Trustees to officially abolish Human Resources

Parking, physics also on Board agenda

By James J. Black

The Board of Trustees is expected to abolish the College of Human Resources and reallocate the college's programs and personnel at its monthly meeting Thursday in the Student Center.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit

has recommended to the board that the bachelor's and master's degree programs in administration of justice and the minor in Black American Studies be moved to the College of Liberal Arts.

The chancellor's recommendation also would bring the bachelor's and master's degree programs in social work under the administration of the vice president for academic affairs and research. The budget and personnel of the social work program would become the responsibility of the associate vice president for academic affairs and

State law to increase vaccinations

Incoming students required to show proof of immunization

Beginning this semester, all ning freshmen and transfer students will need to have their immunizations up to date, according to a new state law.

The measles immunization has to be a live virus vaccination, administered on or after a persons first birthday. If the vaccine was given prior to 1968, students must have medical proof that the immunization was with a live virus, Miesner said

Prior to 1968, live virus measle vaccinations were hard to come by, slic said. Most likely, students who received the immunization before

International students need shot records

By Irene Op!oh Staff Writer

International students who were not informed about a new state vaccination law before arriving in the United States must be immu-nized again if they do not obtain their records, international student advisor Diane Wissinger said.

The law, which went into effect July 1, requires all incoming students to provide proof of immu-nizations for diphtheria-tetanus, measles, mumps and rubella.

New foreign students were noti fied as soon as International Programs and Services received news about the law, but many students could not be reached b they left their homelands, Wissinger said.

Though new students must send home for records this semester, future new students will be alerted before arriving, Carla Coppi, assistant director of International Programs and Services, said.

"Many international students don t have the same kind of records that they do here (in the U.S.), and foreign students may have more trouble retrieving

State: Coke ignores bill for environmental safety

By Jackie Spinner Staff Writer

Coca Cola USA is conti. uing to market 16-ounce plastic soda bot-tles in Illinois despite an Illinois House of Representative's resolution in June that asked the beverage company not to market the bottles.

Rep. Peg Breslin, D-Ottawa, sponsored the bill, which condemned Coke's introduction of 16-ounce polyethylene trephthalat bot-

Breslin said the purpose of the bill was to help relieve pressures on landfills and make the state government and consumer aware of Coke's use of the plastic.

"Coke knew it was doing some thing environmentally unfriendly and we don't intend to patronize them until they make the change," she said.

But the Coca Cola vice president of governmental affairs for Chicago bottling, from where the bottles are being marketed, said Coke "just wanted to come out with plastic bottles like everybody

Don Nash said although the plastic bottles did start out to be a problem, they are now recycled for the Chicago Park District.

"We are aware of the problem. but we only represent two percent of the landfill simution," Nash said. He said the resolution was a

Illinois takes border dispute to court

By Lisa Miller Staff Writer

Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan attempted to end the century-old border dispute between Illinois and Kentucky by filing a motion by asking a court to solve the problem.

The controversy involves the exact location of the boundary. Kentucky maintains that its border encloses the entire Ohio river, right up to the Illinois shoreline.

Hartigan said the border location should be based on the low water mark of 1792, the year Kentuck officially became a state. If Illinois' claim holds true, the bor-der would be about 100 feet from Hartigan cited examples of simi

About 10,000 refugees flee from Communist country

PASSAU, West Germany (UPI) — Weary but exhilarated East Germans poured into West Germany via Hungary Tuesday in the second day of a massive refugee migration — the largest exodus since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961. The stream of refugees fend from more than 400 wall was out in 1901. The stream of retugees rend from more than 400 an hour to just a few dozen by evening but West Germany was bracing for the arrival of thousands more, escaping a hardline communist country that some said drained them of hope. Officials estimate that more than 10,000 had arrived in West Germany as early as Tuesday. "It can't believe it worked out," one refugee said, driving his Soviet-made automobile.

The scheduled speakers for the program are Somit and William R. Monat, former president of Northern Illinois University and former chancellor of the Illinois Board of Regents.

"Monat has the experience of being both a university president and a state chancellor and while ve both agree there should be a change in the system, we may not agree on what specific changes should be enacted," Somit said.

The forum is the first in a series of discussions the college has planned for the fall. It will explore alternatives to the current public university system in Illinois, which does not utilize the resources available to their fullest potential, Somit

"With the system we (in Illinois) have now, the different boards spend as much time fighting amongst themselves as they do working for the good of the univer-sities they represent. This is not good for the quality of education in this state," he said.

Litigation begun to save burial site

By Tim Crosby

After nearly three years of nego-tiations between the state and a Northern Illinois housing develop-er, the fate of an ancient Indian village on the Illinois River will be decided by a jury.

A suit was filed last week at the Circuit Court of LaSalle County to condemn the land that The andings Development Ltd. Partnership, a real estate developer based in Ottawa, purchased in 1986. The suit was filed on behalf of the state by special assistant Attorney General Richard Attorney General Richard Redmond after the site's water resources permit was granted. The permit had held up the construction of the proposed housing develop-ment since April

The proposed 177-unit development, which would be located on the Illinois River near Ottawa, has met with opposition both from the state and Native-American groups because a historic Indian village once stood there.

The importance of the site is multifaceted from an archaeologi-cal standpoint," Brian Butler, asso-ciate director of the University's center for archaeological ir vestiga-tions, said. "It is one of the few sites in Illinois that we can equate with a known Indian group."

The state and The Landings negotiated nearly three years in an attempt to find an alternative site. In September 1988, the state's offer to buy the site for $404,000 was rejected by The Landings as being unrealistic. In August 1989, the state's offer of $990,000 was also turned down

The refusal of the offers left us no choice but to pursue a legal means of stopping construction," Marygael Cullen, of the Illinois listoric Preservation Agency, said. Doral Denman, one of the developers with The Landings, said the company's lawyer had requested to contact The Landings lawyer

The area was designated the nmerman site by archaeologists from the University of Chicago during early excavations in 1947. As many as 20,000 Indians of the Illini Confederacy were reported to be living there in 1683 by the French explorer LaSalle.

"Many graves were found during the early excavations," Cullen said.

"It means different things to different people. Some Indians don't mind the sites being excavated as long as human remains are reburied."

-Brian Butler

"If you consider the number of ans known to have lived in area, there logically would be many graves.

The issue of grave desecration is one that Terry Warren, founder of the Society Against Grave Exploitation, is concerned with.
Warren, himself a Native-

American, said if the development goes through it will be the single largest desecration of Native-American graves ever.

"Indians see these places as a link to there culture and past," he explained, adding that scientists tend to see them as opportunities to learn.

"It means different things to dif-ferent people. Some Indians don't mind the sites being excavated as long as human remains are reburied. Other groups don't even want that," Butler said.

Bar entry age of 21 forgets the students

THE CITY of Carbondale is on a roll concerning alcohol and its next throw of the dice could end up a two and a one.

Put those together and it could mean the new entry age to a bar will be 21. Currently, the age to get into most bars in Carbondale is 18, and although we acknowledge that there is a problem with minors drinking, we do not advocate changing the entry age to 21.

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission had a panel of staff members study the ways to curb underage drinking. The result was a report that suggested raising the bar entry age to either 21 or 19. The report stated that underaged drinking in Carbondale was a serious problem and "raising the entry age deserves serious consideration." valid consideration, but so many people and economic enterprises will be affected by this that not only should the problem of the underaged drinkers be weighed but also what solutions can be implemented that will benefit those being turned away from the bars.

FIRST OF all, if the age goes to 21, a large part of the University body will be influenced by the consequences. The city cannot change this law without providing alternative forms of entertainment. And we are not talking about hiring a family circus such as the one the city has planned for this year: Halloween. Many students that are between 18 and 21 do not get their kicks from watching Bozo the Clown. Real and fun opportunities need to be given to these underaged students that will not only keep them happy but provide a source of recreation and socialization. This may mean bringing in new bars, such as juice bars, that will provide the arena that is conducive to meeting new people and to having fun. This is expensive and may take some time to implement and should be on the top of the priority list if the city seriously plans to change the entry age.

Another direct response to the change could be an increase in keg parties. Let's face it, if students want to consume alcohol they will, regardless of the law. Those underaged will realize their plight at the bars and turn to a party in order to get a "buzz." Alcohol is a part of the college lifestyle and restrictions or making the product harder to obtain may only make it that more desirable. Also, with the market being increased many overaged entrepreneurs may see some money to be made in giving the consumer what they want. You figure at two bucks a cup at a keg party, entertaining 200 people — which is not unrealistic -- there would be profit for a college kid.

Fake I.D.s are another problem that that city will face if the entry age is changed to 21. There are obviously many already floating around from an underaged person's best friend or an older brother or sister. Changing the age will make those underaged all that more determined, and also making the hunt for fake I.D.s all that more interesting. As stated early, where there is a will there is a way.

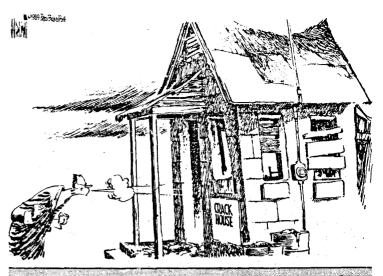

THIS LAW, if adopted, will affect bars within the Carbondale city limits. Therefore, bars that exist outside of the limits are exempt. Some underaged students may resort to going to these bars where they can legally get in then try to get served. If they are successful, not only will they be drinking but they will also later be driving. And not only will they be driving, but they will be driving longer distances. Increased drinking and driving is a very large debt to pay if raising the entry age to 21 is approved.

One alternative that we can offer to the proposal is to start giving out plastic bracelets instead of a stamp that can be easily wiped off or transferred. If you have ever gone on a spring break you will brow that many of the bars in Florida give different colored bracelets to those of different ages. For instance, underaged patrons would get a white bracelet and overaged would get blue. The nly way that they will come off is if they are broken. Therefore, the bracelets could not be easily transferred to an underaged patron from a overaged patron. This would be better than prohibiting the underaged students from the catablishments, and it would also provide an easier method for catching underaged drinkers.

We would like the city to use discretion when deciding whether their proposal will be followed through or not and to think not only of the city and what it needs but to also consider the student. Raising the entry age into bars could turn out to be very expensive and very wrong. Page 4, Daily Egyptian, September 13, 1989

'Hidden meaning' expressed in Viewpoint

Carbondale issued a proclamation entitled "Saluki Spirit Days" whose intent should be obvious. whose mient should be obvious. However, in the September 12 Viewpoint, Ms. Jeanne Bickler seemed to think the hidden meaning of the proclamation was to premote drinking on campus.

Now that's creative interpretation! Perhaps Ms.

Bickler would have been happier had the title read "Saluki No-Spirit Day," but I don't think that would get the desired result.

There is nothing in this proclamation that promotes alcohol or drinking on campus. Had Ms. Bickler bothered to check with the city as to its intent, she would have discovered that Mayor Dillard did not write the proclamation. I did I the proclamation - I did. I would have been happy to discuss her misconceptions with her.

Surely Ms. Bickler can find something more constructive to complain about besides a simple proclamation which does nothing but try to promote Saluki athletics and community events.

The city of Carbondale has taken away our Halloween. One victory for them. Now you propose to take away the opportunities of those under 21 to find things to do. Not all students under the legal drinking age go to the bars to get drunk. Some go to the bars to socialize and meet new people that they would not ordinarily meet during school hours.

Some of the area bars offer more than just alcohol. Checkers offers dancing, the Hangar 9 and Gatsby's offers live music and Stix offers the opportunity to play billiards. By raising the bar entry age to 21 you are not only hurting area businesses but also the students who are not old enough to drink, yet are looking for something to do outside of

By changing the limit you are bound to drive off prospective students who will view the city of Carbondale as a "Big Brother," watching every move they make and taking away their social lives.

The largest part of the revenue in Carbondale comes from the in Carbondare comes from the students, and by cutting students off from local bars not only will these establishments suffer but so will the community.

Even if the age limit is hanged, some students will find changed, some students will find ways to get around the ruling

Some students do abuse the privilege by illegal drinking, but I think you should let the students decide what's best for themselves. ## Drugs are poisonous in large doses; NORML poses thoughtful questions

I was fascinated with the contrast displayed in the two contrast displayed in the two front page stories in Friday's DE concerning drugs. One dealt with the president's anti-drug plan and the other with the re-establishment of NORML on

In your second story, Kristen Bonde suggests that the word "drug" needs to be defined. Please let's not gloss over this. It's a very important point.

My pocket Webster says that a drug is "any substance used as or in a medicine" or "a narcotic, hallucinogen, etc." A narcotic is "a drug... used to relieve pain and induce sleep" and a hallucinogen is "drug or other substance that produces hallucinations."

What this seems to tell me is that there is a lot of ove.iap and confusion in the use of these confusion in the use of these terms. A drug can be used as a medicine and a medicine can be used as a drug.

A narcotic is a drug or a medicine that dulls our pain or puts us to sleep and a hallucinogen shows us things that aren't really there (or are they?) but may or may not be a drug.

Andrew Weil, author of "The Natural Mind, From Chocolate to Morphine" and "Health and Healing" is probably one of the most enlightened and unbiased drug researchers around.

drug researchers around

I had an occasion recently to ask him for his working definition of a drug. I didn't get one. He looks at the word from its historical pharmacological uses and avoids useless political distinctions between legal and illegal. He points out that "the only difference between a drug and a poison is dose. All drugs become poison is dose. All drugs become poisons in high enough doses, and many poisons become useful drugs in low enough doses."

NO?ML is an organization that has been around in some form or another for almost 20 years. They have consistently posed thoughtful questions that challenge the mindless reasoning process of politicians and moralists.

Their goal is to reform antiquated drug laws, specifically those involving marijuana. I wish them a short and prosperous future. — David Colombo, Carbondale resident.

America shouldn't surrender to legalizing drugs As a foreign student from Taiwan, I kept reminding myself that this is not my business, but the Colombian of that this is not my business, but the Colombian of that? No, there is none but the bomb and arson attacks? Again,

As a foreign student from Taiwan, I kept reminding myself that this is not my business, but after reading Polkinghorne's letter in the Sept. 8 DE, I really wanted to say something.

soldiers to light the enemy and no funds to support the army."

The Chinese tried to resist the British imperialism, but by arousing a war with Britain and being defeated later, the declining empire could stop nothing.

Now, some Americans believe the best you can do to the drug problem is to surrender to it.

Namely, to legalize it. Where is your enemy who forces you to do that? No, there is none but the weakness of the people to resist the drugs. I could not believe it!

You said that the demand for the death people is a call for the death penalty is a call for mass executions. Well, it is a matter of technical difficulties that can be adjusted; nobody says that can be adjusted; nobody says you have to kill all the drug pushers. Moreover, even if it is proved there is a better way to deal with drugs without imposing a death penalty, that is beside the point. What you are talking about is legalization of drugs, right? You said that a stronger law enforcement will lead to more violence as a result of the you called the efforts to admonish people from using drugs is to "preach a mutant strain of puritan morality." You don't know what you are talking about. You want America to about. You want America to accept drugs, let's face it, because you believe the people are poisoned to the degree that no effort could ever save them and only legalizing drugs can make the situation better. I don't think so, and I believe most Americans do not think so either.

If General Lin were still living today and knowing what is bappening in this superpower nation, he would have found some consolation. — Te-li Huang, sophomore in history,

DE afraid to take stand against administration

On most university campuses the student newspaper serves the useful function of "ragging" the administration. Not here on the administration. From most on amplantation.

I sent a letter criticizing the awarding of a reserved parking space in the library lot to one of our "elite." I forecast that more such privileged spaces would be awarded.

Sure enough, we learn now from a very pro-administration front-page story that the award is being extended — but my critical letter was not printed.

Last year or the year before I sent a letter questioning the wisdom of the annual "telefund" by which we are told to call up former students and beg for money. It also was not printed:

Last year the administration was looking into our str-lent mail room and lounge and our tiny windowless language lab for badly neesed classroom space. When I pointed out the existence of a former large classroom, now used for storage, and other space taken out of classroom use in the north end of Faner, I was told to "shut up." shut up.

"shut up."

If even the student newspaper will not provide a forum for dissent, where can we turn? To our various constituent bodies, such as the Liberal Arts Council and Faculty Senate? They are completely under administrative completely under administrative control: look at their operating papers sometime or attend a neeting or two.

If the DE is afraid to take stands, why not at least do what the national "Yuppie" paper does: run side by side opinions on controversial issues by other than paper staff.

More and more we are subjected to administrative excesses and more and more the catlets for even criticizing are closed to us.

University Honors Program needs visibility — director

By Carrie Pomeroy Staff Writer

Frederick Williams said his main goal for this year is to get the word out on campus about the University Honors Program.

Williams, a classics professor who has served as the program's director since August 1987, said he wants more students to find out about the program early in their college careers in order to take full advantage of its benefits.

"The principle task we have is to make the program visible. Many people aren't sure what the honors program is," he said.

"(The program) is a kind of reward for dedicated students," Williams said.

Williams said he plans on making the program more visible this year by writing letters to all eligible students at the end of each semester and by maintaining close contact with academic advisers in every department.

Williams said the only requirement for entry into the program is a 3.25 cumulative grade point average for continuing students or an ACT score in the 95th percentile or higher for entering fresh-

The only entry requirement for the program is a 3.25 cumulative grade point average.

Williams said the program, which currently enrolls between 450 and 500 students from every college on campus, "is an elite, but it's not elitist."

He said honors students benefit from being able to take honors seminars. The seminars are limited to 15 honors students and are taught by "outstanding faculty," Williams said. The courses, which are often interdisciplinary, can be substituted for general education classes, Williams said.

"These classes go beyond traditional disciplines," Williams said.

Nine honors courses are being offered this fall and 14 will be offered this spring, Williams said.

He encouraged all eligible students to call the program at 453-2824 or to visit the program's office at Faner 2427.

U.S. illiteracy of science is lecture topic

Jon D. Miller, a nationally known political scientist specializing in science literacy, will visit the campus to talk about how ignorance of science affects society.

His free, public lecture, "Can Democracy Survive With Science Illiteracy?", begins at 4 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 21 in Morris Library auditorium.

As director of the Public Opinion Laboratory at Northern Illinois University, Miller recently issued results of a poll showing that a large percentage of young adults believe the sun revolves around the Earth. They also do not know if the sun rises in the east or in the west.

Miller is now working on a long-term study of the development of inerest and competence in science and mathematics among American middle school and high school students.

The author of "Citizenship in an Age of Science" and "The American People and Science Policy," Miller will cover science literacy in the United States in his next book.

His visit to the University is sponsored by Sigma Xi, a national research society.

Calipre Stage season to open Friday night

By Doug Toole

į

The Calipre Stage season opens at 8 p.m. Friday with a mix of individual acts in the Graduate Performance Hour.

Marion Kleinau, director of the Calipre Stage, said the performance hour will feature a series of graduate students performing individual acts. Admission is free.

Kleinau said the Calipre Stage focuses on original, student-written scripts and tends to include non-traditional theater techniques like narratives and direct speaking to the audience.

"Over the years Calipre has established a reputation for the unusual, but we're also known for our high-quality productions." Kleinau said.

She said the majority of the Calipre's shows are written by performance studies majors and directed and performed by students. She said that although she doesn't look for any particular theme or style, she does prefer to do experimental shows.

"You won't find this kind of performance anywhere else in Carbondale, or even in this part of the state." Kleinau said.

In addition to the Graduate Performance Hour, this semester the Calipre Stage will show "Out of Me We Speak" about character development on stage, "Writing Home" which uses poetry and prose in performance and "Re-Membering — An Evening of Men's Story" which uses a variety of techniques to talk about masculinity.

The Calipre Stage is located on the second floor of the north end of the Communications Building. The ticket office is in Room 2006, the Speech Communications Department.

Kleinau said the box office is open from 1 to 4 p.m. the week of the performance. Tickets are also available by phone at 453-1877. She said all performances start at 8 p.m. and sea*on tickets are available for $12.

Kleinau said there won't be a children's production this year because no scripts were submitted, but overall she is very happy with the schedule for the year.

"If a person likes theater, they will like the Calipre season." she said.

Official's conduct under investigation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House ethics committee voted Tuesday to review the conduct of Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., who has acknowledged paying a male prostitute for sex and then hiring him with personal funds.

Committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., also announced after a two-hour private meeting that panel member Chester Atkins, D-Mass., had disqualified himself from the Frank proceedings. Another Democratic representative, to be selected by Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., will replace Atkins on the case.

At a news conference Aug. 25, Frank, 49, one of two publicly homosexual members of Congress, confirmed reports that he paid prostitute Stephen Gobie $80 for sex in 1985. He said he then hired Gobie as his personal assistant, paying the aide at an annual 20,000 for about a year and a half from personal funds.

Frank said he fired Gobie in 1987 when he discovered Gobie was using his congressional apartment for prostitution. Before their relationship, Gobie had been convicted of cocaine possession, oral sodomy and production of obscene items involving a juvenile girl. Frank said he had hoped to reform Gobie

The ethics committee approved a resolution Tuesday saying it "is aware of assertions relating to the conduct of Rep. Barney Frank in connection with his employment of a personal assistant... (and) has determined that the matters merit further incultur. further inquiry.

Frank had headed off demands from Republicans for an ethics inquiry by requesting the review himself. In a statement Tuesday he said, "I welcome the decision by the House committee on Standards of Official Conduct to accept my request. ... This matter is now before the proper forum. ## USS lowa report questions cause of explosion

Investigation finds no evidence of bomb that Navy says gunner's mate planted

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A review of Navy documents in the USS iowa investigation show there is no evidence a detonator existed, and the report raises: questions about the official caracision that a gunner's mate probably sparked a huge explosion aboard the ship to kill himself.

At the same time, the documents provide grisly details of the devastation left by the fireball in the battleship's No. 2 gun turret April 19, a blast that instantly killed 47 sailors.

-- JSS lowa sailor

The Navy announced Thursday its investigators had ruled out accidental detonation as the cause of the explosion and said Petty Officer Clayton Hartwig, 24, probably set off the blast intentionally.

The Navy theory is that a despondent Hartwig, the gun captain, secretly put a homemade detonator rather than the normal cleaning patch between the powder charges that were being ranmed into the barrel behind the 16-9 inch shell during training exercises in the Atlantic Ocean.

But documents subsequently studied in the Navy's 1,100-page report raise more questions than answers, and testimony about Hartwig's alleged talk of suicide and his supposed "troubled" state of mind is questionable.

of mind is questionable.

Perhaps most damning to the Navy's case is that there is no evidence that a detonator ever existed, "foreign elements" found in the gun barrel could not be determined by laboratory tests to come from a detonator.

Suspicion also was raised whether such substances could have been introduced to the gun barrel later - when sailors had to use drilling equipment to remove the 16-inch shell from the barrel.

Although Hartwig owned munitions books, no material for making detonators was found in his locker. Attempts also were unsuccessful to track whether he ever bought such equipment from electronic stores around his base in Norfolk, Va.

Only 11 sailors in the bottom level of the steel turret survived, and one told Navy investigators "that sometime after the explosion, he discussed what had happened with (name deleted) and (name deleted). According to (deleted), they all recalled a very strong smell of powder prior to the explosion."

Another unidentified sailor

"recalled just prior to the explosion he smelled gun powder. He found this to be unusual in that on other occasions that the Iowa's were fired he has never smelled gun powder," investigators wrote.

The Navy had no explanation but said it conducted 20,000 tests and found the powder to be stable and extremely difficult to ignite outside of the normal procedure. It eliminated frictior and "over ramming" of the powder.

Perhaps most damming to the Navy's case is that there is no evidence that a detorutor ever existed.

None of the 11 survivors from the powder magazines in the bottom of the turret reported anything unusual until, just before the blast, they heard over their headphones from the gun rooms above: "We've got a problem; we're not ready yet. We're not ready. Oh my - "

The explosion in the center gun room created a fireball that Navy officials said reached temperatures of 2,500 to 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

One of the first sailors to enter the gun rooms said, "It appeared the dead men in (the) left and right gun were trying to get out in that they were four to five feet from their assigned position and were facing the door or other escape routes . . . the center gun room was only full of body pieces."

As for Hartwig, "the only thing left of him was his boots melted on the deck," the sailor told investigators.

While those in the center gun room died from the blast uself, as many as 30 of the others died from the flash and heat that burned them and deprived them of oxygen. Many still had their hands in a "shielding position" in front of their faces, Navy medical experts said.

Unable to find an accidental cause for the explosion, the Navy determined by process of elimination that it was deliberately setand the person who would be in the right position and would know how to do it was Hartwig.

Most of the 318 people interviewed by the Navy were asked about Hartwig, his personality, whether he was homosexual and whether he ever indicated a desire to commit suicide.

Many described Hartwig as a loner and shy and said there were many rumors aboard the ship that he was homosexual and that he endured teasing from other sailors. But no one testified that Hartwig was angry at the crew or was so frustrated that he openly spoke of ending his life.

One sailor who testified Hartwig spoke to him about suicide, of blowing up the ship, also said he rejected Har,wig's alleged homosexual advances the night before the blast. But the same sailor later recanted several key parts of his testimony, including talk about a homosexual proposition.

In a letter Hartwig wrote to a woman Aprii 3, he gave no indication of frustration and spoke enthusiastically of his pending transfer to London and his plans to see his lowa shipmates off from Norfolk in time.

The Navy depicted Hartwig as a "troubled" loner, but the letter Hartwig wrote a friend gave no indication.

"I'm planning of staying here to watch the ship pull out on 7 June for, their 6-month cruise to the Med," Hartwig wrote. "I'll probably never see these guys on the ship again, so I want to wave good-bye.

"You probably think that's pretty stupid. But I've spent three years of my life on this ship and I've gone all over the world and faced a lot of things and gone through a lot with the guys on her. I'm sure you understand."

It was not exactly the picture the Navy painted of a "troubled" loner willing to kill dozens or more of the shipmates in an explosive suicide.

EPA: Acid rain costs divided fairly by state

WASHINGTON (UPI) — EPA Administrator William Reilly disputed claims Tuesday that nine Midwest and Southern states would pay more than their fair share for acid rain control under President Bush's clean-air bill.

Reilly, fighting congressional proposals to set up a cost-sharing scheme to spread costs of acid rain control evenly nationwide, told a House subcommittee the nine states will pay the most for emission reduction, but only because they are hosts to the biggest polluters.

EPA Administrator William Reilly said the nine states in question will not pay 77 percent of cleanup costs, but their fair share of 50 percent.

The Environmental Pro-tection Agency chief said those states - Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Georgia, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Missouri - currently enjoy some of the lowest power rates in the country, mostly because utilities there have spent little on emission controls.

Utilities in those nine states are considered the major contributors to acid rain damage in the Northeast and Canada because they burn large amounts of cheaper, high-sulfur Appalachian coal in their power plants. The resulting sulfur dioxide emissions are one of the key pollutants causing acid ran.

Reilly acknowledged the nine heavily polluting states face the biggest electricity rate hikes under Bush's proposal to reduce sulfur dioxide enrictions by 10 million toos nationwide.

However, he said even with rate hikes ranging up to 10 percent, most power customers in those electric Page 10, Daily Egypti. in September 13, 1989 states would still have lower electric bills than most other Americans.

"Even after this (Bush's) bill passes, the hardest-hit states will be paying less for electricity than the national average," Reilly told the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy and power.

For example, Reilly said EPA analyses showed that, under Bush's bill, average statewide rate increases for Ohio, West Virginia and Missouri could exceed 4 percent by the year 2000, while New York, Connecticut and New Jersey consumers face 1 percent rate increases

Despite the lower increases, Reilly said residents of the three Norrtheast states still would be paying more for electricity tham people in West Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio because Northeast power rates already are far above the national average.

Reilly disputed cost estimates put forward by Midwest congressmen suggesting that the nine states will shoulder 77 percent of the cleanup costs, even though they are responsible for only half of U.S. sulfur dioxide emissions.

Reilly said his agency's analyses concluded that the nine states would pay for 50 percent of Bush's cleanup plan - exactly their share of the acid rain problem. Subcommittee Chairman Rep.

Subcommittee Chairman Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., challenged the EPA's analyses, saying they were overly optimistic about the ability of utilities to hold down emission control costs.

"I think there is a tendency to underestimate the cost," Sharp told Reilly. "I think we are being asked to do more than our share."

Sharp and other Midwes-tern congressmen are pushing legislation that would level out acid rain control costs nationwide so all Americans would pay about the same amount. These proposals would impose a nationwide fee on electricity bills.

SIU-C professor researches genetic manipulation of fish

By Tony Mancuso

Area fish farmers could soon face reduced production expanses according to zoology professor James Seeb, who believes genetic manipulation will create these con-

Seeb said "designer fish" will soon help fish farmers reduce expenses by either one of two processes: triploidization or gynogen-

Seeb is hoping these practices, already utilized on the West Coast for rainbow trout, will become use-ful in the Midwest.

He is in the midst of a six-year research project involving rainbow trout, pacific salmon, sunfish, yel-low perch, and walleye. See t and his two graduate assistants, Gary Miller and Joe Crowner, have been working at SIU-C for a year

Their research is funded by a Sea Grant from the University of Washington, Seeb's former school, and SIU-C.

Triploidization, also known as triploid sterilization, is the process of making a fish unable to reproduce. This can be done by applying heat shock to a newly formed fish

If fertilized eggs are exposed to warm water, the embryos will become sterile. When the embryos become developed fish, all food the fish take in will be digested for the purpose of growth - not develpment of gametes. Seeb said, "All fish tend to lose energy and nutrients intended for growth production to reproduction at the onset of sexual maturation. Triploidization eliminates or delays maturation. A fish is then able to utilize all food for growth."

One of the new practices in fish farming involves applying heat shock to a newly formed fish embryo to make the fish sterile.

He said triploidization usually anently sterilizes females, but only delays maturation in males for about a year. During that time, however, increased growth occurs.

The same theory has been used for increased meat production in cattle, when farmers castrate males. Triploidization is simply the genetic creation of "aquatic

The other method for reducing the costs of aquaculture is by creat-ing all-female populations.

This process is called "gynogen-esis," which means "all maternal

Fish, like humans, have two sex-determining chromosomes of the species have X and Y chro-mosomes, while females have two X chromosomes

The gynogenesis process involves exposing sperm to radiation before mating. Radiation destroys all chromo somes in the sperm cell and the resulting embryo, when treated with heat shock, becomes a female fish.

These females tend to be unhealthy because they are inbred, but if androgens (sex-changing hormones) are fed to the fish durhormones) are fed to the fish dur-ing early development, they will become males with two sets of X chromosomes.

These male fish are obviously only able to make sperm with X chromosomes. All their offspring must be female.

In this manner, researchers are able to produce monosex popula-tions of fish, which, according to Seeb, reduces feeding costs for the Seeb explains: "Because the fish are all females, there is no opportunity for male-female interaction. Therefore, less energy is expended and less food is needed for the population."

"Some commercial hatcheries have shown about a 10 percent reduction in feed cost." Seeb said.

Seeb also said populations of allfemale triploids show both an increase in meat production and lower feeding costs

Many state teachers return to classroom, others strike

Teachers in Lake Park District 108 at Roselle struck Tuesday as teachers in nearby Elgin continued their walkou; leaving Illinois with two teacher strikes in progress. Meanwhile, talks were sched-uled in Rantoul and students in Quincy School District 172 returned to their classrooms.

The strike by 250 employees at Roselle, including 130 teachers, kept more than 2,400 high school Al3-hour negotiating session ended early Monday without agreement. Shortly after 4 p.m., the union notified the school board of its intention to strike spheafters. students from their classrooms. A tion to strike, school spokesman Tony Perri said.

Bush: U.S. supports Soviet reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Bush met with populist Soviet politician Boris Yeltsin at the White House Tuesday and told him the United States supports Mikhail Gorbachev's reform efforts, the president's spokesman said.

Yeltsin, a liberal critic of Gorbachev's leadership, told reporters later that he suggested to Bush "a list of 10 issues" for U.S. Soviet discussion that "could serve perestroika," to rescue perestroika," Gorbachev's struggling economic

"He (Bush) supported the suggestions that I made to him," Yelsin said without elaborating.
Bush met Yeltsin in the office of national security adviser Brent Scowcroft for about 16 minutes. The administration tried to keep some distance from the Gorbachev-Yeltsin conflict, allowing no coverage of the meeting.

We view him as one of the first elected officials in the Soviet Union," White House Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater explained. "He is a spokesman for his own point of view. But at the same time we don't want to foster conflict that might be associated with his trip."

Bush told Yeltsin there was much interest in his visit and "expressed the view that the over-all (U.S.-Soviet) relationship is in good shape," Fitzwater said. "The president emphasized that the American people share his hope for the success of the reform movement in the Soviet Union."
Yeltsin, on a nine-city U.S. lecture tour, later met for about 45 minutes with Secretary of State James Baker at the State Department before leaving for Chicago.

"In my discussion with the president and the vice president, I pre-sented a list of 10 issues that could be discussed between us that could serve to rescue perestroika," Yeltsin told reporters at the State Department.

He was whisked away by aides before he could name the issues.

Negotiators for Quincy teachers and the school board reached a tentative accord early Monday. The 380 teachers ratified the agreement before noon and returned to work.

Superintendent Myrl Shireman said the three-year contract calls for pay raises of 6.5 percent the first year and 6 percent the second and third year. Other matters settled in the talks included bringing back an open period for teachers in an already shortened school day. The school day was cut from grade four through the secondary grades because of financial constraints.

"We're very happy to have the students back," he said, adding that the lost days will be made up by extending the school year and modifying the school calendar to change the variation periods." change the vacation periods.

District U-46 rejected proposed binding arbitration to end their walkou

A 10-hour bargaining session that ended early Monday resulted in little movement on any of the key issues, a spokesman for the school board said.

Teachers rejected a proposal to submit the matter to an arbitrator who would resolve the disputed contract points.

"I am extremely disappointed because the arbitration would have ended the strike right now and the kids would have been back in school," said Richard Rayner, U-46 board president. ## New York mayoral primary held; Koch trails challenger

NEW YORK (UPI) _ New Yorkers voted in the tight Democratic primary race Tuesday between three-term incumbent Edward Koch and Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins, who hoped to make history by becoming the city's first black

Polls opened at 6 a.m. under clear skies and turnout was moderate by midday. Dinkins campaigned through lunchtime crowds on Wall Street, while a somewhat subdued Koch, seeking an unprecedented fourth term, told reporters he tradi-tionally eschewed Election-Day campaigning

Legions of campaign staffers worked the telephones and mar-shaled armies of volunteers in the crucial effort to get their core constituencies out to the polls.

A public opinion survey released
Tuesday showed Dinkins maintained his slight advantage over Koch. Dinkins was hoping for a strong turnout of black voters that would help him unseat Koch, who has served. 12 years in office and called the current election the polit-ical battle of his life ical battle of his life.

Koch cast his ballot early and played down race as a factor in the tight contest, which comes three weeks after a racial killing in Brooklyn sparked bitter protests by

The three-term incumbent compared the election with the mayoral race earlier this year in Chicago, where festering racial tensions polarized the electora

"It's not like Chicago in Chicago there was hate," Koch told reporters. "I don't see any hate running around this town in communities. I see individuals who hate, but not communities who Koch contended that Dinkins would get a large percentage of the black vote because he was "the first credible black candidate to run for mayor" and blacks would choose him on the basis of "ethnic racial pride.

Throughout the campaign, Dinkins has fashioned himself a conciliator who can heal the city's racial divisions.

Dinkins, who was joined on Wall Street by former Mayor John Lindsay, state Attorney General Robert Abrams and former City Council President Carol Bellamy, was met by a crowd of more than 200 people.

"I propose to be the mayor of all the people who reside in our city," said Dinkins, sounding upbeat and relaxed.

The victor in the primary will face former U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, the heavy favorite in the Republican primary, and his GOP rival, cosmetics fortune heir Ronald Lauder, in the general elec-tion in November. Win or lose on Tuesday, Giuliani has the Liberal Party line and Lauder the Conservative Party line. A Daily News/WABC-TV poll released Tuesday showed Dinkins was supported by 50 percent of the likely Democratic voters while Koch had support from 43 percent. The survey of 297 likely Democratic voters, conducted Saturday and Sunday nights, was the fifth taken in the last week. The poils Lave Dinkins a lead ranging from 4 percentage points and had a margin of error of 6 percent.

The winner in Tuesday's race was expected to receive the 40 percent essary to avoid a runoff.

The two front-runner and two other Democrats who are far behind in the race, Comptroller Harrison Goldin and developer Richard Ravitch, have agreed to

Wet weather slowing down crops growth, corn harvests

Most crops in Missouri have matured several days later than normal and the corn and sorghum harvests are off to a slow start because of wet weather, the Missouri Agricultural Statistics

In its weekly report, the service said only 3.5 days were suitable for field work last week. Less than a full day was suitable for field work in the northwest, where heavey rains fell again last week. Topsoil moisture supplies aver-aged 22 percent short, 61 percent and 17 percent surplus. The northwestern, north-central, west-central and central districts all had surplus moisture, the service

Pasture condition continued above normal for this time of year with fields reported 1 percent very poor, 5 percent poor, 32 percent fair, 49 percent good and 13 per-cent excellent. Livestock water supplies are improving, with only 3 percent critically short, 18 per-

5 percent critically short, 16 per-cent short and 79 percent adequate. Among crops, 26 percent of the soybean crop is turning color or beyond and 6 percent is dropping leaves, several days behind the progress of both last year and the five-year average

Condition of the crop was rated 2 percent very poor, 6 percent poor, 54 percent fair, 35 percent good and 3 percent excellent. Soybean condition has slipped somewhat in the southeastern counties but to a shortage of mois-ture, while some northern counties have had too much rain at one

About 94 percent of the corn was in the dent stage or beyond, and 51 percent is mature or beyond. Maturity is being reached about a week later than last year and the five-year average.

Condition of the crop is rated as 8 percent very poor, 13 percent poor, 35 percent fair, 40 percent good and 4 percent excellent. A further reduction in condition of corn in several northwestern coun-ties is attributed to wind blowing the stalks down to the ground.

Eight percent of the crop has been harvested, six days behind last year and the five-year average

The sorghum crop is 78 percent coloring or beyond and 37 percent mature, about five days behind average. Condition was rated 3 percent poor, 28 percent fair, 63 percent good and 6 percent excellent. Nine percent of the sorghum is harvested.

V station to start in St. Louis Commercial T

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A minority-owned television station that owners said would be the first commercial station to be started in the St. Louis area in 20 years is expected to go on the air in two

The chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, Alfred C. Sikes of Sikeston, Mo., cut the ribbon on station WHSL, Channel 46, on Monday.

Owners of the station are three

Steven Democratic St. Louis alderman; Michael Roberts, former Democratic alderman and mayoral candidate; and Mark Roberts.

Sikes said he was pleased to cut the ribbon on the new station because he hopes the FCC under his direction will focus on expanding opportunities for minorities.

WHSL will broadcast the Home

State finding ways to lower high sulfur amounts in coal

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Illinois coal will be pulverized, gasified and even microwaved to remove its high sulfur content in a series of research projects officials hope will bring millions of dollars worth of federal coal research grants to the state.

The state Energy and Natural Resources Department announced Tuesday Illinois' five entries in the third round of the U.S. Energy Department's $575 million Clea Coal Technology program. The program is part of a $5 billion fed-eral effort to reduce pollutants from coal-burning power plants by 1992. As part of President George Bush's Clean Air plan, plants that install certain clean coal technologies can gain an extra three years to meet federally mandated emis-

Five previous Illinois coal research programs with total costs of $323 million already nave received $161 million in federal help in the first two rounds of the grant program. The state also shares in research costs, the state energy department's director,

"Over the past 11 years, Illinois has committed $113 million in our fight to ensure that state-of-the-art technology is successfully developed and applied," Witter said.
"These efforts are producing efficient, clean, high-tech methods for using our economically vital coal ources.

Researchers hope to remove 50 percent of the sulfur from coal in a pilot project at the Western Illinois Power Cooperative's Pearl Station. The $6 million project uses a high-energy microwave field to fuse pockets of impurities in the coal, making them easier and cheaper to

Coal will be pulverized into dust than face powder, then mixed with limestone powder under a $15 million project to convert two natural-gas-burning boilers at the city of Rochelle's municipal power plant. The mixture is burned in several stages to reduce emissions of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen

com products plant in Argo. A high-temperature, low-oxygen burning process will limit nitrogen oxide formation. while an advanced lime-recirculation sys tem will capture sulfur emissions in flue gas. The $70 million project will burn 200,000 tons of Illinois coal each year, instead of the natural gas currently used.

A system at the Institute of Gas Technology in Chicago will gasify coal, then use the coal gas in fuel cells to produce electricity through an electrochemical reaction. Researchers hope the technology in the $20 million project will significantly reduce pollution, while converting more of the heat from the reaction into electricity than conventional power plants.

The most expensive experiment is planned at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, where coal will be partially gasified. The coal residue, or char, will fuel a conventional boiler, while the gas will be cleaned of contaminants and burned in a gas turbine. Researchers hope the $121 million system will be more efficient.

NIU student claims he saw fugitive

De Kalb (UPI) Northern Illinois University student who has been the subject of a nationwide manhunt for the stabbing deaths of his former girl-friend's parents may have been spotted near the campus Tuesday morning. Richard Church, 20, dropped out Richard Church, 20, dropped out of sight after the Aug. 21, 1988, stabburg deaths of Raymond Riter, 45, and his wife, Ruth Ann, 45. Church's former girlfriend, Colleen Ritter, 18, and her brother, Matthew, 10, survived the attacks at their Woodstock home.

Despite being featured on Fox levision's "America's Most Wanted," police from Wisconsin to California have been stymied their search for the former high school football player and authorities were hopeful the Tuesday morning sighting could be the break they've been waiting for.

University Police Chief James Elliott said the report was made around 10:40 a.m. by an NIU stu-dent familiar with Church, who near campus in a blue Chevrolet

"This came out of the blue as far as we're concerned," Elliott said. "I have to emphasize this was a possible sighting, there was noth-ing confirmed. But it sounds legitimate because it's so rare you have something like this coming in."

Elliott said although the student did not get the license plate number of the car, he passed along the information to other neighboring police agencies as well as Woodstock police. "We put out kind of a general alcrt this was a possible sighting,"

Church was believed to have fled Illinois in a pickup truck registered to his mother, which was found abandoned in West Hollywood, Calif.

For three months following the attacks on the Ritter family, police in southern California received numerous sighting reports. However, investigators at the time described Church as "the all-American boy... one of 10 percent of high school kids," and the tips

Ultra-posh train service to provide $1,450 Chicago-Washington runs

CHICAGO (UPI) company Tuesday announced plans for a new, European-style ultra-luxury train service to begin this fall with Chicago-Washington runs offering dining, posh accommodations and one-way fares of up

The opulent new trains will operate as an add-on section to existing Amtrals service.

"Developing a new, scheduled luxury rail service has been a monumental task, but the prospect of offering what we believe is the finest rail service anywhere in the world was so intriguing that the work quickly became fun," said William F. Spann, president of the new American-European Express Railroad Co.

"The American-European Express will offer more luxury, more comfort and a higher standard of service than has ever been offered before on a regularly scheduled American train," Spann

Each AFE train will consist of five cars - three sleepers, a dining car and a cive car. Spann said AEE has spent about $1 million apiece to rebuild and refurbish its 10-car fleet - mostly built by Pullman Standard during the 1940s and 50s. Interiors feature Honduran mahogany paneling, brass fixtures, fine upholstery and Europeanstamped leathers

The car interiors were designed by Spann's wife, Melissa, who operates Bay Point Interiors.

"We have tried to recapture a time when travel was romantic, luxurious and even a little mysteri-ous," she said. "The American-European Express is technically more advanced, and therefore qui-eter and more comfortable than its European predecessors. But we have made sure it is every bit as beautiful and luxurious as well."

The trains will carry a maximum of 60 passengers, who will be served by a staff of 13. One-way fares range from $695 for a single-occupancy to $1,450 for the Presidential Cabin, which may be occupied by one or two people for the same price. All fares include meals

One-way first-class air fares between Chicago and Washington currently average around $470.
The plane trip takes less than two hours. The American-European Express - which will be attached the Amtrak's Capitol Limited -takes about 17 hours.

But Spann said he has detected growing disillusionment with airline travel among business travel-ers. The American-European Express, he said, will be an alternative to the air-weary.

"No one will be asked to strap themselves into a seat on an American European Express train. There will not be trave to snap into congestion, plastic forks or paper napkins," he said.

"Instead, there will be beauty, peace and polish - and more than a dash of excitement and mystery," he

Smith sees improvement in offense

By Daniel Wallenberg Stati Writer

The Saluki offense has scored a total of 10 points in its first two games, three in the Salukis' season-opening loss to Nevada-Reno and seven in last week's loss to Western Illinois, but Head Coach bob Smith said the low scoring is typical of a team in transition.

"Even though production doesn't seem that good, we improved immensely from week one," Smith said.
"As a team we're disappointed at being 0-2 but we are not discouraged," Smith said. "Our goal is to improve this week.

We achieved last week's goal of playing hard for four quarters and we did so in a highly unusual atmosphere," Smith said.

Heavy rains and severe lightning halted play of the Salukis' game against WIU early in the first quarter and the game was restarted Staith said there is no magic formula to winning football games and starting to build a program is a challenging job.

"You have to work, repeat and repeat, and prepare mentally," Smith said. "We have to keep limiting what we do offensively each week until we get better at the

The Saluki offense was held to 158 yards in total offense, yards on the ground and 116 in the air against WIU.

Smith said he has been questioned on his decision to play quar-terback Fred Gibson the whole game against WIU.

Gibson rushed for minus 24 yards, largely because WIU's pass rush was in on Gibson for most of the second half.

Smith said had Gibson been kent clean from the opponent's pass rush and still failed to move the offense, then Gabbert might have seen some action.

"Right now we have a No. 1 and a No. 2 quarterback," Smith said. Defensively, the Salukis terned in a solid performance. They allowed one touchdown on a 48yard pass play, intercepted a pass—the second of the year by Willie Davis— and recorded 18 tackles for losses.

Smith said earlier in the season, the defense would adjust to the transition of new coaches and a www.system much quicker than the offense

"It is a lot easier to put 11 guys on the field and tell them to get the guy with the ball," Smith said.

Stanley King, defensive backs coach, said the coaches are happy with the way the defensive played against WIU.

"I just think the guys have dedi-cated themselves to improving,"

The SIU-C men's tennis team will get their season underway in the Murray State Quadrangular Saturday and Sunday.

Team points will not be kept in the matches, so a champion will not be declared. Eastern Kentucky, Louisville and host Murray State will be the other three teams competing in the quadrangular this

Senior Mickey Maule will play in the No. 1 position for the Salukis at Murray. Maule was part of a national championship doubles team this summer. He and teammate Srni Tummala of the University of Michigan won the national title in the National Amateur Hardcourt

Amateur Hardcourt Championships held in Cleveland. "A national championship is quite an accomplishment," head coach Dick LeFevre said. "He is playing really well right now as

Two weeks after their national championship at Cleveland, Maule and Tummala advanced to the semi-finals of the National Amateur Doubles in Kiamesha, New York. The winner at New York received a wildcard draw into the U.S. Open Doubles.

Maule also won a singles title in Burlington, Iowa last weekend. He defeated his teammate, Joe Demeterco, for the championship.

Demeterco, last year's No. 1 player, will start off in the No. 2 position at Murray Saturday.

"He (Demeterco) wasn't able to play a lot of tennis this summer LeFevre said. "Joe is starting to round into shape and I believe he will be alright." Demeterco is a George Hime is another returning senior on LeFevre's team this fall. Hime will compete in the No. 3 position. Hime teammed up with Maule to win the doubles competition at Burlington last weekend

The performance of the three upperclassmen will be key factors in the upcoming season, LeFevre

"They must play well this sea-son," LeFevre said. "The way our upperclassmen compete this season will be key factors in our sea-

The Saluki team is rounded out by three freshmen players. LeFevre still has the No. 4, 5 and 6 positions to fill in his lineup. Challenge matches will be held within the next two days to determine where the freshmen will compete.

Richard Stenstrom from Stockholm, Sweden, Tim Derouin of Moline and John Brown from Bloomington are the three freshmen fighting for positions.

"With half of our team being freshmen, it is an unpredictable situation because we don't know how they'll react," LeFevre said. These tournaments are a good way to start. The young players can get experience. Our schedule is exclusively tournaments in the fall and team scores aren't official until Jan. 2."

LeFevre says his Salukis could un into some tough competition at Murray.

"Louisville's No. 1 player (John Schreckler) beat Demeterco last year in a tough match," LeFevre said. "We beat them 7-2 but they had some injured players when we faced them. They should be tough again this year. I think Murray lost some people, but they are a traditionally tough team."

The Missouri Valley Conference
Championships could be a threeteam chase, LeFevre said.

Wichita State are defending champs and they have everyone back," LeFevre said. "Drake is also a top contender. We are right with Drake and we only lost 63-60 to Wichita State last year. We had a good chance to beat them."

Bulls sign B.J. Armstrong

CHICAGO (UPI)—The Chicago Bulls have signed Iowa guard B.J. Armstrong, the second of three first-round picks, to a contract, the team announced Tuesday.

Armstrong, who holds the Iowa assist record of 517, said he was "elated to have signed and final-ized my contract. I'll be happy to get started and am looking forward to the beginning of training camp."

The Bulls earlier signed 6-foot-9 forward Jeff Sanders. They still must negotiate with Stacey King.

Take that!

Anthony Vetilio, a junior in microbiology from Streamwood, follows through after returning a

Mackovic anticipates more offense

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) _ The Illinois football team, complete with a new football team, complete with a new national ranking after a close win over highly favored Southern California, is preparing for a wide open, offensive thriller against Colorado. Ilimi coaches and players said Tuesday.

The Illini, 1-0 after a 14-13 victory over USC, turned up in the No. 11 slot in this week's UPI college football poll. Big Eight power Colorado, at 2-0, is No. 7.

We thought we played the game against Southern California exactly as it had to be played," Coach John Mackovic said. knew it would be close and we expected we'd have to come from behind. Colorado will be much more open. And I would be very surprised if it ended 14-13

Against the Trojans, the Illini had to put together a pair of quick scores in the final quarter to sal-vage the win. But Illinois receiver Mike Bellamy said the team will not have the same luxury this

"Colorado has a big play type offense," he said. "We we're not going to be able to wait until the end of the game. They have the type of team that can score a lot of points, so we'll have to be able to

There's really no comparison (between the defensive backfields of USC and Colorado)," he said. Southern California "has a great, great backfield. There's no doubt we're going to have to run the ball and establish that. But I think our receivers can exploit their secondary.

Mackovic said a key to moving the ball against Colorado will be to find ways to neutralize the Buffaloes outstanding outside linebackers, Alfred Williams and Kanavis McGhee.

Mackovic said the week off after the USC game had a positive, and recuperative, effect on the team. Only linebacker Julyon Brown will miss the Colorado game. Brown broke a bone in his left foot and is expected to be out for four to six
