Shuttle departs on pollution mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Discovery's five-man crew rocketed up the East Coast and into a lofty 335-mile-high orbit Thursday with a $633 million satellite on board to find out how badly pollution is damaging Earth's atmosphere.

With its three hydrogen-fueled main engines roaring at full throttle, Discovery's twin solid-fuel boosters flashed to life at 6:11 p.m. An instant later, eight explosive hold-down bolts fired and the 4.5-million-pound spaceplane thundered away from launch pad 39-A at the Kennedy Space Center.

"Two, one, zero and liftoff of the space shuttle Discovery and the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite, opening a new era in the study of Earth's environment from space," said launch commentator George Diller as Discovery vaulted skyward, 14 minutes late because of a communications problem.

On board were commander John "J.O." Creighton, 48, co-pilot Kenneth Reightler, 40, flight engineer James Buchli, 46, Charles "Sam" Gemar, 36, Mark Brown, 39, and eight female lab rats that will be killed after the five-day flight to learn more about the effects of weightlessness.

Trailing a churning cloud of dirty brown exhaust, Discovery climbed above its launch gantry, wheeled about and took off on a northeasterly course paralleling the East Coast of the United States.

Eight and a half minutes later, the shuttle's three main engines shut down, placing the spaceship in a safe preliminary orbit. A smaller rocket firing 35 minutes later finished the job, putting the craft into the 335-mile-high orbit carrying it 57 degrees to either side of the equator.

The astronauts faced a light first "day" in space Thursday and Friday, breaking out equipment and

Board hears complaints about role of chancellor

By John C. Patterson
Special Assignment Writer

As University officials prepare to search for a full-time chancellor, faculty members continue to question the role the top administrator plays at SIUC.

At the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday in Carbondale the trustees listened to problems faculty members raised about what to do with the office and with the former residence of the chancellor, but no solutions were finalized.

The board voted not to approve an operating budget for Stone House, former residence of retired Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit. It will remain empty until Acting Chancellor James Brown and SIUC

Only the basic budget needed for upkeep will be used for Stone House, but it will continue to be used for receptions. Guidelines on how interested parties can go about reserving Stone House are expected out next week, Brown said.

Faculty Senate President Donald Paige criticized the role of the chancellor at the Kidnappers to release 1 hostage

United Press International

A senior Lebanese Muslim fundamentalist said Thursday that one of five U.S. hostages will be released soon but there was growing insistence that there could be no real movement on the 9-year-old hostage stalemate unless Israel frees an Islamic cleric abducted two years ago.

Islamic Jihad, the Lebanese extremist group holding U.S. hostages Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, said it also was ready to take part in a "comprehensive solution" to the crisis but said Israel's release of Arab prisoners Wednesday was not enough to bring the matter to a speedy conclusion.

In Baalbeck, Lebanon, Seyyed Hussein Musawi, leader of the Islamic Amal, an offshoot of the Iranian-backed group Hezbollah, or Party of God, said a U.S. hostage will be freed "very soon ... within a week or

Gun control law praised by most

A new state gun control law that will provide an instant check on anyone buying a gun is being praised by people on both sides of the gun control debate, although some local gun shop owners are not happy with the compromise the General Assembly has hammered out.

The law sets up the framework for the administration to organize a computerized system that allows the Illinois State Police to check immediately a prospective gun buyer's background for felony convictions or recent visits to mental institutions.

"The law is historical," said Master Sgt. Charles Schwarting, spokesman for the Illinois State Police.

Thomas accused of ducking question

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday told Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas they were angered by his refusal to answer questions about abortion and about his alleged "sophistry" in softening past stances on other controversial issues.

But as Thomas continued to sidestep questions about the high court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized abortion, a partisan battle erupted in the committee, with Republicans accusing Democrats of treating Thomas unfairly.

"What are we going to have, 64,000 questions on abortion?" complained Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, asking if it was "the only issue the Supreme Court has to decide."

Thomas had faced some 70 questions dealing with abortion by Thursday afternoon, compared with only 36 fielded by David Souter last year during his entire confirmation process, said Hatch.

Souter was confirmed by the Senate after a 13-1 positive vote in the committee.

"The burden is on those (Democrats) to tell the American people why you are being treated any differently than Judge Souter," Hatch told Thomas.

But Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the most aggressive questioner of Thomas, told him: "You have written very extensively and have spoken out quite extensively (on abortion-related issues) and I think it warrants inquiry."

Gus says he might have an opinion on Thomas but he's not really sure because he's never talked about Thomas, and if he has, he doesn't remember what he said.

SIU student-athletes making the grades

By Tony Mancuso
Sports Editor

An average SIUC student walking down an average hallway on an average day may see an average athlete walking down the same hallway.

After all, athletes make up roughly 1.5 percent of the University's student population.

What that average student might not know is that the average athlete probably will have the same grade point average at the end of the semester.

SIUC student-athletes are not

"dumb jocks," according to a report released by the Athletic Department Thursday.

The report was delivered to the SIUC Board of Trustees Academic Matters Committee by Athletic Director Jim Hart and Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West. It pointed out the progress and the remaining weaknesses in the academic careers of athletes on campus.

The paper stated that the overall cumulative GPA of SIUC athletes was 2.75 for the fall 1990 semester. During the same semester the overall GPA of the undergraduate student body was 2.69. In spring 1991, the athletes had a 2.74 average, compared to a 2.77 for the student body.

Hart said although the department was pleased with the findings, it is taking steps to improve the athletes' academic performances and counteract perceived weaknesses in the department.

"I think that the emphasis on GPAs and graduation has been rejuvenated," Hart said. "The system just needed emphasis from

State to make NCAA use due process rule

SPRINGFIELD (UPD) — Illinois Gov. Jim Edgar slam-dunked the NCAA Thursday for its 1989 investigation of the University of Illinois men's basketball team, signing legislation that places tough restrictions on future investigations by the college sports organization.

Edgar's approval of the bill makes Illinois the third state to require the NCAA to use courtroom-style rules of evidence when it investigates alleged recruiting violations or other irregularities.

"Although our universities voluntarily belong to a private collegiate athletic association and are subject to its rules and regulations, the state has an abiding interest in insuring that any procedures used to determine violations of those regulations are fair to the university, the athletes, the coaches and the students," Edgar said.

The NCAA had threatened to expel Illinois colleges and universities from the organization if the bill was signed into law. Edgar said the state could reconsider the legislation if the NCAA institutes its own reforms.

Spikers hoping to make history in home tourney

By Cyndi Oberle
Sports Writer

If the SIUC volleyball team wins the 15th Saluki Invitational this weekend, it will be the first time in history for it to win back-to-back home tournaments.

The spikers swept the Southern Classic last weekend. Its home record now stands at 3-0.

In 1990, SIUC only compiled a 2-7 record at home, and SIUC head coach Sonya Locke said the fans and the team's good home record will serve as motivational factors in this weekend's tourney.

"We really bank on our fans," Locke said. "We are hoping to see the numbers rise and have more support this weekend."

SIUC will meet foes Memphis State University, Ohio University and University of Illinois-Chicago in a round-robin tournament today and Saturday.

Locke said the competition will be tougher this time around.

"Ohio is 6-4 this season and has been playing good volleyball," Locke said. "UI-C has always been scrappy and Memphis has already been up against some tough competition this season."

Ohio returns four starters from 1990's 8-17 team. UI-Chicago posts a 1-3 mark this season and is coming off a five-game winning streak. It has five starters returning from a 18-17 1990 season.

Memphis is 1-5 in 1991, and Locke said its tough schedule makes this record deceiving.

"They are coming here hungry to win," Locke said, "and they have already played Georgia, Illinois and Southern Cal, three really tough teams."

MSU has three returning starters and finished 30-9 in 1990 where it went unbeaten (7-0) in the Metro Conference and made the semifinals of the National Invitational Tournament.

The games played outside of the Gateway Conference are crucial to the team, Locke said.

"We use them as a measuring stick to see how we are doing with all kinds of competition," Locke said. "This variety of experiences before our Gateway season starts is grooming us for the conference matches."

Softball team ready for opener

By Norma Wilke

The pressure mounts for the SIUC softball team to repeat a successful 42-7 spring record, coach Kay Brechtelbauer said. The team begins its quest Saturday at home.

Brechtelbauer said the team needs to start playing so she can see how the players will respond in a game situation. The players have showed their skills in scrimmage games in practice, but the fall season opener Saturday will show how they compete against unknown opponents.

"The returning players have come along right on schedule," she said. "They have showed improvements from playing nationally this summer. The first game will give the new recruits experience and allow us to see how they compete at college level."

Brechtelbauer said the coaches have not decided who will start and play in Saturday's games. The players earn their playing time with their performances at practice, she said.

Pitching coach Gary Buckles said he has not decided who will pitch, but based on last year, he is leaning to junior Angie Mick.

"I don't quite know what to expect of the season," Buckles said. "All four of the pitchers have been looking good in practice. We're fortunate to have really good pitchers."

Many of the players are anxious to start the season, said junior right fielder Colleen Holloway.

"We've got a lot of pressure on us to be as successful this year as we were last year," Holloway said.

Dawgs chasing after third victory

Undeclared Salukis ready to take on Austin Peay

By Todd Eschman
Sports Writer

Head football coach Bob Smith was asked what was foremost on his mind after the Dawgs improved to 2-0 last Saturday.

"I'd like to be 3-0," Smith quipped.

Smith and his Salukis will try to stay undefeated Saturday at 6:30 p.m. as they travel to Clarksville, Tenn., to tackle the Governors of Austin Peay.

The Governors didn't win a game in 11 tries in 1990, but they are coming off an 18-14 opening day win over Western Kentucky. First year head coach Roy Gregory says his team is in a rebuilding stage and it will be hard to measure its improvement from last season.

"Our goal is just be competitive this year," Gregory said. "You have to walk before you can crawl, though, and I realize that it is going to take some time to build this program."

Although Austin Peay hasn't had much success in recent years, Smith says game films and scouting reports show an improved team.

"I had counted on Austin Peay to be the weakest of the first three teams that we play," Smith said. "But they have improved massively. We were stunned as we looked at them on film. They are an aggressive and motivated team. I think it will be our most physical game so far."

Austin Peay's biggest concern is lack of experience. Although the Governors have 16 returning starters, only 12 are seniors and none of the players have much "winning experience." Austin Peay has won four games since 1988.

"There is nothing like game experience," Gregory said. "You have to keep playing to get better. But this team hasn't gotten any experience winning. We have returning players who haven't won a game yet. The first thing we need to do is build some confidence in our kids."

For the first time in three years, the Governors have an experienced quarterback. Reggie Williams led Governor quarterbacks in 1990 throwing for 335 yards in six games. But the strength of Austin Peay's offense is in the running game.

Anchoring the Governors running game is junior fullback Eric Dance. Despite being aggravated by a knee injury early last season, Dance rushed for 628 yards. He set a school record for most single-game carries with 37. Williams added 381 yards from the quarterback position.

Defensively, Austin Peay returns seven starters to its multiple front alignment. Senior Jeff Crutchfield should be the anchor on the line. He led the Governors with 54 tackles in 1990.

Gregory said his defense better be at the top of its game when it lines up Saturday.

"I think SIU has vastly improved," Gregory said. "Coach Smith has done a very good job rebuilding that program. They have very skilled offensive players. We are definitely going to have our work cut out for us."

The Dawgs have put up some big numbers playing comeback in the first two

SOVIET UNION BARGAINS TROOPS REMOVAL — The Soviet Union hopes its move to negotiate the withdrawal of troops from Cuba will lead to reciprocal measures by the United States and reduced tension in the region, Foreign Minister Boris Pankin said Thursday. CROATIA THREATENS FOREIGN INTERVENTION — Yugoslavia's Croatian president threatened Thursday to seek foreign intervention if the Serb-dominated army remains deployed in Croatia, where rebel Serbs advanced on Croat-held Adriatic coastal towns in battles that eclipsed European Community-sponsored peace talks. In another ominous sign the crisis was deepening, Serbian leaders declared autonomy for eight districts of southern Bosnia-Herzegovina that border Serbia.

RUSSIA FEARS EXCESSIVE NATIONALISM — The Russian republic foreign minister warned Thursday against excessive nationalism among the Soviet republics following last month's abortive coup and subsequent diminution of central authority. A number of reformist officials and politicians have expressed concern that the rising tide of nationalism sweeping the republics could hamper or derail efforts at achieving any long-term stability.

At least six of this year's victims were babies born to infected mothers and concerned health officials suspect many more cases have not been detected. Syphilis is spread the same way as AIDS — through unprotected sex and contaminated hypodermic needles.

ILLINOIS MAY SUE TO KEEP MEDICAID FUNDS — Gov. Jim Edgar said Thursday Illinois might sue the federal government if it fails in lobbying efforts to protect a hospital assessment program state officials had hoped would help balance the state budget. for leadership skills, and students need to get involved in clubs and organizations early on in college. The expertise a student gains in college will apply to the work world, she said.

"Too many students scramble to fill in the voids in their resume during their senior year. That is too late. They need to start now," she said.

Marilyn DeTomas, assistant director of the University Placement Center, said each speaker will give a brief 10-minute demonstration.

Recruiters are very concerned that students are not prepared for the work world, DeTomas said.

"Some of the companies being represented recruit on campus and all have SIUC alumni working for them. Students should take advantage of this program," she said.

Admission to "Ask the Pros" is free.

The University Placement Center is sponsoring an "Ask the Pros" program at 7 p.m. Sept. 17 in the Student Center Auditorium.

The program is designed to help students in their search for employment after graduation. The program will consist of five guest speakers from the St. Louis area who represent Consolidated Grain & Barge, Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc., May Company/Famous Barr and Andersen Consulting.

The panel will inform students on resume writing, successful interviewing, the way to conduct a job search and career tips.

County board supports timber sale suspension

By Annette Holder
City Writer

The Jackson County Board has endorsed a letter signed by political leaders in a symbolic move to suspend timber sales in the Shawnee National Forest.

The letter, signed by U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Belleville, and U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, and U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, stated a concern for the continuing loss of revenue and possible harm to the forest because of timber sales from the Shawnee National Forest.

The federal government lost more than $1 million last year because of higher costs to build roads than it received from the companies doing the harvesting, said Tom Hagerty, spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service.

Poshard said he would like to delay any more cutting until a management plan has been formulated.

"The Shawnee Forest is scenic and beautiful. It is the only forest in Illinois," Poshard said. "Consequently, many people believe the forest is best used for recreation, not sales."

Poshard said the forest could support a small amount of timber sales, as well as other activities like fishing and hunting.

The board agreed to support the letter in a 8-4 vote Wednesday night.

It requested delaying any more harvesting until a management plan has been formalized. The county board has no jurisdiction over the forest.

Board Vice Chairman Greg Schaefer said it costs more to develop the roads for the deforestation machinery than the money the county makes from the timber sales.

Adding to the costs is the need for law enforcement because of protests by environmental groups.

"The harvesters use stump regeneration, which is supposed to work, but doesn't," Schaefer said. Stump regeneration is cutting down a tree at the base so new limbs will grow and create a new tree.

Group selection is used by the companies doing the harvesting, not clearcuts or deforestation, Hagerty said.

Clearcuts are 20- to 40-acre harvests and group selections are two- to four-acre harvests. Group selection in the Shawnee Forest is one-third of one acre, the size of a city lot.

"With group selection, we are

Illinois should adopt right-to-die proposal

NO ONE CAN foresee tragedy. As a result, many people are unprepared when one strikes. Sometimes, victims are left in inhumane irreversible conditions and in no position to express wishes about their treatment.

Such situations are a real problem for family members who need to determine the fate of a loved one in such a state and who want to do what the patient would have wanted.

In Illinois, a judge's permission is required to end life support for terminally ill people who are without living wills or powers of attorney for health care and who are unable to decide for themselves.

JUDICIAL INTERVENTION requires families to resolve their decisions in court, a time-consuming and expensive experience that adds to the trauma of the situation.

A proposed bill before the governor would set up procedures for leaving the very personal decision of a loved one's fate to the family, relieving some of the legal and emotional turmoil.

The legislation would establish a priority list of decision makers, or surrogates, who would be given the authority to stop or continue life-sustaining treatment without a court order for a patient who meets one of three criteria.

Two physicians must determine a qualifying condition in which treatment would only prolong the process of dying with no reasonable prospect of recovery, that the patient is permanently unconscious or that the irreversible terminal condition imposes an "inhumane burden" on the patient.

Only one of the two physicians can be the patients regular doctor.

A LEGAL GUARDIAN tops the list of priority surrogates, then spouse, adult child, parent, adult brother or sister, adult grandchild and close friend.

When there is no relative or close friend, or family members are in dispute about who the appropriate surrogate should be, a judge decides.

Another safeguard to prevent abuse of the procedure requires the two doctors to also agree that the patient does not have decisional capability.

If the patient's wishes are unknown, the bill would require the surrogate, as identified by the physician, to determine the best interests by weighing the consequences of the decision and listening to the views of other family members and friends.

A COURT WOULD resolve any dispute by a concerned party who feels he or she would be the more appropriate surrogate.

The legislation does not require the surrogate to withhold treatment and is only invoked when the family and health care providers decide removing a life-sustaining system would be most appropriate.

By leaving treatment decisions to the family without court intervention, the bill does not detract from the structure of decision-making. It only establishes who would be making the decision — those who know and care about the patient most.

GOV. EDGAR needs to consider the substantial number of people who do not have living wills and powers of attorney for health care in Illinois — and the family members who must make decisions for them in the event they are left in an irreversibly, terminally and painfully permanent state.

The choices a family must consider in such situations are agonizing and the decision to remove life support for a terminally ill patient is not made lightly.

Gov. Edgar should sign the Health Care Surrogate Act to establish a reasonable and sensitive way for families to meet the best wishes and interests of a loved one.

President's lack of agenda to solve problems oblivious to U.S. citizens

"There must be something wrong with me," said Slat's Grobnik, "but I'm having a hard time feeling miserable."

Why should you feel miserable? "Because I been mostly a Democrat all of my life." What does that have to do with it?

"I been listening to what the leaders of my party say. And they say that I'm very unhappy." About what?

"All the domestic problems and how President Bush ain't doin' nothing about 'em. He ain't got no agenda."

Well, that is a serious matter. We have many domestic problems that should be addressed. "That's what I seek hearing. So why ain't I miserable like I'm supposed to be?"

It isn't necessary that you be miserable. But I'm sure you're concerned. Aren't you? "Yeah, once in awhile, I guess. But not all the time. It ain't like I sit around at night asking myself: 'I wonder what the gross national product is gonna be this month?'"

Yes, but you must be concerned about unemployment. "Nah, not really. If I was unemployed I'd worry, but I'm not."

That's a rather selfish attitude. "Hey, when ain't there been people out of work? I can't do nothing about it."

Yes, but the President should have an agenda to address this problem.

"Well, what's he supposed to do?" Stimulate the economy.

"I never understood what that means. It sounds like tickling the bottom of somebody's feet. But the way I figure it, the way you stimulate the economy is to start different kinds of programs, right?"

That's one way, yes. Public works and that sort of thing. "Yeah, so who pays for it?"

I suppose there might have to be a tax increase or some form of revenue enhancement.

"Now you're talking about a way to make me miserable."

But things have to be done. What about the terrible state of education in America? "Who says it's so terrible?" Every study shows it is.

"I don't know who makes these studies, but here's how I see it.

Yeah, the schools are bad in some places, mostly in the poor neighborhoods in the big cities. But most of us don't live in the poor neighborhoods in the big cities. So in most places, the schools ain't that bad. In fact, the nicer the neighborhood and the nicer the suburb, the better the schools."

But don't you consider that unfair?

"I don't know if it's fair or unfair. But that's the way it is. So you want I should stay awake all night worrying about the test scores on the West Side of Chicago or in the Bronx?" No, but shouldn't the President show leadership?

"What's he supposed to do — help them with their homework? That's what parents are for. We don't elect presidents to tell kids: 'You're grounded until you learn long division.'"

Your heartlessness is appalling. I gather, then, that you aren't concerned about the growing problem of homelessness in America?

"Who says it's growing?" Studies.

"Yeah, studies again. Well, when you talk about the homeless, are you talking about some crack head or lush, or are you talking about people getting evicted from their flat because they're out of work and can't make the rent?"

All the homeless should be our concern.

"Not mine. If some guy wants to scramble his brain and live like a bum, that is his right. And it is my right not to worry because he's exercising his right to be stupid."

But what of those who are homeless because of financial setbacks? "Yeah, that's tough. But I think that we're being sold a bill of goods because I don't think that there are that many. If they need places to live, how come we got so many empty flats in the public housing projects?"

Because many of the projects are dangerous places to live.

"What makes them dangerous? I mean, those buildings ain't falling down from old age. I lived in dumps in a lot worse shape."

They're dangerous because of criminal elements. Street gangs, dope pushers, turf wars, that sort of thing.

"Then why don't they throw 'em out and let decent people live in them?"

You can't just throw them out. It must be done through the due process of law and that takes time. And when tenant-rights lawyers defend them, it becomes almost impossible.

"So what kind of domestic agenda is there that makes them stop shooting each other, peddling drugs and having turf wars, huh? How about arresting everybody who sticks their head out after dark?" That is a violation of rights and the courts have said the police can't do it.

"So I'm supposed to feel miserable?" No, but you can express concern. "Alright, I'm concerned. Five seconds. That's enough. Now I'm not concerned."

Fortunately, most people are less selfish and do have concerns about the failure of leadership to address domestic issues.

"Don't bet on it. Remember, there ain't never been a time in this country's history when people had as much stuff." Stuff?

"Yeah, stuff. The CD, the VCR, the TV. Even in the worst schools, they learn the letters CD, VCR and TV before they're in kindergarten."

Stuff. You think that people are going to vote on the basis of what you call stuff? "Oh, no. They're going to consider who has the best position on the preservation of wetlands." I'm glad to see that you recognize the real issues and I realize that you have just been pulling my leg.

"Uh-huh. And you called that other guy a moonbeam?"

History echos in Saltpetre Cave's caverns

Nature's own amphitheater, the Shawnee Saltpetre Cave, is the main attraction in the park, stretching 250 feet from side to side. The cave includes a stage and foreground, where rock bands used to set up and play to crowds of up to 6,000. Now the cave is rented out to groups for family reunions and picnics.

Local artist uses nature for creations

Gilbert "Gib" Todd is an artist whose medium is nature. His tools are unorthodox — things like a backhoe tractor and dynamite. His special eye for creating art is wide in scope and as big as a valley.

What Todd has spent the last 27 years creating is one of the best kept secrets of the Shawnee National Forest — Saltpetre Cave, located only six miles south of Murphysboro.

The 78-year-old Todd was born and raised in Pomona. Todd said from the time he first discovered the cave he wanted to make a park out of it and share its beauty with others.

The cave is known as Saltpetre Cave (the British spelling) because the Union Army mined saltpeter there to make ammunition for use in the Civil War.

The cave is nature's own amphitheater, a huge bluff shelter that until 23 years ago was accessible only by foot. Since then Todd has made the area accessible by blasting through the rock to build a long and steeply-inclined road. He has changed the scenery to include a roaring waterfall, a long and narrow creek that winds along the tall cliffs and large rocks, nature trails and cliff overlooks.

The creek, which visitors can float down in canoes or steer around in paddleboats free of charge, is fed by a roaring waterfall at one corner of the cave.

High above the cave is a natural spring, which Todd uses to supply the waterfall with a continuous flow.

Todd cleared away boulders, timber and swamp to create a parking lot at the mouth of the cave. With stones found in the canyon, he built sanitary facilities.

At the back of the cave sits a house with rock walls. The house leads to a stage that once was used by promoters for rock concerts that drew up to 6,000 people.

The cave is a natural sound amplifier with near-perfect acoustics and Todd loves to tell visitors how Tanya Tucker played there when she was only 17 years old along with T.G. Sheppard.

see CAVE, page 10

Below: Gilbert Todd stands with his watch dog "Spirit" on one of the bridges he built over the creek. Todd used dynamite to blast through hundreds of feet of rock to construct the creek.

When Gilbert Todd, creator and owner of the park, gets a large crowd he enjoys driving them around the park in his custom tour bus that he made from the chassis of an old school bus. About 40 members of the Wright family from Southern Illinois enjoyed the tour Saturday.

Above: Adam Dawes, son of Robert and Tracy Dawes of Dongola, explores a passageway in a rock cliff in the park. Dawes visited the park with some of his school friends as part of a field trip.

Left: June and Mark Speidel and their daughter Emily, from Festus, Mo., maneuver a paddleboat in and out of the many rock cuts in the park's man-made creek.

Bees attack Texas farmer; officials buzz with questions

HARLINGEN, Texas (UPI) — Laboratory tests will determine whether a farmworker stung an estimated 500 times by honeybees Wednesday was attacked by European or Africanized killer bees, agriculture officials said Thursday.

Department of Agriculture officials destroyed the hive and sent samples of the bees to a laboratory in Maryland. Adan Garza was using a backhoe to clear mesquite trees near the town of Penitas Wednesday morning when he was attacked. He was listed in stable condition at Mission Hospital. Doctors counted 60 stings on each hand, 100 on his back and 50 on his face before they quite counting.

Council to begin business project to help women

By Sarah Anderson
General Assignment Writer

A pilot project aimed at Southern Illinois businesswomen is being launched Sept. 24 at the Small Business Incubator Building at SIUC.

The Southern Illinois Women's Business Council is backed by both the U.S. Small Business Administration and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

The group is conducting its first public meeting since organizing last December with guest speaker Lindsey Johnson, director of the Office of Women's Business Ownership at the U.S. Small Business Administration in Washington, D.C.

"She is the person you target on the federal level if you're a woman (needing information on government assistance)," said Irene Carlton, director of the Small Business Incubator in Carbondale. Johnson's agency funds the Small Business Development Center on campus and also is starting a loan program available to small business women who want to take out a $50,000 or smaller loan.

Lisa Cox, secretary for the Southern Illinois Women's Business Council, said Johnson also will address child care, obtaining financing for their businesses and dependent care.

The group is concentrating on doing seminar programs and round table discussions for the first year.

"Eventually, we would like the group to serve as a mentoring process for other women in business — sort of a clearinghouse of information and resources," Cox said.

At the first meeting the group will vote on amended bylaws and discuss current business issues as well as having different tables set up to discuss different subjects.

"Anyone who is interested in promoting women in business is welcome. You don't have to be a business owner," Cox said.

Registration for the meeting opens at 5 p.m. Organizers ask anyone who attends to donate $5 to cover costs.

Police Blotter

Freddie R. Smith, 53, of 1200 E. Grand Bldg. 4 Apt. 3-A, was arrested in connection with a battery charge at 10:55 a.m. Sept. 10 in Lot 10-A.

University Police said the victim, Daniel T. Rightnowar, 22 of Carbondale, was waiting for a parking space. When the lot cleared, Smith allegedly pulled around Rightnowar's car and took the space.

Police said when Rightnowar complained Smith struck Rightnowar in the head, shoulder and hand with a brick.

Smith posted a $100 cash bond and is scheduled to appear in Jackson County Court at 9 a.m. Sept. 26.

FRED'S
A True Confession

I don't know how it happened...at first, I was going to SIU, living at Thompson Point, and doing what SIU students normally do on the weekends: going uptown to the strip and standing around with the rest of the people pretending to have fun. Then, one time I went to FRED'S. I couldn't believe it! Everybody was dancing, well maybe 75%, but when was the last time you've seen more than 10% of the crowd dancing uptown? Even my friends who said they didn't like country music were dancing up a storm. You know, all those places say they are "THE place to party", well they don't even know the meaning of the word. Well anyway, now I'm hooked on FRED'S. I confess...FRED'S has really spoiled me! - Diana Davidson

"This is the first time we've had a mutual agreement on both sides of the gun control issue. The law takes precautions to keep guns out of the hands of those not allowed to have them without imposing on law-abiding citizens."

But some local gun store owners are not satisfied with the law because they say it is redundant and will not affect the number of guns available to felons.

"Most felons don't buy their guns in a gun store," said Larry Bozic, owner of the Army Surplus Outlet in Carbondale. "We've had a couple of mental defectives every once in while and people have bought guns on fake firearms cards, but for the most part, criminals buy their guns privately."

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said the new law allows an instant background check that can reveal new convictions obtained during the five-year period for which a firearm owner's card is valid.

Under the current law, people who want to buy a gun have to obtain a Firearm Owner's Identification card from the state at which time their background is checked.

Once they receive a card, they can buy a gun from any dealer after waiting during a "cooling off period" of 24 hours for a long gun and 72 hours for a handgun.

The new program, signed into law by Gov. Jim Edgar last week, does not eliminate the cooling off period. It only allows the state to check the backgrounds of prospective gun buyers every time they buy a gun.

The program will be funded by charging gun dealers $2 for each instant check call to the state police.

Mike Simmons, co-owner of Crossroads Sporting Goods in Cartersville, said the new law is just a redundant form of the old law.

"It's like issuing someone a drivers licence and then making them take a driver's test every time they buy a new car," he said. "The only thing this does is make more work for us. I'm going to have to have someone sitting on the phone all the time."

But Mike Lawrence, spokesman for the governor, said the law fills a necessary gap.

"This law is not redundant," he said. "A person could come into a store and show the clerk a valid firearms card and he would have no way of knowing if that person had committed a crime in the past few months."

Lawrence said the National Rifle Association and Illinois Rifle Association support the law because they "want to keep guns out of the hands of dangerous people."

Ed Klecka, spokesman for the NRA, however, said the organization maintained a neutral stance on the bill in Illinois even though it has supported instant checks before.

"Our official position in Illinois was neutral because the waiting period stayed in effect," he said. "The NRA backs instant checks because it is a simple quick way to check the background of someone trying to buy a gun."

"We assisted Virginia with a similar system from the ground floor, but there, a law-abiding citizen doesn't have to wait," Klecka said. "His name is punched into the computer and he can walk out of the store with his gun the same day."

Klecka said he hopes the instant check system eventually eliminates FOIDs altogether, because they are "the next step in gun registration, which is the first step toward gun confiscation."

Illinois Senator Jim Rea, D-Christopher, said he would like to see FOIDs disappear for different reasons.

"There are several problems with the FOID cards now," he said. "First of all, people aren't notified when their card is going to expire the way you're notified when your car registration is going to expire. A person might not realize their card is expired until hunting season begins and if they apply for a new one then they could miss they entire season."

Rea, who has introduced legislation to eliminate FOID cards before, said computerizing the system could eliminate the need for the FOID cards because people would be checked every time they bought a gun.

meeting as being bureaucratic and meddling in campus affairs.

"We need to define exactly what the office is supposed to do," Paige said.

Paige has been very adamant in his criticism of the chancellor, backing up his comments as a way to bring something that is going wrong.

"I don't consider this insubordination. I consider this getting this ship back on track because we've got stormy weather ahead and we need to trim the sails," he said.

Besides the office of chancellor, Paige also said the overall functioning of the University administration is leading to a general decline. As SIU officials look at what the University wants to do, and what it is doing, Paige said the core of the University is being buried and left behind in a pile of needless reports.

"The fruit at the top of the tree is nice, but let's not just look at the fruit, let's look at the tap root," he said.

Paige offered a plea for more interest in the areas of education and teaching at SIU, saying the seemingly infinite report writing of the administration is time costly to the faculty.

"Bureaucracies produce paper. It's not the money it's the eating up of time that's killing the campuses," he said. "Don't kill us for reports."

Acting Chancellor Brown disagreed with several of the criticisms of the office he now occupies.

Brown said he thinks the University would be in sad shape without the chancellor and he said he wishes those who are critical of the office would be more aware of the facts.

Complex matters such as how to fine tune the chancellor's office are too easily confused by emotions, he said.

"Nobody ever said to me make right of all the wrong," Brown said. "I'm glad because I can't."

Board Chairman A. D. VanMeter also stood behind the board's decision to stay with a chancellor.

As a chairman of the board for First of America Bank in Springfield, VanMeter said he is in a similar position.

"If I asked my employees at the bank if they need a chairman of the board, I'd like to think they like me, but they'd probably be saying we don't need him, he doesn't really do anything," he said.

The current emotions about the chancellor's office will delay an extensive search that when it begins will not have any deadline.

"It's postponed so they don't get into emotions," he said. "We've stated early on we are not going to put that limitation on the search."

In other business, the board voted to approve a 19.2 percent increase in funding requests for fiscal year 1993 to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Karim Obeid.

Obeid, a Hezbollah Shiite Muslim cleric, was abducted by Israeli commandos from his home in southern Lebanon in 1989.

"Present negotiations with the United Nations and other mediators have reached a mechanism to release ... Obeid and other detained brethren in stages," the Revolutionary Justice Organization said. "We will stand by our pledges and commitments as long the others honor their obligations."

setting up experiments. Creighton and Reighlter planned to raise Discovery's orbit to an altitude of 351 miles early Friday.

From that path, Discovery's payload, the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite, will be able to probe most of the planet's atmosphere during a planned 18-month mission. Brown, operating Discovery's robot arm, plans to launch "UARS" shortly after 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

Shuttle satellites usually are deployed a few hours after blastoff, but the UARS release was scheduled for the third day of the mission to give the Discovery astronauts time to adapt to weightlessness before having to deal with any problems that might require an emergency spacewalk.

Movie puts surgeon into patient's chair

Hurt gets treated for cancer, insensitivity by colleagues and patient in 'The Doctor'

By Casey Hampton
Entertainment Writer

Witty, warm and wonderfully delightful, Touchstone Pictures' "The Doctor" is one office visit that will leave people feeling uplifted on the inside while weeping on the outside.

William Hurt stars as Jack McKee, a brilliant but arrogant heart surgeon who is so detached from his patients that insensitivity dominates his entire personality.

Fate suddenly turns the tables when he is diagnosed with throat cancer and, more importantly, awakened to the fact that he is now the patient.

McKee immediately considers himself of higher importance because of his doctor status.

"I'm not sitting here with the herd," he says.

But he is soon given a dose of his own medicine and realizes that things don't look so pleasant on the other end of the stethoscope.

McKee finds comfort in a young woman, Elizabeth Perkins, who is dying from a brain tumor. She not only injects reality into him but also helps him overcome it.

The horrifying fact about this story is that nearly everyone has been in the patient's chair at one point in time and knows what it is to feel like a doctor's inferior plaything. McKee is the one dishing it out with no regard for his patients at first, until he gets the same thing done to him.

By the end of the movie, the emotional struggle of being a patient and coping with his cancer is supposed to make McKee an all-around better person. And it does in most ways.

The disappointing part of the film is McKee's mistreatment of his all-too-benevolent wife, played by Christine Lahti.

Marital bliss understandably decreases while he is dealing with the impact of his illness, but McKee never truly redeems himself.

Granted, it is made to seem like things are working themselves out, but it is not developed at all.

Lahti's character is irresistible, but McKee seems to have a closer relationship with Perkins' character.

Despite that fault, the movie is an authentic tear-jerker. The characters never waltz in crying about a late mortgage payment. When they cry, it is from the heart.

Hurt gives an exceptionally commendable performance. He plays the ruthless surgeon to its extent, then turns around and becomes the naive and innocent boy who realizes that the world isn't made out of candy.

Tobacco use starting earlier in high schools

ATLANTA (UPI)—More than one third of the nation's high school students use some sort of tobacco and they are starting at a younger age, health officials reported Thursday.

The federal Centers for Disease Control conducted a national youth risk behavior survey on 11,631 students and found that 36 percent of all students in grades 9-12 had used tobacco at least 30 days prior to the survey.

A national health objective calls for reducing the starting age for young smokers.

Husband-wife team brings archeology expertise to SIUC

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Donald and Prudence Rice have devoted a major part of their lives to doing field work in the countries of Guatemala and Peru. Now the husband-wife anthropology team is taking their field work to SIUC.

The Rices are best known for their endless dedication to the studies of archaeology and anthropology.

In the past they have spent months at a time living in field camps while doing research projects on such subjects as tropical environments and ancient artifacts.

While doing field work, the Rices look for sites, survey them, and then do excavation.

They bring their findings back to the laboratory where they analyze, classify and catalog artifacts.

Prudence said she enjoyed her work in Guatemala and Peru.

"After awhile it begins to seem like home. We met many new friends and got interested in our new environment," she said.

Their projects have been funded by the National Geographic Society, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Science Foundation.

Don is the new director for SIUC's Center for Archaeological Investigations. He officially took his position in July after teaching at the University of Virginia for four years.

He said he has been trying to get familiar with the University and learn about the center.

The center is the research arm of the archeological department, he said.

Donald and Prudence Rice

"Our goal is to obtain research funds and let professors and students get involved in research work," he said.

Don currently is teaching introductory archaeology, an undergraduate class.

In addition to his research work at the center, Rice continues to write papers and give lectures on the research he conducted while in Peru and Guatemala.

He also is the editor for the 7,000-member Society for American Archaeology's "Bulletin" while his wife Prudence is the president of the society. The group is a professional and academic society of archaeologists in the United States and Latin America.

Prudence took her position at SIUC in August. She is not teaching this semester, but plans to teach a course on Mesoamerica Archaeology in the spring.

Aside from being president of the national Society for American Archaeology, she is the founding editor of its new journal "Latin American Antiquity".

She said her position with the society is not easy.

"The work is constant. I have to make so many decisions," she said.

Prudence said when she first began her work as an archaeologist in 1969 there were not many females in the field.

"People felt it was inappropriate for females back then, but now there are many women in archaeology and anthropology," she said.

Away from their busy work schedules the Rices enjoy various hobbies.

Don likes woodworking, being outdoors and art. He also listens to all types of music—from heavy metal to jazz and blues.

"The faculty would have to really insulate my office because I play music extremely loud—especially hard rock," he said.

Prudence said she loves gardening and likes to pilot whenever she finds time. She taught at the University of Florida in Gainesville for 15 years, and while she was teaching there had access to the college's planes.

This is the first time the Rices have lived in Southern Illinois.

They said they like Carbondale because it is a small town and is close to forests and farmland.

They also have been grateful for the kind treatment people have given them since their arrival.

"I think I have more friends here than the entire time I taught in Virginia," Don said, "it has been a pleasant surprise."

"I don't let them play rock concerts here anymore because people started getting involved in other forms of entertainment," Todd said, referring to alcohol and drugs, which are strictly prohibited at the park.

Today the park is rented out for family reunions and picnics.

The park is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

When visitors enter the park, they are greeted by a down-to-earth man in a golf cart who says he doesn't charge people to enter the park but asks for a $1.50 donation to help cover the cost of keeping the place up.

When visitors enter the park, they are greeted by a down-to-earth man in a golf cart.

When Todd leaves the park he sets loose two large Doberman watchdogs, who take their job of roaming the area very seriously. Todd chuckles when telling about how his dogs ran two women up a tree one day when they entered the park before Todd got a chance to put the dogs on their chains.

Another attraction at the park is the large catfish and carp that live in the creek. For a few quarters, Todd will provide visitors with a bag of feed and lead them to the creek where he will call for "George," a large carp that comes to the surface to gobble up the floating feed.

Although the cave has provided Todd with much enjoyment during the past two decades, he said it is time to move on. He has put the 53-acre park up for sale.

the coaching staff. It needs further emphasis."

Overall, the GPAs of athletes are below the standards the Athletic Department has set for them, Hart said. He said he expects most of the department to carry GPAs of more than 3.0.

"We did not necessarily think (the department's GPAs) were low because we knew of the comparative nature (to the rest of the University)," Hart said. "It was pointed out by some of our faculty that they felt it was low after hearing our goals."

"They pointed out if our goals were so high, then these facts are indeed low. We couldn't argue that," he said.

The report revealed, however, that 36 percent of student-athletes carried a GPA of 3.0 or higher in the fall semester, and 41 percent scored higher than the mark in the spring. The presentation of the percentages brought on a number of comments from the trustees that the statistic was impressive.

"We're moving up the ladder," Hart said. "Obviously the ultimate goal is 100 percent above 3.0, but that's a utopian situation."

The report outlined areas in which the department has made or is considering making steps to improve performance in the classroom.

Hart said the biggest step toward improvement is the hiring of Darren Bilberry as a third academic coordinator.

Bilberry, who played football for the University of Kentucky and remained at UK as a graduate adviser, especially will help the male athletes, Hart said.

The report showed that males had a 2.58 GPA in fall 1990 and females had a 2.80.

Hart said Bilberry adds a dimension to the department with his counseling efforts.

"He's been an athlete very recently, and he realizes the importance of a degree," he said. "He can convey that like no one else can to the male athletes."

In addition, Bilberry is African American, and Hart said he hopes the new adviser especially can act as a guide for African-American male athletes, who had an overall 2.17 GPA in fall 1990. The performance of black males was cited as one of the major problems with the program.

Senior Justin Roebuck, a receiver for the football Salukis who is African American, said Bilberry will help all athletes, not just African Americans.

"The only reason I see him helping us more is because he is of our race and successfully made it through college," Roebuck said. "Maybe he can relate to what we are doing."

But he said the best part of Bilberry's hiring is simply having another academic adviser.

The department also wants to encourage coaches to become more involved in athletes' schoolwork.

"Most of our coaches are very strong on their emphasis on academics," Hart said. "But here are some that are a bit lax in that regard. We hope to get even better results in the future."

Saluki head football coach Bob Smith, whose team had a cumulative 2.62 GPA during the 1990-91 year, said he is quite proud of the Athletic Department's academic achievements.

"I think SIU is probably way ahead of most universities in having a support system already there as far as tutorial help, guidance and setting aside and encouraging study halls," Smith said. "We've got a long way to go to do it right."

He said he wishes his players' GPAs were higher, but he believes the statistics show just what the players can achieve.

"It doesn't mean the GPAs are low because they are football players, and it doesn't mean they are high because they are football players," he said. "It means we are doing a good job of keeping up with the rest of the college students on this campus."

Smith said it takes a 2.0 to graduate from most colleges on campus, and "if the students have a 2.1 it means on the average they are on target to get a degree from this university."

The Athletic Department also is considering raising the minimum number of hours and the minimum GPA needed to maintain eligibility.

Hart said if the standards are raised, he thinks the students simply would raise their studies.

Roebuck said he agreed. "An (increase) wouldn't be that hard on the players," Roebuck said. "I think they would push themselves to the limit."

"Right now, players say 'I need a 2.0, and I'm going to have it so I can play. If it were raised, they would say it's a 2.2, or whatever, and I'm going to have it so I can play.'"

He said a 2.0 is an athlete's immediate goal, but usually the ultimate goal is higher.

"Too be ineligible because of grades is absurd," Roebuck said. Hart said raising admissions standards to a 2.5 high school GPA, as the NCAA is considering, looks good at face value.

"I think it would force good study habits upon the kids who wait until their senior year to actually buckle down and study," he said.

But he said it also would be discriminatory to disadvantaged students.

"But some are not capable of getting higher than a C," Hart said.

"Are we now depriving them of an opportunity to get an education?"

"There are some who struggle,

Women's cross country team to race at SIUE

By Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

SIUC women's cross country coach Don DeNoon said he expects a strong performance from his squad at the SIUE Invitational meet this weekend.

It will be the first time the Saluki women have participated in the meet since 1988, when they finished third out of 14 teams with 91 points.

Edwardsville assistant coach Darryl Frerker said 18 teams will participate in the invitational this year.

"This is the course that will be used for the NCAA Division II cross country championships," Frerker said. "Some of the strongest Division II teams in the country will be there to scout the course as well as a few quality Division I schools."

Frerker says the Edwardsville course is one of the harder courses on the circuit.

"It's a really hilly course," Frerker said. "I think it's going to be a really good course for the tournament, but because of the lack of rain, the footing could be better." DeNoon said he expects his team to be very competitive after a second-place finish to the University of Kansas in a four-team meet last weekend.

"I was very pleased with our times," DeNoon said. "Kansas has a tough squad, but I don't think there are many Division I teams in the country that will give us much difficulty."

The Salukis were paced by senior Leann Conway who finished fourth in a time of 18:51.34. Junior Dawn Barefoot finished second for the Salukis (eighth overall) with a time of 19:03.83.

DeNoon said he also was optimistic about the performances of his younger runners.

"They gave us a solid effort," DeNoon said. "Cathy Kersh w finished as our No. 3 runner and Debby Daehler had an outstanding performance as our sixth-place finisher."

DeNoon said he anticipates the strongest opponents to be the University of California-Davis and SIUE.

"The California-Davis squad finished No. 6 among Division II teams last season," DeNoon said. "And SIUE defeated our Gateway Conference rival Western Illinois last weekend."

"But I'm excited about our potential, and I'd be really disappointed if we didn't finish right near the top."

The "Cougar Classic" will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at SIUE.

weeks of the season. They rank second in the Gateway Conference in total offense averaging 392 yards and 29.5 yards per game.

The Salukis showcased their potent air attack in their 28-27 win over Southeast Missouri. Quarterback Brian Downey connected on 16 passes for 319 yards and four touchdowns.

Sophomore tailback Greg Brown proved that the Dawgs also can run the ball when he rushed for 136 of SIUC's running yards in a 31-27 victory over Murray State.

Smith said improving the running game was one of his goals for the Murray State game. Smith has set goals for Game 3 as well.

"We need to keep the running game going," Smith said. "We also need to improve our tack-ling and get more turnovers."

Smith said the future success of his team partly depends on the improvement of the defense. Smith estimated that the Salukis missed 29 tackles in the win at Murray.

SIUC has won the Invitational twice in 1983 and 1984 and been runner-up four times, but Locke said the team is definitely in the running for championship honors.

"We could do well, but we need to step up our performances," Locke said. "We'll have to continue working hard on defense, communicate effectively and let our opponents create their own errors."

The Southern Classic MVP and Gateway Conference Player of the Week junior middle blocker Dana Olden also said the team needs maintain and pick up its level of play in order to win.

"If we play as good or better than we did last week, we should be in the running for another championship," Olden said.

Locke said she is expecting Olden to put up even better numbers this weekend.

"It will show she is getting better," Locke said. "It also shows the team is improving. Our defense is where our strength lies, but we also have a balanced team."

Locke said she hopes to see more fans at the home matches because it helps the team and encourages them to win.

Action begins at 4:30 p.m. today as UI-Chicago battles Ohio. SIUC plays at 7 p.m. tonight at Davies Gymnasium. Games on Saturday begin at 11:30 a.m.
