Three candidates participate in interviews

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Carl Bender, one of three finalists for vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement, presents himself to SIU students, staff, faculty and Carbondale community members Monday morning.

Candidates bring wide range of fundraising experience

BRYNN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The final three candidates for the vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement position are extensively qualified for the position and will demonstrate their "people skills" this week, meeting with University officials, students and Carbondale community members.

A search committee, led by Samuel Goldman, examined about 40 candidates in the past year at numerous meetings, and selected six finalists in January. The three finalists were named March 10.

searching for LEADERSHIP

"We have a very good, active committee," Goldman said. "We met on Friday nights and during the week for hours."

Goldman said the committee's hard work has paid off and the qualified candidates are proof.

"Each has a wealth of experience in capital campaign fundraising, dealing with several million dollars," he said. "Each [candidate] has a number of years experience in public relations, fundraising and alumni relations. Each comes from universities comparable in size and character to SIU."

The finalists are Carl M. 'Bud' Bender, associate vice president for development at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, Mich.; Ronda J. Johnson, vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas; and Rickey N. McCurry, associate vice chancellor for Development and Alumni Affairs at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Tenn.

Bender directed three mini-campaigns at the University of Western Michigan and launched a $125 million capital campaign.

Johnson would bring more than 22 years of fundraising experience with her, also a job description of Texas Tech's top institutional advancement officer, a position she has had since 1997.

Institutional Advancement

Open forums with vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement candidates will take place in Faner Hall's University Museum Auditorium as follows:

Today from 9 to 10 a.m.: Carl M. 'Bud' Bender
Thursday from 9 to 10 a.m.: Rickey N. McCurry
To be announced: Ronda J. Johnson

These forums are open to faculty, students and interested community members.

McCurry successfully completed a $175 million campaign with more than $235 million in gifts and pledges as vice chancellor at the University of Tennessee.

The acting vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement, Ray Lenzi, was one of the six finalists for the position, but was not named as a finalist.

"He was among the final six, and the three that were selected emerged — it's that simple," Goldman said.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson will consider suggestions from the search committee and the SIUC community before deciding upon the vice chancellor.

Jackson said the single most important characteristic the vice chancellor should have is a strong skill for private funding.

The vice chancellor position is responsible for private funding, fundraising, dealing with the Alumni Association and public relations.

Jackson said the final decision will be made before May.

Illinois presidential primaries today

Precincts expecting low voter turnout

JASON COKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With the presidential primary race already having been decided by some, and only one contested local race, Southern Illinois political observers are expecting a low voter turnout in Illinois' primary election today.

Jackson County's only contested race is for a Murphysboro precinct committeeman.

Turnout at the 64 precincts, or polling places, in the county is expected to be low, possibly only as high as 5,000 of the county's 84,000 registered voters, said Larry Reinhardt, Jackson County clerk.

"Most people are so busy," Reinhardt said. "A lot of people didn't know there was an election."

The polls will be open at 6 a.m., and will close at 6 p.m.

SIU man awaits hate crime hearing

Police investigating separate similar incident

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After allegedly breaking a man's arm, striking him in the head and dumping trash on him, an SIUC student awaits a preliminary hearing on charges he committed a hate crime off campus last month.

Next week, Daniel A. Paczynski will appear in Jackson County Court for a preliminary hearing on charges of aggravated battery and a hate crime after a man told police Paczynski broke his arm and hit him in the face.

The victim told police he heard homosexual slurs while being chased and attacked near his home in the 500 block of South Rawlings Street.

Only Paczynski has been identified in connection with the incident. Paczynski, who lives at the Sigma Pi fraternity house at 606 W. College St., is an SIUC junior from Hinsdale. He is not a member of the fraternity, and told police he saw the victim and thought he was a peeping Tom.

Police have heard complaints about men peeping through windows in the area, but the victim was apparently not involved in such activity. Carbondale police are also investigating a

Sexism still a heated topic today

History professor to lecture on roots of sexism

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

"You can't do that — you're a girl." Kay Carr is one woman asking why this childhood taunt has been a part of our lives for so long. Carr, a professor in history, seeks to expand people's minds about sexism in tonight's lecture "A True Woman is Pure: The Roots of Modern Sexism in America."

Because sexism is still a prevalent issue, Carr hopes her lecture will help people to realize what modern sexism is and where it came from. And, most importantly, why our society has thought this way for so many years.

"That's a tendency still today, to look at what women can do and what men can do rather than what individuals can do," Carr said. "What I want to do is go back and try to figure out why it is that we still have these views that encourage us socially to view people in gender-specific categories."

Carr defines "modern" sexism as the focus on a biological aspect of the differences between men and women. Before the Revolutionary War, sexism, Carr said, was "a traditional way of looking at it for religious reasons."

Old buildings are coming down this summer

New funding allows SIUC to destroy potentially dangerous structures

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

About 20 small SIUC structures will be demolished this fall at a cost of $250,000.

The Board of Trustees approved a resolution March 9 for the destruction of SIUC's deteriorated buildings and for funding from the Capital Development Board's statewide demolition fund.

Phil Gatton, University engineer, said the University conducted a survey to determine which buildings would cost more to repair than to demolish, and asked departments about any buildings with structural problems.

"The structures are just becoming dilapidated," Gatton said.

The buildings include about 10 storage buildings, structures at Touch of Nature, barns, and garages and houses at 654 Rowden Road, 2975 Chautauqua Road, 500 Lewis Lane and 908 Elizabeth St. This is the first time SIUC has demolished unused or dangerous buildings, Gatton said. In the past, SIUC has abandoned buildings when maintenance surpasses the building's usefulness.

Gatton said without funding from the Capital Development Board, it is probable these buildings would be left to rot.

"We don't typically have a funding method to tear structures down," Gatton said.

The survey was conducted after heavy snowfall collapsed the roof of a storage building in March 1999.

Two months later, SIUC requested assistance from the Capital Development Board for funding from the statewide demolition fund. The Capital Development Board allocated $250,000 to the University for the removal of the buildings.

"The fund is a recent addition to the Capital Development Board's resources."

"We were one of the first recipients of it," Gatton said.

The funding covers the demolition of the structures as well as any costs for asbestos removal. The buildings will continue to be demolished until funding is depleted. It is estimated the process will take about two months.

Research class finds students dissatisfied with SIU

Study conducted by a speech communication class asks undergraduates about SIU experience

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Do SIUC students go bar hopping because there just isn't anything else to do in Carbondale?

According to research done by a speech communication class last semester, the answer is yes. The class, SPCM 382 — "The Research Methods in Public Communication," used focus groups and surveys to learn about what most students think about the overall undergraduate experience.

The studies were conducted by a group of about 20 researchers from the class. They concentrated on sports, academics and social life. The studies found that while students are fairly content with the conditions in Carbondale, they are also somewhat dissatisfied.

Nilanjana Bardhan, associate professor in speech communication, taught the class last semester. Bardhan said the research was done very well and the researchers made some interesting discoveries including the students' opinions on sports at SIUC.

"The students seem to think Saluki spirit is not strong enough," Bardhan said. "They think there is not enough support."

In the academics category, students tend to think the classes are good, but too large and do not allow enough individual attention. They also said the general education courses take up way too much time. They also were dissatisfied with the clubs and organizations.

"They feel there are a lot of clubs and events going on, but they are not publicized enough," Bardhan said. "They usually don't find out about them until they read about it in the DAILY EGYPTIAN."

Another study that Bardhan found interesting is the one on Carbondale's social aspects. The study found that most students are dissatisfied with the social life in Carbondale because of the lack of culture in the town. Apparently, this drives them to the Strip and to hang out at bars. Bardhan hopes the city will work on providing more diverse entertainment for students.

To complete the task, research students had to take part in a focus group and a survey. The focus group had five or six students from different majors talking about what they think is important to undergraduates, with the researching students acting as mediators.

"The focus groups made them see that research can be a lot of fun," Bardhan said.

Then the students had to conduct surveys, usually by visiting different

Forum provides opportunity for SIUC community to make a contribution

Buildings are decaying, academic programs are scraping by and valuable faculty are developing a wandering eye as their salaries continue to linger below those at peer institutions. All of these problems, along with research status, innovation, and recruitment of students, come back to one issue. Maybe it is the root of all evil, but in the 21st century, it most certainly appears to be the root of all higher education: what we need is money.

This week, three very experienced individuals will be making appearances on campus, competing for the opportunity to get us that much-needed money. The search for a vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement has narrowed to Carl Bender, Ronda Johnson and Rickey McCurry — all from large public universities, and all having successfully run campaigns for more than $100 million in the past. The lucky winner will be responsible for bringing in funds from alumni and other private sources to help make SIUC a more competitive, attractive University.

SIUC has had an uneven attendance record in the past when it came to open forums for community, students and faculty to meet candidates for University positions. It has ranged from an appalling six people at a forum presenting a candidate for vice chancellor for Administration last June, to a room-filling 40 taking an interest in the vice chancellor of Academic Affairs in January.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN urges those who care about this University to be involved in every administrative search in every possible way. We aren't asking you to do a good deed, either. Get involved and educate yourself for your own selfish benefit, or you may regret not doing so. The community depends on SIUC as a source of jobs and city revenue. Students must realize SIUC's future is inextricably tied to the value of the diploma they walk away with. Many faculty and staff have put down roots in Carbondale, sending their children to its schools and voting in its elections. Even if they intend to leave one day, they too must do their part to maintain SIUC's reputation.

Only sitting across from the candidates can you get a true feel for vital attributes such as charisma and integrity. The DAILY EGYPTIAN can report the questions and answers for you to read the next day, but how can that compare to the initial reactions and facial expressions in response to real issues that matter to you.

A capable vice chancellor for Institutional Advancement can make the difference to SIUC's future. He or she can bring in dollars that can make up for the sometimes unpredictable and often disappointing government funding.

Now is a great time to start caring what is happening around this campus. So figure out what does matter to you, write up some hard-hitting questions and walk into those forums knowing what you're talking about. You just might make a difference.

One month isn't enough for black history

Guest Column

ANDREA PARKER

Andrea is a sophomore in journalism. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

There is no reason, and not enough time, for blacks to squeeze all of our history into a 28, sometimes 29, day month. It's impossible. If we allow ourselves to cram ideas, programs, speeches, plays, or whatever we have planned to do for the month, then it is possible that we can lose sight of what we are celebrating and end up just doing something because it's tradition. I do not think that it is fair to our ancestors, this country or to us.

I do not mean to come off harsh, but I have grown tired of seeing this month come and go without feeling — I mean really feeling — what the spirit of black history means to this country, let alone the black citizens of this country. Well, we get up and talk about the usual. How

Dr. King gave speeches across the country and believed in non-violence, how Rosa Parks didn't give up her seat for a white man, how blacks were sprayed with fire hoses and were bitten by dogs for their freedom. We hear how slaves were stolen from Africa and sent to this country to labor to the bone for free and how Harriet Tubman freed 300 slaves without ever getting caught. Please don't get me wrong, I love to hear how we as blacks overcame. Still, we have other stories besides that to talk about.

We can discuss in-depth how blacks were unable to vote, died to vote, and compare it to the lack of African-American voters today. We can discuss how blacks were not permitted to read or write, but had a strong desire to learn, and compare that to the many blacks who won't pick up a book to read unless it's for class. That would be something new.

Also, another common aspect that happens during Black History Month that I'm not too fond of is we all say, "Black History Month is not just celebrated in February, but every day of the year." Yeah, right. If that were true, why is it that I don't see any schools, television networks (especially Black Entertainment Television) or radio stations pay tribute to International students should pay their share

DEAR EDITOR:

Mr. Lakhani, president of the International Student Council, doesn't think he should have to pay a $95 fee so that the Immigration and Naturalization Service can keep track of (international students). So, I am guessing that Mr. Lakhani, and the other protesting foreign students, would rather have me, a U.S. taxpayer citizen, pay for their foreign study expenses.

Does Mr. Lakhani still plan to purchase his own airline ticket home upon graduation, or would he like me to pay for that, too?

Sorry, Mr. Lakhani, my heart and wallet just don't seem to have enough capacity for your woes. My suggestion to you as president of the ISC is to find a more significant issue to fuss about — like the price of beer, theater tickets or gasoline. If the cost of coming to the United States is too costly, perhaps you could choose another country for your education and leave space in our American colleges for the thousands of U.S. citizens who are finding it more and more difficult to get into an American college.

Bringing back Halloween, a smart move for the city

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing in regard to the story about bars being open on Halloween in the March 9 edition of the DAILY EGYPTIAN. I think that the bars being open on Halloween break will bring much needed revenue to the City of Carbondale. This could only be a plus for the community.

When the bars and liquor stores open, everyone around benefits. Students will now likely stay in Carbondale for Halloween, which will keep dollars in Carbondale. With the students staying, restaurants and other stores will reap the benefits. This action was a "smart move" on behalf of the City Council.

As students and adults, it is our duty to embrace this opportunity that we have been awarded. It is our responsibility to be civil as well.

We must take this opportunity to show the City Council that we are mature enough to handle the old tradition. It is the student's responsibility to refrain from littering, refrain from fighting, and most of all, have a great time. It sounds like we only have one chance at this, so let's prevent them from taking it away.

Suggestions taken for campus improvement

Students, faculty and staff use forum to extend ideas

BYRNN SCOTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Michael Hepner chose to attend SIUC rather than the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana because of its beauty. Monday he took action to continue to attract prospective students to select SIUC rather than other universities in the future.

Hepner participated in a project called the "Campus Land Use Plan" Monday, dedicated to improving campus appearance.

Seven goals were developed during a collaboration between the Denver-based Civitas Developmental Group Inc., and the Committee. Concerning the Campus Environment and are written on the boards where Hepner placed his suggestions.

The project allows students, staff and faculty to vote on the importance of seven goals provided by the University and Civitas for improving the campus's appearance. In its initial phase of gathering input from the entire University, the program will eventually improve campus appearance step by step.

Voters can give suggestions by placing colored "sticker dots" on the boards where they see needs for improvements on campus and where they think strong points are on the campus. Votes can also be placed on the Campus Land Use Plan website at www.pso.siu.edu/enviro.

Civitas is a firm dedicated to examining land-use concerns. The group has worked with numerous universities on similar projects for campus appearance improvements.

Hepner, a senior in English and classics from Bishop Hill, said the environmental features on SIUC's campus led him to his decision to become a Saluki, and continued maintenance of the University is essential.

"The reason I didn't go to the University of Illinois was because it's ugly compared to SIUC," Hepner said.

Locations on campus where students, faculty and staff can input suggests, are the Student Center, the Recreation Center, Lentz and Trueblood dining halls, Life Science II, the Agriculture Building, Morris Library, the Engineering Building, the Communications Building and at the Plant and Service Operation's lunchroom. Voting began Monday and ends Friday.

Goals highlighted by the boards include: the importance of a pleasant first impression of SIUC, improving the natural environment, campus interior and exterior improvements, enhancing campus athletics and recreation, and making the campus pedestrian-friendly.

Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard was impressed Monday, when about 60 people — mostly students — placed votes on the boards in the first 20 minutes.

Committee continues to investigate allegations

USG president still under investigation

GIMNY SKALSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Undergraduate Student Government Internal Affairs Committee continues to look into allegations made by several senators about USG President Sean Henry.

Internal Affairs Committee Chairman Chuck Miller distributed an introductory report of the investigation at the March 1 USG meeting. Miller did not elaborate on the specific allegations, but instead informed the Senate that an investigation is being conducted.

Miller said the six-page report contained information about the status of the Internal Affairs Committee's investigation.

"The reason the intro report was given to the Senate was to clear up any misunderstandings that were possibly present between members of USG and the Internal Affairs Committee," Miller said. "The report was also a list of factual information provided to the Senate to let it know where the committee is."

The report states the committee decided to investigate the original allegations charging Henry with extensive funding from USG to a fraternity he now belongs to, not reporting the summer budget at the first Senate meeting and delays in getting the budget to senators, missing expenditures in the summer budget, appointing an executive member without the consent of the Senate, and employing a public relations director to work from home.

The committee dismissed all of the allegations, except for the one concerning the reporting of the budget, at its meeting Feb. 15 after receiving a letter from Henry stating why each of the allegations were false and were not constitutional violations or acts of misconduct.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN reported Feb. 17 that the Internal Affairs Committee decided to only pursue the allegation about the budget because it is "a direct violation of the USG Constitution."

Because the minutes from the first meeting reflect that Henry presented the budget, the Internal Affairs Committee has obtained the SPCTV video of that meeting for review to see if Henry did present the budget as he claims.

Miller was not able to comment on the content of the video.

Student's website cleared from legal trouble

*SIU Attorneys
now say SiuLife.com
broke no laws*

DAVID FERRAR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

University attorneys dropped legal threats against a student who started a website with "Siu" in its address.

The day SiuLife.com was launched, SIU legal counsel Peter Ruger said he planned to look into filing litigation against the founder, Tim Beechler, for copyright infringements.

That was March 1. But since then Shari Rhode, also with University legal counsel, has been investigating the website. Rhodes said she examined copyright and trademark laws, looked at the website and discussed the possibility of a suit with colleagues.

"It doesn't seem to me at this point that Mr. Beechler has done anything but express his opinion," Rhode said.

And, Rhode says, as long as the 27-year-old from Peoria studying management information systems stays within the copyright and trademark boundaries, he will be fine.

Beechler has maintained confidence that he did not violate any laws since he launched the site March 1.

He says he discussed the site with his attorney before he went public.

The content of Beechler's site became the linchpin in media attention because it originally featured two SIUC women in limited clothing. One of the women bowed out of a verbal agreement to appear on the site after her pictures were displayed the first day. And the photographs of the other woman have not been shown on SiuLife.com for weeks. Beechler said Monday he is working with other models to appear in future editions of the site. The site also has an open forum for students to post messages about teachers they feel are inadequate.

With the University's acronym in the website's address, University attorneys thought they should investigate.

"I was never really concerned about a lawsuit," Beechler said. "I knew that the University didn't have a legal case against me."

But when he heard the threats from the University, Beechler tweaked the acronym's meaning some for precautionary measures. SiuLife.com now stands for "Students It's Ur Life."

"Once I have something like that up there, there's no way they can touch me," Beechler said. "We all know what SIU stands for, but that's the beauty of the language."

Just days before spring break, Rhode said she was talking with people on decisions to pursue legal action. But she said Monday Beechler is "well within his rights to do that the way he's done so far."

While he was initially "baffled" by the threat of a lawsuit, Beechler says his clearance is a "big advancement" for students down here. This whole website is about students' rights.

Social work awarded with honors

Social Work Day honors students and staff

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The annual NASW Social Work Day took place Monday in the Student Center Ballrooms, to celebrate National Professional Social Work Month.

A luncheon and awards ceremony took place to honor those who have made certain achievements in the field of social work. These achievements included district social worker of the year, undergraduate student of the year, graduate student of the year and foster parents of the year.

A workshop was also presented that afternoon by two individuals in the field of social work, Sheila Simon and Mary Hughes, on how to use legal and practical considerations when representing a victim of domestic violence.

Martin Tracy, director of social work, said he was very pleased with the events and the attendance of more than 100 people.

"I think it went very well," Tracy said. "I think it had a really nice turnout," Tracy said.

Those receiving awards were Christi Simmons for social worker of the year, Sam Goldman for district citizen of the year, Sunshyne Albers and Jennifer Guse for undergraduate student of the year and Jonathan Bott for graduate student of the year.

Other awards went to Mary Lou Loos for field supervisor of the year as well as Larry and Laurie Barbre for foster parents of the year. Another award was presented to Clara McClure for lifetime achievement. Other categories included awards for media service, non-traditional student of the year and one for social work alumni achievement.

Mary Nemetsky, administration assistant in social work, said the luncheon was successful and ran smoothly. The day was a big event for the School of Social Work.

The event was sponsored by the National Association of Social Workers, Southern Illinois District, and the SIUC School of Social Work.

Fire claims 'three lives in Bloomsburg

MICHELLE M. MARTINEZ
KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

A fire destroyed a fraternity house near Bloomsburg University early Sunday morning, killing three people who officials say they believe were students.

As of late Sunday, the Columbia County coroner had not identified the bodies recovered from the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) house on East Fourth Street in this east-central Pennsylvania college town. The coroner is waiting for dental records, officials said.

"They're relatively sure that they know" the identities, Sgt. Leo Sokoloski said last night. "But they aren't going to release those names."

Six males were in the home at the time of the fire, Bloomsburg

Police Chief Larry Smith said yesterday at a news conference at the university.

One resident escaped through a second-floor window, and the other two may have gotten out through the front door, he said. The cause of the fire was not known last night.

Yesterday's was the second major fraternity-house blaze at the 7,500-student university in almost five and one half years. In 1994, a morning fire at the Beta Sigma Delta house killed five students, prompting Bloomsburg town and university officials to form a task force to draft safety recommendations for students living off campus.

The parents of the three fraternity-house residents who had not been accounted for are in Bloomsburg awaiting word about their children, said university president Jessica Kozloff. The coroner's office could be able to identify the bodies as early as today, she said.

The Bloomsburg Police Department received an emergency call about the fire at 6:05 a.m., and officials arrived in less than a minute to find the fraternity house engulfed in flames, Sokoloski said.

"By the way that the fire burned and how fast it burned and how hot it burned, it's going to make it difficult for our investigators and the fire marshals to determine the origin of the fire," Sokoloski said.

Smith said there had been a gathering at the fraternity house the night before, and some were still awake at 3:30 a.m., when there were six people in the house.

He estimated that firefighters stopped pumping water into the home about 11 a.m.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN was unable to obtain a copy of the video of the first Senate meeting to see if the final allegation is true.

The committee's report outlined the steps it has followed since Feb. 8, when the allegations were filed against Henry.

The report begins with a copy of an e-mail sent to Henry on Feb. 10 informing him of the committee's decision to conduct a formal investigation.

After the Internal Affairs Committee received Henry's letter, it decided to dismiss four of the allegations "based on lack of submitted information and seriousness of charges." The report also stated that "though some of the dismissed allegations were improper, they did not warrant formal impeachment."

The report also stated the allegations would not be entirely ignored because more information regarding the funding of Henry's fraternity, the presentation of the budget and the employment of an executive staff member out of home had been brought to their attention.

The report also contained information about steps the committee would likely take in pursuing the allegations including submitting a mandate to the Senate that sets guidelines the committee should follow in its investigation.

The mandate has not been submitted to the Senate; according to the report, because it is pending the Internal Affairs Committee consent.

The report also includes a letter Henry wrote to the committee stating he would veto any "mandates, guidelines or any other legislation that would allow the Internal Affairs Committee to conduct investigations regarding constitutional violations because the Judicial Board has original and exclusive jurisdiction on such matters."

Henry said the time the committee is putting into this investigation should be spent on more constructive things, like trying to maintain the mass transit system on-campus.

"The allegations in my opinion were silly and just personal attacks against me," Henry said. "I'm not going to waste time arguing with the Internal Affairs Committee when I could be working for the students."

In addition to presenting where the committee is and where it wants to go, the report also states Henry's responses to each of the letters he received from the committee.

According to the report, Henry e-mailed a response to each of the Internal Affairs Committee members stating he was concerned the investigation is not being handled properly because the "committee is not a judicial body of USG."

The USG Constitution states the Judicial Board, which is composed of a chief justice and six other USG members, "have original and exclusive jurisdiction in all cases involving alleged violations or regarding interpretation of applicable provisions contained in the Constitution." The USG Constitution does not outline any such powers for the Internal Affairs Committee, it only states that the committee "shall be concerned with the internal workings, guidelines and procedures of USG" and "shall try impeachment proceedings against any member of USG for dereliction of duty." This means the Internal Affairs Committee can only try impeachment proceedings for those who neglect their position, not for constitutional violations.

Miller said since the Constitution does state that the committee can try impeachment against any member of USG, the president does qualify.

He also said the Internal Affairs Committee passed a motion at its meeting March 7 to present a formal report to the Senate which included information about the allegations and any information that pertains to

ANN ARBOR, MICH.

For U. of Michigan students, 'Greed' is good

"Greed" was the name of the game for University of Michigan students eager to score a different form of financial aid.

The Fox television network's popular game show is conducting a national search for college students to participate in an upcoming collegiate edition of the show. Among the campuses they're scouring are the universities of Indiana and Wisconsin and Ohio State and Penn State universities. Producers are aiming to develop four-member teams from four different conferences -- Atlantic Coast Conference, Big Ten, Ivy League and Pacific Ten.

More than 300 hopefuls vying for the show's grand prize of $2 million jammed into a smoke-filled bar in Ann Arbor last week to answer a 24-question, multiple-choice quiz in 45 minutes or less. The questions were similar to those found on the show -- tricky, "but not rocket science" -- one "Greed" staff member said. The quiz continually increased in difficulty, culminating in a series of "which-four-of-these-seven-are-correct" type of questions.

About 50 students whose scores beat an unannounced cutoff were asked to stay for a second round of interviews and a mock game of "Greed." Everyone else was thanked and dismissed.

What are producers looking for?

When all is said and done, fewer than 10 students from UM will be invited April 10 to appear on the show.

The college version of "Greed" will be taped April 14th and will air in early May.

Sessions on empathy help SIU medical students learn to deal with patients

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When patients are in times of distress, they are not always just in need of physical or medical assistance. In many cases, they are simply looking for emotional and mental aid.

These ideas on empathy and spirituality are what J. Kevin Dorsey, associate provost and clinical professor for the SIU School of Medicine, is dealing with in his Empathy 101 sessions.

The SIU School of Medicine was pronounced as one of five recipients of a $25,000 John Templeton Foundation Spirituality and Medicine Curricular award in February to be distributed during a four-year period.

The Templeton grant is to aid in the teaching of patient-centered care and how to treat the whole person — body, mind and spirit. It also focuses on cultural differences and openness to difference.

Dorsey said with the help of Lisabeth DiLalla, associate professor for the Department of Psychiatry, and Sharon Hall, assistant dean for Student Affairs for first-year students, he put together a 10-page proposal that stated what the school wanted to do, the faculty members involved and why they wanted to do it.

"I think one reason we were able to get the grant is that we are in the process of revising our entire four-year curriculum," Dorsey said. "We are calling it C2000 — Curriculum 2000. We want to add empathy into all four years."

DiLalla said five years ago, she and Dorsey began an empathy session called Empathy 101. In the session, first-year medical students read literature that dealt with empathy, and then met with DiLalla and Dorsey to discuss it. With the growth in popularity of the sessions, the course is now being taught all four years of medical school.

"Our goal is to graduate medical students who haven't lost what they started with," said DiLalla. "We address issues on care and comfort of patients."

With this grant, Dorsey plans to expand on this already existing empathy course. It will now include spirituality, loss of life and cross cultural problems.

DiLalla said the grant will also be used to fund the collection of data on how students, physicians and nurses rate in empathy, wellness and spirit in medicine. Students will be pre-tested before starting the empathy sessions and then tested after each year to check their progress. They will then compare the test results of students who took the empathy courses and those who did not take the courses to see if they are

"What we want is for students to become good listeners who can give the best possible care to patients," Dorsey said. "We want our students to be caring, compassionate individuals."

COE conducts health education and recreation jamboree

Students to learn career opportunities, meet faculty and alumni

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Faculty members from the College of Education and the Health Education and Recreation Department have been blissful as they continue to prepare a day of fun-filled, health activities for prospective students and families.

The College and Health Education and the Recreation Department are presenting the "Health Education and Recreation Jamboree" from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Saturday, April 8. Taking place in the Wham-Pulliam Breezeway and Pulliam Gymnasium, the event will also prepare students for the curriculum and college life at SIUC, said Kim Little, coordinator of recruitment and retention for the college.

A welcome program by the college, the jamboree is primarily geared toward students interested in health education and recreation majors, but is open to a wide range of students.

"Everyone is welcome," Little said. "If you've thought about careers or what kind of salary ranges you would have with health education or recreation major, this would be a wonderful opportunity to see some demonstrations and exhibits and meet faculty and alumni."

The activities will include, test your health and recreation knowledge, quizzes, presentations on student disabilities, first aid and CPR dummy exhibits and audio/visual displays of various department majors by health and recreation students, said Joe Teaff, professor in health and recreation.

"We're trying to show what we have, which are excellent programs at the undergraduate level that we are very supportive of," Teaff said. "And at the same time, we're trying to focus on more options to help the issue of recruitment and retention for us here in health education and in recreation."

The use of demonstrations and exhibits will be a first by the college and the department in their attempt to promote their many educational programs.

"We're hoping to set a precedent with this [jamboree]," Little said. "We have great faculty and staff, as well as academic advisers, who are all more than willing to help the students in any way that we can. This is just one way we can do that."

group of people here [in the college] to help them stay here and be successful and complete their degree," Little said.

Meeting an average of once every two weeks, faculty members from the college have planned the jamboree for months to prepare a good, strong program, Little said.

"Because our students are so important to us, we wanted to make sure that we give them the best service available," Little said. "We really want to make it clear to them that they can have the best university experience as possible."

The students, as well as family members, are invited to the educational event for the purpose of helping them understand the benefits of majoring within the college and department.

"We're interested in having parents to come because this is going to be an opportunity for parents to see where their child will be, what kind of courses they are going to be involved with," Teaff said.

"What we want to do is say biology has made them that way," Carr said. "This reliance on science as the final judge and applying it to the genders has made it difficult to break out of that way of looking at [our] differences."

Jonathan Bean, a history professor, said he will try to attend the lecture out of curiosity of its content. Bean disagrees that sexism is a severe problem for women today, but concedes the topic is still an issue.

"Sexism is a live debate and there is a question of how much it's holding women back," Bean said. "I think it's exaggerated."

Bean has "read both sides" of the issue and pointed out that even some women blame such sexism problems on the choices of each individual woman.

Bean wonders that the other half of the debate, men who suffer from sexism, is all too often ignored, citing author Warren Farrell who wrote "The Myth of Male Power" as an excellent source of the male view of sexism. Because the world we live in is not utopian, discrimination will always be a problem, Bean said.

"There are those who make a living out of group grievances and it's in their self-interest to continue," Bean said. "Everybody's discriminated against because of their gender, race, IQ or lack of ability."

Beverly Stitt, the director for Women's Studies, said while talks like this improve people's awareness, which is the first step toward improvement, one lecture on one evening is a tedious way to do it.

"I don't think there's any other way, and that's a long, slow process," Stitt said. "We have our culture all day long for the rest of the year. We get bombarded with the opposite message."

Women's Services invited Carr to lecture for Women's History Month. Sexism, Carr said, is a large part of women's history and change is still required.

"I hope it makes people think about why we think the way we do," she said.

RESEARCH

classrooms asking the same questions.

After the research was completed, the students had to give presentations about their findings. Bardhan described them as being very professional and said she was very impressed.

Bardhan said the class not only found important information with its research but it provides a learning experience to the students as well.

She said it is very important to get students to overcome fear of conducting research and teaching them its importance.

Jodi Golden, a junior in public relations from Danville, took the class last year and did research on the social aspects of Carbondale life.

"I think the class helped me out a lot," Golden said. "It taught me how to do formal research."

Bardhan thinks the class is a very important one to take and can help students after they graduate.

"Many students leave college not knowing the importance of research," Bardhan said. "I'm just glad to know we are still able to offer this class."

Bardhan thinks simple solutions can be found. She thinks the simplest solution for the problems about campus events and venturing from bar to bar is publicizing.

Bardhan said if the clubs publicize their events more, and the University tries harder to advertise activities that do not involve alcohol, some of these problems may have solutions.

IMPROVEMENT

The boards were officially unveiled in front of the University Bookstore at noon.

Poshard said the land use plan is proving to be successful.

"[The project] gives maximum opportunity for folks to participate," Poshard said. "We will take campus input into consideration very seriously."

Paul Restivo, director of the Center for Environmental Health and Safety, said students were enthusiastic when asked for their input to the program.

"It was a 'Wow, you're asking me?' type of reaction," Restivo said.

Restivo said students appreciated that any decisions about what should actually be improved on campus were not only "made on high."

Suggestions from students, faculty and staff will mesh with ideas from Civitas to create the final plan, to be completed in writing by Civitas by June 30.

That's a tendency still today, to look at what women can do and what men can do rather than what individuals can do. What I want to do is go back and try to figure out why it is we still have these views that encourage us socially to view people in gender-specific categories.

RETIREMENT INSURANCE MUTUAL FUND TRUST SERVICE FINANCIAL

Deferring taxes with TIAA-CREF can be so rewarding, you'll wonder why you didn't do it sooner.

One of the fastest ways to build a retirement nest egg is through tax-deferred Supplemental Retirement Annuities (SRAs) from TIAA-CREF.

With funds automatically deducted from your paycheck, you can easily build income to supplement your pension and Social Security.

And your contributions to SRAs grow undiminished by taxes until you withdraw the funds! Add to that TIAA-CREF's solid investment performance, bolstered by our commitment to keeping expenses low, and you have more money working for you.

So why wait? Let us help you build a comfortable retirement today with tax-deferred SRAs. We think you will find it rewarding in the years to come.

PRIMARIES

There are 35,000 active registered voters and 49,000 eligible registered voters in Jackson County.

An active voter is someone who is registered and currently living at the residence in which they registered at. An eligible voter is a person, such as a student, who previously registered at one address then moved, Reinhardt said. He said eligible voters must file an affidavit by election day proving they still live in Jackson County if they want to vote here.

Glenn Poshard, interim vice chancellor for Administration, said the presidential primary draws many voters, but Illinois elections are so late in the primary season it does not have much of a say in deciding who the Democratic and Republican candidates will be.

Democratic Vice President Al Gore and Republican Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the two main remaining candidates in today's election, have already received enough delegates to clinch their parties' nominations.

However, Bush does have a rival in former Reagan administration official Alan Keyes, who is actively running in the Republican ballot.

Democrat Bill Bradley, former senator from New Jersey, and Republican John McCain, senator from Arizona, were also main candidates; but dropped out of the race in early March.

Poshard said Bradley and McCain are still on the ballot since they ended their campaigns only a short time ago.

For all intensive purposes, Poshard said, Illinois has no say in who will be the Democratic and Republican candidates.

"Illinois is relatively late compared to states like New Hampshire and California and North Carolina," Poshard said. "The states that have the earliest primaries have a lot more say than Illinois."

Yet, the nominees are not formal and legal until the conventions, said John Jackson, interim chancellor for SIUC.

Voters still decide the delegates who will go to the conventions to officially decide the candidates. These delegates additionally write their party platforms, and plan the strategy for the general election. But, since the candidates are already chosen, it means turnout should be fairly low.

"Unfortunately," Jackson said, "it's made our primary pretty uninteresting."

Jackson said all people should vote. Bush and Gore disagree on many issues, such as the environment, gun control and abortion. Jackson described the two men as being "in the mainstream" of the Democratic and the Republican parties.

"The candidates differ on a lot of important issues," Jackson said.

Mike Lawrence, associate director of the SIU Public Policy Institute, agrees with Jackson. He said Gore and Bush are each very qualified to be president.

He said all people should vote in today's election because it shows the candidates and the parties there are concerned citizens out here.

"People ought to vote," Lawrence said. "It's always important to vote and express your opinions at the polls whether it's decided or not."

The final presidential election will be Nov. 7.

HATE CRIME

hate crime that was apparently related to an incident that left an SIUC woman with a broken jaw. Apparently unrelated to the Rawlings Street incident but possibly the second hate crime within a three day period, a man told police he was attacked outside a party on Beveridge Street Feb. 20 in retaliation for an incident at Gatsby's II Bar & Billiards, 610 S. Illinois Ave. Two men allegedly battered a woman inside the bar because she would not dance with them. The men arrested in that incident were black and the victim in the assault on Beveridge street said that is why he was beaten.

Police have made no arrests in connection with the Beveridge street attack.

Teen pleads guilty to massacre

JON BURESTEIN
KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

PORT LAUTERDALE, FLA. —

The Royal Palm Beach High School student who fantasized about turning his school into a killing zone pleaded guilty Friday to asking classmates to help him in the planned massacre.

Derek Lehman, 17, was sentenced to five years' probation with a litany of conditions, including taking a Holocaust education course, after pleading guilty to the only charge he faced — solicitation to shoot into a building. Under his deal with the State Attorney's Office, the charge will be wiped from Lehman's record if he successfully completes probation.

Speaking in a soft but unwavering voice, the teen-ager told a Palm Beach County judge that his "anger at everyone" prompted him to begin plotting an "attack" similar to last year's Columbine High School shootings.

Authorities first became aware of Lehman's plans to kill as many people as possible when three of his classmates reported on Feb. 2 that he had tried to coax them into joining him.

After Palm Beach County school police pulled Lehman from a class that morning, he admitted he was fascinated with Adolf Hitler and the Columbine massacre that left 13 dead. He wondered what it would be like to see someone die. Lehman denied ever planning to hurt anyone, saying that these previous statements were intended to point out security shortcomings at the school.

His interview with investigators led them to search his house and find a journal with a map on the school tucked inside. Notes on the side of the map laid out plans to kill between 25 and 40 people and wound more.

Besides his statements and writings, Lehman attempted to buy hunting rifles from friends or have classmates agree to buy him guns when they turned 18. Each time, he was rebuffed.

Michelle Suskauer, Lehman's attorney, said his behavior was that of a troubled youth crying out for help. Lehman has never even held a gun, she said.

"He never intended to hurt anyone, and he didn't hurt anyone," Suskauer said. "There were no weapons ever found. They were just words. They were hurtful words, but just words."

Suskauer said she feared that if the case went to trial, he wouldn't have been able to get an impartial jury in Palm Beach County or anywhere else in the country.

"Currently with what's been going on with school violence and Columbine, it (Lehman's case) just struck a raw nerve," she said.

Lehman and his parents declined to comment on the case after the hearing.

Assistant State Attorney Al Johnson said prosecutors carefully deliberated over offering the plea deal before concluding it was the best resolution to the case.

"There's a thin line between thinking about a crime, fantasizing about a crime and committing a crime," he said. "That's the crucial thing here."

The plea deal calls for Lehman to spend six months under house arrest with an electronic monitor. He must successfully complete his daily mental health therapy. He must attend a Holocaust education program and write a letter of apology to Royal Palm Beach High School.

In addition, he can have no contact with any witnesses in the case, no Internet access, no uninvited contact with the Palm Beach County School District and he cannot possess any weapons.

Lehman currently is home-schooled while his expulsion hearing is pending, Suskauer said. She said she hopes that the B-average student can be placed in an alternative education program.

Chief Jim Kelly of the Palm Beach County School Police Department said he strongly believes Lehman would have followed through with his plans if he hadn't been stopped.

"He was angry," Kelly said. "Basically the typical student involved in these cases (school shootings) had been victimized by his peers. They contemplate options and for some it could suicide, while for others it could be getting revenge."

Prior to his arrest, Lehman had seen a psychiatrist. He told police that he was depressed because "I don't see myself having a very happy life. I'm not happy now."

Lehman told friends that he had a hit list of people who had antagonized him, but authorities never found one.

Though one of Lehman's friends told police that no one really made fun of him, "but just no one... was particularly interested in what he had to say."

In late January, friends said Lehman began talking about "shooting about the school" and that's when he started asking for help getting guns. About that same time, he started his journal and picked up the map of the school.

Johnson said that while it's unclear what Lehman might have done, the one bright spot in the case is that his classmates reported him to school officials.

"They realized his statements were too serious to ignore," Johnson said. "Those students are the heroes in this case."

Softball scores successful spring break

Salukis win Missouri Invitational, finish 10-4 during recess

COREY CUBICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU softball team finished its nine-day, 14-game spring break tour with an impressive 10-4 mark, highlighted by a Missouri Invitational championship.

The Salukis began the break at the Invitational in Columbia, Mo., going 5-1 en route to winning championship honors. SIU won the event against some top-notch softball programs, including the University of Missouri and Missouri Valley Conference foe, the University of Northern Iowa.

Junior first baseman Netty Hallahan led the charge offensively, going 5-for-17 with two home runs and three RBIs, while senior hurler Carisa Winters compiled a record of 3-0 with two saves.

Winters, who dons a 7-4 record, fanned 38 batters in a mere 23 innings of work, including 16 in a complete game shutout of Northern Iowa.

Hallahan and Winters earned MVC Player and Pitcher of the Week honors last week for their efforts at the Invitational, and also the praise of their head coach.

"Netty has been like our clutch kid. Two outs, runners in scoring position and she's been getting them in," Saluki head coach Kerri Blaylock said. "Carisa really came into her own that weekend."

From Missouri, the Salukis (17-8) voyaged to the South for a doubleheader with Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Fla., where the two teams split a pair of pitching duels. Florida Atlantic was an NCAA qualifier last season and is tough again this year.

In game one, Winters shut down Florida Atlantic, striking out 13 in the 1-0 victory. Junior pitcher/designated player Erin Stremster provided a game-winning RBI double in the sixth inning.

In game two, however, it was Florida Atlantic pitcher Heather Wright's turn for the pitching dynamics. Wright no-hit the Salukis in the 2-0 setback. Wright was only one out shy from a perfect game, but a two-out seventh inning walk to Stremster proved to be her lone flaw.

"That kid's tough," Blaylock said of Wright. "We were happy to get a split against a team like that."

Following the brief stint at Florida Atlantic, the Salukis continued their Florida swing by traveling to Clearwater for a competitive South Florida Tournament.

SIU opened the tournament with a win over Big 10 powerhouse Purdue University, 7-3. Blaylock said SIU should have shut the Boilermakers out, if not for some "shaky" defense.

Led by an offensive surge throughout the lineup, SIU continued its solid play with a 4-0 defeat of Canisius College and a 5-1 victory over Seton Hall University.

"We had several multiple hit games from several different players," Blaylock said.

The only team to defeat SIU was the host team, the University of South Florida, which was only one game away from the NCAA World Series last season.

South Florida beat SIU twice, but neither win came without a fight. The first game was a 2-0 setback, while the second was 3-2.

Blaylock was pleased with her team's effort all break and is looking forward to some home cooking when the Salukis play host to the Saluki Invitational this weekend.

"I think we're seeing good things from a lot of people," Blaylock said. "I think finishing 10-4 over the break is great considering some of the teams we competed against."

Spring break keeps Saluki in shape

Juniors Tanya Dolgovska and Caryn Poliquin lead women's track and field at Florida State Relays

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIU women's track and field coach Don DeNoon thought taking the Salukis to Florida during spring break was a good way to prepare his team for the upcoming outdoor season.

The Salukis trained and competed in the 2000 Florida State Relays, an unscored meet, in Tallahassee, Fla. More than 40 teams competed in the event, which took place March 15-18.

"I thought we came out of it with some good marks," DeNoon said. "If we didn't take the trip, everybody would have gone home and wouldn't have had any supervised training at all."

Dangerous weather conditions Thursday slowed down competition in some events. SIU junior Caryn Poliquin was pulled out of the hammer throw before the finals, but still managed to finish second (160-11) overall. She also placed fourth (122-08) in the discus.

One top performer for the Salukis was junior Tanya Dolgovska (1:00.81), who finished second in the 400-meter hurdles.

"The best overall performance was Tanya," DeNoon said. "There were close to 60 competitors in each event, so to finish second in an event is a strong indication of her ability."

Other productive Salukis included freshman Ruma Turevsky's fifth-place finishes in the triple jump (38-8 3/4) and the long jump (18-5). Freshman Latrice Gray (5-4 1/4) placed sixth in the high jump.

DeNoon and the Salukis are back in Carbondale, and are looking forward to competing in their next home meet, the 2000 Southern Illinois Collegiate Track and Field Series Meet Saturday.

DeNoon hopes the Salukis show the benefits of their week in Florida.

"Spring break is important for two things, but the most important thing is to train," DeNoon said. "So we trained hard all week, and that was really positive — good hard training."

Overall, Cornell was pleased with the results during spring break.

He would like to see continuous progress from the team, as the Salukis will be in action again this weekend at home in the 2000 Southern Illinois Collegiate Track and Field Series Meet.

"I think the team pulled together," Cornell said. "I just hope the weather improves for this weekend."

“We had a pretty successful trip. We had a super Friday, and performance-wise, we were happy.”

Good weather, good showing

Women's golf ties for fifth in Snowbird

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While the warm, sunny rays drove Tampa Bay's temperature into the 80s last week, the sunshine seemed to have the same effect on the SIU women's golf team, whose play also heated up.

The warm temperature readings were not likely to break any records in Florida at this time of the year, but they did manage to set the stage for the Salukis to score a second-round score of 307 — third best in school history — tying the University of Illinois for an overall fifth-place finish.

SIU finished with a score of 627. Arkansas State University (612) placed first, Iowa State University (614) came in second and both the University of North Texas and Sam Houston State University tied for third with a score of 617.

The fact that every Saluki player shot at least one round in the 70s allowed for a second-day rally after SIU shot 320 as a team on day one.

"Every one of my players is capable of shooting in the mid-70s at the same time, but doing it is another thing," SIU coach Diane Daugherty said. "Especially under pressure, because sometimes the harder you try to do things, they don't always go [the way you want them]."

Sophomore Allison Hiller led the Salukis, averaging 77 for both days, which placed her 14th overall in the tournament individually.

"I just tried to remain relaxed and focused," Hiller said.

Freshman Andrea Turner followed Hiller's lead with a solid performance that landed her in 25th place overall.

Turner attributes the success to the team's upbeat morale. "We went down there with positive attitudes and we believed in ourselves, and hung in there and fought it out," Turner said.

Senior Andrea Walker, who finished third individually for the Salukis and placed 28th overall in the tournament, said the team's eagerness to take advantage of the balmy conditions was a key to success.

"On day two, we went out with the mindset that we can win this," Walker said. "The wind had died down and it was beautiful golf weather, and we decided that we could make some numbers."

enough to win (more than once)," Callahan said. "It's nice to get a win against a team like Wichita, but at the same time, our guys weren't happy."

SIU (9-9) will play host to Saint Louis University at 2 p.m. today.

Many of the problems SIU has had center around some of the Salukis' established hitters struggling to find their stroke. Jeff Houston (.171), Anthony Jones (.200) and Jeff Stanek (.211) are examples of Saluki hitters who have been having a rough go of it.

"I've said all along that we've got hitters who are much more capable than what they've shown thus far," Callahan said. "But there comes a certain point and time where you either get it done or you don't, and we've got some guys who need to step up."

SIU played what amounted to a tripleheader Sunday, as inclement weather in Wichita, Kan. caused Friday's game to be canceled and just a sliver of the second game to be played during Saturday's scheduled doubleheader. The Salukis lost the first game, 9-3.

SIU was losing 2-0 in the third inning of the second game as play resumed Sunday, and despite a Jeff Stanek home run, the Shockers abused SIU's bullpen and went on to claim an easy 11-4 victory.

SIU's lone win over Wichita State came in the next game, as the Salukis fed off a strong pitching performance from Brendon Fort to beat the Shockers, 5-2.

Fort (2-2) pitched all seven innings and allowed only four hits, while Luke Nelson doubled off the top of the right-field wall with the bases loaded in the second inning to ignite the SIU offense. Joe Meeks added a single later in the second inning to score Nelson and Kyle Kohlberg, giving the Salukis a 4-0 lead.

Wichita State, ranked No. 19 in the country, reasserted its dominance of the series in Sunday's finale. The Shockers scored 11 unanswered runs after the Salukis took an early 4-0 lead to beat SIU 11-4. The Shockers broke the game open by pushing seven runs across the plate in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Things could have gone worse for SIU against the talented Shockers, considering SIU was coming off a disappointing showing on the West Coast. SIU finished the Johnny Quik Classic in Fresno, Calif., with a 2-4 mark. The Salukis lost to Fresno State University 12-0, beat Temple University 6-3 and lost to the University of North Carolina-Asheville 11-4 in the final three games of the tournament.

Callahan said he was somewhat discouraged with the way his team performed in California.

"With the way we had been playing prior to going to California and seeing who we were playing, I thought we had a chance to come back 4-2," Callahan said. "In retrospect, the way we swung the bats out there and the fact that our middle-relief guys were for the most part ineffective, we're probably lucky we won two games."

Meanwhile, senior second baseman Steve Ruggeri, who was one of the Salukis' top hitters last season, continues to have his playing time limited because of an elbow injury. Ruggeri has only played in four games so far, and joins starting pitcher Jason Westmeier (shoulder), catcher Andy Cenkush (ankle) and outfielder Dustin Downs (wrist) as Salukis who are currently unable to play because of injury.

"We've got some guys that are a little beat up," Callahan said. "Those are four guys we were counting on heavily this year, so we're going to have to learn to supplement."

Ducks look mighty in win over Red Wings

ELLIOTT TEAFORD
LOS ANGELES TIMES

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Anaheim Mighty Ducks talked a pretty good game for, oh, about 70 games.

They did not fool anyone with their words, however. Their actions told a far more accurate story.

But there were unmistakable signs Sunday that the Ducks may finally have their game in order, and not a moment too soon.

The latest evidence was a passionate performance in a 3-1 victory over the Detroit Red Wings before a sellout crowd of 17,174 at the Arrowhead Pond.

Fredrik Olausson scored twice on the power play and Paul Kariya once for the Ducks. Their penalty-killing unit stopped the Red Wings on four of five chances. Goalie Guy Hebert made 33 saves in his fourth consecutive strong showing.

Best of all, the Ducks suffered few noticeable breakdowns. Unlike Friday's 4-2 victory over the San Jose Sharks, there were no significant lapses of intensity.

The ninth-place Ducks used their speed and smarts to subdue the lifeless Red Wings, and moved within two points of the eighth-place Sharks in the fight for the final Western Conference playoff spot.

The Ducks are only four points behind the seventh-place Edmonton Oilers.

With nine games left, anything seems possible.

"Right now, every game is like a playoff game," defenseman Ruslan Salei said.

Senior long jumper Aaron Shunk finished second to only his coach, assistant Cameron Wright, at the 2000 Florida State Relays Wednesday through Saturday. Shunk jumped 7-1 and is looking to improve as the outdoor season progresses.

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It is not every day a coach competes with his student-athletes.

However, that was the situation at the 2000 Florida State Relays, where SIU assistant men's track and field coach Cameron Wright and senior Aaron Shunk competed in the high jump, alongside the rest of the Saluki team Wednesday through Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla.

While Wright's solid showing drew some attention, it was the team's effort that was most impressive to SIU head coach Bill Cornell, who thinks the Salukis fared well, especially Shunk, during spring break.

"We had a pretty successful trip," Cornell said. "We had a super Friday, and performance-wise, we were happy."

In the high jump, Shunk placed second (7-1), behind only Wright, who won the high jump with a leap of 7-3. Shunk placed first among collegians, because Wright was competing individually, not for SIU.

In the middle distance events, junior Chris Owen (15:30.48) placed second in the 5,000-meter run. Senior Matt McClelland placed third in two events — the 1,500-meter run (3:53.89) and the 3,000-meter steeplechase (9:20.63).

Senior Brad Bowers placed third in the long jump (23-1 3/4) and fourth in the triple jump (45-11 3/4). In the high jump, junior Joe Hill placed fourth (6-9). Senior Erik Olson (195-1) and junior

After tough weekend at Wichita State, SIU will host Saint Louis today

JAY SCHWAB

Several surprisingly slumping bats have spelled trouble for the SIU baseball team in recent weeks as the Salukis have lost seven of their last 10 games and slipped back to the .500 mark.

Most recently, SIU dropped three of four games this weekend at nationally-ranked Missouri Valley Conference foe, Wichita State University.

Saluki head coach Dan Callahan said he wanted to earn a split against the Shockers.
