Grand Jury cites lack of evidence in bribery case

By John Durbin

The Jackson County Grand Jury, following a one day investigation into charges of alleged bribery attempts to Carbondale Mayor David Keene, returned a no true bill Thursday because of insufficient evidence.

States Attorney Richard Richman said Thursday evening that at 5:30 p.m. the jury reported that "they did not feel there was sufficient evidence at this time to return an indictment on anyone."

Richman said the jury had the broad plenary powers to subpoena by itself any witness it feels has information pertinent to the investigation and "apparently they did not wish to do so."

The jury opened session at 9:30 a.m. in the Jackson County Courthouse, Murphysboro, and heard testimony from four persons subpoenaed before them. They were Keene, Carbondale City Attorney George Fleerlage, William Whitson, Carbondale Chamber of Commerce president, and William Budstick, Carbondale liquor dealer.

Keene said Thursday night, in response to the jury's decision, "I am very disappointed. I did what I thought was right and I just failed."

"I am going to just have to rest and study awhile. But I certainly don't intend to give up," Keene said. He did say "there is only a certain amount of time I can put on this."

Stevenson says only Demos have solution to nation's problems

By Mary Frazer

Adlai E. Stevenson III, Illinois state treasurer, campaigning for Democratic presidential nominee Hubert H. Humphrey, said only the Democratic party could find the solutions to the world crises today and pave the way for progress and justice in the United States.

Stevenson spoke in behalf of the national Democratic candidates and the candidates for offices in Illinois at a meeting last night in the University Center Ballroom.

The state treasurer spoke of the year 1968 as a tragic one referring to the assassinations of Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

"I have been traveling since May for Humphrey, and I have been troubled by intolerance throughout the nation," Stevenson told the audience. "America is in serious trouble, as was reflected in Chicago, where newsmen, youth volunteers and by-standers were caught in violence."

Decal enforcement begins Monday

Complete enforcement of all parking regulations on campus will go into effect Monday, instead of Tuesday, as previously reported.

Capt. Randal McBride, SIU Security Officer, said all parking violations, including improper decal display, will be ticketed beginning Monday.

Adlai E. Stevenson III, speaking before a large audience last night at the University Center, told his listeners Vietnam can't be solved by military means and the conflict must be immediately resolved.

Demonstration staged

A short demonstration by about 20 persons was held in Area H of the University Center Thursday to protest two Marine recruiters. The demonstration occurred despite an announced policy to remove recruiters from Area H. Wilbur Moulton, dean of students, dispersed the demonstrators. See story, page 2. (Photo by Mark Shlopach)

Demonstrators gather at Center despite University policy changes

By Wayne Markham

A group of about 20 demonstrators gathered in Area H of the University Center Thursday afternoon and harassed two Marine recruiters, despite a recent policy change which will bar recruiters from the sensitive area.

Dean of Students Wilbur Moulton appeared after about an hour and persuaded the demonstrators to leave. He told them disciplinary action would be taken if they didn't disperse.

According to Marine Capt. James Scaras, head of the recruiter detachment, the demonstrators chanted protest songs while standing behind the recruiter table.

At least two students were prevented from approaching the table and the chanting drowned out much of the conversation between recruiters and students that did take place.

The demonstration came as somewhat of a surprise since recently announced administrative policy changes will no longer allow recruiters to occupy Area H.

Announcement of the change in policy came from Moulton at Wednesday's Student Senate meeting.

According to the Dean of Students, recruiters will be re-located to another area of the University Center.

Suggested as possible places for the recruiter move were the second floor study area and the small lounge area under the steps which lead to the University Center Ballrooms.

Key to the move will be consideration of high student traffic flow, Moulton told the senate.

In response to a question from the senate floor, Moulton said the River Rooms would not be an acceptable place for the relocation.

While making his announcement of the new administration policy regarding recruiters, Moulton pointed out that the first priority for Area H was student activity.

Moulton said the University Information and Scheduling Office would pay any rental fees which accrue by the move, if the relocation requires occupying a rental space.

Included in the recent ban from Area H are all personal solicitor teams like enlistment officers, VISTA and Peace Corps workers, Moulton told the senate.

Local Grand Jury renders no true bill in bribe case

When questioned about how he felt the jurors reacted to his testimony, Keene said "they were very courteous and respectful."

According to George Garoian, SIU professor of zoology and one of the 23 jurors, the jury deliberated about 30 minutes before arriving at the decision of insufficient evidence.

When asked whether the jurors discussed the possibility of calling Benjamin D. Pessin, a St. Louis businessman, to testify, Garoian said "we discussed everything."

Pessin signed an affidavit stating that he was offered a liquor license for a proposed Sav-Mart store in 1966 provided a local businessman was made a partner.

Fleerlage had previously said that "Pessin has information in the signed affidavit which is relevant to the bribery charges made by Mayor Keene. He has information that the grand jury is entitled to know about."

Fleerlage said he hoped that the grand jury would have demanded that the witness (Pessin) be made available.

Richman said he was not convinced that the meeting Pessin had with a former city official and a local businessman to discuss the possibilities of obtaining a liquor license has any connection with Keene's allegations of bribery attempts.

Richman contended that "after seeing Mr. Pessin's affidavit and talking with him, that he has nothing to add to the present inquiry."

Carbondale City Councilman Randall Nelson said, in reaction to the jury's decision, he wonders if the function of the Grand Jury is not to investigate the matter further or rather wait until new evidence is presented.

Fleerlage was unavailable for comment.

Carbondale recently joined a select group of cities across the country when it was picked to participate in the Model Cities program. This program is different, the federal department of Housing and Urban Development says, because it is to be designed "by" the people it is to serve, not merely "for" them.

Where this rule has failed, programs have faltered. East St. Louis almost lost its grant last year because officials and resident could not agree on plans and procedures. The residents tossed out the model cities administration picked by city officials and replaced it with their own. The program survived, but valuable time was lost.

When the $81,000 one-year planning grant is received in a few months, Carbondale officials will start the ball rolling by setting up the administrative machinery. One of the most critical steps will be selecting the $12,000 a year City Demonstration Coordinator.

Because of the massive and unexplored job before him, the director must first of all be a capable administrator. He also must know the people of the "model neighborhood" since he will need their help to define problems and develop workable solutions.

Carbondale's "model neighborhood," the northeast quadrant of the city, is home for about 2,500 persons, 98 per cent of whom are black. Carbondale's City Demonstration Director then should be black. He also should be from the "model neighborhood" if possible. City officials should begin combing the northeast for a man capable of handling the job.

Liquor Commission chairman defends resignation

The fact that I have been replaced as chairman of the Carbondale Advisory Liquor Commission seems to have been the subject of considerable misunderstanding. When Mayor Keene first asked me, in May of 1967, to serve in this capacity, I agreed only on the condition that my term of office be restricted to one year. I made this condition because of press of time and for no other reason. At the end of my year of service the Mayor kept his word and replaced me as soon as satisfactory arrangements could be made. Thus, I did not resign. I was simply replaced as soon as possible after my agreed-upon term of service ended.

There never has been any disagreement between the Mayor and I or between the other members of the Commission and I either as to the procedures or the policies of the Commission. At my request the Mayor sat with and participated in the proceedings of the Commission whenever possible and to the best of my knowledge accepted and followed the recommendations of the Commission as he promised he would. Our only consideration was to determine what was to the best interests of the city of Carbondale and so to recommend to the Mayor and the City Council.

I take this opportunity to express my thanks and appreciation to the fellow-members of the Commission—Charles Murden, Robert Stalls, David Luck and Donald Darling—who spent many long hours, without pay of any kind, trying to straighten out and regularize the liquor licensing practices of Carbondale.

Should good curricula be mere accidents?

By Robert M. Hutchins

Who decides what the educational program of a state university shall be?

In California the governor's position is that he does. The Legislature's position is that it does. The position of the Board of Regents is that it does.

None of the three is qualified. Hence if the curriculum is determined by any one of the three, or all three in combination, it can be a good curriculum only by accident.

The only persons qualified to frame an academic program and to select the teachers for it are the faculty. They should welcome criticism, and they should conduct such consultations as, in their opinions, are desirable. But the final decision about what to teach, how to teach and who is to do the teaching must rest with them.

This is not because the judgment of professors is infallible but because any alternative is worse. The one thing indispensable to a university is independence.

Of course, a state may decide that it wants a university in name only. It may want a training school, or a propaganda machine, or a factory grinding out young people who will conform to the prejudices of their elders; and for convenience it may call this institution a university. But a true university is a source of light; it is a center of thought and criticism. It has no commitment to the status quo or any other status. Its commitment is to the truth. Its value is the value of truth.

One of the great questions that is agitating universities all over the world is what the role of the students in determining the curriculum should be. The faculty of the University of California at Berkeley has been discussing this issue for the last four years.

A related subject of debate on campuses everywhere is "relevance." The rising generation is alleged to believe that much of the work they are asked to do has little relation to the contemporary world. The Berkeley faculty has been talking with the students about making the course of study more relevant.

In these conversations it became evident that the students felt they were not understanding one of the overwhelming problems of our time—the problem of race. They made a case, which was accepted by the faculty, for hearing some of the "extremists" in order to get an authentic account of the extremist position. The faculty-student group that had the responsibility of laying out the course accepted the theory of its design and selected a Black Panther to take a leading part in the course. The Black Panther in question was an ex-convict on parole and under indictment for another crime. It would have been difficult to find a bona fide extremist who did not have similar imperfections in his record.

The governor, who knew nothing of the background of the proposed course, and the legislature, which was equally ignorant, condemned the university. The Board of Regents supinely cut down the Black Panther's lectures to one. It can hardly be claimed that these maneuvers have saved the young people of California from contamination. All they have done is to demonstrate that the University of California is under political control.

Grown in cages

Inexpensive successes achieved by SIU catfish farm researchers

Fish researchers at SIU are exploring a simple and inexpensive method for rearing market-size channel catfish in cages. The system is virtually trouble-free.

The main ingredients are six-foot deep wire mesh cages, 20 feet long; a body of water; and a supply of artificial fish food. The catfish do the rest, growing from yearling size to one or one and one-half pounds in 160 days of feeding.

The SIU Cooperative Fisheries Research Laboratory has produced one batch that averaged a conversion ratio of 1.25 pounds of food to a pound of tasty catfish flesh. William Lewis, head of the Laboratory, thinks it very likely that the method can be refined to get the dream ratio: a pound of food producing a pound of fish.

Lewis says the cage feeding technique has advantages over conventional catfish farming in terms of money, control and harvesting.

Catfish farm managers in the southern states may invest as much as $1,000 an acre in pond construction, including forced-water pumping and other hardware.

With cages, any natural or artificial body of water can be used, the larger and deeper the better. The SIU experiments, begun two years ago, are at a strip mine pit near DeSoto, on land owned by Joe Moroni. The cages are attached to floating docks buoyed with styrofoam.

After they're dumped in the cages, the young cats are put on a daily feeding schedule. No other care is necessary until harvest time.

Lewis says the SIU team has achieved holding densities as high as 200 pounds of fish in a cubic yard of water. He thinks there is no reason why, in commercial application, cage farmers couldn't produce upwards of 3,000 pounds of catfish per acre.

In larger and deeper waters made available by the cage method, farmers wouldn't be bothered by oxygen depletion problems which frequently plague pond farmers. Available oxygen is cut down by algae bloom, decaying vegetation and fish excrement. Conventional farmers have to drain their ponds (40 acre average) to pick up by hand those fish that elude the nets.

The SIU researchers have found no cases of parasitism of disease in any of their experimental runs. In fact, Lewis says, "We keep looking, but so far there is absolutely nothing negative to report about the project."

Lewis believes the cage project, supported by a grant from the U. S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries and in cooperation with the Illinois Department of Conservation, could have important applications for underdeveloped, food-poor countries.

"Many nations don't have the technology or soil conditions to build rearing ponds, but may have plenty of natural waters," he said. "Their lakes and rivers are unmanageable for fish harvesting, but with cages it would be no problem. Bulldozers and pumps may not be possible for them, but almost any society can build a cage."

Catfish farming has become big business in many southern states. More than 10,000 acres are in commercial rearing ponds in Arkansas and Mississippi alone. Arkansas reported $9 million in fish farm production during 1966.

Going market rates range from 30 to 40 cents a pound for live cats and as high as 90 cents to $1 for dressed ones. Farm-reared channel catfish are highly preferred to river-caught ones because of their clean, light flavor.

Arkansas and Mississippi farmers say net profits run anywhere from $70 to $250 and up per acre. The cost of rearing a cat from fingerling to harvest will average approximately 25 cents a pound, including labor, pond construction cost, and food.

Placement chief retires to teach

Roye R. Bryant, former president of the College Placement Council and a national figure in the placement field, has gone back to the classroom, not as student but as professor.

Bryant retired September 1 as SIU's placement services director, a position he inaugurated on a full-time basis 18 years ago. Instead of the leisure he anticipated he was induced to teach part-time in the University's Department of Educational Administration and Supervision.

Bryant has the distinction of being the only man who has served as national president of the two major organizations in his field—the College Placement Council and the Association of School, College and University Staffing.

Students, parents not too different

"It is the depth not the width of gap that is the problem," Thomas C. Sorensen told the Convocation audience Thursday as he expounded upon the generation gap. Sorensen is vice president for university relations of the University of California, Berkeley.

"How wide is the gap?" Sorensen asked. "Not as wide as one might think."

Sorensen said that students of a particular background actually have more in common with their own parents than they do with students of other backgrounds.

"Students are not far different than their parents," he said.

"Old folks had their hang-ups, too," he explained. "In my time, they were: sex, grades, sex, draft, sex, parents . . . about the same as this generation."

Sorensen discussed the role the news media have played in widening this gap, placing special emphasis on television.

"The television permits an illusion of seeing an event as it actually happens," he said.

He went on to explain that the camera chooses what is "in"—beards, beads and placards—while it disregards what is "out"—the philosophical discourses and jargon—when covering student gatherings. Parents view these programs with an apprehensive awareness.

Another problem affecting the "gap" is the tendency of the media and the public to lump all non-conformists together, according to Sorensen, who sees all students falling into three groups: the alienated, the idealistically motivated and the traditionalists.

The idealistically motivated are the most important group, although they are not the majority, he indicated.

"Although we (older generation) do not believe in what they say, we must respect their dedication," he said, referring to the students who are concerned about their future.

Solutions hinge on Democrats

"I also experienced intolerance in the candidacy of George Wallace. Nineteen per cent of the American people are ready to accept Wallace because he offers cheap and easy answers to the world problems."

Along with the intolerances within the nation and the people, Stevenson said he also saw salvation.

"Bright hopes are in sight because of the Democratic party. The party is made up of people with strength."

"People in this nation are used to quick solutions. Our failure to win the war and the visible inflections of poverty have caused the negative feeling," he said.

"Humphrey does not share this feeling of failure in regard to the Vietnam war," Stevenson stated. "Humphrey has great faith in the favorable outcome of the Paris peace talks." He said the Democratic presidential nominee feels the war is incapable of military solution, but it must end.

Stevenson denounced Richard M. Nixon's solutions for ending the war.

"Nixon threatens to use more and greater bombs in the war. He wants to spend 50 billion dollars for engines of death and destruction."

In conclusion, Stevenson declared Humphrey and vice-presidential candidate Edward Muskie would be the victors of the national election in November because "The American people won't be fooled by Nixon or Wallace. They want sense and solutions to the problems, not platitudes. They want honest characters in office and those characters lie within the Democratic party."

Eric Kramer says he never would have finished college without Reading Dynamics.

Come to Carbondale's new Reading Dynamics Institute and see why he feels this way.

Whether you're worried about finishing college, or would just like A's instead of B's, Reading Dynamics can make you a more effective student.

How? By improving your basic ability to read.

The average person reads about 250 to 400 words a minute . . . word by word. The way he was taught in grade school.

Eric Kramer of St. Louis University is one of thousands of college students who have decided to stop reading like fourth-graders.

A pre-med student from Plainview, Texas, Eric says "I took the Reading Dynamics course when it became evident that I could not keep up in college, or even hope to achieve the educational goals I had set for myself, unless I learned to read faster and more effectively. Now I read 2,000 to 2,500 words a minute in literature courses, slowing down to around 1,200 for technical books. I wish I could have taken the course in high school."

Jerry Burns, a St. Louis University psychology major from Oaklawn, Illinois, says "Prior to taking the Reading Dynamics course, I found my reading to be tedious and time-consuming. With my reading speed increased, I am able to read more material in different areas and in a shorter time. Also helpful were the methods of teaching Dynamic Reading . . . i.e., the recall patterns. I remember what I read much longer and I'm able to enjoy my reading much more than ever before. I got eight friends to take the course. I'd recommend it to anyone."

Marge Rumely, a St. Louis University junior from LaPorte, Ind., says "My greatest improvement came from the use of recall patterns learned at Evelyn Wood. All my grades have gone up. I think it should be stressed that the recall patterns become a real asset in lectures as well as reading. I find it possible to practically quote lectures heard a year ago, after looking at a short recall pattern."

Come to a Reading Dynamics demonstration. See someone just like you read two, three, four-thousand words a minute, with excellent comprehension and recall . . . someone who eight weeks ago did well to read much faster than a fourth-grader.

Come, call or mail the coupon today. You owe it to yourself to improve something as basic as your ability to read.

Student Senaté passes unity motion

By Wayne Markham

In an unprecedented move to de-emphasize party politics on campus, the Student Senaté has passed a resolution of unity while defeating a bill which declared the American political system to be a "mockery."

Action on the resolution for unity followed an impassioned speech by Gary Krischer, former Rights and Progress party (RAP) candidate.

Submitting the resolution for unity was Tim Weber, University Park senator, who announced that he had resigned from Action Party.

At first it appeared the Senaté would not act Wednesday on the resolution in a debate over the bill's wording, which one senator termed "vague and overly generalized."

Defense of the bill came from Carl Courtinier, Small Group Housing senator, who said he had resigned from the rival Impact Party.

Krischer, who last year was active in a bid for Student Body President with the RAP party, then rose and spoke to a quiet audience for almost five minutes, asking dissolution of all campus parties.

"Nobody cares; nobody knows about you," Krischer told the Senaté. "Start being students and do something."

He was critical of the Senaté's attitude in the past and said, "You laugh at everything, but what you don't see is that you're the ones being laughed at."

During the discussion which preceded a roll call vote on the resolution, Student Body President Sam Panayotovitch told the senators he expected them to vote, not because of their party affiliation, but the way their constituents wanted them to vote.

At the time of the roll call tally some half dozen senators voted against passage of the resolution. Then, seeing the majority supported the measure, changed their votes.

Final count on the resolution for unity was unanimous, with one abstention.

Earlier the Senaté heard a substitution proposed by Miss Suzanne Faulkner, West Side non-dorm senator, which opposed a Student Senaté sponsored mock election on the grounds that the American political system was a "mockery."

Courtinier agreed in principle with the substitute bill but told the senate it was passage of such bills last year which caused the senate to be ineffective.

Miss Faulkner made a motion to suspend rules for the purpose of extending debate, a motion which was defeated by the senate.

Final vote on the substituted bill was 19-3 against passage. The senate then passed the original bill, which appropriated $100 for the mock election to be held during Homecoming.

In other action, the senate approved a resolution that would investigate the possibility of fraternity and sorority expansion. The Student Senaté Housing Committee was instructed to survey administration heads and make recommendation on the resolution on or before Nov. 6.

Two appointments were also passed. Jerry Finney was approved as administrative assistant to Panayotovitch and Spencer Reese was chosen as Election Commissioner.

New Annex for Morris Library to triple facilities by year 1990

By Cindy Slade

"A university library should have the capacity to seat 25 per cent of the student body," says Professor Ferris Randall, director of Morris Library. Randall said a proposed Annex to Morris Library will provide the needed space.

Expected enrollment at the SIU Carbondale campus by 1990 is 22,800 undergraduate students, 6,905 master candidates and 1,150 doctor candidates, for a total of almost 31,000 students. This is an increase of 10,000.

The Annex should seat 7,000 students. The present facilities seat 3,000. The Annex should provide space for two million more volumes in 1990.

Randall said the architect's plans show two floors below ground and three floors above the ground for the annex. "In order to get the space we need, we may end up with a skyscraper of 23 stories," Randall said. The architect is making sketches of a high rise.

The planners would like to have Morris Library and the Annex touch and be joined on the second and third floors. "This way we can have one big extension of the humanities libraries," Randall said.

The Annex will feature a special part of the library set aside for freshman and sophomore undergraduate students. Multiple copies of books will fit the needs of these students. Randall said that freshmen and sophomores seem to get along better with a smaller library.

The Annex will provide more carrels for master candidates and doctor candidates.

City has dog-leash ordinance but no one will enforce it

By Sheldon Helfgot

Salukis beware! Saluki dogs that is.

After a long, heated debate, Carbondale now has a dog-leash ordinance.

But whether it is really going to make any difference is still in question. The problem lies in the fact that there is still no apparent way that enforcement is going to take place because neither Carbondale nor the University has a dog catcher.

"It's now a problem for Carbondale," according to James Taylor, caretaker of the Jackson County Humane shelter. "We will no longer be responsible for the dog situation in the city, the city will have to pick up the dogs, fill out the papers on the stray dogs, and then bring them out to our shelter where ownership will try to be established."

The ordinance outlines steps that an owner of a dog must obey in order to retain ownership of the dog, such as licensing, tagging, vaccinating, and something new, the leashing of all dogs. The law states that "no owner or keeper of any dog shall permit such dog to run at large."

For many years the only law was based on an Illinois statute "authorizing counties to regulate and prohibit the running at large of dogs and authorize imposition of fine or penalties."

This law was seldom enforced anywhere in Jackson County. The SIU Security Police and the Carbondale Police Department were operating on a "complaint basis" only—picking up stray dogs only if someone telephoned in a complaint.

And today, even with this new law, the situation appears to be much the same, according to Albert Suguitan, communications officer for the Carbondale Police Department.

"We still operate on this complaint basis," he said. "The only difference now is that if a police officer sees a pack of dogs he has the choice of impounding them if he wants to," said Suguitan.

SIU researcher discounts need for worry about American youth

If the kids in Carbondale are a representative example, we can all quit worrying about the youth of America going to pot.

A health education researcher has carefully measured the attitudes of Carbondale teenagers toward marijuana smoking and he found them to be distinctly opposed to it.

Al Vincent, an instructor in health education at SIU, decided to develop an attitude determination scale for the pot smoking issue as a topic for his Ph.D. dissertation.

Much of the 136-page study describes the scientific structure of his survey, but the message that comes through quite clearly is that the 8th, 10th and 12th graders he questioned take a dim view of the "weed."

The test consisted of four parts. The first was a series of statements titled "How I Feel About Smoking Marijuana," including 20 items. They ranged from "smoking marijuana is a requirement for successful living" down to "smoking marijuana shows an utter lack of self respect."

The other three parts were what Vincent called "behavioral situations." He presented made-up case histories of marijuana smokers which the students had to respond to on the same 20-point "how I feel" list of statements.

Of the different age and sex groups, the 10th grade boys reacted more favorably toward marijuana smoking than any others, but they still put it down. Vincent won't hazard any guesses about this somewhat surprising twist (high school senior boys and eight grade girls were the most forcefully opposed to pot), but most parents who have suffered through sophomore trauma might have some ideas. As a whole, girls were significantly more negative than boys.

Vincent questioned 625 Carbondale High and Lincoln Junior High students and then pulled 50 completed questionnaires from each grade group to run the survey. He says there is nothing in existing literature pertaining to school-age attitudes about marijuana smoking, nor have there been any previous studies attempting to explore standards or attitudes "which may be the more powerful determinants of drug-using behavior."

Grad student to present seminar

David L. Mattis, graduate student in microbiology, will speak at a graduate seminar at 10 a.m. today in Room G-16 of the Life Science building.

His topic will be the "Partial Resolution of the Coupling Factors Responsible for Rutamycin-Sensitivity of Adenosine Triphosphatase in Submitochondrial Particles."

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Sidney N. Starr

Here's an interesting football question for you . . . Why is it that no football team in the nation can wear helmets or jerseys that are tan in color? . . . Do you have any idea? . . . The rules of football say that no team can wear helmets or jerseys that resemble the color of the ball . . . It is felt that it might be confusing to the opposing team and the spectators.

How much does a football weigh? . . . The official rules say a ball must weigh not less than 14 ounces and not more than 15 ounces.

Ever wonder why the famous Alabama coach Bear Bryant is called "Bear"? . . . Bryant, whose real name is Paul, earned his nickname when he was a teenager in Fordyce, Ark. . . . One night, Paul and a few friends were walking by a local theatre where a prize was being given to anyone who would wrestle a live bear . . . Bryant, after some urging from his friends, accepted the challenge . . . He wrestled the bear that night many long years ago and the nickname has stuck to him ever since.

I bet you didn't know that college graduates have a longer life expectancy — lower death rate and are living five years longer on the average than non-college men. The lower death rate of college men makes possible broader benefits and greater cash values in College Life policies. This certainly makes good sense, doesn't it?

Hunting falls off; registration clue?

Ed Nichols, public use specialist of the Crab Orchard Game Preserve, reported the hunter turn out during dove season this year dropped off considerably — apparently because of Illinois' new gun registration law.

"It is hard to say at this time, but from conversations I've had with other wildlife officials in the area," Nichols said, "the general opinion is that hunter turn-out this year will definitely be affected by the new legislation."

Nichols said that although it is not illegal to hunt with an unregistered weapon, it is illegal to possess and buy ammunition for it.

The new law requires that individuals register as gun users, and not necessarily as gun owners. However, a gun is supposed to be registered when it is purchased and there is to be a three-day waiting period before the buyer gets possession.

Hunting regulations and requirements for Illinois can be obtained at most sporting goods stores and at Nichols' office. They are set forth in a booklet called "Illinois 1968, Hunting and Trapping Regulations."

Nichols said Crab Orchard Game Preserve has its own set of regulations which should be checked before anyone attempts to hunt on the preserve.

Football 'screamer' dance set tonight in Center ballrooms

Modern dancing has taken many forms, from the sock hop to the psychedelic light show, and to this collection the SIU Activities Council has added a new one... the "football screamer."

The dance which will be held from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Friday in the ballroom of the University Center, will feature "The Rain."

The purpose of the dance is to increase student football spirit, Jack Griggs, chairman of the campus social committee, said.

With greater student backing, the team would play better as demonstrated during last year's Homecoming game, he added.

To help carry out this purpose, the cheerleaders will be giving cheers throughout the dance and Coach Dick Towers will introduce the football players, Griggs said.

The Marching Salukis will also make their debut and 10 tickets to Saturday's football game with Lamar Tech will be given away, he added.

GOP candidates to appear at rally

Richard B. Ogilvie, Republican candidate for governor, will address a dance-rally at the Moo & Cackle parking lot tonight. The program will start at 7 p.m. with the Ashes of Dawn providing the music.

Val Oshel, GOP candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives from the 21st District, also will speak at the rally. Gale Williams, state representative from Murphysboro, will introduce Ogilvie.

... is the way girls will look this fall—hopelessly endearing in dresses with covered-up necklines and billowing sleeves. Deliriously feminine in rushes of ruffles and floods of lace. Dreamily enchanting in smocked velvets and embroidered braid trims. Try it—you'll feel you were always... incurably romantic!

Which team can avoid turning the pigskin over to the

New Twins manager to be named today

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP)—The Minnesota Twins will name a manager Friday for the 1969 baseball season, and all indications point to Billy Martin filling Calvin Griffith's prescription for a winning field general.

Griffith, president of the Twins, says he will announce at a noon (EDT) news conference a successor to Cal 30—a day after the Twins finished the American League season in seventh place.

Martin was in the Twin Cities Thursday, and he said he had no intention of leaving town Friday. He confirmed he knew about the news conference.

Griffith said he fired Ermer because he lacked a firm control over the club. Griffith has refused to discuss his decision about a new manager until the news conference.

But Griffith has said, "Martin was kind of tough as a coach. He didn't put up with any foolishness. I think he would be firm."

Martin, a former Twins coach, spent most of the 1968 season managing the Twin's minor league team at Denver in the Pacific Coast League.

Martin, 40, starred at second base with the New York Yankees during their heyday in the 1950s opposing squad? The answer to this vital question will probably determine the outcome of the SIU-Lamar Tech game Saturday in McAndrew Stadium.

Both the Salukis and the Cardinals have had sputtering offenses which frequently coughed up the ball to the opposition.

Southern has fumbled the ball away six times, three in each game, and Lamar Tech has had it jarred loose nine times in three games.

Interceptions have also hurt both offensive units, as the Salukis have had seven passes picked off, and the Cardinals have had nine passes stolen.

SIU has gained only 261 yards rushing, but Lamar Tech has yielded 895 yards against the rush. However, the Cardinals have gained 436 yards on the ground.

The leading rusher and pass receiver for Southern is half-back John Quillen. He has carried for 147 yards, a 2.9 average per carry, and has made five receptions for 71 yards.

Fullback Robert Fontno is the Cardinal's leading ground gainer with 120 yards for a 2.5 average.

Southern's air attack has been able to muster only 191 yards, while the Redbird's passing has fared a little better with 306 yards.

Jim McKay has been doing most of the throwing for the Salukis, but has been able to complete only 12 tosses out of 35 attempts.

Lamar Tech has been alternating Bobby McDowell and Jim Jackson at quarterback. McDowell has completed 14 of 36 passes, and Jackson has hit 17 of 30. Their favorite target has been split end Ronnie Gebauter, who has hauled in 10 passes for 115 yards.

After the Cardinal's 16-14 loss to New Mexico State last week, Coach Vernon Glass said, "It was definitely our best effort of the season. We could have won the game, but didn't make the big plays.

Our defense had another great night and the offense looked better, although they still have a long way to go."

The Salukis hope that Lamar Tech won't be able to make the big plays Saturday.

Lolich wins dramatic victory

 ord with seven, tried for No. 8. He leaned toward second and took off when Lolich threw to the first baseman Cash. Cash then quickly relayed the ball to shortstop Mickey Stanley who put the tag on Brock.

After Julian Javier lined out, Curt Flood beat out a single to deep short. But Flood, too, was caught leaning the wrong way by the left-handed Lolich and was picked off first.

The heart seemed to go out of the Cards with failures on the bases. They had men on base in the seventh and eighth but couldn't break through until Shannon hit his homer with two gone in the bottom of the ninth.

Pinson to Cards?

The St. Louis Cardinals are understood to have arranged to trade first baseman Bob Toland and relief pitcher Wayne Granger to Cincinnati for outfielder Vada Pinson, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported today.

The newspaper also said

It was a dramatic victory for Lolich, the 28-year-old left who likes to ride his fire engine red motor bike to the ball park at home.

It understood catcher John Edwards was traded to Houston for pitcher Dave Giusti and reserve catcher Dave Adlesh.

The Toland and Granger for Pinson trade reportedly resulted from the retirement of outfielder Roger Maris.

Tigers smash Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Mickey Lolich, working with only two day's rest, beat bullet Bob Gibson in a seventh-game World Series duel Thursday 4-1 and the aroused Detroit Tigers completed a smashing come-back by dethroning the St. Louis Cardinals.

Only three previous teams had rallied to win after losing three games—the 1903 Boston Red Sox, 1925 Pittsburgh Pirates and the 1958 New York Yankees. When the Red Sox did it the Series was best-of-nine.

Gibson, setting a Series strike-out record with 35 in three games, and Lolich matched scoreless innings until the Tigers broke through suddenly with two out in the seventh.

Norm Cash singled to right field, the second hit of Gibson. Then Willie Horton drove a single to left between short and third.

Jim Northrup, whose grand slam homer capped the big 10-run inning Wednesday, lofted a long fly to deep center. Curt Flood first started in on the ball, slipped as he tried to change direction and the ball sailed over his head for a triple, scoring both Cash and Horton.

Bill Freehan followed with a double to left, a fly ball that Lou Brock barely touched in a desperate try, and Northrup scored with the third run.

The Tigers added an extra run in the ninth on singles by Horton, Northrup and Don Wert. Dick Tracewski, running for Horton, scored the run.

Lolich, winner of the second and fifth games, had a shutout with two out in the ninth, nobody on base and two strikes on Mike Shannon. However, Shannon lifted a fly ball over the left field wall for a run that only delayed the Tigers' riotous celebration.

When Tim McCarver fouled out to catcher Freehan to end the game, the Tiger bench charged onto the field and there was a wild scene between home plate and first base as they took turns beating one another on the back. It was just 23 years ago to the day that the Tigers had won their last World Series, beating the Chicago Cubs in the seventh game Oct. 10, 1945, behind Hal Newhouser. They had not been in a Series since that date so the end of the long drought meant something extra to Manager Mayo Smith and his boys.

The crowd of 54,692 that watched the game in bright, sunny weather at Busch Stadium sensed that this was not their day when a Card threat was halted in the sixth inning. Gibson was rolling along strong with a one-hitter at the time.

Lou Brock opened the Cardinal sixth with a single, tying the all-time Series record of 13 hits set by the Yanks' Bobby Richardson in 1964. Brock, who already had tied his own stolen base rec-
