Nicaragua puts armed forces on combat alert

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government, following up its warnings of a U.S. invasion, deployed tanks in strategic areas in and around the capital Monday and put its armed forces on combat alert.

In a communique received nationwide radio at 5:50 a.m. (6:30 a.m. EST), the Defense Ministry announced the state of alert ordering troops to be ready to move anywhere at anytime.

Although the communique did not mention the United States by name, Nicaraguan officials over the past two weeks have insisted that a U.S. invasion is "imminent."

U.S. State Department spokesman John Hughes, accompanying Secretary of State George P. Shultz at a meeting of the Organization of American States in Brasilia, Brazil, said the talk of an invasion was "absolute nonsense."

"A state of alert has been ordered in all the national territory for all permanent combat units on land, sea and air, reserve units and the Sandinista militias," the Nicaraguan communique said.

It also announced the deployment of armored and mechanized units of land forces based in the capital and said reserve troops and militia in the Managua area would receive combat assignments.

The communique urged citizens to report to civil defense brigades and take part in defense operations organized by the fire department, the Red Cross and the health, construction and other ministries.

In a separate communique, the civil defense high command cited the "seriousness of the threats of military aggression that Nicaragua is experiencing" and issued an urgent call for all citizens to be prepared for an attack.

Associated Press reporters and photographers saw at least 20 Soviet-made T-55 tanks, 15 of them patrolling in a northern industrial sector and others near the country's only oil refinery, west of Managua, and on roads southeast to the city of Masaya and to the southwest.

The Sandinista newspaper Barcarada published front-page photographs of artillery units and civilians reopening trenches.

USO asked by ISC to halt probe

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The International Student Council has appealed to the Undergraduate Student Organization Committee on Internal Affairs to halt its investigation of ISC and allow the council to address the charges from within, said ISC President Aris Kotsioris Monday.

The appeal was presented to the committee at a closed hearing last Friday.

The investigation, begun on Oct. 29, came as a result of five charges against the ISC.

"If there is an allegation it should come first to the organization," Kotsioris said.

He said the committee took up the investigation without first consulting the ISC executive council to find out if the problems could be solved internally.

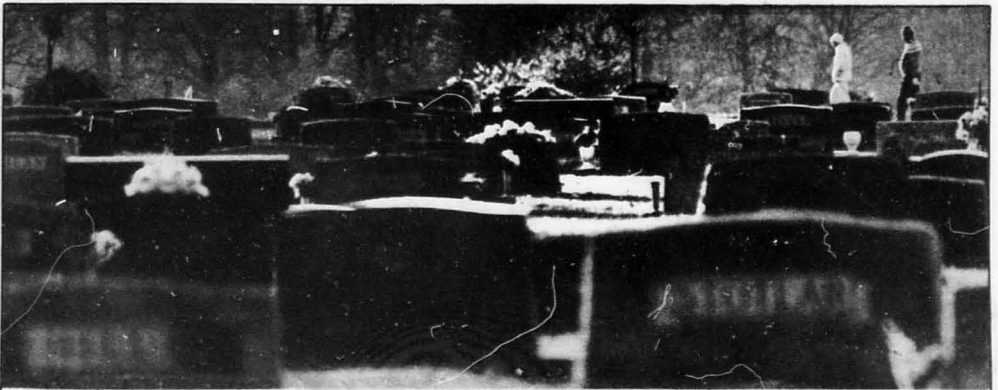

The complaints, which were presented to Committee Chairman John D. Rutledge, were never registered with the ISC, Kotsioris said.

The Committee on Internal Affairs is responsible for investigating matters concerning Registered Student Organizations, Rutledge said.

"If the complainants claim that other organizations have refused to look into the complaints, we'll look into them," he said. The ISC would be "given a chance to settle things" themselves, he said.

One of the charges accuses the executive council of violating its constitution by changing ISC bylaws without allowing the ISC voting body,

Rec Center cuts kept on hold

By Karen Wiltberger
Staff Writer

Recreation Center program and hour cuts probably won't begin until next semester after the Board of Trustees votes on a fee increase, said William Bleyer, director of intramural recreation sports.

Recommendations to gradually reduce programs and hours could have begun this week, but "chances are there will be no adjustments until they are further discussed with the advisory board," Bleyer said.

The next Intramural - Recreation Sports Advisory Board meeting is Dec. 4.

Bleyer said he wants to get more views from students, staff and members of the advisory board before starting gradual reductions based on plans for $6 and $8 fee increases. He said there wouldn't be any major changes "until it is certain they must be done."

However minor changes in programs may be implemented before a fee increase is determined. "We'll probably look at the overall schedule to see areas where the facility is not being used," he said.

The advisory board has recommended an $8 fee increase, the Graduate and Professional Council has proposed a $6 fee increase and the Undergraduate Student Organization last week voted favorably toward a $9 fee increase.

There would be "little or no change" if a $9 fee increase is approved, said Mike Dunn, Recreation Center coordinator. The center has 99 intramural programs, 35 special population programs and between 50 and 75 recreational sports programs, Dunn said.

Dunn said that many people don't realize the fee also supports five sets of outdoor tennis courts, the outdoor racketball courts, the rugby fields and Campus Lake.

An $8 fee increase would produce some cuts including an 11 and a half hour cut in Recreation Center hours, a three-day extension of break hours before breaks, and some staff and official position eliminations and reductions, according to an anticipated reduction plan released by the Office of Student Affairs.

According to the anticipated reduction plan, a $6 fee increase would produce further hour reductions at recreational facilities, including the Recreation Center, tennis courts and Campus Lake.

Certain programs would be eliminated, including summer intramurals, intramural officials, and weekend special population programs. Dance programs and climbing wall hours would suffer 50 percent reductions if the reduction plan is adopted.

Astronaut captures wayward satellite

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A free-flying astronaut captured a wayward satellite in history's first space salvage mission Monday, then he and a fellow spacewalker wrestled it aboard Discovery by brute force after a failed brace prevented use of the shuttle's robot arm.

"All right! We got it. We got it," called Dale Gardner after he and Joe Allen maneuvered the Palapa B2 satellite into place in the shuttle's cargo bay and slammed home three locking pins.

Allen had held the satellite by himself for more than 90 minutes as Gardner attached a locking frame on the can-shaped craft. The work required Gardner to tighten nine bolts and Allen was forced to rotate the craft by hand at Gardner's directions.

"I can hold it wherever you want it, Dale," said Allen, grasping a rim at one end of the craft while Gardner worked at the other end to attach the locking frame.

Allen was heard to gasp repeatedly as the 5-foot-6 astronaut strained against the inertia of the 21-by-7-foot cylindrical satellite, which weighs 1,200 pounds in Earth's gravity. He held the satellite while Discovery made one complete orbit of the Earth.

Earlier Allen had flown out to the satellite using a rocket-powered back pack. He had poked a 4-foot pole-like device called a "stinger" into the spent engine nozzle at one end of the satellite. He then threw a switch that snapped open toggle bolts and secured the stinger to the Palapa.

"Dock! Dock!" he called. "I've got it tied."

Discovery had been chasing Palapa since it was launched last Thursday.

Sniper kills one, wounds one during siege ending in suicide

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A sniper armed with a high-powered rifle and a shotgun killed one person and wounded another on Monday at the University of Oregon before killing himself inside Autzen Stadium, police said. The sniper, dressed in full combat fatigues, was found dead from self-inflicted gunshot wounds shortly after noon, police Sgt. Tim McCarthy said. About half an hour earlier, a man had been found shot to death on a bike path southeast of the stadium, police and ambulance attendants said. Nothing further was known about the victim. Eugene Police Department spokesman Eric Melgren said the sniper was armed with a semi-automatic rifle with a scope and a shotgun and had darkened his face. Police described him as in his early 20s and about 5-foot-6 in height.

Panel urges more effort to treat hypertension

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — High blood pressure is probably the single leading cause of strokes, and more effort should be made to find and treat people with this silent but lethal disease, an American Heart Association panel recommended Monday. The incidence of strokes has dropped dramatically over the past two decades, yet strokes still afflict 2 million Americans annually and kill 164,000 of them. Strokes, the nation's third leading cause of death, occur when the brain's blood supply is cut off, often by a blood clot, and brain tissue dies.

FDA calls birth control sponge 'relatively safe'

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The vaginal sponge is "a relatively safe product" for birth control, U.S. Food and Drug Administration officials said Monday after finding only 12 cases of toxic shock syndrome among an estimated 600,000 women who regularly use the device. The federal Centers for Disease Control lists more than 2,500 reported cases and 110 deaths attributed to toxic shock in the last four years, mainly among women who use tampons, although the number of cases has dropped each year and researchers are seeking a vaccine.

School districts win nearly 40 percent of tax increases

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Illinois school districts won approval of about 40 percent of tax increases on the ballot this fall, preliminary results indicate, a moderate success rate that may show taxpayers are more sympathetic with the financial plight of schools. Most of the larger districts seeking increases in last Tuesday's election were victorious, thanks in part to the efforts of ad hoc citizens' groups. Among large unit districts winning approval were Springfield, 60 cents per $100 of assessed valuation; Collinsville, 75 cents; and Elgin, 87 cents. Those increases will cost owners of homes with a $20,000 assessed valuation $120, $150 and $174, respectively.

Fair should be privately financed, official says

CHICAGO (AP) — As Chicago plans for its 1992 World's Fair, officials say many lessons can be learned from the multi-million-dollar fiasco of the New Orleans World's Fair. "The thing we should learn is that the only way to go is not with public financing — it's with private financing," says Bernard L. Stone, chairman of the Chicago City Council's Committee on Special Events and World's Fair. Stone's comment came Monday, one day after the New Orleans fair closed a six-month run that ended 3.8 million visitors short of projections and well over $100 million in debt.

Author finds rationale for book banning 'scary'

PEORIA (AP) — An author of popular children's books — three of which recently were removed from library shelves in local elementary schools — said Monday she finds part of the rationale for the banning "scary." Award-winning children's storyteller Judy Blume said, "It's scary when a (school) superintendent says, 'Let's get rid of anything that's controversial.'" Ms. Blume was referring to Peoria School Superintendent Harry Whitaker's comments as he defended last week's decision to ban three of Ms. Blume's stories.

Suspect in family slaying expected to testify

ROCKFORD (AP) — David Hendricks, charged with murder in the ax-and-butcher-knife slayings of his wife and three children, is expected to testify shortly after his trial begins its eighth week Tuesday. Hendricks, 30, a Bloomington businessman who designed and sold back braces, was arrested last December and accused in the Nov. 7, 1983, slayings of his wife, Susan, 30, and their children: Rebekah, 9; Grace, 7; and Benjamin, 5. He likely will testify late Tuesday or on Wednesday, his lawyers say.

Coal miners fight police in Britain; 54 injured

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of striking coal miners armed with firebombs and homemade spears fought with police in northern England and Wales on Monday while hundreds more men broke ranks and returned to work. Police said 54 people were injured in the worst night of violence so far.

Bands of miners — on strike for 26 weeks — rampaged through a dozen coalfield villages, tossing gasoline bombs, ripping down concrete lampposts and setting cars afire, authorities said.

The fighting, much of it before dawn, began when strikers tried to stem the flow of miners abandoning the picket lines and returning to the mines in recent days.

In remarks prepared for the annual Lord Mayor's Banquet in London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the violence had "reached a new pitch because the miners' leaders will resort to anything to try to stem the tide" of workers returning to their jobs.

"Violence will not succeed, for the police and the courts will not bow to it," Thatcher said.

Many miners, their families facing economic hardship, were lured back to work in part by offers of Christmas bonuses.

F-Senate faces 5 resolutions

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate will plunge into one of the fullest agendas it has faced this year as five resolutions await its consideration Tuesday.

Among the issues slated for discussion are the questions of faculty membership on University academic committees, the Illinois Board of Higher Education's resolution on admissions requirements, an amendment of the University's personnel files policy, and the display of the United Nations flag outside the Student Center.

The senators will also consider an executive council resolution asking them to formally "examine academic standards at SIU-C."

That resolution reflects a long-standing interest of the senate, said Mike Altekruze, professor in guidance and educational psychology.

Altekruze, a member of the senate's executive council who claims a special interest in the subject, said that academic standards at SIU-C are a "concern that the administration and the student body have had for a long time." Altekruze said it has not been determined what would be the nature of the senate's examination of the University's academic standards.

Passage of the IBHE resolution would constitute the senate's endorsement of the strengthening of admissions standards recommended by the board in October, and the resolution concerning the U.N. flag will amount to a seconding of the Undergraduate Student Organization's resolution on the subject.

The USO has asked that the U.N. flag fly on the flagpole at the southeast corner of the Student Center on all U.N. holidays.

Bishop defends church stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leader of America's Catholic bishops, defending recent plunges by church officials into political and social issues, said Monday that to remain silent on abortion, nuclear threats and the huge gaps between rich and poor would be a "dereliction of pastoral duty."

Bishop James W. Malone, head of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, noted "the intensity of the recent debate" over the appropriateness of religious leaders' involvement in public-policy matters.

But he said such debate was neither new nor limited to the United States. "It is impossible to interpret world events today if one does not grasp the role of religion," he declared.

In the recent election campaign, the Catholic Church was most visible in the criticism by a few bishops of Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro's position on abortion. Ferraro, a Catholic, said a woman should be allowed to choose an abortion, although Ferraro is personally opposed to abortion itself.

Malone, in what appeared to be at least mild criticism of such bishops' comments, said, "We oppose a 'single-issue' strategy because only by addressing a broad spectrum of issues can we do justice to the moral tradition we possess as a church and thereby demonstrate the moral challenges we face as a nation."

But he also said he wouldn't condemn bishops who emphasize a single issue in public because "the conference exists to enhance the ministry of each bishop, not to constrain it."

Still, he said, the bishops' new reputation for speaking out — and any influence that might accompany such a reputation — has been won through the power of speaking as a group representing the nation's more than 300 cardinals, archbishops and bishops.

Referring to a much-debated 1983 policy statement on nuclear weapons — approved over the loud objections of the Reagan administration — he said, "The nation's attention paid to the letter was due to what we said but also to the way we said it" as a group rather than as scattered individuals.

The bishops group began its annual meeting with the release of the first draft of a new "pastoral letter" on the U.S. economy.

USO: ISC requests halt to probe

the General Assembly, to vote on the changes.

Kostioris said the new bylaws were put together this year from rules approved by previous ISC administrations in 1981.

"They were not passed per se as bylaws, but as decisions on the way the council would function," he said. "They were compiled and given as bylaws to be examined by the legislative body of the ISC."

Since the rules were approved by previous administrations, Kostioris said, the General Assembly only had to examine them and make any necessary corrections, which it did.

The General Assembly passed a motion to approve the updated bylaws at the meeting and to review any requests for changes.

Two other charges dealt with which Iranian student group — the Iranian Student Union or the Iranian Student Association — would represent Iranian students in the ISC. Only one group can represent a nation, according to the ISC constitution.

According to the charges, the ISC Executive Council refused to seat the Iranian Student Association even though it won a special election.

Kostioris, however, contends that the ISU had already been recognized by the ISC before the election.

Fast election returns compliments of SIU-C

WHILE RANDY PATCHETT and Ken Gray were biting nails over the Jackson County election returns, SIU-C was saving the county thousands of dollars. Since 1976 the University has graciously allowed the county use of its computer service center, which still utilizes the card print-out system capable of processing election ballots — at no charge whatsoever.

Robert B. Harrell, Jackson County clerk, says the University, by donating the services of the computers, paper print-outs and personnel, has acted in the "best tradition of community service" by saving the county untold thousands each election.

THE USE OF the University's computers, according to Harrell, has allowed the county to save enough money to go ahead with the purchase of an elaborate computer system that will greatly facilitate its handling of various county duties.

Harrell says that without the University's assistance during elections, the county's ability to accurately tabulate results would be in serious doubt. Computer systems required to tabulate election ballot cards are becoming outdated, and if the county had to purchase a system just for that purpose it would be unable to afford the state-of-the-art equipment it now has.

THE GENEROSITY shown by the University in allowing the county the use of its computer system should be applauded. According to Harrell, no other county in Southern Illinois has the backup capabilities of Jackson County. And it's SIU-C's computers that have made that possible.

The University has afforded the county a valuable service. The total amount of money saved by the county and its taxpayers, and the good will such gestures creates, is difficult to assess. But this is at least one instance of the University giving, modestly, to the people of Jackson County.

1983 football team a tough act to follow

SALUKI FOOTBALL coach Ray Dorr put it best last August when he said, "I'm not sure anyone around here realized what an outstanding job Coach (Ray) Dempsey did in winning the national championship." How true that was.

Dorr, a former assistant coach at the University of Washington before his arrival in Carbondale, was fully aware of the big shoes he was stepping into when he accepted the job.

The Saluki football team fulfilled a magical dream last year when it rode a wave of emotion on its way to a national championship. A 43-7 drubbing of Western Carolina in the championship game was the crowning touch.

BUT THE THRILL of victory lasted only until SIU-C's first game of the year, when the Salukis fell to Tulsa. The reality of a new coach, new staff, and the loss of 13 starters from the championship team hit hard. With such Saluki greats as Terry Taylor, Rick Johnson and Donnell Daniel departed to the pros, a vacuum was created that Coach Dorr found unable to fill. The result: a 3-8 record overall and a reservation in the Missouri Valley Conference basement.

Dorr, an excellent communicator and organizer, found himself working with a team that had lost 11 players to ineligibility before the season even began. When Dorr said that the Saluki football team was young, he wasn't kidding. Eight freshmen, including quarterback Pat King, started the last game of the season.

A DEFENSIVE SECONDARY that picked off opposing quarterbacks' tosses at a record pace last season was considered suspect this year. And the merry-go-round situation with Saluki quarterbacks bred no confidence either. Disgruntled seniors also proved another headache for Dorr.

But Saluki fans should be aware that this was, after all, Dorr's first year, and a year of transition at that. In the years to come, Saluki fans should watch for Dorr's team to gel like Dempsey's. A superior recruiter and fund-raiser, the real Coach Dorr should become apparent before too long. Until then, Saluki fans will just have to be patient and reflect on the championship team of 1983.

Letters

USO president's endorsements an expression of student interests

Michael Phillips has added another piece of fluff in the form of his Nov. 7 letter to his continuing one-man crusade against Andy Leighton, president of the Undergraduate Student Organization.

This time, instead of criticizing Leighton for defending the interests of the undergraduate student body, or for working so many 18 and 20 hour days that he is exhausted, Phillips has attacked Leighton and Jack Cranley, USO vice president, for making political endorsements of pro-education candidates from the position of private citizen.

This is not an original argument. However, I feel that it is a simple-minded one. The problem that Phillips seems to have with the endorsements is that they do not necessarily represent the opinions of the undergraduate student body. This may be true. So what?

The president of the USO has the responsibility of looking for the students' best interests as students. I think that perhaps Phillips is having trouble dealing with the fact that students are people. That is, we are members of other segments of society that provide us with other, possibly conflicting, interests.

When a political contest affects the interests of undergraduate students, Leighton has an obligation as the head of a special interest group to take a stand which reflects the interests of that group. And we, as students, should weigh our interests as students against any other conflicting interests we may have as taxpayers, laborers, farmers, or heirs to daddy's fortune.

But the point is that an endorsement from Leighton should be taken as what it is: an expression of student interest. I doubt that too many people vote out of their interests as students alone.

For too long the students of this University have been represented by self-interested, parochial administrations largely devoted to padding resumes and sucking up to the University administration. Andy Leighton is devoted to promoting the interests and welfare of the student body. It's about time that student government got active in the role of student advocacy.

I say that student government should be much more involved in local, state and national politics. A large part of student government's job is lobbying legislators in Springfield on tuition issues.

It makes sense to actively work to affect the outcome of political contests which involve candidates with positions on student aid funding levels, tuition levels and other student-related issues.

I applaud Leighton and Cranley and all the other student leaders who have publicly endorsed pro-education candidates and otherwise worked to staff our representative bodies with conscientious, answerable legislators. — Bruce Stapley, Junior, Computer Science.

Dennis speech evinced understanding

It is not clear how such a newcomer to Southern Illinois University at Carbondale could have gained so much wisdom in two years and could be so informed about the "power of the faculty" when he did not live through the "disease" to which Lawrence Dennis, Faculty Senate president, referred.

The theme of the eloquent presentation had so much in it that may have escaped the notice of persons who have not spent their professional lives here. Unfortunately, Mark G.

Fischman is among them.

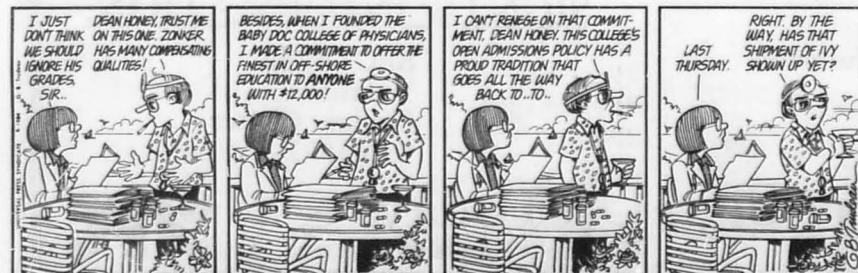

Those who have loved this University and sacrificed many hours to cure the problems to which Dennis alluded enjoyed his message. We also liked the intellectual argument which occurred between him and President Somit. We have not always been afforded this pleasure.

As Fischman got into items not addressed by Dennis, it was difficult to know the real purpose of his theoretical response. Some settling in, study of this University's history, and focusing of arguments is indicated in this rendition. Intellectual hibernation is not necessarily defined as a lack of publication.

It just may be that, on occasion, students, rather than one's publication record, need attention. Much of the intellectual's day is spent in teaching those who need to learn, whether they be students or Ph.D.s. — Jo Anne Thorpe, Professor, Physical Education.

Letters policy

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, whose members are the student-editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a Journalism School faculty member.

Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten, double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of less than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters submitted by mail should include the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

'A Soldier's Story' makes a thought-provoking statement

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

1984 has been a banner year for motion pictures. Along with the Halloween IVs and the Porky IIs, the year has actually seen some truly fine pieces of narrative film. "Amadeus," "Places in the Heart" and "A Soldier's Story" are good examples of what can be done when directors and producers avoid the simple-mindedness of the teeny-bopper set.

Broken down into neat categories "A Soldier's Story" embodies some of the best qualities of "Amadeus" and "Places in the Heart," and is concerned with the reality of racism in America.

But whereas "Places" makes a statement about the prejudice of whites towards blacks, "A Soldier's Story" makes a more general, more thought-provoking statement about racism.

Set in Louisiana during World War II, the movie opens with the murder of a black sergeant, stumbling his way back to the barracks after a few too many in town. The audience is given no clue as to who the killer is, and when Howard Rollins ("Ragtime") shows up as a black captain sent to investigate the killing, it begins to look as if the Army is stonewalling — hiding something.

Rollins questions some of the men in the murdered sergeant's company. A who-done-it develops as several soldiers, white and black, had both the motive and opportunity to do the sergeant in. Through flashbacks the audience sees the events that lead to the murder, and it becomes increasingly difficult to figure out who the killer is.

But that is just the skeleton of "A Soldier's Story." The plot seems foremost to be a vehicle from which the underlying comments on racism and unfairness are communicated.

This is not to mean that the plot, or storyline, is weak or flawed. It isn't. Tight direction, a top-notch cast and gritty dialogue enables "A Soldier's Story" to make its social comment without being a second-rate production.

Rollins' investigation is stonewalled not by whites only, but blacks as well. The unwillingness of the white officers to cooperate in the investigation could be expected. To them, it wasn't a matter of racism or prejudice, it was simply the way of the world.

But as the movie progresses, we see almost the same kind of prejudice exhibited by the sergeant prior to his murder. For him, the only way for blacks to get ahead in the world was to "be white." As long as he had "niggers" in his company — not blacks, but "niggers" — then he could expect nothing but the same prejudice from whites.

In "A Soldier's Story," prejudice isn't always as clear as black and white. Often, as we see through the sergeant and his pathetic logic, it gets to be quite complicated. Rollins, as the educated black officer conducting the investigation, serves to accent the racial tensions building. For blacks and whites, Rollins is an enigma. Cool, articulate, totally in command, Rollins is an anachronistic figure in the backwards, racist South of the past.

Although his character is a bit undeveloped, he serves perfectly the role of the mysterious man of the future. Adolph Caesar, as the slain sergeant, provides a compelling and contradictory portrait of a man imprisoned by color, yet also proud. By the movie's end one is left just a little unsure about how to perceive the sergeant.

That seems to be the final message of the film. Racism, like the sergeant, is a far more complex thing than the superficial "facts" might suggest. "A Soldier's Story" is a thinking person's movie, and is thoroughly entertaining the whole way through.

Clown's performance a treat

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

Young and old alike were treated Saturday to an evening of light-hearted, non-stop clowning. Dimitri, Swiss born, has been on the road for some 26 years, thrilling audiences all over America and Europe with his unique blend of mime, music and physical prowess.

The performance was split into two acts, with each act centering on different props. The first act saw Dimitri, clad in tan coat, black body tights, bright, red stockings and the standard clown's white face, run through a series of gags involving a rather large trunk filled with odd and assorted objects.

A Review

It immediately became apparent that Dimitri was more than just a clown, as the first object extracted from the trunk was a mandolin. Dimitri showed both an ability to play the instrument and the ability to get the most laughs while doing it.

Ineptitude, or the illusion of it, was Dimitri's on-stage character. From a difficulty in sitting down to an apparent inability to sit cross legged, Dimitri was effective at portraying a sympathetic, lovable loser.

But a loser Dimitri isn't. At one moment he would be the picture of foolishness, seemingly unable to perform the simplest of tasks. But he would turn right around and stun the audience with a marvelous display of physical strength or musical talent.

For the second act Dimitri again relied upon props. This time, instead of drawing objects from a trunk, Dimitri assumed the role of a train porter. Standing next to a dolly loaded down with suitcases, Dimitri played a very bored porter just looking for something to get into. Cautiously looking around to make sure the coast was clear, a curious Dimitri proceeded to open case after case to see what, if anything, of interest might be in store.

With the opening of each case brought joyous cries (Dimitri's sole lines of the evening), as he discovered instrument after instrument. Each was given its own zany treatment. Saxaphones, trumpets, you name it, Dimitri played them all. And when Dimitri opened the smaller cases, what did he find? That's right, miniature saxaphones, trumpets....

Following the performance, Dimitri said that years ago, he actually did lodge a part of the harmonica (his custom-made harmonica disassembles into several pieces) in his throat. While he was in real pain the audience was rolling with laughter.

But Saturday night's performance went off without a hitch, and the audience left with smiles firmly planted. The former protege of the famous Marcel Marceau was in full command from beginning to end, and when the audience departed, a new respect for the multi-talented Dimitri had been won.

I want to thank everyone for their support & would hope for your continued support & friendship.

Philosopher urges peace action

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Ronald J. Glossop told an audience of 40 philosophy students and instructors that involvement in the peace movement and finding out what is being done about it is the first step toward world peace. He also said that more nuclear explosions as a result of terrorists "will not get people to think about world government."

Glossop presented his recently-published paper, "Hume and the Future of the Society of Nations" to the group Thursday. It is a review of the mid-18th century free-thinker's view concerning the rules of justice and the origins of government, and the present and future of relationships of nations when they are as one nation.

Glossop is a professor of philosophy at SIU-E and a graduate of Carthage College and Washington University. He is a firm advocate of peace and of organizing the world under one form of government.

Glossop said that he would like to convert the U.N. into a federally-structured world government over nation-states, much like the ancient provinces of Rome. However, Hume, a

Ronald Glossop

British historian-philosopher, thought the existence of such a world government would be unlikely.

All men recognize that rules of morality arise as a result of human conventions, that they want government so that they can keep their own possessions. "Keeping the rules of justice gives nations an obligation not to steal from other nations," Glossop said.

As the nations of the world gradually would come to accept the idea of a world government, international law would also grow gradually and treaties made with other nation-states would not be violated. War would be then averted, as nations would not be tempted to take territory from other nations.

Long-term goals are needed instead of short-term ones, Glossop said. In keeping long-term goals, such as peace, in mind, governments would keep their promises to one another. The governments of the nation-states would be set up with magistrates to govern them. In this way, the concentration would be on individual lawbreakers rather than on nation-states as a whole. The Nuremberg trials after World War II are an example of such a world justice system, when individual leaders of "the losing side" were brought before the courts and charged with breaking international law.

Even though Glossop said that the outlook for world government may not be too bright, it would be more beneficial to its people and their individual rights. But before a world government could be formed some type of external force, such as an attack from outer space or nuclear war, would be needed before people were forced to organize a world government.

Play succesful despite rough spots

By Elaine Wilkinson
Student Writer

S.E. Hinton's teen-age melodrama, "The Outsiders," presented on the Calipre Stage, could have benefited from some judicious cutting.

But the fine cast carried the play through the rough spots, especially when audience attention was stretched to near breaking at the end of the second act. Some tightening would strengthen the dramatic continuity and reduce the length of the play. Neither theme, action, nor characters of "The Outsiders" can justify a running time of two hours plus. The play is good, but could be better.

To his credit, Allan Kimball, who adapted the melodrama, takes the tricky concept of a shadow narrator and runs with it. Likewise, as director, his creative use of lighting, staging and blocking are excellent, and add the needed definition to his complicated script.

Credit also goes to Brent Lappin, the choreographer for some exciting and realistic gang fight scenes.

Told from the point of view of Pony Boy Curtis, the story is basically the rite of passage of a sensitive youngster from the wrong side of the tracks. A misfit in his own world and rejected and fearful of the world at large, Pony Boy nurses an embryonic idealism throughout his struggles with primitive gang values, poverty, family problems and deaths of three peers.

As Pony Boy, Tom Crites is quite believable, balancing sensitivity with thick-headed confusion. He does not make his character a saint, but a sinner with redemptive potential.

Phil Lyons as Soda Pop and Bryon Ridge as Darryl are equally fine. These two, along with Crites, are especially effective in the scenes depicting sibling war and love.

"The Outsiders" was staged as a single set production. Designer James D. Scott created the appropriate atmosphere with minimum fuss and maximum versatility against a backdrop of sections of chain-link fencing and graffiti-smear "brick" walls.

City improvement conference set

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

Ways to make Carbondale a better place to live will be examined at a conference to be held Wednesday and Thursday in the Student Center.

Marie Malinauskas, coordinator of the conference, said Tuesday that about 75 people have registered for the two-day event. She said the participants will make up a cross-section of resourceful groups from Carbondale and surrounding areas including business, labor, education and church groups.

The goal of the conference is to have the representatives of these groups discuss needs of the community and possible ways to meet them. Malinauskas said. As part of the preregistration process for the conference each person was asked to list possible ways to improve the quality of life in and around Carbondale.

Activities on the first day of the conference will focus on identifying improvements that could be made for the sake of community residents. During the second day participants will be asked to order these needs from most needed to least and identify the most workable ways to meet them.

The agencies sponsoring the conference are Carbondale Community Education, Inc. the city of Carbondale, SIU-C Division of Continuing Education and Department of Community Development, Carbondale Park District, John A. Logan Community College, regional superintendent of Jackson and Perry County schools and Carbondale Community High and Elementary schools.

Escort service being planned after recent attacks on campus

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

An escort service is being organized at Thompson Point, and some residents say that a feeling of caution is evident there following two assaults on women near the rustic residence hall area within the last six weeks.

The second attack occurred during the Halloween weekend and is being investigated by the SIU-C Police, but the effects of the incident seem to be lingering on.

"People aren't walking alone anymore, they're making use of the night safety van and they're using escorts," said one male resident, who asked not to be identified. "They're just more aware of their safety."

"I've seen instances recently where resident assistants will see a girl walking alone and ask her if she wants an escort, even if she doesn't ask for help."

In an effort to make escorts more readily available to female residents, the Thompson Point Executive Council is reorganizing its escort service. One of the service's organizers Mary Prugh said TPEC is making the effort out of a sense of duty.

"We're doing it because we all feel very strongly about the attacks near the point," she said, "and because we're student representatives and we think it's our responsibility to do something about it."

Prugh said the service will be composed of volunteers from Thompson Point, both male and female, who will wait for calls at the television room of Lentz Hall from 6 to 11 p.m. When someone asks for assistance, the service will dispatch two of its members to escort the person anywhere on campus.

A similar service at University Park has been discontinued this fall because of a lack of interest, according to the area's coordinator for residence life, Cathy Devera. But a lack of volunteers doesn't appear to be a problem currently for the Thompson Point service, Prugh said, basing her optimism on the good response she's already received from her own residence hall. Twenty to 30 of the residents at Bowyer Hall have expressed their willingness to help, she said.

TPEC is arranging to have a telephone for the escort service installed at Lentz Hall and hopes to have the service operating after the Thanksgiving break. TPEC members said they hope that the distribution of flyers and phone stickers listing the service's telephone number will help the escort service avoid dying of a lack of interest, as it did last spring.

The fact that escort service members will go out in teams of one man and one woman, and will be required to carry flashlights and show identification to their clients should act to dispel any fears, Prugh said.

Student fights off three attackers

An SIU-C student fought off three attackers Thursday evening near Mae Smith Tower after they had demanded his money, an SIU-C police spokesman said.

Eric Watkins, 18, was outside of his vehicle at the service drive by Mae Smith at about 8 p.m. when three black males approached and threw a coat over his head, he said.

The three demanded Watkins' money but ran away without it after Watkins struck one of them with his keys and elbowed another.

Watkins was uninjured, the spokesman said.

Saluki men netters tie for fifth in Oak Hill Invitational tourney

By Stan Goff
Staff Writer

A fifth-place tie was the best the SIU-C men's tennis team could pull out of the Oak Hill Invitational Tournament after the Salukis had inconsistent play in the first round.

Chris Visconti and Lars Nilsson were the only Salukis to win their first-round matches. Visconti finished second at the No. 3 singles position, and Nilsson took first at No. 6 singles.

Led by Nilsson's eight points and Visconti's seven, SIU-C finished with 36 points and a fifth-place tie with Illinois State. Northwestern won the tourney with 56 points, with Illinois, Murray State and Indiana following the Wildcats.

Nilsson defeated the Illini's Chris Laparore 6-4, 7-6 in a tight championship match.

"Lars has been playing well, but he played a little harder in his final match. It was a fine match," Saluki Coach Dick LeFevre said.

Visconti beat opponents from Southwest Missouri and Murray State before falling to Santiago DeMucha of Illinois State in the finals. DeMucha, led by a powerful serve, defeated Visconti 6-4, 6-4.

"Chris played really good, but DeMucha was having a lot of success with his first serve," LeFevre said.

Per Wadmark and Gabriel Coch, the Salukis' top two players, each finished seventh in the eight-team tourney. Wadmark led Tony Reutlend of Murray State 5-1 in the first round, but lost the set 7-5. Reutlend won the second set for the match and went on to win the title at the No. 1 singles spot. Coch lost his first two matches, but came up with a big win over Illinois' Mike Meyer in his final match to finish seventh and earn two points for SIU-C.

Rollie Oliquino placed seventh, and Scott Krueger fifth for the Salukis. Krueger lost his opening match, but rebounded with two wins.

Oliquino and Wadmark finished seventh at No. 1 doubles after winning a close match from Illinois State in three sets. The Salukis prevailed 4-6, 7-5, 6-1.

"They had lost to the team from Murray State that they had beaten last month, but they played a great match against Illinois State," LeFevre said.

The No. 2 team of Coch and Nilsson finished third after defeating teams from Southwest Missouri and Illinois State, and the No. 3 team of Visconti and Krueger finished seventh for the Salukis.

Bears' McMahon released from hospital

LAKE FOREST (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon of the Chicago Bears is expected to be released from the hospital Wednesday to continue his recuperation at home.

McMahon, who suffered kidney lacerations Nov. 4 against the Los Angeles Raiders, is on the injured list and probably will not see any action during the rest of the regular National Football League season.

"He's feeling well and walking around," Pears' trainer Fred Caito said. "He was taking antibiotics intravenously but is now taking them orally."

Caito said one of the things to be concerned about is having an infection set in and another is the possibility of secondary bleeding in the early stages of recovery.

Cards' playoff hopes damaged by disputed call against Dallas

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mel Gray's "phantom catch" against the Washington Redskins has been succeeded in St. Louis Cardinals football lore by the "yellow flag" of the Dallas Cowboys.

Gray's last-minute scoring catch in 1975 of a Jim Hart pass on a disputed play wound up costing Washington a berth in the National Football League playoffs. Equally decisive Sunday may have been an official's call denying St. Louis a go-ahead touchdown in its 24-17 defeat against Dallas.

"Even though it was slight, I did have position on him," said Everson Walls, the Cowboys' cornerback who made contact with Roy Green of the Cards on a 39-yard scoring pass play late in the third quarter that was wiped out by an offensive interference call.

"When I saw he was going to get by me, I turned. I didn't know what he hit me with," Walls said. "Referees don't usually call that. I was surprised. When it comes down to it, defensive backs don't get many calls."

Naturally, Green's version of the bump differed from that of Walls. "I think that defensive pass interference would have been justifiable," the Cards' wide receiver said. "Of course, he's going to say he played the ball well and made a good defensive play."

The contact on the touchdown play which was called back was one of two controversial calls involving the pair.

Late in the final period, St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax rifled a pass to Green on a buttonhook pattern in front of Walls. Walls reached over Green and knocked down the ball, seemingly making contact before it arrived. But no flag was dropped, and a Cards' drive fizzled.

Walls, who had been beaten twice by Green on long touchdown passes during a 31-20 St. Louis victory earlier this season at Texas Stadium, suggested that Dallas may have been due for more favorable calls in the rematch.

"They did have some bad breaks during the whole game, they had turnovers," Walls said. "But that's part of it. We've had games like that as well."

It also was possible on the pass play that was nullified, Walls said, that luck was swinging from one team to the other in regard to offensive interference rulings.

"They had already called two calls on (Cowboys tight end) Doug Cosbie," Walls said. "I was just telling the guys it may have been a makeup call by the referee. I didn't see the flag until the call was made. I was already ticked off that he had beaten me for a touchdown."

Field judge Pat Mallette, in his 16th year in the NFL, made the disputed offensive interference call against Green, a decision drowned by a chorus of boos from the crowd of 48,721.

and she said at the time, when she was in the fifth grade, it was "the thing to do". Hicks played with her uncle because she wanted to be like him.

Another reason for SIU-C's recruiting success in the St. Louis area is the convenient location which allows players to visit home. They all agree it's nice to be near home, but this was not the only factor in their decisions. They came because they like the academic programs, the basketball program and the beautiful campus.

"I chose SIU-C because it gave me a homey feeling. I feel welcome here," Hicks said.

One little taste is all it takes.

Saluki women cagers benefit from 'St. Louis Connection'

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's basketball team has a gold mine and the coaches call it the St. Louis connection.

Assistant Coach Julie Beck said the St. Louis area has a wealth of talent which is overlooked nationally. Both she and Head Coach Cindy Scott have good contacts with coaches from the St. Louis area, and they run many camps there.

"We can see them early and that always helps," Beck said.

PAST RECRUITING efforts there brought Petra Jackson, a junior, and Terry Schmittgens, a senior, to the SIU-C team. Jackson, the only returning starter from last season, is expected to be the key to this season's success. Schmittgens, one of only two seniors, said the older teammates must help push the team to be the best they can be.

"I don't think it's extra pressure, though. I think the coaches gave everybody a role on the team, and we are capable of doing it," she said. "We're going to surprise a lot of people because they don't think we are going to be all that talented."

This year's recruiting bonanza includes four freshmen from the St. Louis and Metro-East area. These four players knew each other before coming to SIU-C, having faced off in the McDonald's Missouri-Illinois All Star Classic.

Mary Noble, Brioggett Bonds, Anne Thouvenin and Genevelyn Hicks have found first-year adjustments difficult, but the biggest challenge comes on the court. The college program is more demanding than high school basketball with a new style of play.

Bonds, who Scott calls "the most heavily recruited player we've ever signed," said she has had to change her whole game and learn to make good decisions on the court. With her 28-inch vertical jump and high school history which included leading the Missouri Class 4A in scoring with a 27.7 point average and being named Converse All American, Bonds said she feels some pressure.

"I can't let myself down," she said, "and I can't let down the people who helped me get this far."

ALL FOUR freshmen share the pressure of first-year play, but they all agree they are dedicated, and their desire is to give 100 percent and never disappoint the team.

Hicks said, "The coaches see what we are capable of and they motivate, they push. It makes you want to do good. It's the team spirit."

"Everybody thinks we're underdogs," Bonds said, referring to the youthfulness of the team.

"We're hungry for a win," Noble said.

The factor that enables these players to play at the college level lies in their dedication to winning and their motivation.

"I consider myself lucky to be here," Thouvenin said, "and that keeps me going."

"I have a poster with Kodak's All Americans. I look at that and say, 'If I want to be like that, I have to go and practice and work hard,'" Bonds said.

BONDS, WHO didn't start playing basketball until she was a sophomore in high school, said she started playing basketball when she tired of being bored.

Noble began in the LeMay Optimist League when a father of a friend invited her to join his team.

And family often links to what sport anyone might pursue. Thouvenin grew up with the sport since her father is a high school basketball coach. Schmittgens brothers all played,

Women swimmers fail in bid to break record

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

Four members of the Saluki women's swimming team fell short in their bid to break the world record for 60-minute distance swimming Monday at the Student Recreation Center pool, but Coach Tim Hill and the athletes were not discouraged by the performance.

Janie Coontz, Stacy Westfall, Roxanne Carlton and Wendy Irick attempted to break the record of 17,025 yards swam by Tiffany Cohen, Florence Barker and Bera Barker of the Buena Vista, Cal., Swim Club earlier this year. Coontz, Westfall and Carlton's combined distance of 16,420 yards fell 605 yards short of the record.

Coontz was the top individual performer, swimming 5,580 yards in the 60-minute period. She missed Cohen's individual record by just 120 yards.

"I really believe they have the physical capabilities to break the record," Hill said following the attempt. "Right now, I think they're tired from the weekend. We are five or six weeks away from getting better."

"I'm not disappointed. This gave us a good idea of where we were at at this point in the season."

Coontz agreed with Hill, saying that last weekend's triple dual meet had an impact on Monday's record attempt.

"I think we did really well considering the events we swam this weekend," she said. "I think the water was kind of hot for the event. Cooler water would have been better. There would've been no problem with dehydration."

"I think we're in shape, but we're not primed," Carlton said. "We would've done better under different conditions."

Westfall said fatigue played some impact on the group's performance, but she was able to combat fatigue by pacing herself.

"I just had to keep a good pace," she said. "It's not the same as swimming in a regular meet."

"I was alright most of the time," Coontz said, "but toward the end, I was watching the clock."

Hill said the athletes may attempt to break the record again before the end of the fall semester.

"We might try again before final exams," he said. "We won't do it again after the first of the year because we have too many big events."

"I want to do it again," Irick said. "We can all do better, we need another chance."

The event was used as a fund raiser to help defray costs for the team's Florida training trip in December.

Bunyan achieves lofty individual goal

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

One of the last two personal goals Chris Bunyan had for the season was to qualify for the national cross country meet was at the NCAA District 5 meet last Saturday. The Saluki harrier reached that goal.

Bunyan was running against defending national champion Yobes Ondieki of Iowa State University, Brent Steinert — who defeated Bunyan earlier in the season — of the University of Kansas, and almost 100 other runners.

The top two teams to finish and the next three runners not on those teams qualified for the national meet.

Unfavorable weather conditions slowed the runners by about six or seven seconds, Bunyan said. The course was covered lightly with snow, a brisk wind was blowing, and the temperature was 38 degrees.

"The course was nice and flat, and it was just soft enough to where it wasn't tough going," he said. "The only problem was the weather was blowing a gale. We'd turn the corners and hit the wind, and it really knocked the stuffing out of us a bit."

From the start of the race to beyond the two-mile mark Bunyan said he held the lead on a pack of 10 runners.

Bunyan said he was able to keep pace with Ondieki and Steinert, but if it came to a sprint at the finish he would probably take third.

At this time, the pack thinned to three runners.

Bunyan, Ondieki and Steinert stayed together up to the last half-mile with a large lead on the pack behind them. Ondieki ran into the lead and a fatigued Bunyan fell back to third place.

"We stuck it out until about a half-mile to go, and at that time, I was feeling fatigued," he said. "I knew I qualified for nationals, so I just had to maintain the pace."

Bunyan said he didn't give Ondieki and Steinert a run at the finish because he was fatigued, he isn't a sprinter, and third place would still qualify him for the national meet, which was what he wanted.

Bunyan said he was thinking more than anything else throughout the race about qualifying for nationals. Nationals are the most intense meet of the year, he said.

Bunyan, named an All-American in 1981 at Murray State University and again in 1983 with the Salukis, said he wants the honor one more time. His goal is to finish in the Top 10.

"I think I can stay up there with the best," he said. "I'm going to go for it."

Perry's 20 leads White

Center Kenny Perry again turned in a strong performance in the Salukis' second Maroon-White intra-squad scrimmage of the season Friday night at Benton High School.

Perry scored 20 points and forward Chris George added 12 to lead the White team to a 59-52 victory over the Maroon squad. Freshman guard Kai Nurnberger, who starred at Benton High School, added nine points for the White team in front of the hometown fans.

The Maroon team was led by forward Bernard Campbell with 16 points and guard Doug Novsek, who had 13. Guard Nate Bufford added nine for the Maroon.

The Salukis have two scrimmage games left at Mount Vernon and Marion before facing the University of Missouri at Kansas City

Cornhuskers return to No. 1

The Nebraska Cornhuskers, who were No. 1 for three weeks earlier in the season, have regained the top spot in The Associated Press college football poll, while Washington slipped to eighth after four weeks at the top and Virginia cracked the Top Twenty for the first time in 32 years.

With seven members of last week's Top Twenty losing over the weekend there was considerable shuffling in this week's poll, with South Carolina and Brigham Young — the only remaining unbeaten teams — moving up to challenge Nebraska, Miami and Georgia dropping to the Second Ten and Iowa and West Virginia falling out of the Top Twenty.

The new poll raised the possibility of a 1-2 matchup between Nebraska and South Carolina in the Orange Bowl. However, Nebraska still must play Oklahoma — the Cornhuskers need only a tie Saturday to represent the Big Eight in Miami — while South Carolina has to play Navy and Clemson, both on the road.

While previously unbeaten Washington was losing to Southern California 16-7 — the victory vaulted the Trojans from 14th to seventh — Nebraska trounced Kansas 41-7 and climbed from second place to No. 1 with 37 of 59 first-place votes and 1,148 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. The Cornhuskers are 9-1, having lost to Syracuse on Sept. 29.

South Carolina, 9-0, downed No. 11 Florida State 38-26 — the Gamecocks led 38-7 at one point en route to becoming the first team to win nine games in the school's 91-year football history — and moved from fifth to second with 11 first-place votes and 1,104 points.

Texas' 29-15 loss to Houston dropped the Longhorns from third place to 10th and BYU, 10-0 after a 34-3 triumph over San Diego State, went from fourth to third. The Cougars received the other 11 first-place ballots and 1,096 points.

Oklahoma State defeated Missouri 31-13 and jumped from seventh to fourth with 949 points while Florida trimmed No. 8 Georgia 27-0 and shot from 10th to fifth with 892 points while the Bulldogs slipped to 15th.

Miami, sixth last week, blew a 31-0 halftime lead and lost to Maryland 42-40, the biggest comeback in major-college history. That dropped the Hurricanes from sixth to 14th while Oklahoma jumped from ninth to sixth with 870 points after whipping Colorado 42-17.

Southern Cal is seventh with 805 points, followed by Washington with 754. LSU rose from 12th to ninth with 693 points following a 16-14 victory over Alabama. Texas rounds out the Top Ten with 643 points.

The Second Ten consists of Ohio State, Texas Christian, Boston College, Miami, Georgia, Southern Methodist, Florida State, Auburn, Virginia and Clemson.

Last week, it was Florida State; LSU, Ohio State, Southern Cal, TCU, Boston College, SMU, Iowa, West Virginia and Auburn.
