German foundry home of Morris statue

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

A German foundry has been the home of the master cast for a bronze statue of SIU President Emeritus Delyte W. Morris for almost a decade because fund raising for the statue has been ineffective, according to the statue's creator, Fredda "Brilliant" Marshall.

Morris was the SIU system's eighth president, served from 1948 to 1970. During his 22 year reign, SIU grew from a college of 3,013 students to the 20th largest university in the United States with 31,000 students. Morris, who was born in Xenia, Ill., had a keen interest in developing "Little Egypt" while promoting the growth of SIU.

"I feel bitter. Not for myself but for Morris—the man who created this University. They say, after he is done creating the University, the hell with him," said Brilliant, who began working on the statue in 1970.

In 1979, the nine-foot-high statue of Morris would have cost about $35,000 to cast in bronze, transport from the foundry in West Berlin, and erect on campus. Brilliant, who prefers to be called by his professional name, estimated that the statue would now cost about $60,000.

A committee of citizens in charge of raising funds for the larger-than-life-size statue was formed around 1973. Professor of Higher Education John B. Hawley chaired the committee.

Among the 16 individuals on the committee were Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, former Carbondale mayor Neal Eckert and John C. Gardner, publisher of the Southern Illinoisian.

A source who requested to remain anonymous said the committee's fund raising activities for the statue were "vague" and "poorly defined."

Hawley said the committee's fund raising activities centered around a mailing list drive to members of the SIU Alumni Association. However, Hawley does not blame the committee for the lack of funds generated to finance the statue.

"It was a lack of interest and we really didn't get the support of the administration. I don't blame anybody. It was a climate of the times. It was the aftermath of the late '60s when University leaders were being criticized by rebellious students," said Hawley, who was president of the University Senate in 1970. The University Senate was a representative body made of all the constituency groups on campus. The senate was dissolved in 1970.

The committee never formally disbanded but it has not met in over three years, Hawley said. The committee raised a total of about $11,000, which was handed over to the SIU Foundation. The foundation was used as a depository for funds raised by the committee and for

13 running, 16 seats open for S-Senate

Elections for 16 Student Senate positions will be held from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Eleven candidates will be on the ballot. According to Kellie Watts, election commissioner for the Undergraduate Student Organization, at least two other students are running as write-in candidates.

For undergraduate student government purposes, Carbondale is divided into four voting districts. West Side is defined as the off-campus district west of South Illinois Avenue, and East Side as the area east of South Illinois Avenue. The two on-campus voting districts are Thompson Point and East Side. Brush Towers and University Park comprise the East Side district.

Half of the senate positions in each district are elected each semester. Six full-time seats of the East and West districts are up for election, Watts said. Two full-time and one half-time seat (held for one semester only) for East Campus will be elected, as well as one half-time Thompson Point seat.

The candidates who will be on the ballot for the East Side are Leah Sughrove, senior in psychology; Christ J. Cordogan, sophomore in geography; and Kevin C. Jans, junior in history. West Side candidates are James Bryson, junior in liberal arts, and Mark Michale, junior, undecided.

East Campus candidates are Tom Sheehan, junior in social welfare; Bruce Bellak, sophomore in general studies; Ed Collins, sophomore in pre-law; Tom Cromwell, freshman in mortuary science; Linda Schneider, sophomore, undecided; and Joe Wintraub, freshman in radio-TV. No candidates from Thompson Point completed the paperwork in time to be placed on the ballot, Watts said.

Polls will be located at Lawson Hall, the Communications Building, Woody Hall, the Health Service, Morris Library and Technology Building A. Two polls will be set up in the Student Center, Watts said. Undergraduate students living off-campus may vote at these polls and must present a paid fee statement and ID.

Students living in the dormitories must vote at their respective dining halls — Lentz, Grinnell or Trueblood — and must present a meal ticket in addition to their fee statement and ID.

Shaw: 'United front' advantage of system

By Shelley Davis
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw told faculty members Tuesday that one of the major advantages of the new governance system is that it provides a "united front" to state and federal officials.

Shaw, speaking at the Faculty Senate meeting, said this united front is necessary because the 1980s will bring a time of scarce resources for public institutions of higher education.

"We are going to need a united front to get the maximum resources that are available," Shaw said.

However, while stressing the effectiveness of one voice, Shaw said there are many issues which still must be left to the individual campuses.

Some of these issues, many of which were brought up by the senate members, are sabbatical policies for faculty members, campus compliance with Title IX, and the allocation of monies that each campus receives.

"You must make decisions at the university level," Shaw said. "I can sympathize, but I see it as an internal matter."

Other advantages of the chancellor system that Shaw sees include better planning at the systems level, cooperation between the two campuses in the use of resources, the ability to be able to combine research if only on the basic level, and the chance to work together in re-examining existing policies and procedures of the Board of Trustees.

Concerning the board, Shaw said he feels a "clear division of labor" is needed—that "the lines of responsibility should be made clear."

"We need to cut their code of policy in half," Shaw said. "We need a division of labor to move the board out of operational decisions to streamline it."

Shaw again stated the need for faculty salaries to be the "highest priority in the fiscal 1981 budget." Stating figures that the purchasing power of faculty members has decreased 20 percent since 1970, Shaw said "the challenge is to obtain the most state monies we can, so more dollars can go into this area."

In other business, the Faculty Senate approved the formation of two ad hoc committees to study the problems of faculty members without tenure and the promotion policy.

Speaking about faculty without tenure, Patricia Elmore, chairwoman of the committee, said concern has surfaced about whether the University "provides things to get tenured."

"Is there a problem re-emerging where people are being exploited by the University and then sent on their way," Elmore asked.

Car windows broken during vandalism spree

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

Twenty-five reports of broken car windows highlighted an unusually high number of auto vandalism reports received by Carbondale police early this week.

Police said they are not sure if the rash of window-breaking can be connected to the recent Iranian demonstrations on campus, but they have related a separate incident of auto vandalism to the current protest controversy.

The air was let out of all the tires of a car belonging to Hamid Daneshvar-Hosseini, graduate student in engineering, early Sunday or late Saturday, police said.

"This incident has the possibility of being tied to the Iranian situation," said Tom McNamara, assistant to the police chief.

The 25 window reports were received by police from 8:05 a.m. Sunday to 9:11 p.m.

Monday. McNamara said many of the windows appeared to have been shattered by BB guns.

"Some of the incidents (in the recent spree) are definitely related and they are being investigated as such," McNamara said. "Others are going to be treated as separate, distinct instances."

McNamara said some of the incidents can be related because the damage appeared to have been done in the same manner. At least two broken window reports included statements by the owners that the damage appeared to have been done with a BB gun.

A similar spree of car window-breaking occurred in Carbondale about a year ago, McNamara said. However, he would not comment on whether the two sprees could be related.

Lewis Park Apartments, 800 E. Grand, was hardest hit by the rash of auto vandalism.

Police suspect arson in lumber fire

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

Murphysboro police suspect arson in a fire which destroyed the Swofford Lumber Co. in Murphysboro Monday night.

A representative from the state fire marshal's office was called in Tuesday by Murphysboro Fire Chief Chester Steele to investigate the blaze, which caused an estimated $75,000 in damages to three storage buildings and their contents.

The buildings took up about a quarter of a city block on Hall Street, fire department officials said.

Steele refused to comment on why arson was being suspected in the case, awaiting the fire marshal's report Tuesday.

Steele said the fire broke out at about 8:35 p.m. Four fire engines were dispatched to the blaze and the fire was under control by 10 p.m., he added. The Murphysboro Fire Department was aided in its efforts by De Soto firemen.

Carbondale firemen were on stand-by duty in Murphysboro in case another fire broke out in the city.

The fire was first reported by Murphysboro police officer Ronald Manwaring, who said he was checking the air in the tires of his squad car at a gas station on the corner of 15th and Walnut Streets when he noticed the blaze.

A witness to the fire, Don Cremer, said flames engulfed a half a city block around the lumber company. He said the flames were leaping "considerably higher than the trees."

Cremer said the tires on his car — which was parked in an alley across from the lumber company — were melted by heat from the fire. The rubber molding around his back window caught fire, causing the window to break, he added.

GSC plan asks all students to defer spring fee payments

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

A resolution to encourage all students to defer their fees for spring semester 1980 will be proposed at the Graduate Student Council meeting Wednesday night.

The resolution, drawn up by the executive council of the GSC, was made "because no constituency input was asked about the new date," said Gary Brown, GSC president.

"Hopefully in the future the University will have the courtesy of obtaining constituency input," Brown said.

For the past two years, students have had their fees due on the Friday before classes begin.

Currently for spring semester, students will have to defer or pay their fees on or before Jan. 11 or their registration will be canceled.

According to Richard Millman, assistant to the president, the reason constituency input was not asked was simply a "slip through the cracks."

A registration committee was formed at the beginning of fall semester 1978. People from administration and records, student work and financial aid, housing, several vice presidents, a student and an adviser were on the committee, Millman said.

The student was a GSC representative who did not attend the meetings, Brown said. Even though the representative should have gone to the meetings, issues like this should be represented by the input of the whole council and not one person, Brown claimed.

Millman said the registration committee made several recommendations in March 1979 to former President Warren Brandt, Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank Horton and Vice President for Student Affairs Bruce Swinburne.

He said the recommendations were to implement a change in the registration calendar and institute a late fee, which would be put into effect in spring 1980.

"The proposals were supposed to go out to the different constituency groups," Millman said. "But because of the governance change, it just didn't get done."

The late registration fee still being studied by the committee will not be in effect spring 1980, Millman said.

Millman said that Horton and Kirby Browning, director of admissions and records, decided on the current registration fee payment deadline of Jan. 11.

Millman said the reason for moving up the time of paying fees was to help students get into classes on the first day and not the end of the week.

Millman said by students paying earlier, closed classes will be opened up. Student can then add a class the week before school begins and be in that class on the first day.

In Tuesday's Daily Egyptian a quote calling the exiled Shah of Iran "a criminal" was incorrectly attributed to David Gorsage. Instead, the statement was made by Tom Anderson, a student in public relations.

Order to return shah dropped

By the Associated Press

Iranian leaders Tuesday dropped their demand that the shah be handed over to them immediately and set new conditions for freeing the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran. But the Muslim militants holding the hostages rejected any compromise.

Iran also accused the United States of stirring a "climate of war" in the world, called for a meeting of the U.N. Security Council, and hinted it might seek an OPEC oil embargo against America.

No plans for shah to leave country

WASHINGTON (AP) — The shah of Iran requires additional surgery for a neck tumor and there are no plans for him to leave the country, U.S. officials said late Tuesday.

"His condition is getting worse and worse," said one official, who asked not to be identified. The official said the shah's tumor was "the size of a baseball."

The deposed ruler was admitted to the United States for cancer treatment and a gall bladder ailment Oct. 22. He has been hospitalized at New York Hospital — Cornell Medical School Center.

Iranians target of demonstrations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 50,000 Iranian students in the United States, told to report to immigration officials or face deportation, were the targets of more demonstrations Tuesday across the country.

Chicagoan lifetime shortest in nation

CHICAGO (AP) — It's an ill wind that blows no good in Chicago, a health study concludes.

Statistics indicate that life in the Windy City is shorter than elsewhere in the nation, says the Chicago Health Systems Agency.

Its survey, compiled from a variety of sources, shows that Chicagoans are worse off when it comes to life-expectancy and infant mortality. Homicides play a major part in the findings.

Food airlift OK'd for refugee camps

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, acting at his wife's behest, ordered an immediate U.S. airlift of special food for children and other supplies Tuesday to Indo-Chinese refugee camps in Thailand.

Rosalynn Carter, who visited the camps last week, announced the presidential action when she detailed her recommendations for helping thousands of sick and starving refugees.

"We cannot lose time," she told a White House gathering of executives from international relief agencies. "The situation is urgent."

Controversial dam nears completion

LOUDON, Tenn. (AP) — The Tellico Dam, which defeated challenges from the snail darter and the Cherokee Indians, overcame what may be its final obstacle Tuesday as federal marshals evicted the last two of 341 farmers whose land was taken for the 38,000-acre federal project.

"It looks like this is about the end of it," mailman Beryl Moser said as three carloads of marshals escorted him out of the white frame home where he was born 46 years ago.

The dam, begun in 1966, was finished last month after Congress and President Carter exempted it from wildlife laws that stopped it in 1977.

Evacuated persons begin trip home

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — Most of the deadly chlorine from a wrecked tanker in this western Toronto suburb had safely dissipated into the atmosphere by Tuesday. Many of the 220,000 persons evacuated began returning home. But officials said the danger was not over.

Authorities said the 50,000 persons who live in a 30-square-mile area around the wreck site would have to spend a third night away from home because of continued danger of explosion and subsequent spread of chlorine gas.

Doctors have no right to deny birth control

A recent story in the DE revealed the amazing statistic that the Health Service receives two cases of pregnancy per day. Such a figure ought to be unacceptable in this era of advanced sexual awareness and easily-obtained birth control devices.

Certainly, those who participate in sexual activity without using birth control devices must accept the consequences. But, according to a Lawrenceville family physician, many doctors are to blame as well.

Larry Herron, past president of the Illinois Association of Maternal and Child Care, said doctors sometimes refuse requests made by adolescents for birth control devices, instead of prescribing contraceptives.

Some doctors are making moral judgements in their refusal to provide contraceptives for the sexually-active teen-ager. Herron, a doctor, said that "we shouldn't take a moral stand on whether or not we're going to prescribe contraceptives."

Doctors who make such judgments try to deter sexual activity. But, according to Herron, it doesn't work.

"Withholding protection against unwanted pregnancy has never been a deterrent against adolescent sexual activity," he said.

Such doctoral behavior only increases the growing problem of unwanted pregnancies, and consequently increases the incidence of abortion.

According to Health Service estimates, about 97 percent of the pregnancies they diagnose result in abortions. With the continuing furor over abortion rights in this state, a doctor's refusal to prescribe contraceptives is inexcusable.

The problem of teen-age pregnancies is not only a big-city problem, according to Herron. He said at least half of the 150 children he delivers yearly are to teen-age mothers, nearly half of them unmarried.

Herron cited the birth control pill as the most preferable contraceptive for adolescents, but added that barrier methods like condoms and diaphragms are not efficient enough for their use.

It is obvious that the birth control pill, despite some objections concerning side effects (particularly with regard to middle-aged users), is very effective in preventing unwanted pregnancies.

Even though the effectiveness of other contraceptives varies, using any one of them is certainly better than not using one at all. When a doctor refuses to prescribe a contraceptive for a person concerned enough to ask for one, they are exercising an unwarranted right.

A doctor's first responsibility is to the patient. Moral judgments about the rightness or wrongness of a patient's behavior have no place in the medical profession. With the increasing number of both abortions and unwanted pregnancies, doctors who have made such judgments should realize that their refusal to dispense birth control aid won't deter someone from engaging in sexual activity.

Such a realization would make it imperative for a doctor to not only prescribe the use of contraceptives, but to encourage their use, especially among younger, more sexually-active people.

Letters

Birth control for men, too

I feel that I must comment on Jenny Nelson's letter concerning birth control. I find it disturbing that so many women are "accidentally" getting pregnant. However, I think that birth control is a shared responsibility, since a woman cannot get pregnant by herself.

The responsibility has always been pushed onto the woman, since she is the one who bears the children. But who are the people who have been doing the research into contraception? Until recently, you would have had to say "men," so, of course, they have not tried to affect their own fertility, they have gone after the woman's role in conception. How many times has a man tried (and I mean really tried) to pressure a woman into intercourse because he wants it? I'm sure that most of us are familiar with that scenario. Do you think that he is worried about birth control? Has the fact that she is not on "the pill" ever stopped a man in that situation? It might, but more likely, it hasn't stopped all that many.

Sure, it's foolish to take a risk—but condoms are readily available and easy to use. How many men are willing to use them? Most just complain about the lack of sensation, or about how "messy" they are, and just refuse to use them. Maybe we should go back to the days of the drive-ins, and men carrying them in their wallets. Maybe, in this day of women's liberation, women should start carrying them in their wallets; then we'll see who complains about spontaneity.

Not all garbage belongs in sewer

This letter is in response to the article, "Nuclear Problem Threatens Research," appearing Monday, Nov. 5. Specifically I address this letter to Gerhard Jasper, the SIU-C Radiation Safety Officer.

It is disturbing to think that the flippancy of your comments might be a tragic reflection of a general attitude of people in your position and field. At least federal regulations have prevented you from dumping wastes produced by research studies on this campus in campus lake or burying them beneath our once prospective golf course...so far.

Your references to the bigwigs at Harvard, Yale, and other such universities beating on their desks as your hope-for-answer to this problem is a display of Archie Bunker rationalizing.

There is no solution in merely sending our radioactive garbage off to be buried in someone else's yard. The governors of Nevada, Washington and South Carolina have not based their decisions on stubborn whims, Mr. Jasper. It is in protest, a very valid protest to the inexcusable carelessness in the packaging and shipping of nuclear wastes to their states.

If your only alternative is to dump it into our sanitary sewage system because this kind of practice can be done in accordance with federal guidelines, we are in big trouble. Hopefully, there are some fine environmentally-concerned minds on this campus that can use their training and focus in on this problem to come up with a few ingenious ideas. Truly, this is the greatest danger facing our lives and the earth as we go into our 1980s. If there is such a thing as sin, then what larger sin can mankind be committing than to foul this planet as we are?

You, as our Radiation Safety Officer, can only offer us your hope that it won't come to throwing this waste in the sewage system.

Takes two to tangle

In response to Jenny Nelson's letter in the Wednesday, Nov. 7 issue of the DE, I felt an urgency to respond.

To begin with, it "takes two to tango." Who do you suppose the man's responsibility for birth control lays? Are not condoms still available? And is it not possible that a man could always take the time to find out if a woman has taken any precautionary measures before intercourse? Or are women the only gender susceptible to "spontaneity"?

To put the entire burden of population and birth control on the female population of this world is "inconceivable" if not totally archaic!

In taking the birth control pill, for example, a woman risks her health in many ways—harmful effects could include blood clots, strokes, and possibly sterility, among other dangers. (Research is being done in the area of male oral contraception, so we hear.)

Not only do girls "give up the tooth fairy and Santa Claus" to become women, but it's about time boys grew up also.

Citizens not separate

Concerning Iranian demonstrator Mohsen Badiey's statement "We are friends of the American people. It is the American government that is guilty here. We are against the government only." I think Badiey needs to be reminded of two points:

First, it takes two parties to form a friendship. I don't know who Badiey's American "friends" are. In light of recent and not-so-recent developments, I think Badiey is flattering himself.

Second, the American government is "of the people, by the people and for the people" (unlike some countries that shall remain nameless.) No general separation of American people and government, such as Badiey's, can be made. To accuse the government is to accuse the people as well.

As for the Shah's alleged crimes, I, for one, believe they were perpetrated by Iranians against Iranians. The CIA could not have been half as influential as the Ayatollah's "religious" policies, and now he is the persecutor of the Iranian people.

Professor forms kinetic sculptures

By Wendy Barten
Student Writer

Brent Kington, professor of metal and blacksmithing at SIUC, has been fascinated by weather vanes, whirly-gigs and other objects moved by the wind for more than 10 years. This fascination is now a special research project, approved by the university, titled "Kinetic Sculpture - An Exploration of Movement, Line and Space." Kington said that originally his sculptures were designed for children and followed the strict arrow motif of early weather vanes. His kinetic sculptures now utilize a different balancing technique which "frees the movement" of the traditional weather vane, although an arrow motif is still used. "Weather vanes have only horizontal movement because of a ball bearing system. These sculptures have verticle and lateral movement as well as horizontal movement."

Each stainless steel sculpture has its own pedestal on which it balances on a single rod. These pieces "play in the wind, they don't imply wind direction," he said. "Space is determined by the lines of the pieces. The lines open and close space."

The stainless steel adds the dimension of reflected light to the outdoor sculptures. Kington said that he used to use mild steel, a steel that rusts, because he liked the texture it added to the work. Now he uses only stainless steel rods of varying lengths and dimensions.

"There are a variety of scales used," Kington said. "But there is little difference in the delicacy or movement."

Kington said he had a "multiplicity of ideas" before his involvement in metal and blacksmithing ideas for sculpture. Ten years worth of work was exhibited in New York City in October, 1978.

"The show was well received," Kington said. He added that the last five years have helped him develop and mature his ideas.

Force used to create sculpture

By Craig DeVriese
Staff Writer

Art often subtly pits one force or form against another to create a visual rhythm. In taking that process to what they call "its logical extreme," Joel Feldman, an assistant professor of art, and Bernie Hoscy, a graduate student in the Master of Fine Arts program, have removed the subtlety.

Feldman and Hoscy employed the method of force against force to complete a sculpture which can be seen in the second floor courtyard of Fanner Hall.

The sculpture consists of a large wooden beam, a reinforced steel frame and a winch rated at 3 tons of pulling power. The concept behind the sculpture was to pit the beam against the pressure of the winch and let the end result be the sculpture.

"It's the idea of two opposing forces competing to complete a third, separate piece," Feldman said. "The forms that come out of something like this you can't get in any other way." The end result was not exactly what Feldman had anticipated. Instead of causing

'Apocalypse': A study of contrasts

By John Carter
Monday Editor

Having tantalized the public for three years, Francis Ford Coppola has finally released his much-heralded, $30 million epic drama "Apocalypse Now," and it is a tremendous exercise in both exhilaration and ennui.

Cinematically, the movie is extraordinary. With photography directed by Vittorio Storaro, whose lush eye has captured such movies as "Last Tango in Paris" and found something more venerable than power and wealth. Coppola's Marlow, Captain Willard (Martin Sheen), enters the jungle to "terminate with extreme prejudice" Colonel Kurtz (Marlon Brando).

Kurtz was a gallant soldier and superb leader until he was accused of murdering four South Vietnamese officials whom he believed were double agents. The absurdity of the accusation in the midst of such an insane war drives Kurtz to abandoning the military establishment to fight his own war, in which "horror" and "moral terror" are to be embraced lest they become the enemy, and, ultimately, the victor. The military establishment does not agree, hence Willard's mission.

A Review

"The Conformist," the terrible beauty of the jungle, albeit a battleground, caresses the viewer's eye.

It is, perhaps, Storaro's presence that binds the film together. Without the supple images and shocking realities that he so magnificently creates, the film might easily have become an unimpressive collage of Viet Nam-era news clips. That does not happen, though the screenplay certainly tries.

The movie is based loosely on Joseph Conrad's novella "Heart of Darkness," in which the protagonist, Marlow, journeys into the depths of the African jungle seeking a man who has journey, rather than being a congruent mass of rising action, is a seemingly contrived boat ride through the wilds of Viet Nam and Cambodia. Willard's narrations (written by Michael Hlerr) and the incidents that occur on the journey try to develop the conflicts that haunt Willard throughout the movie, and eventually lead him to understand the motives of Kurtz.

Coppola movie barely misses mark

But it is only after Willard has confronted Kurtz that these essential elements of the movie present themselves. That, while not being too late, does nothing for the body of the story, which seems fabricated and all too convenient. It becomes boring if the theme of the movie is being considered at all, and at this point in the movie that concept is not defined or recognizable.

Paradoxically, it is during the boat's journey into moral darkness that some of the film's strongest moments, visually and, in a smaller sense, intellectually, are presented. When Willard meets Lieutenant Colonel Kilgore (Robert Duvall), a war-loving man as obsessed with surfing as with killing "slopes," the ensuing battle is as vicious and dramatically filmed as any battle sequence ever. An infantry of helicopters descend on a "charlie" strong-hold to the strains of Wagner's "The Ride of the Valkyries," and proceed to destroy it.

As the river boat nears Cambodia, it must first pass the Do Lung Bridge, which, according to the boat's captain (Albert Hall), is destroyed every night by the Viet Cong and rebuilt every day by the Americans. Described by one officer as the "asshole of the world," the locale lives up to that description. One particularly revealing bit of conversation takes place between Willard, who is seeking the base's commanding officer in the midst of a mortar barrage, and a black soldier who is shooting wildly into the darkness—Willard: "Who's the c.o. here?" Soldier: "Ain't you?"

Besides the beginning of the film, which sets an intriguing and proper tone for the film with its drunken and delusional introduction of Captain Willard, the final portion of the film, when Willard reaches Kurtz's enclave, is the visual and intellectual high-point of the film. In the grounds of the camp, the faces of the montagnard tribesmen, the events that transpire—all, with the possible exception of the symbolically-cliche ritual sacrifice, are captivating.

Concerning individual performances, Sheen does not give a particularly striking one, though the fault lies more with the script than his acting. Brando, though only present in the film's final half hour and bound by an occasionally melodramatic script, is spectacular. His evocative portrayal of the egomaniacal and murderous Kurtz is particularly interesting, laced with subtlety and insane menace. And the river boat crew accurately portrays mere kids coping with war. They give tremendous support to the main characters.

Yet the film is lacking. The moral questions that Coppola asks become muddled in the immensity of the project, and the superb direction and photography are, in a sense, defeated by the somewhat unbelievable segments throughout the body of the work. It seems that in trying to create the definitive film on the Viet Nam war, Coppola has taken on too much of a task. He falls short, but certainly not into folly.

a vertical split through the middle of the beam, the winch managed to crack the beam, leaving a horizontal crack.

The thick wooden beam, which Feldman predicts could hold almost 3 tons without breaking, gave in only after a series of bouts with the winch and the brace.

One particular session resulted in a severely bent frame. Feldman and Hoseny went back to the drawing board and strengthened the frame. Last week, while checking the stress on the frame, the artists found things going so smoothly they decided to complete the sculpture right then.

"The sculpture itself becomes like an artifact," he said. "It's the remains of the process."

Completion of Morris statue delayed, with no end in sight

private citizens who contributed money to the statue fund.

Joe Goodman, executive director of the SIU Foundation would not disclose the total amount of money collected for the statue.

The statue fund raising difficulty is two-fold, said committee member John King, chairman of the Department of Higher Education. "First, there is a weariness in Southern Illinois to support an artistic concept. Second, is the instability of the University administration to carry out artistic projects," he said.

Hawley was also critical of the University's involvement in raising funds for the statue.

"Maybe all it takes is for Chancellor Shaw to say, 'yes, let's remember our past' and call for contributions. It's gonna take somebody with some clout. The times are right now, we should look to our traditions. Maybe when Morris dies it will get done," Hawley said. "We cannot put our hands into someone's pocket to make them write a check," he added.

The University has not contributed any money towards the statue. All contributions taken by the committee were from private citizens, Hawley said.

Brilliant said she was not commissioned to create the statue of Morris but decided to create the statue on her own because Morris was central to the growth of Southern Illinois and to the development of the SIU system. Brilliant has over $11,000 invested in the statue, which took her about two-and-a-half years to create.

"I felt that one day, when he dies, they'd do a statue of him. But that's never a satisfactory sculpture. It's just embarrassing. They haven't done the proper publicity for it. I don't know who's fault it is," said Brilliant, who became acquainted with Morris in 1966 when he invited Brilliant's husband Herbert Marshall to join the SIU-C faculty in theatre.

In a 1964 Time magazine article, Morris said, "You can have pursuit of knowledge for knowledge's sake along with a practical, direct approach to society."

The 71-year-old Morris was listed in serious condition two years ago after he was hospitalized in Kentucky. Mrs. Morris could not be reached for details on Morris' illness.

"Morris was a complex and occasionally controversial figure," statue committee member John Gardner said. Gardner attributed the failure of the committee to successfully raise enough money to have the statue cast and transported from Germany to "a lack of interest in the project."

"The region, over time, will feel badly that it (funding the statue) was not done," Gardner said.

A site was never chosen for the statue, which portrays Morris in a scholarly gown with the SIU seal hanging from his neck. Within the seal are the Latin words Deo Volente, meaning with God's sanction.

One proposed site for the statue was near the front entrance of Morris Library. Another possible erection site was inside the foyer of the library, but the library's foundation would not support the statue, Gardner said.

Many of the committee members feel confident the statue will someday be erected.

"In the year 2,000, the statue will come closer to explaining to a student what Delyte Morris was like than any other memorial could possibly accomplish," said King.

Over the years, Brilliant has lost interest in the project although she would still like to see the statue erected. "I just don't care anymore," she said.

Cooperative education offers pre-graduation job experience

By Shelley Davis
Staff Writer

For students who wish to broaden their educational experience before they graduate, Career Planning and Placement is offering nine cooperative education programs.

According to Minnie Minnito, coordinator of the Cooperative Education Program, students in business, engineering and agriculture may work for an employer for spring or summer terms and receive a minimum of $800 to $1,000 a month.

There is also one with the Social Security Administration, which is open to psychology, sociology, English, journalism, math, business or public administration and majors.

"The program allows the students to relate to their major courses better and the experience provides them with what employers are looking for at the other end," Minnito explained.

Minnito said the students, who must be sophomores or juniors, must complete an additional work period with the same employer before they graduate. Employers provide transportation to and from the city in which they are located and assist the students in finding living accommodations.

"In reality, the program could put someone a year behind in school depending on how ambitious he is," Minnito explained. "But it could also mean a $1,000 to $3,000 increase in starting salary after the student graduates. It makes the student more marketable."

Other employers participating in the program are the U.S. Forest Service (applications due Nov. 15); Comptroller of Currency; Firestone Electric Wheel Division, Quincy; Ashland Oil Co., Ashland, Ky.; IBM, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; Kimmel, Jensen, Werger, & Wray, Rock Island; Commonwealth Edison, Chicago; and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

Minnito can be contacted at Woody Hall B 204.

Engineering professor appointed to city energy advisory commission

By Cindy Humphreys
Staff Writer

An SIU-C associate professor of thermal and environmental engineering was recently appointed to a three-year term on Carbondale's Energy Advisory Commission because of his background in energy conservation and solar work.

Albert Kent, who has been with SIU-C for 13 years, said he hopes "to bring to the commission some additional technical background and insights, so they could be used to evaluate ideas and proposals for commission approval."

The Energy Advisory Commission advises the City Council on Energy matters to make Carbondale a more energy efficient city.

Kent said he will use his formal technical training to help determine the feasibility of submitted proposals. "I have a bad habit," he grinned, "of asking what happens if...?" Kent said.

The view of the average person is a very important part of a proposal's feasibility, Kent said. "If an energy efficient system is so sophisticated that it is too complicated for the average person, it won't be used," he said.

Kent supports a passive solar heating system over an active system because he said he "is convinced that the passive solar system is more affordable and practical for residential buildings."

Passive solar systems depend on the structure of the building—thick walls and floors and plenty of insulation. An active solar-cell heating system involves the circulation throughout the building of water heated by the sun.

In passive solar construction, the building, by the placement and angle of its windows and skylights, becomes the solar collector, while the insulation and thick walls keep the heat in.

Switching to solar energy systems and conserving energy are important to reduce the United States' dependence on foreign oil, Kent said.

"We are currently importing about 40 to 45 percent of our total energy usage this year as foreign oil," he said. "The net result of this dependence is higher inflation, and a weaker role in international affairs."

$1,500 El Greco scholarships awarded to three students

The three finalists who will divide the $1,500 El Greco Scholarship have been announced by Nick Gritti, chairman of the selection committee.

They winners are Polly Piland, junior in apparel design and retailing; Mark Schloemann, senior in social welfare; and Robert Saal, senior in speech communication and the student trustee.

Gritti said the committee decided the recipients of the scholarship based on their community service, financial need and grade point averages. Mike Howerton and John Miller of El Greco's Nancy Hunter Harris of Student Development, Susan Nahlik of Financial Assistance, and Mitzi Wisniewski of the Undergraduate Student Organization served on the committee.

The three will receive their awards at a dinner at 7 p.m., Nov. 27, in the Ohio Room. Gritti said there were 65 applicants for the scholarship, three times as many as last year.

Carbondale to participate in smokeout

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

If people seem a little more nervous Thursday and the air seems a little less smoke-filled, it may be a sign that the Great American Smokeout has begun.

In an attempt to get people who smoke to quit and others not to begin, Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and the American Cancer Society have been trying to get people to pledge not to smoke on Thursday.

The fraternity members set up a display table in the solicitation area of the Student Center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday to get people signed up.

By Tuesday afternoon about 300 people pledged to give up their habits for 24 hours. The group wanted to get about 750 to 1,000 persons to sign up by Thursday, according to members.

Mayor Hans Fischer proclaimed Thursday as Great American Smokeout in the city and "in conjunction with Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, urges all cigarette smokers in the community and at SIU-C to demonstrate to themselves and their friends that they can quit smoking for one day."

People who want to give up smoking for the day sign a pledge card at the solicitation table. The group also has some video machines set up to show what people's lungs look like when they are diseased and normal.

Workshop to stress hospice concept, terminally ill care

The Illinois Public Health Association will sponsor a workshop on how to care for the terminally ill.

Featured speakers will be Betty J. Walston of the Illinois Department of Public Health and Ruth L. Kopp, a physician in Peoria.

Walston will speak about hospice programs, which bring terminally ill patients together in home or hospital environments to discuss problems and reinforce each other.

Kopp will speak about medical, emotional and psychological care of the terminally ill.

Campus Briefs

The Student Recreation Center will be renting lockers and selling annual and semester use permits for spring semester beginning Dec. 3 at the Information Center.

An adult holiday craft workshop, sponsored by the Carbondale Park District, will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Dec. 1 at the district's Community Center, 208 W. Elm St. A Kids Only Christmas Workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. the same day. A $3 registration fee for either program will be taken at the Park District Offices, 1115 W. Sycamore St. Pre-register by Nov. 26.

Her papers were: "Children's Understanding of Indirect Requests," and "On the Psychological Relationship between Literal and Conveyed Meanings of Indirect Requests."

Programs in the Division of Social and Community Services have consolidated their offices on the ground level of Quigley Hall. Black American Studies moved from its quarters at the old Baptist Foundation building and the Community Development program moved from Faner Hall. The Social Welfare program office was already located in Quigley Hall.

James E. Murphy, assistant professor of journalism, recently presented a paper titled, "Bias or Censorship: A Correspondent's Dilemma?" at the African Studies Association Convention in Los Angeles.

Red Cross attempts to reach 1,200 pint goal in blood drive

By Cindy Humphreys
Staff Writer

The Red Cross Bloodmobile is on campus this week, and an hour of time and a pint of blood donated to it can help up to four people who need blood.

Arnold Air Society is sponsoring the drive, which is being held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday in Ballroom D of the Student Center. "Our goal is 1,200 pints," said Vivian Ugent, the Jackson County coordinator of Bloodmobile volunteers.

"The Missouri-Illinois Red Cross region needs 750 pints per day for the 147 hospitals it services. We're hoping to get 300 pints per day from this drive but today (Monday) is a little slow. We'll probably get more than 200 pints, but not the 300 we wanted."

Arnold Air Society has been registering students to donate blood for the past two weeks, but walk-in donors are needed.

Walkins who arrive at a busy time may be registered for another time period.

Donors must be over 17, healthy and weigh at least 110 pounds. No one who has ever had hepatitis, cancer, epilepsy, sickle cell anemia or malaria may donate blood.

"Most people, if they're in reasonably good health and have eaten that day, experience very few problems when they give blood," Ugent said.

Before the Red Cross accepts donors, their medical history, blood pressure and temperature is taken. "to make sure that the donation is in the donor's best interest," she said.

A drop of blood is also taken, and is used to determine whether the iron content of the blood is high enough. "Only 3 percent of the population gives blood," Ugent said, "when many, many more than that are eligible. Less than 10 percent of would-be donors are rejected."

The average person has about 10 pints of blood, and less than a pint is taken from each donor. Cookies, punch, coffee and sandwiches are provided to replenish the fluid loss.

"This loss" can benefit up to four people, since not all people who need blood need whole blood. Red Cross laboratories separate blood into red cells, white cells, platelets and plasma derivatives. Packed red cells are used for transfusions, white cells are used for low disease resistance, platelets are used to control bleeding in leukemia patients and plasma derivatives are used for many things, but especially to combat shock.

Besides a feeling of satisfaction, donors receive, within several weeks of their donation, a card which documents the date and place of their donation, and informs them of their blood type.

Elections for Civil Service officers delayed by distribution of ballots

By Shelley Davis
Staff Writer

Elections for officers of the Civil Service Bargaining Organization will be held until the end of the month.

According to Richard Musgraves, CSBO secretary, the ballots should be in the mail by Thursday. Problems with the printing procedures of the ballots delayed the distribution of the ballots.

Musgraves said about half of the candidates are running for the first time. He said the Executive Committee was encouraged by the increased interest shown by members this year.

"We have been thinking along the same lines all the time, Musgraves explained. "We need some new ideas from some new people."

Candidates running for this year's election are, Chairperson: Michele Edwards, secretary in the College of Human Resources and Edw. Harris, technical assistant at Morris Library. Vice Chairperson: Richard Musgraves, laboratory shop supervisor in the Office of Research and Development and John Wooten, service worker in the Physical Plant. Secretary: Phyllis McCowen, secretary in Health Education. Treasurer: Gary Auld, records officer in Admission and Records.

There are also 23 other people running for five member-at-large positions. Members-at-large serve in a non-officer capacity on the Executive Committee.

Students honored for work with social service agencies

By University News Service

The University Year for Action program at SIU-C recently held its annual recognition banquet to honor former program members who worked at various social service agencies during the previous academic year.

Leslie Snider of Cairo and Patrick Heilman of Carbondale received awards as outstanding volunteers of the year. Snider worked at the Pulaski-Alexander Mental Health Association and the Department of Children and Family Services in Cairo. Heilman worked at Hill House in Carbondale.

The UYA program is designed to involve the University in helping solve problems encountered by the low-income community. Each year UYA accepts about 30 students who are placed in 12-month internships in various community groups and social agencies throughout Southern Illinois.

Others honored at the banquet were Norma Kelay, Raushanah Khalliq, Geraldyn Kurtz, Ladonn McIntyre, Patricia McKinley and Milton Robinson, all of Carbondale.

Also, Thomas S. Kelso Jr., of Chicago, Cynthia Raganyi of Dongola, Frances C. Webb of Jonesboro, and Ellen Norton of Moline.

Gymnasts to mix quality, depth

By Rick Klatt
Staff Writer

Six months ago, the curtain fell on a disappointing 1978-79 women's gymnastics season.

For the first time the lady gymnasts failed to win the state and Midwest Regional championships. Consequently, SIU fell to the 20th in the national rankings after holding the ninth spot a year earlier and fourth place in 1976-77.

The situation didn't get any better during the summer for women's gymnastics Coach Herb Vogel. The veteran coach lost two All-Americans. Linda Nelson graduated and Cindy Moran transferred to Arizona State.

Despite this, Vogel anticipates the return of inequality gymnastics that won the Salukis AIAW national championships in 1970, 1974, and 1975.

"We are going to have a very good team," the 16-year coach said. "Last year, we didn't have very good depth, so when we lost girls to injuries, we didn't have the manpower to be highly competitive."

Depth should be no problem when the Salukis open their season Dec. 2 against Memphis State. At that time, there will be nine names on the roster.

Returning from last year's team will be senior captain Maureen Hennessey, juniors Patti Tveit and Pam Conklin, and sophomores Val Painton and Lisa Peden.

Vogel described the returning five as an "exceptional nucleus to build a winning team from."

Add to the five returnees a former SIU All-American, a United States Gymnastics Federation champion, a two-time Illinois state champion, and an "Elite" class gymnast and the future of the team seems to look bright.

"Overall, this could be the best team SIU has had in seven years," Vogel said. "Everyone has the drive and attitude to be a winner."

The recruits are probably the most encouraging aspect of the 1979-80 season. Former All-American Denise Didier will return to the squad after a two-year layoff.

Didier was twice an All-American, a national uneven bar champion, and a national vaulting runner-up in her first two years as a Saluki.

Pam Harrington, of New Bethany, N.Y., comes to SIU holding the titles of the 1976 USGF uneven bar, floor exercise, and all-around champion.

Karen Parker of Champaign adds depth to the Salukis in both the floor exercise and balance beam. Parker has been rated as an "Elite" class gymnast by the USGF. The Elite class is the highest rank given to a gymnast by the USGF.

Lori Erickson, the newest Saluki, comes to SIU as a freshman transfer from Southwest Missouri State. Erickson left when the team disbanded because of internal problems. While attending Palatine High School, she took the Illinois high school all-around championship in both her sophomore and senior years. As a junior, she was runner-up.

Didier, Erickson, and Parker will not be eligible to compete until second semester. The trio will miss four meets.

"We will not be as strong a team until second semester," Vogel said. "But when the three other girls are able to compete, we will be solid in all events."

Women gymnasts compete in four events: vaulting, uneven bars, balance beam and floor exercise. All-around scores are taken for athletes that compete in all of the events.

Painton will be counted on to score in all four events. The sophomore, from Webster, N.Y., was the only Saluki to qualify for the AIAW national meet last year. She won the state all-around championship and placed third in the Midwest Regional. As the Salukis' premier floor specialist, Painton received the highest score in the event last season, an 8.9 against Michigan State.

Vogel said senior captain Hennessey must continue to record high scores in her specialties: vaulting and uneven bars. Last year she was the top all-around scorer in three of the first four meets. She recorded the highest score for a Saluki last year with a 8.95 in the vaulting exercise against Grandview College. The Essex Junction, Vt. native missed going to the nationals by only .07 of a point.

Vogel said he is counting on juniors Tveit and Conklin to score in their specialties, floor exercise and uneven bars, respectively. Last season, Tveit was the No. 2 entry on the floor exercise, but stands behind Painton and Harrington in Vogel's preseason depth chart.

Conklin sat out part of last year because of a kidney infection.

Football crowds should be larger

Division II team, came into town earlier this year, 17,769 fans were on hand. Last year, thanks to good turnouts in the first four home games, the Salukis set a single-season record, averaging 13,000 per game.

That average would have been even better, but the small crowd for the final home game against Marshall lowered it considerably. The Marshall game followed a homecoming loss to Northern Illinois. The pattern seems to have remained the same this year.

After the Salukis lost to Eastern Illinois, attendance dropped off the deep end. The week after that game came the Illinois State game. A homecoming crowd of 12,300, down from the last two homecoming throngs, watched the Salukis defeat Wichita State. Then came the Indiana State game.

One loss should not have caused the drastic drop in attendance, especially since the Salukis went on a winning streak after the EIU game. At the University of Wisconsin-Marion, attendance has averaged almost 70,000 in 78,000-seat Camp Randall Stadium throughout the 1970s.

Saluki earns top defensive honors

Starting Saluki linebacker Rick Bielecki was named Missouri Valley Conference defensive player of the week for his work in Saturday's 23-21 victory over Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa.

Bielecki, a sophomore, made 20 tackles against the Bulldogs. He moved into the starting lineup three games ago, replacing Luther Foster. Bielecki had 16 tackles in the game against Indiana State, 10 of which were unassisted.

Bielecki, who was a walk-on his freshman year, was the team's top tackler in four of eight starts in 1978. He tied safety Oyd Craddock for second on the team in tackles. Both finished second behind Barwinski.

Cagers 'anxious' to play Guadalajara

Saluki cagers Darnall Jones and Charles Moore battle for a rebound in practice. Jones and Moore both will see action at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday night at the Arena when the Salukis take on the University of Guadalajara's basketball team.

Chip Shots Scott Stahmer

Crowds should be better at home football games

Like the guy in "Network," I'm mad as hell and I'm not going to take it any more.

I kept quiet when the Saluki basketball team drew just 3,000 fans two years ago for a Missouri Valley Conference tournament game against Drake. I didn't say a thing last year, when a Saluki football game against Marshall attracted 7,100 diehards. Earlier this year, I had to control myself when just 8,100 attended the SIU-Illinois State football game.

Now, however, there is no more holding back. After the SIU-Indiana State game two weeks ago, I am going public with my complaints against the sports fans of SIU and Southern Illinois.

On the surface, the Saluki-Sycamore game looked like an interesting matchup. It was a contest between two legitimate contenders for the MVC championship. ISJ went into the game with a glossy 7-2 record, while SIU entered the battle with a three-game winning streak.

Also, Indiana State boasted the Valley's most exciting offense, directed by quarterback Reggie Allen. SIU has one of the MVC's best defenses. There was a regional rivalry involved.

With all this, there should have been a big crowd (for SIU, anyway) of about 15,000, right? Wrong!

According to Sports Information Director Tom Simons' calculations, 9,100 showed up on a sunny, mild day. That meant that about 11,000 seats in McAndrew Stadium were unoccupied. Granted, the fans at the game were enthusiastic, but there weren't enough of them.

A winning team — and, like it or not, the Salukis are a winning team — should be drawing better than the 12,000 per game SIU is averaging.

To some, this may sound like cheerleading. But, from a financial standpoint, it is almost imperative that attendance increases. Ticket sales mean money, and money is a commodity the men's athletics department needs.

Maybe that is why Athletics Director Gale Sayers has chosen to let all students — college, high school and grade school — attend Saturday's game against New Mexico State for free. He may be willing to sacrifice revenue for the chance to sell the program for next season.

SIU football fans have shown they will support the team — at times. When Eastern Illinois, then the nation's top-ranked

An unfamiliar team playing a foreign-style game. That may be the best way to describe Wednesday night's opener for the SIU basketball team against the University of Guadalajara, Mexico.

"I don't really know an awful lot about them," Saluki Head Coach Joe Gottfried said, adding Guadalajara should be better than the Bulgarian National Team. The Mexican team was added after Bulgaria cancelled for unannounced reasons. Tipoff is at 7:30.

The second-year coach said his team is anxious to play Guadalajara because the Salukis have played against no one but themselves in practice. Gottfried said he is looking forward to seeing what his club can do against the Mexican team.

Also, Gottfried said he is looking forward to playing by the international rules that will be used to judge the game. The international-style game is known for its speed and physical contact.

"After all violations, the official doesn't need to lay his hands on the ball," Gottfried said. "The opponent can grab the ball, run three or four yards and throw it in. It has a much faster pace."

International rules call for the use of a 30-second clock, its use designed to quicken the pace also.

Gottfried said he is anticipating the type of play normally associated with the international brand of basketball because "it is the direction in which we want to head."

The Saluki coach believes his team has to get more physical on both the offensive and defensive boards. He likes to run, too. Gottfried said the rules will help him gauge how well his team has progressed.

"It can gauge where we're at right now," Gottfried said. "I'm looking forward to the game because we need to get more physical."

Two recognizable faces in Gottfried's starting lineup will be guard Wayne Abrams and forward Barry Smith. Lawrence Stubblefield will start at point guard, while Karl Morris, one of Gottfried's prized freshmen, will start at center.

"I really don't know who will be starting at the other forward," Gottfried said. "It could be Charles Moore or Scott Russ. We could play as many as three guards at one time. We may run a five-man motion offense."

Gottfried said he plans to use many different people in many different situations, seeing which five players work best.

"It's not a case of who's going to start, but finish," Gottfried said.

Gottfried said he expects Guadalajara to be a physical ball club. Four players on the team are 6-foot-6 or taller.

Spikers take 3rd, earn regional bid

By Mark Pabich

Coach Debbie Hunter and her SIU women's volleyball team have earned a berth at the Midwest Regional Championships in Columbus, Ohio this coming weekend, after finishing third at the Illinois state tournament. At least that's the latest word Hunter has heard.

The Salukis, seeded seventh last week at the Illinois state tournament, became one of the final four teams at the tournament by upsetting DePaul and the University of Illinois, two schools in SIU's pool.

Those upsets set the stage for what has become a large controversy, according to Hunter. The problem arose when the Salukis played the University of Illinois-Circle Campus for third place in the tournament.

Tournament guidelines set the match for third place for three games. SIU won the first game, 15-13, lost the second, 7-15, and won the third, 15-8, giving SIU third place, according to the original tournament rules. The officials, however, said the match was five games, and not three.

Reluctantly, the Salukis played the final two games against Circle, losing both of them.

"I knew something was wrong when we played those last two games," Hunter said. "There wasn't much we could do about it right then. The officials called us out for play, and I didn't want to forfeit."

Finishing third in the tournament is extremely important for a team, because the top three finishers in the Illinois tournament advance to the regionals.

Immediately following the match, Hunter went back to her hotel room and checked the tournament rules pertaining to the number of games that needed to be won in her state volleyball handbook. Realizing the rules called for a two-out-of-three match, Hunter complained to tournament director Loujean Moyer of host Northern Illinois.

Moyer brought Hunter's complaint to the IAAW commission, the governing body for women's athletics. The commission decided Sunday that the Salukis did indeed win the match, and should go to the regionals.

However, the story doesn't end there.

IAAW President Mary Jean Mullvaney then decided to overrule the commission and declared Monday that the Salukis and Circle would have to replay the match at a neutral location such as Illinois State or Eastern Illinois.

Price is right for football finale

In an effort to draw fans to Saturday's Saluki-New Mexico State football game, officials in the men's athletics department have decided to let all students, whether they be college, high school or grade school, into the game free.

Officials said the regular price of a general admission ticket sold to the public will be cut to $2. The normal price of a general admission ticket is $5.

"We'd like to see the east stands filled for this game," Athletics Director Gale Sayers said, "and if it takes letting students in free, then that's what it will be. And, we mean all students."

Sayers said SIU students, students from other universities already home for Thanksgiving break and Southern Illinois high school and grade school students will be admitted to the east stands without charge.

"We want as many people as we can attract to help the Salukis win their eighth game," Sayers explained.

SIU has a chance to win more games than any Saluki team should it beat the Aggies. The Salukis last won eight games in 1960, when the team finished with an 8-2 mark. SIU, now 7-3 overall and 3-1 in conference play, will attempt to win its sixth game in a row also.

Fred Huff, assistant director of men's athletics said he hopes the promotion will help build attendance for next season. He added, however, that the primary reason behind the move is to get people into the stands to support the team against New Mexico State.

SIU still is in the chase for a share of the Missouri Valley Conference crown. A Saluki win combined with a victory by Drake over West Texas State will allow the Salukis to win their first title, even though they'd have to share the crown with the Buffaloes.

Huff said he hopes the promotion will draw 10,000.

"Realistically speaking, I hope we can draw at least 20 to 30 groups," Huff said, adding groups from Anna, Harrisburg and Carbondale already have expressed interest in attending the game.
