Shaw to ask for negotiations on Bracy price

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw will ask the state Capital Development Board to negotiate fixed purchase prices for the Bracy Building — the administration's top choice for a library storage facility — and two other buildings.

The SIU Board of Trustees unanimously recommended Thursday that Shaw request the CDB to attempt to obtain purchase options for the Bracy Building, in Marion; the Wal-Mart Building, in Carbondale; and the Baptist Student Center, located on campus.

The CDB will also be asked to obtain an additional purchase price for each building that would include installation of bookshelves.

The Board of Trustees asked the CDB last December to evaluate the library storage capabilities, the condition and the appraised value of each building.

Shaw and President Albert Somit based the recommendations they made at an Architecture and Design Committee meeting Thursday on the confidential report the chancellor received from the CDB March 4.

"The recommendation that we request is that we ask the CDB to proceed with the purchase of the Bracy Building as our first choice," Shaw told the committee members. "If Bracy is not available, our second choice would be Wal-Mart."

Shaw said the Baptist Student Center was ranked last because it has considerably less square footage available for library storage than the other two choices.

Somit said the 60-square-foot Bracy Building is the best choice because of its quality and size, because parts of it can be sealed off to protect valuable materials and because it offers opportunities for programs other than library storage.

"When we weighed the three possibilities available to us," Somit said, "Bracy seemed to be, on balance, the best available to us."

Health Service begins measles immunizations

By James Derk
Staff Writer

Outbreaks of measles on two college campuses in Indiana have prompted the Health Service to begin a full-scale immunization program for students and faculty.

Dr. Lawrence Frisch, medical chief of staff at the Health Service, said immunizations will begin Friday. A full-scale program will begin Monday, March 21.

Students can be vaccinated at either the Health Service or the Student Health Assessment Center in the Student Center.

The disease in question is rubella, or "red measles," not the more severe rubella, or "German measles," although the Health Service can arrange for both vaccines to be given.

Dr. Frisch said persons between the ages of 14 and 30 run a high risk of being infected with the disease.

Persons who were immunized prior to 1969 will have to be re-immunized, as well as those who received the vaccine before the age of 15 months. Anyone who has received the "live" vaccine — given after 1969 — should be immune.

"I would like to encourage everyone to be vaccinated for measles," Dr. Frisch said. "No one needs to panic. Measles isn't a disaster, but it is an unpleasant disease."

Dr. Frisch said measles is one of the most infectious diseases. It is passed through secretions from the nose and mouth from sneezing and coughing. It can develop into bronchitis, which spreads the disease further.

Tuition increase of 10 percent possibly not enough, Shaw says

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

A tuition increase of about 10 percent for next year was approved Thursday by the SIU Board of Trustees, but Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said another increase may be necessary.

"Should there be no tax increase in Illinois, we might have to ask the board for authority to grant another additional increase," Shaw said.

The 10 percent increase, effective summer semester, was approved by a vote of 6 to 2, with SIU-C Student Trustee Sharon Hutcherson and SIU-E Student Trustee John Realdeman voting "no." Both student trustees have advisory votes.

"We should consider taking a

Board rejects shorter week See Page 13

stance for access to higher education for the citizens of Illinois," Hutcherson said. "Economic pressure is the one single thing that limits this accessibility."

Beginning this summer, undergraduate and graduate students who are Illinois residents will pay $894 a year, an increase of 10.38 percent.

Law students will pay $1,056 a year, an increase of 5% or 10 percent. Medical students will pay $3,720 a year, an increase of $339.

Both Undergraduate Student Organization President Jerry

Cook and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Ann Greeley again expressed "philosophical opposition" to the tuition increase, but said that students understand the financial problems of higher education.

Both organizations support the tax increase proposed by Gov. James R. Thompson.

The 10 percent increase will generate $2.7 million for the SIU System.

Bill would close SIU-C law school

By James Derk
Staff Writer

An Illinois legislator will introduce a bill Friday to eliminate the law schools at SIU-C and Northern Illinois University.

Rep. Michael Tate, R-Decatur, will introduce a bill to phase out the law programs, which he calls "expensive and unnecessary."

"At a time when there is obviously not enough money to go around, it makes no sense to me to spread a lot of money over several small programs," Tate said. Tate said the state is spending "millions to educate a few students in a field that is already overcrowded."

There are more lawyers per capita in Illinois than in any other state, Tate said. His proposal would phase out the law programs at SIU-C and NIU and funnel the money into other programs.

"This is one alternative to look at," Tate said.

"Terminating these programs will improve the overall quality of higher education in Illinois."

Tate said the additional revenue from eliminating the law schools should be given to "fields in demand, the high-tech fields, like engineering and trade fields." Tate labeled the University of Illinois-Urbana School of Engineering as deserving of the additional funds.

SIU-C President Albert Somit criticized Tate's findings, saying "the per capita figures are extremely misleading. They overlook the fact that there is a concentration of legal talent in metropolitan areas and an undersupply of the same talent in different areas like Southern Illinois."

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said he had not yet spoken with Tate, but planned to discuss the bill with him.

"I think you are going to see a lot of this kind of legislation this spring," Shaw said. "We have a situation where obviously the financial condition is bad. This is but one of a number of attempts to deal with another problem — the problem that we need additional revenue to do the job."

Tate said he has no co-sponsor for the bill, but said he had talked to several members of the General Assembly and found support for his idea.

"Obviously, this is going to be a very controversial issue," Tate said. "I feel the idea has merit, and it deserves discussion and debate in the Assembly."

Tate said the state has two choices.

"Either we raise revenue, and that means a tax increase, and no one enjoys tax increases, or we reduce the budget," he said. "One way to reduce the budget is to cut back on nonessential programs."

Shaw said the University will take the bill seriously. "It is our feeling that any bill that is submitted to the Legislature, we have to worry about it," Shaw said. "We will take the measures necessary to get our views across. We serve the southern region of the state."

Shaw says pay increases possible

By Rod Stone
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said Thursday that in the near future SIU may be able to give its employees the 3-percent salary increase which was deferred last December.

The money for the salary increase was set aside in case the University had to meet a second budget recession by Gov. James Thompson.

"Two percent of this year's higher education budget was called back by the governor in December. SIU-C's share of the callback was $1.8 million, which Shaw said the University was prepared for because it had laid aside contingency funds.

"We have every expectation that there will not be a second round of recisions," Shaw said at the Board of Trustees meeting in the Student Center.

Should this prove to be the case, Shaw said both SIU-C and SIU-Edwardsville might be able to release the funds and implement the salary increase in April, providing lump-sum payments to employees for the January-to-March period, if possible.

Shaw said he expects to know definitely if the University will be able to give the increase within "a week or two."

Deferring the salary increase provides $1.4 million of the $2.6 million SIU-C is setting aside. In addition to the $1.8 million for a possible recession, the University is setting aside $800,000 to replace uncollected student debts. The additional $1.2 million is coming from a hiring freeze and cuts in support costs.

Shaw said SIU's salary scale has fallen severely behind other government institutions.

Shaw pointed out that other state employees have already been given salary increases this year: the salaries of employees in code departments, such as the attorney general's office or the secretary of state's office, increased between 5 percent and 7 percent; community college employees' salaries increased 7.3 percent; and public school teachers' salaries increased in excess of 3 percent.

The average national salary increase for higher education employees was 7.3 percent, Shaw said.

The CDB will report all six price options — one for each building as is and one for each with shelves installed — to the Board of Trustees. The board will then recommend which option it prefers to the CDB.

The CDB must approve the actual purchase before it is finalized.

"Now it's up to the CDB to determine a fair price and negotiate that price," Shaw said.

Somit said the $1.6 million that the Legislature appropriated for the purchase of a library storage facility set an upper ceiling on the purchase price.

"The actual price is subject to negotiation between the CDB and the owner," Somit said. "There is absolutely no guarantee that will be the price of the building."

A lease, which expired August 31, 1982, specified that the University could purchase the building for $1.6 million. The $120,000 the University paid in rent for the year it leased the building was not applied to the purchase.

The Graduate and Professional Student Council asked the Architect and Design Committee to postpone making a recommendation to the CDB until the CDB could assess the feasibility of constructing a 10,000-square-foot building on campus.

The GPSC Library Storage Alternatives Committee has been trying to have the appropriations bill amended to allow construction or purchase of a library storage facility, which it says will save taxpayers about a million dollars.

But Harris Rowe, chairman of the board, said the appropriation could not be amended. Instead the appropriation bill would have to be reintroduced.

TUITION from Page 1

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recommended in January a 10 percent tuition increase, but Shaw said another increase may be recommended.

Thompson, in his budget address last week, recommended a higher education budget $236 million less than the $1.36 billion budget recommended by the IBHE, and $108 million less than the fiscal year 1983 budget. The higher education board is expected to adjust the budget downward at its meeting in April.

Shaw said. To meet that, tuition could be increased by as much as $600 to $800 a year, or support and personnel services could be reduced by as much as 10 to 15 percent.

The board also gave initial consideration to a proposed $1 per month increase in the Campus Housing Activity Fee for residents of Evergreen Terrace.

State fiscal record one of 'worst'

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois' economic performance has fundered since 1975 to become one of the nation's worst, according to an Illinois State Chamber of Commerce study released Thursday.

Lester W. Brann Jr., the group's president, said "The study couldn't have come at a better time" to buttress the chamber's arguments against looming state tax increases, and blamed the situation in part on excessive jobless benefits and increased taxes on the business community.

Salvadoran aid request increased

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, setting the stage for a fierce battle in Congress, requested $110 million in increased military aid Thursday for El Salvador and suggested he will send in more U.S. advisers if the money is not approved in full.

On Capitol Hill, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Reagan's request was in trouble. "I don't see the votes around here at the present time ... He's going to have to do a lot of selling," O'Neill said.

Judge bars student-aid-draft law

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday barred the government from enforcing a law that would deny education loans to students who have not registered for the draft.

Saying the law was "likely" to violate students' constitutional rights against self-incrimination, U.S. District Judge Donald D. Alsop issued a preliminary injunction in a lawsuit that draft resisters and educators viewed as a national test case.

Senators oppose Reagan gas plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's plan to decontrol natural gas prices will help big oil companies rather than consumers, a trio of midwestern senators and several consumer groups told Congress on Thursday.

The Reagan proposal "will simply line the pockets of the major oil companies that control more than 70 percent of the supply" of "old" gas, said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo.

Higher ed needs funds, S-Senate says

By James Derk
Staff Writer

The Student Senate passed a resolution in favor of additional funding for higher education at its meeting Wednesday night in the Student Center.

Undergraduate Student Organization President Jerry Cook called the resolution "the most significant piece of legislation that USO has faced."

The resolution urges the University administration to secure supportive data on the decisions that will be made in order to ensure that any funding cuts will be made in a logical and equitable manner.

Cook addressed the senate on the pending tuition increase for fall semester — an increase that Cook said could range from 10 percent to 60 percent.

"We have to act now," Cook said. "Critical decisions have to be made, and we need your support."

Cook urged the senate to support a statewide tax increase that would raise an estimated $1.1 billion for the state budget. Without the increase, Cook said, the higher education system in Illinois will be in "big trouble."

In other business, the senate voted not to consider a funding request from the College of Business and Administration Student Council for a guest speaker.

Cook said the rejection was significant since the funding request was previously denied by the USO Finance Commission. It was submitted directly from the senate floor, bypassing the commission.

"If you pass this bill," Cook said, "you will be establishing a precedent and undermining the importance of the Finance Commission."

Funding requests are usually considered by the Finance Commission prior to senate meetings and the senate the commission's findings into consideration.

A split senate passed a resolution supporting the name change of General Academic Programs to the School of General Undergraduate and Interdisciplinary Studies.

The senate voted 24 to 5 to pass the resolution after dropping the ROTC affiliation with the school. Under the old resolution, the ROTC program would be included in the program, but ROTC requested to be dropped from the school. The senate also confirmed of Sharon Hutcherson as the new student trustee.

The senate gave a unanimous vote of confidence to Steve Petrow, acting Minority Affairs Commissioner.

The senate also donated $100 to Project Buckle-up, a Jackson County project to help residents conform to a new state law that requires parents to place small children in approved safety seats while riding in an automobile.

GPSC backs Thompson tax proposal

By Phillip Fiorini
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council passed a resolution Wednesday supporting Gov. James Thompson's proposed tax increases. The resolution was approved by a vote of 13 to 12, with two abstentions.

GPSC President Ann Greeley said, "I don't agree it's a very good option, but it's practical. If we don't get any money for higher education, the situation next year will not be very good."

Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, spoke to the council after Greeley had expressed concern about the possible ramifications of a censorship policy being exercised through travel services.

The issue arose after the University denied a bus to the Mid-American Peace Project for a trip to Washington, D.C. earlier this week.

Dave Rodgers, a GPSC member in business, asked Dougherty why the University was unaware of MAPP's reason for wanting the bus. He said he feared the University was being inconsistent by providing transportation to some University-sponsored groups and not others.

"The present procedure is wrong," Dougherty said. "It causes a jillion problems."

Dougherty said the result may be re-examination of the transportation policy for University-sponsored events.

"It wasn't the University's intention to keep that group from going to Washington," Dougherty said. "We apologize to that group for the lateness of addressing the issue."

James Belt, assistant to Vice President for Financial Affairs Warren Buffum, answered the questions regarding the proposed revised payment plan for tuition and fees.

The revision would require students, after advance registration and before the tenth day of classes, to pay all past due amounts, including the charge of one hour of classes, before being processed by the Office of Admissions and Records.

Although the latest outbreak is not German measles, Dr. Frisch encourages all persons who have not been vaccinated for rubella to obtain a vaccination. Women are especially at risk with rubella.

"I would encourage all students to look into their rubella immunization status," Dr. Frisch said. "I would strongly encourage all students, especially women, to get a shot against rubella."

Belt said graduate students would have to pay for at least one-half of one hour of class, or $55, as most graduate students are registered only half-time. Undergraduate students would be required to pay 10 percent of tuition and fees before being processed, or about $110.

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw must approve the revised plan before April 1 or the University will not have an installment plan for next fall, he said.

The original payment plan was rejected because it didn't require students registering in the final registration period and through the first 10 days of class to either pay or receive a cancellation waiver, as required by statute.

The Health Service will handle the vaccinations on a walk-in basis except during the noon hour. The shot will be given free of charge.

Dr. Frisch said the vaccination is a simple shot, with no side effects.

Students with any questions may call the Health Service at 453-3311.

Study tax plan options

ILLINOIS IS said to be scraping the bottom of the money barrel. State agencies are threatened by rescissions and by Gov. Thompson's bare-bones budget proposal. Thompson tells us it's time for a tax increase — the first since 1969.

But before blindly following Thompson into what he claims is the only way, let's take a look at the situation. Nothing as complex as solutions to economic problems is cut and dried.

Thompson wants to increase personal income tax by 60 percent and corporate income tax by 40 percent, boost the gasoline tax from 7.5 cents per gallon to 11 cents per gallon and raise the liquor tax 66 percent.

Illinois does need revenues. Agencies and state services, particularly education and mental health, have witnessed allocation recalls and have looked at a budget without a tax increase. Most have quickly jumped behind Thompson and the $2 billion tax plan. Thompson and other officials say the tax plan is essential to maintain services at a level of decency.

Compared to taxes in other states, the tax burden on Illinoisans is moderate. Residents of Michigan and New York, for instance, pay more in income tax while those in Indiana and Pennsylvania pay slightly less. A tax increase wouldn't be out of hand considering that a family of four earning $12,500 a year would be taxed an additional $122 and one earning $22,500 would pay an additional $273 — substantial amounts in times of recession, but not devastating.

THOMPSON HAS made a reputation for holding the line on taxes. Illinois in general has done well since 1969 while not watching revenues plummet. State income tax revenues have risen nearly 300 percent since 1971. Corporate income tax revenues climbed 262 percent in the same period.

The most desirable solution for Illinois is a renewed economy. Getting business back on its feet and people back to work would do wonders for the state's revenue collections. Increasing taxes would seem to be counterproductive, taking money out of an already depressed economy. If a tax increase is necessary as an emergency measure, it should be temporary.

However, Thompson has been unwilling to consider alternatives. He refuses to consider any sunset or temporary tax increases, which really would be an appealing answer to the state's woes. It would allow the state to make up shortfalls now and promise that the additional tax burden on Illinoisans would not remain once recovery takes hold.

Thompson has painted the state's economic landscape in grim colors. Lawmakers, as usual, are taking their time on a controversial issue. In the interim, the state remains on its feet, though staggering.

The national economy is showing signs of recovery. There is time to analyze the tax plan and alternatives. There is no need to fall into line in a panic just because Thompson has blown a warning trumpet.

Directory correction

"To err is human, to forgive, divine," said Alexander Pope. And by publishing the editorial "Directory should have been shelved" (DE March 8) the editorial board of the Daily Egyptian certainly proved it was human.

We put part of the blame on USO President Jerry Cook for the delay of the student directory. As was reported in Wednesday's DE, Cook refuted the editorial on two points. He said the USO had wanted to shelve the project in January when it became evident that it would be delayed further but that the USO was locked in by University purchasing policy changes. The $6,535 cost of the directory was not student fee money but rather money from the Office of Academic Affairs and the Office of Student Affairs.

We apologize to Cook. But our point about the cost of the months of delay still stands. The money, wherever it came from, was wasted.

Cough, cough at Arena

I went to the Tom Petty concert at the Arena last Friday night and I had a miserable evening. Don't get me wrong, the rock 'n' roll was great. The problem was with the smokers. You know, those mindless, self-centered slob who think that maintaining their filthy habit is more important than the health and well-being of the people around them.

But the blame shouldn't stop there. The ushers, usherettes, and security people whose duty it is to enforce the no-smoking rule, apparently couldn't have cared less. In fact, I even witnessed one of them smoking.

Finally, the Arena management has the ultimate responsibility for the health and safety of all the concert-goers. If they don't enforce their rules against smoking by tossing out the violators, then maybe someone should invite the local fire marshal to the next concert to judge how well they meet this responsibility. I'm sure legal action would be in order. — Paul Smith, Alumnus, Carbondale

Is extra drink worth it?

It's time we stand together

After reading the "She Used to Drive Drunk" article in the March 7th DE, I felt compelled to write and tell the other side of the story.

While on Spring Break '82 in Daytona Beach, Fla., a friend (Brad Becker) and I were hit by a car while walking across the highway. He came out of nowhere, made no attempt to stop or swerve and hit us head on. The driver was speeding and tried to leave the scene of the accident. This is when a security guard stopped him. The most dramatic change in my life took place the moment he hit us: my life will never be the same.

I was in a coma for the next 3 to 4 weeks, having only a 10 percent chance of surviving the first week. I cannot imagine how my mother felt when she was called at midnight and told that her son had a fractured skull, internal injuries and brain damage, and probably not live until the morning.

After months in the hospital and going to therapy twice daily, I learned to talk, walk and use my right side again. My therapy is not over, and I have breaking my jaw and resetting it to look forward to this summer.

I thank God and the people who cared enough to pray for me.

The biggest contributor to the incident was alcohol: alcohol was the main reason it happened.

Please take into account your actions of driving after drinking on other people's lives and your own. Killing someone is not worth that drink to me. I'm sure what happened that night will haunt the driver throughout his life. I don't want him to forget what he did to Brad and me. Be careful and show the intelligence you have to avoid a situation such as ours.

I want to thank all of my friends here at Southern, you were a great help to me when I needed it and I won't forget all that you have done. Have a great time on break, folks, but remember — let's be careful out there. — Jim Torricelli, Junior, Art Education.

After reading Mary Finley's letter March 8, I thought it was about time that we proud Americans stood together. Because you did not view the video presentation Ms. Finley, you missed out on the desecration of our nation's flag, an indication of what Iranians, some of whom attend SIU, think of the United States. Freedom of speech is guaranteed to all, but unfortunately there are some U.S. citizens who would speak against the nation, military service and men who have kept you, me and yes, even Ms. Finley, safe.

Gerald Kenny I'm glad to hear that another U.S. citizen feels as I do. Ms. Finley I have one last question for you and your kind — if you don't like Gerald's and my opinion and you're not a proud American, then what are you? Let the proud American thrive. David L. DeYoung, Sophomore, Computer Science and signed by two other people.

DE not the forum for evolution

Please allow me, as a student of Zoology, to state my opinion of what evolution is and the prospects for meaningful exchanges about concepts of evolution in the Daily Egyptian.

Evolution is a grand central idea in biology. It attempts to integrate knowledge from many scientific areas to explain not only the origin of life, but life's great diversity, and complexity as well as community structure. There is no single "theory of evolution." At least four major "theories of evolution" have come and gone. Because evolution is an abstract idea dwelling in the heads of some Homo sapiens, there are probably as many "theories" as people concerned with it. However, two central concepts are shared by virtually all zoologists. Animals have changed over time, and the forces which contributed to those changes are natural.

Understanding the arguments of "evolutionists" (and "creationists") requires much sophistication. Viewpoints expressed in 500 or fewer words are inadequate to present meaningful discourse to an untrained audience. Therefore, while providing a forum in which to "sound-off," public letters to the Daily Egyptian will offer little real communication of evolutionary concepts.

Adopt-a-Light is flicker of hope

YOU'VE ALL seen the Brightway Path.

It's that concrete thing that winds its way through campus providing a well-lighted path to and from anywhere on campus. Yeah, right.

That's what it says in the catalog. The only thing the Brightway is missing is the "bright" part.

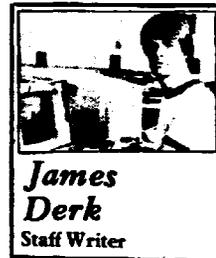

The Undergraduate Student Organization has been fighting for six months to no avail to have the lights on the path fixed. Either the University administrators don't care, or they just aren't listening. I vote for the latter.

I DON'T THINK the University would intentionally take student safety for granted. The University has a lot to gain in keeping its students alive. Dead students don't pay tuition. Still, something has to be done.

Harrel Lerch, superintendent of maintenance, said Physical Plant repairs the lights when they find out which ones are malfunctioning. They rely on USO and individual students to tell them. They have a phone number for people to call if they notice burned-out lights.

Actually, the USO has been conducting surveys of the path for the last six months and would rather be done with the project, so I propose we try something new.

Introducing "Adopt-a-Light." Actually the idea is rather simple. Next time you are running at top speed through Thompson Woods, stop and pick out a malfunctioning light. You can do it in daytime if you want. Pick out a light (don't worry, there are plenty of burned-out lights for everyone) and write down its exact location.

James Derk Staff Writer

could do its part by selecting a "Light of the Week" at random and printing a picture or something.

MAYBE WE CAN have metal bracelets made up like they did with the prisoners of war in the 1970s. We could have the serial numbers of malfunctioning lights printed on them so everyone would know we care.

Or how about a telenov? We could get Jerry Lewis to fly down and have collection boxes all over town (Give your change for Jerry's lights). WSU-TV would probably produce the thing for free, as the students working there late at night would be able to walk home without carrying their own lights. Television lights get heavy after a block or two.

Actually, the adoption idea isn't new. Various zoos around the country will let you adopt a lion or bear (or gerbil, if you're cheap) for a year. You don't get to keep the animal, of course, but you do get a nice plaque by the cage with your name on it and a nice certificate suitable for framing. Of course, you do have to pay to feed the hippo for a year, but hey, you get your name on the plaque.

"Adopt-a-Light" won't cost you a cent. If you want a plaque, you'll have to make your own — but hey, times are tough all over.

So now, next time you're on the Brightway, you'll know there is a little personality on the path these days.

Too bad you'll be running too fast to notice.

Supporters lobby for nuclear freeze

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

About 5,000 people huddled together under the gray, damp skies that hung over Capitol Hill Tuesday, their banners proclaiming their support for a nuclear freeze.

Ted Kennedy, a symbol of American liberalism, was at the microphone. His voice echoed across the west lawn of the Capitol Building, his clenched fist raised in emphasis.

When he denounced the Reagan military policy as "voodoo arms control" the masses responded with thunderous applause and cheers.

For Washington D.C., the scene was not that unusual. A rally protesting cuts to higher education had taken place at the same spot 24 hours earlier, and a protest against U.S. military aid to El Salvador was scheduled for the next day.

Yet there is something unusual about the nuclear freeze movement and the people who support it. Those gathered on the lawn had come from every state and almost every congressional district.

The "freezeniks," as they have been dubbed by their opponents, are not merely a bunch of radical hippie-holdovers from the '60s. Their forces represent a cross-section of America, and include Republicans and Democrats, men and women, blacks and whites, blue-collar and white collar, rich and poor.

Their ranks include the heads of several religious denominations and members of the medical, legal and military professions.

The freeze movement, unlike the anti-Vietnam war and civil rights movements, has so far managed to hold together a united front. Its coalition consists, on the one hand, of pacifists desiring an end to all U.S. weapons production, and, on the other, those who believe in a strong defense.

Furthermore, the people who braved the cold in front of the Capitol had not come to Washington just for the rally. They also were attempting to persuade their representatives to support the freeze legislation coming before Congress within the next few weeks.

That legislation calls for the United States and the Soviet Union to initiate an immediate verifiable freeze on nuclear weapons as a first step toward reducing both countries' nuclear stockpiles.

The freeze has been supported by voters in nine of 10 state referenda, and all but three of 43 local referenda. It has been endorsed by more than 300 city councils, including Carbondale's, and has the official support of more than 100 national and international organizations, ranging from the national YMCA to the United Nations General Assembly.

In addition, several major public opinion polls have shown that a majority of the American public supports the idea of a freeze. A Gallup poll taken in November 1982 showed that the freeze has an approval rating of 71 percent.

This does not mean, however, that the freeze is without opposition. While the freeze supporters gathered on the west lawn of the Capitol, a smaller counter-demonstration was going on just north of the building.

The freeze opposition was organized by the Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder and head of the Moral Majority. Falwell

Exhaustion was their badge of victory

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

THERE WAS no crowd to greet the 25 weary passengers as they stumbled out of the two vans and pickup truck that had brought them back to Carbondale from Washington, D.C. No photographers or reporters were waiting. Just a bitter wind that cut into their fatigued faces and stung their sleepless eyes.

Perhaps it was a fitting welcome for the group of Southern Illinois residents who went to the nation's capital to lobby for a nuclear weapons freeze. True, they had reason to be happy, but it was a quiet, solitary celebration — a personal victory not easily shared with others.

Their journey ended much as it started, in the dark in front of the Student Center with last minute hassles and momentary misplacement of luggage and passengers.

Two people who left with the group had not returned with it because of other prearranged plans, but the group had changed more than numerically during the four long days it had been together.

THE TRIP, sponsored by the Mid-America Peace Project, began early Sunday morning as 27 people crammed into two rented vans and a pickup truck and set out on the 20-hour, thousand-mile drive to Washington.

The group, although made up mostly of students, included several veteran political activists.

Thirty-nine-year-old J.H. Adams of Carbondale had marched in civil rights and anti-war demonstrations in the 1960s, had been active in the women's and American Indian movements, and after a brief rest from activism is now part of the nuclear freeze movement.

Others, like Tanya Adams, sophomore in political science, were new to the ways of rallying, protesting and lobbying.

Those who managed to drift off to sleep Sunday morning were awakened for a truckstop breakfast in western Kentucky where some truck drivers eyed the group suspiciously over their cups of coffee.

Most people in the group did not know each other when the trip began, but 20 hours in a van brings people close together in more ways than one. Neighboring shoulders became pillows for nodding heads, and a wide assortment of health food and junk food was passed for all to share.

THE CARAVAN continued through the snow-specked hills of West Virginia with the afternoon sun momentarily breaking through the clouds and creating a double rainbow to the east, seeming to offer the proverbial pot of gold in the general direction of Washington.

The group arrived in Washington late Sunday evening and unloaded their gear at St. Stephan and the Incarnation Church, one of many local churches which serve as free shelters for the thousands of protesters who flock to the nation's capital virtually every day.

After a visit to some nearby restaurants, the Southern Illinoisans rolled out their sleeping bags on the floor of the church sanctuary, next to follow freeze-lobbyists from (Oklahoma and West Virginia, and faded off to a much-needed sleep.

Since the official lobbying was scheduled for Tuesday, group members spent Monday sightseeing, attending nuclear freeze workshops, visiting various freeze headquarters and resting from the long journey.

A few student members of the group stopped by to visit with Jeanne Simon, wife of U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-22nd District, who assured them that her husband would continue to support the freeze legislation, which he co-sponsored in the House.

THE STUDENT group then joined about 2,500 other collegians from across the country in protesting cuts to higher education as part of the National Student Action and Lobby Day activities being held on Capitol Hill.

Tuesday, however, was the big day. They had spent 20 hours listening to the drone of the engines and whine of 1,000 miles of highway for this day. And they had 20 more traveling hours waiting for them when the day's activities were over.

They were certainly not alone. An estimated 5,000 to 7,000 people had come to Washington from every state for an all-out, two-day effort to convince congressmen to support legislation calling for an immediate bilateral freeze on nuclear weapons.

For the group from Southern Illinois, the day began with a late-morning caucus of all the Illinois lobbyists in a nearby church basement. There, strategy was planned for the two afternoon meetings of the entire Illinois delegation with Sens. Charles Percy and Alan Dixon. Lobbyists, who were divided by congressional districts, were also given tips for the meetings with their congressional representative.

Over a box-lunch provided for the lobbyists, Carbondale residents mingled with blue-collar workers from Chicago, homemakers from suburbia, students from DeKalb, Bloomington and Champaign, and rural residents of Central Illinois.

THEN IT was on to a traditional noon rally on the lawn of the Capitol. The Southern Illinois delegation joined thousands of others waving banners and cheering for the parade of speakers, including Sens. Edward Kennedy and presidential hopeful Alan Cranston.

At the meetings with both Percy and Dixon, the group from Southern Illinois made its presence felt. Nick Rion, speaking on behalf of the group, reminded the senators that the City Council of Carbondale, the largest city in Southern Illinois, had endorsed the freeze and that Simon had co-sponsored the freeze resolution in the house.

While other congressional district spokespersons hinted at possible political repercussions for failure to support the freeze, Rion laid it on the line.

Representing the lobbyists from the southernmost congressional district in the state, Rion spoke last on both occasions and prompted applause as he told both Percy and Dixon. "We hope that you work for the freeze because we in the 22nd District will do everything in our power to defeat you or anyone else who doesn't support it."

The meeting with Percy did not end until 3:30 p.m., and two hours later the caravan from Southern Illinois was back on the road heading for home.

The long trip back gave the tuckered travelers ample opportunity to discuss the hectic events of the past few days.

They recalled the highlights of the rally, and the frustration with Percy, who was sympathetic, but remained uncommitted on the freeze issue.

SEVERAL people complained of stimulus overload — too much happening too fast.

And Washington itself wore them down — so much history and power. And so many contrasts.

The church where the group stayed opens its doors not only to political activists but also to the many impoverished residents of the neighborhood. In the basement bathrooms, residents from Southern Illinois showered next to some of Washington's street people, including one old black man who meticulously cleaned his wornout shoes and dried his thin body with toilet paper, as he had no towel.

But mainly the talk was of positive events: The amazement of fellow lobbyists that 27 people had come to Washington from a town they had never heard of, the many two-fingered peace greetings from passing cars and the free breakfast that was given to Nick Rion at Jean's Restaurant in Moorehead, Ky., when Jean learned that he had organized the trip to lobby for a cause that she believed in.

LISTENING to the radios in the vehicles, they cheered at the news that President Reagan was told Wednesday that the freeze resolution would almost surely pass in the House, and were not surprised by his response that he would continue to fight it.

They had their brief moment of glory on the Capitol lawn, but now had to face exams and jobs, and come home to bills and paychecks that reflected a three-day absence from work. The weary people who stepped out into the cold, wet darkness in front of the Student Center know that the ultimate fate of the nuclear freeze issue will not be decided by a group of old activists and young students from Southern Illinois.

And so it didn't matter that no one was there to greet them.

For if anyone had asked the question of whether it all was worth it — the money, time and frustration — it would only have shown that whoever asked didn't begin to understand.

Stories told through 'Sketches'

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

The "Sketches of Southern Illinois," by 81-year-old Roscoe Misselhorn, that are now being displayed in the University museum are more than just drawings of landmarks, each one is a story.

"You see that one," he says, excited at the chance to talk about his work. "That's the old Ohio Street in Cairo. It's all gone now. U.S. Grant stayed right there in that hotel. The 'Lantern' Hotel. I did that sketch about 40 years ago. I did all these about 40 years ago."

As he talks, old friends and family filter in and out of the gallery. They browse until they see a familiar house, a nearby landmark or an old school, and Misselhorn can tell another story.

In his 60 years of specialization in pencil sketches, Misselhorn has developed portfolios in areas as diverse as New England, the Carolinas, Texas, Quebec and Missouri. But the portfolio presently displayed in the University Museum testifies to his lifetime of love for this region.

"I hate to admit it," he says laughing, "but I like living in a small town. We got about 5,000 in Sparta. I go up to sell in St. Louis and they ask me what we do down here. I tell 'em we do the same as everybody else."

Misselhorn's energy and wit defy his age. He calls his 80-year-old buddy, Wally Holmes, a kid and puts a pained look on his face when he takes a sip of the drink his wife brings him. "Ugh! That's water. I thought it was gin!"

Misselhorn said he has been sketching since he was 3 years old, that's an art career of 77 years.

"I didn't finish high school, dropped out when I was a sophomore. But I still went to art school - Washington U., '26, '27 and '28. I worked in studios up there and did some cartoons. I did political cartoons for a syndicate in Chicago for 8 years, but I ended up coming back to Sparta and painting signs for 40 years."

During that 40 years he also produced numerous sketches of the region's historic landmarks, from the Appellate Court House at Mount Vernon to the Old Slave House in Equality. His work documents many scenes from a Southern Illinois that has long since disappeared.

"That one is the Tamms depot. I drew a lot of those little depots. They sprang up on the old St. Louis to Cairo line - that was during the hayday (of the mines), back when West Frankfort used to have 20,000. Those tracks haven't been used in years and most of those depots are pretty torn up now or gone."

Gone too is Old Main, but not before Misselhorn had a chance to sketch one of its ornate entrances.

"I had all these stored away in my red trunk. The museum wanted things with historical content, so I brought 'em down."

"I think I have a little better technique now than these represent... a little more finish. I used to knock them out pretty quick. But of course you lose something when you overwork 'em. I'm not saying I'm doing that."

"I usually start at the top of a gable, get a perspective on that and then go on and finish it. I work to get a line technique on smooth paper. I'll smudge the sky a little bit but that's it.

"Some people ask me why I don't do mountains in Colorado or something - well that's no good for pencil sketching. I need to get close to stuff and see the shadows."

Misselhorn's sketches have resulted in several books including one on trains as well as geographical regions. The books have resulted in an income for the artist who makes no bones about the money.

"I've always wanted to make money," he says laughing. "I had a bank account when I was 12. I'm still making money. But now I do it more for the fun."

Play brings slave Truth to life

By Shelia Washington
Staff Writer

"I've fulfilled a dream," said actress Shirlene Holmes Tuesday night in the University Museum after performing a one-act play, titled "Ain't I Woman," on the life of black freedom fighter Sojourner Truth.

It was an incredible performance.

An old slave who had lived with five masters, saw the only man she ever loved beaten to death and escaped slavery without her children, were parts of Truth's life that Holmes portrayed with the help of old clothes, broken English, arthritis and a shaky but demanding voice.

Holmes twisted time back to the late 1800s. She metamorphosed herself into the leader of the 1800s and acted out Truth's experiences as a slave and as an outspoken black woman for black's and women's rights during a time when both had limited rights.

"I was jus' workin' till that great day when I could taste ma' freedom," she belted out. "But when the time came for mancipation, my master said there was a lot mo work fo me. But I got my freedom in 1828." Although she couldn't read or write, Truth traveled the country and talked to prominent men, such as Abraham Lincoln.

Play Review

about women's voting rights. Truth is most remembered for her fiery speeches against slavery and in support of women's rights. She became prominent leader for blacks nationwide—all of which was acted out by Holmes.

"All slaves have the name of they masters. My first name was Isabella, but because my master is God and because, as the Bible say, 'you will know the truth and the truth will set you free.' I use the name Truth in the name of the Lord. Amen," she said.

Truth was known to also talk aloud to God, Holmes said. Almost every thought of Truth was "my God," "Amen" or "The Lord."

Holmes wrote and produced the play when she became intrigued with a huge statue of Sojourner—Truth in New York state, she said.

"I saw the statue. She looked giant and brave. I wanted to learn more about her and relay her message."

She said her ability to make Truth, who died in 1833, as alive today as she was in the 1800s comes from listening to speeches of Martin Luther King and music of Bob Marley.

"I also concentrate heavily on making myself old," she said.

"It's a beautiful thing to do because through the years the accomplishments of people like Sojourner Truth, Frederick Douglas and others go back further," she said. "I'm motivated by the purpose of the show."

Holmes, who has been performing "Ain't I Woman," since February of 1982, will close the act this summer to attend school at SIU-C.

WIDB to have benefit at Chicago nightclub

Find a little bit of Carbondale soul in Chicago over spring break as the famed nightclub, Dingbats, in conjunction with WBMX radio, will host a benefit for WIDB, Carbondale's rock and soul station, on Tuesday, March 15.

WIDB promotions director Greg Hadden said funds raised from Carbondale ticket sales will be used by WIDB to help combat their desperate financial situation. Tickets are only $2 per person and available at Plaza Records and WIDB.

WIDB will only receive funds from the advance tickets sales. The nightclub is charging $5 at the door and will claim all of the door receipts.

"Tickets sales have been surprisingly slow," Hadden said, "and frankly, I'm surprised, because it will be a really good time at a very nice nightclub for only $2."

On the air personalities from WBMX radio will be spinning records throughout the evening and record company executives from Motown records will be mingling with the crowd answering questions.

For more information call WIDB at any time at 536-2361.

Dingbats is only accessible to people 21 years old and older

New 'magazine' show to debut

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, the network without a magazine show since last July, gets back into the prime-time news field Saturday night with "Monitor," a program that could give soft news a good name.

"Soft" has been the blanket putdown for pieces that look at subjects uncritically or superficially. ABC's "20-20," which can engage in daring and meaningful journalism, sometimes does stories on pop entertainment figures with the emphasis on the stars' performance, rather than personality and psyche.

CBS' "60 Minutes" does fewer entertainment profiles, and its pieces tend to be deeper and more classical, like segments on Vladimir Horowitz and Itzhak Perlman. But the program's popularity stems more from its exposures and investigative pieces, the so-called news-western approach to journalism.

"Monitor" fits a different category, oriented more toward stories that are too deep in human feeling and foible to be labeled mere people pieces. The program successfully broadens the concept of "soft" news.

Anchored by Lloyd Dobyns, who is irreverent without sacrificing his credibility, "Monitor" is gentle, humorous and emotionally meaty. It is not flashy.

Society presents early jazz greats

By Phillip Milano
Student Writer

A program highlighting early jazz greats from Southern Illinois will be presented at the Jackson County Historical Society's annual spring meeting on March 20.

Alan Cohn, faculty member in the English Department and Humanities Librarian, will take part in the presentation, entitled "The Sounds of Early Jazz in Egypt: A Forgotten Chapter in the History of Southern Illinois Music." It will take place at the Society's headquarters in the basement of the Old Post Office Building.

"Some very important people in jazz started in Southern Illinois before moving on to the bigger cities," Cohn said.

Musicians such as Bix Beiderbecke, whom Cohn referred to as the "Mozart of Jazz," and Frankie Trumbauer, a Carbondale native and pioneer of the "cool" jazz style of saxophone play, will be highlighted in Cohn's part of the presentation. Cohn will be assisted by Dan Piper.

According to Cohn, Trumbauer, known by the nickname "Tram," influenced the likes of Lester Young, from Duke Ellington's big band, who in turn influenced Charlie Parker's light, bouncy style of play.

"Bix and Tram represent the greatest examples of the type of jazz the two played in the 20's," Cohn said. Tram was Bix's sidekick, playing with him at local halls and clubs." Both musicians played in Paul Whiteman's band soon after.

According to Cohn, Beiderbecke was one of the main jazz players to come out of the Southern Illinois area in the 20's. "Bix is one of the five greatest jazz players prior to the beginning of BeBop in the 40's," Cohn said.

The purpose of the program, scheduled for 2 p.m., March 20, is to entertain as well as to stir up thought about what old recordings people may have that are of value and can be preserved by the Society.

Interested residents who have old jazz recordings and sheet music associated with the local region are invited to contribute to the program.

Early Southern Illinois Blues will also be highlighted in the program.

Refreshments will be served and the public is invited to attend.

and his followers maintain that an immediate freeze would put the United States in a position of "military and moral inferiority."

To fight this view, which President Reagan shares, the freeze movement has undertaken a massive educational program.

Supporters have tried to learn the jargon of the U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons systems and the entire U.S. military budget. They have made efforts to understand the alphabet soup of defense systems: MIRVs, ICBMs, SLBMs, MXs, SS-20s, B-52s, F-111s, and the rest.

To prepare for meetings with congressmen on Tuesday, lobbyists, who met in state delegations, were given briefings on how to present their views to legislators.

It was estimated that 5,000 to 7,000 people were in Washington Tuesday to talk to their congressional representatives. The halls of the several buildings that contain legislators' offices were jammed with people wearing freeze buttons. In restaurants and subways all over town, people gathered to plan strategy and reflect on the day's events.

Bob James, a freeze supporter from Columbia, Mo., who travelled to Washington with a group from Southern Illinois, sees this mass lobbying effort as something that distinguishes the freeze movement from many other grassroots movements.

James, who has been participating in political protests and rallies since 1969, said that, unlike other protesters, the freeze supporters are working within the legislative system to achieve change.

"In the past, at least in the things I've been involved with, the protests have been aimed against the system," he said on the trip back to Illinois. "The activities this week were more of a legislative conference on how to work within the system."

Much of the freeze debate centers on two issues: the current balance of U.S.-Soviet military power and the ability to verify a Soviet agreement.

President Reagan maintains that the Soviets are ahead of the United States in military might, while freeze supporters point to the testimony of past and present military leaders who say the two countries are roughly equal.

The question of verifiability runs along the same lines. Opponents of the freeze say that there is no way to insure the Soviets will not violate a freeze agreement, while the pro-freeze forces again point to testimony from people like former CIA Director William Colby who say current technology makes verification possible.

Entire books have been written about the technical aspects of the freeze debate, and such questions will continue regardless of what happens in Congress. And although the lobbyists in Washington attempted to stick to the facts, one thing became clear: the nuclear freeze debate is an emotional issue — as emotional as prayer in the schools, creationism and abortion.

The emotions of the freeze supporters were thoroughly strained when the Illinois delegation met with Sen. Charles Percy, who chairs the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Percy assured the 200 or so Illinois lobbyists that he was sympathetic to their cause.

But Percy, using the verification argument, refused to support the freeze legislation in its present form. As he continued for more than an hour defending his position, the frustration among lobbyists grew.

Finally a woman rose to her feet, her voice trembling, and addressed the senator.

"Do you know what it's like," she asked, "to have your 11-year-old daughter come up to you and ask if she's going to have the chance to grow up?"

Patty Davidson of Carbondale was sitting nearby, barely managing to hold back her tears.

As the 24-year-old SIU-C student explained later, she had never been politically involved until she made an anti-war poster for a design class. When she hung the poster on her refrigerator, her two-year-old son, Zachary, became frightened.

"It was at that point that I started thinking of the world we are creating for our children," she said. "And that's why I came on this trip."

The pro-freeze forces, however, do not have a monopoly on emotions. The people who gathered at the Capitol to oppose the freeze are also concerned about their children's future and believe a freeze on nuclear weapons now would be detrimental to the security of the United States.

The strong convictions their opponents have provides incentive for the pro-freeze people to continue their efforts. They say that their lobbying serves an educational purpose that will eventually overcome what they see as unjustified fears of a freeze.

So while it's certain that if the freeze legislation passes in Congress it will be promptly vetoed by President Reagan, the "freezeniks" go on, hoping that by continued educational efforts and political pressure they will one day prevail.

"We rode over 15 hours in a bus to get here, that must mean something," Thelma Murphy of Chicago told Percy. "And if you don't agree with us, we're just going to have to come back."

Veteran state trooper reflects on his career

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

He talks easily about his 34 years with the Illinois State Police, comparing the low points with the more plentiful high points.

But 59-year-old Sgt. John "Sam" Garnati said he doesn't regret having retired last Dec. 31, even though his being the senior officer statewide as of 1982 was "quite an honor."

"I enjoyed my job and it was a good feeling helping people," he said, "but I've had enough."

Sitting comfortably in his son's law office in Herrin, where he helps out by answering the phone, Garnati seems to have survived the stress and physical danger which he admits is so common in law enforcement. There is a mandatory retirement age of 60 for state police.

He started in 1949 as an area road trooper at District 13 in Du Quoin after returning from World War II, when he spent over three years in the Army as an infantryman and ambulance driver.

In 1959, he was promoted to the rank of corporal, and in 1965 to the rank of sergeant, where he served as an area squad sergeant until being assigned as an operations desk sergeant.

He said he enjoyed helping people, although the state police have an image of only patrolling the state's highways.

But the troopers help motorists, relay blood and work undercover exposing gambling and prostitution rings, he said, and the department now has full-time juvenile officers and specialists in hazardous materials.

"They're becoming more specialized," he added.

There are two "low points" which stand out in Garnati's memory. The first is the riot situation at SIU-C during the Vietnam War.

The state police were called in to handle the crowds and, on the first day, his nose was broken when he hit with a brick.

"I spent a lot of time wondering where we were going in this country," he said.

The second is when 150 troopers were posted at Cairo to handle racial problems, he said. Some troopers were shot during the demonstrations, though no one was killed.

"I spent two Christmases away from home," he said. "One while I was overseas and one while I was posted in Cairo."

Garnati, who has lived in Herrin all his life, said he became a state trooper because of economics. When he came back from the war, he was married and working at a machine shop, sometimes only three days a week.

He was one of the first 100 state troopers hired statewide when the department became non-political, he said.

"I had no visions of grandeur," he said, laughing, "but as the years went on, I liked it for helping people."

Garnati is somewhat defensive of troopers' stance on drunk driving, which he said is a "priority item," and bitter at the state administration's view.

Over the past few years, there has been a shift back toward patrolling interstates, he explained, and troopers think it is more important to patrol rural roads, where fatalities are the highest.

But "Springfield doesn't hear us too well," he said, adding, "I always did speak my piece when I was working."

Also, the new drunk driving law may appear to be more strict in that it increases the suspension time of an offender's drivers license if he refuses to take a breath test. But "you never see the suspensions because they're stopped in court," he said.

When asked what he will miss most about his job, Garnati responded sadly, "the guys." He said he will miss the midnight shift the least.

He plans to remain busy during his retirement by spending time with his six-year-old grandson, at his small cabin on the Lake of Egypt and as vice president of the Illinois Police Association.

Preparing to celebrate his 39th wedding anniversary, he has two children: Charles, 30, former state's attorney of Williamson County, and Karla, 35, a high school Spanish teacher.

Summing up his years with the state police, he said, "You try to treat people the way you'd want to be treated...if they'll let you. But people often see decency as weakness."

The Most Sophisticated Training Ground For Nuclear Engineering Isn't On The Ground.

It's on a Navy ship. The Navy has more than 1,900 reactor-years of nuclear power experience — more than anyone else in America. The Navy has the most sophisticated nuclear equipment in the world. And the Navy operates over half of the nuclear reactors in America.

With a nuclear program like that, you know the Navy also offers the most comprehensive and sophisticated nuclear training.

Every officer in the Nuclear Navy completes a full year of graduate level technical training. Outside the Navy, this kind of program would cost you thousands. In the Navy, you're paid while you learn.

Then, as a nuclear-trained officer, you supervise highly trained personnel in the operation of the most advanced nuclear propulsion plants ever developed. You get a level of technical and management experience unequalled anywhere else.

You get important responsibilities and you get them fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so do your responsibilities.

Today's Nuclear Navy is one of the most challenging and rewarding career choices a man can make. And that choice can pay off while you're still in school. Qualified juniors and seniors earn approximately $1,000 per month while they finish school.

As a nuclear-trained officer, after 4 years with regular promotions and pay increases, you can be earning as much as $40,500. That's on top of a full benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned each year.

As a nuclear-trained officer, you also earn a place among this nation's most qualified and respected professionals. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, send in the coupon. Find out more about the most sophisticated training ground for nuclear engineering. Today's Nuclear Navy.

Navy Officers Get Responsibility Fast.

Zoologist always fights for his causes

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

He has the appearance of a 6-foot-4-inch boy genius. And, although his congeniality is obvious, his students meet his sometimes catty jokes with mixed reactions — sometimes amused, sometimes slightly annoyed and sometimes just plain old bored.

But whether it's a campaign to "Send a (Laboratory) Mouse to College" for 27 cents, to ban the selling of cigarettes on campus, or to help students get abortions while it was illegal, Bruce Petersen seems always involved in something.

"Anything controversial. I have an opinion about," said the 46-year-old assistant professor in the SIU-C Zoology Department.

His manner is as casual as his two-piece suit and tennis shoes and he takes his time in class, telling jokes and anecdotes which, well, usually relate to the subject at hand.

"I prefer to teach attitudes and world views," he said, "and teach fewer facts."

"People don't remember facts and if they do, they're usually of no use to them."

It's easy to like Petersen. He's like the class clown unafraid to show his serious side or the sophomore science student who romances a girl with milk shakes and a tour of his bacteria slide collection.

One example of Petersen's preferred method of teaching is the month-long ecology travel-study tour he is conducting for the sixth time this summer.

He accompanies 12 students enrolled in a four-credit Biology Field Studies course through eight Western states and Mexico.

"The trip is especially good for foreign students and students who haven't traveled much outside Illinois."

The hands-on experience students get when studying three different deserts or the Hopi Indian Reservation in Arizona just can't be beat, he said.

"There's a whole different culture in the middle of the United States," he said, referring to the Hopis, "and they are willing to share their religion with us. They're not looking for converts, but for understanding."

Petersen said he enjoys being with his students and although they have their share of mishaps on the trips, they just keep on going.

Before starting at SIU-C in 1968, Petersen received two bachelor's degrees at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, his master's degree at the University of Iowa and his doctorate at the University of Colorado.

At SIU-C, he said he's been a sort of "utility infielder" by teaching a wide variety of science courses as needed, including evolution, ecology, genetics, natural science, pollution control, seminars on overpopulation and the general studies courses "Survival of Man" and "Human Relations Between the Sexes."

Bruce Petersen holds a specimen of earth worms for testing.

He said that he has seen SIU-C shift from emphasis on teaching to emphasis on research and that now there is often a high reward for mediocre research.

Petersen admits that his adventurous campaigns have not always won him popularity with the administration.

In the early 1970s, before the Supreme Court legalized abortion, he directed college girls to safe abortion as part of the Zero Population Growth movement. "We wanted the girls to know that L.A. didn't have to go to East St. Louis and have an abortion in some motel room," he said in a 1977 interview.

In 1972, right after receiving his tenure, he was fired from SIU-C along with 103 other teachers. He said he never received a full explanation — just that his position was considered of the lowest priority.

Soon after, he was given a position in the Medical School teaching an affirmative action program and, eventually, he was returned to the Zoology Department.

But, he added, "I've never been promoted."

He said he has never been recommended by his department for a promotion and, for the last five or six years, that's because the promotions have been "research-oriented" and he has limited research time.

Before that, however, it was more because of his political involvement, he said.

Petersen continues to support the pro-choice movement — one of his many political interests.

His boyish grin disappears as he discusses the anti-abortion movement, which he said has two faults. "First of all, 'fertilized eggs are not people,'" he said. "In science, you don't prove anything" conclusively. Second, he said the movement has the right to believe what it wants but not to force it on others.

Petersen is equally enthusiastic about philosophy, attending classes at SIU-C periodically. As he reads aloud from a book on quantum physics, his eagerness to share the excitement he feels is obvious.

Politics and philosophy. Petersen will discuss anything — he isn't pushy about it. He just wants to better his knowledge or someone else's. His approach to politics is philosophical.

Take taxes and voting, for instance.

"People complain about taxes," he said, "but I like what taxes give me."

"I can't defend myself so society chips in and we defend ourselves. And if I want to go somewhere — where do those roads come from? I can't afford to build the road and I couldn't do it myself, so I get together with my friends and we pick somebody to do it for us."

"Students don't understand that about voting," he said.

Petersen thinks he is a successful teacher.

"I think I'm paid to give an opinion," he said. "I make the dummies quit smoking. I make them vote."

There's no doubt that he'll continue campaigns like "Send a Mouse to College," which was in conjunction with the American Cancer Society.

And if he thought there was a need, he'd again announce to his classes that anyone needing an abortion can contact him.

Board rejects 37.5-hour work week

By Rod Stone
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees Thursday voted down a proposal that would have given the presidents of SIU-C and SIU-E the power to implement a 37.5-hour work week for SIU civil service workers when it became financially feasible.

However, the board, meeting in the Student Center, gave Chancellor Kenneth Shaw authority to bring the proposal back for consideration later, when the University can afford the cost of implementation. Shaw said it would be at least a year before such action was possible, considering the bleak financial outlook for the University.

"It would just be a hollow gesture at this point." Trustee William Norwood told the board's Finance Committee. "It gives the impression that something is happening when it isn't."

Phyllis McCowen, chairwoman of the Civil Service Employees Council, told the board that SIU-C civil service workers are "extremely disappointed" that the board will not approve the 37.5 hour work week. She said the proposal is not just a hollow action, as far as SIU employees are concerned.

"It would show that the board at least recognizes that they should receive the same considerations as the majority of civil service workers at other state universities," McCowen said.

SIU and the University of Illinois are the only two university systems in the state that do not use the 37.5-hour work week.

However, Trustee Ivan Elliot Jr. said that 75 percent to 80 percent of state university civil service workers, the "substantial majority," are employed by the two universities and not on the 37.5 hour work week.

McCowen said that, according to her figures, 63 percent of the civil service workers at universities other than SIU are on the 37.5 hour work week.

McCowen and Sarah Bradbury, SIU-E civil service representative, agreed that employee morale, already at low ebb, would sink even lower if the proposal wasn't approved by the board.

"A 40-hour work week doesn't help morale, but layoffs are worse," Elliot said, speculating on what would happen as a result of extra costs of implementing the plan.

A study provided to the board by Shaw on the effects of the change said the total cost to SIU-C of implementing a 37.5 hour work week would be $194,893.

The cost breaks down as follows: $63,075 in Academic Affairs; $25,798 in campus services; $102,000 in student affairs, and $4,020 in financial affairs. The cost of the proposal to SIU-E would be about $10,000.

The reasons for increased costs are overtime, which would have to be paid after 7.5 hours a day and 37.5 a week, and the need to hire additional non-civil service personnel to compensate for hours when civil service workers would not be there.

In a letter accompanying the report, Shaw said he continues to support the reduced work week proposal for the reasons he gave when it was first presented in November 1981 - it would improve employee morale, reduce inequity in employee compensation, improve the University's recruiting position and provide non-cash benefits to employees at a time when salary increases might be slim.

Board Chairman Harris Rowe said the proposal will not be delayed any longer than it would have been had the board approved it.

'Litter law' proposed by candidate

By Karen Torrey
Staff Writer

Carbondale City Council candidate Keith Tuxhorn Thursday proposed a city ordinance intended to deal with the much-discussed issue of large parties and related problems of noise and litter.

Tuxhorn, a candidate for a two-year term on the April 12 general election ballot, suggested a "Party Litter Law," which would require persons holding parties with 30 or more people to register their names and addresses with the police department.

The ordinance, which Tuxhorn said he hopes to implement if elected, also would make persons having parties responsible for cleaning up litter on both sides of the block where they live by a designated time the day after the party.

Parties who filed their names with police, but did not clean up the neighborhood on time, would be subject to a "stiff fine in order to compensate for the damage done," Tuxhorn said.

Parties who don't file with police and then litter the area would be given a stiffer fine, but Tuxhorn's ordinance would require that the fine be paid by the house owner, not by the tenants if it is a rental property.

Because a landlord owns a house, "he should be responsible for the quality of that neighborhood," said Tuxhorn.

Henry Fisher, a Carbondale landlord and a candidate for a four-year city council term, said Thursday that Tuxhorn's proposed ordinance could not be enforced and would make landlords responsible for damage which they did not cause.

Fisher agreed with Tuxhorn that landlords "owe the neighborhood a certain amount of responsibility to keep it up," but that they cannot be held accountable if their tenants break the law.

"What if one of my tenants goes out and shoots someone?" said Fisher. "People who cause the problems should suffer the consequences."

Fisher said that he is supportive of any action to "hold the parties down," but believes that existing ordinances are sufficient. "It's a matter of enforcement (by the city and police)," he said.

Tuxhorn said, "The party host who conducts orderly parties that do not litter his neighborhood has no need to fear this law."

Swimmers get last chance to qualify

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Divers and swimmers competing this weekend will have one thing on their minds — getting to the national championships March 24-26.

The four Saluki divers — Johnny Consemiu, Nigel Stanton, Jim Watson and Tom Wentland — will try to advance from the zone regional competition, the stepping-stone to the NCAAs. Consemiu qualified for the zone meet on the one-meter board, while the other three have a shot on both boards.

Only five on the one-meter and seven on the three-meter will see further competition after the meet in Ames, Iowa. "It's a tough regional to get out of," said Saluki swimming Coach Bob Steele. "It includes some of the better diving schools in the country, including Nebraska, Arkansas, Texas and Southern Methodist."

The SIU-C squad is an equally formidable one. All have been diving well during the season.

Consemiu and Stanton are coming off especially strong performances at the National Independent Championships last weekend. Both finished as NIC runners-up, Consemiu on one-meter and Stanton on three-meter.

Several swimmers have already guaranteed themselves an appearance at nationals.

Those who haven't get their last shot during two sessions of time trials on Saturday, beginning at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Missouri and Nebraska swimmers will provide some competitive edge to the races.

Freshman Gary Brinkman is one of the most likely to reach standards. At the NICs, he came close three times to qualifying in the 500 freestyle, missing by six-tenths in preliminaries, eight-tenths in finals, and nine-tenths during a time trial. Qualifying time is 4:25.36.

Carlos Henao was two-tenths off the standard in the 100 backstroke and a second-and-eight tenths off during the 200 free during the NICs.

and Greg Baber, four goals apiece, and Joe Speizak, three goals.

Run 'n' Gun led 13-3 at half-time, leaving goalie Roger Bauer at ease for most of the second half.

The champions were given t-shirts while the losing teams received visors.

Team handball champs crowned

Kelly Rollings scored three goals including the game winner for the Destroyers as they slipped past the Dawgs, 9-8 in the intramural team handball 'A' division championship game Wednesday night at the Recreation Center.

The Destroyers, primarily members of the men's rugby team, finished their season with an undefeated record.

Goalie Rob Campbell did a superb job stopping an array of shots by the Dawgs in the first half. At half-time the Destroyers led 5-4. The lead constantly changed hands during the game.

In the second half, the Destroyers came out roaring and outmuscled the Dawgs for the majority of the half. The Dawgs did start a late comeback as their leading scorer, Kevin Brown, four points, tied the game with a couple of minutes left. But Rollings connected with his fourth goal to clinch the win.

Jay Weisor, who scored one goal for the Dawgs, said Bob Gregory was hurt and couldn't

Record-setting Indians face biggest test in semi-finals

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Lawrenceville's top-ranked Indians, three victories away from an unprecedented second straight undefeated championship, face their biggest hurdle of the season when they meet Providence St. Mel Friday in the quarter-finals of the Class A Illinois high school basketball tournament.

Already having erased the mark of 64 straight set by Quincy last year when they captured their 65th in a row with a 62-48 triumph over Madison in the Charleston Supersectional, the Indians could set standards which will be hard to equal for years.

They could become only the third team in history to win four titles and, if successful, Ron Felling could become the first to coach four championship teams, surpassing such legends as Arthur L. Trout of Centralia and Gay Kintner of Decatur.

But the Indians, 31-0, must get by Providence St. Mel. The Knights, ranked No. 2, have a 28-2 record. Their only losses came in the same day in the Pontiac Holiday Tournament to Quincy 66-60 in the semifinals and to West Aurora 72-65 in consolation play.

Going into this week's Class AA sectional tournaments, West Aurora was ranked No. 1 and Quincy No. 3 before the Blue Devils, who won the AA title two

Netters served with tough trip

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

The men's tennis team will head to Florida during spring break not for fun and sun on the beach, but for what Coach Dick LeFevre calls the toughest road trip of the semester.

The eight-member Saluki squad will leave for Gainesville, Fla., Saturday to face some of the top 20 tennis schools in the nation. To name a few, the Salukis will face Maryland on Sunday, Florida on Monday and Alabama on Tuesday.

Alabama, for instance, is ranked second in the Southeast Conference and Florida is ranked fourth. So how will the Salukis do against these tough teams?

"I'm hoping for good individual performances," LeFevre said. "This will be our first chance to play outdoors, while Florida and Alabama have been outside all semester. There's a big difference between indoor and outdoor play. We may not return with a good road-trip record, but I can guarantee a lot tougher team when we return."

After the Salukis' contest with Alabama, they meet them again at Athens, Ga., on Thursday for a practice match.

"The NCAA tournament will be held in Georgia this year," LeFevre said. "So I feel it would years ago and finished third last year, were upset by Springfield Lanphier.

Before the two top Class A powers meet, No. 3 Flanagan pits its 28-0 record against Piskilwa, 28-2, and No. 5 McLeansboro, 29-3, goes against Nokomis, 26-3.

After the Lawrenceville-St. Mel showdown, No. 6 Havana, 25-4, battles darkhorse Freeport Aquin, 26-4, to complete the quarter-final round.

The four survivors battle in the semifinals Saturday afternoon with the losers playing for third place and the winners meeting for the coveted championship.

"We're not very big but we do a lot of things well," said Indian coach Felling, whose team certainly has an edge in tournament experience. "I wish we had had more competition."

Maybe the reason for a lack of competition is that Lawrenceville is too good. The 14-point triumph over Madison, a two-time former champion, was only the second lowest margin of victory for the Indians this season.

be good experience for us to play a match there."

The Salukis will continue the road trip at Greenville, S.C., on Friday in a match with Auburn, third in the Southeast Conference, and conclude it at Nashville, Tenn., against top-ranked Tennessee.

So far this season the Salukis are 4-4. Their biggest win was an upset of West Virginia last week. In the Missouri Valley Conference, the Salukis' only obstacle in their path to a Valley crown will be Wichita State, who are ranked 16th in the nation. The Salukis will face the Shockers in the MVC tournament in the latter part of April.

"My biggest goal this season is to beat Wichita and win the MVC crown," LeFevre said, "and we have the capability of doing it too."

The No. 1 singles player for the Salukis is Per Wadmark, freshman from Sweden. Wadmark is ranked 62nd in the nation. The only tennis player better than Wadmark in the MVC is Roberto Saad of Wichita State. He's ranked 22 in the nation, LeFevre said.

The No. 1 doubles team is John Greif and David Filer. The other five players on the squad are Gabriel Coch from Columbia, Rollie Oliquino from the Philippines, Scott Krueger from Oregon, Chris Visconti from the Windy City, and Paul Rasch from Athens, Ga.

Freshmen sprinters carry hopes of women tracksters

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Speed isn't such a bad word to women's track and field Coach Claudia Blackman any more. Now she can talk about it and smile at the same time.

"It should carry us," said Blackman, who will enter her 12th outdoor season Tuesday at Northeast Louisiana.

"We should be pretty consistent in the 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes. But our throwers, the shot-put, discus and javelin, will also make a big difference. This first meet will tell the story."

It sure will. And the script couldn't have been written better. Not since the 1976 Salukis ran away with the state title has there been such strength in the shorter distances.

The Lady Indians will be tough, with home folks and all, but Grambling will make its presence known. Blackman remembers last year.

"We got mopped," she said about the Salukis who were swept away with ease. "We held our own in the distances and in the field, but got killed in the sprints."

That may not happen this year. Thanks to a pair of imports from Barbados, the women tracksters have beefed up the sprinting crew and chances are they won't be left behind at all. Denese Blackman from St. George and Ann Lavine from St. Peter have already had a hand in shattering nine indoor records this year. Blackman owns records in the 300-meter and 440-yard dash.

"The freshmen have made a drastic change in this team," said Blackman. "I'm anxious to see how well they will do on the spring trip."

The biggest change may be in Debra Davis. The junior was the top 400-meter runner last year, circling the one lap event in 55.1 and barely missing the qualifying time for the national meet. She did that without much of a push. Just think how fast she can go with Blackman and freshman sprinter Katie Santore on her heels.

"I think the main improvement in Debra has been the addition of goodsprinters," said Blackman.

"She can now see how much better as a team we can be. She didn't see that last year. She was the main one, the only one. She doesn't have as much pressure on her to carry the team any more."

Lavine and Blackman have done more than to take a little pressure off Davis. The pair ran superb legs in both the mile and 880-yard relays to smash SIU-C records in both events. In the 880 relay, they teamed up with Davis and Karen Cooper to shave four seconds off the mark to 1:44.87 and did the same in the mile relay. The mile relay mark fell from 4:14 to 4:10.

Coach Blackman said the Salukis will go with Davis, Lavine, Blackman and Nina Williams in the 440-yard relay outdoors.

Blackman is also hoping to get mileage from Rose Mitchell in the middle distances. Rhonda Clausland in the discus, Cynthia Joy in the javelin, Sharon Leidy in the Heptathlon and Williams in the long jump.

The only weakness in the Saluki lineup may be in the distances.

Faber, whose collegiate career is extended with every win.

She would like to hang on long enough to claim the school's rebounding record. She needs 12 more. The Wayne, New Jersey native has already become the leading scorer in Saluki history.

Guard D.D. Plab, who crediting her forwards with Wednesday's win, and who outshadows any guard in the conference, will team with Rose Peoples. The Friday game will mark the end of People's collegiate career, regardless of whether the Salukis win and advance automatically to the NCAAs.

Because of a new rule and the expansion of the NCAA, she is ineligible for the tournament because she transferred this year (from Kansas University). The NCAA adopted the rule instead of making transfers sit out a year.

"It's a bitter rivalry," said SIU-C women's sports information director Mitch Parkinson of the Saluki-Redbird history.

"It will be a war. They're really physical, and never beat themselves. You look at the conference statistics, and they don't have anyone in the scoring or rebounding columns, and they're not up there in the team stats. All they do is win, and that's the way they've always been.

"People won't really see that our program has come into its own until we've beaten Drake and Illinois State," he said.

Scott agreed. "Until we beat Illinois State we're not going to be seen as a national team."

Not to mention that she'll have the one thing she's never had. A great ball club.

What's this, sports outside SIU-C?

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

As a Daily Egyptian sports writer the last three semesters, a lot of complaints, comments, questions and "helpful" suggestions have come my way about our coverage. Some come from people in athletics, — players and coaches — but by far the most have been from students.

It always seems when someone finds out what I write, the first thing asked is, "Why don't you cover more national and professional sports?" To those who wonder the same thing, here are a few reasons:

1. Deadlines. Most nights, except when we're covering something — an SIU-C basketball game, for example — that warrants a delay in going to press, the deadline for the back page is 8:30. Deadlines for other sports pages are earlier. We get stories and scores on the AP wire, but they are often the last thing to come over. When they do, it's usually past the deadline.

I don't think there is one person on this staff who wouldn't like to see those deadlines extended. Except for seven civil service and faculty, all DE employees are students, about 90 of them. They're students with early morning classes, students with homework that needs to be done. As it is, students on the press crew are here until at least midnight. Waiting for national sports stories is no justification for keeping them any later. And while I'm not encouraging people to disregard the DE and get their news from other sources, I have no sympathy for those who say they can't get the information they want. Subscriptions to large, metropolitan papers are not hard to obtain. If someone doesn't want to spend the money for a subscription, Morris Library has just about any paper anyone would want.

2. Space. Coaches sometimes feel their teams have been slighted in the amount of copy or pictures devoted to them. A comparison shouldn't be made between the space given to different sport and teams on different days. Space for news is different each day, depending on the amount of advertising, and space isn't always what we'd like it to be. We know one day in advance how large it will be, so we can't always schedule long stories for the day there's a lot of room. So there will be times when a team being written about for Thursday's paper gets a picture and 20 inches of copy, while one on Friday may get half that, because that's all the space that could be allotted and still get the other news in.

Favoritism for this team or that has nothing to do with it. Writers and photographers have egos as big as those of coaches and athletes. They want to see the articles they write get the most space and the best position. But it can't always be that way.

3. This is an SIU-C newspaper. It's also a learning experience for SIU-C journalism students. If a decision has to be made between printing a student written piece or an AP article, the choice should be obvious.

While we're not limited to writing about the university, our emphasis and first priority is SIU-C.

All the DE sports writers I've met came to SIU-C with a lot of interest in sports, mostly professional or major college-level teams and athletes. But their dreams of covering the Super Bowl, the World Series or the Stanley Cup have to be postponed for a while. We're at SIU-C, and we're covering the Salukis, not the Cardinals, White Sox, Blues or Black Hawks.

And while covering the Salukis, we have seen some extremely talented athletes. A lot of these athletes are some of the best in the nation, if not the world. There are at least seven present or former Saluki athletes with legitimate shots at not only competing in the 1984 Olympic Games, but winning medals as well.

Stephen Wray, a member of the men's track team, has high jumped 7-7, an inch shy of the world record. Swimmer Roger VonJouanne is a former national record holder in the 200 butterfly and a member of the United States National team, as is diver Rick Theobald. David Lee was a national champion in the 400 meter hurdles while at SIU-C and still ranks about third. Brian Babcock is among the top five all-around gymnasts in the country. John Sayre was second in the decathlon in last year's national championships. Dan Casebeer is a member of the national cycling team now working at the Olympic training center in Colorado Springs.

Whenever I point these out, students often counter that these aren't "real" sports. Those who consider only big league baseball, football, hockey and basketball "real sports" aren't, in my opinion, "real" sports fans. They also may be overlooking some of the best athletic competition in the world, right here at home.

Cagers gearing toward finals

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Since Cindy Scott arrived on campus six years ago, the Salukis have had some good basketball clubs. Fruitful as her tenure has been, however, it has lacked one thing: A great ball club.

And there have been two big reasons for that. One is the Drake Bulldogs, and the other is the Illinois State Redbirds.

Wednesday night, the Salukis rid themselves of the curse of one of their nemesis when they bounced the Bulldogs 76-73 in the semi-finals of the inaugural Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference post-season tournament. That eliminated the tourney's number two seed and raised SIU-C into the title game to slay one more dragon.

Bring on the Redbirds. Illinois State earned its slot in the championship tilt by blasting Eastern Illinois, the tourney's fifth seed, 94-64 in the second half of a twin bill in Normal. The host Redbirds, 19-8 and seeded first, will match up with the third seeded Salukis at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the confines of Normal's Horton Fieldhouse.

"We're worried about their inside game. Debbie Benak is a phenomenal player," said Scott, whose club set a school record for most wins in a season, advancing its record to 21-8. "The difference is going to be the team that rebounds and executes its offense."

If the Redbirds rebound the way they did Wednesday night, the Salukis are in serious trouble. ISU pulled down a season high 55 rebounds and Benak had 12 of them. The 6-foot senior center also hit for 14 points, as all five starters scored in double figures. Leading the way for the Redbirds was freshman guard Daphne Smith, who scored her collegiate high with 26 points.

Sophomore forward Marla Maupin, the team's tallest player at 6-foot-2-inches, scored 17 points and reeled in a game high 15 rebounds. Cathy Boswell, who leads the team in scoring, netted 14 points, while junior guard Cathy Beesley rounded up the double digit scoring with 10 points.

Smith earned the scoring honors in only her fifth start, considerably helping her 4.4 scoring average, a large drop from the 12.5 that junior Dawn Hallett was scoring before suffering a season-ending knee injury during a one-point upset loss to Notre Dame three weeks ago in Normal. Since then, ISU has converted to a three-forward offense, with Smith, who is listed at 5-foot-11-inches, playing more of a front line position, leaving the backcourt work to Beesley. Boswell leads the list with 15 points and 8.2 rebounds an outing. Benak is second in both categories, averaging 15 and five rebounds.

Jan Bowers, a former starting guard, averages 7.2 points (3.2 rebounds). Maupin (7.0, 4.3) and Beesley (6.0, 2.3) follow.

Now that the host of pretenders to the GCAC crown has been reduced to two, the Salukis can go about the business of beating the Redbirds, something which they haven't been able to do in five years. The rivalry is an old and bitter one, dating back to the beginnings of women's basketball in Illinois 20 years ago.

In the latest encounter, five weeks ago in Normal, ISU whipped SIU-C 78-67 and romped to an unblemished conference record. In that game, Scott's squad was minus Connie Price, who fractured her finger in a pre-game passing drill just hours before the tip off. SIU-C was also without power forward Chaz Warring for most of the contest, Scott having benched her in the first half for poor defensive play.

"The last time we played it was very, very difficult for us," Scott said. "Connie was having surgery and the team didn't have a chance to regroup."

This time, however, the Salukis will have Price, and Warring, who took over Price's scoring lead with a game-high 28 point effort in the semi-final. Also on the front line will be Sue

Softball team needs runs to win

By Dan Devine
Associate Sports Editor

Baserunners are precious in women's softball games, because so few of them turn into runs scored. They often die unused on the bases, while enemy pitchers routinely strike out the side.

Games are low scoring affairs. Maybe the winning team scores two or three runs to win. Maybe four or five in a slugfest. Since baserunners are so rare, taking advantage of them is the key to any team's offense. And that may be the key to the entire Saluki women's softball season.

SIU-C has a deep pitching staff, experience, adequate defense — and an unsure attack.

"We've added a little bit of hitting," said softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer, on the eve of the spring trip that will begin the season. "That was our downfall."

The Salukis were 15-24 last spring, but added enough new players in the fall to go 10-6.

SIU-C hit just .207 in the fall, not bad by softball standards, but no guarantee of success. To score runs the Salukis will steal, sacrifice, take the extra base, and hopefully, hit in the clutch. That may even be enough to turn the occasional baserunner into a score.

"We've got excellent speed," said Brechtelsbauer, "so we'll be doing some things on the bases. We don't have a power hitting team but we've got some speed."

Brechtelsbauer hopes that she gets some clutch hits this season. Last year poor clutch hitting made the baserunners even more lonely.

"Sometimes we'd get to the point where we'd just need a ground ball to bring a run in and we couldn't get it," she said.

Her pitching staff is no problem. The Saluki ace once again should be Meredith Stengel, even though mononucleosis will keep her out of early season action. She is the only real strikeout pitcher on the five-man staff.

"Basically all of them are alike in the sense that they're not overpowering," said the Saluki coach. "They're not going to overwhelm you with velocity."
