USO race results not available

Election officials predicted that official results from the Undergraduate Student Organization election would not be available until late Wednesday night, according to John Strem, election commissioner. Strem declined to give any preliminary results.

In the race for USO president and vice president, Bruce Joseph and Stephanie Jackson were running on the Trojan Party ticket. Steve Petrow and Mike Greathouse were running on the Maverick Party ticket. Incumbent Student Trustee Sharon Hutcherson was running unopposed.

All 38 Student Senate seats, which are elected by academic district and geographic location, were also to be filled.

Committee OKs Simon draft bill

The full U.S. House Education and Labor Committee Wednesday approved a bill, introduced by Rep. Paul Simon (D-22nd District), to delay for seven months the onset of the so-called Solomon Amendment, which ties draft registration to financial aid, according to a Simon aide.

The bill will now be sent to the House Armed Services Committee for consideration, David Carle said Wednesday.

The so-called Solomon Amendment requires that draft-eligible men prove they are registered before they can receive financial aid from the government. The bill is scheduled to go into effect July 1.

"Simon's intent was to allow sufficient time for legal and procedural questions surrounding the Solomon Amendment," Carle said. "The law would inundate every financial aid office on every campus in the country with an enormous amount of paperwork which would delay financial aid for all students."

Simon believes that his bill has a chance to be approved by the Armed Services Committee, Carle said, noting that Simon turned aside an amendment to his bill which proposed to delay the draft-registration requirement for a full year.

"He advised his committee that the Armed Services panel would almost certainly not approve a delay of that length," but would might approve a delay of seven months, Carle said.

Washington vows 'unifying attitude'

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor-elect Harold Washington promised an "open-handed, healing" administration for the nation's second-largest city Wednesday, but his defeated Republican opponent snubbed a promised unity luncheon and left for a Florida vacation.

Bernard Epton, bitter in defeat of his quest to be the city's first Republican mayor in 52 years, offered no concession. He dispatched his brother to the reconciliation meeting, breaking a pledge made on election eve to attend win or lose.

Washington said he was not offended by Epton's absence.

Washington's election was hailed by several of the nation's black big-city mayors and national Democrats, who rallied to his side as many Chicago party regulars defected to Epton.

"It will stir up the hopes of black voters," said former United Nations ambassador Andrew Young, the second black to serve as mayor of Atlanta.

Some Democrats who bolted in the election remained on the sidelines as Washington declared the vaunted Chicago Machine, which he had promised to dismantle, as "mortally wounded."

"The Machine is not dead, it is mortally wounded and like most wounded animals, it will drift off into the woods and die," he declared.

Meanwhile, Alderman Roman Pucinski — an outspoken critic of the mayor-elect, promised to work with the city's first black mayor. Pucinski said how Washington conducts his administration would be key in allaying fears among whites.

The 60-year-old two-term congressman captured virtually unanimous black support but won the backing of only 18 percent percent of white voters. He said people are "a little tired" of the tensions that surfaced in his contest with Epton and promised to move swiftly to bring the city together.

"The damage I think can be assuaged very quickly by an open-hand, healing unifying attitude," Washington said on CBS Morning News.

Nevertheless, Washington said Chicago residents must deal with its racial divisions.

Both Mayor Jane M. Byrne and Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, defeated by Washington in the Feb. 22 primary, attended the unity luncheon.

Westberg pleased with mayoral win

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

Not surprisingly, Carbondale Mayor-elect Helen Westberg is in good spirits.

Westberg, who has been elected the city's first woman mayor, garnered 70 percent of the votes cast in the Carbondale mayoral election Tuesday night. Westberg, 66, said she was pleased with voter turnout and delighted with her margin of victory.

According to the unofficial vote tally, Westberg received 2,306 votes, compared to 1,006 votes for Robert Crim, her opponent in the mayoral race.

A Carbondale City Council member since 1973, Westberg said she is looking forward to working with the new council.

Archie Jones, who was not up for re-election.

"I think it's going to be a good council," Westberg said. "I haven't had much of an opportunity to get to know the new members very well yet, but I'm looking forward to doing so. I know that we won't all agree on everything, but I don't see that as necessarily being a disadvantage."

House rejects efforts to dilute resolution on nuclear freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — With plenty of votes to spare, the House on Wednesday rejected efforts to dilute a nuclear freeze resolution labeled "a formula for permanent insecurity" by President Reagan.

House Democratic leaders remained confident of victory over the largely symbolic call for a "mutual and verifiable" halt in the arms race. But the chamber's slow progress suggested a final vote might still be several days off.

By a 229 to 190 vote, the Democratic-run chamber rejected a major modification proposed by Rep. Elliot H. Levitas, D-Ga., that would have permitted older nuclear weapons to be replaced by newer ones in lieu of a flat freeze.

In the wake of that test, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said the resolution "won quite easily" despite furious lobbying by the president and ranking officers of his Cabinet.

But a welter of other amendments still stood in the way of a final vote. Many were filed by Republicans and defense-minded conservative Democrats who claim the proposal, although nonbinding, could undermine the president's ability to negotiate with the Soviet Union.

"If we don't finish it today, we'll finish it next week ... We've got plenty of time," O'Neill said.

Levitas told the House his "strategic build-down" proposal, which suggested that two old warheads be retired for each new one produced, would give the president more flexibility.

But freeze proponent Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., called the Levitas proposal

"just a public relations cover for the arms build-up the Reagan administration wants."

The Levitas amendment was viewed by both sides as a key vote, perhaps the best chance freeze opponents would have to modify the proposal to make it more to the administration's liking.

O'Neill suggested that freeze leaders would be able to fend off all other major amendments — including a proposal by Rep. Mark D. Siljander, R-Mich., endorsing the administration's insistence on reductions of U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals before consideration of a freeze.

The chamber first took up the legislation last month, but leaders ordered it put it aside after a more than 12 hours of debate failed to produce a final vote.

Soviets say freeze could help talks

MOSCOW (AP) — The proposed freeze on U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons would create the "appropriate atmosphere" for arms reduction talks, say high-ranking Soviet officials.

Three officials, in an interview Wednesday with The Associated Press, also indicated the Kremlin has not closed the door to compromise in negotiations on limiting "Euromissiles."

The U.S. House of Representatives scheduled a vote Wednesday on a resolution calling for immediate U.S.-Soviet negotiations to seek a "mutual and verifiable freeze" on testing, production and deployment of atomic weapons, and reductions in the number of existing weapons.

President Reagan's administration has opposed the freeze proposal, arguing it would "reward" the Soviets for their recent arms buildup and leave the United States at a military disadvantage.

U.S. officials also have said a freeze would require stringent on-site inspection of Soviet facilities by outsiders to ensure compliance.

The three Soviet officials — well-versed in the details of the U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva, Switzerland, on controlling long- and medium-range nuclear arsenals — granted the interview to two AP reporters on condition they not be identified.

The Soviet position "naturally does not mean that ... we have invented absolute truth or a ready-made prescription" for agreement, said one. "We have a flexible position."

In the two-hour interview, the Soviet officials reiterated their government's support for the general idea of a freeze, but dismissed the suggestion of mandatory, on-site inspection.

"We believe that verification of compliance with such measures would be assured by national technical means ... of the two sides and would not present any difficulty," said one.

"National technical means" are such methods as satellite surveillance of missile sites and seismic detection of underground nuclear test explosions.

The same official said a freeze "would be easy to implement and would not require long talks." And it "would assure the appropriate climate for holding negotiations on reducing arms."

But he signaled some Soviet uncertainty about precisely how a freeze would work. "The question of what should be frozen and how it should be frozen needs clarification," he said.

On the subject of the "Euromissile" talks, which appear deadlocked, the Soviet officials were firm and at times sounded angry in their rejection of the latest U.S. position.

State voters support utility board

By the Associated Press

Voters in 111 Illinois communities overwhelmingly approved referendums asking the General Assembly to set up a citizens' utility board to argue for consumers in utility rate cases, a key supporter of the plan said Wednesday.

"It's a resounding victory for consumers and a big defeat for utilities," said Patrick Quinn, director of the Coalition for Political Honesty that pushed the measure.

Quinn said final figures probably would not be available until Friday, but that it appeared the proposal did not lose in any of the communities where it was on the ballot in Tuesday's elections.

Supporters to fight for Adelman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kenneth L. Adelman's Senate supporters, only a few votes shy of a majority needed to confirm the arms control nominee, said Wednesday they would fight any attempt to send his name back to a hostile committee.

Opponents of Adelman's nomination weighed the possibility of trying to get the nomination returned — or recommitted — to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which refused by a 9-8 margin to endorse the nomination on Feb. 24.

Walesa seized, interrogated, freed

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, chief of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation, was seized and interrogated by police for nearly five hours Wednesday about a clandestine meeting with underground union leaders.

"As a free man, I have a right to meet with anyone, even criminal elements, so long as the meeting has no criminal intent," Walesa told reporters after he returned to his apartment in the early evening.

Life expectancy up to 74.5 years

NEW YORK (AP) — A baby born in America in 1982 could expect to live 74½ years, a record U.S. life expectancy, according to preliminary calculations released Wednesday by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

By sex, life expectancy was estimated at 78.2 years for girls, an increase of about 16 weeks from 1981, and 70.7 years for boys, or about 21 weeks more than 1981.

The 7½-year gap in life expectancy between girls and boys was the narrowest since 1968, the company said.

'Surprised' Tuxhorn wins council seat

By Karen Torrey
Staff Writer

Keith Tuxhorn and Elliott Bevis were at odds on most issues during their campaigns for the Carbondale City Council seat, but had no trouble agreeing about the outcome: they were surprised.

Tuxhorn won the two-year term in Tuesday's general election over Bevis by a 78-vote margin, 1,410 to 1,332, according to unofficial results. Tuxhorn, a 27-year-old SIU-C graduate and retail clerk, carried 17 of Carbondale's 27 precincts. Bevis, a 46-year-old real estate salesman, appeared to be the favorite after a strong showing in the Feb. 23 primary election when he received 1,365 votes to Tuxhorn's 479.

"I'm pretty surprised," Tuxhorn said Tuesday night, but added that after receiving two newspaper endorsements and the announcement of Councilwoman Sammie Aikman's write-in bid, "I thought I had a chance."

Tuxhorn said Aikman, who received 302 votes for the two-year term, may have lured votes from some people who might otherwise have cast ballots for Bevis.

"It certainly didn't help," said Bevis on Wednesday of Aikman's write-in campaign, launched four days before the general election. Bevis said it was a "shame" Aikman did not announce her candidacy before the primary election.

"If she was that intent on getting elected, she should have gotten in and played with the rest of us," Bevis said.

Aikman, who was appointed to the council in 1981, said Wednesday that while she may have taken a few votes from Bevis, "I don't feel that it made that big a difference."

"I feel good in the fact that I did pull almost 10 percent of the vote" with a very short campaign, Aikman said, who voiced her faith in the new council.

"I'm sure that (Tuxhorn) will bring refreshing, younger ideas to the council and introduce a different perspective," she said.

Tuxhorn said his perspective will include putting forth

"different proposals that the voters have told me they want supported."

Tuxhorn has been the sole opponent among City Council candidates of the proposed downtown hotel-conference center and the only one who has said he would support a tax increase if needed to maintain funding levels for social service programs.

"I wasn't just electioneering," Tuxhorn said. "Those are my ideals and I intend to represent them."

Jones elected to Murphysboro council

By Terry Leveck
Staff Writer

Pansy Jones became the first woman elected to serve on the male-dominated Murphysboro City Council when she won her bid for a council seat in an election Tuesday.

Jones, who ran unopposed in the 5th Ward, said, "It's a real honor" to become the first woman to serve on the council.

"I hope it gives other women incentive to come forward and to say they want to be involved," she said.

Jones, the administrative secretary to the SIU-C dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, has served on the council in an appointed position since October, when Donald Morgan resigned. She worked with school organizations and has been interested in keeping up with what's going on in the community.

SIU-C secretary first woman in office

"It was a good way to get involved," Jones said.

However, she said, being the only woman on the council has its advantages and disadvantages.

Jones said her election is healthy for the council because women see things differently. She and the other newly-elected members should breed some new ideas, she said.

But, Jones said, "It's a real challenge for any woman to be the only woman working with all men."

Her main goal for the council is to get some sort of recreation facility for teenagers in conjunction with the park board. She would also like to see some drainage problems straightened out along, with attracting new industry to the city, Jones said.

"Most of all I want to be available to people in my ward so they will feel free to call me and tell me their problems so I can do something about it," she said. With a smile, she added, "I would also like to know if they're happy about something."

Jones became interested in being a city council member through Alderman David McDowell, who asked her if she wanted to serve on the council and later mentioned her name when the mayor was looking for prospective appointees.

SIU-C student wins seat in Park District

SIU-C student Patrick B. McGarry and Joseph Lenzini defeated Carbondale Park District Board President Kenneth P. Salus in a three-way race for two board seats in Tuesday's general election.

McGarry, a 29-year-old unclassified doctoral student, received 1,763 votes and Lenzini 1,872, according to unofficial results. Salus finished with 1,183.

"The attitude of the community seemed to be that people wanted Mr. Salus out and I think the vote reflected that," McGarry said Wednesday.

said the new council will have to make some tough choices in the near future.

One of the most "immediate and major" decisions facing the council is the future of the problem-plagued plans for a downtown conference center project, she said. Westberg also said the council will have to make some "difficult decisions" about future city funding of social services.

Despite the lopsided vote,

Crim said he was not surprised or disappointed.

"The vote went about as I expected it to," he said.

Crim said his campaign was hurt by a lack of finances and by a reluctance of people to actively campaign and show support for a candidate who was not likely to win. He said his effort was also hurt by the departure of several busboys of SIU-C students who went to work for Chicago mayoral candidate Harold Washington on election day.

"But I certainly don't regret running," he said. "My campaign did have an impact. The present City Council has already adopted some of my suggestions."

Crim, who has been active in civic affairs since retiring from the Air Force, said he plans to "just sit back and watch" city events for a while.

A resident of Murphysboro for eight years, Jones earned an executive secretary degree from Darroughs Business College in Paducah, Ky. and earned an associate degree from the SIU-C School of Technical Careers. She is now a senior in business education.

Her busy lifestyle doesn't interfere with her family obligations, though. "My family was very supportive," Jones said. "I'm not that busy that I'm never home."

Correction

A chart in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian indicated that the land occupied by the Southern Illinois Gem Co. in Carbondale was owned by the City of Carbondale.

That land is not owned by the city, but was included in the city's original proposal for a downtown redevelopment project.

'Fiscal necessity' a threat to faculty

THERE ARE STORM CLOUDS on the horizon, and the Faculty Senate and Graduate Council have sounded the warning siren in response to a proposal to give the president the authority to suspend or reduce employee contracts in the middle of the school year with a declaration of "fiscal necessity."

The Board of Trustees already had the power by law to declare a fiscal exigency and fire employees to meet a budget shortfall, but campus constituents, who admit that the University likely will face a shortfall of between $4 million and $12 million, want a more limited means of meeting a shortfall than a declaration by the president of the "necessity."

The Faculty Senate, which unanimously rejected the proposal Tuesday, was concerned that once it was in place, the power would remain with the president until later legislation removed it. It should have a sunset provision, argued faculty, who anticipate sunnier days are coming for higher education.

FACULTY ARE WILLING to support solutions, however unpleasant, to a bad situation, Faculty Senate President Herbert Donow says. But this plan is not seen as a viable means of securing further savings for the University. The faculty, who agree that savings are needed and are studying options, can be angered that they were given less than two weeks to study the draft report and provide input and alternatives. How much is the administration willing to include faculty and other constituents in decisions such as a determination of what a fiscal necessity?

The board should postpone, if not drop, the plan for more reasons than to give the Faculty Senate additional time to offer alternatives. Vesting this power with the president can be dangerous. The University has all the problems it needs already in luring and retaining faculty without faculty having to put up with a provision in their contracts giving the president the power to suspend or reduce contracts essentially at his will.

THE PLAN, as Donow argues, is too open-ended. Faculty could never rest without wondering if or when they would suffer the same fate as the 104 staff and faculty, including 29 with tenure, who got their walking papers in 1973 when the Illinois Board of Higher Education declared a budget cut was necessary. Any savings realized from that action were wiped out by the settlements SIU-C reached with faculty who challenged the arbitrary decision, not to mention the costs of the lasting bitterness and suspicion that it generated.

There's no need to go through it all again.

Friend drops out; what else is new

"I DON'T know if I'll be back next year," a friend told me the other day. "If they raise tuition the way they're talking and I don't get my loan, I'll stay home and go to a community college."

You call this pursuing a basic American goal of providing everyone with an education? Is anybody in Springfield, Washington, D.C., or on this campus even listening to what students go through to get a college degree these days?

Students can keep in mind that anything worthwhile is worth struggling for, but society, which certainly finds something worthwhile in having its citizens educated, can't sit back and tell struggling students they must pick up the slack and pay more on their own without causing damage to this country.

How is it then that someone dropping out of school seemingly takes no one back? It should be shocking. Instead, friends look each other in the eye when bearing this as if to say "what else is new." And if friends can react this way, why should policy-makers be bothered by the news?

IT'S OLD news perhaps, students here and there who run out of money. Perhaps officials don't decide policy matters on hearsay evidence. School officials concede that accurate figures on the number of students dropping out because of economic hardship aren't easy to come up with.

Why make students pay more for education which supposedly is a high priority, especially for the poor, in this country? President Reagan makes it sound noble that poor and middle-class Americans can pay more and more for their education. It might be noble, but it's more noble of a society that takes care of its own by educating them, socializing them and making them productive members of their communities.

SOCIETY COLLECTS more from an educated person than the dollars loaned to him or her plus interest. There is more to be gained than a pat in the back whether we choose to look upon an educated person as a possible solution to society's ills or as a tax-paying citizen.

My friend is an education

Other artists include feet

I am far from convinced by Ms. Brilliant's justification for cutting off the legs and feet from her statue of President Morris: "If I had included the shoes and the bottom of the trousers you could tell the age. If it is old-fashioned, it becomes obsolete. This way, it will remain forever."

Maybe Ms. Brilliant knows something that the curators of the great museums of the world don't; otherwise, it would get rid of all those obsolete Titians and Raphaels which show people wearing 16th century shoes with bows and ribbons. Or maybe all that she means is that, unlike real works of art, sculptures like hers will have to rely on not showing their age in order to "remain forever." — Paola Parish, Carbondale.

major, having come to SIU-C from a town of about 2,000 in Central Illinois. A degree from SIU-C might have been only a dream years ago, but it is just a drop in the bucket for a society pursuing educational access for everyone regardless of whether they can come up with $1,000 up front or not.

She just wants to get her degree and teach, she has told me. She wants to teach special education, just as everyone has their own plans for what to do day in and day out. Education becomes a passport, though most students don't appreciate it as such.

IF STUDENTS did comprehend the benefits of student aid, they would be in the streets fighting to save student aid from further cuts. Policy-makers are to say students don't care. Blame it on youthful inexperience and wait 10 years for the dividends.

If these same policy-makers continue to make inroads into student aid, how many young people will find themselves — like my friend — faced with a hometown to finish a degree at a community — if they decide to finish school at all.

Let policy-makers think what they might, my thoughts are of a friend who may not return to school. Before we close this chapter on American education, let's take another look; I think this book is a classic.

The article about the "not-so-brightway" path, (DE Mar. 4) concerns and angers me, to say the least. Do the SIU administrators need to be reminded that campus safety has become a paramount issue in the last few years at SIU-C and other universities as well? Have you forgotten, that just last year an SIU-C college student was murdered on campus in broad daylight?

Statistics regarding frequency of attacks on SIU-C women, between 1975 and 1982, indicate that over 50 percent of on-campus attacks occurred on pathways near buildings. Women, for no other reason than their sex, are vulnerable to rape. Because of this situation, women have unequal access to certain places, if they choose not to jeopardize themselves, by walking alone at night.

This is a handicapping situation to say the least. The bottom line is that ALL students have the right to equal access to the educational facilities that they are paying for. I am by no means blaming the University for societies' ills, or suggesting that they have the power to prevent attack, but I do believe that it is the University's responsibility to facilitate a reasonably safe environment in the interest of crime prevention.

Since 1976, suits have been brought against university, due to negligence, in providing a reasonable safe environment, adequate security, or architectural design.

In case the administration needs to be reminded; in 1978, you were made aware, by the women of this campus, of your responsibility to implement a campus safety program. In 1979 the students of this University passed a referendum to increase fees to support such a program. Unless I'm mistaken, a functional brightway path was a part of the deal. So if the students fees are for campus safety program, it is the University's responsibility to assist in providing what has been agreed upon.

If the brightway path was conceived in an attempt to reduce the risk of crime to students, by providing well-lit areas on otherwise dark pathways, then 67 malfunctioning lights is clearly negligence. This is not a luxury; it is our right. And it is your responsibility! — Mary Doyle, Graduate Student, Rehabilitation Counseling

Let students greet us

Upon any given day at any time, one goes to the Rec Center for the use of its great facilities, only to be met with a broken down turnstile. Something needs to be done!

Before the turnstile system was implemented, everyone presented their I.D. and a fee statement to a student worker at the entrances. Now one enters with an updated I.D. expecting to insert their card and be on their way. However, most of the time the turnstile is broken down and a student worker still has to check one's I.D. card.

Granted, the turnstile system has been beneficial. Mr. Bill Bleyer, coordinator of the Student Recreation Center, states that the system saves $20,000 per year on operating costs. Also, the computer system provides a daily printout of the users of the facilities. Mr. Bleyer also stated that the computer is fed information each day so that those who cancel registration cannot continue to use the facilities. The savings and information are great. However, there are disadvantages to this system. First, the initial costs of the turnstiles, $94,000, was quite expensive. Secondly, the mechanical workage of the turnstiles is disastrous. Mr. Bleyer states that attainment of parts from the manufacturer is the major drawback of this system. Once an efficient and reliable parts network has been established, the system could be repaired in a matter of minutes with "on hand" parts. Finally, student "spotters" are needed to keep students honest.

As a daily user of the Rec Center facilities, I am disappointed to see these turnstiles constantly broken down. I would feel much better being greeted by someone in person, knowing my money spent on fees is benefiting them by having a job. Instead, my money is being spent on spare parts.

Show to mix several art forms

By Liz Meyers
Student Writer

"Phersu," a 30-minute multimedia performance, combining dance, music, film and sculpture, will be presented 8 p.m. Friday at Shryock Auditorium with free admission.

Graduate student in sculpture Deborah La Grasse, creator of the project, began work on the performance 2½ years ago. With the bulk of the costs going toward film, her expenses have now reached close to $9,000 for the show.

The show will incorporate two 16mm short films, dance, a body-building sequence, live music and sculptures created by La Grasse that she will wear during the performance.

The show's title "Phersu" comes from a Latin word referring to both an actor and a mask or object through which the actor's voice comes.

According to Miss La Grasse, the theme of the performance involves the expression of one's own identity.

"Everyone is always going to have a mask or armor that they are going to wear," the tall blond-haired La Grasse commented.

Although La Grasse is basically undertaking the project for herself, the entire 30 minute sequence will be videotaped.

"I plan on taking the film places. Once I get my documentation, it might be submitted to some film competitions," she said.

The 29-year-old creator of the project is a native of Florida and has also lived in San Francisco and New Jersey before coming to Carbondale two years ago.

"Since I've been here I haven't seen anything like this," La Grasse said of the performance, adding that during one segment there is even a slide projection on her body.

"You can look at a sculpture in a gallery and you only receive so much from it," she said. "But if you combine it with other media, it can lead to a more expressive concept."

In regards to the full body cast bronze sculptures that will be exhibited, La Grasse explained, "I created these sculptures and they are sculptures that I will wear."

The film portions of the presentation were directed by Akbar Youssefpoor, SPC film chairman, as part of his work for his masters in fine arts in cinema and photography.

"I started to work on the casts to my sculptures in the spring of 1981. Akbar and I began work on the films in the Fall of 1982," La

Grasse said. "It has undergone lots of changes in that time."

La Grasse has received a $6,000 commission for her work on the sculptures, a grant from the Illinois Arts Council and was funded by the Art Students League and the Graduate Student Council.

"I hope that the people who come to see it might be inspired to do something similar of combining art forms," La Grasse said, "or will walk away with a better understanding of the concepts I tried to express."

The production includes five parts including one part of electronically synthesized music. "I conceived it, I'm in it and I visualized the whole thing," La Grasse said. "I think it is autobiographical, but it's something everyone experiences."

Classic tale to be presented

The Classics Section of the Foreign Language Department will present Seneca's classic tragedy, "Trojan Women," in the Quigley Hall Lounge at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

The play takes place after the fall of Troy and centers around the Trojan women who have survived the siege and are being taken into slavery by the Greeks.

The play is one in a series of four plays — two Roman, two Greek, two comedies, two tragedies — given annually by the department.

Admission and refreshments are free.

Graduate recital to be given

Terrance McKinney, graduate student in jazz pedagogy in the School of Music, will present a recital at 8 p.m. Friday in Quigley Hall Auditorium. McKinney will conduct and also perform with the STU Jazz Big Band and the STU Jazz Arts Ensemble. McKinney plays trumpet and harmonica.

The performance will include many traditional jazz numbers, all but two have been arranged by McKinney. Included in this repertoire are selections such as: "Take the A Train," "La Fiesta," "With You I'm Born Again," "Autumn Leaves" and "Billie's Bounce."

The performance is free and the public is invited to attend.

McLeod to present Williams' play

By Laurie Landgraf
Staff Writer

The Department of Theater will present five performances this month of Tennessee Williams' classic, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

Curtain times will be at 8 p.m. April 21, 22 and 23, and at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. April 24 in the McLeod Theater in the Communications Building. Proceeds from the April 24 evening performance will go to the Harold McFarlin Heart Transplant Fund.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" is a Pulitzer Prize-winning drama about members of a wealthy Southern family, whose lives are stripped of pretense in a shattering moment of revelation.

Guilt, frustration and greed surface at Big Daddy's 65th birthday celebration. Despite the family's efforts to convince him otherwise, Big Daddy senses something is wrong and tries to make peace with Brick, his favorite son, the star athlete and golden boy who has slipped into the grip of alcoholism.

The family's conflicts are exposed in an explosive series of climaxes, and the final confrontation is a triumph of love and truth.

The production is directed by Calvin Maclean, with set design by Darwin Payne and lighting by Lang Reynolds, all faculty members in the Department of Theater.

Tickets for the regular shows

Civilian Conservation Corps recalled

By Patrick Williams
Staff Writer

More than trees and a law are needed to make a national forest. People, to build the roads, bridges and fire trails that run through the woods are also needed.

Fifty years ago, when Shawnee National Forest was formed, an organization known as the Civilian Conservation Corp, comprised of young men left jobless by the Great Depression, was also begun. The CCC provided much of the labor that built the forest.

"You had a roof over your head, and you had good food," said Joseph Ruzich, 67 an ex-CCC worker from Johnston City.

CCC workers also had $30 dollars a month, 25 of which was sent home to their parents.

For $30, the Corps housed, educated and trained its workers, who worked six hour shifts five days a week.

Ruzich said many men in the area, such as bricklayers, got their training in the CCC.

"The work wasn't that hard really," Ruzich said, reminiscing. "Of course when your 18, 19, years-old, any work seems hard."

The work may not have been difficult, but a lot of it was done. In Illinois, the 165,347 men employed in the CCC program planted nearly 33 thousand trees, built 394 bridges and laid over 1,000 miles of trails.

Ruzich, short, balding with a bartender's cheerful disposition — he owns a lounge in Johnston City — joined the Corps in 1934 when he was 19 years old. With five brothers and sisters and a coal-miner father who was unemployed, the $30 "wasn't a lot of money, but it helped," Ruzich said.

Ruzich worked out of Camp Eddyville in Pope County, feeding imported Wisconsin deer and manning a fire tower. Eddyville was one of 11 camps dotted throughout Shawnee.

William Baker, an ex-CCC worker from Murphysboro, said the money from the CCC helped get him through the Depression.

"Times were bad. It was very scary, you couldn't buy a job, even if you had money," Baker said.

Baker worked about in what is now Giant City State Park — not a part of the Shawnee Forest — loading dump trucks with hand shovels.

The lodge house and many of the roads in the park were built by CCC workers.

"It was educational in a lot of ways," Baker, 63, said. "You met all kinds of people. There was one guy down there who would drink hair oil."

CCC workers signed up for six-month hitchies. They lived in barracks averaging about 200 members apiece. While in the Corps, they were treated to daily bunk inspections and calisthenics, treatment that prepared many of the men for army service in World War II.

"It prepared a lot of us for the service," Baker said.

"There were never no fights or anything," Joseph Matulis, of Johnston City, despite the camps' bringing together strangers in close quarters.

or anything," said Joseph Matulis, of Johnston City, despite the camps' bringing together strangers in close quarters.

Matulis worked part of his nearly three years, beginning in 1939, in the CCC at Camp Kedron, near Harrisburg. When Kedron was later taken apart

Director says social services rely on government funding

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

With the pinch of Reaganomics creeping to its doorstep, Carbondale is continuing to offer what Robert Stalls terms "social delivery systems in a unique situation."

Stalls, director of the Carbondale Division of Human Resources, said it is rare to find diverse social service programs in cities the size of Carbondale.

Stalls spoke Wednesday on "Social Services and the Black Community: A View from City Hall," sponsored by the SIU-C Black American Studies Program.

Recounting the history of social services in the United States, he said there was a national goal for equality with the Kennedy administration in the 1960s.

"Kennedy evoked from the American conscience that there was something wrong with the social fabric. Poverty was at its height in an affluent society," he said. "There was national attention to focus on sharing resources."

But now, the federal government is shifting this goal and the financial responsibility back to the states. Governors have more discretion about social services funding and there is less money, Stalls added.

When Carbondale started a "low-income citizens program" in 1968, it began with a focus on youth, Stalls said. Combining its local funds with the federal funds supplied for the Neighborhood Youth Corp., the city was able to supply more programs, such as employment training.

In 1969, the city was given

$1,075,000 to "alleviate the cause of social problems," concentrating on the northeast side of Carbondale. That part of the city had about an 80 percent black population and was, and still is, a low-income area.

Stalls said the University's presence in Carbondale and its affluent population were two main reasons the programs were initiated.

Although blacks make up a large portion of those served by city programs, Stalls acknowledged "whites in Southern Illinois are poor too."

He said Hispanics are also focused upon for about six months every year when they migrate to the area for the harvest season. After the Vietnam War, needy Indo-Chinese were helped.

Most of the city's programs operate through the Eureka C. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow St. There is a child care program, neighborhood health center with a sliding fee scale, community health education and family planning program, and community care program.

The result of this concentration has been a rise in the expectations of those served and a lot of pressure on the City Council about how to divide the budget, Stalls asserted.

"A constituency has built that thinks it has a right to these programs," he said.

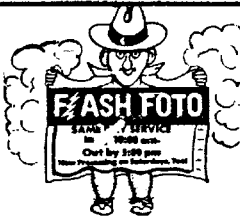

The effect of Reaganomics will be felt in fiscal year 1984, he said. Now, the administration's decision to end employment training programs has hurt them the most.

Mostly single parents were using these programs so, in turn, using the day care facilities, he explained. The programs were eliminated, so the number using the day care facilities went down and the amount of dollars the city was being reimbursed went down.

Stalls said he would like to see more involvement of SIU-C students in the social service programs through internships, for example.

"We have a live and living laboratory," he said.

and moved to Washington state, Matulis went with it.

For recreation, along with weekends in which to go home, men in the camps would often shoot dice for their monthly five dollars.

"Come payday everyone had their dice out," Matulis said. Although Matulis said he "really enjoyed" the CCC, he doesn't think another such program would work today.

"I don't think kids today would work that cheap," Matulis said.

Ruzich thinks differently. "Kids out there don't have enough to do," Ruzich said, "it

(the CCC) was a great experience, I think it would work today."

Matulis, Baker and Ruzich will have a chance to see many of their old co-workers on May 14 and 15 when the Shawnee Forest Service and will hold a joint commemoration of its and the CCC's founding in 1933.

Lowell W. Patterson said he expects about 150 ex-CCC workers to show up at two days of services.

Saturday, May 14, at Lake Glendale Recreation Area in Pope County, historical and pictorial exhibits of CCC days will be on display for the public beginning at 1:00 p. m. Sunday.

Fair to recall Civil War days

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

The Blue and the Gray. Campsites filled with uniform-clad soldiers solemnly cooking their dinner over an open fire.

This and much more will be the scene Saturday and Sunday as the Fifth Annual Civil War Battle at Makanda gets under way.

With an arts and crafts fair, free bluegrass and country western music, plenty of food and over a century's worth of history, the festivities will open at 8 a.m. Saturday with a flag-raising ceremony and pancake breakfast.

About 300 Union and Confederate Civil War reenactors will set the mood with drill and uniform competitions, a wilderness march, musket shoot, and camp inspection, all leading up to the battle to take place at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Hosted by the Village of Makanda and the Makanda

Township Volunteer Fire Department, the Battle of Fort Donelson, Tenn. will be recreated by Company C of the 31st Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, based in Southern Illinois this year.

Over the two-day period, about 10,000 people are expected at the fair, said Joanne Simpson, mayor of Makanda. At least 5,000 will view the battle.

A cavalry unit from Atlanta is also expected, she said, along with units from Missouri, Kentucky and Michigan.

"The public is invited to browse through campsites and ask questions," Simpson added. "The men will camp out and live as real Civil War soldiers lived, and the uniforms are authentic."

She requested that people refrain from bringing alcoholic beverages to the fair and battle.

According to Beverly Gold, publicity chairperson, rain won't dampen the event.

"It's the first reenactment of the year, so people are usually pretty enthusiastic about it," she said.

All events will be held at the H.B. Hartline Farm, located 8 miles south of Carbondale, at the intersection of U.S. Highway 51 and Makanda Road.

Ombudsman says budget woes cause problems for students

By David Murphy
Student Writer

The impact of the current economic situation is causing "real problems" for many people at SIU-C — students and employees alike — says University Ombudsman Ingrid Gadoway.

The prospect of more cuts to education in Gov. James R. Thompson's fiscal 1984 budget could make things even worse, she believes.

"Some people are getting desperate," Gadoway said. "The University is having to tighten its belt in light of the current money shortage, and that's causing some unpleasant situations for those people affected directly."

Gadoway, SIU-C's ombudsman since 1974, says students today are facing problems that demand solutions. She said many students who once may have been eligible for financial aid are now trying to get through school without the aid. She said many students are faced with working long hours while going to school — or dropping out.

"The number of drop outs because of financial reasons has increased," Gadoway said. "Our office is also seeing more severe social work cases, cases like students trying to support a family and not always having enough money for food."

According to Gadoway, the University is also tightening its requirements for tuition payment, making a bad time even worse for some.

"Now the University can't afford to have students who are slow in paying their fees. The University is having to collect its debts on time, and that's causing problems for students who don't have the money," said Gadoway.

This financial burden is causing a double problem for both SIU-C and its students, she said.

"There once was a time when the University was more lenient in collecting debts owed by students," Gadoway said. "But now the University has its own bills to pay and can't wait on outstanding debt."

Since SIU-C needs the students to survive, declining enrollments can only compound the current money woes, the ombudsman said.

The Office of the University Ombudsman does intervene to help students out of financial binds, says Gadoway.

"We've been successful in assisting students with landlords, the University Housing Office, and to a limited extent, the Bursar's Office," Gadoway said.

She said help from the ombudsman comes in different forms. It may come in the form of buying time for a student to help pay a bill, to advising students on how to help themselves, Gadoway said.

Gadoway said she sees another potential problem through all the financial uncertainty: an inevitable increase in cuts to academic programs.

"Commitments have been made to students gaining educations and finishing degrees," Gadoway said. "What happens to a student completing his or her degree and the program is cut?"

Right now there is no solution to the problem, Gadoway said, but a solution will have to be found.

The Office of the University Ombudsman was one of several non-academic programs recommended to be eliminated in a recent Non-Academics Program Priorities Committee Report presented to President Albert Somit.

Law students to be honored during annual banquet Friday

Forty-nine students from the School of Law will be honored during the school's 10th Annual Awards Night Dinner at 6 p.m. Friday in the banquet room of the Ramada Inn in Carbondale.

The ceremony is held each year in recognition of the law school's benefactors and top law students.

Students who have participated as attorneys in regional, national and international moot court competition, and in national client-counseling and appellate advocacy competition are also recognized. Recipients of awards for outstanding academic achievement will be announced during the ceremony.

Dan Hopson, dean of the School of Law, will preside over the ceremony.

The event is open to the public. Tickets are $5 per person and may be purchased at the door or reserved through the law school.

Deal constructively with stress from job loss, expert advises

By Duane Schombert
Staff Writer

Stress is self-inflicted — a result of a person telling himself something is wrong, according to Michael Altekurse, professor in guidance and educational psychology.

Therefore, when an incident occurs like losing a job, it is easy for a person to acquire a high degree of stress, Altekurse said Tuesday night at St. Frances Xavier Church in the third of a series of discussions sponsored by the Interchurch Council, which deals with the unemployed.

"If a person wants something he doesn't have, he will probably be stressed," he said. "Some unemployed people deal more positively with stress than other people."

If stress is dealt with constructively, the time spent looking for a job will be a "much happier" one, he added.

Altekurse recommended an unemployed person make an effort to seek alternatives to deal with stress.

Vigorous exercises like swimming and jogging are good ways to relieve stress, he said. However, people who aren't active can do a series of simple exercises that will give the body a "mini tune-up."

Those mini tune-ups include taking a deep breath, tightening the stomach muscles, holding it for five seconds, and then relaxing; rotating the head 10 times clockwise and then 10 times counterclockwise, rolling it as far down on the shoulders as possible; and stretching the arms out straight from the sides and rotating them in 12-inch circles.

These exercises increase blood flow to vital organs and deliver more oxygen to the brain, according to Altekurse. When this happens, a person thinks more clearly and are much better equipped to cope with stress.

Good sleeping and resting habits also help relieve stress, Altekurse said.

Habits to follow include maintaining a regular sleep schedule, exercising during the day instead of at night and not taking naps, he said.

Also recommended is not smoking, moderate drinking, eating regular meals, no snacks and maintaining one's weight.

"Being unemployed is a booby trap for all kinds of stress-causing activities like taking long naps, eating the wrong foods and not exercising so good habits are important," Altekurse said.

To relieve the pressures of job hunting, Altekurse suggested scheduling interviews at times of the day when a person functions well, leaving 15 minutes earlier to avoid rushing to a place and relaxing during the day.

Altekurse said individuals who want to learn more about how to deal with stress can seek assistance at the Jackson County Mental Health Clinic and SIU-C's Cooperative Clinical Center in Wham.

Fan Hoa Kung, professor of Forestry, explains the better. Kung built the speaker using pine and acoustics of his new 8 foot-high speaker that he designed to bring out the low tones in music materials.

Cheap, low-frequency speaker built

By Alan Cockrell
Staff Writer

Pure, undistorted sound flowing from a speaker like water tumbling down a cool mountain stream is the dream of every music enthusiast. Fan Kung, professor of forestry, has made that dream an actuality. Kung has developed a new design for a low-frequency resonating cabinet designed to hold a single 12-inch woofer. He designed it because sound is his hobby, he said, and because he is a forester and is always looking for new ways to use forest products.

The speaker stretches 8 feet along one wall of Kung's office and towers above him when placed on one end on the floor. "It's a lot bigger than I am," the 5-foot-2-inch professor said, straining to reach the top with a pointer. "Unless someone is planning to buy such a monster and put it in their home, I think the market is limited to big auditoriums."

Kung used soft, inexpensive fiberboard for most of the cabinet except for the sides, which are soft pine. The softer materials resonate much better than harder, more expensive woods would, he said.

"I spent $20 for wood and $60 dollars for the loudspeaker," he said.

The speaker's low distortion rate, which Kung says is around 1 percent, is a result of separating the front and back waves from the loudspeaker inside the cabinet.

"Many commercial speakers do nothing with the back wave. Mine channels the sound around the back and then gradually releases it in front," he said.

Kung said his invention would have no application to high frequency sound.

Many commercials put out good high frequencies," he said. "But, you can't hear the bass drums and those big double kettledrums."

A variety of music can be improved by the addition of undistorted low tones, Kung said. He likes classical.

"I wish I had a copy of the 1812 Overture to play over this, with the drums and bells and cannons," he said. "That would really show what it could do."

Another practical feature Kung demonstrated is the speaker's ability to fill a room with sound and not be heard outside.

"I can play music in my office and not bother anyone else," he said.

Activist to speak on El Salvador

By Belinda Edmondson
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois residence will have a unique opportunity to hear the views of a Salvadoran opposition group and to discuss U.S. policy toward that country.

Guadalupe Gonzalez, a representative of the Revolutionary Democratic Front in El Salvador, will speak Sunday in a program at the Student Center.

The program will begin at 7 p.m. and will be held in the Illinois Room.

Gonzalez has been a member of the RDF since its inception in 1980.

The RDF is a coalition of organizations which oppose the Salvadoran government, including the Social Democratic Party, members of the Christian Democratic party, the national trade union, the Independent Movement of Professionals and Technicians, and the University of El Salvador, among others.

Gonzalez was a student at the University of El Salvador until it was closed and occupied by the Salvadoran military.

With fighting between government and anti-government forces in El Salvador intensifying, the RDF is advocating direct and unconditional negotiations with the Salvadoran government on the part of the U.S. — rather than increasing military aid — to effect a peaceful end to the conflict. The public is invited to attend.

Donations to cover Gonzalez' expenses will be requested at the door.

Goals differ for McGirr's golfers

By Sherry Chisenhall
Staff Writer

Coach Mary Beth McGirr's men's and women's golf teams will take divergent paths this weekend, and McGirr had better hope they do so in a figurative and not just literal sense.

The women's team heads to Champaign to defend its tournament title at the Illini Invitational, while the men's squad travels to Wichita to compete in the Shocker Classic. The men didn't exactly take that tournament by storm last year, placing 18th in a 20-team field.

So while the women try to repeat their performance at Illinois, the men have almost nowhere to go but up. McGirr said she hopes the men's team can break into the top half of the 15-team field at Wichita, but the coach admits many of the opposing teams are out of the Salukis' league.

Big Eight conference representatives Kansas and Iowa State undoubtedly head the list of title contenders at the 54-hole tournament, as well as strong squads from Oral Roberts, Tulsa, and a tough host school, Wichita State.

Junior John Schaefer carries the hot clubs for the Salukis, taking low individual honors for SIU-C in the last two tournaments behind a 77.4 stroke average. Scott Briggs is on Schaefer's heels with a 78.4 average. Tom Jones is averaging 80.6 strokes per round, and Jan Jansco is shooting at an 80-stroke clip. Mike Steh has completed only three rounds but carries an 81-stroke average.

"I'm really excited about the team's progress so far," McGirr said. "I'm impressed with how John (Schaefer) has been playing. He's really been hitting the ball well."

"Scott (Briggs) is starting to come around, too. Tom (Jones) didn't have a good tournament at Illinois and is hoping to rebound this weekend. I'm hoping Mike Steh will come through for us, and if we get a couple of warm days, Jansco can really tear up the course."

A big plus for SIU-C is that team totals at the Classic will be based on four of five scores rather than five of six. The Salukis' lack of depth this season has been especially evident when the team has to reach down into the lineup and carry a fifth score.

McGirr's women's team, meanwhile, is a two-time defending champion of the Illini Invitational, taking team honors last spring and in the fall. Dania Meador claimed her first tournament crown last spring, taking low individual honors at the tournament behind rounds of 77 and 86 for a 163 total in a rain-shortened tournament.

Barb Anderson finished third in the invitational last year, shooting an 81 and an 87 for a 168 mark.

Playing conditions were dismal, evident in a tournament where a round of 86 was the low for the second day. Conditions for the coming weekend are no better. Illinois coach Paula Hall said the par 76, 5,841-yard course is fairly wet, with more rain possible for the weekend.

"It's rained a lot this week, but the fairways are in pretty good shape," she said. "We might get more rain over the weekend, and the temperature is supposed to be in the high 30s or low 40s."

The bottom line is that the weather will again be the golfers' major opponent, as it has been for most of the season. But should the Salukis get a break in the weather, McGirr said they have a legitimate shot at retaining their title.

The 36-hole invitational is being played at Illinois' Orange Course at Savoy, a fairly wide open course that should accommodate a long-hitting team like SIU-C.

"Our team has always done well at Illinois," McGirr said. "I guess they like the course, because the long hitters have an advantage, with the open course and the wind."

The Salukis' short game will also have to be sharp for them to place at the top of the field, since the course is heavily trapped, with small, tight greens, many of which are elevated.

Anderson, who shot solid rounds of 83 and 76 in her first spring tournament last weekend, heads the Saluki lineup for the tournament, along with Sue Arbogast, who has averaged 80 at the number one spot in the first three spring tournaments.

Anderson and Arbogast will be joined at Illinois by Lisa Kartheiser, who is averaging 81.3, Dania Meador and Lisa Bremer.

SIU-C will be pressed for the championship in the 13-team tournament by Michigan State, Missouri, Illinois State and host Illinois.

McGirr's squad will leave Champaign Saturday night for West Lafayette, Ind., to compete in a 36-hole tournament hosted by Purdue. McGirr said at least 16 teams will compete in the tournament, with SIU-C figured as a legitimate contender for the championship.

"We usually play reasonably well at Purdue," McGirr said. "Somehow we always come up just on the short side, though. I'm excited about the prospects for the weekend, because we're coming off two good tournaments and this week we got a break from playing and went out and just practiced. If we don't win it, I at least expect us to finish second or third."

Wadmark explained, "I lost was not very happy. But second tournament I won it seems I've been doing since."

Wadmark has had the experience and privilege to play Mats Vilander. He played Vilander four years when Vilander was only 10. Now at 18, Vilander is ranked 5th or 6th in the world. "I had set points against him once," Wadmark said, but he still managed to beat him.

In Sweden, tennis players are rated on a scale of 1-10, Bjorn Borg and Vilander being a 10. Wadmark was rated a six before leaving, and now hopes to be moved up on that scale over the summer. Wadmark spent his previous summers working odd jobs around his town of Malmo, which has 230,000 people and is the third biggest town in Sweden. But this summer, Wadmark plans on improving his game.

"I need more practice," Wadmark said. "With the weather being so terrible here, I only get a good practice in two or three times a week. A good tennis player practices six or seven days a week, for three hours a day."

When it's raining and the tennis courts are unplayable, LeFevre brings the team in for a vigorous workout in the Arena.

"We have something of a track set up in the Arena," LeFevre said. "The players are timed on how fast they can run it. On our track, they run up and down stairs, over and under obstacles and practically circle the inside of the Arena. Per is the best conditioned player on the team. He beats everyone else on the team by 15 seconds."

According to Wadmark, conditioning is most important. He spends every night at the Recreation Center working out.

But Wadmark's main concern is tennis and schooling. Being a freshman, he is not sure of his major, but says it will be some sort of engineering program.

Wadmark said his tennis game still needs a bit of improvement.

"My serve isn't as consistent as I want it to be," Wadmark explained. "My backhand topspin needs help, too."

According to LeFevre, Wadmark has the makings of a pro. He moves good on the court and sets up every shot. He doesn't make mistakes, which is important because "Tennis matches are not won," LeFevre said, "but lost."

His concentration never slips and he's cut down on his errors, LeFevre said.

"My coaching job is to provide him the opportunity to win and play and practice against the best," said LeFevre. "Since he's our number one player, he plays the best player from every school we face. That alone is the experience and coaching Per will need to become a pro."

Wadmark plans to stay with the Salukis for his remaining three years and will keep playing tennis.

Illinois placed second in the triangular at Indiana two weeks ago, scoring 54 points to SIU-C's 3, but Blackman insists those were impostors. They were not the same Salukis who ran well in a lousy weather to defeat Eastern Illinois last week.

SIU-C will have to work hard to place longer distances to place ahead of the Illini, mostly due to Julie Lantes, who has nifty times in the 800-yard run, 1500-meter run and 3,000-meter run. Illinois State, which won the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Association indoors, is tough all over.

Sophomore Odette James and freshman Lisa Reimund dropped their times considerably. James went from 18:40 to 18:23 in the 5,000-meters and Reimund dropped from 10:51 to 10:36 in the 3,000-meter run.

The Salukis will need a good day from Nina Williams and triple threat Rhonda McCausland. According to Spencer, McCausland has a good chance of placing high in the javelin, shot put and discus. If Williams has another 19-foot long jump, says Spencer, she could place high.

Basketball team lands sharpshooting guard

By Dan Devine
Associate Sports Editor

Allan Van Winkle has added a shooting guard to his basketball team, plucking junior-college transfer Nate Bufford from Midland College in Texas.

Bufford is the latest in Van Winkle's line of major college and juco transfers who will play for the Salukis next season. The 6-2 guard signed a national letter of intent Wednesday morning in Midland, as Van Winkle looked on.

Bufford averaged 18.9 points, 4.5 assists and 5.1 rebounds, primarily playing the off-guard position. Midland, a team that played fast-break basketball, was 31-4.

"A good number of his points come from long range," said Midland Sports Information Director H. A. Tuck. "Nate's a streak shooter. He'll miss three in a row and then make nine in a row, most of them from 18 to 21 feet. He's primarily an outside shooter."

Bufford hit 50 percent of his shots from the floor, and 73 percent of his free throws.

Van Winkle still has four scholarships available for next season, but the Saluki coach has not indicated which players SIU-C was after.

Winning is a reality for dream of a player

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

With a record of 12-5, playing number one on the men's tennis team and only a freshman, Per Wadmark is a coach's dream. On the court, Wadmark is quick, accurate and sometimes unbelievable. Off the court, he's a bright young man who takes things day by day.

Wadmark, who was born and raised in Malmoe, Sweden, came to Carbondale for the fall semester of 1982 after a phone call from Coach Dick LeFevre. Wadmark, while still in high school in Sweden, sent letters to several universities throughout the U.S. telling them of his interest in tennis. One of his letters was addressed to the women's tennis coach at SIU-E, who in turn sent it to LeFevre.

"I called him in Sweden and told him about our tennis program," LeFevre said. "I told him that SIU-C plays with some of the best tennis schools in the country and he seemed quite interested. The rest is history."

Upon arrival at SIU-C, Wadmark practiced and was quickly placed in the number one position on the team. His biggest win in the fall semester was against Mike McMahon of Notre Dame. At one time this semester, Wadmark was ranked 59th in the U.S. Collegiate Rankings, but after a few losses to top-ranked players, he was dropped to 82nd.

When he was nine, Wadmark started playing tennis during the summer, since his parents owned a summer home with a tennis court in the backyard.

"I wasn't serious about tennis at first. It was just another game to me, like football or soccer," Wadmark said. "But my coach, Urban Ek (who is also the coach of Sweden's Thomas Hoegstet, 60th in world-rankings) encouraged me to play. He made me realize how important tennis was and where it could take me if I ever got good."

Ek was only one of five coaches Wadmark had in Sweden, but according to Wadmark, "Ek is the biggest factor in the way I play tennis now."

Along with football, soccer and tennis, Wadmark also played basketball, volleyball and ran the two-mile on the track team, but he stuck with tennis after a little encouragement from his coach and his parents.

"The first tennis tournament I ever played in,"

High hurdles are ahead for Davis and women tracksters

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

This is the one Debra Davis has been waiting for.

If there is a team on the women's track and field schedule that gets the adrenaline going for the junior quarter-miler, it's Ohio State.

The Buckeyes aren't the favorite for Saturday's nine-team Illini Invitational in Champaign, but they do have one of the most explosive one-two punches to hit Columbus in quite sometime.

Diane Dixon is one and Donithy Jones is the other. Apart they are great. Together they are awesome.

"I would have to say they are the featured performers of the meet," said Mary Beth Spencer, assistant coach at Illinois. "They should give Southern's Davis a run for it."

In Columbus, they joke that the pair are so good, it's hard to tell them apart. They're called twins only because they run — and win — most of the time. Both switch races like pairs of jeans and are right at home running anything from the 100-meter dash to the 800-meter dash.

Dixon was the 440-yard dash champion at the NCAA Championships in March. Her 53.47 second quarter-mile was an indoor record. Jones was second in the 440-yard dash in the Big Ten Championships, clocking in at 55.08.

And with Missouri, Illinois State and Illinois competing, it won't take a track expert to figure out how tough it will be for the Salukis to reach the top three.

"Illinois State has to be considered the team to beat," said SIU-C coach Claudia Blackman.

"Ohio State will be the next top team. Then I'd have to say Missouri and a toss up with Illinois and SIU-C."

There's no need for introductions to Missouri. They outdistanced the Salukis at last week's Dog and Cat Fight at McAndrew Stadium by 14 points. But the Tigers took home a number of wounded and may be still a bit handicapped on Saturday. If so, it could mean a few more points for the Salukis. Single-handedly, Mizou's Rufina Ubah could give SIU-C ground gainers Denise Blackman and Ann Lavine fits right where they are the strongest: in the sprints.

"I think we can turn around some points here and there," said Blackman. "but in a large field like this, you really don't know how good you're going to do."

Northwestern, which scored only 14 points in last week's meet in Carbondale, Parkland Junior College, Bradley and Wisconsin-Parkside, will also compete. Blackman, however, doesn't feel they pose much of a

Baseball gets rained on again

By Dan Devine
Associate Sports Editor

Rain wiped out another Saluki baseball game Wednesday — this one against St. Louis — and the combination of more rain and a wet field threatens to cancel Thursday's makeup game with the Billikens as well.

"We've missed more games than we ever have," said SIU-C Coach Itchy Jones, "but it's happening to everyone."

The Salukis, 14-8, have a five-game winning streak, but it's taken them more than three weeks to record those five wins.

The latest victory, a 9-8 slugging of Murray State, came complete with 15 hits. That pushed the team batting average to .300.

Jim Reboulet's four-for-five day jumped his average to .342, second on the team behind Scott Bridges' .405 mark.

Reboulet credited patience at the plate and staying back on the pitch for his big day Tuesday. Bridges has been doing that all year.

"Last year I got better and better as the year went on and it seems like it's carried over," Bridges said. "I just try to hit it to rightfield and if the pitcher makes a mistake I can go to leftfield."

In addition to batting average, Bridges leads the club with 25 runs, 34 hits, nine doubles, three triples, and 28 runs batted in.

"He's made himself into an excellent hitter," said Jones. "He's going to sit back as long as he can and hit the ball hard."

Centerfielder P.J. Schranz has quietly built his average too, and is hitting .341 with 19 steals. Another streaking player, Robert Jones, has become the Salukis' most exciting hitter.

Jones has struck out twice as often as any other player, often on fearsome cuts, but he has also ripped a ton of drives. The freshman designated hitter has hit 400-foot shots in batting practice, and fans wait for one of those in a game.

"He's going to become an outstanding hitter," said Coach Jones. The prize freshman has had some problems afield, though, and hasn't seen much action in right field or on first base lately.

"We're going to gradually work him in at first base and in the outfield," said Jones. "He'll be a position player at the end of the year or next year."

Defense has been a sore spot for the Salukis since the season began. Shortstop Rich Koch has been perfect lately, but still has 14 errors, and second-baseman Reboulet and third-baseman Mike Gellinger have made some equally strange throws themselves. And when Kimball Sanders was inserted at third base Tuesday, he responded with three errors.

"We've got to keep our hitters out there," said Jones. "College ball has a lot to do with hitting anxiety. You can have a great shortstop and then a guy hits it over the fence and it doesn't matter."

If the Salukis do manage to get the game in Thursday, it will start at 2:30 p.m. at Abe Martin Field. SIU-C will send Tom Caulfield to the mound, with Rick Wysocki scheduled as the first man up in the bullpen.

Per Wadmark has been a successful player for the Salukis.
