Two SIUC women exchange wedding vows at Shryock

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Assistant Features Editor

When the minister said, "You may now seal your covenant with a kiss," Erika Kohoutek and Kris Bein were married on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

But, unlike most marriages, there are many who will not accept or recognize their bond — including the State of Illinois.

Kohoutek, a junior in English from Chicago, and Bein, a sophomore in social work from Chicago, exchanged a kiss of confirmation in front of 100 people at their same-sex wedding ceremony Thursday.

The ceremony concluded the events of Gay Awareness Week at SIUC.

Kohoutek, co-director of the SIUC group Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, said the organization finally had an opportunity to have a same-sex wedding.

"We now have the membership to support something like this," she said. "Plus we have the couple and the political stance."

Kohoutek said the wedding was a public protest against the different bills circulating in state legislatures, including the Illinois Senate Bill 1773, which would prohibit same-sex marriages.

Same-sex marriages are not recognized under current state law. But such marriages are not prohibited under the Illinois Marriage and Dissolution of Marriage Act.

The written resolutions are popping up in response to a 1993 Hawaiian Court ruling which may make same-sex marriages legal if the state of Hawaii cannot prove "a compelling interest" in support of the ban.

If the ban is lifted, other states may have to accept the status of such couples, unless the states have laws prohibiting same-sex marriage.

Senator: U.S. should build on diversity

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

There was no test in Lawson Hall Thursday night, but almost every seat in room 171 was filled as Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, D-Ill., told listeners that if America is to remain a great country, it needs to change its ways.

Carol Moseley-Braun

Moseley-Braun took a side step from her originally scheduled speech titled "Civil Rights Under Fire" and focused more on education, welfare reform, racial preferences and affirmative action.

She said the United States is at a crossroad, and if it is to continue to be the great country that it has always been, she said it needs to reinforce the values it always has held.

Because everything is connected in society, there cannot be a small change somewhere that will not cause even greater changes in other places, she said. She said differences in people should be the country's greatest attribute, rather than being what tears this country apart.

"We are the greatest country in the world," she said. "The question is, will we remain that way? We need to embrace our diversity. We have to meet the challenges of our times."

"We are hamstringing our ability to keep this country great. We should build and not tear down, and that is the crossroad America is facing today."

Moseley-Braun said improving education, reforming welfare and getting more people to vote and get involved in politics are ways America and Americans can keep this country great.

She said an issue tearing the country apart is the welfare problem. She

Gay-marriage opponents stage protest at ceremony

Spring winds blew quietly through Old Main Mall as friends gathered to show support — and protesters gave warnings of eternal damnation — for two SIUC women who exchanged wedding vows Thursday afternoon.

Erika Kohoutek, a junior in English from Chicago, and Kris Bein, a sophomore in social work from Chicago, had a symbolic wedding ceremony on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

Carrying a sign that read, "God made Adam and Eve, Not Adam and Steve," Derrick McDonald, of Carbondale, said he was there to educate people that homosexuality is wrong. He said he was surprised more people were not aggressively objecting to his protest of the wedding.

"We expected the reaction to us (the protesters) being here to be a lot worse. Sometimes people get spit on or feces thrown on them," McDonald said. "What they are doing here is wrong, and they know it is wrong. Homosexuals are trying to get legislation passed that forces people to accept what they are doing. This is a sad day for America. It's a sad day for humans."

As the couple stood in front of Judith Clausen, minister at the Church of the Good Shepherd United Church of Christ, words such as love, support, sharing — many of the same words used in heterosexual weddings — were used to complete the couple's union.

Michael Reese, treasurer of the SIUC student group Gays, Lesbians, Bi-Sexuals and Friends, said people use many reasons, such as morality and religion, to fight the legalization of same-sex marriages. But gay and lesbian couples deserve equal recognition, Reese said.

"Same-sex marriages are a hot issue," he said. "Many people support non-discrimination in the workplace and housing, but the same people feel threatened by the theory that this will contribute to breaking down the image of the nuclear family."

As the couple smiled and talked with friends and family after the ceremony,

IN ECUADOR, POISON BRIGADE KILLS STRAY DOGS — QUITO, Ecuador—The green truck of the dog exterminators pulled into Pisuli, a slum in the mountains high above Quito, and suddenly the jokes about a license to kill stopped. Up here, the tin roofs are held in place by rocks, and often the only thing between a thief and a poor family's possessions is a pack of dogs. The men in the truck had done their job so well just days earlier that there wasn't a dog in sight, at least not a live one. The Poison Brigade, as this crew of six, armed with strychnine, calls itself, had eliminated dozens of dogs that day, meeting the daily goal in what the government's emergency plan calls "decaninization." While rabies can be transmitted by other animals, including bats and raccoons, here it is transmitted overwhelmingly by dogs. Hence the extreme policy that requires killing every dog spotted in the streets of Quito.

U.N. DIPLOMAT BOOTED FOR AIDING TERRORISTS — UNITED NATIONS—The United States has expelled a Sudanese diplomat on charges he and a colleague engaged in terrorist and espionage activity that involved foiled plots to assassinate Egypt's president here and blow up New York City landmarks including U.N. headquarters. A recent report to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said Sudan's neighbors — including Egypt, Ethiopia and Eritrea — accuse it of harboring terrorists seeking to destabilize them. Sudan is suspected of giving sanctuary to at least two men who attempted to assassinate Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Ethiopia last year. The two men cited by U.S. officials Wednesday are Sudanese intelligence operatives.

HIV-LIKE VIRUS MIGHT BE USED FOR GENE THERAPY—The same characteristics that make the AIDS virus such a cunning and effective killer may make it ideal as a medical tool for gene therapy, new research indicates. In Friday's issue of the journal Science, a team from the Salk Institute in La Jolla, Calif., and the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research in Cambridge, Mass., shows that certain slow-acting viruses such as the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes AIDS can be exploited to change the genetic content of cells that are difficult or impossible to target by conventional gene therapy.

FORD ANNOUNCES RETIREMENT FROM THE HOUSE — WASHINGTON—Another day, another House retirement. Rep. Harold E. Ford, D-Tenn., said Thursday he would not run for a 12th term this fall and that his son, Harold Jr., would be a candidate to succeed him. "I want to come back home and be a part of this city," Ford, 50, said in Memphis. Ford is the 46th House member to say he would not seek reelection this year. Ten of these members are running for the Senate and two, Texas Democratic Reps. John Bryant and Jim Chapman, were defeated in their bids for their party's Senate nomination.

PENTAGON PLAN TO AX JET MAY COST BILLIONS — WASHINGTON—When then-Defense Secretary Richard B. Cheney forced the cancellation of the Navy's A-12 jet in January 1991, he felt he was saving the taxpayers money on a troubled program that was over budget and behind schedule. Instead, by ending the A-12 the way he did, he may have obligated taxpayers to pay $2 billion in damages to two defense firms.

Students' voice is in voting—candidates

This is the third part in a three part series on the major issues of next week's Undergraduate Student Government elections.

By Signe K. Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Undergraduate Student Government elections historically have low student voter turnout, but not because of student apathy, they are the top USG candidates say.

In last year's USG elections, 1,490 students voted out of a possible 18,172 eligible students.

Troy Alim, a junior in public relations from Chicago and Students First presidential candidate, said it is USG's duty to get students involved in campus life. He said, if elected, he would represent the opinions of the student body to the University to the best of his ability.

"I think people typically use apathy as a scapegoat for not getting things done," Alim, who is now USG Evergreen Terrace senator, said. "I believe leadership is ultimately responsible for the level of student involvement if we have crucial issues that will affect every student."

Alim said the student government must inform students about the magnitude of issues affecting them.

David Vingren, a sophomore in political science and finance from Bloomingdale and Students First vice presidential candidate, would chair USG's bi-weekly Senate meetings and fill in if the president were absent if he and Alim are elected.

Vingren said registered student organizations — special student interest groups, such as the Black Affairs Council — need to encourage the student body to take an active role in campus policy.

"The incoming freshmen don't know what diverse organizations there are at SIUC and don't know what these groups can offer them," Vingren, USG Thompson Point senator, said. "The organizations have to go to these students and tell them what their club offers. They can't expect them to come on their own."

Scott Pfeiffer, a senior in political science from Mt. Vernon and Saluki Party presidential candidate, said he would set a USG trend by empowering the student body with more say in senate issues.

"The Saluki Party has a diverse group of representatives, and we want the students to use this senate as a forum that can be taken as far as the students want to take it," Pfeiffer, USG chief of staff, said.

Pfeiffer said the diverse senators on his ticket will have a better opportunity setting the trend because they will be able to represent more of the special student populations on campus, such as non-traditional students.

He said the Saluki Party senators

Kristi Hanson, of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, compares the effects of the Culvert City, Ky., incinerator with what she says are possible effects if the Crab Orchard Incinerator is allowed to begin operation, during a press conference Thursday at John A. Logan College.

Incinerator protesters respond to EPA

By Lisa Pangburn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Representatives from local environmental groups responded Thursday to what they say is the latest public relations "ploy" by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for the incinerator at Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge.

People representing six different area environmental groups gave a press conference to approximately 10 people at John A. Logan College.

Last week, EPA and the owner's of the incinerator gave area media a tour of the incinerator. Local environmentalists said the media was given "false reassurances."

The incinerator at Crab Orchard has been installed to remove polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) from four areas in the refuge that became contaminated during a World War II bomb-making project.

Richard Whitney, an SIU law student and a member of the National Lawyers

Guild, said the EPA is giving people false assurance.

"You have to do the research," he said. "You cannot take what someone tells you as the truth. This incinerator should not be acceptable to the people in this community."

The representatives said they are opposing the incinerator because they say it will release a cancer causing agent, known as dioxin.

The EPA admits that the incinerator will release a small amount of dioxin, however, they say the amount is not enough to do harm.

EPA officials said that by recent testing, incineration is the best possible way to rid the soil of contamination.

Rose Rowell, of the Southern Coalition on Protecting the Environment, said the community needs to remember the children and the wildlife.

"In a few weeks, your children will be breathing dioxin," she said. "We cannot afford for our wildlife to become poisoned."

Robert Blakely, of Concerned Citizens of Williamson County, explained what he said are the problems dioxin can cause.

"These toxins don't break down in the body," he said. "They will not and do not go away. Mother Nature hasn't had time to develop a defense against these toxins."

Whitney said the same kind of incinerator was built in Bloomington, Ind., and was stopped because of community protest.

"If the government can hear enough voices from this community, it will definitely make a change," he said.

Kristi Hanson, of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said it is never too late to stop the incinerator.

"It's too depressing to give up," she said. "We have worked too hard to let this happen to our communities."

Presidential candidates are recognizing the influence MTV has with young people, and they seem to be more willing to appear on the program, Tabitha Soren, an MTV news reporter, says.

Soren, who spoke to a crowd of more than 50 people Thursday in Student Center Ballroom D, has interviewed President Bill Clinton, former President George Bush, Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole during her MTV career.

"At this stage, it is most rewarding noticing candidates are feeling they are accountable to young people," she said. "I think it is a great sign that Dole was so willing to give an hour and a half interview in January, which was very early in the campaign."

Soren co-hosts "The Week in Rock" and assists Kurt Loder in the daily MTV news reports. She has also been recognized for her work during the 1992 presidential elections when she wrote, produced and narrated MTV's "Choose or Lose" coverage, a program that explored some of the political issues affecting the 18 to 35 year old age group. Soren said she is trying to encourage young people to get involved in the electoral process through her career.

"Hopefully, I will get people who are of voting age to start thinking about current events and the issues that are important to them," she said. Soren said some people think most young people are liberal Democrats, but she said many of them are conservative.

When Soren asked the audience who was registered to vote, about half of the audience members raised their hands.

She said there only has been one president who was elected without the youth vote.

"No politician can win without the youth vote, and politicians are realizing this earlier in the campaign," she said.

Soren said getting involved in politics on the state and local levels is very important because those decisions directly affect the public.

SIU board debates budget problems, possible fee hikes

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If the SIU Board of Trustees passes a proposed tuition increase for the 1997 fall semester, SIUC tuition will increase by $5 per credit hour, officials say.

At its monthly meeting Thursday, the board discussed the proposed tuition increase. If approved at the board's May 9 meeting, the increase would be the second part of a four-year tuition plan for SIU.

The four-year tuition plan is a budgeting strategy that outlines funding and expenditures in advance to allow for changes in SIU's monetary structure.

The first part of the tuition plan was approved last spring and goes into effect in Fall 1996. It included an academic year tuition rate of $2,550 per year for 12 credit hours, or $85 per credit hour.

If the tuition for Fall 1997 is increased, students would pay $90 per credit hour, or $2,700 a year for 12 credit hours in tuition for the academic year.

SIU School of Law students would face an increase in academic year tuition from $4,004 a year to $4,312 a year beginning in Fall 1997 if the tuition increase is passed.

SIUC Chancellor John Guyon said the four-year tuition plan has two purposes.

"A major outcome will be to stabilize funding," Guyon said. "We will be able to predict our funding from the tuition increase. It also lets people take a look at the overall cost over a four-year period."

SIU President Ted Sanders said SIU was one of the only universities in the state to establish a four-year tuition plan.

John Brewster, board member, said he is concerned about the tuition increases.

"I'm concerned about a tuition increase," Brewster said. "It's something that's affecting enrollment. We need to take a hard look at the effect increasing costs will have on students. If we continue down this road, we will experience enrollment decline."

Brewster said he understood there were certain costs the University could not control that had to be paid, such as utilities. But he said he is still concerned about the increase.

Molly D'Esposito, vice chairwoman of the board, said the proposed tuition increase is necessary to maintain the quality of education and services offered at SIU.

"If we charge too little and lower our quality, students will perceive that and go elsewhere," she said.

The board also discussed proposed fee increases for fall 1997. The fee increases include a Student Center fee increase of $4 per semester, a student attorney fee increase of 75 cents per semester, an athletic fee increase of $5 per semester, a Student Without student votes, USG speaks with a weak voice

WHY ARE STUDENTS NOT VOTING IN THE Undergraduate Student Government elections?

This question is asked after every USG election. And then statements are made and editorials are written about attracting students to vote the next time around.

Unfortunately, the answer to the question points to both USG and the students. Students have shown an indifference to issues affecting them, and USG has not fulfilled its leadership role in building student concern.

In 1993, more than 3,000 students voted, 16 percent of the eligible undergraduate student population. Students voted for a referendum on the mass transit system. The mass transit system was instituted.

But in the 1994 election, a student athletic fee referendum and a controversial USG presidential election resulted in only 1,797 student voters. Students voted against the increase but were ignored. A scaled-down increase was approved by the Board of Trustees.

In 1993, USG fulfilled its purpose. It led and promoted the mass transit referendum and brought out the student vote. In 1994, USG failed to build student concern, and the lack of student response is evident in the board's vote.

IS THERE ANY ITEM THIS YEAR THAT USG can use to pull the students into the voting booths? Perhaps, and it is a referendum dealing with something that should get the attention of the students — their wallets.

This year's ballot will feature a battery of questions to gauge students' support for six fee increases that the board will consider in May. The fee increases surpass a 3-percent guide set by the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Using the information from this referendum, USG and the student trustee will represent the students' concerns at the May board meeting.

Whether or not the student trustee and USG have a voice to speak with is up to the students. Realistically, if only 1,500 students vote on this issue, of the more than 18,000 eligible undergraduate students, then the students should start making out their checks for the increased fees.

And with the election on April 17, USG has a short time period in which to present this issue and make the students want to vote.

For both sides there is a problem that is illustrated in the voter turnout in recent years. And without a solution, USG will continue to speak for the students with a weakened voice.

Christians must save homosexuals

As a Christian, Christ calls us to love each other as we do ourselves. But he also gives us, in his word, absolute truth. That truth classifies homosexuality as an abomination to God. If we as Christians can help others see and repent from the sin in their lives, we save them from a multitude of sins and possibly from eternal damnation in hell. All the activities scheduled this week at SIUC for the homosexuals is blatant sin and Christians need to take a stand on that. Would we allow a bunch of rapist or murderers on campus to celebrate their sin and practices? Would we condone their behavior saying they were born that way and therefore accept and encourage that behavior?

Christians, pray for these people that they may understand that God did not make them homosexual. He made them perfect and their lifestyle is a result of their choice to live in contrast to God and nature. Write your politicians and make your opinions known, and keep track of their stand when election time comes around. God has blessed our country because we used to be a country that sought after God. Let's return to those Godly values and get off the road that is leading to destruction like Sodom and Gomorrah.

Vingren served Thompson Point well

I am the secretary of the Thompson Point Executive Council and I am writing to thank David Vingren for all the work he has done for our residents this year. He attended our weekly meetings regularly to fill us in on what Undergraduate Student Government does and was always asking about and addressing our concerns.

The most controversial issue Thompson Point faced this year was the 21-and-over housing controversy. As a member of the council, I am aware of how grateful the people of Warren Hall were that Vingren fought aggressively to keep their dorm 21-and-over next year.

Vingren conducted his own survey of Warren Hall residents on the issue, discussed the issue several times with the council, wrote several bills in USG addressing the issue and met constantly with Ed Jones, director of University Housing, in an effort to negotiate the situation. Vingren's efforts made a difference. Instead of Warren Hall being open to any student, it will be restricted to sophomores and up so the level of maturity in the building remains steady.

Vingren also called every member of the council to get feedback on student views regarding students views toward the lighted softball fields plan and USG's proposed activity fee increase. I thank him for his hard work and I believe many other people at Thompson Point feel the same way. He truly does represent and fight for student interests.

Officer enforced law by issuing ticket

In 27 years I have never had the displeasure of reading such an ignorant commentary as I did in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian.

David McGraw's letter to the editor commented on the campus police ticketing Ariana Rogers for tearing up a parking ticket and throwing it on the ground in front of the officer. McGraw said issuing Rogers a ticket for littering was harassment. Well, Mr. McGraw, the only thing I thought was a joke in the letter was your reasoning on the issue.

I think McGraw should read the definition of the law. As I recall, we have them for certain reasons. I hardly think harassment is one of them. The police do not decide which laws they will enforce, they simply do their job by enforcing all the laws they have sworn to uphold. Just because you may be in a hurry to drop off something does not give you the right to break the law, and this is what you are doing when you park illegally.

Your claim that justifiable outrage is an excuse for Rogers' actions is preposterous. I really don't care how mad one gets, stupidity was the reason Rogers got another ticket. According to you, anytime people are outraged at an injustice, they may do whatever they feel like doing as long as they are justifiably outraged. Ms. Rogers' were not the result of justifiable outrage, they were reflective of a person who lacks restraint, maturity and common sense.

You claim the police need to show students more respect. This works both ways. How much respect did Rogers show the officer when she threw the ticket on the ground? It may have been a petty offense, but it was not an abuse of police power. Littering is crime punishable with a fine.

I am also tired of hearing people claim that police should have been able to stop a robbery or murder before it happened. How do you propose police acquire this skill of reading the minds of criminals to determine their location prior to criminal offense? I'm sure that police all across the nation would love to hear how this is done. Maybe Mr. McGraw should join the Freeman if he feels he is being so persecuted by the police. Maybe they too received one too many parking tickets and are justifiably outraged.

Daily Egyptian Reporters

You would not know it from his picture — the horned-rimmed glasses, the bad haircut and the shorter than average height — but Gus Bode will turn 40 years old Saturday.

Gus made his first appearance in the Daily Egyptian on April 13, 1956, and since then, he has managed to annoy and/or comment on just about everyone and everything. And after 40 years, he shows no sign of slowing down.

"Gus has a personality of his own," Lloyd Goodman, faculty managing editor of the DE, said. "Gus is every student. I think a lot of people identify Gus with SIUC."

Gus was created by four students, including Jim Stumpf who graduated from SIUC in 1958. Gus Bode (which is pronounced Bo-dee) was based on Phillip August Bode, who was a janitor in Valmeyer, Ill., and a friend of Stumpf's.

At first, Stumpf and his friends would write "Gus Bode was here" all over campus. In 1956, the paper decided to use Gus as a way to add editorial comments to the paper. At that point, Gus was not a drawing.

"Sometimes he even makes the stories a little better."

Sara Walter
Junior, English

In 1962, the same year the paper became the Daily Egyptian, Gus was illustrated by the late Dee Alexander.

"Dee wanted to add a drawing of Gus in the DE beside his funny remarks," Ola Alexander, mother of Dee Alexander, said. "Dee's friendship with the DE publisher helped him submit his drawings of Gus and his funny remarks in the paper."

She said the DE decided to run Gus' picture and his funny remarks in the paper for a couple of days. Pretty soon, Gus made himself a home on page one, where he has appeared nearly every day since.

Goodman, who came to the DE in 1994, said he has learned that Gus is a tradition and is a common thread of the DE. He said Gus may not always be popular, but he thinks readers appreciate Gus' perspective.

Goodman said by DE guidelines, Gus is supposed to represent every student on campus.

"The DE staff comes up with ideas that fit his personality, not what people want to hear," he said.

According to some of the guidelines, Gus is known to be ornery but not mean. He tries to be fair, and he is not sexist. Gus pokes fun at behavior, actions and ideas, but he does not attack or denigrate people.

Tim Peters, an undecided freshman from Springfield, said Gus could be a little more daring with what he says.

"Sometimes it seems like Gus is holding back, but I guess that's expected with how touchy the stories are," he said. "But all in all, he does a good job."

Sara Walter, a junior in English from Chicago, said Gus adds a nice touch to some of the stories.

"I like him," she said. "I give the newspaper a little extra voice when it is needed. Sometimes he even makes the stories a little better."

Goodman said former DE staffers and other SIUC alumni who read the DE online send him comments through the Internet, saying they are glad to see Gus again.

Scientists investigate 120 manatee casualties

Expert says epidemic of mysterious deaths could spell extinction for the endangered mammals.

Los Angeles Times

In the worst die-off of a U.S. endangered species ever reported, more than 120 manatees have dropped dead along Florida's Gulf Coast in the past five weeks, triggering an intense international investigation to identify the mysterious killer.

Wildlife scientists have not yet ruled out any possible causes, but they suspect that the giant sea cows are dying from either an extremely virulent disease or from ingesting a toxin in red tide.

The grisly epidemic worries wildlife experts, since the tropical walrus-like creatures are already in danger of extinction because of boat collisions and destruction of sea grasses in the shallow coastal inlets they inhabit.

"This is a very serious situation," said Gregory Bossart, a pathologist at University of Miami School of Medicine who is participating in the investigation.

"We managed to kill most of this species off, and now we have a natural mortality, coupled with man's inhumanity to this species, that could be the final death blow. This is your worst nightmare for the manatee."

As of Wednesday, the body count since the plague began March 5 had reached 128 in south-west Florida.

Statewide, 221 manatees have died this year — amounting to around 10 percent of the rare creatures that remain in the nation, said Jim Kraus, assistant manatee coordinator at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Jacksonville, Fla.

More manatees have already perished in the past three months than have died in any single year, and the epidemic seems to be surging, not ebbing.

The bodies were found along the 80 miles between Englewood, just south of Sarasota, and Marco Island, an upscale stretch of Florida's Gulf Coast popular with tourists for its white sand beaches.

Forensic experts and toxicologists at about a dozen laboratories are examining the dead animals, including experts in the Netherlands skilled in diagnosing a newly discovered distemper virus that has stricken some of the world's dolphins and seals.

But even if the experts succeed in finding the cause, that doesn't mean there will be a cure in time to save the manatees.

Like coroners conducting an autopsy, biologists are searching for virtually everything, from pesticides in their brain tissues to natural toxins in their stomachs and signs of infectious disease in their blood cells.

The dead animals all have pneumonia-like purple lesions in their lungs, similar to orcas found in seals and dolphins that have succumbed to a contagious morbillivirus similar to canine distemper.

In the United States, no other species protected as endangered has suffered such a large and sudden die-off.

With two front flippers and bristly muzzle hairs, manatees are often called the ugly and underappreciated cousin of dolphins and whales.

They can weigh half a ton, grow to 15 feet long and consume 100 pounds of seaweed a day.

Listed as an endangered species in 1967, even before the modern Endangered Species Act was adopted, West Indian manatees were one of the first animals in the nation to be protected because their numbers had been so severely depleted.

said she voted against a recent proposed welfare reform because it did not promote welfare recipients' responsibility of getting jobs. She said the welfare reform proposal did not enforce the idea that everyone who can work should work.

"It failed to realize that welfare is not a stand-alone issue," she said. "You cannot kick people off welfare and send them out to work if there aren't any jobs out there."

"There is no one who would like to see welfare reform more than I. But what do you do with the children? What do you do with the babies?"

Moseley-Braun said for jobs to be created, affirmative action policies should not be eliminated. She painted a grim future for affirmative action and said she "fear(s) this battle may be lost."

She said there are many preferences used when allowing people to enter a college or get a job, and racial preferences are just one of them. She said preferences do not become controversial until race is involved.

"The whole idea of affirmative action is to provide opportunity and open a window for people," she said.

One of these windows of opportunity she spoke about was education. She said education should be as important as any missile is to the government because it affects the country as a whole and not just certain parts of it.

She said education is the bond that can tie this country together if people realize it as a social good and not a personal quest.

Claude Dean Kizart, a freshman in education from Chicago, said Moseley-Braun's speech touched on topics that she agrees with. She said Moseley-Braun is right when she says that people are the government, and for the government to work, people need to vote.

Moseley-Braun's visit was sponsored by the American Civil Liberties Union and the Black Affairs Council.

on his ticket will have a better opportunity setting the trend because they will be able to represent more of the special student populations on campus, such as non-traditional students.

He said the Saluki Party senators are willing to represent students' concerns by going to registered student organizations. He said the senators would then be able to represent these groups on the senate floor.

Robert Irby, a senior in education from Springfield and Saluki Party vice presidential candidate, said many students are not active in campus issues because they are unaware of what the issues are.

"It is far too easy to label students as apathetic when it is more appropriate to say they are unaware," Irby, who is now USG College of Education senator, said.

"I will do everything in my power to bring the issues to the students and inform them about what is going to affect them."

Irby said, if elected, he would try to begin a monthly newsletter for students to let them know what the issues affecting them are.

He said he also would spend two to five days going door-to-door to talk with students and call students about the issues.

Despite their differences on why students appear to be apathetic, all four candidates said they agree that the University's administration has to encourage students to get involved in student issues.

There will be a candidates' debate Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium. The debate will be broadcast on SPC-TV.

The USG elections are Wednesday, April 17, from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Election booths will be at the Recreation Center, the Student Center, Trueblood Hall at University Park, and Lentz Hall at Thompson Point.

Recreation Center fee increase of $2 per semester, a primary student medical benefits fee increase of $3 per semester and student medical insurance increase of $7 per semester.

The board also approved altering SIUC's tuition and fee waiver policies in order to comply with the Illinois Board of Higher Education's imposed 3-percent tuition and fee waiver limits.

IBHE recommends that only 3 percent of the University's budget be spent on undergraduate student tuition waivers.

Tuition waivers at SIUC account for slightly more than 3 percent of the University's budget.

With the limit, some of the tuition waivers, especially those granted to out-of-state students, would be downsized.

The board also approved offering super single rooms in the dorms for fall.

The super single room will allow some students to have their own room and various features including sofas, refrigerators, lamps and rugs. The cost of the super single room will be $1,406 per semester.

With the addition of super single rooms, the board approved new residence meal plans for next year.

The meal plans include a refundable meal plan, where the meals the students do not eat will be refunded.

Also, a meal plan with a $50 credit of food at residence hall snack bars and various Student Center restaurants will be offered.

The board also approved the selection of an architect for the exterior painting of the Student Recreation Center.

The next board meeting is scheduled for May 9 at the SIUC Springfield campus.

Heart artist shares love of childhood memories

Los Angeles Times

would see it," she says of her youth.

LOS ANGELES—When Judy Binder was a child, she had imaginary friends, among them Albert Einstein, George Washington and Hawkeye Pierce.

They went to school with her, and when they did something funny, she forced containment of her laughter.

Binder also made friends with the soft, elegant faces created by Modigliani and the lonely, down-trodden faces of Picasso's blue period. At museums, she would stand before landscapes to feel the wind or inhale a meadow's fragrance.

From her imagination, these people and places made their way into her heart—filling the lonely voids of her life. And that is where she finds them now.

Through a program called Heart Art, Binder, 35, is learning about herself, who she is beyond the two terms sometimes used to describe her: high functioning and developmentally disabled.

"I was different, and the kids

"Ever since the end of elementary school ... I didn't have any friends. It was hard, so I kind of used my imagination a lot to entertain me. ... I was just bored and lonely, but sometimes you get carried away, and then it's not good. ... I had a thin wall between imagination and reality."

She is one of eight artists in the program, which was started 2 years ago by Mindy Hahn, a freelance art director, interior designer and set decorator.

Once a week, they meet on the small balcony at Hahn's Los Angeles apartment.

Many of them, like Binder, have jobs and live independently, but they face unique barriers every day. To be developmentally disabled, Binder says, is to face more challenges than most people. To be an artist is to be given a voice that speaks from within.

"It allows me to go to a really nice place," she says of the program.

SIUE SUMMER SESSION 1996

A MATTER OF DEGREES

Summer Session has become a hot item at SIUE — especially for area students who attend other universities but come home for the summer.

If you plan to be in the area this summer, SIUE Summer Session makes it easy for you to pick up a class and transfer it to your other college or university.

And in case you hadn't heard, SIUE still has the lowest tuition rates among 4-year public universities in Illinois. We think that's pretty cool.

To learn more about SIUE's Summer Session, call 1-800-447-SIUE free in Illinois (341) 231-SIUE in St. Louis (618) 692-3705 from anywhere; or write to Box 1600, SIUE, Edwardsville, IL 62026-1600, and ask for a Summer Class Schedule.

Judicial board adds candidates to ballot

By Signe K. Skinon
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"We felt we made the best decision based on the election bylaws. I guess the judicial board saw it differently."

*Erika Kohoutek
USG Election Commissioner*

Five Undergraduate Student Government Senate candidates have been added to the election ballot after a judicial board decided Wednesday they were eligible to run, despite some confusion.

Also, a poster seen on campus depicting Adolph Hitler and Benito Mussolini has caused some candidates and student government members to voice opinions about a recent Student Trustee Election Commission decision.

Scott Pfeiffer, Saluki Party presidential candidate and current USG chief of staff, said his party won a decisive victory Wednesday when the Judicial Board of Governance reversed a USG Election Commission decision. He said the commission's decision omitted five Saluki Party candidates for allegedly lost petitions.

The USG Election Commission is a group of five students who are in charge of ensuring candidates follow a set of campaign rules. The Judicial Board of Governance is a group of seven students who hear any appeals by candidates on Election Commission decisions.

A senate petition requires candidates to obtain 50 student signatures with addresses and social security numbers before candidates are allowed to run in the election.

"We had the five people swear that they turned in their petitions with more than 50 signatures, and two other people swore they saw two of the candidates turn in their petitions," he said. "Also, the USG Election Commissioner Erika Kohoutek swore to the board that she had received another petition and put that person on the ballot, even though she couldn't find it later."

Kohoutek said she was disappointed in the board's decision but felt confident the Election Commission did its job properly. "We felt we made the best decision based on the election bylaws," she said. "I guess the judicial board saw it differently."

The Judicial Board of Governance passed its decision in a unanimous vote stating, "petitions were not voted, instructions given to candidates regarding the collection of petitions appear to have been ambiguous, (and) a preponderance of the evidence suggests that the board must err in favor of the student candidates."

Candidates' petitions were not the only things that sparked discussion among candidates and USG members Thursday.

Thursday morning, yellow and black posters decorated the SIUC campus stating, "OK... Now all opposed to free, fair student elections, raise your hand! Freedom of choice... What a concept!" In the center of the poster was a picture of Hitler standing with Mussolini, whose hand was raised in a Nazi salute.

The poster came after a decision by the Student Trustee Election Commission Tuesday night to not recognize any write-in candidates on the April 17 election ballot.

No one has taken responsibility for the posters yet, USG members say.

USG President Kim Clemens said she was disgusted by the poster.

"I don't understand how anyone could possibly use him (Hitler) as a symbol on anything," she said. Pfeiffer said he believes the person or people responsible are cowardly.

"Someone is totally blowing this election out of proportion," he said. "It's just a waste of time."

Pfeiffer's original student trustee candidate, Troy Arnoldi, was denied status as a write-in trustee candidate after also being denied a slot on next Wednesday's ballot.

Arnoldi submitted a petition with 220 student signatures, 20 more than requested, but some social security numbers on the petition were invalidated by the commission.

USG and the Graduate and Professional Student Council could create a committee to amend the election bylaws to allow for a write-in candidate.

Clemens said she is in support of a USG/GPSC committee to amend the election bylaws.

"People in every type of election — state and national — can run as a write-in candidate," she said. "The Student Trustee Election Commission should allow anyone who wants to, to run

GPSC President Bill Karrow said he believes the election bylaws need to be amended but said he believes it is too late to change them for this election.

The elections are Wednesday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. with polling booths at the Student Center, Trueblood Hall at Thompson Park, Lentz Hall at Thompson Point, and the Recreation Center.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY
Office of Admissions and Records Carbondale, Illinois

1996 SPRING SEMESTER FINAL EXAMINATION SCHEDULE INFORMATION
The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination sections for Tuesday, Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below.

1. The class first exam period is scheduled based on the rooming time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed as the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:
09:00 - 10:50
The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "09:00". The meeting days of that first line are "T-R" and therefore are in the category "Begins with T or R". The Exam Date and Period for the attached Spring '96 Final Examination Schedule is for Thursday, May 9 at 12:50 - 02:50 p.m.
2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of space conditions. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination day to give adequate notice for all classes.
3. Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class period (due to final examinations).
4. It is a policy of the University that no final examinations be given on the scheduled final examination period and that students be given their examinations at the designated times. Any deviation from this policy must be approved by the Dean of the College.
5. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition the students who have two examinations scheduled at one time about petition their examinations to be given on a different day during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period has been made so that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.
6. Students who do not take an examination before the time specified for their class examination, information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and students involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the minor grade appeal team forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time the final grade listing for the semester is prepared.
7. Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered at the Student Center through final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education, Washington Street, Carbondale, IL 62901 at least three days in advance in order to reserve a time slot and receive a room assignment.

Inflation could lead to fee hikes at SIUC

Report by Lori D. Clark
 SIUC Assistant Politics Editor
 Graphic design by Jeff Siemers
 SIUC Graphics Editor

Inflation is the leading factor in the proposed SIUC student fee increases which are to take effect July 1, 1997. SIUC officials say.

The increases, if approved by the SIUC Board of Trustees in May, will take effect in all 1997. The proposed yearly fee increases, include a student attorney fee increase of $1.50, a Student Center fee increase of $8, a student recreation fee increase of $4, an athletic fee increase of $10, a primary health services fee increase of $6 and a student health insurance fee increase of $14.

Donald Wilson, vice president for financial affairs said inflation was a major reason of last year's fee approval because of increased costs the University has to pay.

"Inflation is a factor," Wilson said. "Operating costs go up, and you have to pay goods and services and utilities."

Students will have an opportunity to voice their opinions on the increases in a referendum during Wednesday's Undergraduate Student Government elections.

Jake Baggott, business manager of the Student Health Programs, said the primary reason for the Health Service's fee increase is inflationary costs.

"It's a compounded impact of medical inflation," Baggott said. "The cost of medical care is increasing at a faster pace. So far, we've been able to insulate students from big hits. We also have to maintain supplies in order to function."

Baggott said without the fee increases, health services at the University would have to be cut back, and no new services would be offered.

Bill McMinn, SIUC Recreation Center director said the recreation fee is necessary to maintain his existing programs and facilities.

"Utility costs have risen dramatically," McMinn said. "The increase still won't allow us to keep up with inflationary increases."

McMinn said without the fee increase, sources offered by the Recreation Center would be hampered.

"We would have to readjust hours of operation and program offerings," McMinn said. Another SIUC facility which needs a fee increase to stay in operation is the SIUC Student Center.

T.J. Rutherford, assistant director of business at the Student Center, said because the Student Center was such a large facility, it takes a lot of money to keep it in operation.

"We haven't had an increase for 11 years," Rutherford said. "The building is getting older and inflationary increases are causing things to cost more, such as utilities and salaries."

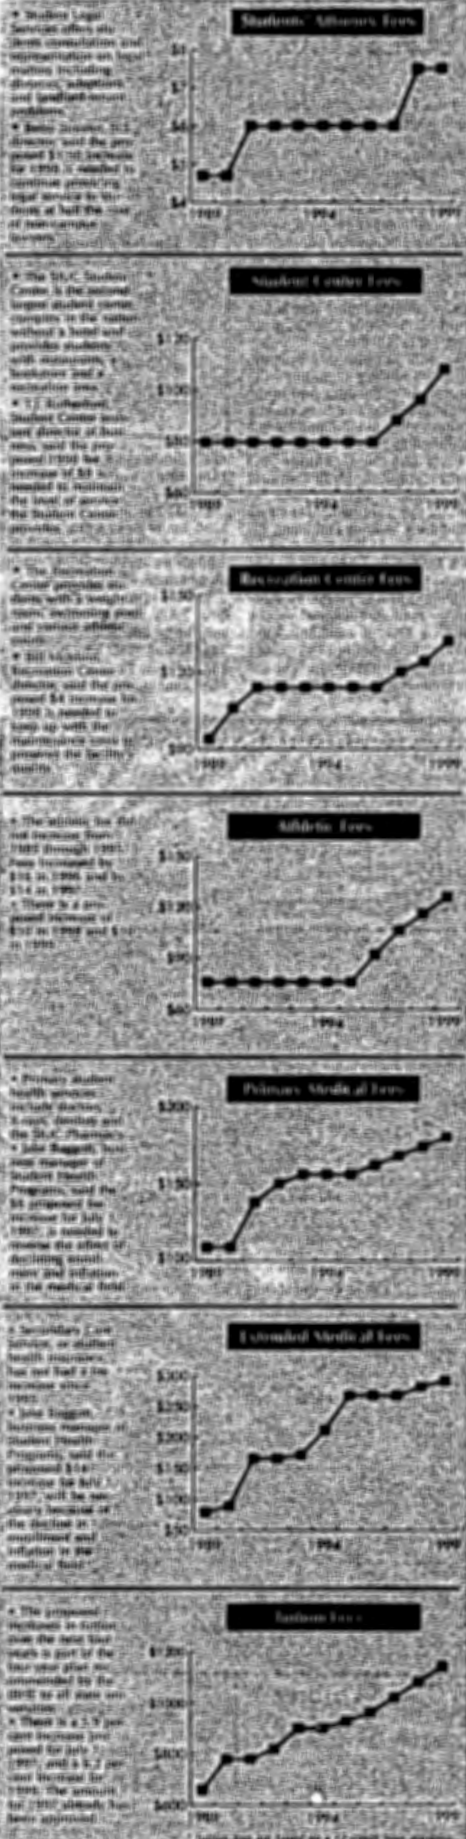

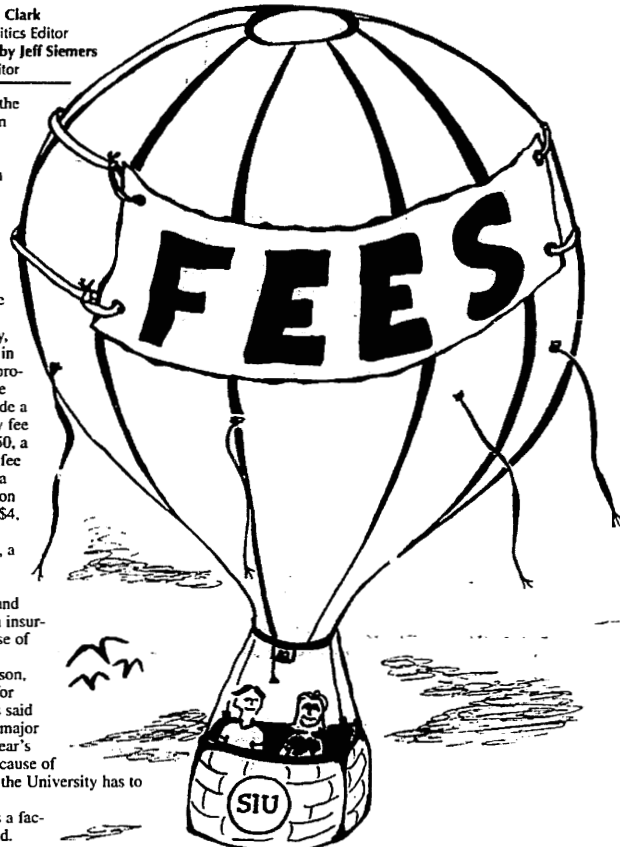

Rutherford said an increase in fees is needed in order to maintain the current programs and services that are offered. He said without the fee, the Student Center would not be able to offer quality programs.

Rutherford said without the fee increase, the Student Center would not have the money to keep the building maintained.

"The carpets will become older and become threadbare, and the building will deteriorate," Rutherford said.

SIUC Chancellor John Guyon said despite less revenue resulting from low enrollment numbers, student enrollment only played a small part in determining the proposed fee increases.

"No matter what enrollment is, it just costs more to do things," Guyon said. "There is no direct relationship."

Guyon also said enrollment has no direct effect on tuition increases because of a recent four-year tuition increase plan.

The tuition plan was approved by the Board of Trustees last fall. It calls for increases of tuition in phases that give students and parents an estimate of what a four-year education at SIUC would cost.

Guyon said during the next few years, tuition will go up $5 per credit hour the first year, $5 per credit hour the second year and $5 per credit hour the third year.

Ben Shepherd, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said he does not expect the tuition plan to be altered.

"I do not anticipate an impact on the planned tuition," Shepherd said.

"I expect we will not change the plan. If we increase tuition beyond what is planned, it could have a backlash effect."

Baggott said although inflation and enrollment are factors in fee increases, faculty salaries are also a variable.

"When the University plans budget increases, we have to deal with salary increases," Baggott said.

Protest

debate about the event continued between those who supported the wedding and those who opposed it.

Michael Barber, a senior in pre-medicine from Sparta, said while he believes the right of free choice is important to all people, he did not agree with the ceremony being on the University grounds.

"I spent two years in the Peace Corps that helped me see that an open mind is important," he said. "The problem here is the people in charge of the University are imposing moral issues on us, and that is wrong. This institution is tax funded, and most of the people in this state don't agree with same-sex marriages. This shouldn't be allowed."

Jen LeDuc, a Carbondale resident, said not allowing same-sex couples to have a legal ceremony keeps them from receiving many of the benefits married heterosexuals receive.

"Marriage is a basic civil right that all people should have," she said.

"We are a minority with no legal standing. People do not see how important that piece of paper (a marriage license) is."

Leaning on a sign that read, "Don't Believe in the Lie of Homosexuality," Burke Shade, a Carbondale resident, said he was at the wedding to help people understand they can be free from sin.

He warned people of the dangers he said lie in homosexuality.

"We see this being done and believe it's wrong," Shade said. "They know in their heart that what they do is wrong. This is a slavery that will destroy their lives."

Clausen said she could not support what she called the conservative and religious argument that the disintegration of the nuclear family is caused by same-sex marriages.

"This argument of the erosion of families with the allowance of same-sex marriages is generally only used against gay and lesbian families," she said.

"But heterosexual couples have destroyed the nuclear family also. If they used this argument against heterosexual couples too, maybe I could support it. Statistically, the nuclear family is clearly the minority in America."

Wedding

"It's the whole issue that Gays are people too," Kohoutek said.

"The whole issue is discriminatory. Marriage should be about love and commitment and not about sexual orientation."

Kohoutek and Bein met in the fall semester when GLBF members came to talk to students in Bein's dorm to dispel rumors about gays and lesbians. Kohoutek said Bein joined the group, and the couple developed a strong friendship.

"My mom always said your partner should be your best friend, and Kris is definitely my best friend," she said. "I knew from the beginning this is someone I wanted to be with."

"We had talked about marriage and commitment before, and the timing was right because of Gay Awareness week."

*Kris Bein,

Bein enrolled in SIUC in the fall. She said finding a gay or lesbian person to begin a relationship was difficult.

"I'm very fortunate to find someone like Erika in such a tight community," Bein said.

On Thursday, Bein and Kohoutek marched down an aisle lined with purple streamers and balloons.

Even though she remained calm during the ceremony, Kohoutek said she was nervous.

"I wasn't nervous until my roommate said, 'Erika aren't you nervous, because I really am,'" Kohoutek said. "Then I realized what was going to happen, and I started to get butterflies in my stomach."

Bein said she did not have much time to get nervous. The couple decided to exchange vows less than a week before the event. "It just kind of happened," she said.

"We had talked about marriage and commitment before, and the timing was right because of Gay Awareness week."

Because of travel reasons, the couple's families were not present at the ceremony. Bein said her family was very supportive of her decision, but Kohoutek said her dad is making a slower progression.

"My dad is coming around," she said.

"But my whole family loves Kris, so things should smooth out."

Because Bein has to live another year in the dorms, the couple will probably not live together next year.

Bein said they are too busy now to celebrate their marriage but said they might spend time together this summer.

Residents voice concerns for Carbondale development plan

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A development plan should show a respect for the environment, encourage more activities for teens and should show how Carbondale can grow, some citizens say.

Carbondale residents made suggestions to creators of a comprehensive plan, designed to guide Carbondale growth, Wednesday night at the City Council chambers. Tom Weber, senior associate with Camiros Ltd., a Chicago-based planning firm hired by the city to develop the plan, recorded the citizens' comments to be considered when drafting the final plan.

The Complan will be designed to influence policy concerning economic growth and development in Carbondale for the next 20 years, Weber said. The new Complan will replace the previous plan created in 1979 that city officials have said is outdated.

Joe Stafford, of Carbondale, said he and some of his neighbors from West Elm Street made a list of concerns. He said one concern he and his neighbors have is that more activities for teenagers are needed to keep the children out of trouble. "I also would like to see rental property landlords reinvest back into the property they own," he said.

Stafford also said he thinks the speed limit in town should be lowered from 30 mph or 35 mph to 25 mph on some streets for children's safety. He said there also should be no construction east of the University Mall to preserve wetlands.

Jim Rayfield, of Carbondale, said before any plan is created, citizens should ask themselves if they want Carbondale to grow and how they want it to grow.

"If this town is going to grow, it must grow up," he said.

Weber read early results at the meeting of the 2,500 surveys that were randomly mailed March 20 to Carbondale citizens. He said the early results show that residents are divided on how the city should develop.

He said 66 percent of residents who returned surveys support developing vacant or underutilized land in Carbondale, but 57 percent support Carbondale extending its city limits.

Weber said the survey returns were strong for this type of polling method. He said Carbondale residents seemed concerned about growth in their community.

Tom Redmond, Carbondale Development Services director, said he was pleased with the turnout at the meeting and the overall number of surveys returned.

However, he said he is disappointed with the lack of returned surveys by SIUC students who live on campus.

He said the city did not have the final figures of the surveys returned but said there were a large number of students living off campus that returned the survey.

Overall, 24 percent of the surveys have been returned, which Weber and Redmond said was a good number for a mail-out survey.

The next public meeting concerning the Complan is scheduled for May 14 at the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College St.

said. "We played Drake, who is probably third in the conference and had a very close match."

Although the team lost 6-0, Paschal said some of the matches could have gone either way.

"I think that meant a lot to the guys that they can play that high of a team (Drake) that close, and almost beat them," Paschal said.

"Now each one of them wants to take the responsibility of winning their match so they can help the team, and not just win their match for themselves."

The Salukis are favored to beat Bradley and Paschal said if his team plays to their capabilities it should win.

"It still won't be easy, they have a lot of good guys on their team," he said.

"Their strength lies in depth, they have players at the number five and six spots who are good players, but they are not strong at the top."

"I think that meant a lot to the guys that they can play that high of a team (Drake) that close, and almost beat them."

*David Paschal
men's tennis coach*

Southern will face St. Louis University Friday in a rescheduled match due to a rain out March 24.

"It'll be a pretty even match," Paschal said.

"They have good depth and a lot of fighters on their team and they are pretty scrappy."

"If we play at our top potential I think we will be okay with them being a little down."

Streak

breaking records. Auld's main concern is winning the matches.

"I don't like to get caught up in figures and numbers, but I think the thing is we just look at one match at a time," she said. "We're just out there to play good tennis and not necessarily trying to break any records."

"It's always nice to do it, but it's always best if it's left in the shadow," Auld said the most challenging match will be against Wichita State.

"They are always a very good team and they give you a lot of good competition in singles and doubles," Auld said. "They are definitely a team to be reckoned with, and they are the strongest one there — but they're beatable."

Auld said she is also expecting a good match from Illinois State, due to the depth of its team.

Although SMSU has always been a competitive team full of intense players, Auld said they have had a disappointing season.

"We're starting off with them, and considering the trip I'm glad," she said. "Since the trip is 10 hours, and we don't play until 1 p.m. Friday, it will give the girls a chance to rest."

Auld said coming off a weekend of success highlighte by victories over Indiana State University 5-4; Creighton University 5-3 and Bradley University 6-0, will hopefully follow them to Kansas

"I was pleased coming off of last weekend," she said. "I thought everybody played really good, and they came through with some tight matches. I think it was good for the team, and it kind of prepared us for this upcoming weekend."

Auld said she felt good about the team's practice this week because the weather permitted the team to practice outside.

"It's nice to have some sunshine and warm weather since we are supposed to be an outdoor warm weather sport," she said.

Tony Kornheiser

From the Pressbox

Van Exel did not learn his lesson from Mr. Rodman

The Washington Post

Let's keep this simple: You can't hit the ref. And now in closed caption: YOU CAN'T HIT THE REF. No shoving. No elbowing. No head-butting. Okay, Nick? This is the cardinal rule in sports: The ref is inviolable. You can yell at the ref. You can gesticulate at the ref. In baseball, you can kick dirt on the umpire's shoes. You will get thumbed for those things, but they are an acceptable part of the behavioral landscape. Sports tolerates you acting like a donkey.

No shoving, though. That carries an automatic multi-game suspension. So not only are you lost to your team for the rest of that game, you are lost for several games to come. Not to put too fine a point on it, Nicky, but it's pretty much the same thing as taking a powder and ending up on a houseboat in Lake Havasu City. Remember a few weeks ago, Nick, when Cedric Ceballos went over the side? You spoke contemptuously of him: "He abandoned us, you know. We have a team captain who just walks out."

You showed him, Nicky, you got tossed out for seven games. Could you think of a worse time to go crazy? Good luck in the playoffs in the first round against Houston, the two-time defending champions, with you coming off seven games in the cooler.

The NBA did the right thing raising the ante on Nick Van Exel's suspension and fine beyond what it gave Dennis Rodman. Van Exel shoving a ref may be no worse than Rodman head-butting a ref. But Van Exel needed to be punished more for not gleefully anything from what happened to Rodman. Van Exel was doubly dumb, since the referee he foramed, Ron Garretson, is the son of the NBA's head of officiating, Darrell Garretson. He-lo?

Actually, Van Exel may have gotten off light. I'll bet he got seven games because that's all the games the Lakers have left until the start of the playoffs. Had it been two weeks ago, Van Exel might have gotten 10. After Rodman got six, 15 wouldn't have been too much. The NBA has to find a place to set the bar to deter assaults on its referees.

Did you see the sad look of resignation on Magic Johnson's face when he got between Ronnie Garretson and Van Exel? He was probably thinking: What am I doing coming back to this team?

He's got one guy, Ceballos, who'd gone off to live on a houseboat like he's Sonny Crockett, and another, Van Exel, with a history of self-destructive episodes.

Van Exel knocked himself down to the second round in the '93 draft when he missed two flights to a pre-draft workout, and when he got there he refused to run hard for George Karl, after arguing with Karl about whether Dean Smith could coach. Last season he refused to play in the second half of a game at Portland, because he thought Del Harris had humiliated him by not starting him in that half. Tuesday, Van Exel took a run at a ref like one of the bulls at Pamplona. Van Exel is a terrific talent, but he's high-maintenance.

and lose to all the rest, it's not going to do you much good.

"We've got to start out with Indiana State. It's a big weekend and hopefully we're up to the task."

Southern heads into this weekend's contests winning 10 of its last 12 contests. SIUC's last defeat came at the hands of the University of Missouri Wednesday when it split a doubleheader with the non-conference Tigers.

Southern won the first game 4-0, then lost the second 7-1.

SIUC's last conference game was a doubleheader against Evansville April 2.

Southern leads the Valley in both categories with a .322 batting average and a 1.27 ERA.

Leading the pack of Southern's batters is senior outfielder Christine Knotts, who is continuing her reign of terror at the plate.

Knotts is batting a solid .469, which leads both SIUC and the Valley. Knotts is also ranked No. 15 in the nation in hitting among NCAA

"We're playing six games, but we need to take them one game at a time."

Christine Knotts
Saluki senior outfielder

Division I schools.

Knotts said she hopes to keep her hot hitting on track against this weekend's conference foes.

"I just want to keep working hard and try to keep it up if I can," she said.

"It all feels really good right now." Knotts said this weekend will definitely be a challenge for Southern.

"This is a time when we cannot afford to let up at all," she said. "It's really important that we go after each game with intensity. "We're playing six games, but we need to take them one game at a time.

"It's going to take a 100-percent effort from every single person."

Right on the heels of Knotts is junior third baseman Becky Lis. Lis is batting .375 and leads the team in doubles with 10.

In Wednesday's second game against Missouri, Lis set a new school record for career doubles with her 36th two-bagger.

"I knew I was close and then I finally did it," an elated Lis said of her triumph. "It feels really good."

The second base slugger said this weekend's matchups will not be easy, and Southern must stay focused in order to win.

"Basically we're going to keep doing what we've been doing," she said.

"We're going to get our pitching going and have our defense behind it, while getting our bats going."

Brechtelsbauer said an entire team effort is a must.

"We have to have everybody in the lineup do something," she said. "In order for us to win, we've got to have help from everybody at different times. We can't expect one or two players to carry us."

Saturday's action against Bradley begins at noon, while Sunday's game against the Redbirds begins at 1p.m.

Softball squad ready for test of six at home

By Michael DeFord

The SIUC softball team faces its biggest challenge of the season this weekend, but don't tell coach Kay Brechtelsbauer her squad is not ready for it.

The Salukis (14-9, 2-0) are home for three Missouri Valley Conference doubleheaders, beginning with Indiana State University (12-24, 3-1) today at 3 p.m.

Saturday, Southern battles Bradley University, then takes on defending MVC champion Illinois State University Sunday.

The six-game home stand will be a test of endurance for Southern, but Brechtelsbauer said her team can weather the storm.

"I think they are ready to go," she said. "How well we do depends on how well everybody performs," she said. "They are ready and feel they can do well this weekend."

Equally up to the challenge, as Brechtelsbauer knows all too well, will be SIUC's conference foes.

"I feel we can do well this weekend, but we have to go out there and get it done," she said. "The other teams have a say in all of this, too, and are coming in here with the same feeling of doing a good job against us."

The Redbirds are 6-4 over their last 10 games, while both Indiana State and Bradley continue to struggle.

The Sycamores have dropped six of their last eight games, and Bradley is 2-9-1 in its last 12 contests.

However, Brechtelsbauer is not taking the Sycamores or the Braves lightly.

"Every one of these teams has some hitters and has some real pluses in their lineup," she said. "They have some upsets in their records so far. We can't take any team lightly."

"Obviously, Illinois State is the one everybody is gunning for, but if you beat ISU

Dawgs tame Tigers, 18-8

Aaron Jones' grand slam caps 12-run sixth inning

The SIUC baseball squad routed the University of Missouri Wednesday night with a 18-8 victory over the Tigers who are ranked 28th in the nation, according to Collegiate Baseball Magazine.

The decisive blow by the Salukis (17-14) came in the sixth inning when Southern pounded the Tigers (24-11) for 12 runs in the inning, and sent 16 batters to the plate.

The game started as a battle between the two teams as the Salukis scored in the top of the first inning on a RBI double by senior designated hitter Mike Russell.

Mizzou battled back in the bottom half of the inning, however, scoring two runs off SIUC junior starter Tory Hatten, who surrendered the two runs on a double by first baseman Aaron Jaworski.

In the third inning, Russell again doubled, tying the game at two, but Tiger center fielder Ryan Givens homered in the bottom half of the frame with a three-run shot off Hatten to put Mizzou up 5-2.

An RBI double by Russell, and an RBI single by junior first baseman Aaron Jones cut the Missouri lead to 5-4 in the fifth, but the Tigers struck for three more runs in the bottom half of the fifth, sending Hatten to the showers.

Senior pitcher Greg Hamer came on in relief of Hatten and pitched the Salukis out of the inning, but Mizzou had compiled an 8-4 lead.

In the sixth, junior second baseman Jay Mansavage lead off with a double, and then scored on a triple by senior outfielder Chad Isaacson.

The Salukis continued to hammer Missouri through the inning, and Jones finished the fireworks with a grand slam home run to put the Dawgs up 16-8.

Southern would add two more runs in the ninth on a pinch-hit two-run homer by sophomore catcher

Cory Schrank.

Saluki coach Dan Callahan was pleased with the play of his club Wednesday, after the Salukis were defeated by Evansville April 7, 3-1, when the Salukis managed only two hits in the game.

"I was elated to see us swing the bats the way we did tonight (Wednesday)," Callahan said.

"It was great to see us play our way back into this one, as Tory Hatten just didn't have it and we quickly found ourselves battling to stay with them."

Callahan also said the victory was a positive start for the four-game road trip, as the Salukis travel to Southwest Missouri State this weekend to battle the Bears (15-13) in four game series.

"We beat a good team tonight, and took control of the game from the sixth inning on," he said.

"That makes you feel pretty good starting a road trip like this."

Men looking to serve up wins against MVC foes

By William C. Phillips III

SIUC men's tennis team is looking for its third win of the season when it travels to Indiana this weekend to face two MVC teams.

The Salukis are 2-10 overall in the season and 2-4 in the MVC, and will compete against Bradley University and Tulsa University at Terre Haute, Ind., today and Saturday.

SIUC men's tennis coach David Paschal said his match strategy is to win the doubles matches against St. Louis and Bradley.

"Doubles points are important, because if you win that you only have to win three singles, whereas if you lose that, you have to win four," Paschal said.

The match against Tulsa, which is ranked 35th in the nation, will be an intense match due to the depth of its talented players Paschal said.

"Tulsa will be a good match, and it should get us prepared for Bradley," he said.

Paschal said his team has proven it is capable of competing with some of the MVC's best teams.

"We definitely showed last weekend that we can play with the top teams in the conference," he

Women to try for place in record books

By William C. Phillips III

The SIUC women's tennis team will have the opportunity to tie and pass the school record for consecutive wins this weekend in Kansas competing against three Missouri Valley Conference teams.

The Salukis will face Southwest Missouri State University, Illinois State University and Wichita State University at Wichita, Kan. today through Sunday.

Southern has won eight consecutive matches, and with a victory over Southwest Missouri State, the Salukis will tie the school record of nine consecutive victories set in spring 1990 and fall 1981.

SIUC women's tennis coach Judy Auld said she does not like to get caught up in the streak regarding

Between the Lines

The SIUC women's golf team will compete in the Liz Murphy Invitational in Athens, Ga. at the University of Georgia Golf Course against 22 teams April 12-14.

The Salukis finished fifth out 14 teams in the Saluki Invitational March 25-26.

Senior co-captain Molly Hudgins, junior Stacy Skillman and sophomore Jamie Smith are averaging the team low, 83.

Junior Allyson Lawrence tied for 28th, Skillman finished 10th, freshman Jami Zimmermann tied for 43, senior Jennifer Prasse finished 46 and Smith tied for 15 in the Saluki Invitational.

Among the team's competition are defending champions Indiana University.

Indiana scored 916 last year and Erika Wicoff of Indiana scored 218.

Fayetteville, Ark. will be the next stop for the SIUC men and women's track and field teams, as they compete in the unsecured Tyson Invitational at the University of Arkansas Saturday.

The women's side of the invitational will play host to Baylor University, Southwest Missouri State University, Missouri Southern University, Johnson County Community College, and host University of Arkansas.

In the men's competition, all of these schools will be competing, with the addition of Oklahoma State University.

The Tyson Invite brought out eight season best times and distances for members of the men's 1995 track and field team, and according to SIUC men's track and field coach Bill Cornell, this meet is a good place to bring them out this season.
