The University of Illinois has received its first shipment of H1N1 vaccines and vaccinations begin today for students who fall into the high-risk categories.

According to a press release, the high-risk categories include students under the age of 24 who have asthma, diabetes, heart conditions, or other chronic conditions or those who take immunosuppressants, including those under 24 years of age and those who are pregnant, but as more shipments arrive, the clinics will be opened to all students.

The outreach clinics will be free to students with SIUC identification cards.

Paige Hefferman, 11 months old, of Carbondale, is held by her mother, Sarah Hefferman, while she receives the swine flu vaccination at the Lakeland Baptist Church on Giant Otay Road Saturday. "I just wanted to be sure we had her shot before she goes to day care," Hefferman said. Vaccinations for H1N1 are available for students under 24 years of age starting today in the Student Health Center.
Three finalists remain for diversity position

The three finalists for institutional diversity position will soon be filled as all three finalists have been named: "Avella" Fleming-Roth, Yada McBee Smith and Gwendolyn Whie. The positions have been available at SIUC since November 2008 when the search was posted following the retirement of Seymour Byars. The finalists will be announced at a press release in December.

Payroll

The system-wide freeze on all non-salary expenditures. Pushed said, notifications to university faculty and staff Thursday, indicating it had to cut some expenditures related to salaries.

Vaccine

The Jackson County Health Department began in H1N1 vaccine clinics last week, but Ted Gross, director of the Student Health Center, said that because health departments and hospitals are first priority for vaccines, Universities and community colleges are part of the second priority.

Famous cinematographer returns to SIUC

Filmmaker for "The Box" talks to students

Cinema and photography students will have an opportunity to meet the famous president of the American Society of Cinematographers.

Steven Poster, a former SIUC student, has served as the cinematographer in several movies, including "Rocky V," "Donnie Darko," "Smart Little 2" and "The Box," which opened in theaters last week. Poster is visiting SIUC this weekend, starting with a photo exhibition from 4 to 7 p.m. today at the University Museum in Foster Hall. From 2 to 6:30 p.m. Saturday, he will give a presentation on lighting in movies and what type of professors care about talking to students; "Donnie Darko," talk about ideas. What they don't do well is give students practical and hands-on professional experience," Poster said. "So having him come is really great for the students because they can learn about career paths.

Poster said he hopes he can offer students the advice they need to make it in the entertainment business.

"You have to be willing to really persevere. That's the pay dirt," Poster said. "It's a tough business right now, with the economy the way it is, it's really tough." Poster is visiting SIUC this weekend, and he has decided to just visit campus again, but to connect with students as well.

"He could have been a teacher," Poster said. "It's something to be incredibly proud of, to have students who have had such amazing success and achievements in their careers," Bachman said. "It's incredibly impressive.

"Bachman said she was the first to be contacted by Poster. She said she became interested in Poster's photography exhibit when she found out he had attended SIUC; "Poster has made a living off cinematography, but he said he still has a passion for photography. "I am constantly carrying a camera, whether I'm on a movie set or not," Poster said. "My life is photography.

Bachman said the exhibit consists of about 24 large-scale black and white photographs that focus on architecture and the quieter moments in life.

"You can tell he has the mind of a photographer; he observes things that most of us don't observe," Bachman said.

Apart from the photo exhibit and the discussion with students, Poster said he is excited to revisit his former campus.

"I'm really excited to see the campus. I haven't been there in so many years and I want to see how it's grown," Poster said. "It was a golden time in my life.

Final conference matches ahead for Salukis

Derek Robbins

Space/40

The season hangs in the balance as the Salukis enter their final three matches.

The SIU volleyball team plays against the fourth and fifth place Missouri Valley Conference teams this weekend. On Friday, the Salukis travel to Omaha, Neb., to play against No. 4 Creighton. SIU then heads to Des Moines, Iowa, to play against No. 5 Drake Saturday.

Drake and Creighton are tied with conference records of 7-7.

SIU head coach Brenda Winkler said a strong performance this weekend is crucial.

"These matches are the most important of the season," Winkler said. "Getting wins against the two teams immediately ahead of us would put us in a great position."

SIU is one back in the loss column from both schools with a 7-8 conference mark.

Winkler said the Salukis need to play well this weekend to keep ahead of the seventh and eighth place teams in conference. Evansville and Illinois State are both 6-9 in the Valley.

To make it into the MVC tournament, SIU needs to finish in at least sixth place.

"We will try and bounce back against Creighton and think we are strong enough to accomplish that," Winkler said.

SIU to open season against Saint Louis University

Derek Robbins

Daily Egyptian

Senior guard Derek Robbins said SIU's opening game is crucial in the MVC season.

The SIU women's basketball team is ready to start regular season play Friday against Saint Louis University after finishing its exhibition season 3-1.

Senior guard Katie Wagner said she was happy the season was finally starting.

"I have been waiting for this since I got here," Wagner said. "I want to get out there and surprise people this season."

SIU is looking to bounce back after losing its second exhibition game of the season to Division III Washington University (Mo.) 84-74.

Wagner said the team lost because it failed to set a good pace.

"We need to slow down and not get ahead of ourselves," Wagner said. "We won't turn the ball over as much against Saint Louis, as I hope we do better."

The Salukis turned the ball over 26 times against Washington.

Wagner said part of the reason the Salukis struggled in this game is because they are still adjusting to the new up-tempo offense.

Junior forward Katrina Swingler said for the team to move on after the loss, it would need to work as a team.

Swinger said she wanted to use some of her leadership as a junior player to help the Salukis play cohesively.

"I want to help us play more like a team than we have been," Swingler said. "We were all upset about losing, but we looked at the tape and saw what we need to do. If we work as a team, we can win the game."

Swinger said the Salukis need to learn how to trust each other and let the ball go so they can succeed.

Creighton is on a slump of its own, as it has lost three of its last four matches.

Senior middle blocker Chandria Robinson and SIU need to play cohesively to defeat Creighton.

"We have been working on getting all the small things done in practice this week," Robinson said. "It will be harder for them to win if we don't mess ourselves up."

SIU had 29 errors compared to Creighton's 19 the last time the two teams played.

"Creighton is another opportunity for SIU to emerge as a tough team," Wagner said. "They are a very good team, and we have to continue playing the way we have been if we want to win."

Winkler said the goal for the team was to win the rest of the way.

"We are one of each of our final three matches," Wagner said. "We need not only to be in the tournament, but we need to be the fourth seed. If we can win the rest of the way, we can do that, and it would be awesome."

Players ready move past Mac

After 73 years of hosting games, McClelland Stadium is about to get its final farewell.

The Salukis will host the Missouri State Bears for the final regular-season game at the stadium on Nov. 1. The Salukis move onto their new stadium next season.

Senior running back DJ Karim said he never realized how much the stadium was needed until now.

"We're going to be special," Karim said. "I guess I never realized how much this stadium has been up, all the tradition and history in the stadium that Saluki fans have been able to witness. This thing has been here longer than I have been alive."

McClelland Stadium was built as part of the University of Southern Illinois Administration during the Great Depression. Despite 90s games being played in 1927, the stadium was not officially open to the public until 1939.

Along with saying goodbye to the stadium, the Salukis will also be saying goodbye to the seniors, as it will also be their last regular-season home game.

Senior linebacker Brantlin Jordan said the seniors will remember all the wins at McClelland and all the times conditioning at the stadium with former head coach Jerry Kill.

"Come Saturday, the team needs to keep everything in perspective against Missouri State," Jordan said.

"This is the biggest game of the season to date," Jordan said. "We're going to pull it all out. It's the last game, and we're going to go out strong."

Senior quarterback Tony Freeman said having Fay back would only help the team, on the offensive side.

"I'm ready to lead out there and get the conference championship." - Tony Freeman

As the Salukis get ready for their final regular-season game at McClelland Stadium, it may not be the last football game there.

"Depending on where the Salukis are positioned in the NCAA Championship Subdivision playoffs, there could be as many as one to three more games at this stadium, but because of NCAA rules, the field would have to remain natural, so there could be no facilities to honor the stadium."

Quarterback Paul McFarland said the goal of the team right now is to make sure Saturday is not the last game seen at McClelland.

"We've been kinda hoping that if we keep winning, then this will be the last game here," McFarland said. "That one of our goals right now, and hopefully we can accomplish that."
CROSS COUNTRY

Men ranked sixth, women 15th

The Sabuls are seeking redemption as they face the Missouri Valley Conference Championships. The Missouri Valley Conference Champion was no example of how being too confident can be bad thing, but the mood has changed heading into regionals. "Our performance at the MVC Championship was an example of how being too confident can be bad thing that the Sabuls did not hold off the ranks 10K race followed by the women’s 6K race.

The men are coming into the meet ranked sixth while the women are ranked 15th out of 33 teams from 30 conferences around the Midwest including schools from the Big 10 and the Big 12.

SIU cross country coach Matt Spada said the team was disappoint in its performance at the Missouri Valley Conference Championship, but it ramped off and made a strong head toward regionals. "This was not the team we wanted to be at the conference championship," Spada said. "We want to improve and make it to the regionals." Spada said the conference championship was not the best of the season but the Sabuls are ready to give it their best shot.

"The Sabuls need to finish in the top two spots, or else they will wait to see if they can earn one of the 33 at-large bids, which the NCAAs will announce on Nov. 16.

The team’s men placed first place in the conference championship by only one point, but it is hoping to make it up to the seniors. Jeff Knoth and Mohamed Mohamed plan to set the tone for the Sabuls as both have a part in qualifying for nationals. Knoth placed 24th in the national championship last season on route to being named an All-American, while Mohamed finished 77th overall in national competition in 2005.

Mohamed said the team is focused on the nation’s best and is motivated to improve. "Looking something we were supposed to win by a lot definitely motivates us to do better at regionals," Mohamed said. "This definitely helps to make sure we can go to nationals as a team.

After this, the team will finish at the NCAAs, senior runner Ahmed Abdelbaki said the women are hoping to prove themselves as well.

"We want to prove to people that we can run with the best of them," Abdelbaki said. "We want to prove to people that we can run with the best of them.

"I want to walk away from cross country with a good memory from my last year," she said.

SIU set to open season against Tennessee-Martin

Ryan Voyles

The Sabuls are ready to hit the court again, and this time the games count.

The men’s basketball team, fresh off its 34th exhibition season, will open up the regular season against the University of Tennessee-Martin at 7 p.m. Saturday at SIU Arena.

Head coach Chris Lowery said it has been a tough season for the team, fighting through tough opponents and loss after loss. "It’s been rough so far," Lowery said. "It’s been tough, but we’ve been trying to stay positive and keep working hard." Lowery also said that the team has been working on improving their defense, which has been a major focus of the season. "We’ve been working on our defense, trying to stay disciplined and focused," he said. "It’s been a tough season, but we’re looking forward to getting back to playing our best basketball."

For SIU, the season opens with a 2-0 record and a chance to build some momentum. "It’s been a tough season, but we’re looking forward to getting back to playing our best basketball," Lowery said. "We’ve been working hard in practice, and we’re ready to go out and play some good basketball."

Final regular-season game in McAndrew Stadium for No. 1

daily.egyptian@telegraph.co.uk

For all of the storylines surrounding the Salukis this season, there is one that is important to them as they head into their final home game of the season.

Winning the football game.

No. 1 SIU (16-1, 7-1 Missouri Valley Football Conference) will face off against Missouri State at 2 p.m. Saturday for the final regular-season game at McAndrew Stadium.

With a win Saturday, the Salukis would clinch the second-to-last regular-season game. "It’s the best way to finish off the regular season," head coach Dale Lindsey said. "We want to go out and win this game, and that’s what we’re focused on." Lindsey said the team has been working hard this week to prepare for the final game of the regular season. "We’ve been working on our defense, trying to stay disciplined and focused," he said. "It’s been a tough season, but we’re looking forward to getting back to playing our best basketball."
