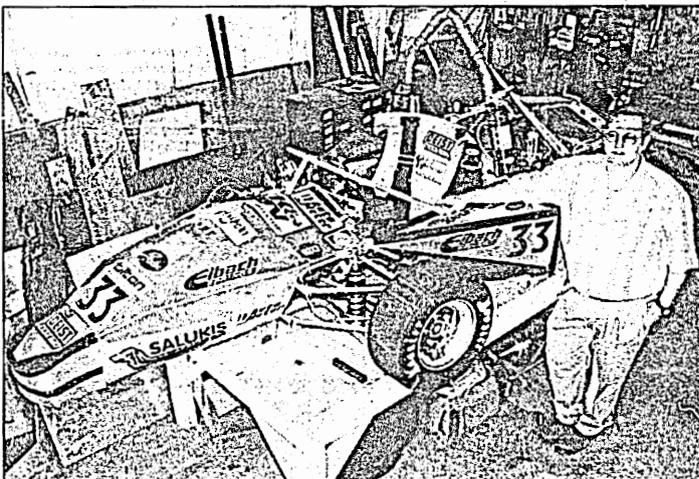

After Neal became the prime suspect, Galloway was fitted with a body wiretap to record conversations with Neal in which the prosecution says Neal admits to being involved in the murder.

Society strips team of rookie honors

CONTESTED: Opponent appeals its ranking, edges SIUC engineering team.

VASSILIS NEMITAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The award-winning SIUC engineering team that earned Rookie of the Year honors at a race car performance competition in May has been stripped of that award.

SIUC's team recently lost the title because of a protest made by University of North Carolina regarding UNC's rank in the May 14-18 competitor in Detroit.

UNC, who was not originally recognized as a rookie team in the competition, complained, and their rank was lowered to rookie. UNC's final points totaled more than SIUC's points, and UNC received the award.

The SIUC team was not aware the title had been stripped until June 26, when one of the team's members was surfing the Internet.

But team supervisor Farhang Kambiz says the team's overall performance outweighs the loss.

"If I can change it I will, but we don't care that much for the title," Kambiz said of the team, which competed for the first time in the event. "We were only heading for a finish, but we did very good. Actually, in every competition of the event, we were finishing above the average."

Only 1.7 points came between SIUC's American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME) chapter winning the Rookie of the Year Award in the "Formula SAE" competition organized by the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE).

The competition invited college students from all over the world to design, fabricate and compete with small, formula-style race cars. The competition was sponsored by Chrysler, Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp.

SIUC was among 99 participating colleges, including teams from University of Texas, Canada, Mexico and the United Kingdom. There were 13 rookie teams.

Team member Anthony Rickert, a junior in mechanical engineering from Alton, said the car was designed and test driven by his team of six members. He said his team worked hard and faced difficulties even moments before leaving for Detroit.

"The week before the competition, we were sleeping every other night to have it done," he said. "But the day before we left we broke a shift cable, and we had to completely build a new mechanical linkage."

"Then on the last day, a rod that holds the caliper broke. Five hours before we left, we had to put it up together. We didn't know if it would hold."

In spite of the difficulties, Kambiz said the team pulled together to fix the last-minute repairs.

"They worked so well," said Kambiz, an associate professor in mechanical engineering and energy processes. "They got together and worked on it. I was impressed by the team."

In Detroit, the atmosphere was reminiscent of the Indianapolis 500. Team

Council to swap venues with USG

TRADING PLACES: Council to meet in Student Center twice next year; USG to meet at Civic Center in October.

Alice Johnson/
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Carbondale City Council is planning two City Council meetings on the SIUC campus next year.

Dave Vingren, Undergraduate Student Government president, said having the City Council meetings on campus will allow students to become more involved in city government.

"The city and USG are cooperating to make it so there is equal opportunity to be a part of the process of student and city government," Vingren said.

The proposal to have a City Council meeting on campus was part of City Councilmen John Budzlick's and Larry Briggs' successful campaigns in April.

"We need to get more students involved. If any students have any problems, they are welcome to come discuss them," Budzlick said. "So many people think not much can be done."

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty and City Clerk Janet Vaught still are deciding on a time and a location for the meeting that will not conflict with any other events in September.

"It shows that there is cooperation, and it demonstrates that the University community and the Carbondale community are one," Doherty said.

Briggs said having a City Council meeting on campus is a good idea.

Owners looking for financing

TRAVEL PLANS:

Partners hope to establish bus route.

BRIAN EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

For only $39.95, SIUC students from Chicago can expect an affordable trip home if two local business partners can drum up financial support for their project.

Mark Robinson, owner of The Bike Surgeon, 800 W. Sycamore St., and Rachel Harrison, his business partner, are asking out-of-town lending institutions to provide them with $28,000 to initiate a new line of buses.

The Bus to Chicago Co. is the name that Robinson plans on giving the new line of buses.

A tentative travel schedule has been developed. Buses will leave from Carbondale to Chicago on Friday afternoon and depart from Chicago Sunday afternoon.

Harrison said the bus line should begin operation by late August, if the project receives financial support.

"We are going to have to go out of town to find financing for our project," Robinson said. "Local institutions have no faith in how successful this project will be."

The money will be used to purchase and remodel two buses, but some of the funds will be used to promote the struggling bus line.

"Right now our only form of advertising has been word of mouth," Harrison said. "An incredible amount of students have already been calling us about the route to Chicago."

Lindella McIntosh, a junior in English from Chicago, rides the Greyhound to Chicago almost every weekend. A round-trip ticket from Greyhound to Chicago is $70.

"I think $39.95 is a very reasonable price to pay for a ride to Chicago and back," McIntosh said. "Sometimes it is crowded on the Greyhound, and they make so many stops on the way home that it is annoying."

The Bus to Chicago Co. buses will make stops at Champaign, Schaumburg and Homewood.

Robinson said a one-way ticket will be $38.95, and a round-trip ticket will be $39.95.

"That should stop all of the $15-dollar riders from crowding the buses (for a one-way trip)," he said.

The two have already purchased one 24-passenger-seat bus, which they call the first-class bus.

"We are going to rent this bus out to groups as well as take it to Chicago," Robinson said. "People will be allowed to consume alcohol on this bus if they choose and enjoy their traveling while having a great time."

The couple said they would like to own three buses when they begin transporting passengers.

After they receive the money for two new 72 passenger-seat buses, they plan on making mod-

Award-winning film confiscated

OKLAHOMA RULING:

Courts rule scene obscene, order film removed from video store shelves.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC alumna Sigurd Ugaard was dismayed to learn that a highly regarded film recently has become the center of controversy.

A June 25 ruling by an Oklahoma County District judge declared part of the award-winning film "The Tin Drum" (1979) to be obscene. As a result, Oklahoma Police confiscated the film from libraries, video stores and at least one home in the county.

Ugaard, manager of Rosetta News, 210 W. Freeman St., said his store rents a copy of the film and also has a copy of the book on which the movie was based. He said "The Tin Drum" is a popular and significant film.

"The movie is checked out currently, and we always keep it in stock because it rents occasionally," he said. "It's a highly regarded film that was well-received in the late '70s. It's pretty scary. This is the '90s."

"The Tin Drum" is an Academy Award-winning foreign film that shared the 1979 Cannes Film Festival's grand prize with the movie "Apocalypse Now." It also has won many other awards.

Set in Germany against the rise and fall of the Third Reich, the movie's plot follows the life of a 3-year-old boy who consciously decides to stop growing because of the adult behavior he sees around him. He remains "3 years old" for the next 18 years.

Although he does not grow, he begins to adopt some of the adult behavior he earlier had rejected. The scene of the movie in question involves a sexual encounter between the "3-year-old" and a teenage girl, which occurs about 18 years after the boy's decision to remain a toddler.

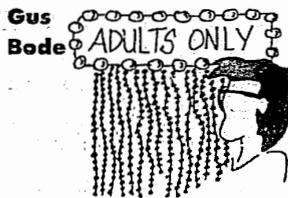

The actor portraying the 3-year-old was 13 years old at the time.

The obscenity ruling about the scene was made at the request of the Oklahoma City Police Department. The police received a copy of the film from a concerned citizen who had checked the film out of Oklahoma's Metropolitan Library System. The patron is the executive director of Oklahomans for Children and Families, a family-values-based watchdog group.

Campus streets to get new names

SAME LOCATIONS: Touch of Nature and Carterville campus also to be affected.

HEATHER YATES
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

People driving north of Pulliam Hall soon will be cruising on Clocktower Drive because of the recent naming of all campus streets to accommodate an updated 911 system.

Scott Sylvester, 911 Information Systems Manager, said the new signs should be up in time for students coming to SIUC in the fall.

"The signs are made; we are just waiting to put them up," Sylvester said.

Sylvester said the signs are essential so that emergency services can better locate areas. The names of buildings are not displayed on the 911 computers, so an address is necessary.

In February, the Board of Trustees named 23 drives and roads on the Carbondale campus to comply with the needs of Jackson County's 911 system. To be connected with the system, each building must have an address, and each street must possess a name.

SIUC names for campus buildings will not change. At Thursday's SIUC Board of Trustees meeting, three additional streets were named in Carbondale. Names for streets in the Carterville campus and Touch of Nature also were approved.

The names approved at Thursday's BOT meeting for SIUC's campus were West Access Drive, Clocktower Drive, Saluki Drive and South Normal Avenue.

The streets named at Touch of Nature include Spotted Horse Path, Oikos Road, Bushyhead path and Stormalung path.

Student Trustee Pat Kelly said he had a few problems with the names chosen. Kelly said more thought should have gone into these names.

"There is so much you can do with a name," Kelly said.

Kelly said he thinks the names should be based more on historical figures.

"The University has a better chance of generating revenue by naming a street Pepsi Cola Avenue than it does calling it Administration Drive," Kelly said.

However, at the Thursday meeting, Chancellor Donald Beggs said the names were made with input from University employees.

William Capie, associate vice chancellor for Administration, said there will be an additional cost for the signs, but the University will have some help with the funding.

The 911 system provides the installation, but the University is responsible for the cost of the signs. Capie has no estimate of the costs yet.

Black Greeks to be greeted by hundreds of Philadelphia police

When thousands of African-American fraternity and sorority members step into Philadelphia today for the annual Greek Picnic, hundreds of city police officers will be on call to greet them.

Even though the picnic has sparked little trouble in recent years, city officials are dispatching hundreds of cops to maintain crowd control and direct traffic at Fairmount Park's Belmont Plateau in the daytime and on South Street at night.

"Whenever we have a large number of police out, it is because of sheer numbers," said city Managing Director Joseph Certaine.

Certainly said that, with at least 100,000 and perhaps as many as 250,000 visitors expected, city officials are treating the Greek Picnic as they would any other major city gathering.

"Our goal is really to keep traffic moving. It is imperative that there is a safe traffic environment," Certaine said. But some who attend the picnic say the large police presence is uncalled for and suggest that racial stereotyping may be prompting the deployment.

"I've been coming to these picnics for a long time, and I am disturbed at how reactive the city has been to black folks coming together and having a good time," said William Carbin of Philadelphia, a 1985 Howard University graduate.

USC student denies murder of newborn baby

A university student accused of giving birth to a baby and dumping the newborn down a garbage chute pleaded innocent to murder Thursday.

Linda Chu, 20, who was extradited from her parents' home in Niles, Ill., was ordered held in custody on $1 million bail.

Judge Michael Kellogg set a July 17 bail hearing during Chu's brief appearance in Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Afterwards, Chu's attorney told reporters the University of Southern California sophomore business major denied the charges of murder and child abuse.

"She's a wonderful, intelligent, caring, sweet person," said Mark McDonald.

Deputy District Attorney Marlene Sanchez told the court Chu delivered a full-term baby girl May 7, days before she left for summer break.

Chu allegedly dumped the baby in the garbage chute of her apartment and the body was later found by a maintenance worker after Chu had left the campus for her parents' home.

Repeal of scavenging ordinance shows City Council listens

THE CARBONDALE CITY COUNCIL DE- serves kudos for acknowledging its mistake in passing an ill-fated ordinance.

Last week, the council repealed a new city ordinance against scavenging through garbage left on curbsides. Concerned citizens barged councilmembers with complaints about the ordinance, which was passed in May, and Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan was quoted as saying she had "gotten a lot of heat" before the council repealed it.

IT IS A RELIEF TO SEE THAT CITIZENS' CONCERNS do not fall on deaf ears, and the council's speedy attention to citizens' concerns should set a precedent for the upcoming year.

The City Council had claimed that all garbage and refuse placed at curbside for collection was city property. Under the dead ordinance, those caught taking recyclables or other material could have been fined $10 to $500 by the city.

INSTEAD OF TRYING TO LINE THE CITY'S pockets with more cash from disgruntled citizens, it is refreshing to know that we can allow those who care about salvaging goods to quietly go about, recycling items.

And contrary to what Mayor Neil Dillard believes, Carbondale is not teeming with scattered garbage left behind by scavengers.

Before the ordinance was repealed, Dillard asked councilmembers to drive around town on their own on garbage collection days, to see garbage left behind by those looking for recyclable items. He urged the council, "Don't depend on what anyone else tells you."

Dillard appears to say that it was, in fact, OK for councilmembers to pass the ordinance 4-1 without doing their own research in the first place. This seems highly hypocritical.

THERE WERE A FEW COMPLAINTS FROM people whose garbage bags were ripped open by scavengers. Those people did have the right to complain about the mess left behind by wind blowing through their garbage's tattered remains.

But, the council did not consider the general opinion of Carbondale's citizens when it rushed the ordinance through in May.

THE PASSIONATE OUTCRY BY THOSE slighted citizens, before and during last week's council meeting, should serve as a warning. The City Council's lack of research resulted in petty and unnecessary action.

Although the council's mistake could have been prevented, it should look back at the fiasco before being presented with new and similar legislation.

COUNCILMEMBERS, CONSIDER THIS A lesson learned: Do not pander to the whims of the few when you were elected to serve the many.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

So the evil Republicans are trying dismantle the National Endowment for the Arts. Last week, the House voted to kill federal funding for the NEA. However, NEA backers have a White House promise that Clinton will veto any such legislation.

As idealistic youth, it is our job to get into an uproar and demand that the federal government continue to fund this organization.

We will point to such facts as that our nation now spends roughly enough money on the military that it could send a successful military campaign, to say, conquer Neptune, or point out any other ridiculous misappropriation of our tax dollars.

However, ending the NEA in its current state might not be such a bad idea, and here is why.

The way I see it (with my eyes), the NEA has two main jobs. One job is to help fund artsy type events, such as the Sunset Concerts.

Though it may be argued that these open-to-the-public events do not have any immediate benefits except that it allows my roommates and I to drink beer on campus and look at women, in actuality there are a number of positive side effects.

They offer entertainment in a relatively controlled environment, they invoke community pride and togetherness, and they look good on a real estate resume. So, in this respect, the NEA is a good thing. I won't argue that.

However, there is another function of the NEA, this being the granting of money to specific individuals that enable them to create works of art on their own time.

You might ask, "So what? What's wrong with giving people tax dollars that enable them to make our society a more aesthetically attractive place to dwell in?"

Inherently nothing. However, what is art for one group of tax-paying citizens might not be art for another.

The thing is, if the artist receives a grant from the NEA, everyone ends up paying for it whether they appreciate the work or not.

Now, I realize that the individual amount comes out to some ridiculous sum, such as less than $1 per person per fiscal year, and only a minority of the grant receiving individuals actually create aesthetically junk. This isn't the point.

The point is, this is not good representative democracy.

We can argue that almost all of the great writers or artists of the past were funded by their governments.

Shakespeare was, as were Michelangelo and Chaucer. However, theirs was not a democratic republic that allowed most of its citizenry the power to determine how its money was spent. In truth, the overwhelming percentage of that tax base had no say in anything at all.

One part of the NEA, the part that supports things of the Sunset Concert variety, truly do benefit the society as a whole, or at least possess the potential to do so. The other part only benefits the artists receiving the grant.

Now, we may say it is important to support artists to keep them from starving. My reply to that: Why?

The true artists, be they painters, writers, film directors or musicians, are, in essence, creators. They do not create because they get paid for it. They create because they have no choice.

The creative impulse is not something that can easily be explained with scientific data. The ancient Greeks assumed that this impulse was the work of a set of goddesses, the Muses. Anyone who has ever painted a picture or written a poem or made a home movie just for the hell of it are well aware that something seemed to drive them toward this process.

A simple satisfaction comes from creating, and artists will find ways to create whether or not they are funded by the government.

Shakespeare would have written great works regardless of The Virgin's purse. They might have been less in number and not prone to being displayed at the Globe Theatre, but chances are we still would be reciting Hamlet simply because Shakespeare still would have written it and it eventually would have been found.

Creative genius is not a flame that can be fueled or extinguished according to the whims of a government agency. In a marketplace economy, the truly great creators always will find ways to flourish and continue to create, while those not as gifted or driven might have to resort to working real jobs during the day and come home at night to write. Or paint. Or compose.

Do we honestly believe that society is going to be that much worse because of this?

“ A simple satisfaction comes from creating, and artists will find ways to create whether or not they are funded by the government.”

TRIAL

Neal allegedly said to Galloway, "Keep your mouth shut, don't talk to the police."
Wepsiec likened the prosecution case to working a jigsaw puzzle. "When you put it all together, the defendant is guilty of two senseless and tragic murders," Wepsiec said.
The prosecution's case fails to link physical evidence to Neal, said Neal's attorney, Paul Christenson.

Christenson returned a volley of counter-arguments in his opening statement. The defense theory blames the murders on another individual and suggests that one of the deaths was an accident.

"This is a terrible crime for which the real killer should pay," Christenson said. "There is no physical evidence linking my client to the actual shooting of these people."

"He [Neal] never confessed to shooting the gun ... my client is guilty of helping hide the gun."

Christenson vigorously attacked the character of many of the individuals who attended the trailer party at Carbondale Mobile Homes, including the murder victims themselves. He said the victims were part of their own demise.

"The two victims were members of the gang," Christenson said. "Even though James Austin Campbell was white, he was a member of the Black Gangster Disciples.

"James Austin Campbell wanted to be a member of a gang because he had easy access to marijuana."

Christenson said the victims were shot by the gun brought to the party by Campbell.

Dr. James Jacobi, the forensic pathologist who performed the autopsies, described the nature of the wounds in graphic detail. He said Campbell died as a result of gunshot wounds to the right eye and left cheek. Campbell also was shot in the lower back and shoulder.

Mitchell died as a result a single contact gunshot wound to the left temple.

A photo of Campbell's body was shown to the jury. Some of the jurors were visibly moved at the sight of the photo. One middle-aged woman winced, and another appeared to hold back tears.

Cynthia Love, Mitchell's mother, took the stand for about five minutes and said she initially could not recognize her son when she went to identify the body because the pigmentation in the color of his skin was distorted.

After Love testified, Christenson was granted a request to keep Love out of the courtroom because she might be used in the defense's case.

"Your Honor, that's a bad-faith effort to keep a victim out of the courtroom," Wepsiec said.

Jackson County Circuit Judge William Schwartz responded that the court must weigh competing rights of victims and the defendant.

"The pre-eminent concern is that the defendant gets a fair trial," he said.

Later in the day, Schwartz admonished courtroom spectators for repeatedly disturbing the proceedings by entering and leaving the courtroom during testimony.

"It's like Grand Central Station in here," Schwartz said.

Testimony concluded at about 4:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Neal is expected to testify at some point during the trial, which resumes at 9:30 a.m. today at the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro.

"My client will testify. You will hear what he has to say," Christenson said during opening arguments. "He will tell you that mass quantities of heavy liquor, LSD, mushrooms and smoking blunts were present at that all-day party ... Many of these people were drunk out of their minds. This was a gang party."

Freeman, the ruling judge in the matter, was quoted in Oklahoma media about the part of the award-winning film that he considered obscene.

"The police brought me by a movie with one scene," he said. "The scene they brought involved what appeared to be a young boy about 6 or 7 and he was having oral sex with a girl who was about 16 in a bathroom."

"By definition of our criminal code, if anyone under 18 or anyone portraying someone under 18 is having sex, it is by definition obscene."

Although not available at most mainstream video stores in Carbondale, Mark Watson, head of the Undergraduate Division of Library Affairs, said "The Tin Drum" is available at SIUC's Morris Library.

Watson remembers seeing "The Tin Drum" about 15 years ago and does not recall seeing anything obscene in the movie.

"There are a lot of films, such as 'The Tin Drum,' that are very critically acclaimed," he said. "We try to provide those films here, and I would be very much opposed to taking that book or that movie off of the shelves."

Watson also said there is little chance of the film becoming unavailable to the general public as it is now in the state of Oklahoma.

"It disturbs me because I don't want judges to get into 'You can see this, but you can't see that,'" he said. "There are prestigious film review boards and other film critics who have determined that 'The Tin Drum' is okay to see. A judge has ruled it to be obscene, but based on one person's opinion, I would be hesitant to pull that film from the library."

And Utgaard said the ruckus being raised in Oklahoma comes from a lack of understanding the nearly 20-year-old movie.

"If the judge bothered to read the book," he said, "he would realize that the 3-year-old character grows in mind, not in body. But if it took Oklahomans this long to figure the movie out, I don't think we have to worry about it."

"First, we plan on turning them into 40-passenger buses for extra space then, as we gain customers, we will continue to improve the interior of our buses," Robinson said.

The interior of the first-class bus will be designed differently from the other buses.

The survey asked 100 students who are frequent train riders if they would switch from their current modes of transportation to Chicago if other options were available at competitive prices.

"Not only did 87 percent of the students indicate they would switch from other forms of transportation like trains and other bus lines," he said, "they (students) also indicated that they would go home more often."

Both Harrison and Robinson are certified to drive the buses.

"Rachel drives a bus on campus, and I have my license," he said. "And we will also be employing other drivers to help us."

Director hopes to improve enrollment

WORLD CLASS: New Admissions and Records head says quality service will help slowly bring numbers up.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLITICS EDITOR

Patience and world-class service are the keys to retaining students and reversing SIUC's declining enrollment trend, the new director of Admissions and Records says.

"That quality service needs to be in a lot of places on campus," Walker Allen said, "not because of the impact on our budget or what is good for SIUC, but for what is best for students in the long run."

Allen took the position July 1. Stephen Foster, associate director of Admissions and Records, had been acting director since January, when Roland Keim retired.

Walker said improvements in SIUC's enrollment will not occur quickly.

"There is no magic bullet to fix it," he said. "You don't make progress in this business in large numbers."

SIUC's enrollment has declined since 1991 from 24,869 in fall 1991 to 20,861 student in spring 1997. The fiscal year 1997 budget guidelines identified enrollment and retention as a campus-wide priority.

Allen, 59, said the first step to overcoming a university's declining enrollment is for faculty and administration to admit there is a problem.

"I don't sense that I'm coming into a situation that requires a lot of repair work," he said. "People are aware there is a problem and there is no denial that there is a problem."

"People are genuinely interested in helping to improve the enrollment problem at SIUC."

One facet of Allen's job will be to determine why students choose SIUC and why they choose to leave SIUC.

"We will be listening to students or prospective students in what their questions are and try to meet their needs," he said. "I don't know if I can always meet those needs, but I sure as heck ought to know what they are."

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said Admissions and Records employees and the search committee thought Allen was the best choice.

"He brings a wide variety of experience from other institutions that is relevant here," he said.

Walker was associate vice president and dean of enrollment management at State University of New York College at Buffalo since 1994.

He was executive director of enrollment services at Nicholls State University from 1989 to 1994 and vice president for enrollment management at University of Charleston from 1987 to 1989.

Allen said some of these institutions faced enrollment problems similar to SIUC.

Allen said that in the first month, he will be focusing on understanding the operations of SIUC.

"I'm trying to get the layout of all the University down," he said. "I need to understand what resources we have and how many we need."

"I also want to understand students, prospective students and their parents."

Allen said he will stress the strengths of the University rather than its weaknesses. He said one such strength is faculty research.

"This is an opportunity for our students to be in contact with people engaged in research that just animates their classroom," Allen said.

Allen said he chose to accept the position because SIUC is a research institution and not a commuter school. He will earn $76,000 per year.

Allen is a Dayton, Ohio, native and earned a bachelor's degree in psychology at Miami University, a master's degree in personnel counseling at Wright State University and doctorate in higher education and academic administration from the Union Institute in Ohio.

Chancellor Don Beggs said he will work with Allen to identify methods of recruiting and retaining students.

"He is coming in with a different perspective," he said. "And now is the time to draw on those experiences."

Anthropologists translate rare ancient writing

GLYPHS: Translation took 40 hours.

WASHINGTON POST

Ancient picture writing is a daunting challenge for anthropologists and linguists — and even more so when it comes to rare writing systems such as the ancient epi-Olmec, found in what is now southern Veracruz, Mexico.

In the July 11 edition of the journal Science, John S. Justeson of the State University of New York and Terrence Kaufman of the University of Pittsburgh report that they have been able to translate much of the hieroglyphs from a badly weathered stone monument that was first put on public display in Mexico in 1995.

The researchers spent 40 hours over 10 nights examining and tracing the final column of glyphs under artificial light and compared the symbols to the only four known samples of the writing system. The researchers had subjected those fragments to extensive linguistic analysis and had devised a model for understanding the ancient writing.

The new translation demonstrates that the system is reliable, they say, and can be used in future work.

The hieroglyphs turn out to be a narrative about the achievements of a man of prominence who served for 12 years and saw a good harvest. The last line of the latest translation, enigmatically, refers to a "shape shifter" that "appeared divinely in his body."

Hollywood, no doubt, is already negotiating for rights to the story.

Budstick said the council is working with SIUC to schedule one meeting in the fall and one in the winter.

City Councilman Michael Neill said having a meeting at SIUC would be acceptable as long as it still will be televised.

"If we could find some way that it still gets taped so that it gets shown on the access channel (it would be OK)," Neill said. "Far more people view meetings on TV than they do in person."

Vingren also said USG has scheduled a USG meeting at the Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave. in the City Council chambers on Oct. 22.

Vingren said having the meeting at Civic Center is symbolic of how University and City relations have improved.

"It's extending an invitation to watch USG conduct business, give input or just observe," he said.

USG vice president Megan Moore said the meeting will be conducted as a regular senate meeting, and there will not be any special items on the agenda.

Doherty said having a USG meeting at the Civic Center reflects the goodwill of student leaders to bridge the gap between University interests and community politics.

"The events and issues on campus are shared by all individuals," Doherty said. "There are no dividing lines."

Moore said having the USG meeting at the Civic Center is a continuation of the "Communiversity" project, a joint venture to improve relations between community residents, city officials, University administrators and students.

The first step in the "Communiversity" project was a town meeting June 30 at the Student Center in which students, residents and city officials met to discuss the relationship between students and the city.

More than 200 ideas were generated at that meeting to improve city and University relations. Scheduling a City Council meeting at SIUC also was mentioned at the June meeting.

trailers were parked in one place, and students worked on their cars like professionals.

"It was very wonderful to be there just to watch," Kambiz said. "Teams were encouraging competition and were helping each other, but still wanted to win in the track."

In fact, Kambiz said the SIUC team would not have been able to compete had it not been for the team from Purdue University. That team gave the SIUC team a thermostat they needed.

But once on the track, the SIUC team drove the car as smoothly as a duck swimming in the water, reaching speeds in the 100-mph range.

"We didn't have much practice before the competition," Rickert said. "However, by the end, we were throwing the car fast on curves and putting it on its peak."

The teams tested their cars in six events: fuel economy, endurance, cost analysis, acceleration, skid-pad and auto cross, in which two cars raced at once. There were never more than two cars on the track at the same time.

"In all this events, we had to keep our car as quiet as possible," Kambiz said. "Noise was our major obstacle. We passed the acceleration test, but failed the noise. So we had to go back and change the muffler."

Kambiz said that doing so well in the competition helps promote SIUC and the College of Engineering by giving SIUC and the department a good reputation among automakers who can give jobs to potential students.

"We can attract students and help recruiting in engineering," he said. "The big three auto companies who sponsored the competition were there at the event."

But Kambiz said the SIUC team's performance should rightfully be acknowledged. Kambiz has contacted the SAE about the issue.

"Since we were announced as Rookie of the Year," he said, "they could give a joined rookie award because the gap was so small."

Major league ball becoming international

NO RESPECT: Fox preempts Canadian national anthem during All-Star telecast.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Internationalization, it's coming: The New York Yankees' Hideki Irabu lives up to his billing in his debut. A Mexican left-hander wins for the Los Angeles Dodgers and a Japanese right-hander for the Anaheim Angels on the same day. The 50 all-stars included a Panamanian, two Canadians and eight Puerto Ricans.

"Somewhere up there, Roberto (Clemente) was watching us and smiling, saying 'My guys,' said the Yankees' Bernie Williams, a native of Bayamon, Puerto Rico, before the All-Star Game.

Of course, as Mike Piazza suggests, diversity carries its own challenges.

Not all Yankees welcomed Irabu, pitcher Kenny Rogers questioning the acquisition openly and several others agreeing discreetly.

"Throughout much of the clubhouse," wrote The New York Times' Malcom Moran, "an interest in foreign affairs is limited to recommendations of good Mexican restaurants."

Add international: Then there was Fox's decision not to air the McAuley Boys' rendition of the Canadian national anthem, after carrying LeAnn Rimes singing of the U.S. anthem before the All-Star Game.

Canada's TSN did a pregame feature on Canadians in the major leagues but Fox, supplying the game feed, put on two minutes of commercials before Rimes sang, then cut away from the McAuley Boys.

"Due to time constraints and since we're a U.S.-based broadcaster, the decision was made just to air the Star-Spangled Banner," a Fox spokesman said.

However, no one carried the Canadian flag upside down, as the Marine color guard did at the 1992 World Series, so things may be getting better.

Trivia time: San Francisco 49er quarterbacks have finished first in nine of the last 13 NFC quarterback rankings. Which team is second over that span?

A world safe from Albert: After Albert Belle refused to play in the All-Star Game, work out or even pose for a picture with teammates, American League President Gene Budig says they may have to enact rules for participants.

"We're going to review that for next year," Budig said. "If you're elected or selected, what are your responsibilities?" Hold still for one little team portrait?

While teammates posed happily, Belle strolled frowning into the clubhouse where he ate yogurt and read a newspaper. When American League officials asked him to come out, he cursed at them.

"There's something really wrong with him," a high-ranking baseball official told Newsday. "This may be the last All-Star team he ever makes. He's not going to get voted in, and it would be tough to see the league select him."

Trivia answer: The Minnesota Vikings, which won twice, in 1986 with Tommy Kramer and 1988 with Wade Wilson. The other non-49er winners were the New York Giants' Phil Simms in 1990 and the Green Bay Packers' Brett Favre in 1995.

And finally: Belle's White Sox teammate, Frank Thomas, didn't attend the All-Star Game, saying he had to rest his sore ribs, even though he had been playing.

Of course, everyone has his own idea of rest. The day before the game, Thomas was making an appearance, promoting a rap record he had cut.

Frerotte signs with Redskins

UPPER CLASS: Washington QB hoping for four-year contract worth $18 million.

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Washington Redskins quarterback Gus Frerotte signed a one-year contract Saturday morning that allowed him to take the field for the start of mini-camp at Redskin Park. However, Frerotte said he hopes a new four-year, $18 million deal can be wrapped up in the next few days.

Frerotte previously said he would cut off negotiations once he signed the one-year tender offer and that he would take his chances in free agency next spring. However, with Redskins General Manager Charley Casserly and agent Ralph Cindrich having spent more than three months negotiating a long-term deal, Frerotte indicated no deadline was etched in stone.

"I'm just going to play," Frerotte said. "I can't think about that. Hopefully, something can happen, but I'm not worried about it. Ralph is going to worry about it now. Actually, it's nice to be outside practicing. You can get it all off your mind and do what you have to do.

"There's so much riding on me and the team doing well. I can't go into training camp thinking of other things. I'll focus on football. I don't need the stress."

Casserly and Cindrich were unable to finish a deal Friday, but will resume negotiations Monday, according to sources. They have apparently agreed to many key points, including a $5 million signing bonus, but significant differences remain.

The stakes are high for both sides. The Redskins don't want to risk losing their starting quarterback in free agency next spring, but unless they remove the "franchise" designation from defensive tackle Sean Gilbert and use it on Frerotte, he could leave.

Even if they did make him the franchise player, the price would be high. The Redskins would retain exclusive negotiating rights, but in exchange they would have to pay him the average of the five highest salaries for quarterbacks in the NFL. That price is expected to be more than $6.5 million in 1998.

It's also a gamble for Frerotte, who has been the starter for just one season. A one-year contract would put Frerotte under enormous pressure at a time when his NFL career has just begun to roll. Because he was a seventh-round draft choice in 1994, he has made the NFL's minimum salaries his first three seasons — $196,000 last season.

His tender offer is worth $1.048 million, and Frerotte joked that he'd never expected to make even that much.

"You can't complain about that," he said. "It's funny. You go back to my hometown (Ford City, Pa.) and that's probably more money than the town makes in a year. I never thought I'd make that kind of money. It's all relative."

After two hours on a perfect sunny day for practice, Frerotte went out of his way to say all the right things. Even though he was unsigned after the season, he was a regular in the weight room and hasn't missed any of the mini-camps. Coach Norv Turner has conducted.

If Frerotte is miffed in any way that no deal has been struck, he won't say so.

agreed that hitting is how Jones will succeed in professional baseball.

"He is a [designated-hitter] type who is going to have to have 'success' offensively," Callahan said.

Callahan said Jones has the right work ethic to succeed, and he had no trouble recommending him when Yankees scout Tim Kelly called him about Jones during the draft.

"There are times, especially later in the draft, when scouts don't have time to sign everybody," he said. "I've seen guys sign the papers through the mail. But I told Kelly that I thought it would be worthwhile to go to Jones' house. He's a classy kid who comes from a classy family."

Jones, though, has to compete every day for the starting role.

So far, he has had to share starting time with another first baseman, and sometimes he does not get playing time.

"It is tough to sit out a whole nine-inning game," he said. "I have been DH-ing and pinch hitting. Now I am in the lineup three out of four games, and I have started 20 games."

But Jones has enjoyed his professional experience so far. "This is a dream come true," he said. "This is what I wanted to do since I was a little kid. I am getting paid to do this. What could be better?"

The only downside: Jones has encountered, has been some of the rules the Yankees have.

Jones said if a player is five minutes late to the bus, he is fined $100. If a player shows up to the clubhouse without a coiled shirt, he is fined $100.

He said he sent home a box of T-shirts because he is not allowed to wear them.

Jones really does not mind the rules, but one rule somewhat bothers him.

"I can't get used to not wearing hats in the ball parks," he said. "Baseball players never comb their hair, they just put a hat on to hide it."

SIUC HALL OF FAME

Six named to SIUC's
Sports Hall of Fame

Football player Terry Taylor, baseball player Dave Wrona, track star Kathleen (Sparrey) Raske, swimmers Stacy (Wells) Westfall and Bob Steele and swimming coach Tim Hill are the 1997 inductees into the Saluki Sports Hall of Fame.

At defensive back position, Taylor established a new SIUC career record with 20 pass interceptions. He was drafted by Seattle Seahawks in 1984 before retiring prior to the 1995 season.

Wrona was a switch-hitting infielder at SIUC from 1986-90. He completed his career holding the records for games played (241), at-bats (846), career hits (285), hits in a season (90) and total bases (398).

Raske, a standout hurdler and sprinter, was SIUC's female athlete of the year in 1989. She was a seven-time All-Gateway Conference team member and SIUC's first-ever finalist in NCAA championship competition.

Westfall still holds the SIUC women's swimming all-time record in the 200 butterfly (2 minutes and 24 seconds), and was a member of the record-setting 800-meter freestyle relay team in 1984. She was named All-American eight times from 1983-86.

Steele lettered in swimming four years at SIUC and was the captain of the 1961 swim team. He returned to SIUC in 1973 to coach the team and achieved a 68-25 record in 11 seasons.

Hill coached women's swimming from 1981-85, compiling a 32-8 record. In his five seasons, the Salukis had 46 All-Americans, two national championships and three Gateway Conference titles.

SIUC BASKETBALL

Saluki star player arrested

SIUC forward Rashad Tucker was arrested on June 25 for resisting a peace officer.

Carbondale Police Community Resource Officer Jeff Vaughn said Tucker was allegedly riding a bicycle without a headlight.

Tucker reportedly fled when the arresting officer asked him to stop. It was then discovered that Tucker was wanted for failure to appear in court on a previous charge.

Tucker's arraignment is 1 p.m. July 24.

BASEBALL

Yankees' Williams placed on 15-day disabled list

The New York Yankees placed center fielder Bernie Williams on the 15-day disabled list on Tuesday.

A strained left hamstring has put the 28-year-old on the disabled list for the second time this month.

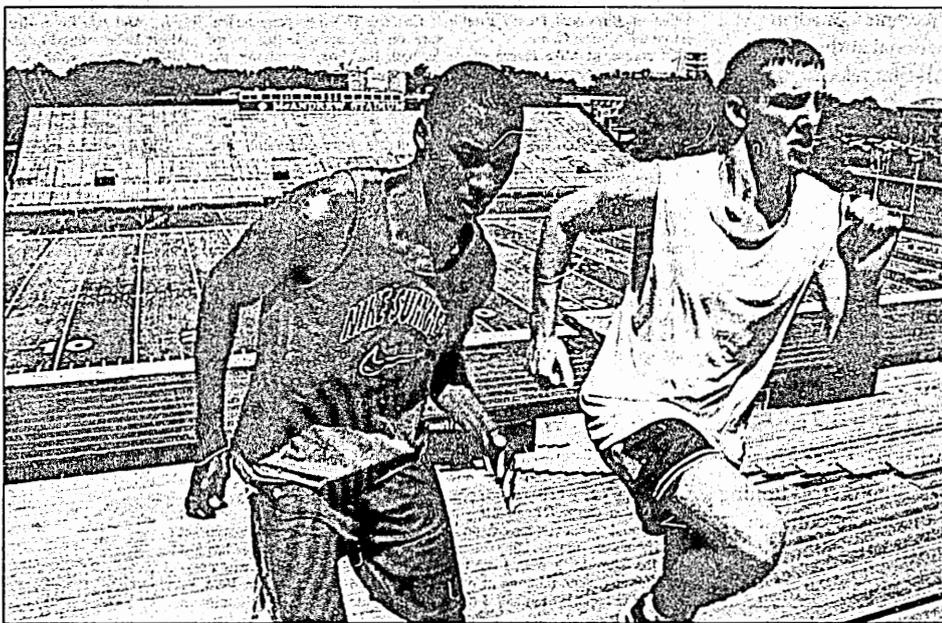

In 75 games this season Williams, the Most Valuable Player of the 1996 American League Championship Series, is batting .301 with 10 home runs and 53 RBIs.

FOOTBALL

Cowboys' receiver Irvin will not be prosecuted

Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin will not be charged with assault after an incident last month at a San Francisco nightclub.

Prosecutors said there is not enough evidence to prosecute Irvin, who already is on probation for cocaine possession in Texas.

PAT MAHON/Daily Egyptian

STAIR MASTERS: Temesegen Strickland (left), a sophomore in accounting from Chicago, and Bryan Taylor, a sophomore in administration of justice from Chicago, run up and down the stands of McAndrew Stadium Tuesday to condition themselves. Strickland wants to be a walk-on for the Saluki basketball team and Taylor wants to be walk-on for the Saluki football team.

Walk-ons work hard to prove value

TRYOUT: Non-recruited players just as integral to SIUC sports teams as recruited players.

DANNIELLE WEST
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Bryan Taylor is spending the entire summer diligently working on what may be only a dream: becoming a Saluki football player.

Saluki walk-on hopefuls such as Taylor are using what time is left of the summer to prepare for fall tryouts.

Taylor, a sophomore in administration of justice from Chicago, hopes to join the football team this season. He is spending extra time trying to improve his chances of making the team.

"I've spent the entire summer on a strict diet and working out every day to be in shape for tryouts," Taylor said.

The love of the game and the team atmosphere is what attracts Taylor to football.

"I have been playing almost all of my life, and that feeling of teamwork is something I miss about playing football," he said.

Taylor used the advice of several football coaches to plan his summer workout.

Athletic Director Jim Hart said Taylor and other walk-ons should listen to the coaches' advice.

"Any prospective walk-on should make sure they contact a coach as early as possible in order to know when tryouts are and what they should expect," Hart said.

This season's football roster has about 85 players. The maximum number of players the team can have is 92, which leaves some openings for possible walk-ons to fill.

The vacant spots have attracted transfer students such as James Kanadet, a transfer student from Joliet Junior College, who also wants to join the football program.

"After playing four years in high school and one year at a junior college, I feel that I am up for the challenge of playing at the Division I level," Kanadet said.

Kanadet is confident in his abilities and believes he will have a successful tryout.

"I am sure that the coaches are very objective, and I have few worries about fairness at tryouts," he said.

Taylor and Kanadet both said they will try to contribute at any position the coaches place them.

Other sports, including basketball and baseball, also have several walk-ons expected at tryouts this year.

Temesegen Strickland, a sophomore in accounting from Chicago, is preparing to try out for the basketball team in the fall.

Both Strickland and Taylor know that tryouts for their respective teams are many weeks away, but they work together daily on a workout program that began in May.

"Bryan and I run two miles and lift weights everyday, and I play pick-up games with several members of the team at the Rec Center as often as four days a week," Strickland said.

Strickland said he had good reasons to wait a year before attempting to become a part of the basketball team.

"My grades had to come first, and I had to adjust to college before I could focus on sports," he said.

But freshman James Hasty is wasting no time in trying out for the baseball team. He is aiming for a catching or left field position on the Saluki men's baseball team.

"I have been playing baseball for a long time, and I think that I might be an asset to the team," Hasty, an electrical engineering major from Crete, said.

While most walk-ons are on men's team sports, Hart said that walk-ons are needed on women's and individual teams as well.

"Many of our women's teams need more players, and that could be a place where walk-ons are needed most," Hart said. "In the past, several students have been walk-ons for individual sports such as tennis and golf."

Walk-ons can be a major factor for Saluki athletics.

"They have had just as important roles on the team," Hart said, "as players who were recruited."

Former SIUC first baseman enjoying pro ball

TASTE OF FAME: Jones a bit overwhelmed by school-age autograph seekers.

TRAVIS AKIN
DE SPORTS EDITOR

Former Saluki first baseman Aaron Jones played in front of his family for the first time as a member of the Yankee organization last weekend. And while his 10-year-old sister enjoyed the game, the autograph session puzzled her.

"My sister asked, 'Why did they ask you to sign that?'" Jones said. "I said, 'I don't know, I think they might be wasting their time.'"

Jones said some nights he has signed as many as 30 autographs.

Although Jones went hitless last weekend,

he is hitting better than .300 for the Oneonta Yankees.

The New York Yankees picked Jones in the 26th round of the Major League draft in June. Jones signed with the club and has been playing single-A short season baseball with the Oneonta Yankees.

Watching her son play was an experience Kathy Jones and her family will never forget. She said it was exciting to be able to say her son was on the field, and it also was exciting for the rest of the family.

"The other children think it is funny to be at a ball park and see all these little kids come up and ask for his autograph," she said.

One of the biggest challenges for Jones is learning to hit with a wooden bat.

"The wood is hard to get used to," Jones said. "You use it day in and day out, and you feel the bat getting slower. It is tough on your fingers, but I have started to get used to it."

While he is getting the hits with the wooden bat, Jones is disappointed he has not hit the home runs he hit with collegiate aluminum bats.

"I have hit a few balls really hard that would have been home runs (in college)," he said. "I have the power to hit home runs; I just haven't yet."

Jones has started hitting some home runs in batting practice, and he is practicing extra hours on his own to learn to hit and field better.

"I am a player who has got to get the basics done," he said. "I have got to work on hitting because that is my ticket."

SIUC head baseball coach Dan Calhoun
