Budget system shifts responsibility

WHAT'S IN A NAME:

Committee decides RCM not appropriate title for model system.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Editor's note: This is the first story in a four-part series looking at aspects of SIU's proposed budget system.

The University is continuing to develop a decentralized budgeting and management system for SIU that will make colleges rely on their tuition dollars for some of their funding.

But administrators no longer are calling it Responsibility Center Management, named after the Indiana University system.

RCM is decentralized budgeting and management system in which academic units collect their students' tuition money and budget that money to pay for salaries, equipment, teaching costs and research.

Under SIU's current system, the University collects and distributes tuition money.

In July 1996, the RCM steering committee was formed to develop a new budgeting and management system for both SIUC and SIUE. It could be in place within two years.

An April report by that committee suggests that the term RCM is a poor description for the budget SIU is building. The committee has changed its name to the Advisory Committee on Planning and Resource Management.

"The interim report suggests that we are examining and learning from RCM, but from lots of other models that are out there too," SIU President Ted Sanders said. "I think if we were doing this over again, we would not start out using the term RCM to begin with, because it does not reflect what we are trying to do."

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said the term RCM fostered a perception that SIU was adopting Indiana University's model of budgeting, which has been used for several years.

"The term RCM led to the perception that it is a prescribed way," Beggs said. "Eventually people want to call it something, and we should. But if it has a negative connotation of only one way to do something, then we don't want that and never did. We are building a model we can adapt to our settings."

Sanders said the Board of Trustees and SIU's central administration still will set priorities and expectations for the colleges after implementation of the plan.

Beggs said he does not know

Greek life to be dry by 2000

NO PAIN, NO GAIN: Some fraternity leaders say not everyone will want to make the substance-free switch.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

As some fraternities across the nation move toward becoming substance-free, SIUC is one of only five universities leading the way in making alcohol a thing of the past in all chapter houses.

But some local fraternity leaders say the process will not be easy because not all will want to follow the plan.

"Whenever there is change, there is pain," said Derek Hirohata, district commander for the Sigma Nu Fraternity.

SIUC is part of a program called Select 2000, which is designed to get fraternities more focused on academics and the service aspects of Greek life.

There are 26 fraternities at the national level participating in this program, and there are five universities that are pilot schools that will help fraternities throughout the nation move toward adopting these goals by the year 2000.

One of the goals of the program is to create substance-free fraternity housing beginning next fall on SIUC's campus. Sorority chapter houses have always been dry.

There's no taste like home

AUTHENTIC CUISINE:
RSO sponsors African food-tasting event.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Holding a cup of bissop, a tropical drink from Senegal, Subu Ananeth sniffed the crimson liquid in his cup, wrinkled his nose and proceeded to take a swig.

His face showed immediate pleasure.

"It's fruity," he said. "Once I smelled the drink I was a bit hesitant to taste it, but it's real good."

Ananeth, a graduate student in geophysics from India, was one of about 100 people sampling "A Taste of Africa: A Complete Exquisite and Authentic Cuisine of the Black and African World" Thursday afternoon in Student Center Ballroom D.

Those attending also could visit an exhibition of African artifacts and educational workshops nearby in the International Lounge.

The event was sponsored by the SIUC African Student Council as part of last week's Africa Week activities.

Saliwe Kawewe, an associate professor and director of the graduate program in the School of Social Work, said the council spent five hours cooking about 150 pounds of food with the help of volunteers.

Preparing for the event involved a lot of work, but it was a way for African students to have a taste of the homeland and treat others to a taste of what they left behind.

"It reminds us that we all come from Africa, and we get to share our foods with others," Kawewe said. "That is the way Africans generally show their hospitality— with food."

The foods served ranged from Moroccan couscous, a rice-like yellow pasta made from wheat; to sweet potato pie, a flavorful dessert that is popular among African Americans in the United States.

For Ananeth, couscous was a palate-pleaser. After savoring the pineapple-like taste of his drink, he made two trips to the serving area for extra helpings of the dish.

"I've never eaten couscous before," he said. "It's not spicy, but it's not very bland. It's got a pleasing taste."

People not only were introduced to new tastes but also to new sounds in the International Lounge.

Samuel Amanuel, a graduate student in physics from Ethiopia, described a krar, a small ukulele-like Ethiopian instrument, to a small crowd.

"There are two ways you can play it," he said, demonstrating by plucking the instrument's strings like a guitar, and then sliding his fingers along its strings.

Fee increase concerns students

PETITION: Trustee candidates join forces to inform students about athletic and tuition increases.

TRAVIS DE'NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two candidates for the SIUC Board of Trustees' student trustee position are working together to poll students about the proposed athletic fee increase and the proposed graduate school tuition increase.

Monty Peerbhai, a doctoral candidate in sociology from Arlington Heights, and Pat Kelly, a sophomore in philosophy from Carbondale, both oppose the two plans.

They are using a booth in the Student Center's Hall of Fame to inform students about the proposed increases and to remind students about the April 23 student trustee elections in which one of the four candidates is selected.

The annual athletic fee for full-time students could rise from $106 in fall 1997 by 85 percent, to $196, by 2002.

Graduate school tuition could rise from $2,160 per year in fall 1997 by 6.5 percent, to $2,300, by 2002.

The Board of Trustees is scheduled to vote on both increases at its June 12 meeting,

Candidate drops out of Trustee election

TRAVIS DE'NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Rachel Moore has dropped out of the race for SIUC Board of Trustees student trustee, leaving Troy Alim, Anthony Buie, Pat Kelly and Monty Peerbhai as the four remaining candidates.

Moore said she did not have time for schoolwork, extracurricular activities and running a campaign.

"I had too little time to run a campaign the way it should be done," she said. "I'm putting my classes and my grades first."

Moore, who is president-elect of Beta

Alpha Psi, president of the Smith Hall Council and a College of Business Student Council member, supports Buie.

"I have served with him in several organizations, and I agree with his philosophies," she said.

Moore, a junior in accounting from Fairfield, said she will continue to make student government and the student trustee aware of students' needs, including more computer access and more parking.

"I am willing to help whoever gets elected, and I will continue to push for those changes," she said.

The election is April 23.

which will be the first meeting the new student trustee will attend.

Kelly and Peerbhai tell passersby about the two proposed increases, then ask them to sign a petition opposing or supporting them.

Peerbhai said the petitions will be given to Chancellor Don Beggs when the polling is completed.

Only one trustee will be elected from the four candidates, but Peerbhai and Kelly both want to raise student awareness. That goal allows them to campaign together and support each other.

"I'm going to vote for him, and he's going to vote for me," Kelly said.

Both candidates also are working together to change the format of the candidates' debate on April 21.

"We have co-written this letter to the election commission, asking it to allow candidates to ask each other questions," Peerbhai said.

The debate format currently does not permit candidates to question other candidates.

Kelly said he hopes the cooperative effort to raise awareness of proposed fee increases will result in more students at the polls this year. Usually, 10 percent of SIUC students vote in student elections each spring.

"I think we can bring a record number of student voters to the polls this year," he said. "That way, even if we don't win, at least the voice of the student body will be heard."

Peerbhai and Kelly, who are running for the seat along with Troy Alim and Anthony Buie, will continue to poll students this week and next week.

Dissatisfaction

Citizens should demand that parks fall under city control

THE DISSATISFACTION WITH THE Carbondale Park District by some residents is a sign for the park board to clean up its act and for citizens to take action.

During the last few years, the park board has managed to irritate some residents with its rising taxes and construction of a golf course.

THE SEPARATE GOVERNMENT ENTITY'S plan to raise the tax levy by 37 percent and then drop to 4.6 percent caused some protest and disruption among citizens and their perceptions of the district.

And as the board only increased the tax by 4.6 percent, there is an overwhelming chance that there might be another tax increase in the future.

INSTEAD OF THE HICKORY RIDGE GOLF course, the park board could have built a teen center or an outside community pool for children during the summer time.

Both these options would have accommodated a larger number of residents rather than having a golf course that serves only a small number of people.

Many residents, including a new city council member, have called the park district "out of control," and have sought more information on ways to dissolving the park board.

This idea even became an issue in the Carbondale City Council election.

AT THE ONE PARK BOARD MEETING LAST December — during which the board retracted from its earlier proposal of raising taxes by 37 percent — 200 residents protested and called for more of the board.

One of those protesters will be seated on May 6 as a new councilman.

The alarm is ringing for the park district to shape up its act.

If enough citizens were to come together — about 2,405 registered voters in Carbondale — they could sign a petition calling for the dissolution of park board. Those voters could wield a mighty blow to the district's future.

IT SEEMS THAT SOMEWHERE IN THE rigors of governing the park board, the citizens have been lost in the shuffle of papers and ideas.

The park board needs to remember that it serves the citizens, and not itself.

If it fails to remember who it serves, it could find that residents will petition to dissolve it and place it under city government control.

A FEW YEARS AGO, CITIZENS WERE irritated enough with the park board to bring petitions together, but they were never handed to the City Council.

This isolated capsule of the past, combined with the problems of the present, could be enough to instigate another petition drive.

It is time to start the petition drive again and to bring power of the park district back to the people and the city government.

BY PLACING THE PARK DISTRICT UNDER city control, Carbondale would make the district more accountable to the citizens via city government.

It is time for citizens to take back the Park District and seriously explore starting a petition drive to dissolve it.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Leg warmers, Molly Ringwald new generation gap markers

I'm too young to be nostalgic. When I first started student teaching this semester, my biggest concern was that I might be too close to the students' age to maintain any semblance of control in the classroom.

Fortunately, the advertising industry unwittingly did me a favor this year: It made me one of the old guys. It was bound to happen.

The '60s returned when I was high school, sending the hippest among us scrambling to thrift stores in search of bell-bottoms and love beads.

The '70s, of course, had to follow the '60s, so we all endured a season of platform and polyester in quantities sufficient to satisfy even Shaft's wardrobe demands.

It was only a matter of time before the real marketing set in and the Reagan administration became the stuff Vogue magazine spreads are made of.

There is something wrong when the "choice of a new generation" is trying to appeal to that generation through a nostalgic look at the Village People as interpreted by a den of dancing grizzlies. "YMCA" was meant to be performed by an Indian chief, a sailor, a cop, a construction worker and a firefighter, not a group of four-legged animals clutching soft drink cans in their claws.

Furthermore, there is no such thing as a "Nacho Man," and no one needs to be "oh, oh, oh, stayin' alive" inside a Pentium chip.

But the day our local radio stations replaced oldies night with an '80s marathon, rendering the Eurythmics' "Missionary Man" quaint, I started to appreciate the flashbacks, contrived as they might be.

All at once, I realized I'd made it to the other side.

It really came home to me last fall when I saw the computer I've always wanted sitting on a table at a garage sale, looking sort of forlorn and bewildered in the glare of a '90s afternoon.

I asked the guy behind the table how much it was.

"Fifteen bucks," he said.

Fifteen bucks. It didn't even run, because a computer without a hard drive is useless until it is fed some 5 1/4-inch data disks. But I bought it anyway.

This was a real computer. None of this newfangled CD-ROM business for me — this baby took floppies.

And like any good Apple IIe, when I flipped its switch, it blinked, beeped and then settled into its reassuring "purrmmmm, chk, chk, chk, chk, chk, chk, chk, chk."

That sound was a kind of homecoming. It was the noise that used to tell me all was right in the world — that Reagan was still stealing from the poor, that Chernobyl fallout was still tainting the air I breathed, and that those fluorescent pink leg warmers in my closet were still in style.

A generation normally is defined as the set of offspring born to a particular set of parents. All the siblings are from the same generation.

This may be accurate, biologically speaking, but socially, a generation is much shorter.

My little sister is six years younger than I am. She wasn't there to witness the birth of MTV, she watches Brat Pack movies for their historical value, and she was thrilled a few weeks ago at the prospect of seeing "The Empire Strikes Back" on the big screen for the first time.

She's never even had to feather her bangs.

I wanted some distance. I wanted to be a grownup. But it kind of creeps me out to look back at old episodes of "Family Ties" and think, "Gee, Michael J. Fox looks so young there." This is exactly what my mother said about Audrey Hepburn when we rented "My Fair Lady."

On the other hand, I have to admit that I derive a certain diabolical pleasure from watching Daisy Duke prance around in her cutoffs, then visualizing her 50 pounds heavier, with frosted hair and stretch marks.

Like, how grody. Gag me with a baby spoon. Daisy Duke with cellulite? Gross me out.

Daisy Duke at 40. Hmm ... somehow I find something about that concept, like, totally bitchin' to the max. Like, y'know?

Dear Editor:
I'll bet that Allen Ginsberg would have appreciated Emily Priddy's fine column of Monday, April 7. By all accounts, he was the most human and humane of artists, and that rare find, a man of great gifts without a bone of condescension (This was further evidenced by the recollections of English Day speaker James Jones).

An intellectual fully engaged with his society, Ginsberg was also a fine writer, one who pushed ahead the poetic enterprise in the line that extends back through William Carlos Williams to Walt Whitman's inaugural "barbaric yawp."

I saw Allen Ginsberg read several times over the years, beginning in the fall 1964 in Berkeley, Calif. He was always earthy, approachable and wide awake. When he read on college campuses in the '60s and early '70s, he'd simply arrive, start talking, do the reading, and continue the conversation on into the night.

He never made a hotel reservation. When everyone else was tired, he'd simply lie down on the nearest couch or floor and doze off.

My favorite memory of seeing him comes from the fall 1976. I was living in Carver, Mass., the next town inland from Plymouth, in the town hall of which Bob Dylan had decided to launch his Rolling Thunder Review.

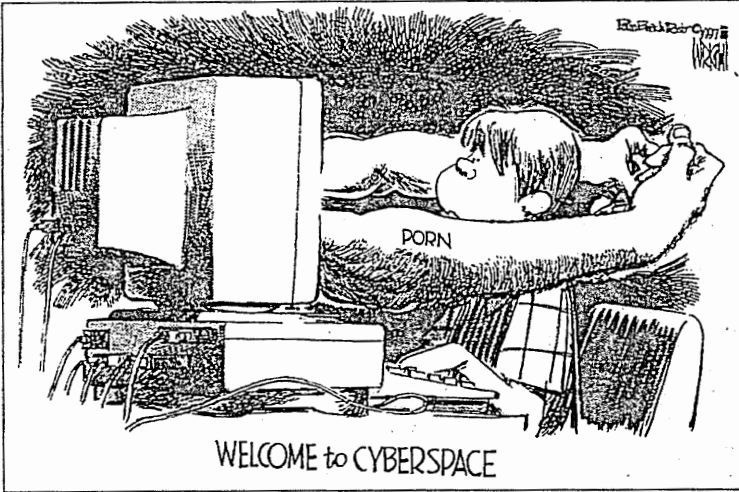

Tickets were announced by word of mouth, and my wife and I were able to get into the audience on opening night.

In this tiny hall seating 200 people, Dylan had with him Robbie Robertson and Levon Helm from "The Band," Joan Baez, Ronee Blakely (fresh from her cinematic success in Robert Altman's "Nashville"), Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Arlo Guthrie and several other figures from the rock, folk and country scenes.

In the grand finale number, who came strolling out, grinning from ear to ear, dancing a two-step and playing the finger cymbals, but Allen Ginsberg. He was fully at home and having a wonderful time.

Thanks to Emily Priddy for reminding us of what so many continue to owe him.

Children have solution to hatred

Dear Editor:
I was 10 years old when my brother came home from the Vietnam War.

It was a war in which he learned the meaning of color. Not of black and white, but of red. The red blood that blacks and whites shed for this country.

Yet after all this time, blacks and whites still are shedding blood, but now each other's. Sadly, the hurt still goes on after all these years.

Mothers and fathers lost their sons in that war.

We, too, are losing our children in a war in which kids are killing kids over drugs and neighborhoods.

I have a 6-year-old son I pick up at school, and when I do, I love sitting and watching all of the children playing together.

To them, color doesn't make a difference.

So let's say thank you to the loved ones who came back and the ones who died for this nation, and pray the youth learn from our mistakes, because they have the answers in their innocence.

PBS offers wide variety of programs

Dear Editor:
While reading the guest column, "PBS not worth tax dollars" in Thursday's Daily Egyptian, I had to wonder which PBS station Mr. Mendenhall had been watching.

Mendenhall's main point in the letter was that WSIU/WUSI Channels 8 and 16 are not diverse in their programming, thus should not be supported by the government.

First of all, Congress already has decided that the government should not support PBS. Since this decision, stations have been receiving less funds each year.

Mendenhall stated that WSIU/WUSI "should offer a more diverse selection of programming."

Let's look at a typical broadcast day at WSIU/WUSI.

On April 27 there will be 4 1/2 hours of children's programming. One of the shows is "Sesame Street," which is very diverse in its content.

In the afternoon there is a show titled "Starting Over: Japanese Americans After the War."

After that a local production, "Southern Issues." At 3:30 p.m., "Gourmet Ireland" will air. At 4:30 p.m., "Lawrence Welk"; at 6 p.m., "Kratz's Creatures," a show tailored for older children and nature.

WSIU/WUSI airs more than 125 local productions a year that focus on different issues in Southern Illinois. The list goes on and on.

Public broadcasting is not in the business to make shows that appeal to the mass market.

Most people tune in each week to watch one or two shows that they have an interest in.

I think that WSIU/WUSI keeps up with this idea.

I bet if you look closely at the programs offered each week on WSIU/WUSI, you will find one that is aimed at your interests.

You are a cinema photography major, Mr. Mendenhall.

Perhaps you would be interested in watching a show that airs on Sunday nights called "Rough Cuts."

It showcases works produced and directed by many cinema/photography and radio/television students.

WSIU/WUSI is a VERY important resource to Southern Illinois.

The community gains knowledge through the programming, and the students at SIUC get practical hands-on experience at a quality broadcast station.

Graduate student wins national thesis award

PAIR OF FIRSTS:

Javan Walker is first minority and first one from SIUC to capture writing honor.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Being the first minority in the nation — and the first SIUC student — to receive a national thesis award on Wednesday was a blessing from above for Javan Walker.

"This is a blessing from God," said Walker, who received a master's degree in English in May. "It's good representation for me as well as the school."

Students from 14 Illinois high schools and three community colleges watched Walker receive the Distinguished Master's Thesis Award during English Day ceremonies at the Student Center.

English Day ceremonies honor high school, community college and SIUC students who have made outstanding accomplishments in English.

Walker received the award — which no SIUC student ever has won — for his master's thesis, "Imagined Communities of Race in Ralph Ellison's 'Invisible Man,'" from the Midwestern Association of Graduate Schools and University Microfilms International.

MAGS is an association of 150 institutions that selects 55 theses in all fields of study. Universities from 18 states are included, and the prize honors the top researcher at the master's level with a $500 award.

His thesis is based on the writings of Ellison, who wrote about the destruction of existing notions of race and community.

Walker said his thesis was his way of taking a "polarized" stance on something that he has a strong interest in.

"I wanted to reflect integrity," he said. "I wasn't doing it to fill a requirement."

BUDGET

what proportion of a college's tuition will go to the college that generates it, or how service units, including Morris Library and Information Technology, should operate.

The steering committee is examining those concerns and has made no decisions yet.

Elaine Hyden, vice president for planning and budget services, said SIU has become more dependent on its tuition dollars because of dwindling state funds.

"We cannot get stalled or slowed down," Hyden said. "The more I read about what the financial situation is externally, the more I know we have to get going with a process here that will improve our financial situation."

Most administrators agree that a decentralized and open budgeting system would work best for SIU.

"Under the current budgeting system, it is political," Allan Karnes, director of the School of Accountancy and a steering committee member, said. "It's who has the ear of the president or the provost."

"It is very centralized and the funds trickle down. The chancellor's office makes allocations to the vice chancellors, who make allocations to the deans or directors. To get rid of this is to get rid of the politics."

Sanders said an open budgeting system would allow budgeting decisions to be viewed by the whole University.

"Someone should be able to look at our budget and have a reasonable chance at understanding it," he said.

Sanders began developing a decentralized budgeting and management system when he arrived at SIU in 1995. He said developing budget guidelines and University-wide priorities for the fiscal year 1997 budget were the first steps in creating one.

"I arrived with a pretty clear understanding of the level of frustration the Board of Trustees had with understanding the budget process, how decisions are made, and how resources are managed," he said. "The budget was a labyrinth."

The Faculty Senate passed a resolution last year that asked for a clearer budget, but Albert Melone, Faculty Senate President, said a decentralized budgeting and management system is not the answer.

"A comprehensible budget is simply a clear budget," Melone said. "Once the board gives deans this extraordinary power to order their budgets independently of one another, it will be very hard for the BOT to say, 'No you shouldn't do that.'"

Some SIUC faculty have said that allowing colleges to keep their tuition dollars could cause competition between them.

They also have said academic standards could be lowered, because colleges would fight to obtain students to increase their tuition dollars.

"The University is not a marketplace," Melone said. "To let the invisible hand, the marketplace, decide where the money goes is like putting us all at competition with one another when the goal of education is cooperation."

Someone should be able to look at our budget and have a reasonable chance of understanding it.

TED SANDERS
SIU PRESIDENT

Karnes said administrators have to build in safeguards to prevent competition.

He said administrators also have to decide what level they wish to decentralize to.

"We have to ask, 'How much decentralization is the administration willing to accept?'" Karnes said. "Because there will be real implications if the central administration doesn't hold the purse strings anymore."

"All of a sudden they have to trust the people the money is allocated to that they will do what they are supposed to do."

Both Sanders and Beggs said they, along with the Board of Trustees, are willing to allow deans to make more budgeting and management decisions with tuition dollars.

"I know for certain the Board of Trustees and I are willing to do that," Sanders said.

Melone said SIU could become a Darwinian university where only the classes with student demand will survive.

"There is nothing new in the idea that student demand has an impact on how funds are allocated," he said. "But under this type of model, colleges will be in direct competition for students, and this is inappropriate."

"At times in University life, the strong should carry the weak."

Sanders said models with RCM elements will not destroy programs with few students.

"Everyone has heard that everything in the University is going to rise and fall over their own ability to be entrepreneurial, and that if you can't bring money in that you can't survive," he said. "This is not true."

Hyden said the steering committee will educate the University about the different budgeting models it studies and ask what people want in the new budgeting system.

"We want to be able to answer or collectively consider everyone's questions," she said. "We want to get into a dialogue with the University community and determine what is best for us."

experienced at the event so that the diversity of SIUC's African population could be featured.

"There are about 30 countries represented in the African Student Council, and events like this one allow us to show our diversity," he said. "This is good for us and an opportunity to share our heritage with Carbondale."

Carolyn Ferdinand, a Carbondale resident, was glad to experience all that "A Taste of Africa" had to offer, especially the tasting part.

"I just love it all," she said. "If I could eat here every day I'd be so happy."

of Student Development, said Select 2000 will accomplish two things: help the Greek system at SIUC rediscover the original ideals of Greek life and lower insurance rates for the chapter houses.

"The main goals of the Greek system are scholarship, leadership, service and brotherhood and sisterhood," she said. "It appears the majority of focus is on the social level."

It is not just substance-free housing that Select 2000 affects.

"This will help our Greek system excel and will help our students get back to principles," Sermersheim said. "It will help them recognize their fullest potential. There is no doubt in mind."

The primary purpose of Select 2000 is to get back to the four goals of scholarship, leadership, service and brotherhood.

The program in its entirety is what impressed Doug Burkott, a senior in exercise science from Rockford and president of the Interfraternity Council.

"I always tell people to look at the whole thing rather than just the substance-free part," he said. "It is a great initiative and should have been done a long time ago."

While there may be other goals, including academic excellence, Sermersheim said the most controversial point is the substance-free aspect. Sermersheim said the change will take place gradually. First there will be non-alcoholic monthly basis and told what GPA to get," she said. "This is just one more standard."

She said insurance companies see fraternities as a risk, and the goal is to be alcohol-free to ease the burden of the insurance on chapter houses.

The change is not new because fraternities have not always had alcohol.

"Most fraternities were dry up until the '60s," Hirohata said. "It (fraternity goals) became twisted so that social aspect became the focus."

He said Sigma Nu as a national organization is moving toward substance-free chapters. It had its first substance-free chapter in 1995, and the other fraternities are working toward becoming substance-free by the year 2000.

Because the national fraternal organizations are working toward becoming substance-free, Sermersheim said the change at SIUC is inevitable, and it will be a permanent one.

"They (students) can live and learn and use the chapter house as a home, not just a party nest," she said. "This is a program that I firmly believe will help a good Greek system become great. There is no real reason to go back."

DE reporter Mikal Harris contributed to this story.

parties in chapter houses next fall, but students over 21 will be allowed to have alcohol in their rooms for personal consumption.

By the fall of 1998, there will be no alcohol allowed in fraternity chapter houses. Sermersheim said substance-free housing is not an unreasonable demand.

Unexpected findings spark radiation debate

RE-IGNITE: Victims of low-level radiation outliving peers.

WASHINGTON POST

The statistics seem clear and compelling, and completely at odds with common sense: In Japan, site of the world's only nuclear attacks, radiation victims are outliving their peers.

It's one of the stranger twists in 50 years of scientific monitoring of atom bomb survivors. As expected, the people closest to ground zero have died in high numbers of cancers that began in a white-hot flash of nuclear radiation. But as one moves farther from the blast site, the death rate plunges.

And so, oddly, people with limited radiation exposure appear to live longer than neighbors who had none at all.

Could low-level radiation — regulated in this country and elsewhere as a powerful carcinogen — be less dangerous than commonly believed?

The question, which has divided scientists and academicians for years, has flared again because of a number of provocative new studies that seem to refute prevailing views about low-level radiation, the relatively low-grade sort found in some kinds of medical waste or in the natural radon gas found in many homes. The issue has broad implications, not just for nuclear workers but also for ordinary consumers and taxpayers.

THESIS

Walker said the expertise of the English Department's professors contributed to his decision to earn his master's degree at SIUC.

"I saw some of the department's professors as scholars and knew they were the people I needed to work with," he said.

Clarisse Zimra, a professor of English, said Walker strives to be a leader and does quality work that shows in his master thesis of Ellison.

"He chose an extreme and original approach to a major and popular American writer," she said.

"He doesn't push the race issue, and that's why I respect him as a student and a friend."

Walker said he wanted to reflect the freedom of choice in education on the students who attended the English Day ceremonies.

He said it is the choice of a student to do what he or she wants with an education.

Betty Mitchell, assistant chairwoman of the English Department, said English Day recognizes some of the most outstanding high school and community college students in Southern Illinois.

This year, the English Department and College of Applied Sciences and Arts expanded the ninth annual English Day to include three community colleges in addition to 14 high schools.

In addition to the awards ceremony, students attend workshops and presentations that included composition, literature, fiction and poetry.

All 65 students, who were selected by their teachers, attended English Day and received a $25 gift certificate and a certificate of achievement.

Angela Bruns, a senior at Marion High School, enjoyed the poetry workshop and learned more about the quality of English. "English is important in general because it is a form of communication, and communication makes the world go around," Bruns said.

Walker said English Day is important because it is rare that subjects of humanities get accreditation for the work involved.

"It's important for us who are involved or are English majors to get recognized for our work," he said.

"People in English have done good things."

Woods makes history winning Masters

THE TIGER ROARS:
Woods breaks records on way to being youngest champion in history.

WASHINGTON POST

AUGUSTA, Ga.—Tiger Woods finished with a fabulous final-round flourish Sunday on his stirring 18-hole victory march to golf glory at The Masters.

There was not the slightest hint of a fold, or even a falter, as the 21-year-old shattered the 72-hole scoring record on Augusta National's verdant fairways and unforgiving greens to become the youngest champion in tournament history.

With a score of 4-under 68 Sunday and a four-day total of 18-under 270, Woods completed one of the most astonishing performances in the annals of the game less than eight months after he turned professional.

"I've never played a whole tournament with my 'A' game, but this was pretty close, except for the first nine holes Thursday," Woods said before 1996 champion Nick Faldo helped him put on the traditional green jacket that goes to the winner, along with a $486,000 check.

"My goal is to obviously be the best. It's a lofty goal, and if I do, great. If I don't, at least I tried."

This 61st Masters was all about history, and Woods made plenty of that. He set another mark by beating Tom Kite, his closest pursuer and a runner-up here for the third time, by 12 shots — the largest major championship victory margin in the 20th century and three better than the Masters record of nine posted by Jack Nicklaus in 1965.

Woods also broke the Masters record of 271 shared by Nicklaus (1965) and Raymond Floyd (1976), on his way to blazing another triumphant trail as the first man of color to win one of the four major championships.

"I wasn't the pioneer," Woods said. "Charlie Sifford, Lee Elder and Ted Rhodes (groundbreaking African-American golfers) played that role. I thank them. I was thinking about them and what they've done for me. I said a little prayer and said thanks to those guys. You are the ones who did it for me."

The decibel level reached a final crescendo when Woods strode triumphantly up the 18th fairway, smiling broadly and waving his hat.

Waiting for him there for a 30-second victory hug was his father Earl, who had trained him for this moment before his son was out of baby shoes.

Sanem Berksoy said. "(But) the Missouri Valley Conference Championship will be in Wichita, Kan., where it is very windy. So at least now we'll know what to expect."

The Salukis were able to bounce back from the loss to the Shockers Sunday by defeating Southwest Missouri State.

With the MVC Championship in less than two weeks, Auld said the team is hitting its peak at the right time of the season.

"Playing the tougher teams at the beginning of the year is starting to pay off for us now," she said. "We learned from those losses and are starting to benefit with wins against top-quality opponents in the Valley."

Up next for the Salukis is the University of Tennessee-Martin, the final regular season match for the team before the championships.

Auld said the match was scheduled because she did not want the team to have a two-week layoff.

"We are slowly building up confidence as the season progresses," she said. "The more we play, the better we'll be for the championships."

the runner from advancing and allowing Schwerman to save face.

"Jones told me twice he wasn't going to be there," Schwerman said with a laugh. "My footing did not feel right, so I thought I would just pick him off. Then I turned around. I figured I'd better hit him or knock the ball down somehow. They are already getting on me."

After seeing his experienced staff surrender 13 home runs throughout the course of the series, Callahan was glad to see Schwerman throw well.

"We weren't even sure who we were going to start for game four," Callahan said. "The one thing we're sure Jay can do is throw strikes."

Prior to Sunday, Schwerman only had made three appearances, with his only win coming against McKendree College March 23. Callahan said Schwerman's effort Sunday may lead to more time on the mound.

"He deserves a chance. I don't think there is no doubt about that," Callahan said. "Realistically...who is our fourth starter? We ended up playing four games this weekend and maybe Jay Schwerman is our fourth starter. From what I saw today, he deserves a chance to go out there again."

Schwerman admitted he was a little tired near the end of the seven-inning game, but was glad to see he had enough in him to go the distance.

"I have no juice behind my ball," Schwerman said. "The strongest part of my pitching is knowing when to keep them off balance. Mainly be smart — that's my motto when I am out there."

"I was hoping I was going to get to finish it out. I'm happy I did. It's definitely an end to a good day."

right fielder hit a solo home run in the top of the third.

"He didn't hustle on the pop-up and then Kochan hits the home run, and he doesn't want to get up," Callahan said. "I just told him he needed to get his stuff and get out."

Hairston could not be reached for comment.

Callahan benched Hairston against Northern Iowa April 6 after Hairston spewed his frustrations for committing three errors.

Callahan said Hairston is not displaying the proper attitude Callahan expects from his team.

"Regardless of how you are performing there are a couple of things you can bring to the yard every day," Callahan said. "You can hustle, you can bring a positive attitude to the yard. I didn't see that."

Hairston was hitting .350 prior to SIUC's series with the Braves, but a 4-for-16 outing over the course of the series dropped Hairston to .339.

"It's hypocritical when you're playing and you expect guys to pick you up and pull for you," Callahan said. "But when the role is reversed and you sit in the dugout like a mute. We don't need that."

"As much as anything too, guys like that lose respect for their teammates in a hurry."

Callahan said Hairston needs to change his attitude and quickly, or his future as a Saluki may be in jeopardy.

"We need to have a talk. He needs to change for the better," Callahan said. "He needs to develop more of a positive team attitude instead of a positive Jerry Hairston attitude. This is the second time in a week that this has happened. And if it doesn't change, he needs to take his act elsewhere."

"If his biggest concern is to play pro-ball, we'll see what happens in June with the draft. His best bet might be to pack his gear and hit the road."

Dawgs trip up at Indiana St.

The SIUC men's tennis team dropped its sixth straight Missouri Valley Conference match on Friday by falling to Indiana State University 5-1 in Terre Haute, Ind.

Picking up the lone win for the Salukis was Brian Eitzkin, who earned his second straight win with a 7-6, 7-6 decision.

With the loss, the Salukis fall to 3-10 overall and 0-6 in conference play.

Salukis run, throw hard in Razorback territory

The SIUC men's track and field team earned two first-place finishes at the Tyson Invitational in Fayetteville, Ark., while the women's team brought home three first-place finishes from the Arkansas State University Track Classic in Jonesboro, Ark.

First place finishes for the Salukis included: Peter Juszczyk, who won the javelin with a throw of 199-5; Joseph Parks, who had a season-best in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 9:13.30; Kim Koerner, who won the 3,000-meter run with a time of 10:38.76; Jenny Monaco, who took first place in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 18:31.47; and Vena Clendenin, with a toss of 129-0 1/2 in the javelin throw.

BOXING

De la Hoya shocks Whitaker

Oscar de la Hoya scored a unanimous decision victory over Pernell Whitaker Saturday to capture the World Boxing Council welterweight title.

Two judges scored the fight 116-110 for de la Hoya, and the third judge scored it 115-111 in favor of the new champion, who remained unbeaten at 24-0.

Whitaker, who fell to 40-2-1, said he should have won the bout.

"The world saw the fight and knows who should have won," he said. "I should have gotten 10 of the 12 rounds. For 12 rounds he took a beating and the world saw it. He didn't hurt me, but I hurt him. It was a shutout."

De la Hoya, who survived a flash knockdown in the ninth when he was hit off-balance, was not elated with an effort that saw him win his fifth world championship.

"I'll give him the rematch anytime, anywhere," he said. "I'm frustrated because I can do better, much better. I thought he would be faster and stronger."

NBA

Iverson burns Cavs for 50

Philadelphia 76ers guard Allen Iverson scored a career-high 50 points, tying the second-highest total in the NBA this season, for his fourth straight game with at least 40 as Philadelphia lost to Cleveland 125-118 Saturday night.

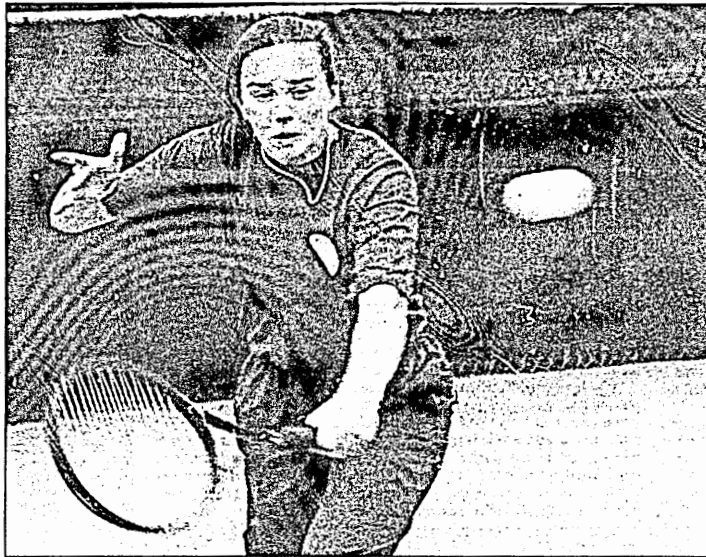

Iverson scored 39 points in the second half, including 23 in the fourth quarter, to become the first rookie to score at least 40 points in four straight games.

Wilt Chamberlain, who scored a rookie record 58 points during the 1959-60 season, had three different sets of three-game, 40-point streaks but never matched that total for a fourth game.

Iverson tied that mark with 44 points at Milwaukee on Friday. He scored 44 at Chicago Monday and 40 against Atlanta Wednesday.

The 50-point total tied Michael Jordan for the second-most in a game this season. Jordan also had the season-high of 51 against New York Jan. 21.

His 50 points also broke Cleveland's Gund Arena record of 43 points, held by Cavaliers guard Bobby Phills.

SIUC senior Patricia Zihler is hitting full stride two months after missing the Salukis' first match of the season with a shoulder injury.

Zihler led the Salukis this weekend in dual matches against the University of Evansville, Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State University, going 4-0 for the weekend.

Zihler has seen steady improvement in her game with each week of play since the shoulder surgery.

"I've been working on not making as many mistakes," she said. "This weekend I just went out and played my game. Whatever I was doing worked."

SIUC ended the weekend with a 2-1 record, defeating Southwest Missouri State Sunday 6-3 and Evansville Friday 6-2. Saturday, SIUC fell to defending Missouri Valley Conference champion Wichita State 5-1.

Women's coach Judy Auld said the Wichita State match was closer than the score indicated.

"All of the matches could have gone either way because they were so close," she said. "It was a good loss against a top-quality team."

The weather was a factor in the matches Saturday. Wind played a role against Wichita State, causing the matches to be shortened.

"It was hard to play in such a tough wind," junior

Dawgs win two, lose two against Bradley

PITCHING SURPRISE:
Freshman walk-on Schwerman takes the mound and saves Salukis in final game of series.

Maybe SIUC's pitching staff would be a little better off with a few more walk-ons such as Jay Schwerman in its ranks.

The freshman right-hander, who walked onto the team last fall from Libertyville High School, allowed only one run on four hits in a 7-1 win over Bradley University Sunday afternoon at Abe Martin Field.

Schwerman's seven-inning gem allowed SIUC to split its four-game series with Bradley, which was moved back to Carbondale after inclement weather threatened to cancel the series in Peoria. SIUC won game one 11-7 Saturday, but dropped games two and three by scores of 8-7 and 5-3 Sunday.

"Jay Schwerman picked us up big time," Saluki coach Dan Callahan said. "Those were two tough losses, and we needed somebody to pick us up. He went far and beyond what we expected."

Schwerman, who upped his record to 2-0, was told he would start Sunday's nightcap prior to the start of the third game of the series. Though he wasn't expecting to get the nod on such short notice, Schwerman said he was happy with how he responded to the opportunity.

"Somebody came up to me and said, 'Congratulations. You are starting.' I didn't know what was going on," Schwerman said. "I was a little bit nervous, but I just tried to relax. It feels pretty good."

After giving up a leadoff double to Bradley's Chad Saalfrank in the bottom of the first inning, Schwerman settled in and retired the next six batters he faced. His biggest, and only mistake of the day, came in the bottom of the third when he gave up a solo home run to Chad Johnson.

From the third on, Schwerman allowed only two more hits. In fact, not even a blown pickoff attempt could tarnish Schwerman's outing.

In the bottom of the seventh with a man on first, Schwerman attempted a pickoff. But first baseman Aaron Jones was nowhere near the bag when Schwerman made his move to first. Luckily, the ball hit the bag, preventing Coach says shortstop needs more positive attitude.

Saluki shortstop Jerry Hairston can't seem to stay out of trouble.

SIUC coach Dan Callahan opted to bench Hairston Sunday because of a lack of effort and a poor attitude. Sunday's benching was Hairston's second in one week.

Hairston's latest benching occurred in the first inning of the second game of SIUC's doubleheader against Bradley University Sunday afternoon, which the Salukis won 7-1.

Callahan benched last season's Missouri Valley Conference's Freshman of the Year when Hairston popped out to first, but failed to run it out.

To make matters even worse, Hairston failed to greet teammate Carl Kochan at the plate after the Saluki
