Anti-nuclear group organizes at SIU

By Deb Browne
Staff Writer

About 250 persons who gathered Wednesday in the Capitol Building in Springfield to show their concern about the dangers of nuclear fission ended their demonstration with a ringing chorus of "This Land is Your Land."

Among them were about 10 persons from Carbondale, including those in the fledgling SIU-C Prairie Alliance, an anti-nuke group.

Thomas Marcinkowski, an unclassified graduate student with a major in forestry, organized the group shortly after the accident occurred in the reactor on Three-Mile Island in Pennsylvania. Members of the Shawnee Solar Network have also joined the fight against nuclear power.

Using a constitution from a past SIU Prairie Alliance group, Marcinkowski is in the process of obtaining Student Government recognition of the group as a student club. Student Government may then fund the group if the Student Senate approves.

Active demonstrations will only be one type of activity sponsored by the alliance, according to member Cheryl Casey.

Educating the community about fission and its alternatives and keeping up with and lobbying for related legislation are the goals of the group, Casey said.

At least six bills involving nuclear fission will soon be considered by the state legislature.

"I can see by the number of bills introduced that the Illinois legislature is hot on the issue," says Dennis Wescott, a senior in social welfare and an alliance member.

A bill calling for a five-year moratorium on new plant construction is being sponsored in the House by Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Paoline, and in the Senate by Sen. Vince DeMuzio, D-Collinsville. The bills call for the formation of an autonomous committee which would study the feasibility of fission energy in Illinois.

Other legislation would prohibit the importation of spent fuel into Illinois, establish a fee for disposal of radioactive wastes, and set up requirements and approval procedures for nuclear waste dumps.

Marcinkowski said he will make copies of these bills and petitions available in the Student Center, across from the TV room, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday.

A meeting for persons interested in joining the alliance will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in Activity Room A of the Student Center.

In addition, on Wednesday afternoon, the Student Government Activities Council and the Student Environmental Center will co-sponsor the showing of two documentaries on nuclear power.

"The Last Resort," which discusses the reactor in Seabrook, N.H., and "Danger: Radioactive Wastes." The time and location of the films will be announced later.

Rendleman resigns from SIU Board

By Donna Kunkel
Staff Writer

After serving on the SIU Board of Trustees for a slightly more than one month, David Rendleman, a Carbondale surgeon, resigned as a trustee Thursday to avoid what he thought could be a "conflict of interest."

Harris Rowe, chairman of the board, announced Rendleman's resignation at the board meeting at the SIU School of Dental Medicine in Alton.

Rendleman submitted a formal letter of resignation to Gov. James Thompson Wednesday, saying his private business interests might be construed as conflicting with the interests of the board.

Rendleman is a director and shareholder in the University Bank of Carbondale, a depository for University funds. He is also a clinical associate professor at the SIU School of Medicine. In the letter submitted to Thompson, Rendleman wrote, "To avoid ever: the remotest appearance of conflict, I have regretfully come to the decision that I should resign. This decision is made to preserve the integrity and reputation of the Board of Trustees and to enable me to continue to fulfill my responsibility to my family."

Rowe said it was with "regret" that he announced Rendleman's resignation.

"I want to thank Dr. Rendleman for his great interest in the welfare and future of Southern Illinois University," Rowe said. "His own integrity cannot be questioned and his services will be missed."

Rendleman replaced Margaret Blackshere, former secretary of the board, as of March 1.

Blackshere, director of political action for the Illinois Federation of Teachers, was not reappointed to the board because the governor said he thought her involvement with the IFT was a "conflict of interest."

Blackshere served on the board for six years.

Rendleman did not attend Thursday's meeting and he was not present at the March 9 meeting. He did attend an early morning session held March 9 to discuss the developments in the search for a chancellor. However, he could not stay for the regular board meeting later that morning because he had to perform a previously scheduled surgery.

Rowe said he did not know when the governor would name a replacement for Rendleman but he hoped it would be before July 1. To make any decisions, a quorum of the board must be present. Rowe said that if a new appointment is not made before July—when some board members are planning vacations—it could cause difficulties in achieving a quorum.

Rendleman could not be reached for comment.

Three-car accident

Two people were injured in a three-car accident that occurred Thursday evening on Pleasant Hill Road, east of Wall Street. One victim was Mike Baker, (above) a computer science major at SIU. Baker was taken to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, where he was treated and released. (Staff photo by George Burns)

Matthews' trial set for Monday

By Susan Fernandez
Staff Writer

The long-awaited trial of Student President Garrick-Clinton Matthews will take place at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the Vermillion Room of the Student Center, according to Senator Mary Haynes.

Haynes, a plaintiff in the trial and one of the authors of the articles of impeachment, said Thursday that the Campus Judicial Board for Governance met in closed session Wednesday night and set the date of the trial. Austin Randolph, chairman of the J-Board—the body that will determine if Matthews should be removed from office—could not be reached for comment.

Matthews was impeached by the Student Senate in November on charges of dereliction of duty and failure to fulfill the eligibility requirements.

"I am not worried about the trial," Matthews said Thursday. He added that he "more or less" has his defense prepared.

Matthews also said he has not yet decided if he will petition the J-Board to close the hearing to the public. According to the Student Government by-laws, the board or the defendant can request a closed hearing for "substantial or acceptable reasons." The J-Board will decide whether or not to comply with such a request.

Haynes said that she will petition that the trial remain open to the public.

"But, I am afraid that it will turn into a witch hunt if it is open. The J-Board may have to close it," Haynes said.

According to Haynes, when the trial was originally held last December security measures were taken.

"The Saluki patrol was there (at the trial)," Haynes said.

However, the J-Board was forced to call off the trial because it did not have a quorum. One member disqualified himself from hearing Matthews' trial because of his relationship with Matthews.

Eleven members will hear Monday's trial. Seven are required for a quorum.

The trial has been delayed because Matthews failed to replace the member who resigned.

Gus says it's probably more appropriate to have Garrick's trial on Easter Monday than on Good Friday.

Vieth, Fischer try for 'winning punch'

By Ed Lempinen
Staff Writer

Like fire and water, or night and day, mayoral candidates Hans Fischer and Rose S. Vieth could hardly be more different.

And as the April 17 election day draws near, the differences between Fischer, the incumbent, and Vieth, the challenger, have been accentuated by their verbal sparring and campaign jabbing. Both have been trying to score the winning punch. Both, however, have styles of their own, and those styles have been displayed often at City Council meetings and candidate forums in the six weeks since the primary election.

Vieth, who has been active in neighborhood organizations and the South-west Association for the Preservation of the Environment, has spent much of the campaign trying to put Fischer on the defensive by challenging his record as a council member and mayor.

For most of the campaign, Fischer has brushed aside the charges and defended his past record. But in the past two weeks, he has begun to respond to her charges with counter-charges and jabs of his own.

Such tactics on the part of both candidates have been most evident on the low-income housing controversy. Candidates and campaign observers alike agree that this has become the most discussed, if not the most important, issue in the campaign.

Vieth has taken an aggressively hostile stand on the three projects being considered for the city. Fischer, on the other hand, has not endorsed the projects, but has taken a more cautious approach. He has endorsed the ad hoc Task Force on Changing Population in the Community, and has expressed confidence that they will conduct an objective study of the city's population and housing needs before delivering an objective recommendation to the council.

In addition, Fischer played a part in engineering a Jackson County Housing Authority moratorium on its planning for 97 low-income family housing units in the city. He has also responded to Vieth's criticisms of the city's Housing Assistance Plan by defending the city staff's collection of data.

Generally, Fischer has contended that he prefers to wait for the task force's recommendation before making a decision on the desirability of the developments.

Responding to Fischer's actions, Vieth has charged that the task force and the JCHA moratorium are "political ploys" designed to appease opposition to the housing developments.

"I accuse Mayor Hans Fischer of taking a cop-out," Vieth said last month. "It is quite apparent that he wants no controversy until after the election."

Vieth has maintained that the city should attempt to find private or government financing for single-family homes that could eventually be owned by the family living there.

Fischer, however, has called single-family housing "economically unfeasible," and has lashed out at the "panic being created by a distortion of facts."

While the housing issue has dominated the pre-election debate, Vieth and Fischer clash on several other issues.

Fischer, a partner in a Carbondale architectural firm, is the senior member of the City Council with 16 years of service as a councilman and mayor. He has maintained that the city's Town Central Plan should be the model for downtown redevelopment. Under the plan, the "new" downtown area will be anchored by the new federal building, a multi-million dollar convention center, a parking garage and a new railroad station.

Vieth, however, has criticized the downtown redevelopment plans, and has called the convention center and federal building symptoms of the city's "concrete syndrome." Vieth has said that she would place greater emphasis on conservation and renovation of the downtown area and the rest of the city. She has outlined a plan for a mall on Illinois Avenue, with parks and benches to attract residents to the area. The city should subsidize the businessmen in the area for the facelift of present buildings, she said.

Perhaps more than any other issue, Vieth has emphasized that as mayor, she would increase the voice of residents in city decisions. That stand has led her to endorse the idea of a change to the aldermanic form of representation in the city. According to Vieth, a change from the current at-large representation would improve residents' access to elected representatives, and would insure that one black person and one student would always have a seat on the council.

But Fischer has insisted that "Carbondale wrote the book on citizen involvement," and he points to the recently implemented capital improvements checklist as evidence of the city's commitment to residents' input. He said in February that he might consider a change in the type of representation to some mix of at-large and aldermanic representatives, but he added that such a change should not be considered during an election campaign.

Despite the intensity of the debate, Vieth and Fischer do agree on some issues. Both agree that full implementation of the railroad relocation program is vital to improvement of traffic problems and to the growth of the city. Both agree that the city should attempt to keep the drinking age at 19 if the legislature raises it to 21, but Fischer qualified his support by saying that he favors a public discussion of the issue.

Fischer and Vieth both hold a common view on one other matter, and it is central to the debate: Both would like to be the next mayor of Carbondale.

Write-in bases campaign on housing

By Ed Lempinen
Staff Writer

Bob Phillips is challenging Rose S. Vieth and Hans Fischer for the mayor's office, but voters won't see his name on the ballot Tuesday.

Phillips, 56 and a cab driver for the Carbondale Yellow Cab Co., is a write-in candidate for the office. He holds a bachelor's degree in sociology from SIU.

Phillips is basing his write-in campaign on the need for low-income housing in Carbondale.

In a recent letter to the federal department of Housing and Urban Development, which was also sent to the Daily Egyptian, Phillips explained his reason for seeking an office that most people do not give him a chance of winning.

"I am a mayoral candidate, and I recognize that my request may be a form of political suicide," Phillips wrote. "However, I did not enter the race because I wanted to hold office, but because I believe it is the right of every American to have decent housing, and because I want to see Carbondale deserve the title of an All-American City."

Phillips' first public appearance came at a Carbondale City Council meeting on March 26. At that time, he told the council that his trailer at the Carbondale Mobile Homes trailer park had been destroyed by fire last summer, and that he had been forced to live at the Bel Aire Motel because he could not find housing that he could afford.

"If (somebody) does not think there is a need for housing... I'll take him down to the Bel Aire Motel or the King's Inn Motel and show him families with children living in one room because they can't get the bread together," Phillips told the council.

In his letter to HUD, he requested that all federal funds to the city be withheld. However, he has addressed no other issues in his campaign.

Chancellor candidates to be reviewed in July

By Ray Robinson
Staff Writer

Current plans call for the SIU Board of Trustees to review two to six final candidates for chancellor on July 12 and to begin negotiations with the selected candidate sometime thereafter, search committee chairman Keith Sanders told the board Thursday.

The original target date for selecting a chancellor had been July 1, but Sanders told the board on March 8 that it was unlikely that the state could be met.

"Well, I think it's ambitious yet," board Chairman Harris Rowe told Sanders after he presented the new timetable. "But if things work right, it might well be met."

Sanders said he was presenting the tentative timetable to the board on the recommendation of Frederic W. Ness of the Washington, D.C.-based Presidential Search Consultation Service, a non-profit organization that advises universities on how to conduct searches for top level administrators.

Ness visited Carbondale April 2 and advised the search committee to formulate a more specific timetable.

Sanders said there were currently 49 active candidates for the position, with 103 candidates for the chancellorship. In addition, 103 people have been nominated and are either active candidates or are in the process of deciding if they want to be considered.

The deadline for applications and nominations is Monday. The council will meet on May 4 to reduce the list of active candidates to 20 to 40 names.

The Board of Trustees and the search committee will meet on May 15 to reduce the list of active candidates to eight to 12 names. Interviews with the remaining candidates will be conducted at neutral sites, "hopefully without too many members of the news media present," Sanders said.

Sanders stressed once again the need for confidentiality in conducting the search. He said any member of the search committee who violates that confidentiality can be dismissed from the committee, subject to the approval of the board.

Weather dampens S-Senate turnout

Neither rain nor sleet nor snow nor the dead of night is supposed to keep the postman away. But driving rain and blustery winds kept the Student Senate from meeting Wednesday night.

Only 12 senators showed up at the senate's regularly scheduled meeting. Sixteen are required for a quorum.

The business which the senate had planned to discuss will be postponed until its next meeting on Wednesday.

The senate meets at 7 p.m. every Wednesday in Ballroom A of the Student Center. However, sometimes the locations of the meetings are changed. The Student Center Information Desk can answer all questions about the location of senate meetings.

Beg your pardon

In a story on Page 2 of the April 12 Daily Egyptian, D. Blaney Miller is listed as being against an east-west bypass and in favor of a northern bypass.

Miller said Thursday that he is in favor of a bypass running from east to west, north of the city. He said he is against a bypass being constructed on the Little Crab Orchard floodplain, and against an east-west couple that would link Main Street and Walnut Street within the city limits.

County tables appeal of court decision

By Cindy Michaelson
Staff Writer

A proposal to appeal a court decision ordering the Jackson County Board to stop interfering with the office of the county supervisor of tax assessments was tabled by the board at its Wednesday night meeting.

Assistant State's Attorney Bill Schwartz, attorney for the board, said the Appellate Court must issue a mandate ordering the board to carry out its order before the board can appeal the decision. The appeal would be filed with the state Supreme Court.

County Supervisor Lowell Heller, a Republican, had been asked twice by the board to resign from his post as assessor. He refused, and the board lowered his salary from $14,000 a year to $9,000. The balance was used to hire Bill Massey, a property record land supervisor, who reported to the board instead of to Heller.

Heller sued, asking that the board be stopped from interfering in the operations of his office. The court decided in his favor on that point, but it denied Heller's request to reinstate his salary at $14,000. The decision stated-that the board has a right to set salaries for appointive offices when the annual budget is drafted.

Heller contends that the action taken against him by the board was political. Ten of the board's 12 members are Democrats. Late tax bills and inefficiency in the office of tax assessment were the reasons cited by the board when it asked for Heller's resignation.

After the court decision was handed down, Heller filed Massey. However, in other action at the board's meeting Wednesday, the board rehired Massey as a temporary assistant to the board's planning committee at a salary of $1,200 a month.

Also at the meeting, board member Tross Pierson reported that an Environmental Protection Agency employee was expected to check the Jackson County landfill Thursday. Pierson said he contacted the EPA after residents reported seeing a "black mucky substance" seep from the landfill.

Pierson speculated that heavy rainfall during the past year may have caused the seepage.

Tuition, fees key issues in GSC race

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

Both of the two Graduate Student Council presidential candidates feel that the possibility of future increases in tuition and fees is the most important issue to address in Wednesday's GSC election.

Candidates Gary Brown, the GSC's history department representative, and Stan Irvin, Law School representative, said the GSC should direct its future protests of tuition and fee increases to Gov. James Thompson and the Illinois Board of Higher Education instead of University administrators.

"I don't think that (state) funding will keep up with inflation," Brown said.

Brown added that he thinks higher education may be one of the first areas in which the state may attempt to make further budget cuts.

"The GSC has to work as a watchdog," Brown explained.

Irvin, who has served as an intern on the staff of Rep. William Harris, D-Marion, said he feels he has had the necessary lobbying experience to make an impression on state legislators.

"The GSC has a responsibility to graduate students to oppose all tuition and fee increases," Irvin said. He added that the GSC should "not just complain about the increases but actually go to the legislators."

Brown has been a GSC representative for two years and said he feels he has "developed a good relationship with many University administrators," including Warren Brandt, president; Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs; John Guyon, dean of the Graduate School; and John Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School.

Brown has been a GSC representative to the Graduate Council—a constituency group made up of Graduate School faculty members—for the past year. He has been a member of the Graduate Council's educational policies committee and instituted the organization of an ad hoc committee which opposed the bond retirement fee.

Irvin has been a GSC member for only one month, but he said he feels his past experiences as a leader for various student organizations qualify him for the job. He has been a member of the Campus Judicial Board for Governance, president and vice president of the Student Government Association and chairman of the SGA Appropriations Committee.

He admits that his GSC experience is less extensive than Brown's, but he said he feels he can easily adapt to the system.

"The position of president involves administrative skills and experience in running meetings. You need to be able to work the ropes among the administrators," Irvin said.

Brown also promised to try to change a Graduate School policy which changes an incomplete grade to an "F" if the course is not completed within two years. He would like to see the Graduate School switch back to its previous policy of reorganizing an incomplete grade indefinitely.

The Graduate School has been using the current policy for the past year.

Rape prevention at SIU has been lacking. The elimination of the WTA proves that the administration has not been concerned enough to take adequate steps towards prevention. Besides reinstatement of some feasible night transport system, the night SIU police force should be beefed up. In addition to (preventing) rape, this would cut down on parking lot vandalizations, burglaries, and other warm-weather crimes.

A return to the previous grading system should also be considered. Often times, eight weeks is not enough time to ascertain one's standing in a class, having had the benefit of maybe only one test. The present system, although intended to toughen grading standards, serves only to work against the student.

I believe all of these goals are feasible and fully within our reach.

Coming from an Air Force family, I have traveled and seen many forms of government in the United States. With this constant transition of lifestyles, a person develops a sense of openness. One is able to look at both sides of an issue equally before making a stand. This objectivity is a necessary qualification for a politician. He must be available to hear and to understand each party's problem and to make a choice he feels will benefit both. Furthermore, he must honor his promise. Too often, in today's government, this term is used so easily. It means you are obligated to fulfill a task and produce the results that you stated.

Hunt for two suspects goes on

By Bill Crowe
Staff Writer

There are no new developments in the search for two suspects who were allegedly involved in a robbery, kidnapping, the rape of an SIU woman and attempted murder Tuesday night, said a spokesperson for the Jackson County Sheriff's office.

The search, which involved 35 law enforcement officers from numerous law enforcement agencies Wednesday, was trimmed Thursday to one Jackson County sheriff's office detective who was investigating in the Carbondale area.

The spokesperson said the Jackson County sheriff's office has no "new leads" in the case as of Thursday afternoon.

Two black suspects are being sought by the Jackson County sheriff's office for the robbery and attempted murder of Charles H. Zimmerman, 24, of Carbondale who was shot in the abdomen while being robbed of a wallet and umbrella. The incident took place in the vicinity of East College Street and Washington Street at 9:19 p.m. Tuesday.

Later, at about 9:30 p.m., the Jackson County sheriff's office received a call from two men who said they had been robbed at gunpoint at a laundromat adjacent to the Carbondale Mobile Home Park on north U.S. Route 51. The two said a woman in the laundromat had been abducted by three black men. The two also gave a description of the suspects' car and its license plate number.

At 10:21 p.m. the suspects' car was found by Jackson County sheriff's deputies on an access road which runs parallel to the Big Muddy River off Dilinger Road.

Police said the suspects and the woman were still in the car when they found it. The suspects tried to hide on the access road while the woman, who was naked, ran towards the officers.

At 10:45 p.m. a state trooper arrested Charles K. Young as he was crossing some railroad tracks.

Today, the Beach Boys; tomorrow, the Monkees?

Congratulations SIU, after nearly 20 years I finally get to see the Beach Boys. Thanks again SIU, after almost 15 years I finally got to see the Grateful Dead. Maybe next semester we will get to see the Monkees.

Granted, the Beach Boys and the Grateful Dead have both had their heydays and they both helped shape rock music into what it is today, but that was yesterday.

The Beach Boys peaked musically about 15 years ago while the Grateful Dead peaked about 10 years ago.

Except for the excellent jazz concerts at the Shryock Auditorium, SIU is slightly behind the times musically. Springsteen was exciting, Heart was energetic, and the Doobies were polished, but these rock artists have been around for quite a few years. To quote the Who's Pete Townshend, "The music must change."

There are many rock bands that have come out in the last one or two years that are shaping the sound of rock music for the eighties. Has the SIU concert committee ever heard of Elvis Costello or the Talking Heads? Or how about Blondie or the Cars? These are only a few of the many new rock bands that are, in a sense, redefining rock and roll along new lines of creativity.

I don't know much about booking bands, but it would seem to me that SIU could get one or two of these new rock bands to play in the smaller Shryock Auditorium. If we could get them here today, I'm sure it would be considerably cheaper than booking them tomorrow when they will be playing the big halls and stadiums, like the Arena.

Until then, put on your suntan oil, wax those surfboards, and we'll all head out to Campus Lake for the first annual SIU "I Get Around" Beach Party. See you there.

Deli example of how to 'take the money and run'

This letter is in regards to the tactful, polite, and courteous manner in which student consumers are treated in Carbondale.

First allow me to set the mood. I was having a relaxing beer at one of Carbondale's more popular delis on the strip. Having gone there on short notice I had not brought the funds to cover even the minor expenditure required for a few drafts. Confidently scribbling out my check for a few dollars, I proceeded to approach the bartender who was casually lounging behind the bar.

"I'd like a pitcher and two glasses, please," I said, handing him my check and I.D.

He grabbed two glasses and stopped. "Wait a minute babe, I'm not taking that check here. Sorry sweetie, you take it over there," pointing to the next cashier.

Confused, I stepped aside and asked to cash my check. I was informed that checks were cashed only for the amount of purchase. What a surprise, since the night before I had a check cashed for above the amount of purchase.

I walked away in anger and left the bar. Check cashing policies should be consistent, and I feel establishments that are in direct contact with students should hire employees that are not so ignorant as to be unaware of common courtesies such as "please, thank you, step this way, can I help you," etc. Or perhaps I was most enraged at the use of the "vocabulary of sexism." I am 22, I do not resemble a "Babe," nor do I find it necessary for anyone besides my grandparents to call me "sweetie." Especially not by a bartender my age, trying to look big in front of his cronies. As a consumer I have grown very angry with the "We've got your money, so get lost attitude." Where's the respect?

Senatorial candidate protests change in statement

I have requested that the Daily Egyptian print the following correction but they don't want to. In my campaign statement which appeared Thursday on page 10, the first sentence read: "With four years of corporate experience behind me and a new attitude toward school, I came to SIU in the Spring of 1978." It should have read: "With four years of corporate experience behind me..." B.S. stands for bullshit, a phrase commonly used and commonly understood. To change this phrase to "experience" seriously misrepresents the message I wished to convey.

(Of equal concern is the fact that the change was made not by an editor but by a staff writer. She told me that she made the change because the phrase I used did not fit "her" style of writing or the D.E. editorial policy. The latter claim is false.

The printing of campaign statements is one of the few avenues candidates have to express their views to all the students. I hope that in the future the Daily Egyptian will be more careful about adjusting these statements to their own style.

He's taking his business elsewhere

I am writing in response to the letters and articles that have appeared in the D.E. concerning the SGAC Film Program.

I am not a regular patron of SGAC Films. I have only attended three SGAC films since I came to SIU last fall. I am not a "film buff" by any means, but I do enjoy a good movie.

At first thought, I considered my rare attendance at SGAC a lack of interest in films generally. But on second thought, I realized my lack of interest was not films in general, but the SGAC films in particular. The films they regularly show—foreign films, old classics, and "drive-in" films—are not what I would like to see.

I prefer the more recent feature films, the ones I have had to see at the local commercial theatres (at a much higher ticket price), and at the dormitories.

SGAC should improve their program. The convenience of the student center, and the lower admission price, makes it an attractive alternative to the local theatres and the dormitories. However, films such as they have been showing have forced my attendance to other locations.

Film criticism just talk

I am writing this not in defense of Alan Thatcher, but to further strengthen my opinion of the students who talk a lot and show very little action (Ken Koonce, Robert Matejak, Catherine Richter).

Talk is cheap, and all three of you have proven that SGAC as a whole provides other students with the opportunity for input mainly through the committees, which are open meetings for anyone to attend. With the exception of Koonce attending a couple of times last semester, none of you showed any interest in or support of the films being shown by the films committee.

Another outlet for you three and everyone else (except Koonce) would have been to apply for chairperson of the Films Committee next year. But I'm sorry to say that applications were due by March 30. The position was advertised, but I don't see your applications.

Mr. Matejak, the films committee has broken last year's attendance records and I have the documents to back it up. So some people, even though it may not include yourself and some of your immediate peers, do enjoy and are attending the films program.

We are sorry that we can't ask and make every one of the 22,000 plus students here totally happy. To do this, we would probably have to schedule 22,000 films.

Also, last year's films program went several thousand dollars in the hole, leaving Alan with less than one-third of his allocated budget to work with. Since last fall, that figure has been erased and the films committee will get a fresh start next year, being able to utilize the entire amount allocated for programming.

I believe this is the year you had to come early just to get a seat!

And Ms. Richter, for your information, "Halloween" was cancelled by the film company we were renting it from and we could do nothing about it. "Saturday Night Fever" is a good film and instead of showing nothing, Alan decided to have some film those evenings. As far as "Girlfriends" is concerned, an amplifier blew after Alan had started the film and had left to do some studying. Even if he had been there he could have done nothing about it.

If you think we wasted your money, come on and get involved and see if you can do a better job. I'll even go as far as saying that I challenge you, and would bet that first, none of you would accept the challenge, and if so, we would probably end up with a deficit again for next year.

None of you have any idea how much time and energy that it takes to put together a program like scheduling films for the year. After seeing Alan work, and solve the numerous problems that pop up every week, I can and do appreciate the job he has done this year.

The people here in SGAC do the very best in offering a variety of programs and activities with the funds we have. The funds may seem like a lot, but we in fact receive less money than any other school in Illinois with a similar program. I thank them, and so should you. Don't forget, we are students also.

SIU should study coal use

A symposium on the future of SIU will be held in Carbondale April 3-11. As a working and paying staff member of this University community, I have a few ideas on the future of SIU.

There are two programs being implemented by the University already which should be incorporated into the format of the symposium: the Coal-Research Center and the environmental cleaning project which will be added the Physical Plant's heating-cooling system.

I can't understand why the University doesn't look to the future and add to these programs a steam or coal-type electricity generator that will eliminate total dependence on energy from an outside utility company. The energy companies say they can't afford high technology required to burn the high-sulfur coal mined in and part of the life-blood of Southern Illinois miners.

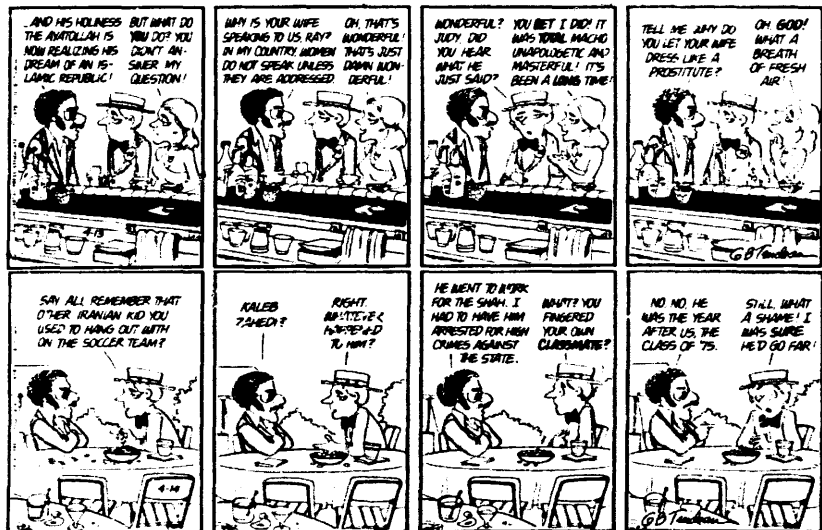

SIU could provide the answers leading the way, by developing and adding a generator to their present system which uses high-sulfur coal anyway.

There would be a great range of benefits: the coal miners, by providing research and a market for high sulfur coal; the community, by lowering peak demands caused by wasteful University power consumption; the students, by cutting living costs and giving them an example of non-dependence on outside energy to take back to their own communities; and finally, the University, by eliminating the million dollar dependency on utility-provided energy and cutting the cost of rising utility rates which increased by one-third of a million dollars in FY78.

Hopefully the cost of energy and energy-efficient design should be a part of the future of SIU and in the format of the symposium.

Presidential candidates' statements

Editor's Note: These are the statements from all of the 10 Student Government candidates running for President. On Page 3 of Friday's Daily Egyptian are two senate candidates' statements that were inadvertently omitted from the senatorial candidates statements printed on Page 10 of Thursday's DE. The Student Government elections for president, student trustee and senators from the East Side, West Side, Thompson Point and East Campus, will be held Wednesday.

Pete Alexander, President
Christanne Blankenship, Vice President
Independent

I, Pete Alexander, a senior in political science and health education, am a candidate for student body president. My running mate is Christanne Blankenship, a sophomore in public relations.

Together, we envision Student Government as a governance and advisory body—one which moves away from programming. We feel that SPC (Student Programming Council, formerly SGAC), Black Affairs Council and Inter-Greek Council hire or elect students solely for the purpose of programming concerts, films, lectures, etc., and that Student Government should not get involved in such areas.

In order to make Student Government more governance oriented, we plan to enact several practical proposals. They include:

—The introduction of GSD speed-reading course.

—The introduction of a GSE first aid course.

—A Student Government newsletter.

—An office for the student trustee within the Student Government complex.

—Bi-weekly meetings with East Campus and Thompson Point representation.

—Semesterly housing, bar, and bank surveys.

—Weekly supermarket price surveys.

Other proposals we seek to implement include an end to the sophomore-approved housing system. We feel that sophomores (who are for the most part 19 or 20 years old) are being treated like children by the University. Sophomores, we feel, should be able to live wherever they wish.

We will seek to combine the present I.D. and fee statement into a more concise form. Also, we will present a new meal proposal in the dorms.

We hope to use a meal card which will be punched as students go through the meal line so students who skip meals don't have to pay for those meals.

I am currently an east side student senator and Blankenship is the coordinator of MOVE.

Charles Beck, President
Todd Skippner, Vice President
Independent

I am a presidential candidate and Todd Skippner is running for vice president with me. We are speech communication majors. Together we have varied experience as leaders.

Todd is presently a senator in Student Government representing the West Side. I have been a business manager for a small theatrical company and served as state president for Illinois in the International Theatrical Society, a dramatics organization which promotes educational theater. I am also a director of the non-profit organization, People's Voices in the Arts.

We are running because we believe the present system and its members fail to provide the leadership needed to effectively represent student interests. We feel it's time for a change. We believe it's time to try a new approach.

We plan to concentrate on rebuilding Student Government, streamlining the present system to create a quicker, more effective government. To do this, we propose to change from the present system of representation by academic unit.

In doing so, we feel that communication between representatives and the student body will be stronger and lead to more campus-wide involvement.

We view this as a foundation so that in three to five years, Student Government will be strong and able to provide better representation of student interest.

Other issues that we will address include the combining of the fee statements and I.D., conducting a campus-wide search for solutions to the rape problem and parking problem, as well as the implementation of a communication program which would include monthly forums, monthly meetings with campus organizations and creating a search committee which would go out and solicit and define student interests.

Greg Burton, President
No Vice President
People's Party

The students at SIU have cried out for years for a more responsive, credible and representative Student Government. Because I am an undergrad myself, I know what the concerns of the students are around campus.

Since my arrival here at Southern I have held numerous positions, some of which included: senator representing East Campus, activities director for Mae Smith, member of the Fee Allocation board, member of the Campus Judicial Board for Discipline, member of the Senate Finance Committee and chairman of Campus Internal Affairs committee, and a multitude of others.

As a senator, I have submitted more legislation in just this past semester than two-thirds of the other senators combined. I have submitted bills ranging from a resolution calling for increased lighting in front of the Recreation Building to mandating the Board of Trustees over their warped bond retirement fee.

Of late, two of the primary concerns I have found are the Women's Transit and the parking problem on campus.

I advocate the proposal of a bus system that would cover the campus and hit the major areas of the city. If enough federal funding is possible, the system could be inexpensive compared to what students would have to pay if the WTA continued.

Such a system would also alleviate the problem of student parking because instead of driving students could take the bus to classes.

If you feel it is time for a change, please support The People's Party, myself and our goal of a more reliable Student Government.

Norbert Dunkel, President
Melody Svec, Vice President
Independent

Students have been losing their voice for the last four years. We intend to organize opposition against things unfavorable to students and to aid the students in attaining things that will benefit them.

We would like to relieve the pressure presently on the students at SIU-C to make for a less distressing atmosphere.

Pressures at Carbondale come from three different areas: personal, academic and social. These pressures have inspired us to propose a number of solutions contained in our platform for candidacy that directly relate to students at SIU-C:

—A teacher's assistant review board in which student input would be used to find T.A.s with speech problems, teaching discrepancies, or continued lateness and have the dean become aware of these problems.

—Better road and external building maintenance at the School of Technical Careers.

—Combination fee statement and I.D.

—Increase in room and board scholarships for women athletes.

—Coordination of security measures for women at night.

—Stipulation of how often instructors can switch textbooks.

Within Student Government, we would like to see:

—Early appointments to committees.

—Regular correspondence with administrators.

—A good working relationship with the Student Senate.

—Communication with other universities to gain information on how SIU could better itself.

Basically, give Student Government back the credibility it lost this past year and give us a chance to use that credibility to work for the students and relieve the pressures currently on them.

Mary Haynes, President
Ed McShane, Vice President
Action Party

The last several years of Student Government at SIU have been marked by a general lack of leadership and concern for the issues that are most important to students. As students, my running mate, Ed McShane, and I care about this University, and are committed to the following changes.

Among the changes we plan to work for will be to set up a fee commission. What the students and Student Government need is a way to deal with fee increases before the last minute when it is too late to stop them. The fee commission is the answer. Working through Student Government will allow us to deal with the University's vice presidents in order to avert future increases.

The second goal we intend to accomplish is to turn Student Government into an efficiently-run, business-like operation.

Historically Student Government has been treated as a political office rather than as a business. Politics may be fine during the campaign. However, when it comes down to doing the work we should be prepared to operate the office as a business. That means replacing large, confusing bureaucracy with a simple, approachable Student Government.

Ed and I will work towards an extension of the class withdrawal time period, securing a student on the City Council, a full vote for the student trustee, and a liberalized alcohol policy on campus.

Finally we hope to overcome and deal with the problems of internal strife that has crippled Student Government this year. We want to offer students something new in Student Government next year—that is, student leaders, for a change.

Michael Incomini, President
Joel Wells, Vice President
Student Interest

On April 18, the students at this University will have the chance to voice their opposition to the current state of Student Government. I am running for president and Joel Wells, junior in cinema and photography, is running with me for vice president.

We urge you to vote in the upcoming student body elections. There has been too much apathy in recent years. We (as students) have lost the respect of the community and the faculty. We have lost respect for ourselves!

The Student Interest Party (SIP) is a new organization. Our basic goal is reform. We are waging a war on apathy. We would like to see more feedback from Student Government to the student body. We want to see Student Government become a more powerful voice in campus administrative decisions. We want to see Student Government become a strong lobby group in the affairs of the community and the state.

Our party is a happy medium between those candidates who are so wrapped up in campus politics that they fail to truly represent the students and those candidates who have no Student Government experience at all. Our experience ranges from being members of the Fee Allocation board and student representative on the Traffic and Parking Advisory Board, to active members of academic clubs. From veterans of the service to non-veterans, from as diverse majors as plant and soil science to art, photography, geology, business, English and fashion design, and from a diverse range of hometowns including Peoria, the Chicago area to Grand Tower and Pinckneyville. We want to see you vote. Help make this election a responsible decision by all of us rather than a popularity contest by 10 percent of us.

Walf Kuch, President
Karen Kuch, Vice President
Independent

Walf and Karen Kuch want to help the student body. We are running for student body president and vice president. We will make time to help decide what needs to get done at SIU, and see that it gets accomplished.

Our interest first started when we attended a Student Senate meeting. Bills were being passed without being questioned. Participation in Student Government should be more than something to write on a resume. It should be a place where change and improvement in our school originates.

The Student Government's main objective should be open communication between itself and the student body. Our goal is to get students involved and interested in activities at SIU.

Wolf and Karen Kuch support the following changes:

—We would like to have a column in the DE where you, the student, can ask questions, as we can keep you informed.

—The fee statement and student ID should be combined.

—The system of voting should be changed. One senator from each major area of study should be elected, rather than a senator from each district.

—The parking division office should not sell a larger number of parking stickers than the number of parking spaces available.

—Students need recycling centers near their living areas. There are concerned groups of people with no effective method of helping ecology through collection of bottles, cans and newspapers.

Above all, the Student Government needs to bear from the student body. Instead of complaining to fellow students, go to your representatives, and find out what you can do to change things. We will be a full-time team and we want you to be a member of our team.

Mark Marsh, President
Donald X. Williams, Vice-President
Action Team

We are the "Action Team": Mark Marsh for president, Donald X. Williams for vice-president and Dennis Tyus for East-Campus senator. The Action Team's philosophy is student awareness and student input. A student government which has no substantial student input is not beneficial to its constituents. The "Action Team" wants input from all available sources, in order to improve Student Government operation.

Quite contrary to the belief of many, especially Chicago magazine author Ms. Emmerman, SIU's primary objective is to educate. Therefore, we as a para-educational instrument, will serve to complement this educational process. This does not imply we will unnecessarily involve ourselves with SIU academic curriculum, it merely denotes our sincere interest in the educational co-curricula here on campus.

One major problem that exists here at SIU-C is the lack of student awareness regarding Student Government. The Action Team will work hard to increase such awareness. By working with all student organizations, we (organizations and ourselves) will collectively work to solve this problem and others these organizations may encounter.

We consider ourselves a visible, viable, vocal vehicle of and for the people. Use us: the "Action Team." This is not merely our slogan, it is a firm commitment.

John Paezle, President
Robin Manna, Vice President
Write-In

I, John Paezle and my running mate, Robin Manna, entered the race for president and vice president of Student Government out of our anger, rage and utter belief that the present structures are hopelessly bankrupt. So little is the faith today's Student Government inspires among students that the Fee Allocation Board has not even received a decent amount of requests.

Such institutions, Jecay on the part of Student Government moved us to opt for the write-in candidate alternative. We did not want to give Student Government the luxury of following any of its cumbersome and bureaucratic rules. Our victory will give the voice of students one more chance. You will have to write in our two names.

In exchange, you will get leadership, concern for the daily annoyances of University life, academic involvement and total accessibility. Under our leadership, the present constitution will be trashed. The senate will write a simpler one. Meanwhile, we will conduct business according to Robert's Rules of Order.

We will gradually shift the emphasis of senate representation from geographical to academic areas.

The president will chair the senate meetings and the vice president will be in charge of administration and treasury. Both will be voting members. This system will allow better representation of undergraduate student with the administration.

We firmly believe we are the only real alternative. For too long, we have had inefficient executives and a senate that is succeeding in its attempt to commit hara-kiri.

If you write Paezle-Manna on the blank space on the ballots, the return to students will be a measure of control over their destinies.

Mark Rouleau, President
Deanna Bumpers, Vice President
Students' Association

I, Mark Rouleau, a candidate for student body president, will soon be completing my second year in Student Government at SIU. While in Student Government, I have served as a student senator, president pro-tem, chairman of the student senate and student body vice president. I have also served as Student Government's representative to the Association of Illinois Student Government and the NSAS-NSL national student lobbying conference and I was also the undergraduate nominee to the Chancellor Search Committee.

This year, I have spearheaded most major campus issues, such as the marijuana decriminalization petition drive, initiated and secured funding for the Student Government-SGAC Free Concert on April 29 and the interim night transit system at no cost to the students.

I led Student Government's fight against the state legislature's attempts to raise the drinking age and the administration's bond retirement fee.

My vice presidential running mate, Deanna Bumpers, and I have the most combined experience of any two candidates. Our combined experience totals to almost four years. We, and the Student's Voice Party, have many plans and priorities for next year.

We want to create a not-for-profit, student-owned corporation which would allow Student Government to raise funds to keep fees down and would increase programming and services. This corporation would also make it possible for WIDB to apply for an FM broadcasting license. It would also make it possible for the Students' Attorney program to defend students in a criminal case and also allow the students to enter into litigation against the school (both of which are not possible presently).

Uranium melt slight at nuclear plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa.—Lab tests show that at most an "insignificant" amount of uranium melted in the Three Mile Island nuclear plant's reactor core after a March 28 accident, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Thursday. "It indicated no fuel melting occurred. Or if it did, it was exceedingly small, and that's good news," said NRC spokesman James Hanchett after tests were run on samples drawn from the primary cooling system of the plant's crippled No. 2 reactor.

"The amounts of uranium are in the range of parts per billion. If you had significant fuel melting, you would expect to see uranium in parts per million," he added.

The NRC has said the uranium fuel's zirconium shields were badly damaged. A series of mechanical and human errors exposed the core when its vital cooling water was cut off.

The actual extent of core damage will not be known until the reactor can be physically inspected, the NRC said.

"That's months and months away," said Hanchett. "Meanwhile, business near the nuclear plant started to pick up again, a sign that things were returning to normal."

Field shines in 'textile worker' film

By Nick Dana
News Editor

Despite nearly coming across as a public relations film promoting textile workers' unions, "Norma Rae" is a sensitive depiction of the plight of America's common working class.

Bona Barrett of NBC-TV likened "Norma Rae" to "Rocky." Sylvester Stallone's box office hit tend to agree with her. Like Rocky, Norma Rae is an underdog character struggling to reach a goal. At that point, however, the similarity ends, for "Norma Rae" is actually much more believable film featuring characters with more real feelings than those in "Rocky."

While "Rocky" was a fantasy tale about a two-bit boxer's chance for stardom, "Norma Rae" is the more believable story of the plight of the lower-class working people of a small Southern town and the strong-willed woman who fights to improve their lives.

The redneck town revolves around the O.P. Henley Textile Mill which, like a feudal lord, practically owns the local people. Nearly the entire population works at the mill under conditions which are rather oppressive for this day and age. Workers are paid well below the minimum wage and are driven unmercifully by their tyrannical bosses.

Among these laborers is Norma Rae whose parents both have worked for the mill most of their lives. Sally Field is surprisingly superb in this role and one wonders what an actress of such depth was the hit. He keeps the film interesting as he scurries around trying to rally support for the union and fighting the mill's management every step of the way.

Sally Field plays the title role in "Norma Rae," the story of a working-class lady in a small Southern town who struggles to improve her life.

His battle is even more engaging because he is so out of place—a brash New Yorker trying to enlist the support of simple-minded Southern laborers.

When Leibman and Field finally get to know each other under some unusual circumstances, he convinces her to join forces with him to unionize the mill. Their fight, however, soon turns into Field's fight, for the most part. She must overcome not only the resistance of the mill's management, but also the reluctance of her fellow workers and her family to join the union.

Her husband, Sonny Watson, played by Beau Bridges, is annoyed that his wife spends so much time working for the union but he eventually is convinced to take up the cause by Field's determination.

Field's fellow workers at the mill are another key to the story. These characters are rather dry, quiet

Southern folks but they are realistic. And behind Field's leadership they form a team whose spirit infects the audience by the end of the film.

The only real problem with "Norma Rae" is that it seems kind of wasteful to wrap such emotional performances around a story about organizing a textile workers' union.

Even if "Norma Rae" is a sly union public relations ploy, though, it is worth the trouble to see for the sheer enjoyment of watching Field at her best.

A Review

doin' in a dud like "Smokey and the Bandit" recently.

Field's performance in "Norma Rae" is of the same high quality as her award-winning portrayal of Sybil in the TV special of the same name. As Sybil, she played a girl with 17 different personalities. Norma Rae's character is not nearly that diverse, but she does have a few distinct sides to her personality.

She appears on the surface to be just another 31-year-old redneck, widowed mother of two children (one of whom is illegitimate) who works at a textile mill, uses frank language and sleeps around. As we soon find out in the film, however, Norma Rae also has strong morals. She values friendship, she is a good mother and wife and, above all, she is willing to fight for what she believes is right. And Field is so convincing that we want to fight right along with her.

For all Norma Rae's passion and determination, however, she is lost in the picture without an intriguing character named Reuben, a union organizer for Textile Workers' Union of America.

Ron Leibman is effective as Reuben mainly because he makes us laugh. Leibman plays the part of the hustling, very Jewish unionizer to

'Dynamite' interesting but hampered by staging

By Terri Tangney
Staff Writer

The first-prize winner of SIU's fifth international playwrighting competition premiered at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Laboratory Theater. "Dynamite," by Richard M. Menges of Oak Park, Ill., told the story of the trial of two men accused of bombing the Los Angeles Times Building.

The production Wednesday was an interesting rendition of history, but became tedious with too much movement and too much information in the small, intimate theater.

"Dynamite" revolves around Lincoln Steffans' involvement in the trial. Steffans, played by Joe Russell, is an investigative reporter and known for his muckraking. He is a "radical," a socialist, and is sponsored by 21 newspapers to get a series of articles on the story behind the trial.

The accused bombers, brothers J.J. and James McNamara, played by Tom Hammerschmidt and Michael Waller, are union workers trying to get recognition from the capitalists. Clarence Darrow, played by Loren Taylor, is renowned as a bastion for the little man and is hired by the American Federation of Labor to defend the McNamara brothers.

The tension in the play centers Steffans' attempts to gain an out-of-court settlement between Darrow and Los Angeles capitalists. Steffans is an idealist, and believes the dynamiting was justifiable: the unions were forced into it by unfair treatment. He appeals to the capitalists' morals; he wants them to do unto the McNamaras as others would do unto them.

The play represents the struggle of morals over men's desire for power.

The play itself was written superbly, with realistic and often amusing dialogue. Through the Menges' attention to detail, the era and feel of the times is also successfully portrayed.

The set design was radically

original. It is constructed on four levels, each a half-foot above the other in a circular progression. The only props are two desks, a few chairs, and many carpeted blocks at different heights. The blocks serve as many different things: chairs, coats and couches. The era isn't lost in the air-west futuristic design through the use of period furniture and consistent earthy colors.

A many-paneled backdrop heralded such things as "Cry For Blood," "Union Accused," and "Guilty, Guilty, Guilty." And on them, slides were flashed of portraits, buildings, slogans and scenes to highlight either certain aspects of the action on stage. Bob Pevits, a graduate student in design, was the scenic designer and did an outstanding job.

The stage movements, however, became too busy at times, and confusing and tiresome to watch.

The action follows Steffans' experiences, and is linked together by his narration. As he makes his linking speech, he walks to another section of the stage, and, in the darkness the actors prepare the set. All this movement at once takes away from what Steffans is saying.

Also, the play attempts to explain the facts behind the controversial trial, and does so. It does, however, at the expense of overloading the audience.

Two recitals set

A joint student recital will be presented at 8 p.m. Saturday, featuring pianist Kathy DeMoss and baritone Kraig Kerger, and a senior recital given by Richard Stubbs is scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday.

Both recitals will be held at the Old Baptist Foundation Chapel, north of Faner Hall. All School of Music recitals are free.

Winners displayed

Seven SIU art students will exhibit works Tuesday which won cash awards from a special trust fund. The exhibit will continue through May 9 at the University Museum's North Gallery in Faner Hall.

The awards are made each year through the proceeds received from the estate of the late Marguerite L. Rickert, formerly of Waterloo. Rickert, who died in 1971, left one-third of her estate to the university.

Hershey taking precautions after accident at nuclear plant

By William Glasgow
AP Business Writer

As you would expect, there's a lot of milk in milk chocolate.

So when the nation's most serious nuclear accident released radiation into the air 11 miles from Hershey Foods Corp. on East Chocolate Avenue late last month, there was an obvious question.

"Is the milk all right?" asked Hershey Chief Executive William Dearden, who satisfies his sweet tooth by eating chocolate every day.

The company also wondered whether Americans scared by the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant might stop buying Hershey's bars. Both Hershey and stores that sell lots of candy say that has not happened.

But the milk, 116,000 gallons of it a day, was a ticklish problem.

The company says 11 percent of that milk comes from farms within 20 miles of the power plant. The remainder comes from up to 70 miles from the nuclear station. Hershey's traditionally has kept secret how much milk goes into its chocolate. Some of the 116,000 gallons a day is turned into powdered milk and sold.

State officials say radiation levels in samples of milk taken in the area of the nuclear plant area have ranged from nil to far below danger levels. Hershey says its milk is "absolutely safe" but it nonetheless is taking "ultra-conservative" precautions.

Dearden said in an interview the firm does not plan an advertising campaign assuring the public its products are wholesome. But the company sent a letter to employees and shareholders saying its facilities and products are "safe and free of radioactive contamination."

"We are carefully monitoring all products leaving our plant," said the letter. "You can have complete confidence that all products we manufacture are absolutely safe and that we will take every precaution to insure the continuing safety of all products."

The White House, while not naming Hershey, also issued a statement saying "the food from the Three Mile Island area is safe to produce, buy, transport, prepare and eat as the food available at any other place in the U.S."

Hershey's 4,700 employees were calm during the incident. "Over 90 percent of our workforce was on duty by the Monday after the accident," said Dearden. "There was no more absenteeism than there would be on a snow day."

Dearden said "at the beginning there were people who were concerned" that Hershey's sales might slide because of customer worries over the safety of the company's candies and other products. But there have been no sales cancellations since the accident, he said.

A spot check by the Associated Press found no instance where customers had steered clear of Hershey chocolate out of fear of radiation.

"I just finished eating a chocolate bar and I'm not glowing," quipped one Wall Street analyst who follows Hershey's fortunes.

The costs to Hershey of milk tests and changes in production schedules are "not significant," said Dearden, who declined to say exactly how much the testing and other items have cost.

Health officials' main fear has been that milk from the Harrisburg area might contain radioactive iodine-131, a compound that can travel through the air to pastures where cows graze. The compound then can travel through cows' milk into the human thyroid gland. An overdose of the radioactive material could cause cancer.

Variety of foods available in China ranges from fast food to Peking duck

Editor's note: This is the last in a series of articles written by Timothy T.S. Tung, who recently returned to China for the first time in 31 years. By Timothy T.S. Tung
AP Writer

Fast food is coming to China. A sign outside one of the three dining rooms at Canton's Overseas Hotel informs guests that in order to accommodate those who are in a hurry, especially when the Grade Fair is in session, dining room serves only Kuan Chan (fast meals).

The meal consists of tea, soup, a combination plate of cold fish, duck, scrambled eggs, and strips of broccoli, and a limitless supply of rice and steamed bread, all for three yuans ($1.80).

There are a few differences between fast food in China and fast food in America—Chinese fast meals are nutritious, not junk food, and fast food in China, unlike in America, is not inexpensive.

Fast food is coming to China, and it is not difficult to see why. In one of the noisier dining rooms, we three had our choice of three hot, freshly cooked dishes (twice-cooked pork, sweet and sour whole fish, and braised bean curd, my daughter's favorite), all for 4.50 yuans.

Eating is perhaps one of the most democratic processes in China today, where you can make your own selections. Food-loving Chinese would hardly ever give up such pleasure.

In fact, every restaurant we visited in Shanghai and Peking was crowded. In some places, one has to make reservations a day ahead.

The Chinese are on an eating spree for three main reasons: They have money to spend (A young couple both working make a combined salary of about 100 yuans a month; rent is about 5 yuans, and there is no worry about medical expenses and old age); meats and cooking oil are severely rationed, but in the restaurant you may order any dish with no restrictions; gourmet meals were forbidden in restaurants under the "Gang of Four." Now culinary art is again emphasized.

An excellent feast can be had for about 40 yuans ($24) for a table of 10 or 12. The quality and quantity are so satisfactory that the average Chinese has developed a habit of taking home the leftovers in plastic bags for a treat at home the next day.

Not only are good chefs rehabilitated and returned to their old jobs, but some of the famous restaurants of the past have reopened. The renowned Sun Ya Restaurant in Shanghai again exists in its old location on Nanking Road, recovering from the days when it was ordered to be renamed Canton Restaurant and to serve only common meals to the masses.

In Peking, Chuan Shu Teh, the original Peking duck restaurant, has returned to its old glory, serving its world-famous specialty to endless foreign visitors (eating Peking duck in Peking is a must for any tourist) in the fancy dining rooms reserved for foreigners. We, a party of four, had a whole duck dinner for only 12 yuans in one of the less pretentious dining rooms.

The most exciting meal I had was Mongolian hot pot, in the Moslem Nationality Restaurant. A hot pot of plain, sizzling water heated by charcoal is placed in the middle of the table.

Each guest is supplied with a plate of paper-thin sliced mutton. You cook your own meat in the pot to your preference. For sauce you mix your own from a tray of seven bowls of different sauces: soy, vinegar, hot oil, red bean curd, sesame oil, peanut butter, plum sauce.

Toward the end of the meal, the soup in the pot will become a rich broth, to which is added cabbage, noodles, and lamb wontons. You complete the meal with sesame-seed bread and noodle soup. It costs no more than 40 yuans for a table of 10 or 12.

Kung Teh Ling, the vegetarian restaurant in Shanghai, is another delight that brings nostalgia. There skilled chefs can produce a feast of dozens of different dishes, each bearing the name of a non-vegetarian dish such as sweet and sour whole fish, red-cooked pork, shredded chicken with snow peas, each looking and tasting like the dish for which it is named. The trick is that all these meat and fish dishes are made of vegetables and bean curd products.

At every eating place you go to, you can be assured of a fairly tasty meal. In Shanghai, we went into a small, dingy noodle shop to have a breakfast for five, one yuan. In Peking, at a Moslem dumping house, we ate proletarian style. The place is so assured that one grabs an empty stool and plants oneself at an already occupied table.

In our case, the cashier had some spare stools for foreign guests, but we had to gobble our food under the watchful eyes of hungry citizens who could hardly wait for us to finish and yield our places.

Gasoline available, but at record prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—Despite a slight restriction on fuel allocations in some areas, gasoline remains generally available to motorists around the country, the American Automobile Association said this week.

However, in a statement released by its national headquarters here, the AAA also said motorists are paying a record price for gas. The AAA said its survey of approximately 4,200 service stations showed average full-service prices to be 75.3 cents per gallon for regular grade gasoline, 80.8 for premium and 79 for unleaded.

Cattle, hog rustling on upswing

By Charles Roberts

Associated Press Writer
Soaring prices in live cattle and hogs, as well as high costs for meat in the supermarket, are whetting the appetites of modern day rustlers. "When prices go up, we generally see a bit of an up-trend in the 'small numbers' theft - one or two head," says Kenneth Metcalf, Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation supervisor for the state's southern 68 counties.

"You've got to look at the prices of these animals," he said. "Hogs are on a downswing now, but they're still up to a pretty good price." He added that, "Cattle are up to a pretty good price."

Metcalf said it is "the same old thing: Where it's valuable, somebody's going to take a crack at it."

Although authorities say livestock rustling for resale or private consumption apparently isn't on the upswing now, there have been cases reported to investigators.

Last month, for instance, three hogs weighing some 750 pounds were reported stolen from farmer Everett Rogier of near Highland. He told Madison County sheriff's deputies he had put 16 hogs in a pen behind his house to take them to auction. When he was ready, three were missing.

And Union County authorities arrested Larry Burnett of Cobden last month, charging him with theft and possession of stolen goods.

Capt. Jim Nash of the sheriff's department said Burnett was arrested March 2 as he drove a loaded cattle truck.

Nash estimates that including the 23 head of cattle Burnett is alleged to have taken, farmers in Union County have lost as much as $30,000 in livestock since the first of the year.

"I talked to several sheriffs all over the country about this deal," said Nash in an interview. "There's a big problem."

Nash explains that rustling is "getting to be quite popular; they're really organized in some cases."

"It's not all that difficult if you're a farmer or know livestock," Metcalf agrees.

"Generally, it's the guy who lives in a rural area and is aware—knows the animals and knows where he can get rid of animals," said the state investigator.

What the rustlers are looking for, said Metcalf, are farms that have "a cattle or hog operation normally away from where there is a residence.

"The owner may live down the road, but not right at the place these animals are located. With the reduction in the family farm operation as a national trend, these houses are being torn down, but sometimes valuable hog raising buildings are still left there."

Jewel thieves and other urban burglars know where they can peddle their loot, and Metcalf says rustlers do, too.

"To some degree, there are 'fences' and some farmers will buy these animals from them."

Law enforcement officers complain that the reluctance of some farmers to brand their livestock or identify them in some other way, such as notching the ears, causes headaches when the animals are found.

Metcalf explained that some rustlers get rid of animals at livestock sale barns.

Barn operators, he said, "have no way of knowing in most cases if this person owns them. It's a situation where you or I could take 10 head of livestock on a consignment thing. They don't have to show ownership."

Sailing Club's racers practice, renew skills in training session

R. Erick Hoenesline
Student Writer

A nice day, good breeze, was how Dave Chapin, the SIU Sailing Club's top racer, described the weather for last Saturday's Midwest sailing practice session.

The four most skilled racers from each of the nine top schools in the Midwestern Collegiate Sailing Association used 17 flying junior sailboats for trial runs and tactic practice on Crab Orchard Lake, said Mike Brown, vice commodore of the SIU Sailing Club.

Noreen Hart, secretary of the club and junior in forestry, explained that the Midwest has traditionally been disadvantaged at the annual national intercollegiate championships. This year the national competition will be held in Chicago on June 11 through 15.

It seems that both the east and west coasts have oceans to play around in, she said. SIU's Sailing Club practices on Crab Orchard Lake, which is one of the larger practice areas for a school in the Midwest.

This year, Midwest schools gathered to practice under the leadership of Greg Fisher, a sailmaker from Columbus, Ohio, who has coached the national sailmaker, and now races spinnakers, another type of sailboat, in international competitions.

"He is one of the top snipe men in the world," said Art Haggerty, one of SIU's four best racers.

Fisher barked instructions over a megaphone and the 17 white sails caught full wind and shot while said

"He kept on pushing us all weekend," Haggerty said "just like a coach."

The teams practiced slow starts, fast starts and combination starts.

"The whole race depends mostly on the first leg," explained Haggerty, a junior in engineering. The sailors also practiced the cone drill, which is a race into the wind that demands excellent handling.

"It's a tough drill," Haggerty said "You have to fight to keep colliding with the other boats." Over fried chicken and a fresh keg of beer, Fisher gave an informal lecture on boat rigging and tuning for different kinds of weather.

A discussion of the racers' particular problems and questions was followed by more drilling on the water, Haggerty said.

SIU's best racers are Mark and Dave Chapin, Paul Henze and Haggerty, according to the team members.

"There are no seniors on the team, so we'll all be around next year," Haggerty said. "And we're learning," he added, leaning back in his chair. "We're learning."

"SIU has the second best team in the Midwest," Haggerty said. "But we're number 17 in the nation."

Haggerty said one reason for this is a lack of sufficient allocation.

"The money they (SIU) gave us didn't even last a half year, so we end up spending our own money." Right now we're in the hole, he said.

For the 1978-79 year, Student Government allocated almost $800 to the sailing club. Lily Lee, receptionist at the intramural office, said, this is about what most SIU clubs were allocated.

The soccer club received the highest amount, $1,300, while the racquetball club received only $239, Lee said.

Dave Chapin, who Haggerty says will probably be an All-American racer by the end of the year, had to pay his own plane fare to compete in the monotype championship on the west coast last year. "We should have been able to pay his way, but we couldn't afford to," Haggerty said.

SIU has nine sailboats, all flying juniors, paid for by membership fees, Brown said. "I'd like to get a bobcat," he said, indicating a sleek craft seemingly made of two long kavaks braced together.

"Hobies don't have the maneuverability of a flying junior, but they go five times as fast," he explained. Around here though, he said, one wouldn't last a year.

"Some of our boats are 10 years old," Haggerty said the club doesn't have the $2,000 to buy another right now. "We do what we can, keep patching them up," Haggerty added.

Anyone can become a member of the sailing club, Haggerty said. After paying a $15 membership fee and passing both a written and a practical test, members have access to the boats anytime. Summer membership will cost $10.

The boat club recently sailed to the Bahamas, a trip of which Brown speaks highly.

"I got to pilot the 40-foot sailboat on the way back," he said, "when breakers 7 yards high started crashing down on us."

It was like surfing on a mammoth scale, he added.

Worship service planned to observe Good Friday

By Paula Donner
Staff Writer

Good Friday is observed all over the world by persons of the Christian faith as the day when Jesus Christ was crucified on the cross.

In addition to local observances which will be made by the individual churches, the Carbondale Interchurch Council is sponsoring a worship service from noon to 3 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 310 S. University Ave.

According to Rev. Charles Watkins of the First Christian Church, the service will be divided into 20-minute segments, each of which will focus on one of the seven last words of Christ.

"In going through the four Gospel accounts," he explained, "record of Christ's last hours on earth differ as to things he said. Altogether there were seven phrases spoken."

Watkins said the three-hour service is being conducted from the 6th hour (noon) to the 9th hour (3 p.m.), a period of time when the scriptures say the earth was covered with darkness.

Each segment of the service, which is being coordinated by Rev. Duane Lanchester, a minister at the First Presbyterian Church, will be under the direction of clergy and laity from one of the congregations which are members of the Council, Watkins said.

The service schedule is as follows:

Noon-The Sixth Hour, an introduction. 12:20 p.m.—"Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." 12:40 p.m.—"Truly I say to you, today you shall be with me in paradise."

2 p.m.—"Woman, behold your son!" 1:20 p.m.—"My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me?" 1:40 p.m.—"I thirst."

2 p.m.—"It is finished." 2:20 p.m.—"Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit!" 2:40 p.m.—The Ninth Hour, a conclusion.

Easter sunrise service set for 5:20 a.m. at Bald Knob

The Alto Pass Cross of Peace Foundation will hold its 43rd annual Easter Sunrise Service beginning at 5:20 a.m. Sunday on Bald Knob Mountain.

The service will be held under the 60-foot Cross of Peace, which was built in 1933, according to the Rev. William Larely of Makanda.

The sermon for the interdenominational service will be delivered by the Rev. Ivan L. Larely of the United Methodist Church in Mt. Vernon.

Larely said the greetings for the service will be given by the Rev.

Dean Stevenson of Marion, and the Rev. N. Clifford Heil of the First Baptist Church in Cobden will give the scripture reading and prayer. Music for the service will be provided by Love Shine from Mt. Vernon.

Larely, who has worked on the annual service since 1941, estimated that 2,000 persons will attend this year's service. The people, he said, come from several neighboring states, some arriving as early as Thursday and camping out until Easter Sunday.

Candy critters cram shelves

CANONSBURG, PA (AP)—Sarris candy shop is something of a chocolate manerie. Its shelves are crammed with whole barnyards of critters—from a giant 60-pound rabbit down to a candy inchworm you can swallow in a gulp.

The standard chocolate bunny is no longer the most popular Easter basket treat among Sarris' customers. The cottontail has been replaced by Bert and Ernie, two bug-eyed characters from television's "Sesame Street."

Public relations students win, travel to national competition

By Ellen Riddle
Student Writer
Three months of hard work has paid off for a group of public relations students which won the Public Relations Students' Society of America 26th district case study competition held recently in Minneapolis.
The win enables the nine members of the SIU team to compete in national competition against winners of the eight other districts in the United States. The site and date of the national competition are to be announced.
Mike Parkinson, assistant professor of speech communication and undergraduate adviser in the public relations curriculum, said, "The department is pleased that the team won because not only does it reflect on the students but on the faculty as well."
The case competition was designed to give public relations students an actual, not hypothetical, public relations problem to solve. This year, students had to propose a program for the Human Growth Foundation, a nonprofit organization which helps growth deficient children and their families.
The most feasible and creative program was given the highest ratings by three public relations professionals who acted as judges.
Members of the team include seniors Todd Althoff, Susan Brierley, Susan Dunlap, Leonard Bafia and Ray Valok, and juniors Ellen Riddle, Ron Lindsey, Cindy Peper and Bob Quane.
First runner-up in the competition was the University of Minnesota. Second runner-up was Central Missouri State University.

The overall scene suggests a moment of relaxation or a break during a busy day.

Softball foes 'top-notch,' hitting isn't

By Ella Reilly
Staff Writer

The women's softball team will be facing its toughest test before the state tournament at the Illinois State Invitational this weekend. Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said Thursday, "We're talking about high quality competition." Brechtelsbauer said of the 10-team field, "These are all top-notch teams."

In their pool, the Salukis will be playing Michigan State, Western Illinois, Southwest Missouri University and Eastern Illinois. The tournament is divided into two pools and the two top teams in each pool advance to the semifinals.

The Indiana University Hoosiers, who defeated the Salukis last weekend 7-6 and who are the defending champions of the tournament, are in the second pool. Also in the second pool are Central Michigan, which beat Michigan State last week 11-4, Illinois State, Northern Illinois and Illinois Community College.

All of these teams have strong programs, she said. SIU is in the tougher pool with Michigan State, which has won the college world series, and Southwest Missouri, which is usually among the top eight teams in the country every year, she said.

Last year the Salukis dashed Michigan State's hopes for a national berth in the regionals when SIU scored twice in the seventh to eliminate the Spartans. The Salukis went on to tie for seventh with Southwest Missouri in the nationals.

Brechtelsbauer said that, after Tuesday's 1-0 win and 1-9 loss in East Hill Illinois University, the team has spent its time taking batting practice.

"Our batting speaks for itself," Brechtelsbauer said. "We just weren't scoring runs, but we're going to come around." The Salukis had only four hits in their doubleheader against Eastern.

"I'm pleased with the progress our defense is making," she said of the errorless first game and the two errors the team made in the second game Tuesday. "The defense is sharp, but they could be sharper."

The Salukis will finish up the weekend playing a rescheduled game against Illinois State Sunday. The game, scheduled for last Sunday, had been rained out.

"We need to play ISU," Brechtelsbauer said. "If they don't make it out of their pool, we wouldn't have a chance of playing them before state. We need to play them to get a better feel of what they have and also for the state seedings."

Monday, SIU will play a home game against Paducah Community College at 2 p.m.

Golfers go for 2nd win at Bradley

By Ella Reilly
Staff Writer

Hoping for better weather and a chance to redeem themselves, the Saluki golfers travel to the Bradley Invitational in Canton, Ill. for a 36-hole tournament this weekend.

The golfers played what Coach Walt Siemsgluz called "mediocre" rounds in freezing temperatures and 40 mile-per-hour winds last weekend. The team placed 11th in a

Lady golfers try to get started again at Illini tourney

Members of the women's golf team again will try to open their spring season Friday and Saturday when they compete in the University of Illinois Invitational at Champaign.

Sandy Lemon, a junior, will lead the Salukis into this week's tourney. Lemon faces the burden of trying to reach the AIAW national tournament. Lemon must average 79 to qualify. Her fall average was 81. Lori Sackman, Sue Fazio, Penny Porter and Judy Bohrmann add experience to the team, which played on the tournament course in its first fall match and won. Sackman, the No. 2 golfer last fall, and Fazio both average in the mid 80s.

The Salukis were forced to cancel last weekend's home match with Western Kentucky University and Illinois State. The two teams have been added to the schedule later on and will compete along with Indiana State April 28 at Crab Orchard Golf Course.

Rain has postponed many of the Saluki practice dates. The team has been forced to play indoors, working on chip shots. Coach Sandy Blaha said the team is anxious to play but is a bit worried about the practice cancellations.

15-team field at the University of Illinois Invitational.

SIU is favored to win the tourney. Siemsgluz said SIU-Edwardsville and Bradley will be our main competition in the 12-team field," he said.

The Salukis defeated Edwardsville in their win at the University of Missouri-St. Louis Invitational, but SIU-E defeated the Salukis last weekend by three shots at Illinois.

Larry Emery, SIU's No. 1 man, Butch Poshard, Jay Smith, Doug Clemens and Jim Reburn will be the five Salukis competing. Four of the five scores will be totaled for the team score.

Siemsgluz said he is hoping the team will get four scores under 150 for the 36 holes. Each golfer is capable of that, he said.

He said the course the team practices on has been open only three times, so the team has had very little practice. "They're not playing that bad, for as much as they've played," Siemsgluz said.

If conditions are normal it will be windy in Canton, but not nearly as windy as at Champaign. Siemsgluz said. The course is of medium length and is tight along the fairways.

Diver reaches new 'heights'

By Cindy Moran
Student Writer

Fenny Hoffman, on a diving scholarship, failed to qualify for nationals this season in her chosen sport.

But that hasn't stopped her. She still has a chance to qualify for the national meet in track — in the high jump. When the Salukis travel to Champaign Saturday for the University of Illinois Invitational, Hoffman again will try to meet the national-qualifying standard.

Last week, Hoffman set a school record in the high jump. She jumped 5-6 in her first track meet for the Salukis. That mark tied her with teammate June Winston for first place and was one inch short of the qualifying standard.

The 19-year-old sophomore has not high jumped since her high school days in Goshen, Ind. But with the help of Jen Johnson, Olympic bronze medalist in the pole vault, and graduate assistant for the men's team, Hoffman believes she has a chance to become a national-caliber jumper.

The national meet is May 17 at East Lansing, Mich.

"I want to place at nationals," she said. "5-10 placed at last year's meet, and I think I can do that." That mark is exactly a half-foot taller than Hoffman is. She is 5-foot-4.

Hoffman said she prefers diving to high jumping, although her talent appears to prevail on the track.

"Diving means a lot more to me," she said, "but jumping is a lot easier. It doesn't take as much concentration because there is only one technique to learn. It is mostly just running."

Hoffman has increased the height on her jumps by four inches since her last meet as a high school senior. Then, she was jumping head-high.

"Once you jump over your head it gets so much easier," she said. "You don't have as much to fear after that — jumping is three-quarters mental anyway. Once you pass that mark, you can really improve."

Hoffman said her jumping has been aided greatly by Johnson, who recently taught her how to curve her approach to the bar.

"Before, I was just running and trying to get over the bar," Hoffman said. "I didn't have a coach in high school — it just came natural to me. Jan taught me my approach and it has really helped."

Porter and VonJouanne will be competing for spots on the Pan American Games and World University Games teams at Long Beach. The top two swimmers in each event will qualify for the team.

Theobald, who missed the entire season because of a broken leg, will represent the Salukis at the AAU diving meet at Austin.

Salukis open seven-game trip at Indiana State

By Gerry Bliss
Staff Writer

Winning on the road is an important part of baseball. If a team does well on the road it's an indication of how good it is. Road wins can be the factor leading to a successful season.

In the past few seasons, SIU has done well on the road. That has been an important reason for the success Saluki teams in the past few seasons have enjoyed.

Starting this weekend, the success this year's Salukis hope to enjoy will be tested by a seven-game, six-day road trip. The trip will begin with a three-game set with Missouri Valley Conference rival Indiana State. On Friday, the Salukis will play a single game at Terre Haute, followed by a doubleheader Saturday.

After the series with the Sycamores, SIU will travel to SIU-Edwardsville for a doubleheader Sunday and then play David Lipscomb in Nashville, Tenn., in a twin bill Tuesday. A tough assignment?

"This might be a tough time coming up for us, but every game is important as long as we're making a stride forward," Coach Itchy Jones said. "We've been wanting to play a lot of games on the road to see if we can do things back-to-back. This might be a good time to see if we can."

Bob Schroeck, Kevin Waldrop and Mickey Wright will pitch the series against Indiana State. Between them, this trio has pitched 13 of the 18 Saluki victories this season.

"In baseball, it's the pitchers that control the game," Jones said. "In these games coming up, we've got to make sure that we do the correct techniques and be sound, sound, fundamentally. We can't be complacent."

The Sycamores feature no "Larry Birds" in their lineup, but they field a good team that is the leader among Valley schools in winning percentage.

Joe Roberts appears to have missed the pitch from the Saluki hurler by about a foot. But Louisville's hitting wasn't quite that futile in its 4-1, 8-4 doubleheader loss to the Salukis last weekend. Roberts actually fouled off the pitch.

ISU has a record of 16-3 (.842).

However, Jones feels the Sycamores' overall percentage is not indicative of how good they are. SIU's overall percentage is .739 and is third among Valley teams behind Wichita State.

"We've played the toughest schedule of any of the Valley teams," Jones said.

"Bobby Warren (ISU coach and former Saluki) has done a good job, though, of building their program up. He's always tried to beat us, but hasn't yet."

Tracksters have statistical edge over Illinois, but...

By David Gafrick
Staff Writer

Statistics don't lie. Or so the old saying goes.

Gambblers put life and pocketbook on the line when they bet. A prime factor in the way they choose to parlay their money is statistics. College scouts crave for them when deciding whom to recruit.

And so on a sun-kissed, wind-swept Thursday, the "odds makers" were at work over in the Arena, figuring points for Saturday's noon McAndrew Stadium clash between the Salukis and arch rival Illinois. The line...SIU in a comfortable win.

Track Coach Lew Hartzog would scoff at such a conclusion. The man who believes in "super" efforts and in the reincarnation of downtrodden tracksters chuckles statistics away like waste paper when it comes to the SIU-Illinois track meet. True, they may not lie. But they can be misinterpreted. What was supposed to be a close meet a year ago turned into a SIU romp, 109 1/2 to 53 1/2.

This year the statistics favor the Salukis, who are seeded ahead of the Illini in the majority of the events. SIU should gather a bushel basket of points in the hammer, shot put, discus and javelin, where veterans Stan Podolski and John Marks anchor the field. Tracy Hosler, a freshman, has been a big surprise in the javelin, chucking the spear 226-2 this season.

The Salukis will be at full capacity for the first time this season against Illinois. Gary Hunter, Marks, Paul Craig and Karsten Schulz all passed physicals in the meet against Indiana. Rick Rock is ready to go after missing the Indiana meet because of a pulled hamstring. Kevin Moore will make his 1979 outdoor debut in the 800-meter run.

The Illini are off to a slow start outdoors in 1979. Weather has been the primary reason. Mark Claypool is more than three seconds behind the meet record he set one year ago. Nate Wyatt, the reigning Illinois Intercollegiate champion in the 60-yard dash, has not matched times set by SIU's Clarence Robison and Rock. Gail Olson still is recovering from a knee injury. He has cleared 7-3 in the high jump this season.

Olson, high jump, and Erem Stringfellow and Al Ferrymen, triple jump, are favored in their events. The majority of the running events should be close. Any number of miscues or other factors, such as the weather, could jumble the placings. The intense feelings involved in the rivalry could do the same thing.

If such happens, statistics are worth no more than fool's gold. Statistics are, after all, statistics.

Large movements of fish beginning at spillways

Last week I made an error in the column concerning the combination hunting-fishing license. I said the price was $10 when in fact it is $11.25. Sorry about that.

This week, I'd first like to relate an experience a friend and I had while fishing last weekend. Maybe we all can benefit from it.

My partner and I were fishing on the south end of Little Grassy Lake when a thunderstorm hit. Usually, I like to fish during a rainstorm but this baby was throwing a lot of lightning around so we decided to get off the lake and seek shelter.

As we sat on shore waiting for the storm to blow itself out, we heard screaming across the lake and surmised that someone needed help. We called out, and received a response.

We took off across the lake in my boat and found a cold, frightened and lost young woman. She had no idea where she was or how to get back to her husband. Eventually the couple was united again, but this episode illustrates a point. It is easy to get lost in the woods in Southern Illinois, and persons planning an outing in the forests should take several precautions. Here are some tips:

- Carry a compass and know how to use it.
- Always go with a friend.
- Let persons at home — roommates, friends, etc. — know exactly where you are headed and when you will be back.

Gone fishing

By Bob Klinge

— Carry a pack with a sharp knife, a loud whistle, high-energy food (candy bars, for example), a small but adequate first-aid kit, a waterproof box for matches and tinder, and an extra sweater or jacket that is warm.

If you are lost, control the urge to turn around and head back to where you came from. The most important thing is not to panic. Rationally figure out where you stand and plan an intelligent course of action.

The major cause of death among lost hikers is hypothermia. This is a lowering of the body temperature through exposure to adverse weather conditions. Russ Ohney, author of "The Master Backpacker," writes: "If a healthy man is caught in a rainstorm wearing only cotton clothing — even in summer — he is in imminent danger of hypothermia."

"If, for example, the temperature is 50 degrees and a breeze of 10 mph is blowing, he has only about 45 minutes before the onset of symptoms."

Spring weather in Southern Illinois tends to change suddenly and the outdoors person always should be prepared for the worst. If you plan any extensive outings with nature I suggest you read Mohney's book or carry it with you on your expeditions.

Now back to fishing. Conditions definitely are improving and last weekend was a positive indicator of things to come. Between Friday and Saturday more than 30 legal-size bass were landed in my boat alone.

All the fish taken were very lightly colored, indicating that they had just recently come up from deep water. Also, we caught three or four fish in the same place, one after the other, which is another positive indicator of large movements of fish. The bass are starting to school now; however, a strong cold front still will turn them off and send them rumming for deep water.

Large movements of fish also indicate that the spillways in the SIU area soon will be very productive for all you shorebound fishermen. Try Crab Orchard Spillway first. There are largemouth bass, striped bass, crappie and carp here. They are being taken on live bait as well as artificials. The carp are being taken on doughballs and stink-baits.

By the way, don't put down Mr. Carp. Hooking a five- or six-pound carp will test any angler's skill. They are strong fish and will fight to the end. Although carp are not spectacular leapers, they still are a lot of fun, especially when nothing else is biting.

Devils Kitchen Spillway also is productive and is one of the few places in the area where trout can be taken. Trout also are located above the dam in the main lake. Red wiggler worms on the bottom work well and a flyrod can be an excellent device to take these trout.

Use dry flies with brown, gray and white patterns. If you do not own a flyrod, you can use a spinning outfit — tie a dry fly on your line and attach a clear plastic float or bobber about three feet up from the fly. The bobber will enable you to cast the fly a great distance and also will give you an idea of what's going on at the end of your line. A sudden movement of the bobber down or off to one side indicates that it is time to set the hook.

Mepp's spinners in the 0-1-2 sizes also work well on the trout and a small piece of worm on the spinners improves their productivity even more.

Little Grassy Spillway has not yet been very productive.
