Beer drinkers can try every brew available in Southern Illinois at the Third Annual Beer Festival

Fans of good beer had better buy their tickets early, because the Third Annual Beer Festival at the Pinch Penny Pub beer garden this Saturday is expected to sell out quickly, the general manager of the Copper Dragon says.

This year, the folks at the Copper Dragon, 700 E. Grand Ave., have prepared an evening of good food, bluegrass music and about 200 different beers that can be sampled. Beerfest goers also will be able to vote on which beer is their favorite in a variety of categories.

"Virtually every beer that is available in Southern Illinois will be here," James Karayiannis said. "That means Sierra Nevada, Samuel Adams, Pete's, Blue Moon Brewing Co., Budweiser, Miller, Coors, the Corona Co. and the Guinness Brewing Co. will have beers here."

The Copper Dragon also will feature seven beers made by its own brewing company.

"It's open to females, males, people of all ages, provided, of course, they are 21 or over," Karayiannis said. "Just show up and enjoy it and have a great time."

Tickets are expected to go quickly, and may not be available the day of the event. Karayiannis said. The festival will be limited to 550 tickets, last year's attendance.

"We do it every year, and every year we've had a bigger turnout," he said. "So now we have to limit it to whatever we had the year before because we don't have any room for any more people."

Included in the $12 to $15 price of a ticket is a souvenir glass to use at the festival, food and all the beer a patron can consume.

Karayiannis said there is some confusion concerning exactly who will be providing the live entertainment.

"We aren't sure which of the two bands is going to do it yet," he said. "It's going to be either the Ol' Fishskins or Carter and Connelley."

If the weather permits, the beer festival will take place outdoors in the Pinch Penny beer garden. But the event won't be in danger of being canceled because of inclement weather.

"If weather becomes a problem, we will put in the Copper Dragon," Karayiannis said.

Eric Young, a senior in biological sciences from Springfield, home brews beer and plans on possibly attending the beer festival.

"I like good beer. I heard about the beer festival last year but wasn't able to make it," he said. "Plus, I want to get the souvenir glass. I want to add it to my collection of beer glasses."

PLAYING IN THE BAND THE NATIVES

STORY BY BRETT WILCOXSON

They don't wear headdresses, mocassins or war paint, and they don't sing and dance around blazing campfires, but they do sing quite a bit, and they are most undeniably The Natives.

This Saturday night, a celebration at the Copper Dragon, 700 E. Grand Ave., will mark the release of The Natives' first compact disc titled "Guilt and Disdain." And band lead vocalist, rhythm guitarist and chief songwriter Bill Harper could not be prouder.

"The album is all original stuff; it's all songs I have written over the past two years," he said. "We worked on a short time schedule, we only had a certain time block to get it done. I'm very pleased with the results."

"Guilt and Disdain" is not the first recording The Natives have done. Harper said the band submitted a tune to be included on the local compilation "Biscuits and Gravy," but it was not used. But he said they are not giving up on such collections.

Harper said he is writing a song to offer up for the upcoming "Coal Dusted Tracks," a compilation of local blues, folk, bluegrass jazz and country music.

"We're thinking about submitting something, but I don't know if I'll have it done in time," he said.

Harper added that while The Natives were not included on the first compilation, their recording time and money was not wasted. He said the experience spurred them on to record "Guilt and Disdain."

"We went into the studio and recorded the song for 'Biscuits and Gravy' and we decided, 'They've got some songs ready, let's do this,'" he said.

While the new album is all original work, until people hear it, The Natives may be better known as a cover band.

Covering tunes by such artists as One Way Out, Moody Blues, Tuesday Afternoon and Jethro Tull, The Natives span a broad chasm of musical styles. Harper said the band plays a variety of covers to provide a sound that people know.

"Naturally we play covers," he said. "Playing the places we do, you can't play four hours of all original tunes because people may not want to listen to that."

However, Harper added that while they cover many grooves, they first mutate them to fit the personality of The Natives.

"We take songs that were influential to us and we change them around a lot," he said. "With the flute as part of the band it changes the songs, too."

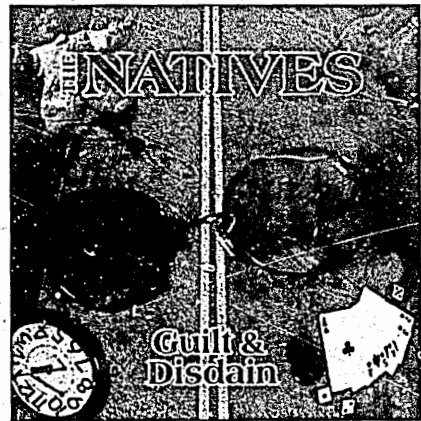

The flute Harper refers to is that of Tom Naas. Harper said Naas fashions his flutes out of PVC pipe, and drills the holes to fit the tone of any given song.

The band formed in 1993 when Harper returned from a musical stint in California and hooked up with the Carbondale Blues Co-op, of which Natives' guitarist/songwriter Ray Marring and multi-instrumentalist Naas were members.

"They'd been performing in Carbondale for a lot of years, and when I moved back from California we started playing and just developed a rapport," Harper said. "And I had seen Tom (Naas) playing around town since I was in high school."

Harper said that was when the pieces came together, and the band adopted its current name — which does make a statement about the band's roots.

"We're all pretty much local," he said. "Ray is from Carbondale, Tom is from Murphysboro, I'm from Murphysboro, Brad is from Anna-Jonesboro and Rich is from Pekin originally, but he's been in Carbondale for more than a few years."

"Guilt and Disdain" is an independent release, and Harper said he expects any future offerings to be the same.

"We're in our late 30s or early 40s for the most part, and I don't know that fame is so much of a goal," he said. "We have a lot of fun, and get a chance to do a lot of things musically."

"A record contract is not likely, but we do have the talent. We'll just see what happens. If it was the right deal, we might look at it."

While he believes the band has come a long way, Harper said the long, strange trip is not likely to end anytime soon.

"You never know what's going to happen. You hear people talk about musicians and their egos, and we have egos, but so far it hasn't gotten in the way, and we don't expect it to," he said. "Now we're kind of waiting for the dust to settle after this experience to see where it's going to take us into next year."

SHOWCASE

•The Natives will start the two band showcase, taking the stage at about 10 p.m. Saturday at the Copper Dragon.

•The heavier-rocking Third Stone will close the event.

•There will be a $2 cover.

A new route added to the Saluki Express mass transit system, which will travel throughout Carbondale seven days a week, is expected to alleviate overcrowding on other routes.

Sean Borman, a procedures and system analyst for the University, said the popularity of Business Route 1, which travels to businesses on the east side of town, was the main reason a new route began in August.

Route 10, which is the first new route to be added since the service began in 1995, begins on the west end of town, continues through campus, out to the east end of town and back to the west side, with a total of 43 stops

State chooses Carbondale for gang-fighting program

PREVENTION: Secretary of State's office selects community because of its proactive attitude.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Efforts of local officials have prompted the state to choose Carbondale as a site for a gang strategy program geared toward helping local residence councils improve their fight against gangs.

Carbondale is the first of three cities in the state to be assisted by Mobilize Illinois, a program started by Attorney General Jim Ryan.

Ryan began looking for locations in March and was invited by Carbondale's Gang Task Force to discuss the possibility of the program coming to Carbondale.

The task force recognizes emerging gang problems within the Carbondale community and works together to develop and strengthen the prevention of gangs.

Craig Shvol, executive director of gang crime prevention for the attorney general's office, will work the Lake Heights Residence Council, 511-A S. Lake Heights Ave., beginning Monday.

"We were very impressed with the response from the community at the meeting of the task force at the earlier stages," Shvol said.

"Carbondale said, 'We aren't going to wait until we have problems with gangs.' I applaud Carbondale, and I applaud the task force for having that attitude."

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said the attorney general's office chose Carbondale because of its involvement in the gang task force, which was formed more than two years ago.

"Some of the things that they were looking for were found here... they found resources," Strom said. "If you were looking at the police force to solve the gang problem, you wouldn't solve it."

Carbondale City Councilman Larry Briggs says Mobilize Illinois could be a solution to the community's denial of a gang problem.

"The tendency by the majority of the population is to hide their eyes," Briggs said. "We need to look around. We need to face it. We do have a gang problem."

Carbondale is one of three cities chosen for the program. The Auburn-Gresham campus in Chicago was the second, and a third city has yet to be determined.

"(The Lake Heights Residence Council) didn't have collective experience in this thing," Shvol said. "[Our job is] to implement community mobilization to help make use of gang prevention programs."

The Gang Crime Prevention Center of the attorney general's office will work with the Lake Heights council to conduct a needs assessment study of Carbondale. A needs assessment study is a research study that helps to develop a targeted community action plan.

"These are demonstration sites to work in area neighborhoods," Shvol said. "We

BOT approves increase in SIUC budget request

PAY: Salary hikes are high priority, reflecting competitive wage, cost-of-living adjustments.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DE POLITICALS EDITOR

The first step in developing a fiscal year 1999 budget at SIUC began Thursday as the SIUC Board of Trustees approved budget requests that are 7.7 percent higher than last year.

This year, SIUC is requesting $301.6 million. Last year's budget was $278.3 million.

All budget requests will be made to the Illinois Board of Higher Education by Oct. 1. The IBHE will review the requests and make recommendations that the Illinois General Assembly will vote on in the spring.

In the budget plans, SIUC requests a 5-percent increase for salaries. Last year, SIUC requested a 3-percent increase.

"Salaries are a high priority," SIUC President Ted Sanders said. "The 3 percent will reflect the cost-of-living adjustment, and the 2-percent pool will be for equity adjustments to make us more competitive when hiring faculty."

SIUC also is requesting a 3-percent increase for general price items, a 3-percent increase for the cost of utilities and an 11-percent increase for the cost of library materials.

In addition to these requests, SIUC prioritized its building repairs and improvements. Altogether, SIUC requests $55.2 million for capital projects.

The first priority for SIUC is $3.1-million in repairs for Anthony Hall heating and cooling pipes. The piping is more than 30 years old and has developed numerous leaks and failures.

Student Trustee Pat Kelly expressed his concern prior to the board's vote on the repairs and improvements.

"I find it unsettling that the Anthony Hall piping is such a high priority and almost half of the dollars requested by SIUC," Kelly said of the building, which houses central administrators.

Board members did not respond to Kelly's concern. The repairs were approved with Kelly abstaining.

Other repair and improvement requests include remodeling for the Communications Building, air-conditioning renovations for Faner Hall, laboratory renovations for the Neckers Building and roof renovations for Quigley Hall, the Lesar Law School, Altgeld Hall and Neckers Hall.

"This is an important part of our budgeting process," SIUC Trustee Molly D'Esposito said. "It indicates our goals to the IBHE for the next fiscal year."

DOLLARS

• SIUC's FY 1999 budget request is $301.6 million, an increase of 7.7 percent over FY 1998.

• The University is requesting a 5-percent salary increase.

• SIUC is also requesting $55.2 million for capital projects.

Gamers disagree on strategy guides

Gus Bode

Gus chomps: Some games don't require strategy guides.

CHALLENGE: Some players use the guides for hints while purists see it as cheating.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After painstakingly trying to defeat the next level on his Sony PlayStation, sore thumbs and tired eyes pushed Damian Raszewski to turn to strategy guides for assistance in conquering the game.

"If you play a game for a long time and you just can't beat it, the game becomes frustrating," said

Raszewski, a junior in computer science from Chicago. "Sometimes you need a hint to figure out a complicated puzzle or to defeat an opponent."

There are many methods to get hints on games. Books, magazines and videos are available to show maps, strategies, special moves and hidden secrets.

Some games even come with a "1-900" phone number that allows a player to speak to an expert while playing the game.

The latest strategy guide is a video, "Game Brain: The Official PlayStation Strategy Guide."

"The video is totally worth the money," Raszewski said. "Hint books are $20 to $30, and phone calls can be up to $3 a minute."

Ben Reading, a senior in biological science from Joliet, has been an arcade supervisor for the past four years and used to buy strategy guides.

"I never thought of it as cheating," he said. "I only used the tips when I got frustrated and was about to win the game. I bought them mainly for the maps and moves."

Reading said his lack of time and skill made him want to use the strategy guides.

Focus on SIUC, not City

I have to say that I was truly impressed with the actions of students who actively campaigned for, and subsequently elected, the Carbondale City Council members with the fat student agendas.

Any university population capable of forcing its host city to allow an influx of underage customers into its drinking establishments automatically should be considered as providing the host city with its own rules.

Take a minute here and ponder the bigger picture. Consider that it took several unsuccessful student attempts at gaining a City Council seat before we realized a better way exists. We have learned that there are people available who will use our votes to get elected, and in return, do our political bidding for us. Lowering the drinking age was the prime example. Not one student sat on the council that voted on this measure... or perhaps several hundred did, depending on where you stand. The beauty of this system is that when fresh minds are needed, it takes only a few thousand students to elect some.

Let's elect the hired gun and then scrutinize that individual's performance. When the partnership loses integrity or interest, and that hired gun no longer is needed, there always is another happy-faced candidate right around the corner who's willing to try anything for their little piece of political responsibility. Cold? Yes. Cruel? Most certainly. All-American? You bet, baby!

SIUC students traditionally are apathetic — especially in regard to Carbondale politics. I'm sure those councilmen elected by students probably expected the "revolution" to last a couple semesters at best. That remains to be seen. In the meantime, I have a better idea.

While it is mentally stimulating to imagine all the wonderful changes students could make to Carbondale government, I suggest we concentrate on SIUC matters exclusively. It would be absolutely mind-boggling (and certainly within the realm of perceived possibility) to turn this collective political energy inward and begin to focus on other matters genuine to the student struggle. This would be an ideal time for Undergraduate Student Government leaders to poll students about their largest concerns and possibly construct platforms or agendas from these issues.

Ideally, new student candidates would arise from these voices to form a more politically diverse doctrine. Are there things about SIUC that you would most like to see changed, implemented or scrapped? Believe it or not, there never has been a better chance of changing these things than right now. It takes relatively no time to familiarize yourself with the political structure of student government.

It also is particularly enjoyable to participate in a democracy where you can actually see immediate results. As a matter of fact, at no time in your adult life will your vote ever carry as much potential for positive change than at the university level. Empowerment is a productive feeling, and it only leads to greater advances.

Missing flagpole may signal worse in store for Salukis

AT PRESENT, SIUC'S ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT is not divulging any plans about what the department plans to do about the missing flagpole at McAndrew Stadium.

We thought that SIUC's football team could not find a worse way to start the new season than the team's 33-0 loss at Nicholls State last week. Maybe we were wrong.

THINK OF THE POSSIBILITIES. AFTER Saluki fans flock to the stadium for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. home opener against Murray State University, what are we supposed to do when we sing "The Star-Spangled Banner?" Will we be forced to imagine a waving flag to salute as we sing the national anthem, or will Athletic Director Jim Hart make sure that the flagpole is replaced in time for Saturday's game?

It is not as if the department could not find the time to replace the flagpole. The flagpole was removed months ago after a spring rainstorm filled the pole with water, causing it to rust.

WE SUGGEST THAT THE ATHLETIC Department find a way to cover their faux pas by game-time Saturday. It is not too late to get the Salukis' early football season off to better start.

Healing words

Community should move forward with Briggs' apology

THE CONCERNED CITIZENS DEMANDING an apology or resignation from Councilman Larry Briggs at Tuesday's City Council meeting re-opened a wound that already was being mended.

And after enduring a year in which two local teenagers were murdered — and another now facing a minimum sentence of 20 years in prison — the Carbondale community needs to come together to prevent similar tragedies among its youth.

On July 30, the Southern Illinoian printed a letter to the editor from Briggs, speaking as a citizen, accusing Melvin Turley, son of the deceased Carbondale minister and civil rights activist Lenus Turley, of "not doing his job" as a juror in Labron Neal's first double-murder trial. Turley was the lone holdout juror in the 11-1 decision, forcing a mistrial. On Aug. 21, local media reported that Briggs wanted to change the name of the city's Lenus Turley Park because of Melvin Turley's decision.

BUT ON AUG. 25, BRIGGS ISSUED AN apology in a lengthy press release. "I do not want to do anything to destroy the progress we have made," Briggs stated in the release. "To all who took offense at my careless statements, I deeply apologize." Briggs also directly apologized to the Turley family.

Briggs is a close friend of one of the murder victim's families. James Austin Campbell, 15, was the son of SIUC associate professor in curriculum and instruction James Allen Campbell. Briggs also is an SIUC professor. He was present at almost every day of Neal's first trial. His heated words after that trial were the result of raw anger and frustration, but he later realized they also were wrong.

Let's all move past Briggs' error in judgment. Remaining divided over the thoughtless remarks Briggs made after Neal's first trial can only impede any progress our community hopes to make.

Stop whining about drinking, house parties

Dear Editor,

What the hell was that? I am referring to the whining pansy-driven spouted by Tim Buclow (Guest Column, Sept. 9.) All he did was whine in his column — the cops suck, the politics suck, etc.

OK, now let's talk reality. I have been a resident of Carbondale since mid-summer 1993. I moved here from the toilet affectionately known as St. Louis — where cops do a lot more than just harass party-goers, and you're lucky if all they do is bust your party.

The reason the bar-entry age was lowered was because the house parties that ensued after the bar entry-age was raised were — and still are — dangerous. Where are the bouncers when you have a violent collision? All that a bar has is a controlled atmosphere where someone can relax without the fear of people whose lack of ethics only is matched by their lack of conscience.

Don't believe me? Get so drunk that you get a nasty case of blood-alcohol poisoning. See who takes care of you first — the bar owner, or someone with an illegal party on his hands.

Second, quit whining about getting pinched for underage drinking. It's a risk that you take — if you're going to do the crime, be ready for the time. When I was in college back in 1993, drinking while underage was a roll of the dice. It was simple — you went to a bar and ordered a beer. Then you got plastered. If you got pinched, you paid your ticket.

National fraternity denies fault for binge drinking

REUTER

BATON ROUGE, La. — The national Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity denied Wednesday any fault for binge drinking at the Aug. 25 party that left one Louisiana State University pledge dead and another seriously injured.

A statement released by SAE spokesman Pete Stevenson said the fraternity's initial investigation of the incidents that ended early Aug. 26 with 20-year-old Benjamin Wynne's death from acute alcohol poisoning found "no evidence of hazing or forced drinking."

Tuesday, former SAE pledge Donald Hunt Jr. filed suit against the fraternity, LSU's Board of Supervisors, the owners of Murphy's Bar, where most of the drinking occurred at a private party, and two fraternity members employed by the bar.

Hunt, hospitalized in critical condition for five days from alcohol poisoning and related complications, claimed in the lawsuit that the fraternity members tacitly or overtly forced, urged or coerced him to participate in the drinking binge and failed to supervise his condition once he was drunk.

The SAE statement said, "We at Sigma Alpha Epsilon find it difficult to understand how Donald Hunt, a 21-year-old mature adult with prior military experience, can find fault" with SAE or LSU "for his actions off-site and off-campus."

Although paramedics initially reported Hunt's age as 19, university and SAE officials corrected it to 21, the legal drinking age in Louisiana.

SAE said the investigation into Wynne's death will continue, as will a 20-year-old national alcohol education program.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune reported Wednesday that Hunt pleaded guilty to a December 1996 driving-while-intoxicated charge in Covington, La., just five days before filing the lawsuit. He was given a deferred sentence, placed on two years' probation and ordered to pay a $350 fine and $188 in court costs.

Hunt also was sentenced to attend driver improvement and substance abuse programs and to perform four eight-hour days of community service, according to the St. Tammany Parish Clerk of Court's Office.

on the hour-long route.

"We've had a lot of high demand on Business Route 1," Borman said. "And during peak hours that bus was getting upwards of 45 to 50 people on it, and it was way too overcrowded."

The peak hours for riders on the buses are between 2 and 7 p.m.

There originally was an additional bus on Route 1 on Saturdays, but the route became so popular that another bus was necessary all the time.

Before the new bus was added, the Saluki Express operated eight buses for nine routes throughout the campus and city.

Borman said the response to the service has been higher than expected, with buses operating with an average occupancy of 50 percent.

The new route allows students on the west side of town to ride the bus to morning classes.

"Our Route 7 bus was designed to get students from the University to classes at the airport. We had students who wanted to come to class in the mornings, but we didn't have that option," Borman said. "The Route 10 bus now gives students living in the northwest part of town access to campus early in the mornings."

The new route operates seven days a week, giving students on the west end of town access to campus during the weekends. The new service will allow riders to visit businesses on both the east and west ends of town.

"We're trying to increase the frequency of service that students like to use the most, which is to the mall areas," he said.

Borman said that since the system began, there has been a provision in the contract for adding new routes.

He said the service could have added a new route or eliminated service on other routes in town.

"We're running on a bare-bones service the way it is, and reducing service on the other routes wasn't possible," he said.

Borman said several routes have been adjusted in the past, but none of the those changes required the addition of a new bus.

The Beck Bus Transportation Corporation, 250 E. Millet Court, provides the buses and drivers for a monthly fee based on the number of routes and the number of hours of services that the routes run.

Ed Beck, vice president of Beck Bus Transportation Corp., said Route 10 had been in development for quite some time to relieve the overload of Business Route 1.

"The ridership (on Route 1) was often at about 40 riders per hour or more, and once we reach a certain capacity, we have to pass by some of the stops," Beck said. "That is no way to treat your customers."

The number of riders on Route 10 is between 14 to 16 riders per hour, which was higher than Beck expected.

All decisions originate with the Mass Transit Advisory Board at the University, which includes student representatives.

Beck said the goal of the board and the bus company is to improve service to the students and the community.

"People now have access to the north side of town, and to campus on the weekend," Beck said. "They can also get to the mall every half an hour."

The service is entirely funded by the students, who pay a mass transit fee of $21 per semester. The fee was originally $25 per semester, but projected expenses were not as high as expected.

"A lot of the projected costs were high, but we were more frugal with the funds than they anticipated," Borman said.

Borman said any future changes will have to come after more research is conducted on usage.

"What we want to do is see where things are used and stay within the framework of our resources," he said. "We're trying to keep our costs down as low as possible because we are completely student funded."

Indian orphan remembers Mother Teresa's compassion

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

Rupa Foran, a 17-year-old student at Walsh University in North Canton, Ohio, knows next to nothing about how her life began in Kanpur, India.

To this day, she does not know her biological mother or father. But that does not mean there is a void in her life, or that she'll never know true happiness, for she is a child of Mother Teresa, one of a countless number of orphaned children taken in and nurtured by the little nun who died in Calcutta on Friday at the age of 87.

"She changed me. She dressed me. She fed me. She took care of me until I was 14 months old. To me," Rupa said, "she means the world. I think of her as my mother, and I will always think of her that way."

When Rupa heard of Mother Teresa's death, she was drawn to the Peace Pole at Walsh, where the nun and other humanitarians are honored with small stone monuments in a lovely campus garden.

There, Rupa left flowers, a candle and a message. She remembered the message like her ABCs.

"I said, 'You gave me my name. You gave me a home. You gave me God's blessing. But most of all, you gave me happiness,'" Rupa said.

Her adopted father, Patrick Foran, chief of personnel at FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C., thinks he knows why Rupa went to the Peace Pole to leave her gifts.

It's very close to the same way that she was found by Mother

Teresa. "Most of these kids, if not all of them, were abandoned," Foran said.

Rupa's birth certificate reads she was born on or about the date listed. There is nothing more, no exact knowledge about it. The nuns found them abandoned in bus stations and places like that all over India.

In Rupa's case, Foran said, she was left outside the gates of the Missions of Charity in Kanpur, an industrial city of about 2 million on the right bank of the Ganges River, 250 miles southeast of New Delhi.

Sister Eleanor Santangelo, a nun of the Ursuline order who accompanied Mother Teresa when she visited the Institute of Peace and Justice at Walsh in 1982, has no doubt about what would have happened if Rupa had not been left at those there and figure out the moves myself," he said. "If my friends didn't know, I would turn to the guide for help."

"You can use some of the tips at the arcades. The timing is a little different, but the moves are basically the same."

John Weeks, a video game player since 1981 and freshman in the ater from Springfield, is opposed to strategy guides.

"Using the guides is cheating," he said. "It gives you the hints and tells you exactly what you have to do. It doesn't allow you to use your mind and find out the ins and outs of the game."

Weeks said there are other ways to get tips without getting the strategy guides.

"There are ideas in the instruction book that you get with the games," he said. "Like in 'Zelda,' they tell you to burn bushes. So I would burn all the bushes until I found the secret."

Curt Elmore, a freshman in biological science from Allerton, agrees with Weeks that the use of the guides is cheating, and they are a waste of money.

"I figure that I will be able to defeat the game myself. And if I can't, I'll quit for a while then come back to the game and try again," he said. "The whole purpose of video games is to challenge yourself. Using a guide is just defeating the purpose of playing the game."

are trying to convince other communities to get local residents involved [through these demonstration sites]."

Chenita Lawson, Lake Heights residence council program coordinator/community organizer, said the council plans to do just that.

"The basic reason for mobilization is to band communities together," Lawson said. "After this project, we will be able to develop and grow together [with other communities] to prevent the youth of the area from participating in gangs."

Lake Heights Residence Council received a Tenants Opportunities Program Grant worth about $100,000 from the state's Housing and Urban Development program to fund the program.

The Carbondale Police Department was also unable to provide statistics on gang-related crimes because it does not keep such statistics.

Arson, parties, riots start CSU students' semester

KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Students at Colorado State University here began their school year the same way those at archival University of Colorado ended theirs — with parties spinning so out of control things got smashed and burned in the streets.

Here, for the last two weekends, police used tear gas to break up off-campus block parties that swelled to as many as 1,000 people. Each time, sofas were dragged outdoors and set ablaze, turning into huge bonfires as students piled on furniture and clothing. The first party was a back-to-school celebration; the second marked the annual Colorado - Colorado State football game.

Opinions vary as to what triggered the incidents. "I don't think anybody has figured out what's going on with the students," said Jeannine Malmbsbury, assistant director of public relations for the University of Colorado, where students rioted for three nights in May, breaking store windows and throwing rocks at police in Boulder.

But there's no disagreement on the common denominator: too much booze.

The problems here, coupled with the death last month of a Louisiana State University student whose blood-alcohol content was nearly six times the legal limit, have left college officials groping for more ways to deal with the volatile mix of students and alcohol.

"There's a recognition that, where there are young people, there's likely to be some measure of drinking," said Robert Pandina, director of the Center of Alcohol Studies at Rutgers University, which has run alcohol education and treatment programs for students on the New Brunswick, N.J., campus for nearly 20 years.

"And where there's some level of drinking, there's likely to be some level of problems," he said. "How do we minimize those problems?"

Even before this year's incidents, Colorado and Colorado State had extensive policies and programs on alcohol. Some CSU fraternities are alcohol-free, and the school is encouraging the rest to follow suit, said Keith Miser, vice president for student affairs.

At the University of Colorado, fraternities are phasing in a ban on alcohol at parties, Malmbsbury said. The school also is testing a two-year moratorium on beer sales during football games. But when it comes to off-campus events that get out of hand, Miser said: "Well, those are extremely hard to prevent."

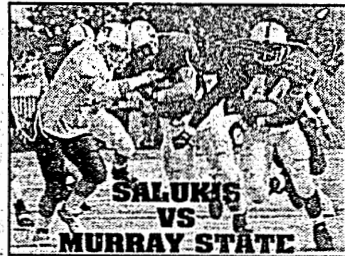

The immediate fallout here and in Boulder is a zero-tolerance policy by the universities and city officials for underage drinking and excessive partying in public.

"There's probably going to be a crackdown on house parties," said Brady Bowers, 22, a Colorado State senior who lives on the block where the partying started last weekend.

It's easy to spot the house Bowers rents with three other students: A bright-red Budweiser banner runs the width of the home. A window-repair truck was just leaving after tending to the weekend's damage.

Gory 'Event Horizon' fails to deliver

JASON ADRIAN
DE MOVIE CRITIC

Seeing the excellent movie trailer this summer for the sci-fi flick "Event Horizon" left me eagerly anticipating the release of the film. But when word got out about the excessive gore and failure of the film to deliver anything good, my anticipation was put on hold.

So when my curiosity got the better of me, I broke down and went to see it. After all, everyone could be wrong about the movie.

"Event Horizon" is the name of a spaceship that revolutionized space travel in the year 2040. Instead of using the straight line as the shortest distance between two points, the Event Horizon creates a black hole and passes through it to reach the second point instantaneously.

The ship disappears on its maiden voyage only to return seven years later, stranded in the orbit of Neptune.

A rescue crew led by Capt. Miller (Laurence Fishburne) sets out to see exactly what happened to the ship and its crew. Also along for the ride is Dr. Weir (Sam Neil), the scientist who created the Event Horizon.

Aboard the ship, the rescue crew slowly begins to piece together what happened to the maiden crew.

This is where it gets really scary — if only for a little bit. When the ship first went through the black hole it created, the dimension it went to was enough to cause the crew to lose their minds and, well, that's the gory part.

The rescue team is now the prey of the bloodthirsty, pure evil that the ship has become. But then the scary parts start to dwindle, and the movie just does not go any deeper like it could have.

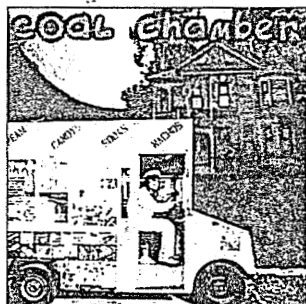

Director Paul Anderson uses sound to his advantage to scare the audience and the blood and guts to gross them out. It works even if it gets terribly excessive at times.

Ironically, everything I heard about this movie is true. The premise is very good but wait for a better flick if you are interested in the sci-fi/horror genre.

Coal Chamber
COAL CHAMBER
Roadrunner — 1997

Coal Chamber takes you on a maniacal, high-speed chase with its self-titled debut album. The band's heavy, hard-hitting groove is impossible to listen to without getting that urge to jump around and mosh.

They start out strong with "Loco" and keep going hard and heavy all through this 14-song L.P. Coal Chamber formulates a downward ride to dementia with "Bradley." Awesome bass lines, supplied by bassist Rayna, keep this album full of groove. The band also includes guitarist Meegs Rascon and drummer Mike "Bug" Cox.

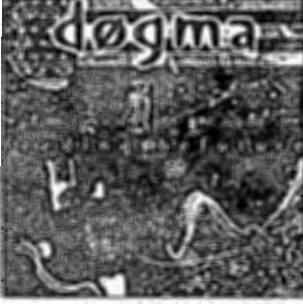

This not-metal, not-alternative style is the bastard child that was conceived when rock and hip-hop started mixing and then was toned down. Coal Chamber comes across with a spastic style comparable to that of Korn and the Deftones.

Coal Chamber recorded a self-produced demo in 1994 and quickly released it onto the street. Blown away by the eclectic sound of this Los Angeles band and its frontman Dez Fafara's schizophrenic vocals, a Roadrunner records representative offered them a deal in 1995. The next months were turbulent though. Dez left the band for almost six months. In 1996, the band regrouped and committed to a full-steam-ahead approach that fueled the band with a new, increased intensity.

The Roadrunner deal was finally settled during Christmas 1996, and the band headed for the studio to begin recording. The day they were to begin recording, Dez's wife left him. Asking him "Are you all right?" before leaving, his response "Do I seem all right to you?" was laid to tape later that day in the studio, becoming the new chorus to "Unspoiled," the fourth track on the album.

Coal Chamber's debut album is definitely impressive. Their new, erratic sound is unique, weird but most important, lively.

Dogma
FEEDING THE FUTURE
Mercury — 1997

After hearing an album title like "Feeding the Future," one would expect peerless, if not revolutionary, songs breaking the bounds of music as we know it. But in the case of Dogma's debut album, the title has no significant meaning whatsoever because the songs on the album fail to break any new ground.

That's not saying that the album is not any good. Some of the songs are as rocking as the Smashing Pumpkins and early Metallica, which would make sense because some of the songs sound exactly like the afore-mentioned bands.

If it were not for the Bad-Religionesque vocals of frontman Phil Allocco on the vibrant "Anyone at All" and the slower "He Knows," the average listener would probably think the songs were the tracks from the Pumpkins' debut album "Gish" that didn't make the final cut.

The band is really good on the funky-guitar driven tunes like "Held My Tongue" ("I took too many steps toward compromise/I've held my tongue and I swallowed my words for the last time").

The opening cut "Cancer" shows that the band can write hard rock that sounds original. And that is not easy to do in a limited style of music. The echo-affected vocals lead up to a chorus worth singing and a guitar riff deserving of some serious air guitar.

The talk box on the melodically heavy "Conversation" is a definite plus. Not many bands seem interested in the sounds a talk box can create, and not since Guns 'n Roses and Cracker has it added so much to a band's sound.

Though Dogma doesn't exactly take any steps toward the future of rock 'n' roll, they occasionally show potential to be a band that you will be hearing more about in the years to come.

—Jason Adrian

How to Be a Player
MOTION PICTURE SOUNDTRACK
Rush Associated Labels — 1997

The summer release of Def Jam's "How to be a Player" soundtrack unfortunately is almost as funny as the movie. Even with a cast of hit-making entertainers, this soundtrack tends to be exhaustingly humorous.

From the sleazy rhymes of Foxy Brown to the ghetto rapping of Master P, this compilation overflows with musical variety.

Rapper Foxy Brown makes two appearances on the track with "Big Bad Mama," featuring R&B group Dru Hill, and "I Gotta Know," with the rapper Playa. Although she can be irritating, Foxy Brown has the overall best song on the album.

Like the player she claims to be, Foxy raps, "So far I'm been through this year with no bra/sheer shirt/shakin' my na na/this here hurts/got 'em sprung/let 'em know I'm the isis/but for the best effect you gotta use your tongue." And my favorite line of all, "Foxy/chocolate baby/got milk."

Other artists on the soundtrack include singer Rick James, rappers Too Short, Crucial Conflict and Tupac Shakur. Surprising as it may be, none of these artists make a strong influence on the soundtrack.

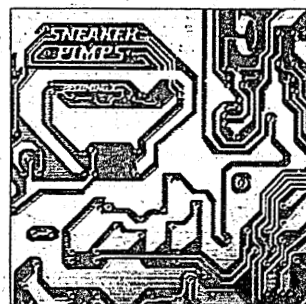

But Master P stands his gangsta ground with the track "How to be a Playa."

On this track he raps, "Star 69 to get you whipped/mama told you never mess with a southern pimp/I got this pimp game from my grandfather, big daddy/ he said keep yo' four women in your candy-painted Caddy."

I have to give a big thumbs up for the player of all time, Max Julien, also known as Goldie. His words in the intro and outro of the album were touching.

"So there I was a prisoner of my own illusion, dwelling in the convention hall of the players. Sucking oil out of candlesticks, making bow ties out of bra straps, trying to be the one man — you know, like, trying to be the one."

—Tumeka L. Hicks

Sneaker Pimps
BECOMING X
Virgin — 1996

One of the more worthy bands in the recent incursion of UK alternative dance bands is riding high on the success of its sizzling single "6 Underground." Rightfully so, because the song is a catchy, trip-hop number characterized with lead singer Kelli Drayton's haunting vocals.

Like many of the other UK bands, the Sneaker Pimps' main focus are the samples and electronica similar to fellow English dance music artists Tricky and Portishead.

What makes the Sneaker Pimps more unique is their dark sexuality on songs like the slow and grinding "Roll On."

Dayton's vocals ride the rhythms put down by keyboardist Liam Howe and guitarist Chris Comer impressively well. Evidence of this is clear on the swarthy "Wasted Early Sunday Morning" ("You're still in reach/I please myself/wasting early Sunday morning").

Co-produced by Flood (U2, Depeche Mode) the album refuses to hold back from any unusual sounds used for rhythmic purposes. Such is the case in the opening cut "Low Place Like Home," and the metallic clinks placed strategically between choruses.

"Tesko Suicide" shows the trio's ability to utilize a danceable drum beat with subtle guitar riffs while focusing on Dayton's infantile vocal approach. The song is about the media's glamorization of self-inflicted death, and the lyrics dive into young people's idolization of those lifestyles ("Cut your hair/wear a chip on your shoulder/get ahead/get laid/get it over").

"6 Underground" typifies the band's style of slow, infectious and dark balladry. The only things missing from the album are more ambitious spins like "Tesko Suicide." But from the sound of "Becoming X," the Pimps sound like they're on the right track.

any joy he felt about his individual effort.

"That was probably the first time I've had more than two or three carries in a game," Noltbertowicz said. "Offensively, from the practices we've had, I thought we were comfortable with each other. It was kind of upsetting to see what went on out there."

Playing behind tailbacks Carpenter and Bonner left Noltbertowicz with few opportunities to carry the ball during the past two seasons, but Saturday turned out to be his coming-out party as the Saluki tailbacks struggled.

Carpenter, who played in his first game since the 1995 season Saturday, rushed for 11 yards on nine carries in three quarters of play. Bonner, who rushed for 1,234 yards while earning All-Gateway Football Conference honors last season, did not see action until the fourth quarter and rushed for 12 yards on five carries.

Noltbertowicz starred in the backfield for Lake Central High School, where he earned all-conference and all-state honors.

But Noltbertowicz's career at SIUC has been one suited for a team player. Noltbertowicz walked on at SIUC and rushed for 18 yards on six carries as a freshman. He gained 108 yards on 23 carries last season as Bonner and tailbacks Tirrell Robinson and Rodney Kennedy shared the bulk of the rushing load.

Noltbertowicz, who was granted a full scholarship this season, has handled the majority of the backfield's blocking assignments in his three years at SIUC.

"It was a lot of hard work coming in as a walk-on," Noltbertowicz said. "I was fifth on the depth chart at fullback and by the end of camp, I think I was second."

"I feel more a part of it (the offense). I think they count on me more than last year. Last year, I was a little bit more of a blocker for the offense, and now I have a little bit more responsibility."

Noltbertowicz and his Saluki teammates will face another solid defensive ballclub Saturday, as first-year coach Denver Johnson brings his Racers to Carbondale looking for their third-straight win over SIUC.

Murray State has dominated the scoreboard in the last two meetings, defeating SIUC 35-3 in 1995 and holding on for a 48-38 win last season after taking a 34-7 lead into halftime.

The Racers enter Saturday's game at 1-1 and opened the season with a 13-0 shutout of Gateway Football Conference member Indiana State University.

But Murray State is returning from a 52-50 overtime loss at Western Kentucky University, in which the Racers allowed 22 points in the overtime period while scoring 20 points themselves.

SIUC coach Jan Quarless said Murray State's defense has weaknesses, but their experienced players, including nine players who have transferred from Division I-A schools, give them an edge over his Salukis.

"I'd like to get the 52 points that Western Kentucky got," Quarless said. "Western Kentucky played well early, and they made some big plays."

"But what you saw was a football team never lose composure, and I think it comes from that experience. That maturity you can't replace. It's a big plus."

Saturday's game also marks Hall of Fame Day at SIUC, and Quarless will reunite with former Saluki Terry Taylor, who Quarless coached in his stint as an assistant at SIUC from 1980 to 1982.

Quarless said the ceremony is a special time, but he wants to treat each game similarly.

"For me, I think each game is extremely important, and I try to eliminate any external factors in my mind," Quarless said. "I'm going to take it as a football game, and every game is important to me in that way."

Saluki Sports Briefs

Men's tennis opens season at Wichita State

The Saluki men's tennis opens its 1997 fall season in the Wichita State University Fall Classic in Wichita, Kan., today. The three-day tournament will end Sunday.

SIUC is coming off a 6-16 finish in 1996-97, including eighth-place out of eight teams in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Saluki basketball adds assistant coach

SIUC men's basketball coach Rich Herrin announced Thursday afternoon the hiring of Bill Perkins as assistant coach for the 1997-98 season.

Perkins comes from Eaglecrest High School in Aurora, Colo., where he spent the past two years. A native of Lebanon, Perkins coached at Rose-Hulman Institute in Terre Haute, Ind., from 1991 to 1994.

Perkins replaces Tommie Deffenbaugh, who accepted a similar position at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., in August.

"We're excited about adding Bill Perkins to our staff for several reasons, but primarily because of his enthusiasm for the game, his contacts all over the United States and his experience in recruiting," Herrin stated in a press release.

SIUC baseball to offer walk-ons a tryout Sunday

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan will conduct walk-on tryouts for his 1998 squad at 9 a.m. Sunday.

Tryouts will be conducted at Abe Martin Field, located south of SIU Arena.

The tryout camp will be conducted much like professional baseball camps, with two inter-squad scrimmages scheduled.

Callahan announced Wednesday night his team will be without part-time pitching coach Derek Johnson, who was named new full-time pitching coach for Stetson University.

Callahan said Johnson's influence was strong on his pitching staff.

"D.J. (Johnson) will be missed by our program, as he has a good relationship with our pitching staff and did an excellent job for us," Callahan stated in a press release. "Getting this first, full-time position is a tremendous opportunity for him, but it is too bad we couldn't have found a way to keep him here with us at SIU."

Volleyball team opens touney at Northern Iowa

The SIUC volleyball team opens its Missouri Valley Conference schedule at 7 tonight against the University of Northern Iowa at Davies Gymnasium.

The Salukis also play host to Bradley University at 7 p.m. Saturday at Davies Gym.

SIUC outside hitter Marlo Moreland said opening conference play is an exciting time for the Salukis.

"We know these games are more important and they count towards the goal we want to accomplish," Moreland said. "Everybody's going to have a more aggressive attitude to win."

Coach Sonya Locke said her team has prepared no differently for Friday and Saturday's matches than previous matchups.

"Volleyball is volleyball no matter who it is you're playing," Locke said. "Obviously teams are different, but just because you're playing a different team doesn't mean you're going to have to change your offense or defense."

Women's cross country team defends title

The SIUC women's cross country team travels to Peoria today for the Bradley Invitational for a defense of last year's meet championship.

The team is trying to rebound from Saturday's second-place finish behind the University of Kansas at its first meet in Carbondale.

Coach Don DeNoon said the team has a good chance of winning today because there will not be as much competition this year.

"Bradley may be the toughest team there," DeNoon said. "We'll have to wait and see how deep they are."

DeNoon said he hopes the freshmen runners will continue to help the team.

"Becky Cox was real impressive on Saturday, and she has been looking good this week," DeNoon said. "I think Marissa (Jelks) and Sharun (Downing) got the jitters out of the way and maybe will help us out on Friday."

HALL OF FAME

Raske Sparrey, Bob Steele and Tim Hill.

The day also will be marked by the return of SIUC alumni for Member Appreciation Day.

As a Hall of Fame honoree, Wrona still holds many records at SIUC.

He played infield for the Saluki baseball team from 1987 to 1990 and leads the all-time list of total bases (285), at-bats (846) and games played (241).

The most visible group in the Hall of Fame list this year is the Saluki swimming and diving team.

Bob Steele and Tim Hill are being honored as coaches, while Westfall-Wells is being inducted for her athletic performance.

Saluki men's swimming coach Rick Walker said the strong presence of swimmers in the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies shows the strength of the department.

"I don't think this necessarily says swimming is the only thing that goes on here," Walker said.

"But we are reaching the time when that era of swimming is being recognized."

They set a standard for all future programs. Swimming and diving have been a mainstay for Saluki athletics.

Steele, who coached men's swimming from 1974 to 1984, had a career dual record of 68-25 at SIUC.

Hill had four top-10 teams at the National Independent Championships in his coaching days. He coached the women's swimming team from 1980 to 1985.

Westfall-Wells said she was able to become a better swimmer because of Hill's leadership.

"I am proud to be going into the Hall of Fame at the same time as him," she said.

"I had a good college career because of him. He was a fabulous coach, and he did the program a lot of good."

Westfall-Wells was a Saluki swimmer from 1983 to 1986.

She leads the school's all-time 200-meter butterfly list with a time of 2 minutes and 24 seconds.

Also on the inductee list is Raske

Sparrey, who recently took over as head women's track and field coach at the Central Michigan University.

She ran track at SIUC from 1985 to 1989, while being named SIUC Female Athlete of the Year for the 1988-1989 season.

Women's track and field coach Don DeNoon said what he saw while coaching Raske Sparrey was the right attitude and skills for a Hall of Fame inductee.

"It was the right choice," DeNoon said. "She is the one remaining from the past who hadn't been picked."

She was always the one who wanted to do a little extra.

She had strong goals, and she focused on her accomplishments both academically and athletically."

Want $25,000+ for college?

The Army Reserve can help you take a big bite out of college expenses.

How?

If you qualify, the Montgomery GI Bill could provide you with over $7,000 for college or approved vo/tech training. We'll also pay you over $107 a weekend to start. Training is usually one weekend a month plus two weeks' Annual Training. By adding the pay for Basic Training and skill training, you'll earn over $18,000 during a standard enlistment.

So, if you could use a little financial help getting through school—the kind that won't interfere with school—stop by or call:

DAY OF FIRSTS:

Salukis' home opener to feature host of history.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Saturday's home football game against Murray State University will be a celebration of firsts for both SIUC football coach Jan Quarless and former Saluki Terry Taylor.

Quarless will be coaching his first home game as head coach at SIUC.

and Taylor will be the first defensive specialist to be inducted into the SIUC Hall of Fame during the half-time ceremony at McAndrew Stadium.

Five other people also will be honored in the ceremony.

Taylor's induction into the SIUC Hall of Fame will be a homecoming for Taylor and Quarless. It was Quarless who recruited the defensive back to play at SIUC in 1980 when Quarless was an assistant coach.

"If it weren't for him (Quarless), I wouldn't have gone to Southern Illinois," Taylor said. "I hope I bring some luck for the team, but I am sure he (Quarless) will do a good job."

Taylor lettered four years at SIUC and was part of the 1983 national championship team. He has the all-time record at SIUC for interceptions with 20, and he also spent 10 years in the NFL before retiring in 1995.

Along with Taylor, the five other inductees include Dave Wrona, Stacey Westfall-Wells, Kathleen OPPORTUNITY: Hardworking Saluki fullback fills vacuum when star tailbacks stumble.

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC fullback Bryan Noltbertowicz knows exactly what it is like to play football unnoticed, but the unsung hero role is one to which he is not accustomed.

Noltbertowicz, a junior from Dyer, Ind., has spent most of his Saluki career in the shadows of SIUC's stable of talented tailbacks, including Coe Bonner and Karlton Carpenter. But the 6-foot fullback enters Saturday's home opener against Murray State University as the team's leading rusher.

Noltbertowicz rushed for 40 yards on seven carries in the Salukis' 33-0 loss at Nicholls State University Saturday and was one of the few bright spots for a Saluki offense that could not get untracked.

Noltbertowicz said the loss overshadowed

NO POLE: Fans may be left searching for Stars and Stripes.

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

The national anthem will begin play as usual at the Saluki football home game against Murray State University Saturday, but SIUC students and fans may have to search for a flag to salute.

The flagpole at the stadium almost fell down in the spring, and the SIUC Athletic Department has yet to replace it with a new pole.

Finding an answer to the flag pole dilemma has turned out to be a little more difficult than expected.

Bruce Francis, SIUC's superintendent of grounds, said SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart requested that Francis take down the pole after it nearly collapsed following a rainstorm.

"The pole was full of water and it basically had rusted off," Francis said. "I was told by Jim Hart to take it out of the sidewalk."

Hart said the University is working on several ideas, but he would not elaborate on any plans, or what the situation will be this weekend.

"We're still working on that, and I don't know what we're going to do yet," Hart said

Tuesday afternoon.

SIUC Associate Athletic Director Charlotte West said she was returning from a trip to a basketball tournament with Hart in late March when she noticed the pole was leaning over, but she has not been involved in finding a solution.

So far now the Salukis will take the field for Hall of Fame Day Saturday, and all heads will turn to salute the flag — wherever it may be.

THE DIVERSE WAY TO GO OUT

The Southern Illinois Metalsmithing Exhibition features works from SIUC instructors, alumni and pieces from the Ornamental Metal Museum in Memphis.

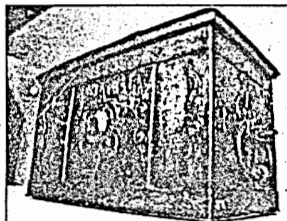

ANTIQUES:

An 18th-century European strongbox (right) and a 16th-century alms box (above) are a few of the objects on display at the Southern Illinois Metalsmiths Exhibition, which will be shown at the University Museum through Sept. 21.

Making much of METAL

As interest in metal-smithing increases, SIUC alumnus John Medwedeff says a conference and exhibition like the ones in progress at the University Museum are compelling methods of raising local recognition of the art.

The Southern Illinois Metalsmiths Exhibition, which began Aug. 26, and runs until Sept. 21, displays the artistic works of SIUC alumni as well as works from the Ornamental Metal Museum in Memphis, Tenn.

Featured metalsmithing artists include Medwedeff, SIUC alumnus Brent Kingston and SIUC assistant professor Rick Smith.

"All the exhibits manifest the history and are bringing blacksmithing to everyone's attention," Medwedeff said. "There aren't many exhibitions on blacksmithing. And here we have some work that's about 300 years old. It's a pretty wide field."

In conjunction with the exhibition of the artist's work, the Carbondale Metals Conference and Exhibition, sponsored by the Southern Illinois Metalsmithing Society (SIMS), will take place Saturday and Sunday. The conference will consist of five artists lecturing from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. about their displays. They will also advise metalsmithing students on how to be successful in the field.

Stephen Yusko, a second-year metalsmithing graduate from Ohio and a SIMS member, said it is important for all students to be aware of the metalsmithing field.

"It's a new era of metalsmithing," Yusko said. "We felt it was important to have a lecture series in conjunction with the exhibition to show what's going on in Carbondale."

Michael Beam, University Museum curator, said an exhibition and lecture for metalsmithing is overdue. He said he hopes the event will give students a better understanding of the art form.

"This is the first time there has been a lecture that coincides with an exhibition on blacksmithing," he said. "It's a nice thing for students to see the world of blacksmithing. They can look at the displays and then listen to the lectures of the artists."

Medwedeff, who owns Medwedeff Forge and Design in Murphy, Mo., said he will lecture on his work as well as everything that deals with metal-smithing.

"I will talk about everything from the law to customer relations, to design, presentations and employment," he said. "Anything that any small metal-smithing business could face."

Medwedeff said he is proud of his work that is being exhibited because all his art requires such great time and energy.

Some of his best work being displayed includes the black-steel "Advent Candleholders" and photographs of the "John Deere Commission," which he also designed from steel and is the most intense design Medwedeff has accomplished.

The John Deere Commission project consisted of 10 rounded-glass sculptures that were 8 feet in diameter. The sculptures, which took four months to complete, were placed on the inside roof of the John Deere plant in Moline.

"The John Deere piece is definitely significant and has more visibility," he said. "But the same care, design and craftsmanship goes into each piece."

In the lecture, Medwedeff plans to inform conference attendees on how to come out on top in the metalsmithing business. He said he wants students to know everything they need to know to become successful.

"These students should know the business aspects of metalsmithing," he said, "as well as how to structure and go through the process of styling their art."

Man memorializes wife with music scholarship

A former Murphysboro man has established a scholarship for music students on SIUC's campus.

The scholarship is a memorial to his deceased wife, Ann Fisher Brouillette.

Charles Brad Brouillette, now living in Littleton, Colo., bestowed upon the University a $41,000 endowment to spawn creativity in talented musicians. This money will mean an annual $2,000 scholarship for a female music student at SIUC.

The University will decide the first recipient of the award in the spring.

Junior or senior women from Jackson County who show academic promise and financial need will be given preference in the decision.

Altgeld series provides trio for listening enjoyment

As part of the Altgeld Performing Artist Series, "Trio, a Free for All," will visit Shryock Auditorium at 8 tonight.

The show will consist of five different trios made up of internationally recognized School of Music faculty.

The Brass Trio will perform a Gerald Finzi piece "I Have Loved-Flowers that Fade" and "Two Pastiches" by Walter S. Hartley. The String Trio will perform "String Trio, Op. 9, No. 1 in G Major." The Jazz Trio will play J.J. Johnson's "Lament" and "In Your Own Sweet Way" by Dave Brubeck. The Baroque will entertain with "Sonata No. 2 in F Major," and the final trio of the show will encircle Shryock with a non-stop musical trip through Broadway.

This last trio will feature such classics as "Make Believe" from Kern and Hammerstein's "Showboat," "One Hand, One Heart" from Bernstein and Sondheim's "West Side Story" and "When the Kids Get Married" from Schmidt and Jones' "I Do, I Do."

Tickets for the show will be $6.50 for the general public and $3 for children, students and senior citizens.

For more information about this, or any of the series shows, call 536-2787.

Kelley Deal brings talents to Copper Dragon Friday

Kelley Deal has catapulted herself out of the shadow of twin sister and current Breeder Kim Deal with her new band the Kelley Deal 6000.

The band will rock the Copper Dragon Friday when they take the stage as the headlining act in a three-band show getting underway around 10 p.m.

The Chicago-based acoustic rock band Hello Dave will get the crowd rocking in the second spot with its Southern-influenced songs from their new release "West."

The Mitch Mitchell Band will begin warming up the crowd when the show starts around 10 p.m.

STREET BEALE

The famous address houses blues music, theaters and restaurants that attract of tourists a year

Living in Memphis, Tenn., for a short period of time gave Ebony Perrin the opportunity to party along Beale Street, and now she has memories to carry with her for life.

"Memphis is known for its history of blues music, and Beale Street is full of music," said Perrin, a junior in advertising. "It's like a strip with different activities."

Numerous theaters, restaurants and nightclubs, including B.B. King's Blues Club, grace the famous street. Beale Street is known by many as the highlight of Memphis.

"So many people from here and from out of town just hang out," Perrin said. "Plus there's Elvis Presley's nightclub and the B.B. King Club."

Catherine Bell, sales manager for B.B. King's, said Beale Street's history attracts many people to the club, which is known for its variety of blues acts that perform, as well as its food.

"Aside from the national and local music, we offer good food like ribs, catfish and red beans and rice," Bell said. "A good 30 to 50 percent of our guests are a portion of the tourism."

status, Bell said its location on Beale Street attracts a significant number of people.

"The historical aspect of it pulls in a lot of people," she said.

"It does a lot for establishments — from little, cozy nightclubs to large establishments like ourselves."

Perrin recalls large crowds of residents and tourists hanging out on Beale Street every weekend, allowing her to meet diverse people.

"You get to see a little bit of everybody — black, white, Hispanic," she said. "It's like a big street party."

All the action takes place outside on the street, Perrin said.

While the older people go inside the nightclubs, the younger crowd engage in the entertainment along the street.

"Most of the younger people just stand outside and listen to the different bands that perform," she said.

"And the music in the clubs is loud enough for you to hear outside, too."

Among the activities that take place on Beale Street are annual summer music festivals.

Bands from all over the country perform at the festivals, which celebrate the variety of Beale Street with performances by different bands.

Bell said the festivals, which attract about 100,000 people a year, should be scheduled more often to entice more Memphis locals as well as tourists.

"To me, it's something that should be done more often to bring more people to Beale Street," Bell said.

"We get all the tourists, and we need more local people. Beale Street appeals to more tourists than locals."
