Board to decide on tenure review

By Toby Ecksln Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees will decide today whether it will review the tenure case of William Hammond, a professor who claims he was denied tenure because of professional rivalry and jealousy among School of Music faculty members.

The case has generated widespread concern among faculty members because the School of Music Promotion and Tenure Committee cited Hammond's supposed lack of "collegiality," or ability to cooperate with other faculty members, as a main reason for denying him tenure.

Many faculty members view the concept of collegiality as a threat to their academic freedom and freedom of expression.

The concept of collegiality does not appear in the School of Music guidelines for awarding tenure. However, President John C. Guyton has endorsed collegiality as "an overlay on all deliberations" in the tenure process.

Hammond has refused to comment on the case, saying it would be inappropriate while his appeal is pending before the board. However, in signed affidavits obtained by the Daily Egyptian, Hammond and several other music professors wrote that Hammond was the victim of a smear campaign launched by faculty members jealous of his performing abilities.

The affidavits also claim that Hammond was the target of a personal vendetta by School of Music Director Robert Roubos. Hammond claims that Roubos retaliated against him after he voted against splitting the School of Music's promotion and tenure guidelines. Roubos said he based his decision to deny Hammond tenure solely on the School of Music's promotion and tenure guidelines. Roubos said he found that Hammond's teaching abilities and values were not in line with those of other faculty members.

'Saving lives' drives tireless coordinator of blood program

By Amy Gauabtz Staff Writer

She is like a bee buzzing from flower to flower — talking to people, instructing them where to go, joking with them, and asking if they have donated yet.

"We try to show that it is fun, but that we do have a serious mission: to save lives," said Vivian Urgent, coordinator of blood drives for Southern Illinois.

Urgent, 37, knows the importance of giving blood from two first-hand experiences with family members. A few weeks ago, her father, who lives in Milwaukee, was in the hospital for a hernia. The surgery had to be delayed until the hospital could get more blood. With no one there to give blood, he couldn't even get in surgery," she added. "They had to look hard to get enough."

"When my son was about 5 years old, he had very major surgery," she added. He also "bled" blood.

"Ninety-eight percent of us will need blood sometime in our lives," Urgent said. "No one knows when it will be needed or when there will be an accident."

As coordinator of blood drives for Southern Illinois, she usually works 60- to 50-hour weeks, during which she helps facilitate, schedule and organize blood drives. She also trains and works with volunteers and gives presentations at high schools. "A whole range of things," she added.

She said she drives between 20,000 and 26,000 miles a year traveling between the 10

Prep center, juco forward sign with men's basketball

The men's basketball team hooked two big ones Wednes- day, the first day of the fall signing period.

The Salukis landed 6-foot-10-inch center Tony Harvey and 6-foot-7-inch, 196-pound junior college forward Jake Dunning.

Harvey, from Pascagoula, Miss., is listed as one of the top 100 high school players in the country by talent scout Bob Gibbons. Saluki coach Rich Herrin said the hot recruit SIU-C has signed during his three-year coaching reign.

"We're excited," Herrin said. "It's a great, great player. This is great for basketball.

All-star coach Bobby McCullum began recruiting Harvey in April of 1986 while McCullum was an assistant coach at South Alabama. When McCullum came to SIU-C July 1 this year, he continued to pursue Harvey. During Homecoming weekend Harvey visited SIU-C's campus.

"I think the key in him and his family is the reason he developed an interest in SIU," McCullum said. "One, he came here for a visit, the players did an excellent job of making him feel wanted and needed. The coaching staff did likewise.

"Harvey chose SIU-C over Arkansas and Southern Mississippi. Other schools that made house calls include Clemson, Alabama, Florida State, South Carolina and Southern Mississippi. He will major in construction science.

Harvey is expected to be academically eligible to play his first season. He scored 74 points on the ACT and will meet the high school grade-point-average requirement, McCullum said.

The Saluki coaching staff expects him to contribute to the team right away next season.

"I think his strength is his ability to run the floor," McCullum said. "He's a good shot blocker and has a nice shooting touch. Once he gets stronger physically I think the other areas of his game will get better and better."

Ready, Freddie?

Fred Gibson, No. 10, freshman SIU-C quarterback, has started since Kevin Brown was injured in the second game of the season. Gibson is doubtful to start in the last game because of a rib injury.

Women's basketball signs two recruits

Grace Johnson, 5-foot-11 forward from Kankakee, and Colleen Heistand, 5-foot-10 point guard from Elk Grove Village, Ill., both signed scholarship offers to play women's basketball at the University of Southern Illinois - Carbondale Wednesday.

Wednesday was the first day of the NCAA early signing period, which ends Nov. 18.

Johnson averaged 15 points a game as a junior at Kankakee High School and was a Class AA Sectional.

"Grace is a tremendous athlete and a strong competitor who hates to lose," assistant coach Julie Beck said. "I'm confident she will work hard to be the best she can be.

"She led Kankakee to 24 points and 12 rebounds while ranking first in her class academically. She played for her father's team at Elk Mound H.S., which was 19-4 in Class C, last year.

"Colleen is a quality point guard. She will be glad to have in her program," head coach Julie Boyer said. "She's the type of point guard you want running your team.

Cy Young goes to Clemens

NEW YORK (AP) - Boston Red Sox fireballer Roger Clemens, a 20-game winner last season, was traded to the Houston Astros Wednesday, midway through the baseball season. Clemens signed a 10-year contract Wednesday.

Clemens, 25, became the first player to capture consecutive Cy Young Awards when he won the American League crown in 1986 and 1987.

He was the only American League player again this year to be named on every ballot. He received the news in a telephone call from Dave Stewart, who had been traded to Houston.

"It's gratifying because it puts me in a class with people I looked up to," (Sandy) Koufax, (Denny) McLain and Palmer," Clemens said from his office in Katy, Texas, referring to other pitchers who have won the award twice.

With a 20-9 record, Clemens tied Stewart for most victories in a league. His 2.97 ERA ranked third behind Key and Frank Viola, and his 256 strikeouts left him only six behind league leader Mark Littell.

After holding out for root of spring training, Clemens did not start a game until April 11 and did not win until April 21.

As late as May 22, he owned a 3-4 record but won 17 of his last 22 decisions. He also led the majors with 18 complete games and seven shutouts.

Clemens, in a contract dispute last March, missed 30 days of spring training. He was fined $1,000 a day, which is more than made up by the $150,000 bonus he will receive for winning the Cy Young.

Booster meet

The weekly SIU-C booster club luncheon meets at noon today at the Holiday Inn in Carbondale.

SIU-C football coach Ray Derr, Carbondale Comm. High School football; and John Helms, be the guest speakers. Helms' squad plays Roxana Saturday at Bleyer Field in the third round of the state tournament.

Coaches' teleconference scores big in conversation

By Troy Taylor

The women's basketball coaches of the Gateway Conference (Missouri State, Arkansas and Southern Illinois) will play again at corec A and corec B on Dec. 18.

The session Wednesday was moderated by way assistant commissioner Jim Sheehan.

The question-answer portion of the call brought interesting responses from some of the coaches.

Bradley coach Lisa Boyer had three players win game of the week.

"We'll let that shot fly again. It's here to stay, so look for more. This team loves it. We've got the players to shoot it."

Laurie stood behind the team in scoring.

"Western Illinois' Brooke Hay is still a very good picture," said Laurie.

On Mull, the Panthers' toweringer center. "I'm going to take a strike in those hearts. Laura grew another inch and a half (she's now 6-3)." The Equalizer is her favorite TV show - you have to love that competition," Hilke added.

Also in the long-and-short department, Western Illinois coach Kelly Hill praised diminutive point guard Tonya Giovanna. "Tonya hasn't grown since the 5th grade. The roster lists her at 5-3, and that's rounded up an inch. You can call her a secret weapon."

Yet, Southeast Missouri State coach Cheryl Burnett went Hill one better. "We're looking at 5-9 guard Rhonda Hubbard to see if she can play a point guard position," Burnett said.

The Salukis, who have moved to the Arena from Davies Gym, aren't the only team playing on a new floor. Western Illinois' Brophy Hall has a playing surface designed for the home court advantage. Hill described the desert floor as having "spikes and flames."

NEW YORK (UPI) - The U.S. labor force may soon fall below experts in Washington, D.C., said Wednesday. The 16- to 24-year-old age group, traditionally the major source of new job candidates, is providing fewer job entrants. In addition, it contains several minorities and disadvantaged youngsters whose families and educational backgrounds may not have prepared them for

Hart-breaking reporter to lecture about ethics

Pulitzer prize-winning reporter Jim McGee of the Miami Herald will lecture at the University and hold a workshop for journalism students Nov. 19.

McGee, 34, an investigative reporter for the Herald since 1980, was speak primarily on his role in the downfall of former presidential candidate Gary Hart.

The lecture, 7:30 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom D, likely will be approached in a mixed-bag style in which he will deal with several different subjects and "war stories," according to a release from the Student Programming Council, which is co-sponsoring his appearance with the Journalism School.

The ethical and journalistic lessons learned from the Hart story will be dealt with in a discussion of the significance the episode in the 1988 presidential campaign, the journalism ethics issues it raises, how they could be resolved and whether journalists learned the right lessons about journalistic restraint, the synopsis of his Hart lecture says.

McGee played a key role in the Herald's investigation of womanizing allegations involving Hart and was part of the team that staked out Hart's Georgetown apartment.

Other investigations he has been involved with won the George Polk Award for local reporting, the Florida Society of Newspaper Editors' award for depth reporting, the Silver Gavel Award from the American Bar Association and a Florida Bar Association award.

He was lead reporter on a racial injustice series that won the Robert F. Kennedy Award and was honored by Columbia University, Florida Society of Newspaper Editors, Lincoln University, the Gannett Foundation and the Paul Howard Public Service Award.

He received a John S. Knight Fellowship to audit Stanford University law school courses on the first amendment and media law in 1986.

The journalism seminar, 2 p.m. Wednesday in Communications Room 1248, will be patterned after a seminar conducted at the American Press Institute in Reston, Va. It is devoted to the use of public records and interviewing techniques. A portion of the workshop will be devoted to ethical questions and a discussion of writing techniques.

The lecture is $2 for students and $3 for non-students.

Poshard expected to run for Gray's seat

By Deedra Lawhead

Gray, D-West Frankfort, who has served 12 terms to the House, said Saturday he will not seek re-election in 1988.

Poshard, D-Centerville, has scheduled a press conference at 10 a.m. in the Herrin City Hall.

Poshard said in October, "I have that he (Gray) runs for re-election, but if he doesn't, I will run for that seat."

In a statement released Saturday, Gray said he is retiring because health problems would hamper his ability to campaign.

Gray contracted a tick-borne disease while on an official visit to Brazil in 1986.

In the statement, Gray also said the Republican National Congressional Campaign Committee has "targeted the 22d District as one that will receive extra funds, numerous opposition speaker's and a 12-month campaign" until the November 1988 election.

The 22d District includes Carbondale.

Poshard was appointed to the Senate in 1986 to complete the term of late state Sen. Gene Johns of Marion. In 1986, Poshard was elected to the 9th District seat.

Poshard is chairman of the Senate Labor and Commerce committee. He also serves on the Appropriations, Agricultural, Conservation and Energy and Elementary and Secondary Education committees.

State Rep. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, is also considered a likely candidate for the 22nd District seat. Rea has said that he is discussing the possibility with his family, political and Democratic leaders in the state.

Rea said Wednesday that he will announce his decision in a few days.

In September, Rea announced that he would run for re-election, but he did not specify whether he would run for his seat in the state House of Representatives or for a seat in the U.S. House.

In addition to Poshard and Rea, State Rep. Larry Hicks of Mount Vernon and Former state Sen. Kenneth Bubbe of Makanda have expressed interest in pursuing the Democratic nomination.

Possible Republican contenders for the 22nd District seat include C.L. Friend, a dentist from Metropolis; Ed Doway, a Rosiclare businessman; and Pete Price, a Carbondale engineer.

Friend said Wednesday that he has not made a decision yet, but he is 75 percent sure he will run for the Republican nomination.

Prince said Wednesday he has begun circulating nomination petitions. He said he is testing the waters, and is getting a much better reception since Gray has said he will not run for re-election.

Prince lost the seat to Paul Simon in the 1976 and 1982 elections.

Koch has right idea for homeless woes

New York City Mayor Edward Koch's controversial plan to get the mentally ill homeless off the streets of the city will be a success if it opens legislators' eyes to the need for more community-based services and shelters across the country to serve the "people of the street."

While many do not agree with Koch's tactics, the need to help the mentally ill homeless cannot be ignored, as Koch and other city officials across the country cannot ignore the growing problem in their own cities.

The plan went into effect earlier this month, when the first ten people were rounded up by city health workers and transported to Bellevue Hospital, where they will be given shelter and psychiatric care.

IN IMPLEMENTING the plan, Koch managed to get around the stricture that the state no longer has the power to commit someone for involuntary psychiatric care except when they present "immediate danger to themselves and others" — a major obstacle to helping mentally ill street people — by interpreting it to include danger "within the reasonably foreseeable future."

For this action, Koch has been both praised and criticized. Rob Levy of the New York Civil Liberties Union said that the mayor "is rewriting law without legislative authority." But Jack Talbott, former president of the American Psychiatric Association, commended Koch for his strong approach, saying: "He is the first government official who has truly acknowledged the massive mistakes made in community mental institutions."

What is regarded by some as an extreme approach to the problem is an indication of the problem's seriousness. Hundreds of thousands of mentally ill homeless people now wander the streets of major cities across the nation, and the need for funds and community-based services to help them is tremendous.

THOUSANDS OF HOMELESS live in each large city alone. Atlanta, for example, is estimated to have a population of 8000 homeless people living in its streets. Many of the homeless are the by-product of deinstitutionalization, a movement that began in the 1960s with the mental hospitals and mental hospitals three decades ago, but failed its outpatients where 70% of a promised 2,000 community-based care centers were created nationwide.

The total number of mentally ill homeless may now be as high as 300,000. Nearly 90% of the homeless have been in mental hospitals at some time, while others are trapped into mental imbalance by the harsh life on the streets.

The problem is not so much a lack of concern for the mentally ill homeless as it is a lack of funds to take care of them.

SINCE THE ONSET of deinstitutionalization, federal budget cuts have shaved money for the mentally ill down to the bare minimum and drastically reduced available space in mental hospitals.

Between 1960 and 1984, the number of patients in mental hospitals fell from 559,000 to 116,000 — more than 75 percent — at the same time the number of mentally ill people in the streets increased by 1.5 million to as many as 2.4 million. The need is definitely there, but the funds are not.

The search for solutions continues. Koch should be praised for taking a stand to address the problem, even if that plan is only meant to convince the state to provide more mental health funding. But more needs to be done. Even if the homeless can be taken off the street, community centers and services need to be created to provide for them.

Education looms large as the only effective disease fighter

Moscow party boss axed for chiding slow reforms

— Moscow Communist party chief Boris Yeltsin, a Mikhail Gorbachev foe, was demoted this week in a crisis by criticizing the nation's slow pace of reform, was dismissed as a result of "serious mistakes in his leadership," Soviet television said.

One Western diplomat said the move followed a weakening of Gorbachev's influence and a month before he is to meet President Reagan for a summit meeting in Washington.

Among the rising stars of the Gorbachev era, some attracted more attention than Boris Yeltsin.

Yeltsin's downfall began on Oct. 21, when he criticized the slow pace of reforms at a plenary meeting of the Politburo.

Then his critics drew fire from other members of the Politburo, Yeltsin reportedly recanted and submitted his resignation. Two days later, a Western journalist at a news conference a week before last Saturday's 70th anniversary of the communist party was told Yeltsin, "Frankly, not all of us set sail with the fresh winds of change," Yeltsin warned in a speech printed across the entire page of the Moscow Party newspaper Moskovskaya Pravda shortly after he assumed his new post.

"Certain changes in personnel are inevitable — the process is under way." According to one story, Yeltsin enrolled the entire staff of the Moscow city party committee to a building site and just before donating a half-day of free labor.

While other citizens routinely participated in those events, Yeltsin reportedly had lost the habit of leaving Lefortov, the official city building, to help.

The same age as his 55-year-old leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, Yeltsin shared a similar style of hiding behind the Kremlin walls, be set out to mix and see firsthand how people really live.

"We visited the shops near work here, inspected the goods and talked to people," said a middle-class Soviet worker in his 30s.

service to the music school did not meet up to the school's standards.

Affidavits from four faculty members paint a much different picture of why Hammond was dismissed than those written by Professors George Hussey, Jervis Underwood, Charles Frisch and Donald Young, who said false rumors were spread abroad about hammond and that a faculty vote on his tenure.

For instance, Underwood said: "I was an active faculty member who had Hammond was "unethical" and "abusive" with the school's secretaries.

Hussey said that one faculty member who was talking about the Comman- d was "too religious."

Underwood also said that faculty members believed Hammond was making comments about their performing abilities behind their backs.

Hammond claims that he was not evaluated as unsatisfactory in his capacity as artistic director or director of the school and that the "confusion and misunderstanding came from the fact that he has not worked effectively with the music camps of professor Roubos,

"Because of the in- dependence of music faculty, it is essential for professor Roubos to have autonomy..."

"Roubos also alludes to collegiality in his Dec. 8 memo to Sanders.

"While Dr. Hammond has contributed to the School of Music and profession in some important ways, his record is less than satisfactory in his support of colleagues and their programs, according to the minutes of the school's director of music. They believe he exhibited an "odd" lack of collegiality."

"Roubos also found that Hammond had turned in too few classroom evaluations and that "he does have are out of the standard of other faculty who have been promoted in the School of Music."

Roubos also questioned Hammond's teaching ability. "When Dr. Hammond was hired in 1981, there were three French horn performance majors," Roubos wrote.

"Presently, there are now one. One of the teaching of the effective must be regarded as the extent to which to receive the music faculty and secretarial staff were not always satisfactory." In addition, Roubos said Hammond missed five meetings of the CCFA committee appointed to advise the school of whether to split the cinema and photography department and assign the programs to other departments.

Hammond "expressed an uncoop erative attitude" according to an observer who was asked in October 1985 by then-President Albert Somit to provide brass music for visiting. "Armbrust exhibit," Roubos said.

Hammond claims that Roubos opposed his tenure because as a member of the CCFA advisory committee. Hammond voted against splitting the cinema and photography department. Sanders had favored the split, but agreed to go along with the advisory committee's recommendation. The committee voted 5 to 4 against splitting the department.

Hammond said that four days after the vote, "Professor Roubos asked me why did you vote against the recommendation? I explained the basis for my vote. In my opinion my vote on the recommendation. The committee began, the process of a deterioration in my relationship with Professor Roubos culminating in his negative recommendation concerning my tenure."

Hammond said that previous to the committee's April 1984 vote, "on numerous occasions Professor Roubos in- cided to me his special jealousy that I would receive tenure."

In an evaluation of Ham­ mond's work dated Feb. 14, 1986, Roubos says of Ham­ mond, "Your work as a perfor­ mer has been exemplary. You have served the School of Music in many important ways, most notably as head of the woodwind quintet, without which the quintet would probably not have achieved the active concert position it has now. In addition you have organized reading sessions and direct the summer music camps. You have not stopped all work in order to project the goals and aspirations of the School of Music."

"You are one of the finest artists in the School of Music. I stand ready to assist you in every way possible in the development of your work here at SLU."

"Nathan has a disease called aplastic anemia, which is not curable," Mary Wright said. The disease causes bone marrow to stop producing cells. He was diagnosed in October of 1986.

"Right now, Nathan is being treated with experimental drugs and transfusions of platelets," she said. "He has a tube in his chest, so that the doctors can take good samples and blood counts without sticking him with needles all the time."

Nathan and his grand-parents travel every week to St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., to check his blood level. A trip today will be the 57th visit to St. Jude's for the Wrights.

"You should go to St. Jude's and see how much blood they produce and sometimes they will have done," Mary Wright said. "It's been a lifesaver for Nathan. That's what is keeping him alive."

The drive will be held from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. today and Friday in the Student Center ballrooms.

Southern Illinois counties that she works with.

Ugent served as a volunteer for the first blood drive in Carbondale in 1969. It was then that she was asked to help with the program.

As a volunteer, Ugent was the coordinator of volunteers for the Carbondale Blood Program from 1972 to 1982. She was one of the two representatives from Illinois on the Regional Advisory Committee of the Missouri and Illinois Regional Red Cross Program from 1977 to 1985.

Before becoming coordinator in 1985 and a member of the Red Cross Staff, Ugent was the director of the Carbondale United Way. "I am a modest person," she said of her achievements. "I don't think I can do much, but I can be able to work with something I believe in. People are helped."

But no matter how busy she gets, Ugent says she and eager to talk about the importance of giving blood.

Ugent says it's important to give someone a chance to live through donated blood, even though we might not know the person," she said. "No amount of money can make it appear, it comes from volunteers."

With Ugent's record as one of the greatest single contributors of blood in the state, Ugent speaks highly of student participation.

"Students make things happen," she said. "I have a large students who make things happen, that we have things happen, and those who ask what happened. Students are among the first group."

"It's important to do all that we can," she added. "It's as American as apple pie."

Alcohol, drug abuse topic of training day

By Dena Schulte Staff Writer

A training session will be held today to teach professionals how to deal with alcohol and drug abusers. The program, sponsored by the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center, will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Carbondale Community Center, 604 E. College St.

Substance abuse counselor Jeff Emil said the program is designed for people who deal with substance users directly, but may have to deal with them in some way through their work.

"People include social service providers such as ministers, housing authorities, and personnel from various health centers, Emil said.

"We broke the programs down into areas of work we usually do on a daily basis," Emil said.

The programs include an introduction to what substance abuse is, how to assess it, how abusers can be treated, roles of the service providers and programs aimed toward special people such as co-dependency and adolescent substance abuse, he said.

Psychology to hold open house

The Department of Psychology will hold an open house for its experimental psychology program Nov. 14 and 18.

Those attending the open house on Nov. 14 should meet at 10 a.m. in Lawson 101 for the lecture portion of the program. In the afternoon, tours of research labs will be given and the program will end at 2 p.m.

On Nov. 18, the program will begin at 1 p.m. in the Morris Library Auditorium. Tours will be given and the program will run until 2 p.m.

Speakers will discuss the graduate program in experimental psychology as well as the admissions process, ongoing research programs and career opportunities for graduates. Carmen Masson, assistant to the director of graduate studies in psychology, said, "It's an opportunity for students to meet faculty, other graduate students and learn about the research and teaching facilities," Masson said.

Dennis Molense, preceptor of psychology, said the open house "will give undergraduates an idea of what kinds of activities go on in the psychology department as well as general strategies in applying for graduate school."

For details, call the psychology department at 536-2361.

Fraternity, sorority boogie to aid United Way campaign

By Robert York

Two Greek organizations are holding a benefit dance this weekend to support the United Way in the final days of its annual campaign.

Jim Hawkinson said his fraternity, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and the Delta Zeta sorority are holding the dance Saturday in the Roman Room of the Student Center at 8 p.m. Tickets will be sold at the door. The admission price is $1.

The dance is open to the community, Hawkinson said. He added that anyone interested in helping with decorations should arrive at 7 p.m.

'Second' examinations Christian faith in today's world

The SIU-C Playwrights Theater Workshop will present a staged reading of the play "Thirty," at noon Friday at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave.

Written by Frederick Norberg, graduate student in playwriting, the play is a contemporary allegory to the book of Luke and deals with the Christian's ability to be a viable force in today's society.

The reading is the first in a series of staged readings by the Playwrights Theater Workshop's "Lunchnite Theater Series." The series is designed to give exposure to new plays written by members of the workshop.

Other fraternities and sororities on campus will help in selling tickets as well, said Hawkinson.

A drawing will be held at 9 p.m. for a microwave oven. Twenty-five dollars from local sponsors will also be given away throughout the evening. Hawkinson said all of the money will come from raffle ticket sales.

Since the campaign began earlier in the fall, the organizations have been busy with fund-raisers of the campaign, he said. They began by distributing credit card applications on campus. The credit card companies paid the workers a certain percentage that was donated to the campaign by the groups. The organizations also held car washes within the city, with money going to the United Way.

Hawkinson said the dance could be the last fund-raiser this year, but the organizations are considering a ten-cent-tother marathon if necessary.

He said member turnout and participation has been good for all of the events. This is the second year the students have worked it, the campaign.

"We have kept busy during the last two campaigns," Hawkinson said. "Next year, we will organize it so it will run a lot smoother."
Beasts invade in kids’ opera ‘Globolinks’

"Help, Help, The Globolinks: An Opera In One Act For Children And Those Who Like Children," will be performed by the Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater at 3 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday in Stryock Auditorium. Admission is $2 for the public and $1 for students and senior citizens.

Directed by Jeanine Wagner, lecturer in the School of Music, the opera is in Wagner’s words, “a musical Odd of The Worlds.”

Globolinks are Martian-like creatures who try to conquer Earth by turning the entire population into Globolinks. However, a group of music students on Spring Break find that music soothes the savage beast, even if the beast is from outer space.

The opera’s text is in English and was written by Gian Carlo Menotti, who is best known for his Christmas opera, “Amahl and The Night Visitors.”

The Marjorie Lawrence Opera Theater’s “Opera on Wheels” company plans to take the opera to area schools in the Spring, said Wagner. The Opera on Wheels is funded in part by the Illinois Arts Council.

Jazz, classical trombone work set for recital

A selection of jazz and classical trombone literature will be performed by trombonist Jim Owen at 8 tonight in the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall.

During the first half of the recital, Owen, junior in music, will perform three non-jazz solo trombone works. They are: “Cavatine,” by Camille Saint-Saens; the first movement of “Concerto,” by Johann Georg Albrechtsberger; and “Suite” by Pierre Max Dubois.

Accompanying Owen in the first half will be pianist Walter Bragg.

For the jazz portion of the program, Owen will be joined by a rhythm section of Ken Ledford, piano; James DiGirolamo, bass; and Ron Spaeht, drums.

Jazz works to be performed are “Mrs. B.C.” by Pamela Watson; “Stella by Starlight,” by Victor Young; “Ba- Dee Bellvue Ba-ba Aye,” by Thelonius Monk; and “Webb City,” by Bud Powell.

Trumpeter Guy Kammerer and alto saxophonist Ed Hill, as well as Owen, will be featured soloists on “Ms. B.C.” Owen solo trombone will be featured on “Stella by Starlight.”

Owen will replace Ledford at the keyboard for the Monk piece, showing his ability at piano.

The recital is free. It is being sponsored by the School of Music.

Indian leader to discuss fairness

An Indian civil rights advocate will speak on the unfairness of too little Indian representation in the American political system at 7 p.m. today in the Student Center, a spokesman said. The discussion is sponsored by the Black Affairs Council and the Southern Illinois Anti-Apartheid Alliance.

Vernon Bellecourt, a leader of the Indian Movement, also will discuss the relationship between the Indian and black communities and the need for strengthening that link, Abukari, a member of Bellecourt's public relations staff, said. "The Indian community is the least represented in the political system," Bellecourt will speak in support of a committee for fair elections, sponsored by Lenora Fulani, a black Independent candidate for the 1988 presidential election, Abukari said.

Bellecourt's visit to SIU-C is part of a six-week tour of Illinois to gather support for fair elections, Abukari said. Bellecourt was a speaker at the 1983 March on Washington in memory of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., according to a news release.

The following year, Bellecourt was a member of the Rev. Jesse Jackson's Rainbow Coalition during the 1984 presidential campaign.
Jim Frey rehired by Cubs, named operations director

CHICAGO (UPI) - Former Chicago Cubs manager Jim Frey, who spent last season broadcasting Cubs' baseball games, was named to the team's director of baseball operations.

Frey flew from his home in Baltimore to Chicago Tuesday, met Cubs chairman John Madigan and accepted the post. The job was created when Dallas Green resigned Oct. 29 as team president and general manager.

"I wasn't sure whether I was going to be asked to be the manager or go to the front office," Frey said. "This is a good opportunity to stay and work for the Cubs again."

Frey managed the Cubs from 1984 through the middle of 1986, when he was fired. He was rehired by the club when the Cubs won the National League East and was named NL Manager of the Year. After being fired in 1986, Frey was signed to work on Cubs' radio broadcasts for WGN radio, which like the Cubs is owned by Tribune Co.

The disease was undiagnosed in McCravy and there is "speculation" the strain of athletics can hasten the death of someone afflicted with it, said Dr. Douglas Ackermann, a cardiovascular pathologist.

"It is a common cause of death in athletes who died suddenly," Ackermann said. However, Nichols stressed there is no need for worry among other athletes.

"This is an unusual disease," he said. "The last thing we want is to scare a lot of athletes. Most people who have this disease don't die from it."

The disease, which on the average manifests itself by age 20, is treatable with drugs, Nichols said. If affects at most one person in 15,000, he said.

McCravy showed no symptoms of the disease before his Oct. 28 death. Ackermann said that is common, adding the usual way for the disease to show is through "sudden unexpected death." He said some people experience shortness of breath, chest pains or pass out.

McCravy was found dead in his dormitory room one day after he cut short a training session because he felt ill.
Navratilova edges youth in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI)—Sixteen-year-old Harry Fernandez battled No. 1 seed Martina Navratilova for a set before losing 6-4, 6-3 Wednesday in the second round of the $150,000 Virginia Slims National Open tennis tournament.

In the opener, seeded Hana Mandlikova played her first round match against Eva Prifti.

Fernandez, a native of the Dominican Republic, needed only four years to win all four classes in the Orange Bowl tennis tournament. Wednesday, in her first match ever against Navratilova, she played a surprisingly strong first set, even managing to break Navratilova’s serve twice.

The first four games were won by the server at love. Fernandez gave her first player to score a point against her, that coming in the fifth game when she lifted her racket and broke down the line past the charging Navratilova.

"I was so wrong," Navratilova said of the four strong loses games. "I’m not sure how what happened to me before.

The set turned around completely after the fifth game, when Fernandez hit five consecutive service breaks. Down 3-4 in the sixth game, Fernandez let an overview winner to force deuce but lost a point and then Navratilova hit a crosscourt backhand line drive to the first break and a 4-2 lead.

Rather than fall apart, Fernandez came back to win the second set and claim the victory. Navratilova finished with four or five kids. Second of all, it’s a maillman or a cop, I’ve chosen that profession.

"I didn’t choose his career for him. If he wants to be a cop, he should have played professional football, been an attorney, or (played) basketball,”

Dickerson, who will play for the Colts Sunday when they meet the Dolphins in Joe Robbie Stadium, said the fans who are hardest on him are frustrated ex-jocks. "That’s OK. It is, I think, another player or someone who has a deep open mind can relate to what type of situation I was in.”

Dickerson is fans jealous of his wealth

MIAMI (UPI) — Indianapolis running back David Dickerson said the Colts were earning $682,000 this year with the Rams, but signed a four-year contract worth a reported $3 million after the trade.

"The average person just says, ‘I have three or four kids,’ I’m making $40,000 a year and I’m barely making ends meet, why is this guy — he’s making $600,000 — why is he doing that?” Dickerson said. "Well first of all, I didn’t make the guy have two or three kids. Second, of all, it’s a maillman or a cop, I’ve chosen that profession.

"I didn’t choose his career for him. If he wants to be a cop, he should have played professional football, been an attorney, or (played) basketball.”
