'Pill Popping' Growing Youth Kick

By Wade Roop
(First in a Series)

The child watches the television screen; the character in the commercial complains of aches and pains, takes a pill, and the pain is relieved.

The image can be extended to abuse of drugs in general, according to John W. Rawlin of the Delinquency Study and Youth Development Project Center at SIU's Edwardsville Campus.

The whole business of "popping a pill" is Rawlin's special research interest and takes him to a study of amphetamines—over 200 kinds such as "bennies," hallucinogens—LSD and marijuana, and glue sniffing among the nation's youth.

"We live on a drug happy planet," Rawlin said. Much of a child's interpretation of drugs comes from television commercials. The child today sees an individual depicted as sad, depressed, under tension and nervous one minute; then seconds later relieved from worry simply by downing a capsule or pill.

American society is much to blame for the youth seeking drugs, Rawlin remarked. In the adolescent, he said, frustration often stems from the societal interpretation that the teenager must abstain from the "fun things of society" until the magical age of 21. Thus for the adolescent the use of non-narcotics has presented a method of gaining "kicks" cheaply with no hang-over the next morning.

"We have to learn to live with drugs, but our way of

Bad Weather Slows Entries In Air Show

At least 165 airmen representing 17 flying clubs were on hand this morning for the opening of competition in the National Intercollegiate Flying Association meet at the Southern Illinois airport.

Officials of the host Saluki Flying Club said they expect up to 20 more clubs, but bad weather in other sections of the country has delayed many entrants. They said the registration booth was to be kept open until 10 p.m. Thursday to accommodate latecomers.

Three members of the "Flying Twenties" from San Jose State College in California had planned to fly out in their own club plane, but winds over the Rocky Mountains caused them to come out by airplane. They will rent a plane locally for use in the events.

Members of the Flying Bobcats from Ohio University in Athens were flying one of their five planes out when the single engine threw a connecting rod. They landed in a field, rented another engine, switched the two, and were on their way in 12 hours.

The repair shop at the airport here had an immediate job Thursday morning when a Champion two-place plane from Auburn University in Alabama damaged a wing-tip when it rocked in gusty winds Wednesday night.

Official competition in the meet began this morning with the power-off landing contest. Cross-country navigation and power-on precision landing competition are also scheduled today.

The bomb-dropping competition (releasing two pound sand bags into a barrel from an aircraft), informal meetings with aviation personalities, and the awards banquet are scheduled for Saturday.

Holiday Schedules Observed May 30

No regular post office window services or delivery services, except special delivery will be provided.

Mail will be collected and dispatched on holiday schedules, and lobbies in many post offices will remain open for access to lock boxes, deposit of mail and use of stamp dispensing equipment.

'Carbondale Goes All Out,' Merchants Say Mother's Day 2nd Only to Christmas Season

By Mary Lou Earnheart

"I like my mom best because..."

Just complete this jingle and your mom can be mother for a day. This and many other gimmicks were used to usher in the observance of Mother's Day, May 14 this year.

Actual observance of Mother's Day in the western world dates back to the times when the ancient Greeks worshipped Cybele, mother of the gods. They held rites in woods and caves to honor her.

Under the inspiration of Miss Anna M. Jarvis of Philadelphia, a special church service was set up in 1908 to pay tribute to all mothers. In 1914, Congress officially designated the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day.

Like many special days, Mother's Day is criticized for becoming too commercialized and a makeshift imitation of what it was intended to be.

Often this criticism is justified; but, like everything else involving human behavior, Mother's Day is what we make of it.

And Carbondale residents make much of it.

"We stay up all night filling orders and still have to turn customers away," said Jerry Brooks, owner of a local florist shop.

Brooks said flowers are an "easy gift to purchase."

"The customers let us decide what to send," he explained. The most frequent gifts are cut flowers, spring bouquets or corsages.

"It's the thought that counts," said a local department store owner, Frank Bleyer.

Mother's Day is the busiest season next to Christmas for the merchants, "but only for a day or two," explained Mrs. Mae Tucker, buyer for a local department store.

Lingerie, accessories and for younger moms, sportswear, are the most frequent gifts, according to Mrs. Tucker.

"Women buy early for theirs and their husbands' mothers. The children and dad come in the day before," she explained.

"My business depends upon the weather," Herb Denham, owner of a local candy store, said.

"If the weather is cold, the appetite is greater and there is less chance the candy will melt," Denham said.

What are SIU students giving their moms for Mother's Day? "Cut flowers and a clipping of our house winning Spring Festival," said Barbara Allen, a junior from Mackinaw.

Beverly Schrader, a junior from St. Louis, is sending "my house bill and tuition fee" home to mom.

Hovering Front Hits 86 Degrees

Thursday's high temperature of 86 degrees was three degrees under the record for May 11 in Carbondale.

Doug Gill, weather observer at the Southern Illinois Airport, said the heat was caused by a warm front hovering over the area. A cold front was expected to displace the warm weather.

The May 11 record, 89 degrees, was set in 1914. Carbondale's record for the month was 101 degrees set on May 28, 1911, according to Climatology Laboratory records.

Gun Lobbyist Could Hinder Police Protecting Citizens

The nation's most vociferous gun lobby, the National Rifle Association, has drifted beyond rational thought and into that hazy land occupied by the fringes of society.

In the latest issue of its magazine, The National Rifleman, an editorial asserted that private citizens should arm themselves in order to shore up local police protection.

It has been many years since this society has considered vigilantism as a means of solving social problems. It is an age that is buried in history and it should remain buried.

Since the assassination of President Kennedy, the association has conducted a very active and very successful campaign in thwarting any legislation that might restrict the sale of firearms.

While this in itself is cause for concern, it is the association's recent editorial that not only advocates a course that circumvents the authority of the police, but details the best weapons and methods to do so, that stirs responsible citizens.

Similar directives have been issued by such "patriots" as DePugh, Welch and Rockwell.

Whatever the NRA's motives, they serve neither law and order, nor society. For every man to be a self-appointed peace officer would be tantamount to anarchy and would serve to tear down all of the principles of law enforcement.

The present gun laws (or lack of them) allow felons, mentally ill and crackpots to arm themselves for whatever odious purposes they choose.

The recent pronouncement by the association flies in the face of responsible law enforcement officials and legislators who seek to curtail the carnage that results annually through misuse of firearms.

The NRA has said repeatedly that its only concern was for the sportsman. Just what sort of sport are we talking about?

Not only has the NRA shattered its own sagging reputation, but it has compromised the intentions of every responsible sportsman in the country with the May issue of the National Rifleman.

We wonder if legislators should now consider the NRA as a responsible voice or just another fuzzy-headed group.

Frank Sinatra Poor Example Of Italian-American Image

What was not good enough for Las Vegas was good enough for a hitherto obscure group that calls itself the American-Italian Anti-Defamation League. It has chosen Frank Sinatra as national chairman "to add luster to the group's cause."

Frank Sinatra is a remarkable entertainer even if he does sing off key; he is a good actor, as he has proved on the screen; and he is a very famous personality. Also, he is extremely wealthy. Does all this make him the ideal choice as the Italo-American to represent and lead the many millions of good American citizens whose ancestors came from Italy? It does not. His associations with underworld figures have been such that in 1963 the State of Nevada forced him to sell his gambling interests there.

Among the names on the board of directors of this new organization are many of whom Italo-Americans can be proud, but there are several who by no means will add "luster" to the Italian-American image. Moreover, it does seem strange that most of them are connected with Brooklyn politics.

It is hard to find where "anti-defamation" enters the picture. The organization that helped the Luni family in the early stages of their dramatic fight to keep their blond adopted daughter was the local branch of B'nai B'rith—which incidentally has had a true Anti-Defamation League for more than half a century. Getting citizens municipal or government jobs hardly comes under the heading of "anti-defamation."

If the new American-Italian group wants to raise money by staging a big show in Madison Square Garden, Frank Sinatra will serve its purpose well. If, however, the idea is genuinely to improve the Italo-American image, which the new organization seems to think is too closely linked with the Mafia and Cosa Nostra, there are professors, artists, musicians, scientists, a Governor of Massachusetts, a Senator from Rhode Island—any number of distinguished citizens of Italian descent who might have been chosen. The American-Italian Anti-Defamation League, in picking Frank Sinatra for its national leader, has chosen to add fire to fire. —New York Times.

Letters to the Editor

Bad Picture

To the Editor:

My reaction to your front page picture of a lynched mouse was one of disgust. This picture and caption are in very bad taste and shouldn't be published in anything except possibly "National Enquirer." If this picture is used only to take up space, as it probably was, then I am dismayed that something of more value and significance couldn't be found. Might not pictures of athletes or good students be inserted? Maybe the space could be used for pictures or articles about outstanding teachers at this school. A picture of this sort is a reflection upon the school itself, or at worst, the editors of the "Daily Egyptian," our student voice.

I am all in favor of killing mice, cockroaches, and other vermin, but I kill only to rid myself of destructive, possibly disease-ridden nuisance. I do not publicly joke about a matter of this masochistic, sadistic nature. If our society allows and encourages front page pictures of this nature, then God save our souls!

Joe Kretsch

Poor Taste

To the Editor:

Does the Daily Egyptian write all its material in a Skianer Box? In the May 9th edition of your paper you ran a front page photograph of an R.L.P. of J. Mortin Mouse. This is a fine way to kick off observance of "Be Kind to Animals Week"! We feel the Daily Egyptian should have its "hand slapped" for running a photograph in such poor taste. Is the Egyptian so "hung up" for material that it had to run this? The Egyptian is an extending arm of the student body. Is this bit of sadistic fun an example of "new games on campus"? Sanctioning Deviates Worsens Problem

There is a profound difference between understanding harmful tendencies and sanctioning them. It is a very different matter to be ready to take a new and careful look at the best manner in which to cope with antisocial activities than it is to take steps which appear to encourage such activities.

We believe that these observations apply to the action of Columbia University in chartering a student group whose reported purpose is to seek equal rights for homosexuals. Defending the action, the assistant to the vice-president said, "It is a bona fide student organization, and we saw no reason why we should turn down the request for a charter."

This reasoning is as faulty as it is facile. It fails to take into account both the implications and the consequences of the university's action. And in the case of the particular problem being dealt with, these implications and consequences can be both injurious and tragic.

It should be plain that in granting this charter (whatever its motive may have been in so doing), Columbia has, in the eyes of many students, thrown a cloak of respectability and sanction over homosexuality which it did not have before. To a very considerable degree, an impressionable student could now be tempted to say: the university sees nothing wrong or harmful in this, why should I?

There is a growing conviction among those who have studied the problem most closely that many persons become homosexual only through solicitation. Anything which makes such solicitation easier through lending it an air of social acceptability, can only facilitate the spread of what is both a personal and a social tragedy.

It is well that this whole subject is now being more widely studied. It is one which society must cope with because of its deep moral and social implications. Furthermore, it must be dealt with compassionately and understandingly. But, when all is said and done, society's efforts must be in the direction of healing and restricting, not in the direction of either condoning or, even worse, of encouraging.

We hope that no other university or college will follow Columbia's mistaken lead in this matter, and that Columbia itself will reexamine its action. —Christian Science Monitor

Tenure System

Aids Incompetents

The typical American college student is almost certain to be sold short in the name of academic freedom at one point or another in his career.

The basis of the idea of granting tenure to faculty members was conceived in the name of freedom to teach and pursued in good faith—for a while.

The American Association of University Professors, an academic union, says that the tenure system protects professors from the wrath and firing power of administrators who disagree with the material the professors teach. In essence this sounds good and necessary.

An answer to the problem might be the establishment of a committee of faculty and administrators to review the performance of professors periodically.

If a professor's teaching effectiveness falls off, the committee would then have the power to recommend that the professor be fired. The committee would take the process of judging the worth of a professor out of the hands of a select few within a given department and the administration.

The committee would be impartial. Such things as personality and interdepartmental bias would be eliminated from the consideration. It would allow a judgment to be reached without taxing the bonds which inevitably are formed among the faculty of a particular department.

Death Penalty No Deterrent

Thirty-seven states including Illinois still inflict the death penalty, despite mountainous evidence that it has no effect whatever in deterring capital crimes. If the experience of the other 36 states has been like our own, endless attempts have been made in their legislatures to get rid of this grisly practice; opponents have tirelessly pointed out that the death penalty is useless in controlling crime, is carried out almost exclusively against poor or uneducated defendants who can't afford top legal protection, makes justice infinitely harder to obtain in capital cases, and carries the ever-present risk of putting an innocent person to death.

But the arguments regularly run aground on one fact: A great many people want the death penalty retained whether it does any good or not. For them it is the only satisfactory form of vengeance for a heinous crime.

Over $½ Billion

Vietnam Construction Costly for U. S.

By Seymour Francis
(Copley News Service)

SAIGON, South Vietnam—More than half of the nearly $1 billion which the United States has allocated for construction in Vietnam is building military and civilian complexes in three areas—Saigon, Cam Ranh Bay and Da Nang. Each has possibilities for postwar development that will bring Vietnam from a semi-primitive nation with low living standards to manager Jim Lilly said, "but the No. 2 priority is Long Binh."

The 16,000 acres of rolling land form the site for a cantonment area to house most of the military personnel now living in Saigon and Cholon.

It was authorized after it became obvious that the influx of American troops into Saigon was straining the city's facilities far beyond their capacities.

Preliminary work began several months ago, and military, fight intrusion of the fine sand into equipment gearboxes and housing, into equipment of all kinds and into their clothing and other belongings, wherever they move.

Work is starting on the mainland nearby on a $7 million U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) project to house refugees. AID officials have expressed the hope that the area can be developed with light industry and can be made self-supporting. They describe this as a people-to-people, nation-building project.

At Qui-Nhon, some 150 miles north of Cam Ranh Bay, a deep-draft port is under construction to provide logistics support for the U.S. and Republic of Korea troops in the Central Highlands.

To build this port, the contractor dredged a deep channel and built a causeway from the mainland. The area formed by the dredging fill will be used for warehousing and other support facilities. So far, $20 million has been set aside for the work.

At Phu Cat, inland and slightly northwest of Qui Nhon, a jet airfield complex with 10,000-foot runway is under construction to provide facilities for air support of troops in the Vietnam highlands. This complex, started in June 1966, is scheduled to be completed this spring. Cost is estimated at $25 million.

At Chu Lai, south of Da Nang, projects are limited to land-based installations. This is a marine base, with airfields and troop facilities. The harbor has a rock bottom and cannot be developed as a deep-draft port, but LST ramps have been installed for cargo and supplies that can be handled by that type of craft. The base has an expeditionary airfield, constructed by the Seabees, with an aluminum matting (AM2), 8,000-foot runway, which is paralleled by a 10,000-foot concrete runway which became operational in October. In addition to supporting Marine air units, the Chu Lai installation also has logistic facilities for support of combat operations along the coast. Allocations so far total about $75 million.

Da Nang, which formerly was limited to coastal freighter port capability at wharves on the Da Nang River, has become a true deep-draft port. It is the major logistics and staging area for the Marines.

Recently completed were two deep-draft piers—two of the Reeves type which were prefabricated in the Philippines and floated to Da Nang, and a DeLong pier. The Reeves piers are named for H.W. Reeves of Brown & Root, who proposed the idea of prefabricating them and floating them to the site as a solution to the shipping logjam of 1965 and 1966. They are similar in concept to the oil towers erected by Brown & Root in the Gulf of Mexico. The prefabrication was credited with saving thousands of dollars in construction costs and, more important, providing Da Nang deep-draft facilities far ahead of the original schedule.

STEEL PIERS ON THE LEFT, BOTH 600 FEET LONG, WERE PREFABRICATED IN THE PHILIPPINES AND FLOATED TO DA NANG ON BARGES one with growing commercial potential with higher average income and improved living conditions.

The Saigon area is one of the largest involved. It includes that city, the Newport development around a bend in the Saigon River and the Long Binh installation a short distance from the city on the highway to Bien Hoa.

The Newport development is a deep-draft port that the Navy is building for the U.S. Army, the logistics agency for military shipments to this area. When completed, it will have four deep-draft berths along a 600-foot steel wharf prefabricated in sections at Poro Point, the Philippines, and floated on barges across the South China Sea and up the Saigon River for installation.

Warehousing and support facilities complete this facility, which will cost about $70 million. Barge wharves were completed and in use in November, and the prefab pier is expected to be usable in increments between February and April 1967.

The Newport development is expected to relieve the congestion in downtown Saigon caused by military cargo transiting through the city, but the main objective is to open existing dock space in Saigon to permit increased shipment of commercial goods into the city. This, it is believed, will aid Vietnam in its battle against inflation by providing more commercial goods to meet increased demands in the city's marketplace.

The development presents unique construction problems, most nagging of which is the instability of the soil along the delta.

"We will drive about 75 miles of piling at Newport," a Navy Civil Engineer Corps (CEC) officer at Pacific Division headquarters, Pearl Harbor, said. (CEC officers attached to the Naval Facilities Engineering Command are supervising most of the American construction work in Vietnam.)

"The soil is so unstable that 130-foot piles are needed to provide solid support for the structures. And every building and structure must be supported on them. All fill had to be hauled in from other sites and placed to a depth of six feet. But the port, when completed, will increase Saigon's cargo capability by about 40 per cent."

At Long Binh, also in the Saigon area, the contract with the joint venture of RMK-BRJ calls for construction of a city described as being as big as five mainland U.S. Levittowns together.

"Everyone recognizes that Newport is the top priority in the country," RMK-BRJ general and some 20,000 Army engineering troops and 1st Logistics Command Forces are there now. RMK-BRJ expects to do about 70 per cent of the total construction at Long Binh, for which funding so far is $75-$100 million.

When completed, the city will include a hospital, Vietnam headquarters for the U.S. Army, logistics storage facilities and the usual housing, messing, entertainment and recreational facilities for a population of 50,000. When completed, more U.S. troops will be moved from Saigon and their impact on that city's economy will be further reduced.

Also at Saigon, the Tan Son Nhut airport, rated as one of the busiest in the world, has been improved with additional support and runway facilities. Near the airfield a $25 million complex is being constructed as headquarters for the U.S. Military Assistance Command, Vietnam (MACV), which umpires the demands and requirements of field commands.

At Phan Rang, south of Cam Ranh Bay, a dual runway jet airfield complex, with supporting facilities, is operational. Starting in September 1965, Army engineering troops, with Navy-supervised contractor assistance, installed the first runway, and expeditionary type of aluminum matting.

In October 1966, RMK-BRJ, working under NFEC direction, completed a concrete jet airfield with support installations. Both runways are 10,000 feet long. With end of the conflict, the permanent airfield and its facilities will be available for commercial use and development.

Cam Ranh Bay, on a peninsula about a third of the distance from Saigon to the northern port of Da Nang, holds the potential of becoming the country's most important commercial deep-water port. With its deep-draft harbor and jettable airfields, it someday could rival Hong Kong as a port serving all of Southeast Asia.

It began as an obscure village, where a narrow deep-draft Military Assistance Program (MAP) pier was completed in 1964. Today the port has full deep-water capability with two DeLong pile-supported piers in place. There are expeditionary and permanent jet airfields complexes, each with 10,000-foot runways, acres of parking aprons and all the essential support facilities. Large petroleum-oil-lubricants (POL) installations, warehousing, and ammunition storage facilities are being constructed also. More than $150 million has been allocated currently for the work.

The soil is a major obstacle. It is almost as fine as talcum powder, difficult to stabilize and prepare for foundations—either for airfields runways or for structures. Construction crews, both civilian life cannot cope with this yet," he pointed out. Drugs, like any substance, can become the target for abuse.

Rawlin posed the question: "Why society frowns on the use of marijuana while it accepts over indulgence in regard to alcohol." Opinion of different generations, and a credibility gap in misinterpretation, are factors complicating understanding, he said.

Rawlins advocates a positive approach to the control of non-narcotic drug usage, rather than restrictive legislation. He spoke at a recent press conference on the Edwardsville Campus; the goal is to seek a logical method of combatting the growing use of amphetamines, hallucinogens and glue sniffing among American youth.

One goal of the study will be "to get the most correct information to the most people so intelligent use and control of the drugs can be made possible," Rawlin said. A great deal of adverse publicity has been circulated recently, he said. The tactics have taken on more of a "scare campaign" approach than a positive analysis of the problem, he continued.

Rather than to attempt stiff regulations which will drive the problem further underground and alienate the issue in society, Rawlin advocates a system of supervised and legal experimentation carried on in a legal manner.

Two standards are going to have to be established to continue study he said: Whether amphetamines and hallucinogens are medically harmful and whether their usage is against the law are objectives to be defined, he said.

Rawlin, who has conducted interviews in Madison and St. Clair counties in Illinois, and in St. Louis, said that "users are basically worried and want to find out more about amphetamines and hallucinogens." He said that direct intravenous injections of amphetamines into the blood system are becoming more frequent.

"There are going to be more and more student casualties," Rawlin said with regard to the increased use of drugs. Information and statistics must be provided for careful analysis to prevent further injury to the user, he said; misleading statements can be harmful.

"I think if you lie to them one place they won't trust you in another," Rawlin said. Confidence and a positive attitude must be gained, he added.

He said that under therapeutic conditions a dosage of 15 mm of an amphetamine is a normal dosage, but experimenters will inject up to 200 mm of an amphetamine directly into the blood stream. The result is paranoiac behavior from the body being highly overstimulated, Rawlin stressed.

In regard to LSD Rawlin said that effects in relationship to quantity of dosage have not been determined. The health hazard, with regard to human chromosome development, cannot be related definitely to human beings, he said. What happens in rats is not always an indication of the effect on the human body, he emphasized. He did say, however, that overdosage of any drug, including barbiturates such as sleeping pills, can produce hazardous effects or against non-narcotics," he and even death. said, "but we are definitely

6 New Graduates Get Appointments

Six graduating seniors at SIU who have specialized in dietetics have obtained internship appointments for next year, according to Frank Konishi, chairman of the Food and Nutrition Department.

Richard Cass of Glen Ellyn will enter the Army Medical Corps dietetic intern program. Others have been assigned as follows:

Rizalina V. Javier of Pasay, Philippines, at Harper Hospital, Detroit, Mich.; Lucy Dinkel of Seymour, at the University of Chicago Hospitals; Betty Johnson of Chicago at the University of Wisconsin hospital, Madison, Wis.; Bonnie Mueller of St. Louis, at St. Louis University hospital, St. Louis, Mo.; and Jeanne Wilson of East Alton at the University of Minnesota hospital, Minneapolis.

At the conclusion of their year's internship, they will become eligible for membership in the American Dietetic Association.

Since 1961-62, SIU has sent 14 graduates into dietetic internships in hospitals throughout the Midwest and as far away as New York.

Commuter: Dan Larino, R.R. 2 Carbondale, Dynamic Party; Robert A. Aikman, 1034 Laurel Drive, Independent; Bill Potter, 2704 Kent Drive, Route 4, Dynamic Party; Tony Martino, Action Party and Lois Graff, Ava, Ill., Action Party.

The Campus Senate Wednesday night approved the figures to be used in this spring's reapportionment for the elections.

The number of seats vacant total 16 full-year positions and two half-year spots. Two senators will be elected for east non-dorm, four for east dorm and one for University Park. On the west side two seats are open for non-dorm, three for west dorm and one for Thompson Point. Commuter vacancies total three seats and one is available for foreign students.

The approved report states that the sides are divided by the IC railroad tracks and that the basic unit for determining the number of seats is 600 students in one accepted living area constitutes one senatorial seat.

The senate passed a bill which calls for a campus-wide referendum election day concerning the continuation of the present textbook rental system.

US Versus Reds

U Thant Declares Clash Unavoidable

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant declared Thursday that a direct confrontation between the United States and Red China is inevitable if the present trend in the Vietnam war continues.

"I am afraid we are witnessing today the initial phase of World War III," the secretary-general told a luncheon of the U.N. Correspondents Association.

He compared the present period with the months before the World War I and II and said the parties involved are going through the same stages of psychological preparation. Thant renewed his appeal for cessation of U.S. bombing of North Vietnam and declared that this is the only thing at present that can end the military escalation and lead to a negotiated settlement.

He disclosed that he now considers his earlier peace plans are dead. Neither side has accepted the proposals without reservations, he said, and he no longer regards his plans as being under consideration.

The secretary - general's initial proposals called for a cessation of the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam, a scaled reduction of military operations by both sides and the participation of the Viet Cong in peace negotiations.

The later plan, submitted March 14, called for a ceasefire to be followed by preliminary talks aimed at reconvening the 1954 Geneva Conference.

Thant said he was now simply pressing for an end of the bombing of North Vietnam. "There may be some limited risks involved in this," he added.

Soviet, U.S. Destroyers Collide Again

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States announced Thursday that for the second day in a row a Soviet destroyer sideswiped the U.S. destroyer Walker in the Sea of Japan.

Washington delivered tough-worded protests calling on the Kremlin to promptly "halt such harassments."

The surprise news of the second naval collision apparently shifted the matter from the status of accident to serious incident marking further worsening of U.S.-Soviet relations already strained over the Vietnam war.

Although no formal response to the U.S. protests has yet come from Moscow, it was understood that the Soviets here rejected out of hand the U.S. accusation of deliberate harassment.

As of late Thursday, neither incident had been reported in Moscow newspapers.

American diplomats wondered whether Moscow deliberately has stepped up its naval interference in retaliation for the expanded U.S. bombing of North Vietnam. The Pentagon gave out a brief U.S. version of Thursday's naval contact while the State Department hurriedly called in the top Soviet here to deliver what it termed a second severe complaint.

'SLOW SIGN'—Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen said he has put a "slow" sign on demands of some Republicans for a stepup in antipoverty spending. He said there is a "change in the tide of public opinion" that may cut expenditures under the Great Society programs. (AP Photo)

Senate Backs Ban on Outsiders' Picketing

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—A bill to ban residential picketing by outsiders passed the Illinois Senate Thursday and moved to the House on a 41-4 vote.

The measure, which would make such picketing a misdemeanor, was amended to permit residents of slum areas to picket their own dwellings in efforts to draw attention to conditions.

Mayor Richard J. Daley's Chicago residence has been a target of civil rights pickets in the past. The bill was sponsored by Sen. W. Russell Arrington of Evanston, GOP Senate leader.

Another measure forwarded to the House would provide that nominating petitions for delegates to national conventions indicate for whom they will vote on the first ballot, committed when they are not Illinois' delegates are not convention.

Chemistry Major Describes Project

Jess L. Thompson, senior from Itasca who is majoring in chemistry, was a speaker at the annual Undergraduate Chemistry Symposium recently at Northwestern University.

Thompson, a research aide on a molecular screening project in SIU's chemistry department, described the first attempt to use molecular screening techniques on all parts of the molecule. Project director Boris Musulin said Thompson's work, in conjunction with the rest of project findings, will lay the ground work for complete theoretical treatments of chemistry.

The symposium was sponsored by the Chicago section of the American Chemical Society. Title of Thompson's paper was "A Four Electron Model for LiH."

a.m. at the Information Desk in the University Center.

Tickets may be bought only in blocks of nine or more on Monday. Ticket prices are $3, $2, and $1.

The May 27 performance is slated for 8 p.m. in the Arena. The event is being sponsored by the Action Party.

The Supremes have had three consecutive recordings—"Where Did Our Love Go," "Baby Love" and "Come See About Me"—reach the number one spot on the sales charts.

Their sound is described as being "blues with a popbeat."

IC Eliminates Weekend Rate To Secure Additional Money

Weekend excursion rates for the Illinois Central Railroad will be eliminated on all stops on the northbound routes at the end of spring term.

All passengers will pay the full fare, $18.50, rather than the $13.80 previously in effect for passengers leaving for Chicago and returning to Carbondale on the same weekend.

Two representatives of the railroad spoke with Lyle Gohn, coordinator of student activities, Thursday afternoon in an effort to sound out student response to the proposal.

The IC has about 250 more passengers on the weekend than during the week, the representatives told Gohn. And in a telephone interview, H. J. Beisterfeldt, passenger traffic manager at Chicago, said, "The railroad needed more revenue and this is one way to get it without raising the general fares."

"We might lose a small percentage of our student passengers, but I doubt it," continued Beisterfeldt. The cancellation of the reduced rates will mean an added monthly revenue for the IC of about $20,000, he added.

For Commencement

Students Offer Speaker Choices

By John Epperheimer

Students have a major role in selecting commencement speakers through the Campus Senate, which nominates a number of persons for that honor each year.

Charles D. Tenney, vice president for planning and review, is in charge of securing speakers. He sends letters of invitation to people on the list.

"Actually I handle only the mechanics of getting speakers," Tenney said. "President Morris issues the invitations."

"We have to be opportunistic and invite those we feel might be able to come," Tenney added. It is almost impossible to get a consensus on a most popular choice, he said, so everybody on the Campus Senate list is considered and then the field is narrowed according to candidates availability.

People on the list drawn up by last year's Campus Senate were considered for this June's commencement because the list was so long, Tenney said.

The current Campus Senate probably will be asked to draw up another list for next year, he said.

This year's search for a speaker began before Christmas, according to Tenney. "Our luck has been bad this year," he said, "everyone we tried had a conflict."

Formal acceptance of the Carbondale campus invitation was not received until May. The Edwardsville campus commencement speaker accepted in April.

SIU offers to pay an honorarium to commencement speakers, according to Tenney. All government employees turn the fee down, he said. Some speakers donate their pay to SIU scholarship funds.

A few speakers receive honorary degrees from Southern, but the University's policy is to award on merit alone. However, some speakers are invariably given degrees through decisions of the Department of Anthropology and of the faculty committee on honorary degrees.

Lange explained that the purpose of the policy is to give honorary degrees as much significance as possible. Awarding one to each commencement speaker would decrease their value.

Recommendations for honorary degrees comes from faculty to Lange's committee, which makes its recommendations subject to review by the administration.

Many staff members speak at other commencements, especially at area high schools. In past years an informal "speaker's bureau" to aid high schools to obtain speakers from Southern was operated by the Extension Service.

Currently, however, speakers are contacted individually, often through the College of Education. Extension Service apparently feels it has its hands full arranging SIU's commencements.

Final Concert Slated Tonight

The Chamber Symphony of Philadelphia will present the final concert of the Carbondale Community Concert Association's season on Friday, May 12, at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium on the SIU campus.

This group of 36 performers, led by founder and conductor Anshel Brusilow, is the first permanent chamber orchestra in this country. It boasts a full complement of strings, woodwinds, brass and percussion, and plays literature from every period — baroque, romantic and contemporary.

Brusilow studied violin as a child at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia and made his debut at Carnegie Hall when he was 17. Throughout a career as soloist and concertmaster with major orchestras, he has studied conducting with Pierre Monteux, Eugene Ormandy, and George Szell.

The Community Concert Association has recently completed a highly successful membership campaign for the 1967-68 season. Attractions engaged for next year are the Vienna Baroque Chamber Orchestra, mezzo-soprano Mildred Miller, pianist Ivan Davis, and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York in a return engagement.

Admission to the concert is by membership card only. Those who recently purchased memberships for the first time will be admitted on their receipt stubs.

Dentist to Speak

Dr. Nathaniel H. Rowe, chairman of the department of general and oral pathology in Washington University's School of Dentistry, will speak at a graduate seminar in microbiology at SIU today.

Dr. Rowe will discuss "Epidemiological Concepts Relative to Cancer of the Oral Cavity." The seminar will be held from 10 a.m. to noon in Life Science Building, Room 6.

'World Without Sun'

Film, Talk Slated

A discussion will be held immediately following the film in Morris Library Lounge. It will be led by Joseph Beatty, assistant professor of zoology.

Triangular Meet on Tap for Stadium Saturday

Western Kentucky and Lincoln University will provide the opposition for Southern's final home track meet of the season Saturday in McAndrew Stadium.

The field events get underway at 1:30 p.m. and the running begins at 2.

SIU Coach Lew Hartzog expects one of the most balanced meets of the year. "Several of the events we're not real strong in they are, so no one can afford many sub-par performances," Hartzog said.

Hartzog will make a few adjustments for Saturdays meet. He will deviate from his normal pattern of running Oscar Moore, Al Ackman and Jeff Duxbury in two events.

Moore will go in the two-mile. He is making a fast recovery from a bad bronchial attack and Hartzog expects him to be at his best in about three weeks. Moore turned three-miles Tuesday against Murray State in an outstanding 13:46.5.

Ackman will run the half mile. Duxbury will go in the mile. Hartzog expects little competition for Duxbury in this event. His time Tuesday was 4:12.8.

Chuck Benson, who does many things well for the Salukis, will be the only SIU competitor in the 440. Hartzog will let Ross McKenzie, who holds the school quarter-mile record, run strictly dashes (100 and 220).

Hartzog expects Benson "might be ready to break Ross' school mark. He went 440 in :48.0 Tuesday on his leg of the mile relay."

The layoff for McKenzie in the 440 event gives him his first chance of the year to run a rested 220. He should be one of the favorites in the dashes, according to Hartzog, who figures these will be two of the day's best races.

The high jump should provide some anxious moments and probably a couple of records. Both Benson and Mitch Livingston jumped 6'8" Tuesday. But they may have to go higher Saturday.

Lincoln's Emanuel Balland has jumped 6'11" and his best this season is 6'10". Western's Henry Jackson is also a 6'10" jumper.

High jumping is not all Jackson does well. He has also broad jumped 24' 7 1/2" and triple jumped 51'4". These marks will make him a strong candidate for one of the best triple wins ever recorded in McAndrew stadium.

The quarter-mile and half-mile events could be the top races of the day. Each team is strong in both of these races.

The discus looks to be one of the promising field events as far as meet and stadium records is concerned. Lincoln's Stanley MacDonald is a two-time Kansas Relays champion with a best throw of 178'11".

Western's John Toye has tossed the disc 169'7", Bob Stoltzman 170'1 1/2" and Frank DeBiase 160'5".

Southern's John Vernon, the top collegiate triple jumper in the country for much of last year, should challenge Jackson in that event. Vernon is making a strong comeback after an injury suffered last year, hampered his style.

He has been approaching the 50-foot mark lately and hopes to be jumping 52 feet by the end of the season.

Lutz May Switch SIU Lineup For St. Joseph's, Panthers

Don Kirkland will pitch today at St. Joseph's College in Collegeville, Ind., in what may be the last road trip for the Saluki baseball team. Southern will also stop at Kentucky Wesleyan University on Saturday for a double-header.

SIU has another road series remaining on the schedule, a three game series, with Parsons College. This series may be cancelled due to the NCAA regionals.

If Coach Joe Lutz follows through with his experiment in the Western Kentucky series, Barry O'Sullivan, the Salukis' leading hitter at .309, will move from left field to third base.

Lutz would then play Paul Pavesich in left, Nick Solis in center and Jim Dykes in right. The infield would then line up with O'Sullivan at the hot corner, Rich Hacker and John Mason at the keystone combination and Dwight Clark at firstbase.

This lineup would be the best hitting lineup that Lutz could muster. Pavesich is hitting .308, Clark .292, Dykes .325 and Hacker .270.

Athletics Study Completed; Report Going to Morris

The Study Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics has completed its study of the intercollegiate athletic program at SIU and will submit its report to President Delyte W. Morris next week, according to John W. Voigt, chairman of the commission.

Voigt said Thursday that the report was being retyped for submission to Morris, who would probably have it in his hands early next week.

The commission has been studying the program on the Carbondale campus and possible provisions for similar programs at Edwardsville, since last fall.

Walker Cup Team Arrives in England

LONDON (AP)—The 10-man United States Walker Cup golf team arrived from New York Thursday night for their match against the British starting May 19 at Sandwich.

The Walker Cup matches will be played at the Royal St. George links.

The U.S. team intends to remain for the British Amateur Tournament May 30-June 2.

Particular attention has been paid to the football and basketball programs, which are both still considered small college due to past schedules, and the possibility of a separate intercollegiate program at Edwardsville.

The President's office would only say that it would be a week to 10 days before anything is done about releasing the report.

The Commission was composed of two representatives of the university faculty, two student body representatives, two representatives of non-academic offices and services, an alumni representative of the Committee of Intercollegiate Athletics.

The two faculty members were Kenneth A. VanLente, Carbondale, and Robert Steinkellner, Edwardsville. Student participants were John K. Barnes, Carbondale, and Charles A. Papp, Edwardsville.

Rex Karnes, Carbondale, and James Metcalf, Edwardsville, represented non-academic offices and services. Rex Spear was the alumni representative and Voigt was the Intercollegiate Committee member.

Students, faculty members, coaches, administrators, alumni and persons not directly connected with the University were queried on the subject.
