Deficit reduction plan

WALTER MONDALE put his cards on the table Monday with his deficit reduction plan. Mondale's plan would cut the projected Congressional Budget deficit by $177 billion by 1989. A large part of Mondale's proposal is raising taxes. There are gimmicks and unanswered questions in Mondale's plan. While it is no different in that respect than any other proposal, at least it is a plan that gives some insight as to where Mondale stands. By 1989, according to the Mondale plan, $85 billion in new revenues will be created. A large part of that plan is that Mondale wants to delay indexing taxes, which protects wage earners from inflation. Inflation raises net taxes because pay increases put people in higher tax brackets, while their real buying power stays the same or rises only slightly. This assures the government a bonus for debasing the currency as the government generally profits from rising inflation. It also hits middle and lower income individuals and families the hardest because wealthy people are individuals and families the hardest because wealthy people are already in the highest tax bracket and are less affected by the inflation rate.

WITH THIS proposal Mondale runs the risk that a spiraling in-flation rate can have a devastating effect on the middle and lower classes. A similar circumstance contributed to President Carter's Classes. A similar circumstance contributed to President Carter's downfall. Mondale also proposed some spending cuts. But there are many questions as to whether the cuts will effectively lower the deficits. For instance, Mondale wants to cancel the B-1 Bomber, but has no plan to replace it. Both Republicans and Democrats agree the aging B-52 bombers need to be replaced, so a new plan would be needed to replace the B-1. Otherwise, Air Force pilots would be forced to fly the B-52 bombers at least another decade. In addition, Mondale proposes to cut $4 billion from agricultural programs, but he doesn't say how those cuts will affect farmers. The same is true of his $12 million cut in health care costs. It is commendable to advocate spending cuts, but it's important to know exactly what will be cut. But this is an election year, and a politician can't be too specific without alienating voters. Mondale may already have scared some voters with his bold call to raise taxes. taxes

THE BUDGET deficits have ballooned under the Reagan ad-THE BUDGET deficits have ballooned under the Reagan ad-ministration and so far the only proposal Reagan is offering is that a thriving economy will lower the deficits. However, in 1984 the deficits declined by only $15 billion from the original projected amount. That still leaves a $173 billion deficit. This year the economy has thrived but the decline was only enough to put a dent in the deficit. in the deficit.

A more effective way to handle the growing deficits would be to repeal tax loophole laws. Furthermore, cutting spending, both social and defense, should come before any tax hikes are considered sidered. Mondale's plan may have many holes and unanswered questions, but it is a proposal. It lets the public know where he stands, and as he says, "All my cards are on the table, face up." Now it is up to the voters to decide whether they like the hand that Mondale has dealt.

Society needs people like Craft

'85 BUDGE

Democracy suffers when a society habitually swallows whole any concepts offered to it. Nikki Craft did not offer herself as a role model to be thoughtlessly emulated and admired. Her "eye-grabbing grandstand technique" is not, unlike our venerated "Hollywood aura", designed to compell us into unquestioning consumption of a new product. consumption of a new product, fad, fashion or fitness.

Nikki Craft stages her "outrageous" events in order to bring to our attention ideals which have been ingested by our society and are now so thoroughly integrated into our system that we are nearly oblivious of their now-subtle, oblivious of their now-subtle, but pernicious poison. Violence against women, as advocated by Hustler and perpetuated by any agency portraying women as beautiful or ugly "things," is one of these issues. Sociology has made us aware of the fact that humans one faw mere likely to permetrate are far more likely to perpetrate a crime against a victim per-ceived as a "thing" rather than as an individual. This mind-set as an individual. This mind-set is known to be integral to murder

Nikki Craft is doing much more than "showing com-mendable distaste for por-nography." She has thoroughly examined the issue of violence against women. She has seen the causes and the effects. And she now employs the courage of her convictions to "grandstand" our attention, so that we too may open our eves. may open our eyes. As for allegations that Craft

As for allegations that Crant fights pornography with por-nography, I can only point out, as Nikki Craft did repeatedly. that she is not against healthy nudity or sexuality. She stands opposed to violence against men

Our society needs people who are not afraid to challenge our are not afraid to challenge our norms. However, it is extremely difficult to wrest the popular psyche from the insidious manipulations of Hollywood and Madison Avenue. Even the status quo alone can stymie progress. Radicals are nocessary.

Queen Elizabeth I. an un-married woman reigning in a man's world, governed England throughout the most peaceful. prosperous era it had known, sparking the Fratient revered as a courageous and noble man, was jailed for his challenges of the norms. King would have gone down in history merely as an insurgent if the more radical proclamations of Malcolm X hadn't skewed the popular perception of what was truly radical, lending a deserved aura of legitimacy to King's civil disobedience. Nikki Craft and other radical challengers of our unquestioned norms serve to keep our society from swallowing whole any concepts offered us. Those who appear to be too radical actually serve to pave the way for causes similar in kind, if not degree.

A FRIEND, fed-up with dorm life and ready to "branch out," recently went apartment hunting. She didn't have much time or much money, so when she spotted an ad for rented rooms going at $130 a month, all rooms going at $130 a month, all utilities included and just a stones throw from campus, she jumped at the opportunity to get one. She phoned the landlord, who said he would give her a town of the place who said he would give her a tour of the place. When she and four other students turned up at the ap-pointed place, the landlord took them to view the rooms. Before them to view the rooms. Before they started he warned them to "remember the rent and the location" before they made any judgements about the place. First they toured the lounge, where they saw a color television set which wouldn't turn on when the landlord tried turn on when the landlord tried it. The lounge also featured a pay phone — a pretty luxurious item, according to the landlord, who pointed out that "all in-coming calls are free."

THE BUILDING was divided into living quarters: one for men and one for women, with six residents in each quarter. He took the group to the men's quarters first, which had a kitchen, one bathroom and six bedrooms. According to one potential renter, when the landlord turned on the light in the kitchen a million roaches ran for cover in the oven. The bathroom had neither light nor windows, and a door couldn't be locked. that

The bathroom contained two Ine bathroom contained two basins, one shower and one toilet — all to be shared by six men. My friend asked the landlord why there was only one toilet since the ad had said there were two in each bathroom. He were two in each bathroom. He replied that the ad meant the bathrooms had two sinks, not two toilets, and repeated that she should consider the rent and the location before she complained about anything.

THE BEDROOMS weren't

were about two inches thick — and one tiny chest of drawers. "Yeah they're small, but great for people who want to study," replied the ever-ready landlord. "It's specially designed for studious people — can't get distracted in here. And just keep in mind, $130 a month! You can't beat that. Why, when I was in college, four of us shared a room this size, but You can't beat that. Why, when I was in college, four of us shared a room this size, but since you peopie want it so nice nowadays I'm giving you a whole one each."

Highly suspicious of what the women's rooms looked like, my friend asked to see them before she made a decision. The lan-dlord took the other students to the woment's quarters. When they got to the first bedroom door he banged on it and shouted "Landlord coming!" and barged in. The astonished apartment hunters, one woman and the four men behind her caught sight of a woman's naked leg before the occupant let out a shrill scream.

THE NEXT bedroom was empty. The occupant obviously had not known anyone was going to take a guided tour of her room that day, for there were several undergarments channe occupation to the several of the several strewn around the room

To cut a long story short, my friend did not take the room; she found another apartment. However, a lot of other broke, apartment-crazy, dorm-hating students did, the tragedy of which calls for a few morals: first, you get what you pay for; second, freedem has its price, and third, don't knock the dorms until you've lived off campus

We complain about dorms so We complain about dorms so much we often forget all the hassle and misery they save us. And if all "les miserables" currently residing on campus are howling "Baloney!" at this point, they should try apart-ment-hunting themselves, sometime sometime.

Nikki Craft's presentation focused on alternatives

We are writing in response to the editorial titled "Anti-porn activism" appearing in the Sept. 7 issue of the Daily

Sept. 7 issue of the Daily Egyptian. Increasing awareness of the violence against women ad-vocated by such magazines as Hustler does not create publicity for the magazine. Indeed Nikki Craft's actions in the Santa Cruz area resulted in the Santa Cruz area resulted in the magazine being removed from many stores where it had previously been sold. Awareness results in action; it is too easy for us to pretend it is too easy for us to pretend that this violence doesn't exist. None of us enjoyed seeing examples of this material; of us felt inspired to do many something about it. The "baring of breasts" by women who choose to take control of their own bodies is not pornographic. The culture that tries to deny women this right (a right men freely express) is. As Craft made clear

As Craft made clear numerous times during her presentation, nudity and sexuality are not pornography; objectification of women's bodies and violence objectification of women's bodies and violence against women designed to maintain the partriarchal disorder is porpartriarchal disorder is por-nography. I would ask men to consider their feelings were they prohibited from taking off their shirts on a hot summer their snirts on a hot summer day. Shirts versus no shirts is "powerlessness" is. We live in a partiarchal world. Men control all of the major institutions, the vast majority of economy and nearly all of "power" to make ethical, the political and religious decisions. This system and its main-tenance is dependent upon the corresponding "powerlessness" of women.

Rape, incest, pornography, traditionally-practiced religion, male standards of "beauty" and the corresponding en-couragement by corporations of consumerism are all tools of the patriarchy to keep women in a subordinate role. Women who "choose" to participate in "choose" to participate in beauty pageants are guilty of nothing more than internalizing the messages we've all been taught by the patriarchy since birth — that to be considered of worth as a women, one must be blond, thin, white, heterosexual, upper middle class and willing to forfeit the experience of anger.

Tactics don't promote pornography

I would like to address the I would like to address the "Anti-Porn activism" com-mentary which ran in Friday's edition in which the civil disobedience tactics of social activist Nikki Craft were discussed.

discussed. Your opinion regarding the Craft presentation strongly indicates that you possibly did not entirely grasp or feel the crimes sufficiently to contend that the responsive tactics overrode the message. Perhaps if your title had included the word "violent", you would have addressed the offenses in a more complete manner. more complete manner.

more complete manner. Do you really consider reactions such as writing on sidewalks with chalk and destroying violent pornographic magazines too much a retaliation for actions like the images of a naked woman being fed into a meat grinder, or a naked woman forcibly having her head dunked into a toilet bowl while a man stands over her, as on the cover of Hustler? And what about a popular rock group's (the Scorpions) album cover showing a naked 10-year-old gial with the brack bender bender old girl with her hands bound and g think genitals exposed? Do you think there may be any correlation between the latter and the many child-molestings that are occurring throughout the country?

the country? Another coincidence of this' nature is repeated with the San Francisco Hillside Strangler operating at the same time that Les Krim's "Stack of Wheat Murders" hotographs were published. It was only after many projected images such as these that Craft, who repeatedly espoused her anti-war background, offered the idea of women arming themselves as one possible solution. Your theory that Craft is "countering pornography with pornography" by advocating that women should be able to go topless sadly confirms that you failed to understand the concept. By considering the notion absurd, you exemplify how indelibly ingrained the image is Women's chests are thereby defined in a sexual context only and can therefore be easily used in a capitalistic manner.

I wonder how much, if any, profit-making pornography exists in the African Yorba or Nupe cultures where both sexes Aupe cultures where both sexes are traditionally unclad from the waist up. Why has evolution in our culture been so one-sided? When just 60 years ago, both sexes had to be covered from the neck to the ankles on a rubble becach why in it that public beach, why is it that today only men can enjoy the freedom of a bare chest while Irredom of a bare chest while subathing? It's ironic that after a certain point, Craft and her her group could no longer get arrested for their bare-chested exhibitions because there was no law which they were violating. What does this tell you? you?

Perhaps certain men would be a bit more compassionate if they could more fully identify with the offenses at hand. If you are a man, imagine yourself naked, being fed into a gigantic meat grinder or having your sexual organ rated in a contestlike situation. · I understand that a certain amount of leeway is necessary as students are forming opinions and learning a craft.

However, this allowance does not excuse blatant ignorance and I do not commend an and 1 00 not commend an editorial faculty that would permit such an opinion to represent their supposedly "educated" point of view. Cynthia Cox, Graduate Student,

Editorial missed Craft's point of re-educating the misinformed

Apparently, no matter how articulate, well-substantiated, and carefully delivered a presentation may be, some people still won't understand it. The author of last Frideric The author of last Friday's editorial "Anti-porn activism" seems to have missed every point made by Nikki Craft in her lecture on pornography and the objectification of wome Perhaps he was assigned attend the event and sle women. slept through it; perhaps he is simply

The writer unfairly compares The writer untairiy comparese Craft's advocacy of the right of women to go topless with the violent and misogynous ob-scenity of Hustler magazine, accusing Craft of "countering Descenter with norpornography with por-nography." This vacuous ac-cusation comes from one who presumably witnessed Crafts' clearly and otten stated position that nudity-sexuality and pornography are not the same thing. Her advocacy of toplessness was part of a much larger issue regarding the objectification of women by corporations that profit from that practice, and it was not merely the 'eve was not merely the "eye grabbing grandstand technique" he mistook it to be. In another paragraph, the writer accuses Craft of "creating publicity for magazines such as Hustler." Apparently the distinction Letween educating and publicizing is too subtle for him. Calling the public's attention to a problem with the hope of stimulating appropriate action is not the same as creating publicity for those publications. Ms. Craft showed those slides with the intention of educating. People who do not read such publications may likely be unaware of how serious the problem of pornography is. I would guess that her reason for showing so many slides was an attempt to arouse whatever remnant of conscience might veixer in the less sensitive viewer, a strategy clearly wasted on the writer. In her discussion of beauty pageants, Craft emphasized that as long as women do not have the same economic opnave the same economic op-portunities as men they cannot be considered to be freely exercising a choice, yet your writer insists that beauty contests are not exploitive. I want to commend SIU-C for

I want to commend SIU-C for inviting Craft to speak. It is disheartening to witness a journalist so unwilling to listen. Clearly, he came with preconceptions and left with his ignorance integet. It is not preconceptions and left with his ignorance intact. It is con-ceivable that last Friday's editorial could have been written by someone who did not attend the lecture.

Nikki Craft is a woman of Nikki Craft is a woman of enormous courage and con-viction who devotes a lot of energy to the effort of re-educating the misinformed. It is sad to see evidence of that dedication lost on someone so obviously needy as the writer of that slovenly, irresponsible editorial. - Janell Pierce,

Junior, English.

Craft's message was inspirational

Last Friday's editorial, "Anti-

Last Friday's editorial, "Anti-porn activism" seriously misrepresents and misin-terprets Nikki Craft's presentation of Sept. 4. Craft is not simply "creating publicity" for Hustler. The attention given Hustler is negative publicity. Would the editor recommend silence in response to the evils of society in order to avoid "publicity"? A in order to avoid "publicity"? A journalist should be aware of the importance of protest, not only in effecting change, but in empowering the victims of Craft does not promote violence against men. Her actions have consisted of presenting words and images which reveal the ways in which men demean women and permen demean women and per-She did suggest that women consider learning to handle guns, in self-defense, because men continue to rape and murder women every day

The editorialist clearly did not grasp Craft's argument about the relationship between nudity the relationship between nudity and pornography. Craft believes that prohibitions against nudity in situations in which it is not inappropriate, for example, at beaches, inhibits the development of healthy attitudes toward our bodies. This helps perpetuate the ob-jectification of women, which is the basis of pornography. The editorialist also missed Craft's point about beauty

The editorialist also missed Craft's point about beauty pageants. The problem is that such affairs belittle women's accomplishments and reward their physical attributes. Beauty pageants are also harmful because they promote one type of beauty to the extent that many women learn to feel inferior and unlovable because they cannot fit into that mold. they cannot fit into that mold.

Worse, winners of such pageants are obliged to promote pageants are obliged to promote sponsors' products in such a way that they themselves come to be viewed as products to be purchased, used up and discarded.

The editorialist's final paragraph belittles Craft by patting her on the head: "it's commendable to show distaste pornography and sexual ence..." Pornography may for violence..." Pornography and sexual violence..." Pornography may debatably be a matter of "taste," but sexual violence is criminal. Craft believes the two criminal. Craft believes the two are intertwined and she does not merely show "distaste" for them. She is fighting effectively with wit, intelligence and passion. Most of us should be ashamed for not working more actively for the causes in which we believe Nikki Craft was an the actively for the causes in which tent we believe. Writer says politicians linked to Mafia

By Belinda Edmondson Staff Writer

The Reagan administration's criminal investigation organizations are "a facade," and some of the nation's leading organizations are "a facade," and some of the nation's leading public figures in the past and present have been connected with the Mafia, says Dan Moldea, investigative reporter and self-proclaimed "goon squad expert." Moldea, a former reporter for The Detroit Free Press, The London Observer and The Washington Post, gave a lecture Tuesday night in the Student Center on government links with the Mafia, titled "Organized Crime in America." Moldea painted a sordid picture of political chicanery, sex and violence in the up-permost rungs of American society. Among the people Moldea said had Mafia con-nections were former President Pichord Niem and Ponshlicer Moldea said had Malia con-nections were former President Richard Nixon and Republican Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, who is the current head of the Reagan-Bush re-election campaign. Moldea also ascribed the deaths of former President Kennedy and his brother Robert to their work against the Mafia.

MOLDEA TOLD the small audience that Nixon had a career-long relationship with the Mafia, saying that Nixon's 1968 presidential campaign received $1 million in con-tributions from Mafia sources. Sen. Laxait has also been financed by the Mafia in some of his private business ventures, Moldea says, and has openly admitted to being friendly with a prominent Mafia boss.

MOLDEA SAID that the CIA cooperated with the Mafia in 1961 to try to assassinate Cuban leader Fidel Castro. According to him, former Cuban leader Batista was hand-in-glove with Mafia bosses, and had invested huge sums of money in drug, gambling and prostitution on the island. Moldea said that after the

However, he said, there is a good reason for it. Right-wing positions are generally in line with Mafia interests, while support for civil liberties legislation ensures protection against judicial snooping into Mafia affairs.

BASICALLY, the Mafia is "BASICALLY, the Maria is playing one party against another." he said. The Maria is very concerned about civil liberties, Moldea said. "I have sat for hours listening to Mafia guys bitching about how the government violates their civil rights.

In addition to corrupting the political system, Moldea says the Mafia has infiltrated professional football.

Despite James' offer of a $50 reward, there were no reported sightings of Penny during her absence. "We've received a number of different calls, mostly from parents and mothers that were afraid to let their children go out to play." said Olney police disnatcher Rob Akes afraid to let their children go out to play." said Olney police dispatcher Rob Akes. "We had some kids call in that it was out in a tree eating squirrels and another that it was attacking a dog." Akes said. "Neither of them was true." true.

James said he'd heard some threats to kill the snake on sight, but many people were sympathetic

"We've gotten a lot of sad letters and phone calls from people really concerned," he said. "Folks you'd never

By Tom Vint Of the Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) -University of Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said Tuesday he fully expects his Cornhuskers, who moved to the top of The Acsociated Press college football rankings, to weather the storm of media attention that will follow that will follow. Osborne and the Cornhuskers

Osborne and the Cornhuskers learned last year the unsettling effect that media attention can have on a No. 1-ranked team. Nebraska carried the AP's No. 1 ranking throughout the season — until the Orange Bowl upset at the hands of No. 2-ranked Miami — and had to schedule regular weekly news con-ferences for star players and the coach. the coach. a little more

There's Intere's a little more distraction that goes along with it." Osborne said. "A lot of people want interviews because of the No. 1 rating, not so much because of an interest in Nebraska."
