Hoye may be involved in convention center again

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

Although the Carbondale City Council voted to authorize the city staff to end the city's commitment with Stan Hoye, the convention center project is not dead and Hoye could once again be a part of it, said Don Monty, community development director.

He said Wednesday if Hoye proposed a plan that does not ask the city for a full guarantee of the project, the city would consider reinstating Hoye as developer. Monty said if the plan was presented and accepted by Oct. 25, the city would probably renew the memo of intent for the city to issue tax-exempt industrial bonds to Hoye for the project.

The council also voted Monday not to guarantee the entire $14 million project as well as discontinue a guarantee on $4.5 million in bonds for Hoye.

Monty said the city could not financially handle a full guarantee. The annual debt payments for the proposed center are estimated at about $1.3 million. He said if the city were forced to pay even part of the yearly debt, the property tax increase would be substantial, since the city collects only about $1 million a year in property taxes.

On Monday, City Manager Bill Dixon also did not rule out the possibility of bringing back Hoye after a settlement of past commitments is reached.

The council stated a desire to continue the project and continue to buy land for it.

Hoye said Wednesday since he is no longer the developer of the project the city probably cannot receive money from an Urban Development Action Grant to purchase land. He said the grant would not have been possible had not he and other people put up an equity of some $2 million dollars.

Monty said the developer could be changed as long as a new developer presents enough equity to satisfy the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

He said the UDAG has been frozen by HUD until a developer is clearly identified. The city has continued to acquire land with city money. Monty said seven parcels of land were purchased in the last year with the understanding that HUD

Mondale's wife stresses acid rain, education

By Jay Schmitz
Staff Writer

Better funding for education and immediate action on the acid rain problem are two things that would result from electing her husband president, said Joan Mondale as she capped a quick campaign visit to Carbondale with an appearance at the Student Center.

About 300 people jammed into the Fourth Floor Video Lounge Wednesday to hear the former Second Lady discuss Walter Mondale's programs and pledges.

Mondale attacked Reagan's education policies, asking the audience if it wanted a man in office who "wants to cut education spending by 40 percent, a man who doesn't think schools need libraries?"

Referring to Reagan's proposal to send a teacher on a space shuttle flight, she said, "He proposed sending a teacher up into space, but what is he doing to help teachers on earth?"

Mondale praised her husband's record of backing education, saying that her husband would strive to "bolster our schools, unleash our talents and support our scientists."

Speaking to the media after her address, Mondale said her husband was in favor of immediate action on acid rain. She said that he doesn't believe any more research is needed on the causes of acid rain.

"We have seen and recorded the damage done to trees and our environment," she said.

Mondale said stricter controls on coal usage would not necessarily mean that coal miners would be forced out of jobs. "There are solutions that would not put anyone out of work," she said.

She cited legislation signed by Jimmy Carter, but not acted on by the Reagan Administration, which she said would have implemented a synthetic fuel program using coal. This

Visitors spent $10 million in city last year

By Karen Wiltberger
Staff Writer

Visitors attracted to SIU-C events last year spent more than $10 million in the Carbondale area, according to a report released from the president's office.

Susan Rehwaldt, assistant to the president who prepared the report, said that the estimated revenue spent by SIU-C visitors is a conservative figure, saying it is impossible to include all events, such as Parents Day.

Rehwaldt said the figures were based on information compiled from seven SIU-C offices that routinely schedule events that attract people other than University students and employees.

According to the report, continuing education events brought city businesses an estimated $2.7 million last year from about 7,500 visitors. The Church of Brethren convention in June accounted for $1.7 million of that figure, the report says.

Lowell Hall, director of continuing education, said the department has not planned an event for this year that would attract as many people as the convention in June, which attracted about 4,500 visitors.

An estimated 92,000 visitors that attended intercollegiate athletic events at SIU-C last year spent $2.3 million in the area, and an additional $200,000 was spent by visiting athletes and coaches on food and lodging

Local high schools' curricula to change

By Karen Wiltberger
Staff Writer

Some Southern Illinois high schools may have less qualified teachers and fewer elective and vocational courses next year when they change their curricula to make room for more classes in English, math and science, say officials in the SIU-C College of Education.

Under a resolution passed last week by the Illinois Board of Higher Education, in 1986 high schools have to begin offering enough academic courses to prepare college-bound students for tougher college entry requirements.

The IBHE recommends that Illinois public and private colleges and universities by 1990 require: four years of English; three years of social studies, mathematics and sciences; and two years of foreign language, music or art.

The current subject requirements for a high school diploma are three years of English; two years of social studies and mathematics; one year of science. Other mandatory courses include four years of physical education, a course in drivers education, and a course in consumer education.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said Tuesday that most Southern Illinois high schools have the curriculum to offer upper level academic courses, but don't because students are choosing to take elective and vocational courses that are "less rigid and more applicable."

Beggs, who along with College of Education faculty, is helping local high schools make necessary changes, said teachers qualified to teach academic courses are likely to

Shultz praises Duarte's move to meet with rebel guerrillas

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Calling it a moment of great promise, Secretary of State George P. Shultz met with Jose Napoleon Duarte on Wednesday, four days before the Salvadoran president's first planned meeting with rebel leaders. "President Duarte has offered to meet without preconditions and without arms the guerrillas who have plagued this country," he added. "This is an act of great courage taken in pursuit of peace and national reconciliation. His initiative has our unqualified support."

Jury selection complete in Westmoreland case

NEW YORK (AP) — Jury selection was completed Wednesday in retired Gen. William C. Westmoreland's $120 million libel suit against CBS over the network's broadcast of a documentary about his actions in the Vietnam War. Westmoreland, who commanded American forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968, claims CBS falsely and maliciously defamed him in the documentary. The broadcast depicted him as the head of a 1967 conspiracy to underestimate deliberately enemy troop strength in order to maintain political support for the war.

Debate appearances an issue with candidates

By The Associated Press
President Reagan said Wednesday, "I wasn't tired" during last Sunday's televised campaign debate, adding that Walter F. Mondale looked younger than his years because he wore makeup. Retorted Mondale, "That's the same answer (Richard) Nixon gave" after his 1960 presidential debate. In the meantime, White House aides released 5-month-old medical test results that reported the 73-year-old president a "mentally alert, robust man who appears younger than his stated age."

Percy blasts remark made by Washington in commercial

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — U.S. Sen. Charles Percy on Wednesday criticized Chicago Mayor Harold Washington for a "contemptible" appeal to blacks in a radio commercial for Percy's Democratic challenger, Paul Simon. In the commercial, one of three currently running on Chicago-area radio stations with predominantly black audiences, Washington charges that Percy turned on the black community by supporting President Reagan's economic policies.

Pathologist qualifies as witness in murder trail

ROCKFORD (AP) — A New York City pathologist was qualified as an expert witness for the prosecution Wednesday at the trial of David Hendricks, accused of axing his wife and three children to death. Halloween 'lock-in' hits snags with city

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

A Murphysboro church's attempt to do a good deed for young people by giving them an option to the Halloween festivities being held on the Strip has run into several bad breaks.

The group from the First Baptist Church in Murphysboro is trying to organize a "lock-in" during which liquor would be prohibited, at the Egyptian Sports Center from 10 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 27 until 6 a.m. the following morning.

But before it could hold the lock-in, the group was told by the owner of the sports center, it would have to get the city's permission since the Carbondale liquor code requires all businesses that hold liquor licenses to be closed by 2 a.m.

When the group asked city officials to be exempted from the 2 a.m. cutoff time, Assistant City Attorney Patricia McMeen took up the case. McMeen submitted an ordinance to the city's Liquor Advisory Board that would amend the liquor code to allow non-profit organizations to hold events at liquor establishments after 2 a.m. as long as no liquor would be consumed or sold on the premises.

The amendment was unanimously approved by the Liquor Advisory Board. But when the proposal came before the City Council Oct. 8, McMeen asked that action on it be postponed indefinitely. She said the Egyptian Sports Center was not willing to consent to the conditions of the proposed amendment.

Under the proposal, the sports center would have to close its doors to the public as soon as the lock-in began. McMeen said it was her understanding that the operators of the center wanted to continue with "business as usual" until 2 a.m., which would be against the proposed amendment.

Greg Eversden, the owner of the sports center, said Wednesday that it is out of the question for the city to expect him to close off his business to his regular customers at 10 p.m. "It's kind of inconceivable for the city to expect us to shut down our whole operation," he said, noting that he is donating his facility for the lock-in free of charge.

He said that if the center has to be closed to the public during the entire event it might be possible to delay the lock-in until midnight.

Betty Brock, one of the coordinators of the lock-in, said the group would be willing to change the hours of the event if it had to. "We're open to any kind of suggestion," she said, "as long as they don't cancel it."

She said several members from the group are planning to appeal to the City Council Monday night to keep the lock-in plans alive.

3 bands set to play for Halloween

Three bands have been booked to appear on East Grand Avenue Oct. 27 for Halloween Fair Days, said Robbie Stokes, who is directing the show.

Expose, the Crosstown Rivals and the Hostage Flamings will appear Friday night on stage on East Grand Avenue near the Recreation Center. Expose plays a variety of sounds, Stokes said, including 60s rock, blues, new wave and original compositions.

The Crosstown Rivals play originals and rock, he said, and the Hostage Flamings play new wave and originals.

The bands will play from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m., he said.

City officials hope that the bands on Grand Avenue will draw some of the crowd away from the Halloween party on South Illinois Avenue.

"If we can make it safer on Illinois Avenue, we've achieved our purpose," said James Prowell, Carbondale Chamber of Commerce executive director.

Beer and food booths will also be set up on Grand Avenue. Scott Ratter, assistant city manager, said. Booths will not be allowed on Illinois Avenue.

The deadline for booth applications is 5 p.m. Oct. 12, Ratter said. Only one application has been received so far, he said, but "many applications came in on the last day last year," he said.

Aides say candidates differ on women's issues

By David Liss
Staff Writer

Republican Sen. Charles Percy and Democratic Rep. Paul Simon, the two candidates for U.S. Senate, disagree on a basic approach to economic aid, their representatives said at a women's issues forum Tuesday.

The forum, sponsored by the American Association of University Women, brought together Diana Nelson, director of Women for Percy, and Vickie Otten, Simon's legislative director, to discuss their candidates' stands on women's issues.

Simon believes that "as we begin to equip women with the skills and the long-term training they need to provide for their families, short-term assistance should be provided," said Vickie Otten, Simon's legislative director, in reference to government aid and job programs.

"We believe that it's better to create jobs through the private sector than it is to support a make-work jobs program at the federal level," Nelson said.

"It would be a wonderful day in the United States if the private sector was in a position to provide a job for every individual who wanted and was able to work," Otten said. "I'm not sure it's ever going to happen."

The candidates also disagree on the nuclear weapons freeze proposal, according to their representatives.

Percy feels that a freeze is "not as viable an alternative as getting talks started again with the Russians," Nelson said. She said that a freeze would "freeze armaments at entirely too high levels," and that a weapons build down would be an alternative, according to Percy.

Simon's position "is to support the nuclear freeze and to support an immediate resumption of arms control talks," Otten said.

"Until we freeze, we cannot begin to talk about reduction," she said.

The candidates had fewer disagreements on issues more specific to women, such as the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion.

"We have a number of laws on the books that guarantee women equal access and guarantee that women will not be discriminated against because of sex," Otten said. "From Simon's point of view we need that symbolic inclusion in the Constitution."

On the issue of abortion, "Simon's position is that there is not an appropriate role for the federal government," Otten said. She said that the decision for or against an abortion should be made by the woman and her doctor.

Nelson said Percy also supports that position, and Simon only "came around to it after being convinced that it was a good issue to be on when he wanted to be talking to women's groups."

Duarte's olive brance

EMBATTLED EL SALVADOR may finally get some relief from the civil war that has been raging there for the last five years. The rebels agreed to talk with the government; it may be the break needed to begin solving the conflict.

Two rebel groups, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and the Democratic Revolutionary Front, accepted President Jose Napoleon Duarte's proposed meeting set for Oct. 15. The rebels suggested that Colombian President Belisario Betancur mediate the peace talks.

Colombia is part of the Contadora group — which also consists of Mexico, Venezuela and Panama — that has been working with the United States to get the government of El Salvador and the guerilla groups to the table to talk peace.

There have been false hopes before about ending the war in El Salvador. However, this is the first time the government and the rebels have shown signs of working together, or at least talking instead of fighting. Duarte is showing good faith and sincerity in the talks by suggesting they be held in La Palma, which is in rebel-controlled territory.

The two groups must yet bring conciliatory proposals to the meeting. When the talks begin next week, the world will know who wants an end to the civil war, and who is less committed to peace. If one group asks for too much, the talks will fail.

If these talks show signs of success, it could have a domino effect and lessen tension throughout Central America. However, it is difficult to make conclusions about how far these talks can go.

Renewed friendship

THERE ARE ALSO hopeful signs for peace in the Middle East. Jordan and Egypt have restored diplomatic ties for the first time since 1979. In addition, Israel is talking about withdrawing from Lebanon, and Syria has been unusually subdued in its response to the peace initiative.

King Hussein of Jordan greeted President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt Tuesday in Jordan with a warm reception. This is the first time an Egyptian president has entered Jordan since Anwar Sadat signed a peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

While it is heartening for Jordan and Egypt to have diplomatic ties again, the news should not be cause for too much optimism. Jordan is the most moderate of the Arab countries and is a close ally of the United States. Hussein has long hinted at participating in the peace process between Israel and Egypt. When Jordan renewed ties with Egypt, it received threats from Libya and Syria.

ISRAEL'S PROPOSAL to withdraw troops from Lebanon is another step toward attaining peace in the troubled region. Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres has proposed that a United Nations peacekeeping force patrol southern Lebanon following Israeli withdrawal. Syria, naturally, supports the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Syria has indicated that it would endorse a U.S. mediation effort to remove Israeli forces from Lebanon and Peres has been receptive to Syria's response.

The situation in the Middle East, however, is still volatile and the presence of Syrian troops further complicates the situation.

The news is brighter than it has been for quite some time. Slow and careful steps are required if the peace process is to have any lasting effect in the Middle East.

T-shirt plea is not an imposition

I would like to direct this letter to Peyton Blewett, whose response to Carol Foss' plea for a non-violent Halloween T-shirt design I found most disturbing. Mr. Blewett feels activists like Nikki Craft are an imposition to his and society's freedom of free expression. To this I reiterate: Is not the depiction of men doing violence to the female body a breach of personal freedom? Free speech is wonderful, but when it causes negation to another human being it is no longer "free" and therefore wrong. Perhaps, if Blewett had to live with the restrictions placed on women by present day society his view would be somewhat different. It is a fact that every woman traveling alone after dark is a possible rape victim. This is not fun and is more than an "imposition." Women have been dehumanized by the media for so long that, obviously, Mr. Blewett feels a little more violence toward the female image is okay. As for the matter being taken too seriously, I think Blewett's letter is an indication that this issue isn't taken seriously enough.

Incidentally, for Mr. Blewett's information, Halloween began as a religious holiday celebrated by gnostic cults to ensure a plentiful harvest and a secure year ahead for their tribe. The present day theme of blood and horror is a convention of modern man. — Francine Farina, Graduate student, Speech Communications.

IBHE setting 'appropriate qualifications'

Some colleagues think the dialogue on college qualifications should be pursued. So, I'll address trivia, then what I see as the guts of the issue.

I don't share Rep. Crane's sexual history nor his political views, and know little else about him. Mr. DeFosse knows less about me, so I see the comparison as ad hominem argument and opprobrious. Second, the sentence so ex-coriated is both grammatically correct and fairly facile, some well-published authors tell me.

Third, my one-year tuition grant for superior demonstration of intellectual and technical skills in 4-H Club forestry work is not logically inconsistent with the assertion that I earned my way. Tens of thousands of us did about the same, sans BEOG, Pell Grants, government loans, etc. It was the old-fashioned way.

Dictionaries are imperfect histories and best understood that way. Since mine sets "training" in the context of getting animals to do tricks, and we're not referring to that, let me explain my view. The U.S. Air Force spent millions of dollars on my training as a pilot, and did a great job; I think they got their money's worth. But it was not training and we all knew it.

Training, in my and many others' views, refers to facility with specific skills and choosing from a known range of alternatives when faced with a problem. Education goes far beyond that to encompass critical evaluative abilities, knowledge of a culture, history and so on, to include accurate and graceful use of one's own language. The young women in Wham who told me one day that they were carving pumpkins as part of a course were not being educated, but trained. That's what makes the sentences chiseled above the Morris statue in our library so poignant.

The IBHE has decided that colleges should not be in the remediation business with regard to things high schools and junior colleges can and should do. We are by definition elitist, assigned to help the intellectually qualified grow.

Solutions? If an older person doesn't "fit" in ordinary high school classes, he or she can enroll in adult education classes as hundreds of thousands of Americans have done to qualify for college entrance. Or he or she can enroll in one of the scores of junior college programs established for just that purpose in Illinois and other states. People have the "right" to college entrance who meet appropriate qualifications. And "appropriate" is what the IBHE is trying to define but some people disagree with.

Darrell Royal didn't shirk the coach's job. He failed, rather, against the lack of mental and physical discipline he found in some players. The IBHE recommendations are trying to force part of that issue, I believe rightly.

There! No personal attacks. Selah. — Donald McDonald, Associate Professor, Speech Communications.

Math profs have ample English skills

Of 54 people on the 1984-85 Mathematics Department faculty list, some of whom are on leave and others part-time, nine came to the United States in 1977 or later for the first time to study or to teach. One of these nine is from England and Canada.

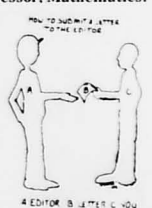

Of the other 45, each (1) was born in the United States, (2) came to the United States at a young age, (3) was educated in the United States, (4) has been a citizen for many years, or (5) is now a U.S. citizen or permanent resident.

I can name at least two professors born in India who use

English more correctly, speak English more clearly, and understand more "plays on words" than most people born in the United States.

In the many years I've been in this department, I've heard students call their teachers foreign because of a foreign name or because of a strange accent. Almost all of us have ancestors born outside the United States, so our names are "foreign." I, for one, have enjoyed hearing the "strange" accents of Boston, New England, the South, New York City, southern Clinton County, Illinois,...

With the wide use of television today, we may lose some of the delightful sounds of our past — regional accents. — Imogene Beckemeyer, Assistant Professor, Mathematics.

CENTER: Hoye might be back will reimburse the city with the UDAG.

Hoye is less optimistic about coming back into the project after a settlement is reached, because he said the "city has closed all the doors."

Hoye said that a full guarantee would not have been necessary had the city acquired the land for the project. He said the convention center was supposed to be a "civic enterprise" which involved the city government as well as Carbondale residents.

"In the pursuit of a goal we sometimes get so busy in the pursuit that we forget the goal," he said.

Although he said he is "bitterly disappointed" with the council's decision, he said he is still committed to downtown redevelopment.

"I still believe we need to clean up downtown," Hoye said.

He declined to comment on what type of settlement he will request from the city. He said, however, neither he nor the city stands to win in the settlement since some of the money spent can never be recouped. In the past Hoye has said that he might sue the city for about $1 million.

program would have "employed coal miners for the rest of their lives," she said.

Echoing her husband's campaign rhetoric, Mondale also attacked Reagan's record on Social Security, the trade deficit, foreign policy, and environmental issues.

She said that "the stakes couldn't be higher" in this election. She said the election was a choice "between justice for all and advantages for some, between arms control and an arms race, between leadership and salesmanship."

She said that she and her husband were pleased with the results of the debate between the two candidates in Louisville, Ky. last Sunday. "Now the American people have seen Fritz Mondale for what he is," she said.

She said that the debate demonstrated to the country that Walter Mondale has leadership qualities, and was capable of handling the presidency.

Southern Illinois Democrats on hand to greet Mondale at the Student Center were U.S. Representative candidate Ken Gray; State Senate candidate Gary McClure; State Representative candidate David Phelps; Jeanne and Sheila Simon, wife and daughter of U.S. Senate candidate Paul Simon; and Jackson County Democratic Committee Chairman C. Ray Chancey.

VISITORS: $10 million spent

alone, according to the report. Student Center events, including short meetings and multi-day seminars, brought Carbondale about $1.9 million, assuming that half the estimated 49,200 visitors commuted to the events and half stayed overnight, the report says.

Visitors spent about $1.7 million on arena events last year, the report said, assuming that 18,000 visitors attended arena concerts and 9,000 visitors attended the 3-day holiday High School Basketball Tournament.

Arena Director Gary Drake said Carbondale probably benefited the most from the Kenny Rogers concert last year, which he estimated 85 to 90 percent of the audience was visitors. Drake said the Police concert attracted fewest visitors out of the three major concerts last year, saying that at least half the audience were students.

Graduation ceremonies in May and August brought about 15,100 people to Carbondale, who spent $975,000, the report says. The figure is assuming that three-fourths of the guests stayed overnight and a quarter ate in the area.

SCHOOLS: Curricula to change

be pulled from elective and vocational courses, leaving fewer classes for students who don't plan to attend college.

Nancy Quisenberry, an associate dean in the College of Education, said that the move would result in less qualified teachers because they wouldn't be as highly qualified as teachers specializing in that subject. She said because local high schools can't afford to hire more faculty, high schools will use less qualified teachers, or not fill the positions at all.

Beggs said that more local teachers are becoming certified in English, math and science, courses emphasized by the IBHE. He said that more than 200 area teachers returned to SIU-C on grants last year to pick up additional courses to become certified in other subjects.

He said that state organizations have offered more grants since the IBHE proposed the resolution one year ago.

Beggs said the University is also helping teachers by increasing the number of workshops available to teachers. He said many workshops emphasize teaching methods and ways to make a curriculum.

Heavy synthesizer influence marks latest Jethro Tull effort

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

Jethro Tull, or rather Tull leader Ian Anderson, has charted a most curious evolution in musical direction over the last 16 years, if the band's latest effort, "Under Wraps," is any indication.

During the Isle of Wight days in the late '60s, Tull was strictly a basement blues band. When Anderson, after a brief power struggle with then guitarist Mick Abrahams, assumed control of the band, Tull changed from the electric blues scene to the electric folk scene. In the process, Martin Barre became the lead guitarist.

ABOUT 1980 a strange thing began to happen. With the release of "A" and then "Broadsword and the Beast," Tull made it quite clear that acoustic was out and synthesizer was in. What little acoustic influence remained, including Anderson's flute, became insignificant.

Since "Broadsword," Anderson has collaborated increasingly with sweeping synthesizer "wizard" Peter-John Vettese. Through one Anderson solo album and now two Tull releases, Vettese has gained increasing prominence with the group. In short, his keyboard work is all over "Under Wraps."

Why Anderson's radical change in emphasis? Perhaps he is merely experimenting with the virtuosity of electronic sound. It's doubtful that Anderson would make this sort of move for purely monetary reasons. He describes top 20 music as proof of a performer's death musically.

IF ANDERSON is playing less, he is most certainly concentrating more on singing.

Maybe he shouldn't. Strangely enough, Anderson's voice is more often than not the culprit when a fault appears on "Under Wraps."

Anderson seems no longer able to sing in the soft, aesthetically pleasing way he did on "Too Old to Rock'n'Roll." His normal singing voice appears to have gone a bit flat. On the other hand, the Anderson of today can still grunt and gutturalize like the Anderson of old. On "Under Wraps" it usually works.

The lyrics, as always, were composed by Anderson. In keeping with the modern nature of the band's newfound direction, Anderson wrote mostly about relevant social issues of Kipling's "Just So Stories" to be played Rudyard Kipling's "Just So Stories" will be presented at 8 p.m. Oct. 11-13 on the Calipre Stage on the second floor of the Communications Building.

The play is being directed by James Van Oosting, associate professor in speech communication, who adapted Kipling's stories for the stage.

Tickets are $2.50 each for adults and $1.50 for children the day.

"RADIO FREE Moscow," "Apogee," and "Nobody's Car," all on "Under Wraps," reflect Anderson's growing tendency to comment on topical matters. Gone are the days when Anderson would attack organized religion or hypocrisy. Now the targets are society-induced paranoia, materialism and the present Cold War between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The title cut is the only "timeless" song on the album, and once again Anderson shows his warmer, more romantic side. Two versions of the title cut are given. "Under Wraps One" is synthesized and the second is acoustic. The acoustic version is by far the better of the two.

ANDERSON IS so talented when it comes to acoustically oriented music that one wonders what would have possibly persuaded him to ever abandon it. Tull's instrumentation has always been of high quality, and this album is no exception.

Whether "Under Wraps" is a good buy is a good question. If one is inclined toward a more synthesized sound, then this might be the answer. If one is from the old school of Tull, "Under Wraps" might be a little difficult to handle.

under 12. The play is not considered suitable for children under 8.

Tickets may be purchased from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Calipre box office, located in the Department of Speech Communication.

Tickets may also be ordered by phoning 453-2291, or they may be purchased at the door.

University Police investigate report of vandalized cars

University Police are investigating the vandalizing of 14 vehicles parked at a lot on the SIUC campus Sunday night, a University Police spokesman said.

One-man show set for Grant exhibit

An exhibit titled "Ulysses S. Grant: Man of War, Man of Peace" is on display in the University Museum in Faner Hall. The exhibit, which will remain on display through November, can be viewed from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on weekdays and from 1:30-4:30 p.m. on Sundays.

Highlighting its stay here at SIU-C will be a performance by actor Dan Haughey as U.S. Grant in a one-man show at 2:30 p.m. Oct. 14.

Haughey, whose acting experiences include work in dinner theaters throughout the Southeast, television commercials and educational films, performed at the 1984 SIU Summer Playwrights' Workshop.

Over the past four years, Haughey has expanded his career to include teaching, both at the high school and university levels. He has also worked as a director, and he continues to study playwriting here at SIU-C.

Haughey's performance will be funded by the Museum and Art Galleries Association and will be followed by a public reception to celebrate Arts Week at the University Museum.

The exhibit was funded in part by the Illinois Humanities Council and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

After its stay here at SIU-C, it will travel during 1985 to the Chicago Public Library, the U.S. Grant Home in Galena, Illinois and the Ohio Historical Society in Columbus, Ohio. The exhibit was assembled in commemoration of the centennial of Grant's death in 1885.

Caterpillar cutbacks, losses seen

PEORIA (AP) — Caterpillar Tractor Co., trying to regain the profits eluding it since 1981, Wednesday slashed quarterly dividends to stockholders and hinted at more layoffs, plant closings and another rough year ahead.

Besides reducing dividends by two-thirds, the company said it plans to freeze hiring, reduce production, speed up already-announced plant closings, further shrink factory space and cut inventories.

The dividend action is the first such cut since 1982 and only the second time Caterpillar has cut dividends in more than 30 years.

The company said from its Peoria headquarters, where directors met Wednesday, that reducing dividends — a move Wall Street analysts estimated could save Caterpillar about $95 million a year — is "an integral part of a comprehensive program" to cut costs and conserve cash.

After two years of losses totaling $525 million, Caterpillar had expected a profit this year.

But on Sept. 13, the company revised its hopes and said 1984 would mark the third consecutive year of red ink.

Caterpillar, beset by a 204-day United Auto Workers strike in 1982-83 and by the recession has been battling stiff worldwide competition from Komatsu Ltd. and other Japanese manufacturers.

The world's leading earth-moving-equipment maker's common stock fell to a 10-year low Tuesday.

Suspect charged with auto burglary

Carbondale police arrested a man Tuesday on a charge of burglary to auto stemming from a theft earlier that same day, a Carbondale Police Department spokesman said.

Police arrested Sean Garrison, 18, Carbondale, late Tuesday evening for the alleged theft of $150 worth of stereo equipment from a car parked at the 400 block of West Oak Street. The theft had been reported at 7:58 p.m. by the owner of the car, Roger Burgess, who had observed a man shutting a door of his car, the spokesman said.

The stereo equipment was recovered, the spokesman said.

Computer service set to begin

A new electronic bulletin board service for area microcomputer enthusiasts goes on line Oct. 15.

The Southern Illinois Bulletin Board System will be available to leave notes to other computer users, advertise to sell products and download programs that users might need, says Greg Guthman, a junior in engineering technology and organizer of the system.

The system, similar to the "Cellar" system now in use in Carbondale, will be compatible with all types of computers, as long as they have a modem and a terminal to get on line with the mainframe.

The phone number to get on line is 457-2096. The system will operate continuously, except for one or two hours a day for routine maintenance.

The service will be free, except for a charge to cover the cost of phone line use for higher access requests to download programs, Guthman said.

Poem found on Morris shelves believed original Shakespeare

By Cathy Brown
Staff Writer

'Crowns have their compass
Length of days their date.'
Triumphs their tombs
Felicity her fate
Of more than earth can earth
Make none partaker
But knowledge makes the king
Most like his maker.

These lines written in a Morris Library volume could be a never-before-published poem by Shakespeare — a poem that may have been among the last he wrote.

That's the theory of W. Nicholas Knight, a visiting professor in the SIU-C English Department.

Knight said he accidentally found the lines in Morris Library more than a year ago when he was looking through a standard Shakespeare bibliography.

On the flyleaf of William Jaggard's "Shakespeare Bibliography," published in 1911, was a handwritten message by Jaggard containing a poem, supposedly written by Shakespeare that is not found in any collections of his works.

ACCORDING TO the message by Jaggard and his entry in the book, the lines were never published; the only place they ever appeared were under a 17th century print of King James I, where they were attributed to Shakespeare.

Jaggard had access to that print and transcribed them in his bibliography note.

The message on the flyleaf was from Jaggard to a man in Evanston, to whom he was sending the book. Knight explains that Jaggard was a scholar of Shakespeare and a respected dealer in Shakespeare works. The note tells the Evanston man that Jaggard had a copy of a collation of prints that he may be interested in buying.

Jaggard probably wrote the note from the only existing copy of the collation. "Unfortunately, he didn't tell us where it went."

THE BOOK was purchased by SIU-C in 1953, but no one noticed the note or realized its significance until Knight saw it in summer 1983.

Knight said he probably stumbled on these lines because "I like to look at original documents, marginalia, signatures and handwriting." After Knight realized that he may have stumbled on lost lines of Shakespeare, he launched some detective work to discover if the lines were genuine.

Jaggard was a respected authority who sold genuine Shakespeare articles to noted libraries and collectors, Knight said, and it was safe to assume he was not trying to pull off a fake.

"He was not going to put his reputation on the line," said Knight.

NOR WAS IT likely that the lines were a forgery made in the 1600s, Knight said. Shakespeare was alive at that time and a forgery would be difficult to pass off and not very profitable.

Knight said he still wondered about the authenticity, however, because the note was not in either of Shakespeare's usual forms — a play or sonnet. With further reading, however, Knight discovered that Shakespeare had written four other poems in a similar style that were also unpublished.

Although none of those are great poetry, the one he discovered does appear to be genuine, Knight said.

IT SEEMS that in these poems Shakespeare was playing a game with friends, he said. The poems were generally "extempore vignettes in which the friend would write two lines about himself, and Shakespeare would complete the poem."

Since Shakespeare was one of only five of the King's players and since James I was interested in learning and literary matters, Knight said he believes it is possible that the king himself may have composed the first two lines of the poem and Shakespeare completed it.

If not, Shakespeare must have taken the first two lines from some other source since he puts the first two lines in quotations, he said.

ANOTHER FACT pointing to the genuineness is that there are references in reliable sources to an "amicable" letter to Shakespeare from the king. The letter has been lost, and it is not clear what it was in reference to, but Knight believes the date of letter — also 1616 — and the fact that the poem was complimentary could mean that the letter was thanking Shakespeare for the poem.

The date of the collation, 1616, also makes Knight believe that these may be the last surviving poetic lines that Shakespeare wrote, since Shakespeare died in April of 1616, and probably completed his last play in 1613.

"I firmly believe that these are the last line that Shakespeare ever wrote," said Knight.

KNIGHT IS on sabbatical from the University of Missouri at Rolla where he teaches Shakespeare and is chairman of Humanities.

Knight said when he decided on coming to Carbondale for sabbatical, his colleagues said "What's original by Shakespeare in Carbondale?" When he found these lines, he said, "I had to laugh."

Knight has written books and articles on Shakespeare and has found some original Shakespeare signatures. He has a bachelor's degree from Amherst College in Massachusetts, a master's from the University of California at Berkeley and a doctorate from Indiana University in Bloomington.

Although none of the Shakespeare experts in the English department here had thoroughly researched Knight's work on these lines, William Brown, a teacher of Shakespeare in the English department, said his work should be taken "seriously."

Earthquake emergency teams planned for Southern Illinois

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

The chance that a disastrous earthquake will occur in this area is about one in a hundred, but the SIU School of Medicine isn't betting on the odds.

A plan is being formulated to provide rapid-deployment emergency teams that can, on short notice, fly to the scene of an earthquake and give medical attention, said Richard Moy, dean of the SIU School of Medicine.

"The whole thing is based on something that might not happen in our lifetime. That takes the edge off of it," he said. "But, there's enough energy in the New Madrid fault to produce a Richter 7 earthquake. Springfield might be the closest major medical center still intact and able to reach out to the people of Southern Illinois."

IMMEDIATE HELP would come from doctors, nurses and hospitals in the area. The medical teams flown in would identify people with minimum wounds, those who need help right away and those who are beyond help.

"Between the second and third categories we will have a lot of people with serious fractures, burns and head injuries that, without adequate backup, might fall into the third category. We will transport them out within hours to academic medical centers where they will receive adequate care," Moy said.

The teams will set up earthquake proof facilities at airports. They will collect those with serious injuries, stabilize them and get them out of the damaged area to medical centers where they will have the maximum chance for survival.

AS MANY AS 12 teams will be

'The first 12 hours are critical. If someone can help in any way, it would be important.'

—Vickie Moy

prepared. Moy hopes to build an ongoing training program that would hold mock drills every year. He said such drills would be extremely valuable in saving lives.

"What we are planning for is a worst-case scenario. In all likelihood, no earthquakes will take place in Carbondale. It is most likely that one will occur somewhere else along the fault and we will feel it here," Moy said.

"It is not a clear and present danger. The reason for the publicity and concern is so that reasonable planning can be done," he added.

MOY SAID preparation for New Madrid's worst ought to be coordinated by the seven states that could be affected. SIU-C is looking at a hookup with other medical schools in the New Madrid fault area to provide mutual assistance in the event of a major quake.

An earthquake preparedness committee has met with Carbondale city officials and staff members of Memorial Hospital in an effort to link the campus with outside readiness plans.

VICKIE MOY, researcher at the School of Medicine and Richard Moy's daughter-in-law, said the committee brought together to work on the plan includes people from housing, the physical plant, security, the health service and the acting emergency services agent for the city.

Mrs. Moy said one thing they will be working on is encouraging students and staff to take a first aid course.

"The first 12 hours are critical. If someone can help in any way, it would be important," she said. She also suggested that those people with first aid training notify the health service so that they can be contacted in case of an emergency.

First aid supplies will be dispersed across campus to insure that all supplies won't be lost in the destruction, she added.

SIU-C IS ONE of the first universities in the Midwest to work on a comprehensive plan dealing with earthquakes, she said. The committee hopes to get the plan tested with a campus drill.

Sam McVay, director of the student health programs, said that the plans for an earthquake emergency aren't going to be very different from other major disaster plans.

"The center for medical attention will still be the hospital. The health service will take its direction from the hospital. We will supply the hospital with personnel if needed," he said.

Another part of SIU-C's preparedness work will be informing people about what to do if a quake hits. Much of the information is the same that people have heard about tornadoes.

Mrs. Moy said, "We will get information to people so there's a little less panic. Once you get people calmed down, things get done. The more panic there is, the worse things are."

They will also have a slide program on the department to dispel any myths about it. Ferry gave the example that most people don't realize that the University Police have full powers of arrest, search and seizure.

He said many young people ask questions about law enforcement as a career.

Computer course to be on TV

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

People with computer woes have a chance to get their woes resolved through "Bits and Bytes," a new show that will be broadcast by WSIU-TV and WUSI-TV for 12 weeks, beginning at 8 p.m. Nov. 6.

The show will aimed at audience participation, according to William Meyers, instructional TV director at SIU-C.

Enrollment costs $70, and those who enroll in the course will receive a handbook, three newsletters and accompanying software, which will be customized according to the kind of computer that the participant will be using, Meyers said.

Enrollees who do not have access to their own computers can receive a list of places in the area, such as computer dealers, that will provide computer access, Meyers said.

Enrollment in the course has been good and enthusiastic so far, he said.

"The program takes somebody from ground zero. They'll learn all the computer technology, up to how to write simple programs. They'll learn how to evaluate and select computer software, about communication between computers, computer languages, games, and how to use the computer at work," he said.

"The participants will take two quizzes that they will submit, and the quizzes will provide individual feedback," Meyers said.

The program was done in a limited number of areas involving 10 stations in the United States earlier this year as a market test, Meyers said.

"They had overwhelming success — around 35,000 participants. They' being a consortium of television stations spearheaded by the Eastern Educational Network and (television station) WNET," he said.

The show is being produced by TV Ontario, an educational television system in Canada, Meyers said.

WSIU and WUSI decided to carry the program because "we're sensitive to public needs. We've had computer programs in the past that have been well-viewed," Meyers said.

The deadline for registration for the program is Oct. 12, Meyers said. Anyone seeking more information or wishing to register for the program, may contact Meyers at 529-3092.

Game mixes checkers, chess

By Thomas Mangan
Staff Writer

Board game enthusiasts bored with checkers and frustrated by chess now have an alternative: Bayard.

Bayard was a legendary horse of tremendous size and strength that saved the lives of four knights and ridiculed the army of the great King Charlemagne by jumping hills from Spain to Germany, says game inventor Michel Remacle, a Belgian native living in Minden, La.

Remacle says the game is easier to play than chess but more challenging than checkers. Each player lines up 20 soldiers on their side of the oil-cloth game board, moving them diagonally toward their opponent's side. When a soldier reaches the opponent's back row, the soldier becomes a Bayard, which is more powerful and capable of greater moves than the soldiers.

As in checkers, the idea is to capture all the opposing pieces, but the similarity ends there. Soldiers and Bayards are both capable of a greater range of moves.

"You play the game like checkers but you win like chess, Remacle says."

Remacle moved to the United States from Belgium three years ago to study business administration at Louisiana Technology University. He was inspired to create the game when students he knew showed an interest in a European game that he couldn't find in the United States. He based the game's design on legends his grandfather told about a mythical horse known as Bayard.

The game was brought to SIUC by electronic data processing instructor Larry Jeralds. He first saw the game last summer while guiding a tour at the World's Fair in New Orleans. Remacle was giving a demonstration of the game in the Great Hall at the fair as part of a new product display.

"I saw what the game was like, and I knew that college students like board games, so I decided to try to help him sell it," Jeralds said.

Remacle has been touring the country demonstrating Bayard. Jeralds said that after a demonstration at Los Angeles on a college campus, more than 3,000 games were sold.

Bayard costs $14.95 and is available in Carbondale at the Student Center bookstore only. While the game hasn't exactly swept the campus, Jeralds isn't discouraged. He said that once people find out about the game, they will become interested. He and Remacle hope to sell between 200 and 400 games here by Christmas, he said.

The logical progression for a popular board game is a computer version. Jeralds says he hopes to develop a Bayard game program by next summer, if he can come up with a practical means of doing so.

Although Remacle has approved the computer game idea, he had something totally different in mind when he invented the game.

"Computers are invading the toy (and game) market. That's good, but I see a desire for games with human contact. There's a pleasure in mind competing against mind that you can't discover when battling a machine," he says.

Neighborhood has high cancer rate

By Dagmar Oberegner
Of the Associated Press

MORRISON, Colo. (AP) — The hazy foothills of the Rockies stretch along the horizon behind the neat rows of brick homes, surrounded by green fields and splashes of golden aspen.

It's Colorado's version of the American dream. But something is wrong in this neighborhood.

Within the past five years, 12 children have died, eight of cancer — a rate two to three times the national average. Others have been plagued by illness, according to some residents.

Nobody knows why. "A lot of people feel there's something wrong, but they don't know what it is," said resident Rebecca Parr.

This week, Parr and some neighbors are conducting a door-to-door survey to determine the full extent of the health problems that have befallen their 10-year-old, middle-class neighborhood at the edge of the Colorado Rockies, about 10 miles southwest of Denver.

The Jefferson County Health Department did some tests but didn't find anything abnormal. The federal Environmental Protection Agency has taken soil, air and water samples, but results won't be known for a few weeks.

"These people have brought us some symptoms," said Dean Gillam of the EPA in Denver. "These symptoms did not point to one direction. We would be the first to jump if we can find a direction to go. If it comes up negative we don't know where to jump next."

The EPA launched its study after getting a letter from a group of neighbors frightened by an inordinately high number of cancers, tumors, persistent infections and allergies.

Yvonne Peterson lost her 4-year-old son Jesse to cancer of the nervous system in 1982. That same summer another child living a few blocks away died of leukemia, she said.

"He was healthy when we came into the area," Peterson said of her son. "They don't feel he had it at the time of birth."

The Peterson home is about 50 feet north of Bergen Ditch, which flows through the neighborhood.

"The kids have played in the ditch ever since we moved in there," Peterson said. "I just have a gut feeling it's probably related to the ditch."

Other residents have other ideas. Could the neighborhood's proximity to defunct uranium mines be the problem? Or to the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant north of Denver? Or to suspected illegal chemical waste dumps?

So far, there are more questions than answers.

When Debbie McClintock's neighbor suffered a miscarriage, she decided she would not stay in her house while pregnant. So she moved out until her baby was born recently.

"Knowing there were problems here and finding out I was pregnant, I was concerned about whether I would be all right," she said. "If we could move we would — in a flash."

Parr said she began collecting data in 1982, but said she has run into a roadblock with county health officials.

Dr. Tom Vernon, head of the Colorado Health Department, said his office has been responding in a "methodical way to deal with the known facts."

Of Parr and her backers, he said, "I think they're driving themselves to distraction with information that's been gathered in a haphazard, unmethodical way."

But Lou Johnson of the EPA disagrees. "I don't think the citizens of that neighborhood are overreacting," he said. "I would want to know whether there's any possibility there are any environmental factors involved."

Not everybody in the neighborhood is pleased by the publicity.

Forensics squads dominate competition

Two teams from the SIUC Forensics Team tied for first place in the Louis Brandeis Invitational Speech and Debate Competition held at the University of Kentucky on the weekend of Oct 5-7.

The two winning teams consisted of Lyndon Sommer, junior in accounting, and Mike Davis, senior in political science; and Steve Green, senior in communications, and Sid Alvarez, senior in speech communications.

SIUC competed against 16 teams in the tournament, including those from Michigan, Indiana, North Carolina, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Texas, as well as Illinois.

The forensics team at SIUC has established itself as a dominant Midwestern team. The Salukis finished second in the nation last year, and are now far ahead of their 1983-84 winning pace.

Other awards won by SIUC team members in the invitational tournament were: Sommer, top speaker; Davis, fifth speaker; and Alvarez, seventh speaker.

Steele moves on into world of aquatics

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

His career as Saluki swimming coach kept Bob Steele a happy man, but a new aquatics center in Orlando, Fla. offered Steele a career beyond coaching, and he accepted it.

Steele has been named the aquatics center director at the $6 million Justus Aquatics Center, which is scheduled to open Feb. 1, 1985. The aquatics center and Viscount Hotel are a $20 million development of Justus Hospitality Properties.

Steele said he did not apply for the position at first, because he was happy with SIU-C.

"About five people talked to me about applying for it, but I didn't because I was so pleased with SIU," he said.

Coaches from "big name" colleges were interviewed, he said, and then "a couple people recommended me to the guy who called me."

Frank Buonauro Jr.,

Bob Steele

president of Justus Hospitality Properties, "called me in August and said he wants me to take it. I thought about it for about two to three weeks and decided to accept it," Steele said.

STEELE SAID he isn't sure why he was chosen from the handful of big name college coaches, but said he believes his abilities were the probable reason.

"They were looking for somebody with promotional ideas," he said. "I think I have some of the abilities they were looking for."

Steele has had the responsibility for the operations of programs similar to those at the aquatics center and will maintain that responsibility by promoting the success of the center's programs.

"I'll be responsible for the success of many different programs," he said. "The coaches will be responsible, but I'm responsible for working with the coaches."

Steele said he will be responsible for the programs and people in the aquatics lab, physiological lab, gymnasium and a human performance lab that has $150,000 worth of equipment.

EQUIPMENT IN the lab will be used for cardiac rehabilitation testing, stress testing and to test the athletes physiologically, Steele said. The athletics club has $40,000 worth of Nautilus equipment, exercycles and tennis and racketball courts, he said.

Local residents, hotel guests and out-of-towners will have access to the facilities. Hotel guests will be admitted free of charge, Steele said.

The swimming pool and diving well were designed especially for international and national swimming and diving competition, he said.

"IT'S THE most complete privately funded aquatics center in the United States," Steele said. "The only one that comes close is the one at the University of Texas and at Indiana University at Indianapolis."

Some of the meets on the schedule are the World Aquatic Championships, NCAA Championships II and the National Masters Championships.

Seven coaches on the aquatic center's swim team will work with people, ages 6-25, who will be given a chance to compete in meets throughout the nation, he said.

Steele will coach college swimmers in the summer, he said.

THE ONE risk included in his new career is that of success, he said.

"You don't know how successful it will be until you do it. I can't wait to try it."

Steele will leave SIU-C when a new swimming coach is found, probably in November, he said.

Friends, grandparents and everybody else will be missed, he said, but he believes the time has come to move on.

Sparky gains edge over Williams in Game One

By John Nelson
Of the Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — In 1972, when Sparky Anderson and Dick Williams sat in opposite dugouts for the first time in the World Series, the Oakland A's won in seven games.

That team belonged to Williams, and while the Cincinnati Reds were the losers, Anderson still felt he had the better team.

"I still think Cincinnati should have won that Series, but I think Dick Williams outmanaged me and won the Series for Oakland," Anderson said.

On Wednesday, as Anderson's Detroit Tigers and Williams' San Diego Padres prepared for Game Two of the 1984 World Series, Anderson was not ready to assume the managerial edge despite a 3-2 victory in Game One.

"To tell you the truth, I don't believe I've really ever out-managed anybody in 15 years," Anderson said. "I believe managers could leave and go away to the Bahamas, and it wouldn't make any difference to those guys on the field."

Anderson's viewpoint was not universally held, however. In the Game One loss, Williams made several moves that were questioned. Williams, however, did not show up at a Wednesday morning news conference to answer these questions:

— With starting left-hander Mark Thurmond struggling in the fifth inning, Williams allowed him to walk a batter then give up a double to Lance Parrish with one out as relievers Dave Dravecky and Andy Hawkins stood in the bullpen watching, ready to work.

The next batter, Larry Herndon, hit a game-winning homer off Thurmond's 112th pitch of the game. Hawkins and Dravecky finished up, allowing only one more hit the rest of the way, but the damage was done.

Tuesday night, Williams admitted that he had taken out

Thurmond "one hitter too late."

— Graig Nettles and Terry Kennedy started the Padres sixth inning with singles, giving San Diego runners at first and second with none out. At that point, Williams put in Luis Salazar to run for Nettles. Tigers starter Jack Morris struck out the next three batters to get Detroit out of the jam, and Nettles was out of the game after getting two singles and walking once.

Salazar, a .241 hitter with only 17 RBI during the season, now was hitting fourth for the Padres, and he came up again with one out in the eighth and none aboard. He grounded out meekly to third.

White, Illini psyched for Buckeyes

By Robert Lee Zimmer
Of the Associated Press

URBANA, Ill. — Illinois Coach Mike White said Tuesday he detects "a renewed sense of incentive and excitement" in his defending Big Ten champs as they prepare to play at Ohio State.

OSU and Michigan, perennial conference powerhouses, both lost last week and now only the Purdue leads the Illini.

"Our incentive is the championship," said White, whose team is on probation and banned from returning to the Rose Bowl this season. "What else have we got? There isn't a bowling game."

But White told reporters there is another side to OSU's loss to Purdue last Saturday.

"I think every coach would rather play a team that has won the previous week," said White. "There is a tendency to relax when you have won."

Illinois travels to Columbus with a victory over Wisconsin under its belt, and White said he expected his players to be in the frame of mind to snap the 1984 road jinx.

"We have not played well on the road," said White, whose team has not won outside Memorial Stadium this year. "We have to go to Columbus with the right kind of preparation and the right kind of attitude."

He said from the beginning of the year he felt Ohio State was "the team we're all shooting at," and that Saturday's contest is "very, very critical for both teams."

Illinois is 4-2 and the Buckeyes are 4-1 overall — each with a loss in the Big Ten.

Both coaches said it could be a high-scoring game.

"I've come to believe if you want to win a football game, you have to score at least 28 points," said OSU Coach Earle Bruce.

Eastern trip crucial for Saluki fielders

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Julee Illner said in the preseason that if the Saluki field hockey team wanted to qualify for the NCAA tournament, they would have to play well on their three-game trip to the East Coast.

The Salukis (6-2-1 overall) will get their chance this week when they face 17th-ranked Virginia (6-5) on Thursday, James Madison (6-6) on Friday, and Davis and Elkins (2-4-2) on Saturday.

Illner said their opponents records are misleading because they all have had strong schedules this year. Virginia has played five nationally ranked teams in the top 20, while James Madison has played four top 20 teams and Davis and Elkins, has played three.

THE SALUKIS, who aren't ranked in the top 20 poll, are ranked seventh in the Midwest Regional Poll. Illner said the team will have to win all three games on the trip to move up in the regional poll, but she isn't sure if the Salukis can break into the national poll.

Saluki fielder Nadine Simpson practiced on Wednesday. SIU-C will travel to the East Coast for a crucial three-game trip this week.

"If we can move up to third or fourth in the region, we will get some points for honorable mention and possibly move up in the top 20," she said. "But I'm not sure if we have much of a chance because we aren't playing enough of the East Coast schools and neither is Southwest Missouri. There is always a possibility but we have only a slim chance of moving up into the top 20."

ILLNER SAID the Salukis have to score more goals against the better teams. Against their two toughest opponents in the Saluki Hockey Fest, the Salukis only scored one goal against Ohio (1-0) and Southwest (0-2).

"The big emphasis in practice is to get the shots off quickly no matter what position they're in," Illner said. "Defensively, we're trying to speed up their reaction time and get them to move quicker."

Illner said she would like to see the offense average two goals a game. The Salukis are averaging 1.78 goals per game, with 16 goals in nine games.

The Salukis leading scorer is left wing Sharon Leidy, who has scored six goals and also leads the team in shooting accuracy (15.8). Tied for the No. 2 scorer is left inner Kathy Crowley (two goals and two assists) and right wing Jennifer Bartley (one goal and four assists).

The defense has performed better than the offense, allowing only 0.89 goals a game and posting five shutouts.

Sandy Wasfey, the Salukis' No. 1 goalie, has allowed one goal per game, and has posted three shutouts with 51 saves.

Backup goalie Lisa Cuocci has a 0.67 goals per game average and has posted one shutout with 15 saves. Wasfey and Cuocci have also combined for a shutout this year.

ILLNER SAID she isn't sure how the 11 day layoff from the Southwest game will affect the Salukis.

"Sometimes the layoff takes the edge off, but sometimes you need it," she said. "I think we'll have to wait and see. The girls are excited about the trip because they're big games and they'll get to see their family and friends."

Illner said she doesn't plan any changes in the starting lineup. She said Wasfey and Cuocci will both see action and reserves Cindy Delfino and Karen Cordell will likely receive playing time.

Sweeper Nancy McAuley, who missed the East Coast trip last year because of a chipped bone in her left ankle, said the team has something to prove after the loss to Southwest.

"I think we have something to prove out on the East Coast, and against Southwest."

NFL films presents football in storybook form

By Bob Dvorchak
Of the Associated Press

MOUNT LAUREL, N.J. — Football is artistry through the rose-colored lenses of NFL Films Inc., which has won 33 Emmy Awards and boasts one of the longest-running syndicated sports programs on television.

"We try to package professional football the same way Hollywood does fiction. We not only document the game, we celebrate it. We emphasize romance," Steve Sabol, executive vice president and son of the founder of NFL Films said.

"We look at the game the way the fan does," he added in a recent interview. "We are not news gatherers; we're filmmakers. We're not journalists, we're storytellers. It's a game, the toy department of life."

NFL Films, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the National Football League, produces about 150 pieces a year. It does a 30-minute promotional film on each NFL team, shoots halftime highlights for ABC's Monday Night Football, prepares pregame shorts for CBS and produces a game of the week and a feature on football legends each week for Cable TV's ESPN.

The company also syndicates two weekly shows — "NFL Pro Magazine" and "NFL Week In Review." The latter film first aired in 1967 and is carried nationally by 101 stations. Only "ABC's Wide World of Sports" has been on the air longer, Sabol said.

"People say that football is overexposed and has reached its saturation point, but we have more shows on television than we ever had," Sabol said.

His father, Ed Sabol, a former overcoat salesman, founded the forerunner of NFL Films in Philadelphia 22 years ago in a cramped, two-room office.

His only filmmaking experience was shooting his son's football career with a Bell and Howell camera he received as a wedding present. He bought the film rights to the 1962 NFL championship game for $5,000.

Sabol impressed league officials so much that he shot title games the next two years. And in 1964, each of the league's franchises put up $20,000 to start NFL Films officially.

Today, the company grosses $10 million a year and earns a $400,000 profit shared by the 28 NFL teams. It is the largest 16mm film company in the world, and is the nation's second-largest film user behind the Army, the younger Sabol said.

Philadelphia newsman John Facenda, the original voice of highlight films, died Sept. 26 of cancer. His apocalyptic baritone was a trademark of football films, and NFL Films plans a tribute to him in future shows.

"There will never be another voice like his," Sabol said.

"Somebody once said he could make the coin toss sound like Armageddon. I called it his 'retreat from Dunkirk voice.'"

Black prepared for Southern Open

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Ronnie Black may some day capture a major golf tournament, but the third-year pro from New Mexico says the $300,000 Southern Open Golf Tournament, which begins Thursday, always will be "the special place for me."

It was here a year ago that Black won his first tournament, and that's something he never will forget.

"No matter if I win the Masters or the U.S. Open, Columbus always will be the special place for me," said the 26-year-old former Lamar University golfer.

Last year's Southern victory vaulted Black from the also-rans on the tour and lifted his season's earnings to $87,524.

He also credits that triumph with helping him win again this year, taking the Anheuser-Busch Classic in Williamsburg, Va. That victory helped push his earnings for the current year to $169,386.

"I probably wouldn't have won the Anheuser if I hadn't won the Southern," Black said. "The Southern Open gave me a lot of extra confidence."

The tournament is played over Columbus' par 70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

In last year's Southern, Black defeated Scotland's Sam Torrance by knocking in a six-foot birdie putt on the fourth overtime hole after coming from three strokes behind on the final day.

This year, he will have a special fan rooting for him to win again.

"I got married July 21, and my wife goes with me wherever I play," said Black, who makes his home in Lovington, N.M.

The Southern field, which tournament President Sam Wellborn boasts "is the best ever," will be led by Jack Nicklaus, who will be making his first appearance here.

Bruins open '84 season with key players hurt

By Barry Wilner
Of the Associated Press

After the shattering preseason they've experienced, the Boston Bruins are glad the National Hockey League regular season is getting under way.

The two-time defending champions of the Adams Division have had a rough time in training camp with injuries to key personnel casting a cloud over their prospects for beating out Buffalo and Quebec in the tough Adams Division.

The Bruins, who host Pittsburgh Thursday night in one of nine season openers, saw regular goaltender Pete Peeters severely sprain his ankle in the final game of the Canada Cup tournament last month. Peeters didn't get back into action until the end of training camp and is not up to par.

Star center Barry Pederson, who led the team with 116 points on 39 goals and 77 assists last season, broke his hand in a fight with the Nordiques' Mario Marois and will be gone until December. Backup goalie Doug Keans has been ill as well and, on Monday, defenseman Gord Kluzak underwent knee surgery. Kluzak is not expected back all year.

In addition, Terry O'Reilly and Steve Kasper are coming back from injury-ruined seasons — the pair of forwards appeared in a total of 55 games in 1983-84.

"If a player is hurt and out for awhile," Bruins General Manager Harry Sinden said of Peeters' injury, "the good that is accomplished by the Canada Cup tournament doesn't outweigh the risk. I sit on pins and needles worrying about my players. I hate watching games for that reason. Not only me, but everyone who has their best players on that team.

"You run the same risk in practice but if it happens in practice at least he's doing it as a member of the Bruins. You've got some control over the situation."

Whether the Bruins are able to take control of the division could depend on how fast the

Buckeyes' Byars puts team goals before self

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Keith Byars of eighth-ranked Ohio State, the nation's leading major college rusher and all-purpose runner this week, would like to make a trade.

The 6-foot-2, 235-pound junior tailback wants to swap all of his 1984 statistics — 802 yards rushing, 222 yards receiving, 35 yards passing and 66 points — for a decision over Purdue.

"I'd start over from scratch if we could have that victory, no doubt about it," Byars said Wednesday amid preparations for playing Illinois Saturday in a regionally televised game (CBS-TV, 3:40 p.m. EDT).

The Boilermakers beat the Buckeyes 28-23 last week and became the lone unbeaten team left in the Big Ten Conference race. It also cost Ohio State its No. 2 national ranking, the Buckeyes' first loss in five games this fall.

"It was a heart-breaking game for us. We were inside the 20-yard line three times and came away with nothing," Byars said. "It hurt. But we have to put it behind us. We're in the (Big Ten) race and we're going to be in it to the end."

Byars couldn't be blamed for the Purdue defeat. He gathered a career-high 191 yards against the Boilermakers.

Roman Bates has worked as Byars' backfield mate all season.

"I've never seen a tailback punish linebackers on about every play like he does. I can tell people are almost afraid to tackle him," the Buckeyes' fullback said.

Byars ran, passed for and caught touchdowns against Iowa. He scored three touchdowns and had 182 yards rushing against Oregon State. Washington State saw him go for 145 yards on the ground and score twice. At Minnesota, it was 164 yards rushing and three more touchdowns.

Iowa linebacker Larry Station said, "The main thing is his upper body mass. He just busts arm tackles."

Joe Avezzano, Oregon State's coach, said, "Byars just kept pounding us." Washington State Coach Jim Walden added,

And then there was Lou Holtz. "I haven't seen thighs like his since Earl Campbell. His uniform number is 41 and that might be his rushing average, too," the Minnesota coach said.

Van Pelt, Campbell traded during flurry of NFL deals

By The Associated Press

Earl Campbell, one of the top runners in pro football history, and five-time Pro Bowl linebacker Brad Van Pelt were among a bevy of players swapping teams Tuesday as the National Football League's trading deadline passed.

Van Pelt, who had held out rather than accept a trade from the New York Giants to the Minnesota Vikings, got his wish Tuesday when the Vikings sent him to the Super Bowl champion Los Angeles Raiders for a first-round draft choice in 1986.

Van Pelt, 33, wanted to play for a team in California or Florida to pursue post-career business opportunities.

"That's what I was looking for, number one, and to go to a team of the Raiders' caliber is just — well, the only thing that could have been better is if it happened 12 weeks ago."

Van Pelt's holdout was expensive, costing him about $100,000 in fines and missed paydays from his $240,000 annual salary.

"We wanted to somehow accommodate a guy who wasn't totally excited about being here," Minnesota Coach Les Steckel said. "I'm happy for Brad Van Pelt. He's given a lot to the NFL, he's played 11 years and felt they really dumped on him."

In other transactions Tuesday:

—The Pittsburgh Steelers acquired offensive tackle Steve August from the Seattle Seahawks in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice.

—Defensive back Lawrence Johnson was traded to the Buffalo Bills by the Cleveland Browns in exchange for an undisclosed 1985 draft choice.

—The Cincinnati Bengals traded the rights to unsigned first-round draft pick Ricky Hunley to the Denver Broncos for a first-round draft choice in 1986.

—The Raiders sent reserve center Jim Romano to the Oilers for undisclosed draft choices.

—For the third time this year, the Miami Dolphins added linebacker Sanders Shiver to their roster.

—Veteran quarterback David Whitehurst, signed when starting quarterback Bill Kenney suffered a broken thumb, was waived.

Sooners, Longhorns showdown set

By Herschel Nissenon
Of the Associated Press

"I've been involved in these for 19 years now and it really and truly is what a football classic is all about," Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer said.

What Switzer is talking about is the annual college football border war between Texas and Oklahoma — the universities, not the states, although sometimes on Friday night in Dallas it seems the latter is the case.

The Longhorns and Sooners go into Saturday's game as the nation's No. 1 and 3 teams, respectively. Offensively, they are even closer than that. Oklahoma is averaging 378.8 yards a game, Texas 371.3; Texas has averaged 33.7 points, Oklahoma 29.7.

But where last year Texas was the nation's top defensive club, this time the Longhorns are only 43rd, yielding 326.7 yards a game, while Oklahoma ranks second at 229.7. The Sooners also are second in rushing defense at 64.0, Texas 38th at 138.3.

And although Texas Coach Fred Akers says that "more times than not, this kind of football game is a tossup," the Longhorns are 3-and-a-half-point favorites. But with quarterback Todd Dodge a question mark and operating under the theory that it's not healthy for a team to be No. 1 week after week, the pick is . . . Oklahoma 17-14.

No. 2 Washington (favored by 8 and a half) at Stanford; Upset Special of the Week, Stanford 24-20.

Temple at No. 4 Boston College (by 15); Boston College 31-14.

Wyoming at No. 5 Brigham Young (no line); BYU 35-14.

Missouri at No. 6 Nebraska (by 10 and a half); Nebraska 21-17.

No. 7 Southern Methodist (by 8 and a half) at Baylor; Second Upset Special, Baylor 24-17.

Illinois at No. 8 Ohio State (by 6 and a half); Ohio State 28-17.

No. 16 Auburn at No. 9 Florida State (by 3); Auburn 27-20.

No. 10 Miami, Fla. (by 24 and a half) at Cincinnati; Miami 38-7.

No. 11 Penn State (by 2) at Alabama; Alabama 24-17.

Vanderbilt at No. 12 LSU (by 6 and a half); LSU 28-14.

Iowa (by 4) at No. 14 Purdue; Iowa 27-17.

Mississippi at No. 15 Georgia (by 7 and a half); Georgia 24-14.

Pitt at No. 17 South Carolina (by 7); Third Upset Special, Pitt 21-13.

No. 18 Florida (by 6 and a half) at Tennessee; Florida 27-18.

No. 19 Kentucky (by 2) at Mississippi State; Mississippi State 21-14.

No. 20 Georgia Tech (by 1 and a half) at Virginia; Georgia Tech 24-13.

Globetrotters settle civil rights suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three Harlem Globetrotters on Wednesday reached a settlement of a $3 million civil rights lawsuit that contended the basketball players were stopped at gunpoint by Santa Barbara police just because they were black.

Neither side would disclose the amount of the settlement, which was reached in federal court following a three-hour, closed-door session.

"We are not unhappy with it," said attorney Edward Bell, who represented the three Globetrotters.

The trial, which had been in its second day of testimony, was recessed pending ratification of the settlement by the Santa Barbara City Council. Santa Barbara City Attorney Steven Amerikaner said the council would consider the agreement Friday or Monday.

The suit had been filed against the City of Santa Barbara and 16 individuals.

"I would have really liked to put our case on in chronological order to show the jury what really happened," defense attorney George Franscell said of the aborted trial.

One of the plaintiffs, Ovie Dotson, also declined comment on terms of the agreement. He said he and his two teammates were leaving for a Friday night game in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

In testimony earlier in the day, a police lieutenant who ordered the three held at gunpoint during an armed robbery investigation said he did not check another officer's suggestion they were members of the famed basketball team.

Lt. Robert Strong, who led a team of police officers that stopped the Globetrotters because they resembled descriptions of three men who had robbed a jewelry store, said he did not check out a sergeant's claim the men may be basketball players.

Strong said if he had known the men were members of the well-known comedy basketball team, he would not have ordered them detained but would have "asked them for their autographs."

The incident occurred the afternoon of Dec. 13, 1983, when Globetrotters Louis Dunbar, 30, Jimmy Blacklock, 35, and Dotson, 27, went shopping prior to an exhibition game at the University of California campus.

The three men fell under police suspicion when a patrol officer saw them enter the Bryant & Sons jewelry store on busy State Street only a few minutes after a store was robbed of $300,000 in jewelry in Montecito, a wealthy suburb about five miles south of Santa Barbara.

From left, Donna Tindall (4), Darlene Hogue (19) and Pat Nicholson (12) celebrated after scoring a point in Tuesday night's game against Evansville. The Salukis won the match in three games, 15-6, 15-6 and 15-12. Their record is now 10-6. The Salukis will play at Indiana St. Friday night and at Illinois State Saturday night.

HUNTER: Wants consistency

said, "and it's something we need to have right away. We also need Donna Tindall and the others, but Pat has to step in and help the offense."

In Wednesday's practice, Hunter said she worked on the team's defense and drilled them on getting into their transition game.

"What we are trying to do is get the ball from the backcourt to the setter as quickly as possible," Hunter said. "If we can get the ball to the setter with a minimum of errors, then we can set more offensive options."

Hunter said the team made more than its share of errors in their win over the Aces.

"We did some work in practice on movement in the backcourt," she said. "We need to get the right movements now so we can use them in a game situation."

One area of the team that has remained consistent is the service game.

"It's a very important aspect of the game," Hunter said, "because a good service will minimize the opponent's attack."

Hunter said the Salukis will have a tough time against their opponents this weekend.

"Indiana State is totally different than Illinois State," she said, "if we can be competitive against two totally opposite teams like that, it would be a big plus to the confidence of the team."

SWITCH: Anderson having fun

ticularly impressive in the Salukis' last two games, catching seven passes for 131 yards and two touchdowns in wins over Southeast Missouri State and Northern Iowa.

"The last couple of games, the other team has been laying on the run," Anderson said. "We have taken advantage of that. We feel we can pass, and we've used a lot of play action lately."

The Saluki receiving corps had been receiving criticism earlier in the season for dropping a number of passes in game situations. Anderson said the experience of playing six games has helped the group overcome this problem.

"EARLY ON, we weren't too familiar with the plays in game situations," Anderson said. "(Quarterback) Darren (Dixon) was learning about us, and we're learning about him. But we have started to slowly develop, and we're getting better every game.

"We were getting heat for dropping the ball, and the coaches had us doing push-ups for every ball we missed in practice. Nobody likes to do push-ups, so Tony Adams and I started pushing ourselves and the other guys to get better."

Adams and Anderson are the only two seniors among the Saluki receiving corps, and Anderson said they give a helping hand to the younger receivers.

"The other guys are looking good, because they get a lot of playing time behind Tony and I," he said. "I'm surprised. They come to us for advice, and we help them out. They listen a lot."

ANDERSON SAID he lived just two blocks away from SIUC tailback Derrick Taylor while growing up in Chicago, and the two were childhood friends and high school teammates at Julian. Taylor came to SIUC one year earlier than Anderson, and he said Taylor influenced him to come to Carbondale.

"He convinced me to come," Anderson said. "I was recruited by several Big Ten schools, but I didn't like the atmosphere. I liked it here."

Anderson said he expects the Salukis to continue to win this season, because their confidence level has grown immensely since winning their last two games.

"We're going to win, because we believe we can," Anderson said. "Earlier in the year, I think the veterans may have said in the back of their minds 'We lost too much from last year.' But we believe in the young players now, and they believe in us. The team now believes in each other, and so do the coaches."

Padres' Series march started with toys

By Ben Walker
Of the Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — It began as a joke in September.

A pair of 4-inch-high, fuzzy toys — a koala bear with a green ribbon around its neck, and a droopy-faced dog with a blue ribbon — sitting atop the phones in the San Diego Padres' dugout.

"We were playing Cincinnati and were losing 7-0," recalled Padres trainer Dick Dent. "So Carmelo Martinez and Kevin McReynolds come up with these two dolls.

"They didn't really claim them and didn't know what to do with 'em. So they put these things on top of the phones in the dugout, near where I sit."

San Diego rallied to win, 15-7.

"Lo and behold, we came from behind," Dent said. "That's how it started."

The next game, the furry dolls were back. The next game, too.

As the Padres continued their march to the National League West crown, the dolls followed them. And they'll be in the dugout for every game of the World Series against the Detroit Tigers.

"They're just there — watching," said Dent, casting a wary eye at the two furry figures.

"They made the road trips in my duffel bag," he said. "Some of the guys would come up before we left and tell me not to forget them."

Not everyone in the San Diego

dugout knows about the good-luck charms, but, said Dent, "The guys on the bench, near where I sit, all know about them."

"Mario Ramirez will come by once in a while and give them a hoo-doo dance. Not a voodoo dance. We don't stick them with pins or anything," he said.

Martinez is a believer. "These fans gave them to us and said that if we kept them, we'd win the World Series," he said.

Outfielder Tony Gwynn, however, had his doubts.

"We took those things to Chicago for the National League playoffs and lost the first two games," said the outfielder, the leading hitter in the league. "When we got back here. I was gonna throw 'em over the center field fence. I said, 'Get those things out of here.'"

But Gwynn agreed to give them one more chance.

"I kept saying I'd let them stay around for one more game, and when we tied the series, I told Dick, 'Make sure those dolls are out for Game Five.'"

Now that the Padres are in the World Series for the first time ever, the dolls are back.

"They have their weapons and we have ours," Dent said. "It's not like we have witches in here."

But San Diego lost Game One to Detroit, 3-2, and Dent again heard some players grumbling that the dolls should be tossed out.

"No way," Dent said. "I kept telling them, 'Remember 7-0.'"

Hunter says spikers need consistency

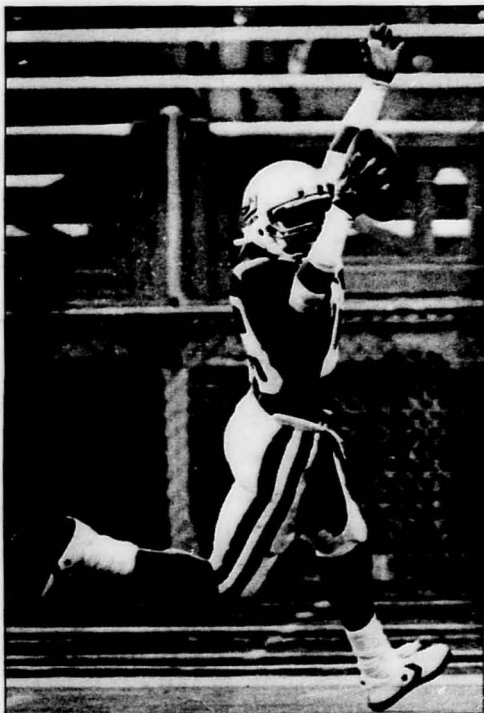

By Duane Crays
Sports Editor

While the volleyball Salukis defeated the University of Evansville Aces with relative ease, Coach Debbie Hunter feels the team needs some more work on its consistency in order to compete against Gateway Conference opponents Indiana State and Illinois State this weekend.

"We need more precision passing out of backcourt," she said. "The setters in the backcourt are exercising better hand control but need to work faster. We work better when we make the fast transition from defense to offense."

Hunter said she was happy with the blocking the Salukis showed in the Evansville match, saying the middle blockers were much more disciplined than they had been earlier this season. She also said Chris Boyd and Darlene Hogue have shown the consistent ability to successfully place the ball on the opponents' floor, but said middle hitter Pat Nicholson needs to be in the middle of the offense more.

"Pat needs to become more involved with the offense," she said. See HUNTER, Page 23

Saluki flanker Tony Anderson has made a smooth transition from running back to flanker this year. He is the Salukis' second-leading receiver with 14 receptions, including three touchdowns.

Position switch goes smoothly for Anderson

Saluki flanker Tony Anderson has bounced around quite a lot since coming to SIU-C four years ago.

Anderson, a graduate of Chicago's Julian High School, was recruited by former Saluki coach Rey Dempsey as a wide receiver in 1981. Anderson had played running back in high school, but he said SIU-C and several other schools were interested in his ability as a receiver.

But when Dempsey found himself with a shortage of running backs heading into the 1981 season, he asked Anderson to switch back to his former position.

"I first came here as a receiver but Coach Dempsey wanted help in the backfield," Anderson said. "I'd do anything to help the team, so I agreed with the move."

ANDERSON eventually played three years as a tailback for the Salukis. His best season was in 1982 when he rushed for 279 yards and four touchdowns while catching 23 passes for 288 yards and three touchdowns.

Because of a shortage of receivers heading into the 1984 season, Anderson volunteered to move back to wide receiver. New Saluki Coach Ray Dorr agreed, and the move was made.

"When Coach Dorr came here, we had lost our starting receivers to grades," Anderson said. "I asked coach if I could move back out to wide receiver."

The transition has been a smooth one for Anderson. He is the Salukis' second-leading receiver with 14 receptions for 205 yards, and he leads SIU-C with three touchdown catches.

"HE'S COMING along," Saluki receiver coach Buzz Preston said. "I'm very pleased with the way he's playing right now. If he keeps the same level of intensity and concentration all the time, the sky's the limit for him."

Padres even Series with 5-3 victory

By John Nelson

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Kurt Bevacqua atoned for a rally-killing blunder in Game One with a three-run homer, vaulting San Diego to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Wednesday night and a split of the first two games of the 1984 World Series.

The American League champion Tigers scored three runs in the first inning off Ed Whitson, but this time, Padres Manager Dick Williams made his move before it was too late. Williams removed Whitson with one out left in the inning, and relief pitcher Andy Hawkins turned giant-killer.

Hawkins, a parttime starter who had two complete games during the season, pitched 5 1-3 innings, gave up just one hit before he gave way to left-hander Craig Lefferts, who started the seventh.

The Padres, meanwhile, scratched back with a run in the first on Graig Nettles' sacrifice fly and another in the fourth on a fielder's choice grounder by Bobby Brown that scored Bevacqua to make it 3-2.

The Padres failed to score with two one with two out in the third but finally got to Petry again in the fourth, sparked by Bevacqua.

He led off the inning with a single. After Carmelo Martinez struck out, Templeton singled through the right side and, this time, Bevacqua was safe at third, although he nearly fell short of the base as he started his belly-flop slide too early. That stirred Bill Scherrer and Aurelio Lopez in the Detroit bullpen.

The run scored when Brown, playing for the injured Kevin McReynolds, grounded into a fielder's choice.

Wiggins followed with a sharply hit single to right, sending Brown to third, but Gwynn lined out to right field to end the inning.

Then, with one out in the fifth, Nettles walked on five pitches from Petry, and Kennedy followed with a one-hop single that bounced in the face of Whitaker at second. Bevacqua then took a strike from Petry and blasted the next pitch for the game-winning home run.

That brought on Lopez, who walked Martinez, the first batter he faced. Templeton followed with a single into right field, and when Gibson bobbled the ball for an error, Templeton went to second and Martinez was at third. Brown popped to third, and Wiggins lined out to center to end the inning.

Then, in the fifth, the Padres finally chased Tigers starter Dan Petry, 18-8 during the season, with Bevacqua's three-run homer. In San Diego's 3-2 loss in Game One, Bevacqua had run the Padres out of a potential rally by stumbling while trying to stretch a leadoff double in the seventh inning into a triple. But Williams kept his faith in the 37-year-old designated hitter and moved him up three notches to sixth in the batting order.

His home run came after a walk to Nettles and a bad hop single by Terry Kennedy on a shot that bounced off second baseman Lou Whitaker's chest.

As he watched the ball sail into the left field seats, Bevacqua jumped in the air and spun around at first base. He pumped the No. 1 sign with a finger as he rounded second, and as he trotted around third, Bevacqua pressed both hands against his lips and blew a kiss to the crowd of 57,911 at Jack Murphy Stadium. Even in his moment of infamy on Tuesday night, they had not booed him. Now, they cheered him.

He wound up with three hits in the game, as did teammates Alan Wiggins and Garry Templeton.
