Trustees approve salary increases

By Christine Leninger
Administration Writer

EDWARDSVILLE—Most SIUC employees will get a mid-year salary increase of 2-percent next month, retroactive to Jan. 1.

The SIUC Board of Trustees approved the new pay scales Thursday at its meeting.

SIUC Chancellor James Brown said during his report to the board that before the recession hit, University officials were concerned about the loss it would bring SIUC. Now that the effects are known, the board can deal with financial matters.

"The University needs to figure something out in the line of salaries before the fiscal year '93 woes set in," Brown said.

SIUC President John C. Guyon said the salary increases that will cost $1.1 million needed to happen.

"The administration has agonized over funding the salary increases for some time and the funds have been identified," Guyon said.

Employees likely will see the raises in checks issued on or after April 1.

Housing prices to increase 5 percent

By Brandi Tipps
Administration Writer

EDWARDSVILLE—The SIUC Board of Trustees voted Thursday to raise residence hall room-and-board rates by 5 percent, part of which will pay for a salary increase of 4.5 percent for housing officials.

The increase amounts to $144 more a year.

Edward Jones, director of University Housing, said if the actual salary increase is greater than 4.5 percent, the difference will be funded by using reserves that would have funded special projects.

If the increase is less, the difference will be used to pay for special projects and equipment or reduce future increases, he said.

But Jack Sullivan, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said housing "scored big" with the passage of the 2-percent general salary increase in addition to the 4.5-percent pay raise it will get with the housing increase.

Beginning in the fall, students who share a double-occupancy residence hall normal pay rate of their peers.

"As one of the 15-percent underpaid faculty, the pay increase helps out in little ways," he said.

Donald Meltzer, professor of psychology, said the pay increase is better than nothing, but not much better.

But Jack Sullivan, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said students are not in support of the increase.

"Students cannot support this salary increase with housing rates increasing and possible tuition increases," Sullivan said. "The 2 percent is being taken out of our educational pool. On a grand scale, it is small, but the cost is great to departments and students."

"This is a political game to keep up with the neighbors' salary rates," he said. "I just don't see the justification for it."

Muriel Narve said the Civil Service Council only supports the pay increase with the reassurance that no one loses their jobs in the process.

SIUC and the Medical School in Springfield will receive 2-percent raises figured on a different rate of distribution.

Students, city talk about party crisis

By Teri Lynn Carlock

City officials and SIUC student body leaders are working jointly to create alternatives for controlling Carbondale's annual festivities without taking the spirit out of the party.

The Staff Liquor Advisory Committee created six recommendations for consideration by the City Council concerning city-related activities for Springfest and Halloween.

Proposals include early closing hours for all liquor establishments, a ban on the retail sale of kegs and a restriction on morning liquor sales.

USG President Jack Sullivan and Tony Svach, vice president of the SIUC Undergraduate Student Government, met with city officials Monday to present USG's negative stance on the recommendations.

Svach said USG will not stand for any of the proposed recommendations.

"We want the city to act like our friend, not our father," he said. "We want to work with them so we can have a good time, and they want to work with us because we represent most of their business."

City Manager Steve Hoffner said he is confident that with the help of USG, the city will be able to resolve its problems with the celebrations.

"I remain optimistic that we will reach some kind of consensus because USG is willing to come back to us with some new ideas," he said. "I think all of the alternatives deserve more discussion."

The USG Senate voted Wednesday to oppose all six SLAC recommendations, concluding the changes would not benefit the general welfare of the student population but cause greater conflict between students and the Carbondale community and police. Instead of supporting the SLAC's regulatory ideas, USG has developed a risk management approach to the Springfest and Halloween festivities in hopes of fostering better relations between SIUC students and the city.

The risk management approach includes supplying alternative food and beverage tables on the Strip, designated driver points manned by volunteers and providing party tips to hosts of private parties.

"There are students on campus who don't drink," Svach said. "We could have volunteers going to parties wearing T-shirts that say 'I'm staying sober so you can have a good time,' and passing out condoms and brochures to people."

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said the discussion with students went well on Monday.

"I think we both had an opportunity to share our opinions and we were presented with some alternatives," he said. "There's potential for us to address positive

Thousands of college students will converge on coastal beaches this weekend for spring break, but one beach official says students will not be the main source of trouble.

Most police-involved incidents occur mainly with those under and over the average ages of college students, said Chris Lawrence, director of beach services in Nueces County, Texas.

Southwest stands in Salukis' way

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's basketball team has a shot at the NCAA tournament if it can get past 10th ranked Southwest Missouri State in the final game of the Gateway Conference Tournament.

The Salukis play SMSU at 2:05 p.m. Saturday in Springfield, where the Bears have won 27 straight games and 43 of its last 44 games. SMSU will try to pick up a third win against SIUC this season.

The Bears beat SIUC 90-63 Jan. 4 on their home court, and for the first time in Gateway history. SMSU won at the Arena 73-63 March 5.

Even though the Salukis have not beaten the Bears this season, coach Cindy Scott remains optimistic.

"We have to go into the game with the attitude that we are going to win," Scott said. "We can not let them score on two-foot turnaround jump shots. We kept close to them in the last game, and we thought we weren't shooting well."

With its win over Bradley Wednesday, SMSU, 26-2 overall, improved its Gateway record to 18-1 with its only conference loss to Illinois State 79-73 earlier this season.

The Bears, who were picked in a preseason poll to finish first in the conference, are the only Gateway team to ever crack the NCAA top 10. Southern's highest ranking was 13th in 1988.

Cindy Scott said SIUC has more pressure to win the game because SMSU is virtually a shoe-in for the NAAs.

"I think we have a chance to win it," she said. "If we don't, we'll just have to pray the NCAA selection committee looks at the fact that Southwest is in our conference. Southwest is a great team, and they're also one of the top teams in the country."

With its 78-64 win over Illinois State in the semifinal Wednesday, SIUC improved its record to 16-3 in the conference and 22-6 overall. The Salukis were picked to finish second in the preseason poll.

SMSU has won all of its Gateway games this season by an average margin of 27.2 points. In Gateway statistics, the Bears rank first in nine of twelve categories including scoring, assists, steals and rebound margin.

Individually SMSU has two Gateway leaders. Center Tonya Baucom is shooting 65.3 percent from the field, and guard Amy Nelson is averaging six assists a game.

THE SALUKIS GO INTO the weekend hoping for a bid to the 64-team NCAA tournament, but they will not be surprised if they are rejected.

Thirty conference postseason tournament winners get automatic bids to the NCAA, leaving 34 at-large bids.

But after losing the Missouri Valley Conference tournament semifinal to Tulsa Sunday, the Dawgs, 22-7, lost their chance at an automatic bid. Southwest Missouri topped Tulsa to win the tournament and qualify for the NCAA.

Although 22 wins and a share of the regular season MVC crown will give the team a chance for an at-large bid, the NCAA selection committee in the past has given the remaining bids to teams from major conferences with higher profiles. It will make the 1992 selections Sunday afternoon.

After the Salukis' loss to Tulsa, coach Rich Herrin said there was nothing he could do but wait for the selections to be announced.

"I'm not going to worry about it," Herrin said.

But Tulsa coach Tubby Smith said the Salukis deserve a shot at the big show.

"They have been the favorites all year," Smith said. "They proved they were a good team by winning the regular season with all the pressure of being a favorite. They are very deserving of a shot."

But Saluki forward Ashraf Amaya said the Dawgs must prove worthy of the NCAA tourney.

"We have to prove we can win in the postseason first," Amaya said. "Then we can represent the Valley (in the tournament)."

to the Hurricane Sunday in the conference tournament semifinals and lost a chance for an automatic NCAA bid.

The Dawgs beat Arizona 81-77 in the first round that year but lost to Wake Forest 86-81 in the second round.

Mike Glenn led SIUC to a 22-7 mark that season with 21 points a game. He is the Salukis' No. 2 all-time scorer with 1,878 points. Gary Wilson averaged 12.9 points and 7.3 rebounds a game to bolster the Saluki attack.

THE DAWGS WENT 20-13 in 1988-89, 26-7 in 1989-90 and 18-13 in 1990-91 but were shunned by the NCAA selection committee.

Netters to play 5 road games during break

By Thomas Gibson

The Saluki men's tennis team faces a tough road trip during spring break.

In a stretch of five games in six days, the netters will play Memphis State, Northeast Louisiana, Tulane, Auburn, and South Alabama.

But SIUC players say they are looking forward to this week.

"We've been looking forward to this week; our team is up for the challenge," said freshman Altair Merchant.

SIUC coach Dick Lefevre said despite the possibility the Salukis may not win many matches next week, the trip will be a success.

"This will be a learning experience for the kids," Lefevre said. "After all

Dawgs to travel to Florida for sun, fun or home runs

By Scott Wuerz

Like most students, the SIUC baseball players are headed for Florida for spring break—but the Dawgs are not planning a vacation.

The Salukis lost two of their top contributors for the season when left fielder Dan Esplin and center fielder Jason Smith collided while attempting to catch a fly ball last Saturday against Iowa, and they will use their 10-game spring trip to the University of Miami to find a permanent solution to the loss of two-thirds of the SIUC outfield.

Esplin, who was one of the Salukis' top returning hitters with a .292 average in 1991, suffered a lacerated kidney in the collision. Smith received a broken left arm and a third degree shoulder separation. He led the team with a .536 average before the injury.

Saluki head coach Sam Riggelman said the Salukis hope to use time in Florida to come up with a solution to the outfield problem without disrupting the rest of the team.

"We expect to use (reserve infielder Pete)

Schlosser in one of the outfield positions, and either Ed Janke or Scott Foster in the other position," he said. "We hope to find an answer that will solve our problems in the outfield without undoing any progress we've made in the infield and in the pitching staff."

Riggelman said the Salukis will have greater problems filling the shoes of Esplin and Smith in the batting order. Smith had filled the lead off spot, while Esplin hit third before their injuries.

(Shortstop) Clint Smothers will take over the lead off spot because of his speed," he said. "We feel that (Smothers' speed) makes him the best candidate for the first position because it creates so many offensive opportunities. The third spot is still up in the air, however, and we hope to have someone step in while we're in Florida and show us they're capable of taking over the job."

The Dawgs' 10-game stay in Miami begins Friday with two games against the University of Illinois and former SIUC head coach Ichy Jones.

Jones coached the Salukis from 1970-1989, leading SIUC to three college world series

UKRAINE PLANS TO DESTROY OWN WEAPONS — Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk said Thursday his republic has stopped sending its tactical nuclear weapons to Russia and plans instead to build a facility to destroy warheads, on its own, the independent news agency Interfax reported. Kravchuk said in Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, that his government decided to halt the removal of the weapons because it was unsure if they were actually being destroyed when sent to Russia.

ISRAEL DENIES MISSILE TRANSFER TO CHINA — Israel flatly denied a published report Thursday that it may have transferred a Patriot missile or its technology to China in violation of an agreement with the United States. The Washington Times, citing an anonymous source, reported that Israel may have transferred the world's only battle-tested missile or a related technology to China. It said the Bush administration was investigating the matter.

U.N. REFUSES TALKS WITH IRAQI OFFICIAL — The Security Council, maintaining its tough stance, refused further talks with a top Iraqi official and sent him home with orders that Baghdad comply fully with the terms of the cease-fire in the Persian Gulf War. Iraq and the U.N. have been at odds since the war ended a year ago on a variety of requirements made by the council on the government of President Saddam Hussein, in particular that it eliminate its weapons.

BRADY: U.S. ECONOMY STILL PRE-EMINENT — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said Thursday the U.S. economy "remains the world's pre-eminent economic power," and the view that it will be taken over by the economies of Japan and Germany is a myth. Claims that U.S. goods are uncompetitive, its managers inefficient and its workers lazy have been repeated so many times that "they are no longer being questioned," Brady told a meeting of the National Press Club.

OFFICIALS: RESTRICT TOBACCO ADS — Federal health officials Thursday suggested tougher restrictions be placed on tobacco advertising, including prohibiting tobacco company sponsorship of sporting events and barring tobacco billboards near schools. The Centers for Disease Control, citing tobacco use as "the single most preventable cause of death in the United States," said that about three-fourths of adult smokers try their first cigarette before age 18.

ZOO DIRECTOR: PROTECT ILLINOIS WILDLIFE — Icolin Park Zoo Director Lester Fisher Thursday called for statewide effort to help protect Illinois wildlife and urged city dwellers to get involved in animal preservation efforts. At a news conference at the State of Illinois Center, Fisher said the rain forests of South America and Africa are not the only places where wildlife habitats are threatened. "We have real problems right here at home," he said.

STATE: FISH FROM LAKES, RIVER INEDIBLE — Public health officials Thursday added fish from three Illinois lakes and a downstream river to the list of sport fish that should not be eaten because of chemical contamination. The Illinois Department of Public Health urged people not to eat channel catfish from Dresden Lake in Grundy County, Lou Yeager Lake in Montgomery County, catfish caught in Clinton Lake in DeWitt County and carp from a stretch of the Sangamon River.

HOFELD'S STRIKE AGAINST DIXON BACKFIRES — Senate challenger Al Hofeld's latest effort to discredit incumbent Sen. Alan Dixon backfired Thursday when he accused Dixon of once belonging to an all-white country club, only to admit later that he himself is still a member of an all-white lawyer's group. During a campaign appearance in Chicago, Hofeld blasted Dixon for being a former honorary member of the St. Clair Country Club.

Creationist, evolutionist debate theories at SIUC

By Sherry L. Wilcox
General Assignment Writer

Creationists do not accuse evolutionists of being purposely deceitful, just misled, a biochemist and advocate of creationism said in a debate Wednesday night.

Duane Gish, associate director and vice president for the Institute for Creation Research in El Cajon, Calif., participated in the debate with Edward E. Max on the theories of evolution and creation at Shryock Auditorium.

Max, also a biochemist, is a Food and Drug Administration chief for gene regulation at the Laboratory of Molecular Immunology in Pennsylvania.

The debate was sponsored by the Apologia Society, the Christian organization Chi Alpha, the Missouri Association for Creation and the SIUC Forensic Team.

Gish said evolutionists tend to believe every living thing is composed as a result of many unattached hydrogen atoms somehow bonding together.

"If we believe this, then we believe hydrogen is an odorless, tasteless gas that if given enough time becomes people," he said. "This is not a scientific theory because the events it supposedly explains occurred in the unservable past. It is history, not science."

But Max said evolution is indeed scientific and called upon the idea of random mutation to support this view.

"There are some cell mutations that can be beneficial, and these are the basis of evolution," he said. "For example, when a human is immunized, disease enters the bloodstream and cause white blood cells to react. If that person then draws blood, you will see the anti-bodies get better and better."

Max said this is called anti-body efficiency, and causes the body to become stronger, not weaker.

"Localized increases in order can occur spontaneously in natural processes without violating the second law of thermodynamics," he said. "Dr. Gish's idea is pure pseudo-science."

Gish said he questioned whose ideas were true pseudo-science.

"There are some evolutionists who believe that one day a reptile laid an egg and when it opened, out flew a bird," he said. "All of a sudden, we went from reptile to bird. Well it must have been quite a shock to Mama reptile."

Max supported the evolutionary view by presenting the results of fossil studies.

Fossils of fish appeared deeper in the earth's core than fossils of mammals, and fossils of many mammals appeared deeper than those of humans, Max said. This is evidence that evolution exists, he said.

Gish, however, said he is not convinced.

"Evolution is a myth," he said. "Believe it if you want, but don't call it science and don't teach it to your students."

The Columbia Encyclopedia defines creationism as the belief in the biblical account of the creation of the world.

"Advocates of creationism have campaigned to have it taught in public schools along with the theory of evolution, which they dispute," according to the encyclopedia. In 1981 a federal judge ruled unconstitutional an Arkansas law requiring the teaching of creationism, holding it to be religious in nature; a similar Louisiana law was overturned in 1982.

The same encyclopedia defines evolution as a concept embodying the belief that existing organisms descend from a common ancestor. Inorganic evolution deals with the development of the universe from unorganized matter.

According to the encyclopedia, "In 1858 Alfred Russell Wallace and Charles Darwin independently set forth a scientifically credible theory of evolution based on natural selection."

"The theory of evolution still rests on essentially the same grounds emphasized by Darwin, supported by research in genetics, as well as comparative anatomy, embryology, geography, paleontology, and recently biochemistry."

Banning kids' novel teaches narrow view

THE WORD "CENSORSHIP" HAS DIRTY connotations all its own, and charges of censorship are often flung like mud in free-speech debates. But in the case of a drive to remove Judy Blume's novel "Forever" from Herrin Junior High library shelves, such a charge is misapplied.

Judy Blume is an immensely popular author with a broad appeal among young people. To say that her novels have had a profound impact on thousands of young readers is perhaps an understatement.

SO IT IS NOT WITHOUT CAUSE THAT 300 parents in Herrin Community School District No. 4 have examined Blume's 1975 book "Forever," found it "borderline pornographic," and petitioned for its removal. Parents understand the influence media can have on their children, and seldom want that influence to eclipse their own.

The characters in "Forever" are high-school age, older than the junior-high students who would read the book in the Herrin library. Perhaps their situation is also more mature than any in which a junior-high youth would become involved.

THE VIEWPOINT CHARACTER, KATHERINE, becomes involved in her first sexual relationship, which is explored realistically and somewhat graphically. But sex in Blume's novel is presented in the context of a loving relationship. There are far worse examples of "pornographic" literature in the world.

But then, as the Supreme Court has ruled, the definition of pornography is best left to the community to decide. As members of the Herrin community, the petitioning parents have every right to express their views on "Forever."

AS HERRIN CITIZENS WHOSE TAXES SUPPORT the junior high school, they have every right to a voice in what books are provided for their children by the district. They are not "censors" in the extremist sense of the word, but child-rearers with legitimate concerns about what their children—entering puberty and curious about sex—are reading.

But through their actions, these parents impose a narrow world-view on their children. The role of parents is to teach a child how to interact with the world constructively. Through their example, they teach that some aspects of adult life—specifically, sex, and literature dealing explicitly with sex—were to be avoided and mistrusted, and can be swept under the rug if need be.

THEIR CRIME IS NOT CENSORSHIP, but avoidance of reality. And by petitioning to ban "Forever," they teach that avoidance to the next generation.

International students as TAs put annoying twist on language

I would like to complain about the preponderance of foreign teaching assistants (TAs) and lab assistants who know the bare minimum of English. Many times I and others have suffered through foreign instructors who cannot understand simple questions, no matter how many times and in how many ways they are phrased. Also annoying is their borderline-comprehensible, accented English and mispronunciation of words.

It seems to me that they learned our language from books and then only enough to barely pass the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL).

SIUC has a program that teaches students how to pass the TOEFL, but not how to effectively communicate in English! If the foreign students care little about our language and it affects only their education, it is not of my concern.

However, if they want to teach, there should be a mandatory English proficiency exam (oral and written) that is much more comprehensive.

If able to choose lab instructors the way one can choose teachers (i.e. by having their names listed in the schedule books), I could avoid most foreign TAs by modifying my schedule. But as it stands now, during the first week of class I go to every lab wondering what contortions of the English language I will have to suffer through for the rest of the semester.

Another way to reduce this problem is to encourage American students to fill the positions of TA and lab assistant. It seems to me that foreign students fill more of these posts than their numbers on campus should accommodate. Is there some special reason for this? I've always felt that buying American should also include hiring American.

I know of a lot of students who complain to others within earshot but take no further action. This issue is a common campus complaint.—Brian Boyer, senior, civil engineering technology and paralegal studies.

Wake-up call for party animals

"WAKE UP STUDENTS!" Unless we voice our opinion, we will lose not only Halloween but Springfest as well. It is us against them when it comes to protecting our rights.

I am disturbed that the next time the Springfest keg-ban issue will be discussed is on March 17. This is unfair due to the fact that it falls in the midst of our spring break. Once again, the students have lost their chance to voice an opinion. We need to do more than sit back and just let the student government oppose this issue. They need our help in order for their concerns to be taken seriously.

These recommendations that the SLAC has proposed are a sick infringement of our rights and the rights of the business owners on the Strip. The idea of banning the sale of kegs brings to mind Prohibition. I guess by forcing students to buy kegs early, they think they will be able to stop the parties from occurring. Well, I guess we'll all just have to go to the bars. Then we will have a problem with students spilling onto the Strip. The police will be forced to use blockades and niaice on these disruptive and violent hoodlums. Give me a break! The only reason this would ever happen is because a ban on kegs would force students to congregate at the bars. Let's discuss the idea of stopping liquor sales at 10 p.m. I'll just have to stock up early in the day so I can still have an after-hours party.

I hope that by writing this letter, I have made the point that these regulations will only serve to cause more problems. The University needs to ask students what it would take to promote a better Springfest celebration. I'm sure the students would be more than willing to cooperate with town and University officials. I doubt if Carbondale could survive without the students SIU provides it with. I would hate to see SIU become as lame as somewhere like Northern Illinois University.—Jason Blythe, junior, mortuary science.

War on drugs no solution to addiction

I almost enjoyed your Feb. 26 story on Latin America's problems with the U.S. War on Drugs. The story points out quite clearly that the WOD is merely a ruse to gain domestic support for continued U.S. interference abroad. The WOD is not about stopping drug abuse, although that is popular sentiment. After all, who could oppose ending abuse? Even NORML supports treatment on demand for those who wish to stop using addictive drugs.

But the WOD does not stop this drug abuse. Only personal choices based on responsible, factual information can do that. Just look at the declining rolls of people addicted to tobacco, a government-subsidized drug. It didn't take no-knock search warrants and jail overcrowding to achieve that.

But I also disagree vehemently with Scott Macdonald, who said in the story that asset forfeiture sharing would be a less painful alternative to traditional interdiction. Asset forfeiture is an insult to human liberty; it has always been a favorite tool of tyrants and despots who wish to only line their pockets. For the United States to insist in using this device abroad is just a new version of thinly veiled imperialism.

The plan to share this booty with the local governments is an attempt to buy their support for the raping of their nations. What is tragic is that these South American leaders will probably agree to it, just as the citizens of the United States have, in the name of saving the people (by murder if need be) from their own bad habits.—Drew Hendricks, president, SIUC NORML, junior, journalism.

State Senate sparks St. Pat's Day face-off

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

Tuesday's Illinois State primary pits two Democrats, one who has held the Senate seat and one who wishes to. Incumbent Ralph Dunn, Du Quoin, runs unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Patrick McCann, Murphysboro, and Kenneth Buzbee, Makanda, will battle each other for the Democratic nomination.

Dunn has held the seat since 1985 when then State Senator Kenneth Buzbee stepped down to run for the U.S. Congressional race, which he lost to Kenneth Gray.

McCann refused the request of Buzbee to drop out of the race to avoid an expensive primary.

Two other Democratic candidates complied with the request and dropped out of contention. McCann was the first to join the race against Dunn.

"I AM AS QUALIFIED as any other men in this race," McCann said. "I don't think any one man is more qualified. I think the job is to represent the people and I can do that."

"The main point is who can best represent the people of the 58th District. I have been in this race for the last two years. I am not going to step out."

McCann holds a master's degree in the Law of Taxation from the University of Florida.

McCann said his proposal to end prison overcrowding will save taxpayers money while keeping the most dangerous criminals in jail.

MCCANN PROPOSES to remove the mandatory prison sentences for all Class X crimes, changing certain Class 4 Felonies to Class A Misdemeanors, and have the State legislature re-examine each crime classification of felonies.

McCann also said the state's problems will not be solved overnight.

"It will take a few years to get the state out of the mess it is in," McCann said. "There is no magic wand a person

"For the first time in history, Southern Illinois University is receiving less dollars than in the previous year. According to the Illinois Constitution, the state must provide at least 50 percent of the funds for education. Currently SIUC is receiving around 30 percent. This has to stop."

—Kenneth Buzbee

can wave over the problems and make them disappear."

Buzbee said he thinks he will win the Democratic nomination in the primary, and regards the real fight being between Dunn and himself.

"This is going to be one of the most expensive races in history for an Illinois state Senate seat," Buzbee said. "The Republicans want this seat and they are going to throw a lot of money into Dunn's campaign to get it."

BUZBEE SAID THE RACE is important to the Republicans because the 58th Senate seat is one of the targeted seats they need to get control of the Senate.

Currently the Democrats hold 31 seats and the Republicans hold 28 in the Senate.

Any one party needs 30 'yes' votes to pass a piece of legislation and the 58th is one of five seats the Republicans may lose.

Buzbee, who holds a master's degree from SIUC, said he will fight for higher education.

"For the first time in history, Southern Illinois University is receiving less dollars than in the previous year," Buzbee said. "According to the Illinois Constitution, the state must provide at least 50 percent of the funds for education."

Currently SIUC is receiving around 30 percent. This has to stop."

Buzbee served as the state Senator for the 58th district for 12 years before his unsuccessful bid for the U.S. Congress.

Buzbee also served as the chairman for the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Since his retirement from office, he has been a lobbyist and owns a governmental consultation firm.

"MY EIGHT YEARS as a chairman of the Senate Appropriations II Committee and my 10 years as a member of the Senate Appropriations I Committee have given me the experience and the expertise to bring back those dollars we have lost," Buzbee said.

Buzbee has been actively campaigning on the SIUC campus, reminding students to cast absentee votes if they are registered to vote in Carbondale.

Dunn served in the Illinois House of Representatives from 1973 to 1984. Dunn is seeking his third term as state Senator.

Dunn has been known as a maverick in the Republican party for going against straight-line party votes.

DUNN HAS WORKED closely with Incumbent State House of Representative Bruce Richmond, a Democrat.

Dunn said he thinks he has accomplished a great deal in his three terms.

Dunn has served on the Minority Spokesman of the Senate Higher Education Committee and as a member of the Elementary and Secondary Education Committee.

Dunn also served as a member of the Appropriations Committee and has input on the budget of the region's prisons and state institutions.

DURING HIS PAST terms Dunn fought for laws helping veterans and the coal industry.

Dunn was influential in passing a law that will allow the development of a energy park in Southern Illinois that will create about 1,000 jobs after completion.

- served in the Illinois House from 1973 to 1984
- served as the Minority Spokesman for the Senate Higher Education Committee and member of the Senate Appropriations Committee

Patrick McCann

DEMOCRAT

Qualifications:

- served two terms on Murphysboro City Council
- practiced law in Murphysboro since 1979
- holds Master of Law of Taxation degree from the University of Florida

House hopefuls

Six candidates battle for representative seat in state race

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

Two Democrats and four Republicans will fight it out for their parties' nominations in the 115th state House of Representatives.

The race offers no incumbent advantage. Bruce Richmond will retire after this term after holding the seat for 12 years.

Jerry Hawkins and Gene Clarke oppose each other for the Democratic nomination. Chuck Daugherty, Jean Ibandahl, Neil Dillard and Mike Bost will face each other for the Republican party nomination.

Jerry Hawkins, of Du Quoin, served as chairman of the Perry County Mental Health and the Perry County Housing boards. Hawkins is the director of the Du Quoin State Bank and served as a member of the governor's Task Force on Coal.

"In my opinion, the issue in this election is the future," Hawkins said. "We must have jobs, we must make sure every person has adequate food, shelter, health-care and education. We must protect and restore our environment and we must have a government that is squarely facing the state's problems, not just looking to the next election."

To revitalize the area's economy, Hawkins said he would develop an economic council aimed at bringing together business, labor, education and government leaders.

Hawkins' Democratic contender, candidate Don Striklin, was elected as the Regional Superintendent of Schools for eight years in Jackson and Perry Counties.

Striklin opposes further cuts in Medicaid, Medicare, public aid and education. Striklin said he is relying on business growth to restoring the area's economy.

members of the Southern Illinois Coalition that was organized to provide approaches to stir economic growth.

The four member Republican race features the only woman in the race, Jean Ibandahl.

Ibandahl, of Tamaroa, has been one of the most active campaigners in the primary and has sponsored dinner parties, auctions and raffles to inspire voters into her corner.

Ibandahl is a retired teacher with 20 years of experience and advocates a stronger relationship between the business community and local schools.

House prepares list of bad check writers for release

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In one of the most agonizing moments in its history, the House prepared Thursday to publicly identify all members who wrote bad checks at the House bank.

The actual release of the names was not expected for 10 days or more, after records have been reviewed and members notified. The scandal claimed one victim shortly before the debate began when Sergeant at Arms Jack Russ, who was responsible for operation of the bank and wrote several bad checks of his own, announced his resignation.

The House leadership, after day-long negotiations on how to deal with the painful issue, agreed to a debate and vote Thursday night on disclosing the names of some 355 current and former members who wrote bad checks.

Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who originally supported an ethics committee recommendation to name just the 24 worst offenders, bowed to pressure from Republicans and many Democrats who saw full disclosure as the only way to quell the firestorm of public censure that followed revelations last year of widespread check kiting.

The disclosures are expected to take a heavy political toll among House members seeking re-election this year. Some 355 members wrote bad checks.

Impoverished senior citizens not benefiting from program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some 2 million poor elderly Americans who do not realize they are eligible for medical benefits are being shortchanged by unnecessarily paying large sums to the Medicare program, a new report says.

Families USA Foundation, a nonprofit advocacy group, said Thursday that although 4 million impoverished senior citizens are eligible for government benefits that could reduce their Medicare costs, just 2 million have signed up for the program. The other 2 million are paying an average of $1,602 each year unnecessarily, the group said.

In Illinois, just 46 percent of eligible seniors — 80,390 — are receiving the benefits, a report released by the group said. Illinois ranks seventh among the states with the largest numbers of qualifying low-income elderly who are not receiving the payments, the report also said.

Medicare is the government health insurance program for the elderly and the disabled.

Ron Pollack, a spokesman for Families USA, blamed the Bush administration for failing to alert qualifying seniors of their eligibility to have the costs paid by Medicaid, a government program that pays for health care of the poor.

"The Bush administration appears to be intent on keeping this a secret benefit," he said during a Washington news conference. "Very simple, easily implemented steps have not been taken."

Dr. Louis Sullivan, secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), issued a statement saying the agency was "engaged in a continuing effort to reach people potentially eligible" for the benefits.

Among other things, the department established a toll free hot line number (1 800-638-6833) in September for people with questions about Medicare, said a spokesman with the U.S. Health Care Financing Administration, which is part of HHS.

The health financing agency spokesman pointed out that the states are responsible for enrolling eligible recipients in the benefits program because the states administer the Medicaid program.

A provision in a 1988 law allows poor senior citizens to forego certain out-of-pocket Medicare costs that average $1,602 annually, and to have them paid by Medicaid. Qualifying persons must be either 65 in age, or disabled and eligible for Medicare. They must have annual incomes below $6,810 and assets of less than $4,000. Eligible couples must have incomes below $9,190 and assets of less than $6,000.

Pollack said a qualifying person would be exempt from the $382 Medicare premium that is deducted from Social Security checks each year, and from a $100 deductible payment for doctors' bills, an average of $468 in co-payments for medical care, and a $652 deductible for hospitalization.

Illinois has experienced a large increase in participants — 5.7 percent — in comparison to other states.

school districts an equal opportunity," Ibbendahl said. "One idea is to keep local residence and farm tax dollars in the local districts, but pool the corporate and industrial dollars at the state level and distribute these common funds to the districts as determined by a formula based on need."

In his second attempt at the House of Representatives and with no incumbent to challenge him, Chuck Daugherty considers himself the front runner. Daugherty ran against Bruce Richmond in the 1990 race for the 116th district.

Daugherty, of Carbondale, is currently self-employed in public relations as a legislative affairs consultant. Daugherty served as the director of public relations for SIUC.

Daugherty proposes changes in the worker's compensation act that would improve services to workers while reducing rates to employers. He said the changes would allow faster payments to the injured worker and help reduce the cost of frivolous lawsuits.

Daugherty said that unemployment insurance rates could be cut by changing statutes for determining whether employer-employee relationships exist.

He also proposed deregulation of some Illinois Environmental Protection Agency statutes that are overly restrictive and could help save industry money and protect the environment.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard drew controversy from the other Republican contenders when he joined the race. Dillard entered the race as a Republican but has voted as a Democrat in past elections.

He has served two terms as Carbondale mayor and has held the seat since 1987. Dillard has been involved with the Carbondale city government since 1981, when he was appointed to the City Council.

Dillard worked as the director of research and worked in the Office of Economic Development.

Dillard said the future of Illinois depends on industry and a well-trained work force. If elected, Dillard said he could balance the jobs of mayor and representative because the Carbondale city manager handles most of the business with the mayor deals.

Mike Bost, Murphysboro's current city treasurer, is the fourth Republican in the race. Bost also operates a trucking company in Murphysboro.

Bost said if elected he will concentrate on health care and the state budget.

Bost was a Murphysboro precinct committeeman for six years and was elected to the county board for four years. Bost said he would concede his position as the City Treasurer if he was elected.

Bost said he also would focus on worker's compensation and worker's compensation rates.

school and even junior high kids who consume alcohol illegally who hang around with the college crowd," Lawrence said.

"We also have a problem with the older crowd, usually around the age of 40, who come and scam and take advantage of the younger crowd using drugs and alcohol," he said.

The college crowd who usually come just to socialize are not focused on by the police. Lawrence said.

Horror stories of demolished houses and wild crowds are not necessarily true, he said. Crowds of any kind generally are not a problem.

Lawrence said most of the drunken driving incidents occur on the highways from Padre and Mustang islands.

"Drunken driving is heavily enforced by the police," he said.

The SIUC spring break officially begins at noon Saturday, and classes resume at 8 a.m. Monday.

Al Tolley, public information officer for Daytona police, said the main problem in the Daytona beach area is traffic.

"There is a lot of traffic congestion," Tolley said. "That is mainly because of the overflow of students coming for spring break."

The traffic problem is larger than any drunken driving problem in Daytona, he said.

"Drunken driving is not a large problem in Daytona," Tolley said. "Since 1989 we've experienced a very responsible college-age crowd."

Few problems with drunken driving are a result, in part, of the organizations in Daytona that offer their assistance.

"The Dodge company has their drunken driving demonstration, and groups such as Party Smart and Responsible Vendors actually take away car keys from those who have had too much and help them sober out," he said.

Vacationers who come to Daytona are coming to having a good time, Tolley said. They don't want to worry about a criminal record for any types of substance abuse.

Helen Coracy, assistant manager for vacation planning for B&A Travel in Carbondale, said the key to having a safe spring break is using common sense.

"Students should use common sense because traveling can sometimes be a problem," Coracy said.

Students should protect their cash by using travelers checks because replacements can be made for the checks.

Basic health precautions for traveling include:

■ Don't eat the skin off fruit because it could cause diseases;

■ Don't drink water, including ice cubes in drinks, for they also may carry diseases and

■ Take antibiotics before and after the trip to help stop diseases.

Those traveling out of the states should know what entrance regulations are required for the country to which they are traveling, Coracy said.

"Mexico requires proof of citizenship, but Europe does not," Coracy said.

Campus employees have the day off March 16, and most University offices will be closed.

Morris Library will be open from 7:45 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 16 and from 7:45 a.m. to 6 p.m. March 17 to 20. Regular hours for the library will resume March 21.

The Student Center will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday, from 6:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. March 17 to 20, and from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m. March 22.

room will pay $3,024 for fall and spring semesters.

SIUC President John C. Guyon said he attributes the increase to inflation and a way to pay off bonds bought to pay for the residence halls.

Jones said part of the reason the increase is so high is because the cable TV the students wanted is still being paid.

Sullivan said students did not understand what they were voting for last year when they were asked if they wanted HBO or Showtime with cable.

"If we had known we were going to keep paying every year, we would not have voted to have HBO," he said. "In the future we have to take a much closer look at what we're going to pay for services."

For the noticeable future, the students are going to bear the cost of everything because the state has no money, Sullivan said.

Because of the decrease in traditional freshman enrollment, the vacancies in the residence halls have resulted in decreased revenue said

When compared to housing rates at other universities, SIUC falls below the rates at University of Illinois, ranks even with rates at Northern Illinois University and is slightly above the rates at Illinois State University, Jones said.

But Sullivan said USG was against the proposal because the students would not get anymore services for the extra money they would pay.

"I appreciate the need to have money to back the bonds for the buildings, but it can be done in a better way," Sullivan said.

The University could have increased recruiting efforts to get graduate students and non-traditional students to fill the vacancies in the residence halls, he said.

Jones said the shortfall in occupancy is not really a part of the increase in rates.

The University made up for the vacancies by offering more single rooms, which are more expensive, no longer offering Saturday morning breakfast and having only one cafeteria open on each campus on the weekends, he said.

"If we raised the rates only to meet the shortfall in occupancy, the increase would be more than 5 percent," Jones said.

SIUC still is below the national average for room-and-board rates, he said.

But filling vacant positions is not the only way to increase revenue for University housing.

Another possibility would be an internal reallocation within housing, Sullivan said.

"I know reallocation is a nasty word and very severe, but it is also easy to ask students to come up with another $144," he said.

Sullivan said the increase equals another 30 to 35 hours of work for most students.

Calling the increases inflationary increases is just a way to justify the increases, he said.

"This is just another stick on the fire that is just burning up the students' money," Sullivan said.

Jones said according to the Universities five-year plan, every area on campus is scheduled to have work done.

Repairs and replacements are being made in some of the residence halls, but they are just not the "flashy things that people get excited about like cable TV," he said.

Attached to the proposed increase in housing rates is a five-day, 15-meal plan option and one residence hall to be kept open the full academic year to provide a contract option to students for a place to stay during breaks.

An increase of about 4.8 percent also was passed for apartment rentals in Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace. This increase would amount to about $12 to $15 a month.

private funds to help in the development. Sears is contributing the appropriate land and certain other financial support.

concerns and have some resolution."

People need to realize the SLAC recommendations are not etched in stone, Strom said.

"The proposals were for discussion with students and other concerned citizens," he said. "It's positive that we're sitting across the table and talking it over—if we don't have this type of dialogue we'd never get anywhere."

Sullivan said he thinks the students will win this battle.

"I think we will see a lot of those recommendations amended or dropped," he said. "And all the hype is going to disappear."

Vietnam vet working to preserve memory of war

By Sherri L. Wilcox
General Assignment Writer

William Giles is taking steps to preserve the memory and rights of Vietnam veterans—thousands of miles of steps, that is.

Giles, a Vietnam veteran himself, is walking from Madison, Wis., to Washington, D.C., on what he calls the "Peace Path Tour."

He is followed by a support vehicle, a 1975 Dodge camper, chosen because its creation year marks the end of the Vietnam War.

He left Madison Nov. 11, 1991, and hopes to finish his 11-state, 300-city trek before Veterans Day 1992, marking the 10th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans' Memorial Wall.

This week, he made his stop in Carbondale.

The march began as a personal effort to help "bring his mind and his heart back" to this country, Giles said.

"When we returned from the war, the nation was in turmoil," he said.

"We went underground with our status and never talked about being veterans, there was too much resentment," Giles said.

Giles was part of the U.S. Army's 25th infantry stationed in CuChi.

He was a "tunnel rat," a soldier whose duties entailed entering underground tunnels dug by the Viet Cong, a group of Vietnamese loyalists who fought a guerrilla war against French and U.S. forces.

"These tunnels were 60 to 80 feet deep and over 200 miles long," Giles said.

"They housed hospitals, weapons storage, kitchens—some even had amphitheaters used to entertain the troops that lived in the tunnels," he said.

Viet Cong troops dug the tunnels for escape and abatement of their enemy, he said.

"They were full of trap doors, booby traps and other so-called deterrents," he said.

"The troops would come up at night and attack the soldiers above them, then disappear back into the tunnels," he said.

Soldiers volunteered to go into the tunnels after the enemy troops, and these men were known as tunnel rats.

"Most of the time I was armed only with a .45 and a flashlight," Giles said.

In April of 1966, Giles' battalion was attacked in CuChi.

"When we returned from the war, the nation was in turmoil. We went underground with our status and never talked about being veterans, there was too much resentment. I know that if more people took the time to promote love, hope and peace, we would have a better society."

—William Giles

After saving the life of a battalion officer, Giles mistakenly was identified as one of the soldiers who died in the attack.

In fact, the man who died was Barney McKinley Giles Jr., a different soldier of the same battalion.

The officer Giles saved was in direct command of Barney Giles, and while Giles was helping him, the officer grabbed his dogtags.

Seeing the last name of Giles, the officer assumed the soldier saving him was his own man.

This is what caused confusion in the report of Barney Giles' death.

It was two weeks before the two Giles families found out about the mistake.

Giles said the most important stop on the peace walk will be in Biloxi, Miss., at the home of the family of Barney Giles.

"I contacted his family in September of last year and that was a very difficult time," he said.

"I will be stopping there and bringing to Washington with me a commemoration of Barney Giles to place at the wall," Giles remarked.

While the walk began as self-fulfillment, Giles later decided to use it as a way to raise awareness of veterans' issues such as post-traumatic stress disorder, POW-MIAs and agent orange.

"As soldiers, we did our jobs and we should be proud of that job," he said.

"Not only the soldiers have scars," Giles said.

Giles said his mission is one of love, hope and peace.

By meeting with every government official in his path, he hopes to be granted a diplomatic pass into Vietnam so he can continue his peace walk there.

"We are one country, one flag, one America, and if people don't realize we're all brothers and sisters, then something is wrong," he said.

"I know that if more people took the time to promote love, hope and peace, we would have a better society," Giles said.

Giles has met with Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard.

He was presented with city pins from both Dillard and Murphysboro Mayor David McDowell.

Giles will march from Murphysboro to Carbondale Saturday in the St. Patrick's Day Parade.

At 3 p.m., Giles will present the city of Carbondale with its first POW-MIA flag, donated by the Patriots of Murphysboro.

The flag will be used in a flag-raising ceremony at the corner of Main Street and Illinois Avenue.

College plans architectural tour of Europe

By Fatima Janvekar
General Assignment Writer

Faculty, students and professionals in architecture and design are being offered a unique opportunity to pay homage to some of Europe's great architectural wonders this summer.

The architectural technology department of the College of Technical Careers is organizing a 20-day tour of Europe through the Cultural Heritage Alliance of Philadelphia.

The alliance has been in existence for more than 20 years and encourages cultural interaction in the academic field.

"A maximum of 50 participants may undertake the six-nation tour," said Norm Lach, assistant professor of architectural technology, who has organized this, and similar trips to Europe.

For art and design students, the tour gives them three credit hours toward their degree, and graduate students can use it as transferable credit for a history class at University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

"We strongly encourage faculty members and students from all majors to apply to take the trip," Lach said.

"The people we take need not necessarily be from design backgrounds."

"As in previous years, we are looking for an interesting mix of people. In the past, we have had a person from payroll and administration, one of the assistant deans and the head of the recreation center take the tour," Lach said.

Participants will travel to cities and towns in England, France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland and Spain.

For more information, contact Lach at 453-1128. Applications will be accepted until May.

Class project gives students idea of real business world

By Christy Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

Students in a work center management course are getting an edge on their education through a class program that imitates real life business experiences.

Students involved in the project, which is part of the advanced technical studies program in the College of Technical Careers, create a company that designs a product that later is marketed to the public.

The project helps students gain experience and learn to work in a group environment, said Connie Armstrong, coordinator of consumer economics and family management.

The experience will look impressive on student resumes because it highlights the student's accomplishments, goals and shows that they were part of a team, Armstrong said.

She has coordinated the project for three years and is happy with its success.

"The students get experience and see how groups interrelate with each other," she said.

Students gain experience by working in design, production, marketing, finance, sales and personnel departments of the company.

The class discussed various products such as beach towels, drink holders and hats before deciding on T-shirts, said marketing manager Mark Oden, a junior from Niles.

The design of the T-shirts promotes Springfield.

Students are allowed the use of facilities at Silkworm factory in Murphysboro to produce the T-shirts.

The factory has allowed students to use the facilities for the past three or four semesters, said Bob Chambers, president of Silkworm.

"I allow the students to use the equipment and train them so the end result is a good product," he said.

Chambers said he has done a lot of business with SIUC in the past.

"This gives me the opportunity to give something back," he said. The project began at the beginning of the semester when students chose a product to be sold throughout campus.

Armstrong hired a vice president, and the vice president then selects the individual managers for each department of the company.

The managers select employees, who submit applications listing their qualifications and skills.

The project gives the students real life experience, said Sara Light, vice-president of the project.

"It shows me how a real company works," she said. "It's a lot different than reading a book."

The T-shirt design must go through an approval process before the class can sell the product to the public.

The design must be approved by the dean of College of Technical Careers, university relations and if the school mascot is used, Arena officials also must approve the design before the product can be marketed, Armstrong said.

"(The product) is going through the design approval process now," she said.

This system allows students to realize the way outside forces influence a company's product.

One of the design proposals did not exactly promote the image of Springfield the University wanted, said Dorothy McCombs, associate director of University Relations.

"We are responsible for the image of the university and how it is perceived by our various constituents," McCombs said.

The design since has been modified slightly, and little disputes have occurred.

The project is financed from students who may buy stock for $5 a share.

The profit is split among the students at the end of the semester.

The group is allowing outside resources to invest in the project to increase funds, Armstrong said.

Students involved in the advertising aspect of the project are distributing flyers this week on campus and bought radio spots on WIDB to promote the product.

The T-shirts will be sold on campus after spring break, Oden said.

The price of the product will be about $12, Oden said.

SIUC student named editor of college magazine

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

SIUC student Jackie Spinner sits behind her desk with her clipboard in hand and glances at the clock. It is an hour past the 4 p.m. deadline for stories.

"Let's get this copy out," she calls to the furiously typing reporters scattered throughout the newsroom.

Although the daily routine of the Daily Egyptian editor in chief sometimes is exhausting, Spinner said she would have it no other way.

"This is fun," she said. "I wouldn't be doing this if it weren't."

But in two months, her two-semester rank in the editor's chair will end—and a whole new adventure will begin.

Spinner has been named editor of U. The National College Newspaper. She was awarded one of four fellowship positions for U., a national publication for college students with a circulation of 1,425 million.

Her secret?

"There's no secret—I work hard and I have my priorities in check," Spinner said. "I suppose some might call my approach ultra-aggressive because I attack a challenge."

Mark C. Charnock, managing editor of U., said Spinner's experience on the DE gave her qualifications a boost.

"Jackie was a top candidate from start to finish," Charnock said. "Her qualifications blended with our mission. She's not only experienced in journalism but in her academic career as well."

Spinner has worked for the Daily Egyptian since the week prior to her freshman year. This is her 10th semester at the campus newspaper.

"It's going to be very difficult for me to leave the Daily Egyptian because it's been an environment in which I've worked and lived more than 90 percent of my college career," she said.

"But there's so much of the DE I get to take with me to the U. that it makes it easier to make a transition like this," Spinner said.

Jacki Hampton, associate editor of U., said Spinner's enthusiasm toward her work made her one of the strongest candidates for the fellowship editor positions.

"When we asked if Jackie had created the 48-hour day, she simply said, 'Someone else invented it, I just have to live by it,'" Hampton said. "That pretty well summed it up."

Spinner averages about 65 hours a week at the Daily Egyptian with a class load of 14 semester hours, a tough schedule she has learned to balance, she said.

"I think where a lot of people fail is in finding balance between what they give to the DE and what they give to their academic lives," Spinner said. "The hardest thing isn't saying 'no' to the DE. The hardest thing is saying 'no' to classes when you're working on a big scoop."

But Spinner has learned to balance her commitments to the Daily Egyptian and her work as a student.

She was named the top senior at SIUC last fall.

Wayne Wenta, an SIUC assistant professor of journalism, said no instructor could expect a better student than Spinner has proved to be.

"I've seen her as a student, and I've seen her as a journalist," he said.

"She's handled herself well in both cases. She's as good a student as the state of Illinois has to offer," Wenta said.

Spinner's original plan to enter law school to study media law after her May graduation has been deferred for a year, when her U. position expires.

"The U. position was the only thing that I would give up law school for," she said.

"I needed a carrot to stay in journalism, and I didn't have one—U. offered me that carrot and I took it," Spinner said.

Spinner said she will carry her experience at the DE to her new position.

"It's still college journalism, so everything I love most about working for a college newspaper, I'll still be able to do," she said. "As a U. editor, I represent the DE and SIUC, and I don't intend to give any less than I've given here."

Spinner competed with editors from 400 schools nationwide for the editing position. She was a Top 10 finalist from 70 editors.

"If it were not for the Daily Egyptian, I would not have the position," Spinner said. "The DE has opened so many doors for me in journalism and in just growing up."

"I owe the paper an awful lot, and I suppose the only way I know right now to repay it is to go out and be famous and say I worked for the Daily Egyptian," she said with a laugh.

When Spinner begins work at the U. June 22, she may be closer than she realizes.

Marsalis' album reflects new growth as saxophone player, jazz musician

By William Ragan
Entertainment Writer

Branford Marsalis' new album, "The Beautiful Ones Are Not Yet Born," documents his continuing growth as a saxophone player and an instrumental force in expanding the active vocabulary of modern jazz.

Marsalis' maturation is evident from the strength of his musical vision on this album. The sheer breadth and scope of his imagination bring to mind legendary jazz saxophonist John Coltrane, although Marsalis' style of playing is much different.

"The Beautiful Ones" is much different than Marsalis' previous release, "Crazy People Music." The band on this recording is scaled down to a trio, with Robert "Rizzy" Hurst on bass and Jeff Tain Watts on drums.

The stripped-down instrumentation allows for a more free harmonic range and a tighter group interaction. Without a piano, there is no one to play complete chords; the songs become sketches in which each individual fills in with their own creativity.

The attitude and energy of the playing on "The Beautiful Ones" brings to mind the Free Jazz movement of the '60s.

Although Free Jazz tended to alienate all but the most serious listeners with a cacophony of honks, squeals, psychotic noise and almost non-existent rhythms, Marsalis uses traditional concepts of movement and melody as a foundation upon which to build.

The first track, "Roused About," is a composition influenced by the late jazz saxophonist Charlie Rouse. Marsalis' comical, jagged and melodious playing on the song brings to mind the rhythmic but erratic style of Free Jazz pioneer Ornette Coleman.

Marsalis and bassist Hurst interact fully, trading phrases in a game of harmonic hot-potato. Watts outlines the song form during the solos, using his "stumbling drum" technique to camouflage any time references.

The title track, a passionate ballad which portrays a wide range of emotions, is about 14 minutes long. Marsalis begins unaccompanied, wailing a plaintive, soul-searching melody into the void.

Watts dynamically strikes the cymbals and Hurst plucks flamenco chords, creating a sparse backdrop for Marsalis' soprano saxophone.

As Marsalis' solo picks up intensity with quick, descending phrases, the rhythm section speeds up with uncanny precision, turning what was once a simple ballad into a grandiose statement of bombastic love.

"Xavier's Lair" features no chords and is completely improvised. Watts' drumming is especially inspired, moving from straight cymbal and snare work to astounding playing on the tom-toms and bass drum.

Marsalis' solo repeats harmonic patterns over the rhythmically free accompaniment, shifting in and out of the blurred time signature. At the climax of his solo, Marsalis plays a cut-time passage over the rhythm, which unexpectedly speeds up to a frenetic pace.

Finally, Marsalis resorts to a few well-placed honks and splats in a blizzard of notes, pulling back to reveal Watts' drum solo, which uses chimes and gongs in an undulating wave of percussion.

"Dewey Baby" is an old-fashioned tenor sax battle, made more interesting by the Free Jazz arrangement. Marsalis dukes it out with England's Courtney Pine, who crams an unbelievable amount of notes into his octave-defying solo.

Marsalis and Pine degenerate into a barrage of noise, from which Marsalis emerges, sketching a chain of melodicism outlined by the bass and drums.

Watts' drumming is a tour-de-force of modern percussion; in his solo he deliberately slows down to a standstill with the bass drum, only to combust again into rhythmic fireworks.

In the past, Branford Marsalis has proven himself to be a musical chameleon, fitting just as comfortably with the Grateful Dead's spacy improvisations as with his own band.

Drug, alcohol arrests higher during spring break traveling

By John McCadd
Police Writer

The spring break vacation usually sends a great number of vacationers along the nation's highway systems toward Florida and other popular southern vacation spots.

This large number of vacationers often represents a potential increase in the number of drug and alcohol related arrests.

The east coast of Florida, is especially prone to such congested travel conditions, where an estimated 4 million tourists travel at the beginning and during the end of spring break, said Florida State Highway patrolman Mike Boles.

There are no regulatory automobile inspections along the highways, but police often make arrests that result from their response to primary highway violations.

"Most of the time, if a car is speeding, or driving recklessly, we'll pull them over," said trooper Roger Webb.

"Sometimes, from these routine stops, it is possible for us to determine drug possession," he said.

Boles said motorists tend to violate the open container law of Florida.

The law states that both the driver and passenger are in violation if any open containers of alcoholic beverages are found. Seatbelts are required in the both Illinois and Florida.

Boles said a violation of this law is a secondary offense for which fines will be enforced.

Man throws cash outside restaurant to diners' surprise

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — A recession fantasy seemed about to come true when an unidentified man began throwing money at a group of diners waiting outside a restaurant.

According to witnesses, the man opened his wallet and tossed out $50 and $100 bills Wednesday night like there was no tomorrow.

But did the lucky passers-by take the money and run? No. They carefully collected the bills, called police, and gave them to the responding officers.

Molly Danielson, an Olympia High School student, left her dinner in the restaurant to see what the commotion was about. She said the money-throwing man appeared to be disturbed.

Danielson quoted the man as saying he had "met Jesus" and had "no need for money at all."

Danielson said she was glad she and the others returned the cash.

She explained she didn't want the man to wake up the next morning, find he had no money and "be a bum."

Wichita State denies offering contract to Valvano

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) — The president of Wichita State University said Thursday the school has not offered a contract to basketball coach Jim Valvano.

"Wichita State is not in a contract negotiation mode," Warren Armstrong, the university president, said in a statement. "No contract has been extended to any candidate."

That contradicts both university sources and Valvano's attorney.

Sources said negotiations began more than two weeks ago and continued into the night by telephone and fax Wednesday.

Valvano's North Carolina attorney, Woody Webb, said Valvano was considering an offer from the school that was "very attractive."

"In my view, it's unparalleled in terms of an offer to come coach a college basketball team," he said.

Valvano's agent, Arthur

Kaminsky, was unavailable Thursday but a spokesman said there would be no comment on talks between Valvano and the university.

Valvano, now a television broadcaster, was in Bristol, Conn., headquarters of the ESPN cable network, preparing for broadcasts of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. He did not return a phone messages left at his hotel.

Valvano has not coached since the 1989-90 season, when he resigned as coach at North Carolina State. He had been under fire for more than a year, facing allegations of rules violations and criticism for his athletes' poor graduation rates. The university was eventually placed on probation but Valvano was never directly implicated.

Since then, he has worked as a basketball analyst for both ESPN and ABC, earning a reported $300,000 per year. He has made no secret of his desire to return to coaching.

Valvano emerged as a leading candidate for the Wichita State job two weeks ago. He confirmed having been contacted by the Wichita State search committee on ESPN. A North Carolina newspaper said the deal offered to Valvano is worth $625,000 over three years. Other incentives and bonuses could add $300,000.

This season several regular-season champions of similar leagues lost in their postseason tournaments but have records comparable to SIUC or better. Those teams will compete for the final few slots in the NCAA.

FOR EXAMPLE, WISCONSIN-GREEN BAY, which was ousted by Eastern Illinois in the Mid-Continent Conference tourney, posts a 25-4 mark. Richmond, also 22-7, lost in the Colonial Conference tournament. Manhattan, 23-8, lost in the Metro Atlantic tourney.

For the past three years the Salukis have been selected to the National Invitational Tournament, and that may be where they end up again.

IN THE FIRST TWO YEARS the Salukis bowed out in the first round, but in 1991 they beat Boise State and Southwest Missouri before losing to Stanford in the quarterfinals. Stanford was the eventual NIT champion.

Following the announcement of the NCAA selections Sunday, the NIT selection committee will pick its tournament field.

In 1967, the Dawgs won the NIT, which was at the time the national championship tourney.

BEHIND THE GUIDANCE of head coach Jack Hartman and the play of future NBA star Walt Frazier, who scored 18.2 points a game that season, SIUC compiled a 24-2 record. The Salukis blew away Marquette 71-56 in the NIT final.

The Dawgs' loss to Tulsa proved what Herrin said after his team narrowly beat Wichita State for the third time this season to get to the semis.

"It is very tough to beat a team three times in one season," Herrin said. "Especially in a league with as much talent as the Valley."

He was right. The Salukis had beaten the Hurricane 74-66 Feb. 15 in Tulsa and 74-68 Feb. 22 at home.

But after running up a 17-point lead with 15 1/2 minutes left in the game, the Salukis let Tulsa back into the game, and the Hurricane went on to win.

AMAYA, A 6-8 JUNIOR who last week was selected as MVC Player of the Year and Defensive Player of the Year, won the Valley scoring and rebound races.

He had been battling Creighton senior guard Duan Cole all season for the scoring title. Amaya finished with an overall average of 19.3 points a game, and Cole finished with a 19.1 average. In MVC tourney play, Cole scored 19 as Creighton lost the SMSU.

AMAYA HAD 19 AND 28 POINTS the the Dawgs' two tourney games to end his average to 19.6 points a game.

He was named MVC Player of the Week four times this season and won the rebounding race long ago. He finished averaging 10.5 boards a game, and his nearest competitor, Wichita State freshman John Smith, finished with 7.4 a game.

AMAYA REMAINS IN 13TH PLACE on the SIUC all-time scoring list. He upped his total to 1,304 career points with his performance in the MVC tourney. With 34 more points, Amaya will pass 12th-place Dick Garrett, who scored 1,337 points from 1967 to 1969.

He needs 785 to overtake all-time leading scorer Charlie "Chico" Vaughn, who scored 2,088 points in his SIUC career.

to Illinois State in the Gateway Conference, and they also placed second in the Eastern Independent Conference.

Head coach Doug Ingram said he was pleased the teams fared so well in championship meets.

"We finished up our season on a strong note," he said.

"But I feel we could have been stronger at the national level."

The Saluki women swimmers, after sending five to the NCAA's last season, had only one qualifier this year.

Senior Nancy Schmidkofer qualified for the NCAA's in the 50 freestyle and set a school record with a time of :23.25. She also made provisional cuts in the 100 free.

Senior Julia Hosier, who was named an All-American last season, made provisional cuts in the 100 butterfly, but she failed to make an automatic time.

Ingram said the men's team is young and will need another year to compete at the national level.

"It was discouraging for our senior women not to do as well as they wanted to," Ingram said. "We have a good group of seniors and it will be disappointing for them if their relay team does not make it to nationals."

The Saluki divers had a season of unprecedented success with three qualifying for the NCAA Championship.

Sophomore Rob Sircusano qualified in both the 1- and 3-meter boards.

He also set pool and school records in both events during the Feb. 1 meet against Kansas.

His score for the 1-meter board was a 323.70, and his total for the 3-meter event was 583.58.

Senior Greg Testa qualified for the NCAA's on the 3-meter boards, and senior Michelle Albrecht also qualified in the 3-meter event.

Schmidkofer and senior Deryl Leubner traveled to the Olympic Trials which were held in Indianapolis March 1 to 6. Schmidkofer had her career-best time in the 50 free, and Leubner took 30th in the 50 free.

"Considering the level of competition Nancy was up against, she did extremely well and rose to the occasion," Ingram said.

The women's NCAA championships are March 19 and 20, and the men's championship is March 26 to 28.

of the games are completed we'll be a better team."

The netters first match on the road trip is against the 0-2 Memphis State Tigers March 15.

Memphis State, new in the Great Midwestern Conference, poses a possible threat for the Salukis, said one of the Tigers.

"Our team wasn't focused last time, but we'll be ready for SIUC," said sophomore Len Cannell.

March 16 the netters move on to play Northeast Louisiana. After a fast start at 2-0, Northeast is struggling with doubles matchups and has dropped to a 2-3 record.

"Our doubles play is the main reason why we've lost three in a row," said Jesper Fjeldstad of Northeast Louisiana.

The Salukis also are trying to improve on their doubles play. Last Sunday at Tulsa, the netters went into doubles play sporting a 4-2 lead. They eventually won, but lost two of the three doubles matches.

But he said the Salukis' biggest concern next week is facing Auburn and South Alabama.

South Alabama is ranked 24th in the nation, and it has South African Pete Kuhn, who ranks 35th in the nation among singles players.

South Alabama is the second nationally ranked team the Salukis have played this spring. They lost 3-2 to 25th ranked Oklahoma State in exhibition earlier in the season.

The netters' next home match will be against Southwest Missouri State at the University Courts at 2 p.m. April 3.

Former Celtics guard Smith guilty in hit-and-run deaths

BOSTON (UPI) — Former Georgetown University star and Boston Celtics guard Charles Smith was convicted Thursday in the hit-and-run deaths of two Boston University students last year and was sentenced to 4 1/2 years in prison.

The Suffolk County Superior Court jury deliberated three days before finding Smith guilty on two counts of vehicular homicide and two counts of leaving the scene of a traffic fatality.

Smith, who did not testify in his own defense, addressed the families of the two women in a packed, emotionally charged courtroom just before the sentence was imposed.

"I'm very sorry for what happened," Smith said in a low voice. "It was an accident."

Smith said he and his family had joined in weekly prayer sessions since the accident and, "We were praying for you all to be able to get through this."

"No matter what happens," said Smith. "I will always be praying for you."

Coach of the year in Big East goes to Hoyas' leader

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Thompson's Georgetown Hoyas weren't given much of a chance to succeed in the Big East this season.

He thanked the media for that Thursday, accepting the Big East Coach of the Year award after the Hoyas finished in a three-way tie for first place in the conference.

"I want you to share in this award with me," Thompson told reporters attending the presentation of the award. "I used you as motivation all year."

Wheelchair basketball tournament to bring nation's top teams to SIUC

Sports Information

It's hardly the NCAA or the NIT, but SIUC is playing host to a basketball tournament this weekend.

The 15th annual National InterCollegiate Wheelchair Tournament will be at the Recreation Center Saturday and Sunday.

Four teams—the University of Illinois, Wright St., Texas-Arlington and SIUC—will compete in the meet. Top seeded Texas-Arlington will take on Wright St at noon Saturday while No. 2-seeded Illinois meets SIUC at 2 p.m. The losers play at 1 p.m. Sunday for third place, and the first-round winners meet at 3 p.m. in the championship game.

SIUC's basketball program for disabled students was revived just three years ago after having been a national power in the 1970s before being discontinued.

In fact, it's basketball team, now known as the Rolling Salukis, captured the national title in 1977 when they were known as the Squids.

Representing SIUC this weekend will be David Neiman, a sophomore from Chicago; Jason Lawrence, a junior from Mt. Prospect; Dan Lamer, a senior from Quincy; and Richard Swanson, a senior from Oak Park. The team also has four freshmen, Kelly Harasti of Cary, Earl Jordan of Chicago, Chris Millette of Grants Pass, Ore., and Jarvis Johnson of Chicago.

Although the U of I has been a power in wheelchair basketball, Texas-Arlington will be entering the tournament as the favorite after completing its conference schedule undefeated.

Steve Welch, the most valuable player in the tournament last year, averages 24 points a game, although Jason Van Beek is Arlington's top scorer with a 33-point average.

The Movin' Mavs have a 24-9 record with all nine of their losses coming at the hands of top-ranked teams.

SIUC's leaders are Nieman, who is averaging 13 points and 12 rebounds a game, and Jordan, a newcomer to the team, who is averaging 15 points, eight assists and eight rebounds a game since joining the team in mid-season.

The Illini bring a 4-5 record into their games against the Salukis Friday and Saturday, but their victories include a 14-5 win over Miami, Tuesday.

Illinois is led by infielder Scott Spiezic and outfielder Larry Sutton. Spiezic holds a .448 average with three home runs and six RBI in Illinois' first nine games. Sutton is hitting .361 with one homer and 8 RBI.

"I think we match up pretty well with Illinois," Riggelman said. "They have a solid group of young, talented players who are getting an opportunity to play and show what they can do."

Riggelman said the Salukis hope to fine tune their skills in Florida before coming home to begin the Missouri Valley Conference season.

"We are excited about going down there for the experience," he said. "This team is still young, and now it is full of players assuming different roles."

"The main thing we need to do at this time is play some games and gain some experience prior to Missouri Valley Conference, and this trip will accomplish that goal," Riggelman said.
