Conference motivates students to unite

DAPHNE RETTER

Six men on stage swing machetes and stomp their feet to their own rhythm. In a straight line, half the men duck as the others swing the long knives just over their heads, their feet pounding the beat into the stage all the while.

"I-O-T-A," the steppers from Iota Phi Theta fraternity chant.

The Black Affairs Council Leadership Conference came to a close Saturday with a 9 p.m. step show performance in the Student Center.

For two days, speakers stressed the need for African American students to work together, stay connected to their communities and focus on their educational goals.

About 100 people attended the conference. Yohlunda Mosley, coordinator for Multicultural Programs and Services, said the success of the conference is a tribute to the hard work of the students who planned it.

"I think the students need to be commended," she said. "I don't think they could have done a better job with the speakers."

Three keynote speakers came to Carbondale for the event. Motivational Speaker Julia Hare, who was once named Educator of the Year in Washington D.C., discussed male-female relationships in the African American culture.

Mosley said people left Hare's workshop with a purpose. "Dr. Hare spoke for about three hours and not one student left," she said. "They didn't want to get up."

Sister Soujah, political activist and renowned author, spoke about cultural politics and steps African Americans can take to help their community.

Tamara Little, a senior in social work from Chicago, said although she knew most of what

"Society is more concerned with the field of communications rather than communication."

JUSTIN JONES - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Award-winning author and radio host Studs Terkel spoke to a capacity crowd Thursday in the Lesar Law Auditorium in the Chicago, "The Studs Terkel Show," interviewing ordinary people and learning about their background.

Studs: remember the nation's history

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Studs Terkel held nothing back when he spoke to students and community Thursday. For a renowned award-winning author and radio host, Terkel could not have been any more down to earth.

The 87-year-old spoke about an hour at the Lesar Law Auditorium on "Alzheimer's Disease: Does Our Nation Have It?"

The overcrowded auditorium forced latecomers to watch Terkel's televised speech from another room in the Lesar Law Building.

Terkel used Veterans Day as an opportunity to look back and remember history. He thinks society is suffering from a loss of memory of what happened in the past.

Terkel was optimistic about the future by the looks of the audience that turned out to hear him speak. He spoke about the value of educating oneself, but said most people misconstrue the purpose of getting an education.

"Don't go to school to be a big shot," he told the audience. "You go to school to enrich your life and enrich the community."

Terkel repeated the phrase, "hope dies last," throughout his speech to remind students to always keep hope alive to achieve their goals.

Terkel said society needs to do a better job of remembering the past before it can move forward into the future. The fast-age world of technology poses dangers to our society, Terkel said.

"We are reaching a point of no return," Terkel said. "Society is more concerned with the field of communications rather than communication."

Technology allows society the ability to communicate without having any direct contact with the other person, he said.

"Today we can communicate with others, get dates with girls and order pizza without even leaving the room," Terkel said.

For 45 years, Terkel interviewed ordinary people and learned their backgrounds on "The Studs Terkel Show." He said the best interviews he did were face-to-face, as opposed to today's methods of communication via computers.

"I like to get inside and see what people are thinking," Terkel said.

Terkel illustrated his point by talking about how people do not speak to each other anymore. Terkel loves to speak with anybody who will speak back, and he said he was frustrated with people who are not interested in a conversation.

He sat down on a park bench one day waiting for a city bus to arrive. A man and woman sitting next to him were more interested in what they were reading than talking with Terkel.

"I know that I talk too much," Terkel said. "When no one is there, I talk to myself because the audience is very impressive."

Terkel's attempt to start up a conversation

Commission considers removing liquor license cap

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Matt Maier and John Karayanis, two Carbondale business owners, both hope to be granted a liquor license Tuesday, but a present cap on liquor licenses and current City Council policy only allow for one license to be approved.

Class B-2 liquor license applications for both Maier and Karayanis were recommended for approval Nov. 4 by the Liquor Advisory Board.

The bar owners' applications will be reviewed at the Liquor Control Commission meeting Tuesday night immediately following the regular meeting of the City Council.

Besides the citywide cap, Maier's proposed establishment at 315 S. Illinois Ave. also falls in the area of a council policy that prohibits new or transferred liquor licenses from being granted in the South Illinois Avenue area because of problems on the Strip. In 1995, the council created the policy for the area from Walnut Avenue to Grand Avenue and from University Avenue to the railroad tracks.

Before the council — acting as the Liquor Control Commission — votes on the licenses, it will discuss the city liquor license cap.

The council is presented with numerous options as to what actions it can take about the cap, including keeping the present cap and approving one license, changing the policy of liquor licenses in the area of the Strip or increasing the cap to 16 and granting both licenses. With the last option, the next time a class B-2 license is given up, the cap will automatically be lowered back to 15.

Maier, owner of Mugsy McGuire's, 1620 W. Main St., plans to open a dance bar at 315 S. Illinois Ave. that would be student oriented.

The building has been owned by Maier for more than two years, but he has not been able to apply until August for a liquor license because there were none available under the cap.

"The building is empty, and the only thing that is feasible is a dance club," Maier said. "I have no problems with the SIU kids, and the crowd would be a mix — a whole bunch of different groups of people."

He said the building is twice the size of Mugsy McGuire's, and he would be able to have two bands playing at the same time because the set-up of the building.

Maier said he understands why the city has a citywide cap, but he also said having a cap on the Strip is not helpful for the town or businesses.

"A cap is something most towns do, but having a cap in a specific area is wrong," he said. "Having a cap on the Strip is wrong."

This is the second time Maier has applied for a liquor license for 315 S. Illinois Ave. In August, the Liquor

Crime mappers help police

Administration of Justice professor, students create visible means of seeing statistics

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A map hangs on the door of James LeBeau's office detailing dangerous areas of Charlotte, N.C.—a tool created by the SIUC professor and his students to aid the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department.

LeBeau, administration of justice professor, and his students have tracked more than 500,000 calls to Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department in 1997 and 1998 and created a series of maps analyzing those statistics.

SIUC and LeBeau received a grant three years ago from the U.S. Department of Justice to work alongside the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Police Department. They will finish up work this semester.

LeBeau also teaches a graduate course in crime mapping where he incorporates work from the grant into teaching students how maps are created and used.

"It is a generic term for taking locations of crimes and putting them on a map," LeBeau said. "A map puts spatial information in a geographical format."

Steve Schnebly, a graduate student in administration of justice from Ridge Farm, has been working with the grant and LeBeau for a year.

"If you take 300,000 calls for service over an area of so many square miles, crime mapping lets you look at that in a way so you can make predictions and assumptions," Schnebly said.

In one series of maps, LeBeau and students plotted emergency calls, calls where officers had to call for additional help, incidents where officers had to use force, incidents where officers were injured, and calls where guns were used.

When LeBeau and his students compared maps of 1997 calls to maps from 1998, they noticed trends including shifts in areas of the city where officers had to request help and a decrease in the size of an area where officers had to use force.

Richard Lumb, director of Research and Planning for the Charlotte-Mecklenburg police, said the maps have enabled them to reduce some crime rates, such as domestic violence, in areas of the city.

"It gives us an opportunity to go in and find out why a problem is happening," Lumb said. "We use it as part of a larger problem-solving model."

Other examples of LeBeau and his students' work include the mapping of drunk driving statistics in Phoenix and the residents of sex offenders in St. Louis. The St. Louis Police Department asked LeBeau and his students to help track crimes committed by the "Southside Rapist" in St. Louis three years ago.

"It is the hottest thing going right now in United States law enforcement," LeBeau said. "Everybody is learning how to do it."

Student sets earthly example to follow

ENVIRONMENT

To recognize Environmental Awareness Day, the University will provide an informational booth from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today in the Student Center. For more information about refuse and recycling, contact the Carbondale Street Maintenance and Environmental Services at 457-3275.

BRUNN SCOTT

Tom Barnicle spent $50 of his own money to make the world a better place.

By setting up and paying for a recycling system for his apartment complex, Barnicle, a graduate student in plant and soil science from St. Louis, is setting an environmental example for his fellow students and neighbors.

Barnicle bought the bins for his 10-unit complex on 318 W. Pecan St. because the city of Carbondale does not provide a recycling service for apartment complexes.

"I would like to consider myself as an environmentalist, but I only started recycling last year," Barnicle said. "Everybody should recycle as much as they can because the landfills are filling up quickly."

Barnicle suggests SIUC should take a bigger role in preservation of the earth by making it easier for students to recycle.

"SIUC could have more recycling bins on campus to make it more accessible," he said. "There needs to be more recycling availability to people and some kind of reward system might work."

Dan Roosevelt, owner of the apartments where Barnicle resides, is pleased that Barnicle made it possible for his residents to recycle.

"Any Sunday, you can walk down Cherry Street or Walnut Street and there are aluminum cans lying everywhere," Roosevelt said. "Kids should get more involved and clean up the mess."

The city of Carbondale offers a "Bag and Bundle" pickup that collects bagged leaves and bundles of sticks on Wednesdays and Fridays. A loose leaf pickup service for yards costs $17 and requires a reservation.

The University is contributing to Environmental Awareness Day by providing an informational booth from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today in the Student Center.

Andilee Warner, SIUC recycling coordinator, encourages all students, faculty and staff to stop by the booth and register to win a house made of recycled and energy-efficient parts. The house will be built in a location convenient to the winner.

Art: an 'invaluable' way to challenge yourself

RHONDA SCIARRA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A judge's decision to reverse sanctions bestowed on an art museum by New York Mayor Rudolf Giuliani highlighted a stand against censorship in Natalie Rowe's monologue delivered in front of a packed Kleban Theater this weekend.

"Who is government to prevent elephant dung from being displayed on the Virgin Mary at the Brooklyn Museum of Art?" said Rowe, a graduate student in speech communication.

A federal judge said the New York mayor and city had no control over the museum's exhibition of a portrait of the Virgin Mary covered with animal feces.

"The decision that the courts made sets an example for other artists," Rowe said.

Rowe and other graduate students addressed such themes of censorship, strength, frustration and sex in relationship to defining art in a production titled, "Oh, For Art's Sake."

The collaboration of skits, film, song, monologue and dance attempted to discover and define what it means to be an artist by exploring recurring themes in art.

Amy Kilgard, director of "Oh, For Art's Sake," has learned a lot about herself, as well as the importance of community in art.

"Art is invaluable," Kilgard said. "It provides a way to explain topics and take risks in a way that pushes and challenges you."

Prior to the production, Kilgard and others gauged feedback on defining art from people across the country. Answers and responses varied but led to the formation of themes to base the production on.

Elizabeth Whitney, a graduate student in speech communication from Tallahassee, Fla., looked at the art of gender and how gender affects art through the role of a 1950's etiquette teacher. Whitney's character, "Miss Elizabeth," is born from her lifelong study of gender performance.

"She is that hyper-femme who lives inside me, the identity that I alternate embracing and resisting," Whitney described her character in the production's program.

Illinois Supreme Court denies Hale appeal

The Illinois Supreme Court decided not to review Matt Hale's appeal Friday, and Hale intends to appeal the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court, according to Associated Press reports.

The Illinois Supreme Court provided no comments as to why the case would not be reviewed.

After passing the bar exam, Hale was denied his law license in December 1998 by a three-member review board. The board determined in a character and fitness test, Hale, a white supremacist and a leader in the World Church of the Creator, was unfit to practice law.

HILLSDALE, MICH.

Rumors surround resignation of president

The president of Hillsdale College resigned Wednesday amid rumors that an affair with his daughter-in-law led to the demise of his career.

George C. Roche III, who has held the college's top post for 28 years, submitted a letter of retirement, effective immediately, to trustees and left without answering any questions.

Roche, 64, has led a tumultuous life in the last few years. In April, he divorced his wife of 44 years, who has cancer, and remarried five months later. His daughter-in-law, Lissa Roche, died Oct. 17 on the college's campus from what investigators said was a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Hillsdale police interviewed Roche in connection with the shooting. The Detroit News reported Wednesday that Roche said Lissa Roche had confessed to him two days before her death that she planned to kill herself. Since her death, investigators have focused on rumors that the two had had an affair.

Roche's sudden departure ends a career in education that has been widely praised by conservatives. By ensuring the college refused all federal aid, the institution has been able to ignore federal policies on affirmative action and gender equality in sports. Contributions, primarily from conservatives and libertarian supporters attracted to the college's emphasis on free-market economics, have saved Hillsdale from near bankruptcy. Under Roche's leadership, the college's endowment soared to $172 million.

Crime index at SIUC declines

SIUC/Carbondale crime indexes have dropped dramatically in the past 4 years, experts disagree on reasons for decline

BOB JACOBINI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Serious crime at SIUC fell 34 percent from 1994 through 1998, but police officials say the reasons for the decline are difficult to identify.

The FBI's national Crime Index is constructed from eight crime categories: murder, forcible rape (called criminal sexual assault in Illinois), robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny-theft, motor vehicle theft and arson.

At SIUC in 1998, 453 FBI Crime Index crimes were reported, down 17 percent from last year. Carbondale police reported 1,119 crime index offenses, up 5 percent.

The combined SIUC/Carbondale crime index was 1,572, a decline of 5.2 percent from 1997. But during the past four years, the SIUC/Carbondale crime index declined 27 percent.

Nationwide, about 12.5 million crime index offenses were reported in 1998, a decline of 5 percent from the previous year. From 1994 to 1998 the index declined 11 percent, less than half the SIUC/Carbondale rate of decline.

Serious crime nationally and locally declined in recent years, but experts do not agree on the reasons, said Lt. Todd Sigler of the University police.

"We're pleased with the downward trend, but your guess is as good as mine," Sigler said.

Sigler said the decline in student enrollment could account for some of the decline in crime.

Lt. John Sysma of the Carbondale Police Department said, "One theory is that the same amount of crime is occurring, but less is being reported."

Another theory is that people are less likely to commit crimes during periods of low unemployment and a healthy economy, Sysma said. If a person has a job, that person might have less reason to go out and steal.

"There is apparently a decrease in teenage substance abuse, so it would follow there would be less reason to commit burglary or theft to pay for drugs," Sysma said.

Sysma pointed out that theft and burglaries accounted for the vast majority of the SIUC/Carbondale crime index crimes. He said the decline in thefts and burglaries was responsible for the SIUC/Carbondale crime index decline in recent years.

Eighty-four percent of all crime index crimes reported in 1998 for SIUC/Carbondale were theft or burglary. Out of 1,572 total crimes, 1,018 thefts and 308 burglaries were reported. Auto burglaries are included under the theft category.

Sysma warned against drawing conclusions about local trends in murder, criminal sexual assault, robbery, auto theft and arson because the numbers are so small.

"Carbondale generally doesn't have a lot of those statistics because it's not a violent community," Sysma said.

It is not significant that the Carbondale murder rate declined 200 percent in 1998 because the decline was from two to none, Sysma said.

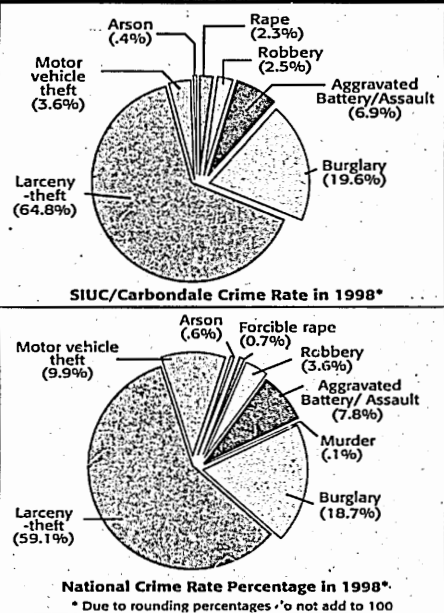

Reported criminal sexual assaults were also too few to draw meaningful conclusions, he said.

Reported sexual assaults varied between 26 and 42 at SIUC/Carbondale from 1994 to 1998. But no clear year-to-year trend is apparent.

The sexual assault rate could have remained constant while reporting rates have increased, Sigler said. He said the support of rape crisis counselors and rape advocates can affect the number of victims that report the crime.

Sexual abuse counselors in Carbondale said reported sexual assaults are far fewer than

Flying Salukis reflect well on SIUC's Flight Program

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIUC's precision flight team stands poised on the edge of greatness, after a successful first-place finish at the National Intercollegiate Flying Association's regional competition in October.

"In the spring, we're moving on to the national competition, which features the same events but much more strenuous competition," said Dominic Telenko, a senior in aviation management and flight from Prospect, Ky.

"I'm confident we'll do extremely well in the national tournament. We're carrying on a long tradition of winning."

It is a long tradition of excellence that goes back nearly 32 years, said head coach Kim Carter. Carter said the exceptional performance of the Flying Salukis at tournaments year after year proves how effective SIUC's Flight Program is.

"A good program produces good pilots," Carter said. "We have a really well-rounded team meaning we have people who are strong pilots, but also people who have a lot of technical knowledge."

Telenko agrees that the success of the Flying Salukis reflects very well on SIUC's program.

"Our program here is very strict and demanding," Telenko said. "SIUC sets very high standards for its students."

For Telenko, being on the flight team presents a great opportunity to perfect his skills. "I enjoy honing my flying skills, and I also love the competitive atmosphere," he said.

Every year the Flying Salukis compete in two major tournaments, the regionals and the nationals, each featuring five ground events and four flying events. To qualify for the nationals, a team must place in the top three of its region, a feat SIUC has accomplished for the last 30 years.

"We have not missed a national competition for 30 years," Carter said. "It speaks well of the whole team. We don't just have a few all-stars, we have a great team that works together."

This May, the Flying Salukis will face off against 30 other schools from across the nation in the nationals. Despite the fierce competition, Telenko feels SIUC will surpass the success of previous years.

"We placed fourth last year, which is extremely good considering we had a young team," Telenko said. "I expect we'll do much better this year because we have a much more experienced team."

For Christopher Jones, a junior in aviation in management and flight from Freeport, the major challenge will be to practice ground events which can often be more difficult than flight events.

"It's easy to get enthusiastic about flight events because it's more fun," Jones said. "Ground events often require more concentration and work."

Ground events include computer accuracy, aircraft pre-flight inspection, aircraft recognition, scan navigation and ground trainer flight simulation.

"All the events are challenging in their own ways," Jones said. "Flying events take a lot of practice while the ground events often require more concentration and study."

Carter said the team will work on all areas of competition before the nationals in May.

"We're going to practice everything," Carter said. "We're a strong team, but there's always room for improvement."

Participants competed in washers, steer roping, egg toss, bob for apples, wheel barrel races, barrel racing, hay bale toss, chubby bunny, Twinkie eating, milk chugging and tug-of-war. Clubs that participated were Sigma Alpha, Gamma Rho, the Rodeo Team, Collegiate FFA, the Ag. Mech. Club and the Pre-vet Club. Ag. Mech. won the event with 220 final points.

Be aware: don't get all shook up!

BRENT COLLINS
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A research team from the University of Colorado found the New Madrid fault system, which extends through Arkansas, Tennessee, Missouri, Kentucky and Illinois, to be more dangerous than a published study from Northwestern University in April.

The Colorado research team dug trenches and looked at geological changes in sediment. They calculated movement of 1.8 to 2 millimeters a year along the fault system.

The Colorado team's charting of the rate of movement shows since the last major earthquake in the 1300s, there has been enough movement for the fault to suddenly slip three feet and cause a 6.0 magnitude earthquake.

Dr. Dhananjay Ravat, associate professor of geophysics, said a potential earthquake with a devastating reaction greater than that of a nuclear bomb blast, equivalent to a 6.5 to 7.0 earthquake, looms over the Southern Illinois area.

The New Madrid fault zone, with fault lines extending 120 miles southward from the Charleston, Mo. area to Cairo, has the potential to create an earthquake equivalent to that of Western Turkey's 7.4 devastating earthquake.

"People should just be prepared and not panic," he said.

Harvey Henson, research project specialist in the Department of Geology, also said people should be cautious of the possibility of earthquakes along the New Madrid fault.

"People should definitely be concerned," Henson said. "People must be aware that there is potential for earthquakes."

The last great earthquake from the New Madrid fault zone occurred in 1811 and 1812 with aftershocks that continue to rattle areas along its complex collection of faults to this day. Another earthquake with a magnitude of about 7.2 is predicted to occur in about 300 years. According to Henson, "the big one" could happen at any time.

"These are just forecasts, not predictions," Henson said. "More data about earthquakes will help clear the forecast a little better."

LICENSE

Control Commission voted against granting the license because of concerns about additional people on the Strip.

Maier reapplied because he said there is a change in the city and its actions about behavior on the Strip.

Karayanis would not speak with the Daily Egyptian, but he spoke of his plans for Chicago Underground, 717 S. University Ave., at the Nov. 4 Liquor Advisory Board meeting.

He wants to change his present class A-2 license to a class B-2 license so the restaurant can stay open and still sell alcohol without having to operate a kitchen.

"It was a labor of love to open the business," he said. "We opened the restaurant under certain conditions to keep that kind of license. We want to enhance our operation to help students and our employees."

A class A-2 license allows an establishment to sell liquor, but it must continue to serve food and make more than 51 percent of profits from food sales. A class B-2 license is a bar license that allows for all profits to be generated from alcohol sales.

Karayanis told the Liquor Advisory Board that his kitchen is very expensive to operate because the food is all hand-made and said only 15 percent to 20 percent of sales is from alcohol.

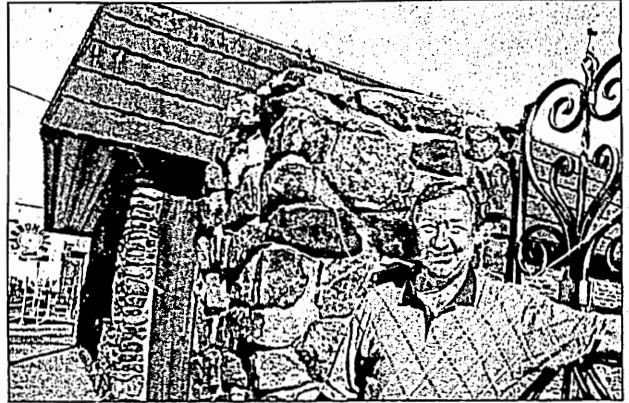

He also said that he did not want to "fill [his establishment] with drunken college students."

Increased competition between bars for lower priced drinks is another concern expressed by the board and the commission.

Maier said he is strict on policing his bar and does not allow underage drinking. He said that if granted the liquor license, he would not offer extremely cheap specials, such as 25-cent drafts, because his establishment is open for profit.

Maier plans to keep his student-friendly atmosphere and keep attracting the older Carbondale community crowd much like Mugsy McGuire's.

"Carbondale is a college town, and without the students and SIU, there wouldn't be a Carbondale," he said.

"I think she is funny in a terrifying way, but also that she holds more truths for me than I often want to realize."

Shelly Robertson walked the audience through the artistic qualities of her family. Whether it was her mother's baking or her grandmother's quilts, she looks at each member of her family as an artist.

"I am an artist because of the way I interpret my life," Robertson said. "When I think of art, I think of family and what I did as a child."

The goal of the production was to explore underlying motives and values that contribute to the formation of art today.

"We are trying to pose different ways to be an artist other than just painting or drawing a picture," Whitney said. "Everyone has their own definition of what art is."

magnitude of 6 to 6.5 will occur in the lifetime of a Southern Illinois resident.

An average of two to three earthquakes happen every week, but most are too small for people to notice them.

The occurrence of the earthquakes proves to be beneficial to those who wish to understand them, Ravat said.

"In the past 20 to 30 years, a lot of studies have been done," Ravat said. "With continued study, a better understanding of earthquakes will help determine earthquake activity in the area."

The knowledge acquired by geologists not only benefits in the prediction of earthquakes, but builders planning for future road, bridge and building construction will also be able to keep up with existing building codes associated with earthquakes.

Sanjeev Kumar, assistant professor in the Department of Civil Engineering, said that after the 1989 San Francisco area earthquake, many new earthquake building codes were prompted throughout the nation.

"The first thing [the planners] need to know is that there is a significant potential for earthquakes in this area," Kumar said. "The design and engineering should be properly evaluate before construction."

An international building code, which should be ready by 2000, is going to be the uniform code for the whole country for building structures in the future said Kumar.

As for now, Henson says people should not live in fear, but be aware and be prepared.

"We live in an earthquake zone," Henson said. "They happened once, they will happen again. It is inevitable."

CONFERENCE

Soufjah discussed, she needed the reminder.

"People have departed from the core of being together in relationships," she said. "You just need people to be humble and break down — someone to say, 'Look, there is a problem, and we need to get together and find some solutions.'"

The last speaker, Charles E. Sanford, whose speech was titled "Only Black America Can Save Black America," discussed the responsibility of African Americans to educate themselves.

Alfred Jackson, coordinator for Student Support Services, said the conference was invigorating and motivating. He said he would like students to leave the conference with a sense of connectedness to their community.

"We need to leave our inner fears and insecurities at the door and engage in meaningful dialog," he said. "I think that anyone who wasn't here missed a great opportunity."

Carla Daniels, a graduate student from Gary, Ind., who attended the conference, said the workshops provided a realistic view of the post-academic world.

"Just because it's all peaches and cream here, it's not going to be the same once you get out in the real world," she said. "A lot of people need to hear that."

Daniels said people may wonder why BAC would have a conference for just African American students, but she said it is more effective that way.

"Leadership is the same across the board, but once you get into different ethnicities, things become a little bit more specific because one culture is not the same as in another culture," she said.

"You have to find out how they learn and what is the best way to teach them to make them effective leaders."

failed miserably.

He could only get the man to make a comment until he brought up a subject that offended him. Once he did, that, Terkel argued with the man until the bus arrived.

All three of them boarded the next bus, where the couple took a seat in front of Terkel. Terkel said he could hear the woman ask her boyfriend, "Is that old nut still back there?"

One student liked the fact that Terkel loves the day-to-day things most people take for granted.

"It was really inspiring to see someone so full of life and happy with what he was doing," said Debbie Clauser, a senior in psychology from Chicago who listened to Terkel's speech.

Terkel allowed time to take questions from the audience. He answered the traditional questions about his radio-show and the topics he talked about during his speech.

Terkel interrupted during the question-and-answer session by telling the story about how he got the nickname "Studs" before someone asked him.

He got the name "Studs" because he loved the Studs Lonigan novel trilogy by James T. Farrell. He carried them everywhere, so people began to call him Studs.

"It's not what you think it was," Studs said in laughter. "I wish it were though."

"The whole night I had butterflies in my stomach, and I've never, even the first day I walked out on this court, have I ever had butterflies,"

Craig among 16 finalists for Walter Payton award

SIU senior wide receiver Cornell Craig is one of 16 finalists for the 1999 Walter Payton Player of the Year award.

The award, which is chosen by a nationwide panel of college sports information directors, has been presented annually to the top college football player on the Division I-AA level — the equivalent to the Heisman Trophy.

The panel will vote in the next two weeks and the winner will be announced at the 13th annual Division I-AA College Football awards Dec. 6 in New York City.

Craig, the only wide receiver among the 15 other finalists, has 69 receptions for 1,277 yards and 14 touchdowns. He leads the nation with 127.7 receiving yards per game and is ninth in receptions per game with 6.9.

Craig also broke the Gateway Conference's record for consecutive game with a catch which currently stands at 37.

He will have one last opportunity to add to his record Saturday when SIU welcomes Western Kentucky University to McAndrew Stadium at 12:30 p.m.

Also representing the Gateway Conference is the University of Northern Iowa's quarterback Ryan Helming who has completed 202 of 315 pass attempts for 2,622 yards and 23 touchdowns.

(Saturday), I think that is what they've accomplished," said Saluki head coach Sonya Locke.

Against Creighton, the Salukis could not repeat Friday night's performance, but in the roller coaster season Locke has experienced, it did not surprise her.

Locke said the team's primary problem this season, other than inconsistency, was a lack of consistency.

"It would have been nice to see them do what they did (Friday) night, but why would we have expected anything different," Locke said.

The Bluejays (13-13, 9-9) out-hit the Salukis 26 percent to 12 percent on a night where not one Saluki recorded double digit kills. Freshman outside hitter Qiana Nelson and freshman middle blocker Lindsey Schultz led the team with nine and eight kills, respectively. Barr dished out 30 assists and posted 19 digs, while Noel and Kemner recorded 13 and 11 digs, respectively.

Saturday night's match concluded a difficult season for Locke's young team. With freshmen dominating her lineup card, it was a tough first-hand learning experience for most of the team.

it's always going to be that way," said Saluki head coach Sonya Locke who developed a strong player-coach relationship with Barr. Barr credited a great deal of her success at SIU to her coach and friend.

"She has played a huge role in my accomplishments here, not just as a coach," Barr said. "She's been there for me through a lot of things that a lot of people would not go to her for, but I went to her for. She has always been there for me. I can't thank her enough for everything she has done for me."

It was the first time for the majority, if not every one of Locke's freshmen, who all came from successful high school programs, to ever play on a team with a losing record.

"I just don't think they knew what they were in for, and you can't prepare them enough until they experience it," Locke said.

Although the Salukis record was not ideal to what they anticipated this season, the group always maintained a positive attitude and exemplified true character. The group's strong sense of fellowship was probably displayed stronger off the court than on it this season.

"I played with 17 of the best people that I've probably met in my life," Kimbrough said. "I trust every single one of them with my life and anything I have, including my child. The group of people I played with this year are very special."

Sluggish, but enough to win

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN

It was the Salukis against the World Saturday at the SIU Arena.

For a while it looked like the final exhibition contest for the SIU men's basketball team would result in World domination, but by the end of the 93-82 win against World Basketball Opportunities, the Salukis showed there is work to be done before next Saturday's regular season opener.

SIU seemed headed for a laugher in the finale of the two-game pre-season slate when a Joshua Cross jumper gave SIU a 24-5 lead with 12:49 left in the first half. The Salukis took a 51-36 advantage into the locker room at halftime, but allowed an athletic WBO squad to creep back into contention in the second half.

Darroll Wright bombed away from three-point land in the second half for WBO, nailing five of his six trifectas. Wright pumped in 30 points on the day and former Saluki Ian Stewart chipped in with 10 points in 22 minutes. WBO used a 18-4 run to cut the Salukis' lead to 58-54 seven minutes into the half, but back-to-back baskets by sophomore guard Brandon Mells stopped the bleeding for the struggling Salukis.

Although SIU played on its heels much of the afternoon, Saluki head coach Bruce Weber is comforted that SIU put up plenty of points without playing its best basketball.

"We were very sluggish," Weber said. "We got 93 (points) and I don't think we played very well. We missed a lot of wide open 3s, missed some free throws, missed some lay-ups early.

"Every loose ball we were behind — either we're not athletic enough, or we weren't on our toes," Weber said. "The game was never in doubt, but at the same time, I wish we would have had some better flow."

For the second straight game, senior center Derrick Tilmon led the Saluki charge. Tilmon, who scored a career high 27 points in SIU's 109-79 win against Team Concept, followed up with a 21 point, 10 rebound effort against WBO.

Despite his strong personal showing, Tilmon was frustrated with the Salukis' defense and periodic intensity lapses. At the start of the second half, the Salukis turned the ball over repeatedly and were flat on defense.

"I think our defense was terrible," Tilmon said. "We've got to have [opponents] feel they don't even want to bring the ball up the court."

Although the SIU defense has yet to live up to its high standards of last season, the offense is already in mid-season form.

Saluki freshman guard Kent Williams completed his impressive showing in the exhibition games with a 17 point outing, and Mells added 12 points.

Meanwhile, Cross returned to action for the Salukis after missing early season practice and the exhibition opener with an ankle injury. He appeared rusty, managing just three points and four rebounds in 15 minutes off the bench.

The Salukis begin the regular season next Saturday, when Western Kentucky University comes-a-calling to the SIU Arena.

Senior guard Ricky Collum said the Salukis need to

Women's basketball team not overconfident after victory against St. Louis Goldstar

The Salukis welcome Athletes in Action to the SIU Arena for the second of two pre-season exhibition games tonight at 7. The team opens the season Friday in the Time Warner Cable Classic in Nebraska against the University of Wisconsin at 5:35 p.m.

After the injury-plagued season in which the SIU women's basketball team finished 6-21 in 1998-99, second-year head coach Julie Beck knows anything can happen. That's why she is convinced it's too early for overzealous optimism following a head-turning 81-63 win against St. Louis Goldstar last Wednesday.

"I made the statement that I wanted to remain grounded, and I think our kids do," Beck said. "We're young... and with Courtney [Smith] and Maria [Niebrugge] out (with injuries), I think we lost a little leadership. Melaniece [Bardley] is trying, but it's going to be a long year, and we're going to have to take baby steps because we have a lot of young kids."

The young Saluki squad will get one last chance to prepare for the season opener in the last exhibition game of the pre-season tonight at 7 when they face Athletes in Action in the SIU Arena.

Beck's excitement generates from Wednesday's win that saw only eight turnovers, 81 points scored and five players with double digit scoring.

The Salukis, who played without a true point guard most of the year, averaged more than 22 turnovers an outing last season.

Point guards Kim Holloway, Janina Lopez and Lynn Morancie surprised Beck as they combined for only two turnovers while registering seven assists against Goldstar.

Another ailment of the Salukis' last season was the lack of offensive support for Terica Hathaway. However, the freshman class led the way offensively scoring 44 points with Lopez leading all scorers with 17 points. Molly McDowell chipped in 15, while Katie Berwanger added 10 points and eight rebounds. Morancie had two points.

"[Athletes in Action] is a good basketball team, and I would hope that we can score more points than last year," Beck said about her team's Missouri Valley Conference worst 56.9 average points scored per game.

"AIA, Wisconsin almost got beat by them, Marquette only won by three, Illinois State lost by one, so they're a very formidable opponent.

"We're going to have our hands full, but I hope to see the same type of emotion and the same things going on. But 80 points, I don't know."

Volleyball team wins two matches to finish off season, senior setter Debbie Barr reaches milestone

COREY CUSICK
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

Maybe it had something to do with Debbie Barr. Or possibly it was their opportunity to spoil someone else's fun. Whatever the motivation was, it worked.

During the night when senior setter Debbie Barr reached the highly anticipated 5,000 assists milestone, her Saluki volleyball team knocked Drake University out of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament in one of the Salukis' best performances of the season. The Salukis defeated Drake 3-2 (9-15, 15-12, 12-15, 15-2, 15-13) Friday night and fell to Creighton University 3-0 (15-4, 15-9, 15-9) in the Senior Night season finale Saturday in Davies Gymnasium.

Barr reached the 5,000 career assists mark in the second game against the Bulldogs (9-19, 5-12) to become only the third Missouri Valley Conference player in history to reach the 5,000 plateau.

The icing on the cake though was the victory for three Saluki seniors in their final weekend.

Along with Barr, seniors Marris Kimbrough and Lenika Vazquez ended their SIU volleyball careers this past weekend. Barr dished out 43 assists on the night and posted 13 digs, while freshman outside hitter Kristie Kemner led the way offensively, recording 22 kills.

"I slacked off my last two matches," said Kemner, who also led the team with 16 digs. "I don't feel I played to my potential, but this one was for Debbie. I wanted to step it up and show her I could play."

Sophomore middle blocker Jenny Noel recorded 10 kills and 14 digs, while Kimbrough chipped in with 11 digs.

The Salukis (5-21, 3-15) took advantage of Drake's poor hitting (12 percent) and 15 service errors to close out the match and end any hope of the Bulldogs reaching the MVC tournament, where only the top six conference schools compete.

"I think they were just wanting to end the season on a good note, and even if we were to lose

Barr reaches 5,000 assists

COREY CUSICK
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

As confetti dispersed throughout the crowd and Kool and the Gang's "Celebration" had the joint on its feet, only one thing could have just occurred — A-5K — or 5,000 career assists for SIU senior volleyball setter Debbie Barr.

The highly anticipated wait for the disjunction, in which only two other Missouri Valley Conference setters have reached, was just the start of an emotional and memorable weekend for the Muncie, Ind., native Friday night in Davies Gymnasium.

Barr's 5,000th assist came in the second game of the Salukis' 3-2 victory over Drake University Friday.

"I didn't realize what was going to happen with all the confetti and excitement," Barr said. "But once it happened, it kind of took me a second to really realize, like 'Wow, it really happened, it's really here.'"

While Friday night's celebration was expected, Saturday night Barr received the ultimate compliment — her number was lifted up into the rafters.

With the unveiling of the banner revealing Barr's No. 5 jersey from the top of Davies Gymnasium, it marked the first volleyball jersey to be retired by the SIU Athletics Department in the 39-year history of SIU volleyball.

"It's indescribable," said Barr, almost at a loss of words. "I still don't believe that it's up there."

Garnishing the school's all-time assists (5,057) and digs (1,113) record, Barr had an immense impact on SIU volleyball since her arrival four years ago.

She was the Missouri Valley Conference Freshman/Newcomer of the Year her freshman season, received honorable mention all-MVC accolades her sophomore year, and led the team to a 19-12, 12-6 third-place finish in the MVC her junior year.

This season the senior took on the daunting task of leading a young and inexperienced team as the lone starting upperclassman.

For her efforts, Barr's teammates helped her defeat Drake 3-2, Friday night to make 5,000 even more memorable.

"We knew this was Debbie's game, and we wanted to make it the best we could," said freshman
