Moy raps survey

Poll ranks Medical School one of worst

By Jacqui Koczark
Staff Writer

Responding to the results of a magazine survey rating SIU's School of Medicine as one of the "worst" in the country, Dr. Richard H. Moy, dean and provost of the school, attacked the credibility of both the magazine and its survey methodology in an interview Wednesday.

The magazine, Private Practice, is a "throw-away," Moy said, "the kind that comes in the mail even though you don't subscribe to it. I just toss it in the wastebasket."

Moy said the survey results were based on "unscientific, uncontrolled" criteria, and that he did not think prospective students or medical professionals would pay much attention to it.

In January, 196 medical school deans received the magazine's survey asking them to list what they believed to be the 10 best and the 10 worst medical schools in the country. Jean Scott, assistant to the provost of Private Practice, said, however, only 44 deans responded to the survey.

The results show the SIU School of Medicine ranked fifth on the "worst" list, Scott said.

Scott said that after the questionnaires were sent out, Dr. John A. Cooper, president of the Association of American Medical Colleges, contacted deans and urged them not to participate.

Moy said he received a copy of the survey but threw it away. The dean was asked to rank schools by any criteria that occurred to them. That's not at all a scientific approach, Moy said, "an absolute nonsense." He also wrote a letter to the magazine, Scott said.

Scott said that most of the deans who responded had chosen "the old, the wealthy, private research medical schools" as the best schools. Moy said that the statistics on SIU's Emphasis on providing quality community-based primary care is "well below" that of the University of Chicago's contribution to research.

"The U of C Medical School would "run out" if it were judged only on the basis of contribution to its community. Moy, a graduate of that institution, said.

Dr. Dax Taylor, executive associate dean of the SIU School of Medicine, said, "The accreditation process of the American Medical School is extremely thorough and it serves as the measure of how our system is run." He then added that the medical school was established in 1969 and is accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education.

The medical school was ranked fifth in the area of research, "there are those who feel medical schools should be purely research, very low in the area of medical practice. Moy said, "Cooper's criticism because they felt they were valid."

Legal drug sales target of suit

By Dean Adams

The State's Attorney's office is initiating prosecution of two local businesses for the sale to minors of a commercial drug called Isobutylic Nitrate, commonly marketed under the names, "Rush," "Locke Room," and "Black Jack," among others.

According to Illinois law it is illegal to sell "any compound capable of inducing an intoxicated condition to a person under 17 years old knowing that the compound is intended for such use."

And as far as Jackson County State's Attorney Bill Schwartz is concerned, Isobutylic Nitrate should be included under this law since, according to a press release from his office, "the sole apparent use of this compound is to change, distort, or disturb the auditory, visual, or mental process of the user of this drug."

Schwartz said that the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group and the Bureau of Scientific Services has helped him investigate the illegal sales. He said charges have been filed against Plaza Records and International Fashions with possibly more prosecutions on the way. Schwartz said the penalty involved is a fine of up to $400,000. Schwartz has a policy of checking the identification of those trying to buy the drug. "Personally, I don't know if it's harmful or not," he said. "I mean, who am I to tell people what they should do? But we do tell the people who are buying it that they should be careful."

He explained that Black Jack is a bottle of Isobutylic Nitrate that is opened and allowed to evaporate. However, it can be bought in many other forms from every bottler to pellets. "You get a very intense rush that lasts about five minutes," Koffell said. "We had one guy come in on a weekend we had him out the stuff and he was really upset when he found out our shipment hadn't come in. He said he didn't know how he would make it through the weekend without it and asked where else he could get the stuff," Koffell said.

There are a lot of legal highs and maybe they're not harmless," he said. "But it's not up to me to tell people what to do."

Plaza Records' trial date is set for March 21 and Koffell said he has been told by the store's owners not to discuss the case. Schwartz said the problem was brought to his attention by parents of juveniles who had allegedly been allowed to buy the legal drug. He added that his prosecutions are now limited to the sale of the drug to minors. Schwartz said he is not concerned with users who are over 17 years old.

Bill Vollmer, a drug abuse counselor at Synergy, said the commercial drugs are dangerous as far as he knows adding that there hasn't been a lot of research in the area. He said Isobutylic Nitrate and a similar compound, Amyl Nitrate, are commonly marketed under the names, "Rush," "Locke Room," and "Black Jack," among others.

Vollmer said it is also used medically as a heart stimulant and that people with heart murmurs and many people complain of heart attacks if they use it.

"Some of its dangers," he said, "include smoking the opium. It's a drug built in the body, and many people complain of headaches after using it."

Kimmel says party plan an advantage

Mike Kimmel quickly and efficiently. He said his computerization plan would be cost effective in the next few years.

Kimmel said he has a problem with the term "plea bargaining."

"I'm against giving bargains, so to speak. I feel it's the judge's duty to change the defendant fairly and tell him what kind of sentence will be requested," said Kimmel. "After hearing both sides of a case, a prosecutor may decide to change the charge, and in that case, he should be 'able to negotiate a fair sentence."'

As state's attorney, Kimmel said he would be his duty to protect the interests of the people of Jackson County. This includes defendants as well as victims, he said.

Negotiating rape cases, Kimmel said he would work with the local law enforcement agencies to see that evidence is handled carefully and witnesses who have missed from the area are contacted.

Burglary the 'crime of opportunity'; students often victims, police say

EDITOR'S NOTE: With the beginning of the semester, burglars will be finding more potential targets in Carbondale. This article takes a look at the crime and the ways it's committed. In Friday's Daily Egyptian, reporter Leanne Vose-Page examines what the police are doing about it.

By Leanne Vose-Page

Staff Writer

Burglary, referred to by local and federal law enforcement agencies as "the crime of opportunity," is the most commonly committed felony in Carbondale. And students are the most common victims of burglary primarily because they are "irresponsible" in securing their homes, police officials say.

For the thief, committing burglary in the city is as easy as walking into a party and walking out with the goods. Students living in residence halls may fall prey to thieves when they walk down the hall to a friend's room without closing or locking their dorm rooms. The potential victim's awareness of ways to prevent burglary "is the most important element in reducing the burglary rate," according to Carbondale Police Lt. Terry Murphy.

"Burglary can be prevented, but it requires what we call 'hardening the crime target.' That is, eliminating the easy, quick and quiet methods of entry into an auto or a building," he said.

Because many people are not conscious about locking doors and windows, and because they do not take the necessary precautions when leaving town, the opportunity to commit burglary increases more inviting, Murphy said.

Burglary is defined as "the unlawful entry of a structure to commit felony or theft." The use of force to gain entry is not required to classify a crime as a burglary.

Residential burglary is the most common type in Carbondale, as it is in other cities across the United States. A burglar usually invades a house or apartment in Carbondale through an unlocked door or window because the unsecured home is the easiest, quickest and quickest target for the crime, Murphy said.

"Carbondale Police Chief Edward Hagan said, 'Students are the prime targets for burglaries because they are irresponsible in keeping doors and windows locked. They come from homes regulated by other people and when they are permitted to do their own things they run into trouble. They have to learn the hard way,'" Murphy said.

"There is no acceptable rate of burglary because burglary in a crime that can be prevented,'" he said.

Rain, sleet and snow are other factors affecting the city's burglary rate.

Thieves don't like to work in bad weather. Since burglaries are usually not planned but rather occur when a thief sees he can get away with the crime, the weather has a 'lot to do with it,' he said. There were fewer burglaries committed during the month-long Christmas vacation this year than the break between the fall semesters of 1978 and spring semester of 1979. There were 346 burglaries committed in Carbondale during 1979, as fewer than during 1980. Police attribute the decrease from 1978 to 1979 primarily to the brutal burglary during the first part of 1979.

But this year, with its mild winter, burglary is on the rise. Since Jan. 1 about 55 homes have been burglarized in the city. During the same period last year, 41 burglaries were committed.

Another factor that affects the burglary rate is the police department's difficulty gauging population trends. The number and number of students living in the city varies from year to year.

National crime statistics from the United States Bureau of Statistics for 1979 will not be available until October. January through August, 1980, one burglary was committed every six seconds in the nation. There were 3,100,986 burglaries committed in the United States in 1979, an increase of 12.7 percent from 1972.

Residential burglaries accounted for 85 percent of the burglaries committed during 1978, 1979. Burglars were suffering losses of $1.6 billion. The average loss in each burglary was $382.

In Carbondale, the chance of recovering property taken in a burglary "is very low," Murphy said. And many times the arrest of one burglary suspect will clear several burglaries.

Freedom of information more than just a concept

This Sunday The Society of Professional Journalists' Sigma Delta Chi, will observe Freedom of Information Day in order to attract public attention to the meaning and importance of the First Amendment.

But Freedom of Information is not just some lofty concept put together by a few self-serving journalists. It is the soul foundation upon which we must inform the public.

Leslie Sobota, the Sigma Delta Chi president of the SPJ, SAXO and a member of a national Freedom of Information Committee, explained why journalists need to have access to governmental proceedings.

"In a representative democracy, people have to be informed of what our government is doing. And journalists can't come out and say, 'Well, we've made this decision, so there's nothing else you need to know.'" Sobota said.

Sobota said that the public always needs to be able to find out what the government is doing, because they have to have the power to make decisions about what's going on in their lives.

"The First Amendment was passed to ensure that the government would be accountable to the people. If the government isn't transparent, then the people can't hold them accountable," Sobota said.

Sobota said that this is a ongoing process, that the government needs to be transparent at all times.

"We need to be able to hold the government accountable, and that means that we need to be able to find out what they're doing," Sobota said.

Letters

Faith required in science, creation

Concerning a letter submitted March 6, the writer stated that the Bible is scientifically inaccurate, and that the "Garden of Eden" stories should not be able to stand up to those who have current scientific information.

Science deals with the idea of gathering all information as needed, on a particular subject to be studied, evaluated, and arrived at a hypothesis which is not an absolute and is open to new lines of investigation.

The Genesis account is not a myth, the other ancient accounts are God's and are just as valid as the Bible.

The name of this new found god is "Science" and the "priests" are those that have a vested interest in this new religion called "creation science.

Since science is valuable, and we must consider the claims of this new religion carefully. We are being told to believe in a new religion and to discard the facts.

The name of this new found god is "Science" and the "priests" are those that have a vested interest in this new religion called "creation science.

Science is valuable and important but only in answering the questions of "why" and "how.

Do not misunderstand me. Science is valuable and important but only in answering the questions of "why" and "how.

Students being compromised

How many students like to be called idiots? How many students want to be called "idiots"? Would that be naive? How many students want to be called "idiots" by their peers?

A liquor store on the other side of town advertises with its aluminum blinds, "Who, you, the people of America are prone to alcoholism."

In the same ad college students are called idiots. A liquor store on the other side of town advertises with its aluminum blinds, "Who, you, the people of America are prone to alcoholism."

It is my hope that the students and parents will look into these problems and learn from these vulgar malapropisms and, in the future, carry on the beautiful and respectful tidbits for an oft discerning audience.

Tucker review

unfair to other five members of the band

Being a long time fan of Marshall Tucker and seeing them live a few times, I feel the DE review was totally unfair to the five remaining band members.

The only mention of any other band members is the one and Older time about Doug Gray's "smooth, rhythm and blues vocal." There is no mention of any kind of the exceptional performances of Tommy Caldwell, George McCorkle, Jerry Eubanks or Paul Riddle.

In the review the name "Caldwell" was used quite frequently, used with such words as "as" and "his." There is no mention of the "as" and "his" and the names of the remaining band members.

Also, during the song "Everyday I Sing the Blues," were you backstage unable to see the brilliant guitar solo of George McCorkle?

How could you possible forget Jerry Eubanks' smooth and sweet sounding sax, flue, and piano? Was Paul Riddle so bad that you didn't even give him the decency to mention him in your long review?

I think the above questions are "searching for a rainbow" of the Mushroom clouds. I feel that the DE review appears to be that the extent of your knowledge of the Marshall Tucker Band is a five-minute interview with Toy Caldwell.

Believing in herself helps dancer

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

The philosophy of believing in yourself has gotten Tamra Sykes a title, a scholarship and her own dance troupe. Sykes, a junior in theater, won the Miss Shrine 1979 title in New York last summer. She received a $2,501 scholarship along with the title.

But Sykes' biggest thrill has been instructing a group of community children who form the Tamra Sykes Dancers. The dance troupe is part of Mystic Voyage, a community theater group that was started in 1977 by Joe Doss, a 1975 radio-television graduate of SIU-C.

"I started Mystic Voyage to get kids off the streets," Doss said. "I saw Tamra dance so I asked her to do a workshop for the kids. She did and it evolved into a class and the dance troupe."

Sykes, who began the troupe two years ago with seven children, currently has 50 students whose ages range from six to 17. The group practices Monday and Thursday from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon at the Earma Hayes Center.

"I tell the kids you have to believe in yourself," Sykes said. "My number one purpose is to give confidence to these kids. Most of them aren't going to be dancers, but just getting on stage and performing for a group of people gives them confidence they can use in their daily lives."

The group does modern jazz, ballet and primitive dances. Sykes said that modern dance allows a person to go "in and out" of the other forms of dances.

Sykes begins each dance class with warm-ups, such as leg stretches or jumping jacks. She...

The members of the comedy group, Comedie Gorilla, ham it up.

Comedy group's hobby is absurdity

By Craig DeVries

By its own definition, the comedy group Comedie Gorilla is a group of people who eat bananas, stick beans in their ears and assault from behind the lines. By a more standard definition, it is well-known among a group of people who eat bananas and assault from behind the lines. If they stick beans in their ears, they do it in the privacy of their own homes. There are after all, regular folk who are into absurdity only as a perspective.

To set things a little more into perspective, Comedie Gorilla is a group of six SLU students and one community member who perform improvisational theater in their spare time. They perform "guerrilla theater," a form of street theater that originated during the Italian Renaissance.

Comedie Gorilla's purpose is better explained by its name. Comedy is an all-pervasive term. As a form of live theater, Gorilla is a derivation of the term guerrilla, as in guerrilla warfare. Hence, the attacks from behind the lines.

The whole idea is to do improvisation with some social relevance. Or as one group member put it, "through improvisation to draw some correlation between the crisis in Iran and the price of bananas."

Comedie Gorilla is: Mary Anne Ballmann, a senior in Cinematography and photography; Gordon Pope, a junior in English; Tim Brown, a senior in science; Dave Irf, of Carbondale; Robin Peltman, a junior in Liberal Arts and English; Joyce Marx, a junior in speech communications and Phil Keaton, a senior in radio and television and journalism.

There are conflicting reports as to exactly how Comedie Gorilla came together. The least believable is that the conception happened with a chance meeting between Brown and Marx on a l-trot broad line in 1982. Neither mind if it neither of them are over 5 years facts are facts. The veracity, they say, drifted toward a community need for a really proletarian sort of theater.

Anyway, early this semester the two of them turned up at Cypress Jazz Lounge and performed a benefit for the Shawnee Food Network. As the rest of the Gorillas tell it, "We're so used to the press."
Seminars set for 're-entry women'

By Jennell Olson

At the divorce rate rises and the economic situation worsens, women who once stayed at home with their children, now returning to universities to earn the degrees they sacrificed when they were younger.

Recalled "re-entry women," these students differ in marital status, lifestyle, ethnic group, socio-economic level and attitude. Yet, they all have something in common: the are over 25 and have experienced a break of four or more years in their formal education.

There is no typical re-entry woman," said Joan Durrett, who designs programs for re-entry women through Women's Services. "Their reasons for returning to school are as varied as their backgrounds."

Even though the group is diverse, many of the students experience the same problems, Durrett said. Many have role conflicts, a low self-esteem, a lack of confidence and a need for support and encouragement.

In addition, many need help in updating basic skills and studying habits. Women's Services is working to help alleviate such stress-producing problems.

To help re-entry women establish contact with their peers, Women's Services reserves the Omphal Orpheus Room of the Student Center from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. every Friday. (Continued on Page 18)

"I've been on the wrong side of the desk all my life," said Frieda McArthur, one of about 1,800 re-entry women at SIUC.

"I want to be on the other side now."

A 31-year-old from Cobden, Frieda is one of the oldest students on campus. In fact, she said she has recently contacted a writer for the \"10 Disk II \" and told her she's the oldest student at SIUC.

"I don't know if I believe that though," Frieda said. "I've seen students who look older than me."

The spritely, gray-haired sophomore in agriculture said she decided to return to college six semesters ago because her husband was working on his master's degree in vocational education.

Because she hadn't taken any college courses since 1963, she started as an observer who sat in on classes but didn't take tests. Three semesters later, she decided to enroll for credit and now she is taking 18 hours of classes.

"I love being back in school," the former secretary and mother of four, said. "I couldn't take classes here. I'd work, I just like the contact with students because they keep me young."

"They're always doing something different and I like hearing about it. Sometimes when people get older they get so set in their ways. They don't have any interest in seeing themselves. I don't want to become an old, gray-haired grandmother even if I am one," she said with a laugh.

Frieda said she was somewhat timid during her first semester at SIUC. She wanted to be seen but not heard.

"I've always had quite an intense complex," she said. "I've gotten more outgoing each semester. I think I've got it licked now."

often lets a child lead the exercises. "I like to have a student lead the exercises. It teaches them leadership as well as giving them confidence. The other students have to call their 'instructor' or Mr. Senior, so and have to show them respect like they show me."

The repertory has 15 different dances which they perform about 12 times a year. Sykes choreographs most of the dances for the troupe. One of Sykes' favorite routines is "Ease on Down the Road," a song from the Broadway musical "The Wiz."

The kids imitate all the characters in the show, said the seniors. They have bows in their hair, represent Dorothy, they wear a ragged shirt for the Scarecrow, they wear a red nose and black whiskers for the Lion, and have foil wrapped around their arms and legs to represent the Tin Man.

All of the kids perform their own solo dance, the dance showing how they will individually cope down the road to success, Sykes said.

Another dance, "Open Our Eyes," has five girls dressed in light blue leotards with assorted blue chiffon skirts. Sykes said the theme of the dance is the girl is opening your eyes to see what there is to be thankful for instead of looking for what you want, she said.

Formerly of Maywood, Sykes taught classes at the Maywood Recreation Department last summer. She had about 10 students between the ages of three and six.

Sykes, who received a community service award from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last semester, took dance classes at the Donnie Joe Biddle School of Dance at Elmhurst College and Starlight School of Theater in Chicago. She currently is working for a minor in dance at St. Louis University.

Sykes, whose work with the group is voluntary, would like to attend New York University to obtain a master's degree in dance therapy. She would eventually like to dance professionally and later open a school of dance which would incorporate dance and acting. "My heart is really in working with kids. I could spend the rest of my life working with them," she said.

THE PLACE TO COME TOGETHER WHEN YOU "BREAK"
Federal building opens its doors

By Mary Ann McNulty
N'uff Writer
The $1.9 million solar-heated and cooled Federal building opened its doors for occupancy last month an six federal agencies moved into their new offices.
Rick Argiry, operations engineer for the General Ser-ses Administration, which has an office in the building, said the occupants started moving in March.
The Department of Labor's
Black Lung Office, the Air Force recruiting office, the Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation office, Social Security, Congressman Paul Simon's office and the FBI office are now housed in the building on South University Avenue.
The Internal Revenue Service is scheduled to be the last governmental agency to move into the building, said Forrest Brown, business specialist for the GSA in Chicago.
Argiry said everything in the building is "operational for occupancy" although there are still some finishing touches that need to be completed.
Argiry said the $200,000 solar collector is operating, but it will take weeks before the water is hot enough to provide energy for the building.
Water is heated in and circulated through 5,664 glass solar collector tubes on the roof of the building during periods of solar gain. The heated water, which can reach temperatures of 240 degrees Fahrenheit, is stored in two large holding tanks at night, according to Carl Hartmann, an employee of Fischer-Stein Associates which designed the plans for the building.
The solar collector system is expected to reduce by 52 percent to 62 percent the amount of energy needed to heat and cool
the building, according to GSA computer studies.
Electricity is currently being used to heat the building.
The foundation for the building was laid in February 1977, according to records, and the building was originally scheduled to be completed in the fall of 1978. However, changes in design and other delays pushed the completion date back.
Ben "Openshaw, business affairs director for the GSA in Chicago, said the completion date for the building was pushed back about nine months. However, newspaper records show that the structure is about one and a half years late in opening.
GSA officials formally inspected and accepted the building last month, Brown said.
The GSA expects all of its buildings before accepting them to make sure the contractor has met all of the agency's specifications.
A dedication ceremony is expected to be scheduled in three to four smalls, Brown said.

Law students to argue incest, divorce
First-year law students from the SIU-C School of Law will participate in moot court cases to be held this month in the Williamson County Courthouse in Marion.
The mock cases will concern whether gifted students have a right to be educated in the limit of their capacities, whether a professional degree is considered marital property in a moot case, and whether family members married to each other and a child committing incest constitutes a crime against a spouse to in-vake the marital privilege.

Anderson, Kennedy to get NOW support

By Judy Skute
Staff Writer

Presidential aspirants Rep. John Anderson (R-Ill.) and Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) will be getting support in their campaigns from the Carbondale chapter of the National Organization for Women as part of the chapter's efforts to promote ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, said Sally Staley, president of NOW in Carbondale.

Staley said Anderson and Kennedy will receive help in their campaigns from NOW because they are supporters of women's issues.

With the presidential primary in Illinois set for March 18 and Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne putting pressure on legislators to back ERA, Staley said Illinois is expected to vote in favor of the amendment by June of this year. "Between March 18 and November of this year, politicians are going to have to prove they are worthy of our votes by supporting women's issues," Staley said.

"Women have become much more aware of the politics needed to bring on the question of ERA to the public's attention," she added.

The chapter will also participate in two statewide marches and a nationwide "moratorium" to support ERA.

The first big statewide march supporting ERA is a student's chapter set for April 21 in Springfield. An expected three blocks of students from Carbondale will enter Springfield to rally in support of the voting rights amendment.

A pro-choice abortion group, the Coalition Against Registration and the Draft, the gay community and a group that supports Title IX for educational equalities will help NOW expand its list of supporters from its present total of six.

To complement its efforts throughout the community and statewide, the local chapter is also working with the SIF-WERA group on campus.

Staley said, "We are currently working on campus gathering 25 to 40 signatures on a petition that will be brought to Springfield by the students and faculty of SIU.

There are over 100 action teams in support of ERA throughout Illinois. Some are made up of students, others in gaining support, as in the urban areas where women are more mobilized."

Staley explained.

Man spends a busy day in court

After one judge found yesterday the cause Friday to try Lyman Moore for attempted murder, armed robbery and burglary, another judge presided at Moore's marriage case.

Shortly after presiding Judge Richard Richman found probable cause to try the case in a preliminary hearing at the Jackson County Court Monday Judge James Williamson performed the marriage ceremony for Mr. and Mrs. Lourdes Mann.

Spouses and relatives of suspects held in custody often have fewer restrictions placed on them regarding visiting rights.

Moore, 20, is charged in connection with a Feb. 13 burglary and shoot-out at the home of former SIU-C president Delyte Morris.

Moore was released from Memorial Hospital of Carbondale Tuesday morning and is being held in Jackson County jail, according to Jackson County Public Defender Dennis Waks. Waks said Moore would be held in Jackson County until Friday, when he is scheduled to be moved to the Menard Correctional Center.

A Jackson County deputy was shot in the elbow when police officers responded to investigate the alleged burglary.

Moore was shot in the abdomen and the right arm.

Moore's bond, originally set at $75,000 was not reduced, Waks said.

Waks said pre-trial motions must be filed within 30 days. A trial date has not been set.

Exiled activist tells of SIU profits from South African investments

By Erick Howeswine

Dennis Brutus, the man later in 1972, was one of the expulsions from South Africa from the Olympic Games in 1972 for racially discriminatory practices that said more than 150 universities in the United States, including SIU, are making "profitable stocks of investments in corporations in South Africa."

"The profits may well be paid for by the sweat, blood, and lives of my people," said Brutus, who nearly died in prison for his political beliefs and activism.

Brutus, a political exile who spent several years in a South African prison for his active opposition to segregation in sports, spoke at a press conference last week.

he discussed his own struggle against the racial oppression during the past 21 years. He related his experience of being arrested, escaping twice, being caught, being jailed and completing an 18 month sentence in South Africa's "most severe maximum security prison."

"South Africa is a place where the world's million whites can tell over 30 million blacks that they are sub-human," he said. When he was incarcerated, there were 7,000 political prisoners of conscience in six South African jails.

"Once the system sees you as an opponent, you are punished by the loss of your job, being banned from employment, or by house arrest or a jail sentence," he said.

Following his imprisonment, during which he spent time breaking stones or in solitary confinement, he was placed on a five-year house arrest. He was served one year before leaving his country as an exile. He was forced to sign a contract which would allow South Africa to put him back in prison should he return to the country.

"There were 1,100 political prisoners and 200 murderers on Devil's Island when I was there," Brutus said. "And the murderers were given charge of the political prisoners."

Brutus told the murderers "took care of them, by giving food and work, by not giving food, and by beating prisoners when they wanted to." Brutus said he was once beaten so hard his entire body was discolored.

He said wealth would come from all over the island to stare "with mingled pleasure and horror," at the purple bruise running the length of his body.

Brutus, a poet, was not allowed to write or receive more than 300 words every six months in correspondence to the outside. He managed to conceal a piece of graphite in his sleeping mat, and he secretly compiled on toilet paper poetry that was published later some of his eight books written since 1963.

Brutus, a member of Amnesty International, a worldwide organization dedicated to the release of political prisoners, said that though the organization was not able to get him from prison, their close observation of his case and trial may have given him a much shorter sentence than he would have otherwise received.

"If you ask me about South Africa," Brutus said, "I will tell you what is happening in the United States, the apartheid system there couldn't continue."

The 539 American corporations in South Africa do two things, Brutus said. They make profits, and they hold the existing system in place.

As an example of the civil oppression made possible by western technology, Brutus cited the passport, with its Polaroid photographs and processing by IBM computers, as an example of how the white minority holds the threat of arrest and imprisonment over the heads of the black majority.

International organization helps political prisoners

By Erick Howeswine

Staff Writer

A political prisoner in Taiwan and another in Sudan are not alone in their struggle for freedom. A dozen Carbondale-area members of Amnesty International are striving for their release.

Amnesty International, founded in 1961, monitors political and legal activities in more than 100 countries and investigates news of prisoners and arrests.

More than 200,000 Amnesty International members in 32 different countries, form small groups of from 15 to 20 people and are assigned several prisoners' cases have been researched by the organization's headquarters in London. To secure impartiality, the prisoners assigned are from countries with different political systems, and no group adopts a prisoner from its own country.

Bridge Walsh, a member of the organization's local chapter, said the prisoners are "secretly fingerprinted, before being accepted, and must have neither used nor advertised for any political purpose." The Carbondale chapter of Amnesty International is currently focusing their efforts on releasing two prisoners, one in Taiwan and another in Sudan.

The group of "about 12 active members" writes about 10 letters a month to the governments, prisoners and prisoners' families.

The first prisoner local members were assigned to help when the chapter was formed a year ago in 1972 was in Swaziland in Africa. "She has since been released, and is now busy teaching in a neighboring country," Walsh said.

Though Amnesty International has a policy of not claiming credit for the decision of any government to release a prisoner, Walsh said, "I think they have been helped by our letters."

Amnesty International was awarded the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize, and Walsh said the organization fights with foreign governments. "It is akin to the Red Cross, but in the human rights area," she said.

Walsh said that besides writing letters and publicity work, the organization actively opposes the death penalty "without reservations."

Injustices to black majority told by South African activist

When the anger erupts in South Africa like it did in Tehran, I hope the people of the United States won't be surprised,” he said. The American people are being lied to, Bruti said. “If you look at the relationship between the media and the corporations that are exploiting South Africa, it makes sense that they downplay the oppression there,” he said. But when asked to help in 1968, 1972 and 1976, the United States wouldn’t help, he said. “It is very funny to me that Carter and Pretoria asking South Africa to join the boycott, when they couldn’t participate anyway. They weren’t even invited,” he said.

Bruti, a professor of creative writing and African literature at Northwestern University, said six U.S. universities, including Ohio University and the University of Wisconsin, have fully divested their South African stock, and 41 others have partially divested.

Executive Director of the SIU Foundation Joseph Goodman said that though he is not certain of the amount of investments the university has in South African stock now, the official policy is that “anything is all right” in investments there.

Almost half of 5 million dollars of SIU investments were with companies involved in South Africa in 1978.

American, Chinese misconceptions examined by Vassar professor

By Erick Howansky

A slide presentation on the history of distorted images of Americans and Chinese of each other was presented by Dennis John, head of the theater and speech department at Vassar College in New York.

The presentation, running on black and white film, showed stereotypes, misconceptions, and others, in perception of the two cultures as they appeared in editorial and political cartoons, comic strips, motion pictures, books, illustrations, magazine covers and advertisements between 1900 and 1970.

Gillin has studied Chinese and American literature for more than 10 years, and will soon publish some of his various slide presentations on the subject. His lecture, presented in the Student Center Tuesday night, was sponsored by the Asian Studies Association and the History Department of the Institute for the Study of Man.

The most famous image of the Chinese to Americans was created in 1918, Gillin said. "It combined every unfavorable aspect of not only Chinese, but also Japanese and Asian characters, into the person of Fu Manchu.

"The Fu Manchu is an old evil character, evoking memory while at the same time possessing superhuman in tellectual powers.

"Gillin said the Fu image has been carried over in variations to other characters in American imagery, including Ming the Merciless of the Flash Gordon series, and Charlie Chan, whose main difference from Fu was simply that Chan was "our side.

"At the same time," Gillin said, "the Chinese were exposed to grotesque stereotypes of Americans. The most popular images of Americans in the West often were a fat, overrich, polluted Uncle Sam, and a drunken gangster used to represent the American people.

"Theodore Roosevelt, founder of the Smithsonian Institution, was depicted on the cover of Time magazine in 1919 with red cockroaches scurrying around his neck. Meanwhile, Harry Truman was depicted on the cover of a Chinese magazine futilely running his hand against the Great Wall of China.

"Gillin said that Chiang Kai-shek, the former leader of China, was hailed as a savior by Time magazine in 1937, and in 1948 he and his wife were named Man and Woman of the Year. Though Kai-shek became increasingly arrogant and indifferent, he was still a popular image in the United States until his overthrow by Mao in 1949, Gillin said.

A bladder infection, also called cystitis, is fairly common in women, but rare in men. They are usually caused by bacteria that have gotten into the bladder by traveling up the urethra. Although they usually are not serious, they can be painful. The most common symptoms are a burning sensation during urination and a constant feeling of having "to go," even when you don't.

"The bacteria that cause the infections are found in the human body where they are harmless. It is easy for them to spread to the rectal opening or the genital opening, since the two are so close together. Sometimes women get the infection a few days after having sex. Many doctors think that sexual activity, especially prolonged intercourse, may be a factor. The disease is nicknamed "The Honeymoon Disease."

Since women get bladder infections tend to have them again, it is important to follow these suggestions to cut your chances of having another one.

"Drinking plenty of water, at least six to eight glasses a day. This isn't hard, once you get into the habit."

"Be sure to empty your bladder shortly after you have sexual intercourse. This will help to flush out any bacteria that may have gotten into the urethra.

"Drink cranberry juice every day. This is very acid and reduces your chances of infection.

Champaign says treehouse violates city building codes

URBANA, AP — David Lockhart, though only 12 years old, is getting his first taste of government regulation.

The City of Urbana has notified the Lockhart family that the treehouse David spent 100 hours building in his sideyard violates city building codes.

"I'd really welcome some public debate on this matter," said Patrice Lockhart, the teenager's mother. "I think I'd get some support from the public."

A neighbor complained to the city about the treehouse and city inspector Leroy Wilson examined the structure.

"When you look at the ladder that some kid would climb up and possibly get hurt, or the closeness to the sidewalk that involves city liability, I really didn't have much choice," said Wilson.

The ladder is rope and the treehouse is about seven feet from a public sidewalk.

Wanted—Used oil for recycling

By Mary Harmon Staff Writer

"Wanted Used Oil!

That's the message the Illinois Environmental Resources wants to pass on to the Carbondale community. Used oil is a part of an oil-recycling program.

The program, a first in Carbondale, is part of a statewide conservation drive to re-use motor oil and to avoid environmental pollution caused by the indiscriminate dumping of oil. Robert Eberlin, of his GPA at the beginning of this semester, no action was taken until the fifth week of classes when the Office of Student Development informed Eberlin that Cordogan was on academic probation, Eberlin said.

"We wanted to be sure that Chrisanne was definitely not in good academic standing," Eberlin said. "There are many classes and variables, besides grade point average, that are involved with this."

On Feb. 25, Eberlin told Cordogan that he must resign. However, his letter of resignation, which was originally to become effective at the end of Wednesday's senate meeting, was not received by the senate until Tuesday.

Cordogan said the delay was caused by his desire to brief his successor as chairman of the Student Affairs and Community Service Committee.

The organization as a whole would lose credibility if I stayed on," Cordogan said. "I only wanted to stay until the end of Wednesday's meeting to make sure a few things got done."

A 30-minute discussion preceded the impeachment bill's dismissal due to withdrawal of sponsorship, and the acceptance of Cordogan's letter of resignation that was amended to become effective one day early, at the end of Tuesday's meeting.

Character's reactions to love revealed in two original plays

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

Love makes people react in strange ways. When we really love someone, sometimes our actions convey emotions that are quite opposite to what we truly feel. In two original one-act plays presented by the Student Theater Guild Tuesday night, love, when revealed, provoked both anger and happiness in characters whose misleading reactions are common to us all.

In the first play, "Pudding," written and directed by John Pearson, a woman (Carolyn) played by Amy Sheeht and a man (Mooey) played by Freeda said that she didn't know how to take notes either. "I can't wait to get back to school and learn how to study," she said. The action in the play was interesting: the characters and situation were believable. Alan's zany antics and wild stories of giant chickens frequently provoked laughter from the audience. The actors did a good job of setting up a conflict that was both emotional and funny. Generally, the play showed sympathy for characters who struggled to be truthful, but found, as we all do, that the truth doesn't always make us happy.

In the second play, "Here's Pie In Your Eye," written by Bevran Johnston and directed by Lars Timpa, a determined, yet unhappy college graduate named Nancy (played by Amy Leaverton) tries to concentrate on writing her resume while everyone around her, including her roommate and neighbors, are constantly trying to get her to do all sorts of job applications and job searches. Nancy becomes upset. Alan, her neighbor, is so hung up on her that she doesn't want to have anything to do with him. Meanwhile, a wild party is going on across the hall and the noise infuriates Nancy. She is about to call the police and complain when her neighbor and host of the party, Lance (played by Eddie Scholoff), comes over to invite her to the party. Nancy just can't loosen up; she doesn't want to have much to do with him. She is now hanging up with her work. Lance, on the other hand, has no hang-ups, other than being a big-mouthed exhibitionist, so he behaves well.

The action starts to speed up when Nancy tries to smarm up Lance for being such a nuisance, but secretly she likes his crazy sense of humor and prudish hipposises, so the play ends with Nancy and Lance getting together. Both actors portrayed their characters well. Nancy as the flippant bitch and Lance as the obnoxious but sometimes lovable creep from across the hall. They are opposites, yet they can relate and when Nancy tries to hide her true feeling, a healthy antagonism develops between them that was both interesting and entertaining.

Zeta said that she was treated "like one of the kids." She said, "At first, I kind of felt silly joking. Frieda said, "But then I realized it wouldn't hurt because it's worthwhile because it makes me laugh and records.

Frieda said the hardest thing about returning to school was learning to memorize. "I never learned to study when I was in school," she said. "I never did much homework either.

Frieda said that she didn't know how to take notes either. Now that she is no longer taking notes, she knows how to study and how to study, she said, she loves school.

"Each semester I can't wait to get through my schedule book and see what I'm going to take next," she said. "I want to know everything about everything. That's why I like the library so much. I've told people that if I had a choice, I'd live next door to the library because I'm just crazy about books.

Frieda said that she's so excited about school, she's not anxious to graduate.

Most of the re-entry women are in school because they want to get trained for a job. I'm not saying that I don't want a job, I really like taking classes," she said.

Frieda said she isn't sure what kind of job she would like to get and she's not worried about it. "I feel that everything you do leads to things. I guess your whole life is a series of happenstances. My father always said, 'Never resist change because when one door closes, another opens.' I think that's true. How do you know what the future holds for me? Maybe all these classes I'm taking will lead to some special job that's just waiting for me. Maybe the worst. I don't want to lose because I've never had any job and I guess I'm just lucky. Everything just falls right in my lap.

Women's Center provides seminars for re-entry women

Monday and alternating Tuesdays. The center gives the women an opportunity to get together while they eat lunch. During the lunch hours on March 24 and 25, representatives from the Student Wellness Resource Center will speak on weight management. Speakers will also be booked for the luncheons "as the need presents itself," Durrant said.

In addition to the luncheons, Women's Services also schedules workshops for re-entry women. "Translating Life Experiences is the title workshop to be presented at 2 p.m. March 26 in Quizzy Lounge. Sharon Kennedy, counselor in the Career Planning and Placement Center, will discuss "transferable skills.

"Most of the women developed while working at home can be applied to a career setting," she said. "Household skills can become assets in many jobs.

For women who need help with their homework, Women's Services has a list of students who are willing to tutor. Most of the tutors are seniors who have been hired by the Office of Student Work.
Gymnasts face Memphis St.

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer
In an effort to get one more chance for his gymnasts to qualify for the NCAA regional tournament, Coach Bill Meade has scheduled a meet for Friday at Memphis State.

Meade said the meet will give DeSimone, a native of Chicago, a chance to compete before the regionals. It also will give Warren Brantley and Randy Bettis one last chance for high scores before the regional qualifiers are named.

The meet will take the place of one SIU missed against Nebraska. Meade said. SIU canceled the meet because of the rash of injuries to its gymnasts.

Once again the Illini will have the homecourt advantage and another capacity crowd in excess of 16,000 is expected to attend in the spacious Assembly Hall.

DeSimone also played at home in the first two rounds of the tournament and vanquished Loyola of Chicago, 168-87, and followed with a 75-65 triumph over Illinois State Monday night.

Those two victories boosted Illinois' season record to 20-12 after the Illini had finished in second place in the Big Ten race.

Murray State brings a 23-7 record to Champaign following tournament victories over Jacksonville, 53-49, and at Oklahoma City, 108-75.

buses too much," DeSimone said. "Travel also is one of the bad things. It'll be a little different in the season, too, because I'm married now."

DeSimone was married to his wife, Sheila, last November.

"Those are just some of the things you have to put up with on the way up," he said. "That and playing consistently.

"If I can hit at a constant clip and play strong defense in day and day out, I'll be ready if a break comes along." DeSimone added.

"Basketball is a crazy business. People are in and out, quit because of injury, or some just don't make it. Everything is treated business-like and you're expected to always do your job."

And DeSimone has been working hard at his job.
