SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY AT CARBONDALE

Student gets 51 months for manufacturing 240 gallons of GHB in Carbondale apartment

A former SIUC student was sentenced to 57 months in federal prison Friday after pleading guilty eight months earlier to three charges related to the illegal manufacturing of the date rape drug GHB.

John Keith Dilg, 24, of Elk Grove Village, mixed 240 gallons of GHB in a period spanning from November 1996 to January 1998, in both his Carbondale apartment and his parent's home in Elk Grove Village.

In addition to admitting manufacturing the drug, Dilg acknowledged using the drug twice to force sex on a former SIUC freshman. The victim, known only in court proceedings as Jane Doe, dropped out of school after the incident but was present at the Dilg trial.

Dilg pleaded guilty to conspiracy, operating an unregistered drug-manufacturing facility and dispensing a mislabeled drug. However, he has not been charged with sexual assault.

Illinois statute of limitations dictates a three-year deadline past the incident for charging a suspect with a sexual assault felony. Jackson County state attorney could not be reached.

Law school grad loses appeal for law license

Supreme court rejects self-professed white supremacist's bid to practice law in Illinois

The U.S. Supreme Court rejected SIUC law graduate Mark Hale's claim that the state of Illinois violated his right to free speech by denying him a law license Monday.

The court turned away Hale's arguments that he cannot be denied a license on the basis of his beliefs, making no comment in the case.

Hale, the leader of the World Church of the Creator, was denied a license to practice law by the state of Illinois based on a character and fitness review. The board found that as the leader of a white supremacist organization, Hale would not be able to represent all people without bias.

Hale appealed the decision to the Illinois Supreme Court, which declined to hear his case.

Hale then took his appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Hale, expressing disappointment in the Supreme Court's decision, said as far as he and his group are concerned, the Constitution is dead.

"It's a shame that the U.S. Supreme Court has seen fit to tear it in half," Hale said. "Because we are now living in a police state. I cannot in good faith urge people to obey the law of the land.

Hale said everyone he talked to on the street

Rodeo cowboys face bulls, broncs, and broken bones

Jackson County Rodeo raises funds for St. Louis Unit Shriners Hospital for Children

JULY 11, 2000

"Cowboys got their own way in life," says 22-year-old bull rider Aaron Smith.

One of the ways they do this is by getting on a big bull — all horns and hooves — in very much the same way that they stomp around like earthbound dolphins when they slosh around like earthbound dolphins before they go to a rodeo fun.

They stand, they nicker, their skin floating like cotton candy, hands out balloon animals and displaying the other colors.

The Rodeo in Salem, and Keith, with names like Spider Mexico, is one of the many calves that gather back at SUIC every five years.

"Then they ride them for the first time, riding a bull named Theatre Queen, according to the Smith.

"One of the things they do is to ride a bull, and they make a knot behind the grandstand.

"It's hard to keep a family and a job, and work to save money for a future, " says Smith about his rodeo career.

"I grudgily admit that the bulls are the other cowboys down.

"It's a done deal between him and the bull.

"People wanted to gather with the friends they had made in the past," Goldblatt said. "But I missed it a lot," he says.

Ride the rodeo, ride bulls.

"Rodeo is a lifestyle, says cowboy Josh Cornman, who started riding bulls, known as "rough stock," seven years ago when a friend turned him onto it.

"I have no idea who turned me on to it.

for comment Monday on whether or not DIDS would be charged. GHB, gamma hydroxybutyric acid, is used to incapacitate victims, which can lead to unconsciousness and memory loss. Lt. Todd Syler of the SIUC Police Department said any recent reported cases of sexual assault have not given them any indication to believe a date-rape drug was involved.

"It doesn't appear to be a problem because we have no reported cases," Syler said. "But to say it isn't out there would be misleading."

Steve Odem, deputy chief of operations for the Carbondale Police Department, said the ratios there are 12 to 15 cases per year where victims allege they have been given a date-rape drug. However, because the drug is still not seen in the system so rapidly, it is rarely done to such a positive extent, making it difficult to ascertain the extent of the use of date-rape drugs in Carbondale.

Yet Michael Irwin, director of the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group, says the narcotics unit has conducted investigations and made arrests in Carbondale for use of GHB.

"[GHB] is in just about every college town by this time, in Carbondale, we're dealing with people, mainly individuals, who are selling it," Irwin said. However, Irwin said that manufacturing quantities of the drug in Carbondale are rare.

believes he should have been allowed to practice law in Illinois, and called the decisions by both the Illinois and U.S. Supreme Courts a "slap in the face to white people and all Americans."

"The fact they made their decision just before the Fourth of July adds insult to injury," Hale said. This could likely be the end of Hale's bid to practice law in Illinois, according to SIUC Law professor William Schroeder. Hale could ask the court again to resentence him, according to Schroeder, but it is unlikely the court would accept.

"I say he's out of luck," Schroeder said. "I'd say he's out of luck," Hale said. It's a shame that the Supreme Court has seen fit to tear it in half because people are now living in a police state, I cannot in good faith let people obey the law of any land.

Assistant jumps coach
Cameron Wright coaches
his own jumps camp

Even though the SIU men's and women's track and field season ended in May, assistant jumps coach Cameron Wright is still involved with coaching — just not with the Salukis.

More than 30 high school boys and girls from Illinois came to SIU to participate in the Cameron Wright Saluki Jumps Camp 2000, which began Sunday.

Wright, who has been directing his camp for the past three years, said he thinks the camp is beneficial to the campers, as well as the Saluki track and field programs.

"The camp teaches kids, as well as gives SIU a good reputation. It's a great thing for kids to come to SIU and check out our University," Wright said. "We just don't teach the kids about high jumping, long jumping and triple jumping — we are trying to teach them things that are important in life, like how much hard work plays a role in things."

The camp features lessons in the high jump, long jump and triple jump demonstrated by former SIU men's track and field standout Dewayne Renster and Elliot Young, as well as current Saluki high jumper Joe Hill.

"I had a blast last year," Hill said. "I am teaching these kids some of the things that Cam taught me, and I'm actually learning a couple things myself."

In addition to the hands-on training, the campers will receive a personalized video evaluating his or her technique. On the last day of camp, they will compete in an intramural meet where awards will be given for the most valuable, most improved and best leader of the camp.

"The camp is a lot of fun. I get to jump, and I haven't done that in a while," Beucke said. "The coaches are great because they know what they are talking about because they have lots of experience."

"Even though this is quite a change for Wright, considering he usually coaches college students, he said he enjoys coaching despite how old or young his students are."

"I love working with kids. They are young, wide-eyed and ready to learn," Wright said. "They coach can tell you that it's fun to work with athletes and help them improve. It's just a lot of fun."

Western Kentucky joins the Gateway Conference

Western Kentucky University will join the Gateway Conference and play SIU as a part of their conference schedule.

Western Kentucky has played the Salukis every season since 1992, with SIU winning the last meeting 52-14 at McKale Center. The Flyers have held the nation's longest winning streak, as they are 30-19-1 all-time against Gateway schools.

Qualls cited with their larger budget, Western Kentucky's head coach, Bobbi Vanek, said he thinks the camp is beneficial to the campers, as well as the Saluki track and field programs.
