Search declared legal in Nitz case

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

The trial of Richard Nitz is set to begin today following the pre-trial decision to allow the prosecution to use disputed evidence.

Nitz, 37, is charged with the shooting death of Michael D. Miley, of Murphysboro, last April.

Williamson County public defender Larry Broeking, defending Nitz, said a search warrant issued April 27 was improperly served when police searched cars not listed on the warrant and without the consent of the owner.

Judge Donald Lowery, who is trying the case, said the search was legal, saying the discrepancies were minor and protected by precautions — the taking of a photograph — already taken by police.

Prior to getting the warrant, police arranged to have a picture taken of the property they planned to search. The photograph, showing the residence, a connecting garage and three cars, was given to police officers as part of the search warrant.

The defense claims the warrant was for the search of the residence of Rita Jo Nitz, Nitz's wife, and three cars parked in front of the residence. Among the cars listed on the warrant was a 1971 tan Plymouth.

There was, however, no 1971 tan Plymouth on the property. Instead, there was a 1974 black and green Plymouth, registered as belonging to Rita Nitz, parked in front of the residence.

Illinois State Police Sgt. Phil

Sylvester, the person responsible for applying for and serving the warrant, said because there were no license plates on the car and police were unable to go onto the Nitz property to obtain the serial number, the year of the car was an estimate.

Judge Lowery said the discrepancy in the year of the car has no effect on the case. The photograph, he said, shows the items intended to be searched. Lowery added that early model cars were similar in appearance, making a mistake in the year of a car easier to make.

The defense also made a motion to suppress evidence found in a 1974 Dodge Charger, belonging to both Rita and Richard Nitz, found in the garage, saying the items were taken from the vehicle prior to Rita Nitz's consent.

Reports show that items, including a gold watch, were taken from the vehicle at a time prior to that written on the consent form signed by

Governor to renew tax increase fight

By Scott Perry
Staff Writer

Gov. James R. Thompson announced Tuesday plans to renew his fight for a tax increase in an effort to end the recent financial crunch placed on education.

"Illinois needs a substantial increase in educational funding," Thompson said during a visit to the home of Patrick Kelley, Republican candidate for Congress in the 22nd District.

Over the summer, Thompson pushed for a 1 percent increase in the personal income tax. The bill was defeated without being put to a vote.

"The Illinois tax rate is the second lowest in the nation," Thompson said. "It hasn't been changed in nineteen years."

Thompson said he would begin where he left off, pushing for an increase that would put the personal income tax rate at 3.5 percent.

"Two point five percent to three point five percent is in the right area," he said.

Thompson was in Carbondale endorsing Kelley in his bid to represent the 22nd District in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"I've come a long way with help from others," Thompson said. "Now's my chance to repay fellow Republicans who've helped me."

Magistrate rules Hammond has right to hearing

By Richard Goldstein
and Jackie Spinner
Staff Writers

The director of the School of Music retaliated against former faculty member William Hammond by denying him tenure because of Hammond's vote to retain the Cinema and Photography department, according to a federal magistrate.

However, Hammond had a "contractual right" to a grievance hearing that he never received, according to an opinion written by Magistrate Phillip M. Frazier. Hammond can pursue his right to the hearing he requested before the Judicial Review Board through the Illinois Court of Claims, Frazier wrote.

He added, "a logical conclusion can be, and is made that (School of Music Director Robert) Roubos was motivated in part by (Hammond's) negative vote on the cinema-photography proposal."

This, however, does not amount to discrimination on the basis of First Amendment rights, Shari R. Rhode, University legal counsel, said.

Darrel Dunham, a School of Law faculty member who assisted Hammond during his grievance procedures with the University, said Roubos broke the law because his vote to deny Hammond tenure was in part a violation of civil statutes.

Hammond was unable to establish that he would have received tenure if Roubos had voted differently, Dunham said.

"Even if a bad or illegal motive guided Roubos's vote, it made no difference in the outcome," Frazier wrote.

Although evidence existed to show Roubos had tried to convince the rest of the faculty to vote against Hammond's tenure, Hammond was unable to sufficiently prove that point, Dunham said.

That evidence was a testimony by Charles Taylor, a former student worker in the music school office. Taylor testified he heard Roubos instructing an unidentified caller to "vote no on tenure for Hammond."

According to Frazier,

First chairman of journalism department dies

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

Howard Rusk Long, the first journalism department chairman at SIU-C, died Tuesday in Missouri of pneumonia.

Long, 82, is largely credited with developing the School of Journalism. He established the Daily Egyptian as a student organization, turning the paper into a daily after 40 years as a weekly and giving students an opportunity for hands-on training.

Manion Rice, associate professor in journalism, said

"When the decision was made to turn the paper (Daily Egyptian) into a daily, he saw the opportunity for 90 new student jobs."

Long was the journalism department chairman from 1953 to 1970 and director of the School of Journalism from 1970 to 1972. He was fiscal officer at the Daily Egyptian from 1972 to 1974, when he retired.

The School of Journalism added three sequences under Long — news-editorial, community newspaper and advertising. The school also offered research-oriented master of arts and master of science degrees and a doctoral program with specializations in 11 areas, as well as the bachelor of science degree.

The school currently offers two master's degrees, a doctoral degree, and a bachelor of science with sequences in advertising and news-editorial. In 1953, there were four teachers, 50 students and one degree — the bachelor of science — being offered.

Strike closes businesses in West Bank, Gaza Strip

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A general strike called to protest the deportations of Palestinian activists shut businesses and kept workers home Tuesday throughout the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Isolated protests were reported on the first day of a two-day strike called by the Unified National Leadership of the Uprising. The first day of the strike was called to protest the expulsions of Palestinian activists.

Striking Polish miners wait for talks to open

JASTRZEBIE, Poland (UPI) — Union songs, religious hymns and occasional cries of "Solidarity" blared over loudspeakers Tuesday as some 200 miners in the 15th day of an illegal strike waited nervously for management to open talks. The day began with an ultimatum by the director of the Manfist Lipcowy, or July Manifesto, mine — the only holdout of 12 collieries hit by strikes during the latest wave of labor unrest.

Three civilians shot to death in N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Three civilians were shot to death Tuesday, possibly by British security forces, near the site where eight British troops were killed 10 days ago in a bombing by the Irish Republican Army, police and sources said. The killings raised the August death toll in Northern Ireland's civil strife to 23, making it the bloodiest month in the British-ruled province in more than 15 years.

Hazardous waste ship waits off British coast

LONDON (UPI) — A ship loaded with more than 2,000 tons of Italian industrial chemical waste lay off the English coast Tuesday awaiting a dumping ground for its toxic cargo, which has been barred from Britain and four other countries. The British government said the cargo was "essentially an Italian problem" and refused to allow the ship to dock at Plymouth, 180 miles southwest of London.

Marines arrested with blank passports in car

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department is investigating two Marines arrested on armed robbery charges because a handful of U.S. passports was found in their car, a spokeswoman said. About a half-dozen passports were found in an automobile after the Marines were arrested. One of the Marines is a part-time private contractor with the State Department, spokeswoman Meg Ravnholt said.

U.S.: Soviet planes bombed Afghan rebels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department charged Tuesday that the Soviet Union violated international law by allowing its aircraft to be flown across the border to bomb Afghan rebels battling for control of the city of Kunduz. Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the United States had filed a formal protest of the alleged Soviet action with the United Nations mission in Pakistan set up to monitor the agreement calling for Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Agriculture Secretary could be in contempt

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A federal magistrate recommended Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng be held in contempt Tuesday for violating a court order that barred the department from refusing to extend farmer-held grain reserve loans. U.S. Magistrate Janice Szymych made the recommendation, which includes the possibility of stiff fines, to U.S. District Judge Harry MacLaughlin, of Minneapolis, who issued the preliminary injunction July 22.

Crash investigation shows inexperienced pilot

DENVER (UPI) — The National Transportation Safety Board plans to announce its decision on the cause of the crash of Continental's Flight 1713, which flipped over on takeoff at Stapleton International Airport in 1987, killing both pilots and 28 others. The NTSB has determined that co-pilot Lee Edward Breucher, 26, was at the controls when the DC-9 crashed. The investigation showed a flight attendant who survived expressed concern before takeoff that Breucher, with only 36 1/2 hours of experience in that type of aircraft, had enough experience to be flying in a snowstorm.

SIU recruits at state fair

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

With over 300,000 people expected to visit during the 66th annual Du Quoin State Fair this year, SIU is receiving a large audience of fairgoers walking through its display, said Terry Mathias, University Relations.

"In the video display booth alone, as many as 300 people an hour have stopped by to watch," he added.

Touch of Nature, Continuing Education, Student Development, and the College of Liberal Arts are just a few of the video productions presented at this booth.

Recruiting students with a strong academic background is one purpose of our tape, John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said.

Besides highlighting three COLA departments, psychology, political science, and history, the video also features four COLA alumni. The alumni were chosen from department suggestions and "whether we could get a camera crew to the locations," Jackson explained.

Featured in the video are state Senator Penny Severns, John Sander, head of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Donna Pittman, head of human resources for Chicago; and Walter Rodgers, ABC News bureau chief in Moscow.

In addition to the video booth, SIU is also offering a wide variety of displays and entertainment, Mathias said.

WSIU-FM, the campus radio and television station, is providing "extensive programming" throughout the ten days of the fair, said Tom Godell, radio station manager.

The station is broadcasting from a booth in the SIU dome with special programs of classical music, jazz and big band.

"People were even going by and making requests when we played the big band music Friday afternoon and they loved it," Godell said.

After a successful display last year, the Fisheries Research Laboratory is

Prisons should track smugglers, not profs

TESTING UNIVERSITY faculty for drugs before they can enter the state's prisons probably is not unconstitutional: It is just a har-brained idea. The decision by the Department of Corrections to require SIU-C faculty to submit to drug tests in effect killed a program that offered inmates at four Southern Illinois prisons a chance to earn a college degree.

Never mind that correctional class of 1989 has been shafted, the drug testing program will not stop the flow of drugs into the prisons.

TESTING REVEALS whether there are drugs in a person's system. We are not experts in the field of drug smuggling, but the blood stream seems an inefficient location to hide drugs. Imagine inmates and teachers meeting clandestinely long enough to complete a blood transfusion.

Do police in the outside world depend on blood samples to lead them to smugglers? Of course not. The DOC should be no different and should rely on the techniques used by the Drug Enforcement Administration and other law enforcement groups and stop playing this irrational game. This game may give some people the impression that prisons are cleaning up the drug problems, but that is not the case.

FOR INSTANCE, only new prison employees are required to submit to the tests. While the policy could help assure that the system hires no drug addicts, it does not address the possibility that some guards use drugs. Prison guards are similar to railroad employees and others whose actions can affect the general population. A prison employee under the influence of drugs conceivably increase the risk of escapes. Escaped prisoners can be a threat to society.

IT IS NONSENSE to believe that University faculty pose a greater risk when under the influence of drugs than do correctional officers. It is probably too late to close the gap between SIU-C and the DOC, however. Now, we can only hope that the DOC is successful in replacing the University's faculty with a program as diverse as the one that was dropped in the wake of the ill-advised drug policy.

Education, after all, is one avenue that helps lead inmates away from, rather than back to, the prison system. Too bad the DOC has no gains to show for the loss of this education.

Accept the invitation

IT'S NICE to see Saluki football coach Rick Rhoades out among the student body. Rhoades, in case you haven't seen him, has been visiting the University's dorms, drumming up support for a team that the "experts" picked in preseason polls to finish in the bottom half of the Gateway Conference. These were no cursory visits. Rhoades watched a game with one group at a dorm, then fielded questions from the students, stressing the importance of fans.

RHOADES REALIZES apparently that the program cannot be successful without the support of the student body. He'd like to get more students out to the games. Attendance at home games hasn't been that bad — the Salukis drew an average of over 11,000 at McAndrew last year — and Rhoades insistence that it could be better is encouraging. Rhoades, according to the Saluki media guide, considers himself a family man and he now wants all the students to be part of the family.

EVERYONE WONDERS what the new guy will do. Rhoades seems bent on a public relations campaign that we wholeheartedly support. Too often, the football team and its players are perceived to be aloof, living in a part of the campus inaccessible to the common student. Rhoades actions speak louder than words. It's one thing to tell the press that the team needs more support, but to court students face-to-face as Rhoades has done, shows a degree of humility that has to be admired.

ONLY TIME will tell if the Salukis, a team that lost some of its top players to academic ineligibility, will rise above preseason rankings. Rhoades and the football players obviously need the help of the student body. What a nice welcome could be offered to the new coach by a stadium full of students, bent on blowing off a week's worth of frustrations, showing that they appreciate the invitation the new guy in town has extended.

DANBO

Free-thinking cynic gagging on synthetic patriots' allegiance

EVERY MORNING when I get up, the first thing I do is face the full-sized American flag that flies in my bedroom and recite the Pledge of Allegiance. I then take a shower and sing the National Anthem, four verses. After which I go downstairs, pour a bowl of corn flakes and bow my head in silent prayer until the flakes get good and soggy. I'm hoping to get a job in the Bush administration.

That's what it's going to take apparently. It seems that Mr. Bush finds it impossible to accept the Americanism of someone who does not spend a good portion of his or her day wrapped in the flag, saying the Lord's prayer.

I hate it. Dr. Samuel Johnson, the great 18th-century English critic, said, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel." He was right. Mr. Bush is running a scoundrel's campaign.

I AM ALWAYS suspicious of people who display their patriotism on their breasts, like a designer logo. It reminds me of those couples who make a great public show of their affection for each other. They're always the first ones to get a divorce and you find out he beats her.

There is no litmus test for patriotism and neither party has a patent on it. Some choose to serve their country by honoring its ideals, others by blind obedience to its government. I prefer the first method but if you opt for the second it doesn't make you a bad person. A good German maybe, but not a bad person.

What I find particularly distasteful about Mr. Bush's constant invocation of the Pledge of Allegiance and his advocacy of school prayer is that they give aid and comfort to the self-righteous conformity that seems to be seizing the country. "We're in the majority, we Christians and sunshine patriots," it says, "and we have the right to shove our beliefs down your throat." Damn me for a freethinker, but I believe that's wrong. More than that; it's unAmerican.

H.L. MENCKEN, a member of the Cynics' Hall of Fame, said this of patriotism:

"Patriotism is conceivable to a civilized man in times of stress and storm, when his

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

country is wobbling and sore beset. His country then appeals to him as any victim of misfortune appeals to him — say, a street-walker pursued by the police. But when it is safe, happy and prosperous it can only excite his loathing. The things that make countries safe, happy and prosperous — a secure peace, an active trade, political serenity at home — are all intrinsically corrupting and disgusting. It is as impossible for a civilized man to love his country in good times as it would be for him to respect a politician."

The Bush people have learned that lesson well. Consider their handling of the Dan Quayle flap. He was not, after all, the first candidate to feel the bite of a frenzied press; both Gary Hart and Joe Biden, Democrats, found themselves in similar situations this year. And what did they do? They held press conferences, took questions and were shredded.

The point being, patriotism that costs nothing is worth nothing.

ONE THING I'll give the Republicans, though, they know how to run against the press. All politicians try that — politicians having the same affection for the press as does a burglar for guard dogs — but the Republicans have honed it to a fine art.

Do you think it's accidental that President Reagan hardly ever holds press conferences, that the recurring image of him is one of a busy man hurrying to a waiting helicopter, hand cupped to one ear as members of the press scream questions at him?

Nc. Somewhere along the line Mr. Reagan's press people figured out that the scene made the President look good and the press like a pack of jackals.

THE BUSH PEOPLE have learned that lesson well. Consider their handling of the Dan Quayle flap. He was not, after all, the first candidate to feel the bite of a frenzied press; both Gary Hart and Joe Biden, Democrats, found themselves in similar situations this year. And what did they do? They held press conferences, took questions and were shredded.

Four years ago Democratic vice-presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro came under fire for her husband's financial dealings and she responded by holding an exhaustive press conference at which she answered every question put to her, with documentation. She was widely admired among the press for her performance that day, but nowhere else. Dumb Democrats.

FACED WITH virtually the same problem the Bush campaign offered Dan Quayle for questioning in his home town with a raucous gang of neighbors as an intrusive and protective audience. The next time we saw him he was taking out the garbage, besieged by those rude ladies and gentlemen of the press again. It was a brilliant way of portraying him as a beleaguered victim of paparazzi, rather than a politician answering legitimate questions from legitimate questioners.

And it worked. Quayle, apparently, has shot the rapids and survived his trial. Bush must be doing something smart; he keeps going up in the polls.

But that doesn't make it right.

Director search almost over

Choice for head of financial aid to be made Friday

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

The vice president for student affairs said he will announce his choice for the director of the financial aid office Friday.

Vice President for Student Affairs Harvey Welch said he is waiting for reactions from the search committee, which are expected at 10 a.m. today. He said he will tell the three applicants who will get the position in a meeting Thursday.

"We talked about (financial aid) philosophy, dealing with students and structure," Welch said. "All three seem very qualified."

Pam Britton, associate director of the financial aid office and the third and final applicant for the job, was the last to be reviewed in a three-phase interview session by the search committee, the vice president for student affairs and the financial aid staff and advisory committee, Jean Paratore, acting director of financial aid, said.

Britton Monday followed the interviews of Connie Shanahan, academic adviser for advanced technical studies, Aug. 25, and assistant director of financial aid Dan Mann, Aug. 26.

The search committee — a group of representatives from the Undergraduate Student Government, the Graduate Professional Student Council and University Housing and Health Services — looked for University candidates with five years experience in financial aid and three years experience as a director or associate director.

The committee reviewed each application and made recommendations to Welch Aug. 16, Paratore said, and then formulated a rating sheet to be used at the interviews. Paratore stressed the ratings only were to be used as feedback by Welch. The ratings were to be submitted to Welch by 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The position was made vacant when the office's former director Joe Camille left SIU-C to be director of the University of Missouri's financial aid office.

Paratore said the job is a "critical position on campus" and should be filled by a "people person" and someone who understands the concept of financial aid.

"All three are very qualified," Paratore said, "and he (Welch) can't go wrong with his selection."

Paratore said the most challenging obstacle the new director will face is the upcoming installation of a computerized student information system — possibly in 1989. The new system will cause initial chaos, Paratore said, but, will allow the financial aid office to "finally climb out of the stone age," she said.

Worldwide drug bust nets 1,200 suspected dealers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 30-nation, four-week drug crackdown, covering most of South and Central America, the United States and Europe snared more than 1,200 suspected drug dealers and tons of illegal drugs, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh announced Tuesday.

At a news conference that coincided with one in Bogota, Colombia, Thornburgh detailed a massive anti-drug operation that occurred from Aug. 1 through Aug. 28 and involved border raids, interdiction of air carriers and boats, and destruction of marijuana crops, cocaine laboratories and secret airstrips.

The operation was coordinated by the International Drug Enforcement Conference, a coalition of Western Hemisphere nations dedicated to regional efforts to combat drug trafficking. Thornburgh said the operation was the first of its kind to involve joint law enforcement efforts and sharing of intelligence among nations.

In the past, he said, "each of the nations of the Americas has been pursuing the war on drugs in a more or less unilateral or bilateral fashion.

Taylor's testimony was insubstantial because "he could not identify who, if anyone, Roubos was instructing."

"I think that right now an untended faculty in this University had better not vote his or her conscience against the committee leaving University committee power wide open for retaliation," said Dunham.

Hammond sued the University in federal court after alleging that Roubos and Keith Sanders, dean of the College of Communication and Fine Arts, changed their attitudes toward him because he voted against a proposal by Sanders to eliminate the cinema and photography department.

Long worked with and for Walter Williams, who helped found the first school of journalism at the University of Missouri in 1908. Long earned four degrees there, a bachelor's in journalism, a bachelor of arts in English, a master's in journalism and doctorate in rural sociology.

In 1934, Long purchased the Crane Chronicle in Missouri, which he published until 1940, when he left the paper.

He taught at the University of Missouri from 1940 until 1950. He also served as manager of the Missouri Press Association from 1941 to 1949.

Long's early interest in editorial page writing motivated the formation of the International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors.

Bill Harmon, managing editor of the Daily Egyptian for 14 years, remembers Long as a leader, both here and Long established the Daily Egyptian as a student organization, turning the paper into a daily after forty years as a weekly.

nationally. "He made a tremendous impact," Harmon said. "He built the school from nothing and made it what it is today."

Harmon, who was hired by Long, said that Long made it clear that there was no story that could not be printed if the facts were there. "He was a stout believer in the student press," adding that Long sometimes went out of his way for the students.

George Brown, professor of journalism, said Long "dictated 40 letters some days as he tried to keep all of his ideas moving, and he kept secretaries busy with correspondence to people all over the world."

Rice recalls Frank Luther Mott, who helped in founding the first journalism school, saying, "H.R., you have far too active a mind for the academic world."

A scholarship fund will be set up in his name in the journalism school at the University of Missouri.

Services will be held at 3:30 p.m. Thursday at the Parker Funeral Home in Columbia, Mo.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret; his son, Joseph; and his daughter, Nancy.

Long was born to Coaner Melbourne and Carrie Bramblett, on July 30 1906 in Columbia, Missouri.

Jury selection in the Richard Nitz case is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. today.

The trial of Rita Nitz has been set for 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 15, following a request to have her case taken over by Carbondale attorney Larry Beard.

Both are charged with three counts of first-degree murder. Richard Nitz also is charged with unlawful use of weapons by a felon and Rita Nitz is charged with the concealment of a homicide.

Both are suspected in the murder of Miley, who failed to return home from church on April 6.

Area research on acid rain travels abroad

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Testing the effects of acid rain on the area by comparing trees in Southern Illinois with ones in Germany is a goal of a University forestry associate professor.

Currently, researchers have not been able to detect the effects of acid rain on trees in the area, Charles Myers, associate professor in forestry, said. But the five months of research, in Germany that Myers will begin conducting in September will give researchers a comparison of tree growth in Germany and Southern Illinois, Myers said.

"Comparing the areas could tell us if we have a real problem with acid rain," Myers said.

Only trees common in Southern Illinois and Germany will be used for comparison.

Research will focus on oak trees, Myers said.

Acid rain has a high concentration of acids produced by sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide emitted during the combustion of fossil fuels. Parts of the United States and Canada are suffering from the effects of acid rain. The destruction of plant and aquatic life are two effects.

"From what they tell us in literature, they say they have a real problem," Myers said.

Only trees common in Southern Illinois and Germany will be used for comparison. Research will focus on oak trees, Myers said.

Myers will conduct his research at the University of Göttingen in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Myers is able to conduct his research through a Fulbright Scholar Grant.

Myers joined the University's College of Agriculture in 1973. He is a specialist in measuring forest growth and statistics. He graduated from West Virginia University.

Bush's campaign stalls scheduling of debates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Efforts by the campaigns of George Bush and Michael Dukakis to schedule televised presidential debates in the fall stalled Tuesday because the Bush campaign would not commit to more than two debates.

"There are other ways to campaign. Debates have a way of freezing the campaign. It's our view that a campaign is a continuing debate," Bush campaign Chairman James Baker said.

Baker and two other top Bush aides met for more than two hours with Dukakis campaign Chairman Paul Brontas and campaign manager Susan Estrich to discuss when and how often the two White House contenders will debate this fall.

They came away only with a general agreement for one vice presidential debate, assuming they can agree to a format, between Democrat Lloyd Bentsen and Republican Dan Quayle. They also agreed to meet again Thursday to continue discussions.

They failed to agree not only on the number of debates but on the sites, dates, formats and sponsors.

"We want more debates;

they want fewer," Brontas said. "We want to start them earlier, they want to start them later. We want to continue up to when the election takes place, they would like to end them much earlier."

"The primary problem is how many debates there are going to be," Baker said after the meeting, also attended by Bush media adviser Roger Ailes and campaign aide Bob

Goodwin. "The vice president has agreed to debate twice."

Bush, campaigning in Rocky Mount, N.C., said he didn't want "to bore the American people" with too many debates.

Brontas said the Bush negotiators repeatedly said they did not want the last debate to occur too close to the Nov. 8 election.

Bush recalls Carter period, promotes anti-liberal theme

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush recalled the Jimmy Carter era Tuesday and urged Americans not to gamble the future "on another liberal governor coming out of nowhere."

Bush campaigned in North Carolina, escorted by ultra-conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, as Bush's top aides in Washington negotiated with the Michael Dukakis campaign over the format, sponsors and dates of possible presidential debates.

Those talks yielded nothing more than a general agreement to have the vice presidential candidates debate once. Bush's campaign Chairman James Baker said the campaign was hesitant to commit to more than two debates, saying debates "freeze a campaign."

Bush said he didn't want "to bore the American people" with too many debates.

Bush began his day with an appeal to about 150 contributors, both Republicans and conservative Democrats, who turned out to meet the GOP presidential nominee on a rainy day in Rocky Mount, a northeastern North Carolina town of 48,000.

Bush was speaking at a $500-a-person breakfast at the luxury home of Jack Laughery, chairman of Imasco U.S.A., the parent company of the Harrotes fast food chain.

Hitting a recurring theme, the vice president told the crowd he was trying to spell out the differences between himself and Dukakis "fairly."

Bush said the Nov. 8 presidential election will "turn on the economy" and added, "The economy, I think, will be working in our favor."

The vice president promised to continue the economic recovery started by the Reagan administration.

U.N. official wants help with Iran talks

GENEVA (UPI) — U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, unable to bring the foreign ministers of Iran and Iraq together for the fourth day running, sought U.S. help Tuesday in putting life into stalled Iran-Iraq peace talks.

Following separate discussions in late afternoon and early evening between U.N. legal experts and lower-level Iraqi and Iranian officials, U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani told reporters there would be no "formal meeting" Tuesday between the ministers of the Persian Gulf enemies.

Giuliani said earlier Tuesday that the talks, deadlocked in a dispute over the strategic Shatt al Arab waterway, were reviewed with ambassadors from all five permanent Security Council members — Britain, China, France, Soviet Union and United States.

Western diplomats involved in the negotiations said Perez de Cuellar asked the United States in particular to apply "pressure" on Iraq to soften its demands for control of the Shatt al Arab.

Iraq wants control of the 120-mile estuary of the Euphrates and Tigris rivers dividing the two countries, and the immediate clearing of war wreckage from the waterway — Iraq's only outlet to the Persian Gulf for Iraq.

Iran, however, has insisted on returning to a 1975 agreement with Iraq that placed the border down the middle of the disputed Shatt al Arab.

As a U.N.-mediated truce in the gulf war held for a 10th day, Perez de Cuellar said he would be "overjoyed" if there were an early meeting.

Canada set to vote on trade pact

OTTAWA (UPI) — Conservative Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, his hopes for re-election pinned to an historic free trade agreement with the United States, said Tuesday the treaty will benefit all Canadians and be a "beacon of hope" for international trade.

The elected House of Commons, where the Conservatives hold 212 of 282 seats, will vote late today on legislation implementing the free trade agreement. The Liberal-dominated Senate, which has the power to reject or amend legislation, has promised to delay its vote until after a general election.

Walesa, government to discuss strike

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Solidarity founder Lech Walesa will hold his first talks with the Communist government since the independent labor union was crushed by martial law in 1981, the outlawed movement announced Tuesday.

The meeting today to be held in Warsaw between Walesa and Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak coincides with the eighth anniversary of the historic agreement that paved the way for the creation of the first independent labor union in the Soviet bloc.

"I have optimistic news," a Solidarity spokesman said in the Baltic seaport of Gdansk. "Tomorrow Lech Walesa, chairman of Solidarity, will begin talks (in Warsaw) with Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak in the presence of representatives of the episcopate," or officials of the Roman Catholic church.

The announcement was made shortly after Walesa left his headquarters at the strikebound Lenin shipyard in Gdansk to confer with Bishop Tadeusz Goclowski on a deadlock over the terms for the proposed talks with the government.

The government had warned Monday that strikers nationwide faced dismissal if the workers did not resume work by today.

No immediate comment was available on the terms of the talks from the government, which appeared to have backed down from its position that the sit-in strike at Lenin shipyard must end before talks could begin.

There was no sign the protest was ending at the shipyard. Upon learning of the announcement of the talks today, the striking workers roared through the dark: "We shall win," and "There will be no freedom without Solidarity."

The Solidarity spokesman, Tadeusz Mazowiecki, said: "We hope that these talks will serve as an agreement for dialogue."

"We hope that they will create conditions for solutions of all problems of Poles and a solution of the problems of pluralism and legalization of Solidarity. Walesa is going to Warsaw tomorrow," Mazowiecki said.

No formal talks have been held between Walesa and government leaders since Solidarity was crushed when martial law was imposed in 1981. The union was officially banned the following year.

The official media said the Communist Party's ruling politburo at its weekly session in Warsaw Tuesday endorsed the efforts made by the interior minister in organizing the talks with Walesa.

In a statement, the Politburo conceded that economic losses had been suffered by the strikes, adding that "the continuation of some strike pockets pose a threat to the economy, the state and social peace."

Solidarity officials said nearly 3,000 workers at the shipyard were on strike as part of the two-week walkouts at several plants in Poland to demand official recognition of the union, wage hikes and better working conditions.

L.A. gangs begin meetings

Members meet to discuss coalition for Bloods, Crips

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Organizers of a "peace summit" among some 50 gang members meeting for a second day Tuesday revealed plans to bring the warring factions together into a single movement to help curb street gang violence.

"(The gangs want) one group, one movement with one color (insignia)," the Rev. Charles Mims, pastor of the Tabernacle of Faith Baptist Church in Watts, said.

"They'll act as a task force to stop the crime, to stop the killings," Mims said.

The meeting included 50 members of about 30 "sets" or individual factions of the Bloods and the Crips, the two major affiliations of black Los Angeles street gangs.

The talks were being held at an undisclosed location with a news conference scheduled Wednesday to discuss the results of the meetings.

"There's a move for everyone to come together," Mims said. "It's not going to be one gang... (but) together they want to become part of the solution, not the problem."

While praising the effort of Mims and other South Central Los Angeles clergy sponsoring the summit, the Police Department's anti-gang unit expressed concern about a "super organization" of gangs.

"This idea of bringing all the gangs under one coalition, this is fine as long as they respond to one leader or a group of leaders and agree to stop the violence and bloodshed and other criminal activities," said Lt. Bob Ruchhoff, head of the gang-information section.

"The downside is we're talking about a lot of hard-core criminals and they'll have a great organization for crime, that concerns the hell out of me," Ruchhoff said.

"The one encouraging word I'd like to say is please try to concentrate on getting these guys out of the negative activity," he said.

Court upholds Bendectin decision

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A federal appeals court Tuesday upheld a jury's finding in 1985 that the drug Bendectin did not cause birth defects in the children of more than 1,000 parents who had claimed it did.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the jury verdict and praised U.S. District Judge Carl Rubin's handling of the long and complex class action case.

Involved were 1,180 claims from across the country that Bendectin, an anti-nausea drug for pregnant women manufactured by Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals of Cincinnati, caused birth defects in children of pregnant women who took the drug.

The parents sought millions involved were 1,180 claims that Bendectin, an anti-nausea drug for pregnant women, caused birth defects in children of pregnant women who took the drug of dollars from Merrell Dow, charging negligence, breach of warranty and fraud in making and marketing the drug.

After three years of pre-trial investigation and a 22-day trial, a jury decided March 13, 1985, the parents did not prove Bendectin caused their children's birth defects.

The parents appealed on numerous issues, most of them involving Rubin's rulings throughout the trial. The appellate court reviewed Rubin's conduct of the case and found the complaints without merit.

"A careful examination of the trial record reveals the management of the trial by a judge who does not appear at any time to have sought consciously or unconsciously to have unfairly tipped the scales in favor of one side or the other," said the court.

One of Rubin's more controversial rulings was to ban children with visible birth defects from the courtroom.

Inoculations avoided with fake stamp

NEW YORK (UPI) — A former UNICEF official said Tuesday he fooled foreign officials for 25 years by marking his travel documents with a fake stamp from the "Sovereign Republic of Amnesia."

The phony but official-looking stamp, made to order in Singapore, was most useful in avoiding the inoculations often required by foreign countries, said Tarzie Vittachi in the September issue of Conde Nast Traveler.

Only once, in his hometown of Colombo, Sri Lanka, did anyone question the location of Amnesia, he said.

"Oh, it's one of those new African countries in the U.N.," he replied, adding, "next to Benin."

Advice To The Drug Worn

A weekly column answering alcohol and drug questions

It's no news to hear about alcohol related deaths or other tragedies and most people assume that only the alcoholics are the cause of these tragedies. Below is a reprint of an Ann Landers column that shows once again that alcohol can be deadly and have long lasting consequences even for the casual and infrequent drinker. Controversy continues around the issue of who really does have a problem with alcohol???

Alcohol ruins promising life

Dear Ann: I am a 21-year-old inmate at the Black River Correctional Center in Wisconsin serving a five-year sentence for reckless homicide (drunk driving). I want to share my story and offer a little advice.

I was your average young man from a good home and graduated from high school with honors including one for good citizenship. In my senior year I was awarded the Chick Evans Scholarship and went off to Indiana University, where I discovered alcohol.

In the summer of '87, I was involved in an accident that changed my life. After drinking too much, I ran head-on into another car and killed somebody. Although alcohol was responsible for this tragedy, the authorities agreed that I am not an alcoholic. This is my message, Ann: You don't have to be an alcoholic or even a frequent drinker to be involved in a tragic accident. In fact, I was a strong advocate of not drinking and driving. Many times I was designated driver. On those nights I never touched alcohol. The night of the accident I should have let someone else drive my car, but I was too childish and stubborn. I was sure I could handle it. (Some old story.)

Now I am paying for my foolishness by spending five years in prison. Of course the death I caused will be on my conscious forever.

-A Million Regrets in Wis.

Dear Regrets: Your letter is plenty different. A scholarship-winning college student, no alcoholic, in prison for killing a person while driving drunk. I hope other occasional celebrators will see themselves and learn from your experience. Thanks for the sermon. And good luck to you.

Bennett offers 'basic' ideas

Grade school kids need early lessons in English, fine arts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary William Bennett, an advocate of back-to-basics education, said Tuesday students through the eighth grade should have read "Great Expectations," studied algebra and physics and been exposed to American and world history.

As more than 32 million elementary school children prepare for a new school term, Bennett offered suggestions on what the more than 1.6 million elementary school teachers should be teaching.

The report, which he described as his last such study before he leaves office in mid-September, is a follow-up to his controversial study of secondary school curriculums released last year.

Unlike high school students who show below-average academic achievement, Bennett pointed to a government report that found achievement by elementary school students is "by some measures at its highest level in three decades."

But Bennett insisted "our children have a still insufficient command of basic subjects."

Bennett's report said students in kindergarten through eighth grade should be instructed in English, social studies, mathematics, science, fine arts and health or physical education. Foreign language, he said, should be the only optional subject for the youngest students.

Bennett's suggested reading list for kindergarten through third grade included "Grimm's Fairy Tales," "Cinderella," "Noah's Ark," "Behind the Back of the Mountain: Black Folktales from Southern Africa" and "Once in Puerto Rico."

And the reading list for seventh and eighth grade includes "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," "Great Expectations," "Diary of a Young Girl" and "To Kill a Mockingbird."

State to sell second series of tax-free college bonds

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The state is offering a second series of tax-exempt college savings bonds totaling $175 million beginning next week, state officials said Tuesday.

The state first offered $93 million worth of the bonds in January. Demand was triple what was available.

Individuals may place orders for the bond offer through banks and brokerage firms from Sept. 6 to 13. The bonds will offer the same features as the first college savings bond issue.

Income from the bonds is exempt from federal and state income taxes. Interest is compounded semi-annually and paid when the bond matures. The bonds are backed by the state's credit.

The bonds will be offered to the public at prices expected to range from $1,000 to $3,700 per bond, with a $5,000 value on maturity. Specific offering prices and yields are expected to be announced next week when the bonds are on the market.

They will mature on Aug. 1, 1993, through 2008, matching the expected college years for children currently 13 years or younger.

While the bonds are supposed to be used for college costs, the money paid at maturity can be used for any purpose, state officials said.

"UNDECIDED NOW" BUT NOT FOR LONG!

Although the fall term of 1988 has just begun and most of us have not had time yet to catch our breaths, we have to prepare ourselves for an unusual experience. We are about to have a collective bargaining election. The Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board, according to our sources, will be making an announcement regarding an election around mid-September. (Don't bet the farm on it, but we think the information is good.)

The time has come at last for us to make a decision. During the seventeen years I have been involved with this union and with the effort to win collective bargaining, I have been most frustrated not by those who oppose collective bargaining — the most brilliant ideas — Columbus's, Gandhi's, Christ's — had their opponents), but by those who cling to indecision.

Perhaps the most frustrating experience is to hear somebody say — "We need a union, we need collective bargaining, but it will never happen, or if it does, it won't do any good." The upshot is we have people who choose to vote against collective bargaining not because they oppose it but because they can't decide to take an affirmative stance.

If you are among the undecided, consider this. Why do you suppose our chancellor opposes collective bargaining? Why is Derek Bok, president of Harvard, once a supporter of unions, now opposed to them? We might answer these questions with a few more. Have you felt during your years as a faculty or A/P staff member that you shared a significant body of interest with the SIU president or chancellor? Do you believe that what is good for Lawrence Pettit is good for you? Are you prepared to accept Dr. Pettit's guidance on this matter?

The chancellor thinks collective bargaining would be bad (for him) not because of any first-hand experience that he has had, but simply because any change is likely to make a pleasant, high-paid job complicated and a little less powerful. For him the status quo is, understandably, desirable.

For us the status quo stinks. Our salaries lag way behind those, at peer institutions. The conditions under which we must work (and under which our students must study) have become very difficult — larger classes, less money for travel, equipment, and supplies, a library budget in decline. Almost any change will be for the better. Collective bargaining, now a fact at six of the twelve public universities in Illinois (all represented by IFT/AFT unions) and at most of the public universities and colleges in the northeast and midwest (with Florida, California, and Montana thrown in), represents the important change in campus governance needed to make this university the quality institution that we once envisioned it could become.

Much as the high-paid administrators may deplore such a change in the status quo, they may find in time that working with this professional union has many virtues that they never anticipated.

But their well-being is not at issue. Yours is. You will be casting a vote very soon. Join with the University Professionals, SIU's AFT affiliate, and let's make the change that will make the difference.

Elgin school board seeking tax hike, more classrooms

ELGIN (UPI) — The Board of Education in the state's third largest school district will ask voters in November to approve a tax increase, to deal with a $1.7 million deficit, and for bonds to add classrooms.

"We either get ready for the 90s, or be done in by the 90s," Robert Erickson, president of the U46 school board, told members Monday night prior to unanimous board approval for placing the two questions before voters.

One question will ask voters to approve an increase in the Operations Building Maintenance fund rate to deal with a projected deficit of $1.7 million. The increase of 29 cents per $100 assessed valuation would cost the owner of a home worth $100,000 another $87 annually, school officials said.

Richard Kayper, board vice president, said school budgets have been so tight that teachers were using their own money to buy supplies, a situation he described as "very embarrassing" and one he would like to see corrected.

The OBM fund is used to pay for such items as supplying, heating, lighting, cleaning and maintaining district buildings — including schools. Salaries are paid from a separate fund.

The board in the district third in student enrollment behind Chicago and Rockford, faced with a problem of supplying and maintaining existing schools, also faces the problem of where to put new students as the district at out 45 miles n.e. of Chicago continues to grow.

Jet's landing investigated

Focus of search is landing gear's maintenance history

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal investigators were focusing on the maintenance history of the landing gear that malfunctioned aboard a TWA jetliner, forcing the Boeing 727 to make a weekend belly-landing at O'Hare International Airport, it was reported Tuesday.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board were awaiting TWA maintenance records on a landing gear valve to determine why it malfunctioned, the Chicago Sun-Times said.

"We know we have a mechanical malfunction in that shuttle valve," said Carl Dinwitty, head of the NTSB's Chicago field office.

TWA Flight 524, carrying 62 passengers and six crew members, skidded to a halt on a foamed runway with crash trucks and ambulances standing by Saturday evening without its landing gear. Seven people were treated for minor injuries.

Investigators said Monday the crew tried unsuccessfully to "recycle the landing gear" on approach to Midway Airport on the city's South Side, where the flight — which originated in St. Louis — was to have landed. The plane was diverted to O'Hare, which has longer runways to accommodate such an emergency landing.

Jackson reaches truce with video distributor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Lawyers for Jesse Jackson and a home video entrepreneur reached a settlement Tuesday in Jackson's suit over the rights to his rousing address to the 1988 Democratic National Convention.

"An agreement in principle has been reached," said Henry Mason III, Jackson's lawyer. He declined to disclose specific terms of the agreement, which was to be finalized in the next 10 days.

"The final papers have not been signed yet, and I don't think it would be appropriate" to comment further, he said.

Mason and court officials would not say if the agreement would allow further distribution of the video, which was the subject of a temporary restraining order issued July 29 and a preliminary injunction granted Aug. 12 by U.S. District Judge James B. Zagel.

"That case has been settled. They called us this morning," Donald Walker, Zagel's clerk, confirmed. A hearing on a request for a permanent injunction in the case had been scheduled for Tuesday, but was cancelled.

The suit was filed by Jackson in July when MPI Home Video of Oak Forest, Ill., began distributing a 60-minute videotape of Jackson's address to the convention under the title, "Jesse Jackson: We Can Dream Again." The tape sold for $14.95.

Jackson sued MPI and its president, Walid Ali.

Pontiac prison in lockdown after 2 attacks

PONTIAC (UPI) — A lockdown and weapons search was underway in the maximum-security cells at Pontiac Correctional Center at Pontiac as a result of two separate attacks Monday on prison guards, authorities said.

One guard was treated at the prison hospital and released after he was punched several times, while the other did not require medical treatment, prison spokeswoman Dorothea Green said.

Corrections officials were conducting a shutdown of all cells.

Judge blocks Eastern Airlines firing of 4,000

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal judge blocked Eastern Airlines' plans Tuesday to fire 4,000 employees but let the financially ailing carrier drop 204 flights, pull out of 14 mostly western cities and slash service at its Kansas City hub effective today.

The airline — part of Frank Lorenzo's Texas Air Corp. empire — said the pullout will return Eastern to its traditional North-South routes east of the Mississippi River.

The Miami-based carrier, which lost $182 million in 1987 and $120.8 million in the first six months of 1988, laid off 3,500 workers in November. The latest round of firings were to coincide with its elimination of the routes.

Eastern's unions, which have been in a bitter decade-old battle with the airline, welcomed Tuesday's decision. They contend the firings and cutback of 204 flights were intended to pressure union members into accepting concessions, and warned a scaled-back Eastern would lose even more money.

In Miami, Eastern President Phil Bakes called U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker's decision "gravely wrong" and "unprecedented," and said the airline would appeal on the grounds Parker misinterpreted laws that regulate airlines and railroads.

On Friday, Parker granted a temporary injunction to the Air Line Pilots Association, the International Association of Machinists and the Transport Workers Union, which represents flight attendants, blocking the layoffs.

On July 22, Bakes announced a cutback to six daily departures from Kansas City effective Aug. 31 and the termination of service to Albuquerque, N.M.; Dallas; Las Vegas, Nev.; Minneapolis-St. Paul; Oklahoma City; Omaha, Neb.; Reno-Lake Tahoe, Nev.; San Antonio; San Diego; Tucson, Ariz.; Tulsa, Okla.; Fort de France, Martinique; Pointe-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe; and St. Lucia, West Indies.

Much of the western service was added after the airline industry was deregulated in the late 1970s.

In his 50-page opinion Tuesday, the judge said, "In light of the limited testimony presented... Eastern's right to effect schedule changes, flight reductions, and closure of the Kansas City hub, a threshold showing at least has been made that Eastern should be permitted to implement such changes without first bargaining with plaintiffs."

"Testimony also supports the conclusion that the proposed operational changes are motivated by sound financial reasons," he said.

Parker also urged Eastern to return to the bargaining table to negotiate the proposed firings — to avert a damaging strike.

"By furloughing 4,000 employees, Eastern claims it will save several million dollars a month," he said. "A lawful strike by the three unions would, however, (could impose) economic hardship to the airline, its employees, its customers and the general public.

Jonathan Cohen, a lawyer for the pilots, said the unions are prepared to bargain because "it's not our intent nor our interest to damage Eastern Airlines."

Eastern attorneys asked Parker to delay the effect of his ruling, but the judge did not act on the request.

The unions also contended Eastern's efforts to curb operations violate a federal law that forbids an airline from making major changes in wages, hours or working conditions during contract talks.

Center helps student decide major

By Jennifer Kibler
Student Writer

Sharon, who was in the second semester of her sophomore year, had not yet declared a major.

She had five classes, two of which were killers. She found herself putting off work for her hard classes to work on subjects she liked better. She also found herself with two D's after midterms.

Sharon's adviser suggested that she go to the Career Development Center for help. The counselor at the center sent her to workshops to help her stop procrastinating, to prepare for finals, to manage her time, and to decide on a major.

Visiting the Career Development Center can help in a number of ways if you are undecided or have questions about your major, James Scales, director of the center said.

"MANY FRESHMEN are on their own for the first time in their lives," Scales said.

"They are used to their parents asking if they have their homework done, or if they have studied for a test."

"When they go to college, no one is going to do that for them," said Scales.

"Although our staff can't handle the volume, I think all students should come in sometime in their first three semesters," Scales said.

First, there is an intake session to determine a student's specific need for counseling. Then as many sessions as are necessary are scheduled to help solve the student's career concerns,

The Career Development Center can help ... if you are undecided or have questions about your major.

Scales said. The center has tests and surveys to determine the student's aptitudes, interests, and personality traits.

THE CENTER also maintains the Career Resource Center, which has some of the best and most recent career and employment information available, Scales said.

Students can find out about jobs corresponding to various majors, specific tasks for job titles, and the employment outlook for over 23,000 occupations.

The Career Development Center also has computer software for students looking for a career or major.

DISCOVER explains the processes in a career search, and relates interests and abilities to careers. The program tells about the training and related majors of 458 occupations.

CSISE tells the student about career resources and SIU-C majors related to the career he wants.

"OUR STUDENTS students don't use the Career Development Center much. Engineering students usually know what they want to do when they come to us," said engineering advisement clerk, Diane Edgerton.

"They know from talking to professionals and other majors that main requirement for engineering is liking and doing well in math," she said.

"The Career Development Center cannot make decisions for you.

"We can only help explore career goals," Scales said.

WHEN THE student stops scheduling sessions, the center mails a follow-up questionnaire to check his progress, by asking about the student's major, his grade point average, and if further help is needed.

The center has five counselors, including the director, each of whom makes an average of about $32,000 a year, according to the 1987-1988 SIU Personnel Listing.

Last year's budget was about $193,000 according to the 1987-1988 Internal Budget for Operations. About $200 was spent on each student served.

Two years later Sharon, a marketing major, was ready to graduate and to begin her job search. This time her adviser sent her to the University Placement Center.

THE UNIVERSITY Placement Center prepares students who are about to enter the working world by teaching them resume writing, interviewing skills and other job search techniques.

The center started in 1949 as part of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

Chile decides on candidate

Protesters against former coup leader as people's choice

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The ruling military junta chose Gen. Augusto Pinochet as its candidate Tuesday for a plebiscite in which the 72-year-old leader, who has ruled Chile with an iron fist since a 1973 coup, will ask voters to keep him as president for eight more years.

Demonstrators took to the streets of the capital to protest the selection and were met by riot police using tear gas and water cannons. Police said 21 people were injured and 364 were detained in the anti-Pinochet demonstrations.

The announcement of Pinochet's selection was made by Air Force Gen. Enrique Montero after the four members of the junta, including Pinochet, reached "unanimous agreement" during a meeting at the Defense Ministry lasting one hour and 40 minutes.

Pinochet will be the only candidate in the plebiscite expected next month in which a "yes" vote would give him eight more years as president, and a "no" vote would lead to open elections in about a year. The most reliable polls show voters virtually split, with a large number undecided.

Pinochet assumed the presidency after the 1973 coup in which Salvador Allende, South America's first democratically elected Socialist president, died. The plebiscite will give Chileans their first opportunity in 15 years to vote on a president.

After the announcement, Pinochet appeared before a cheering crowd in the front of the presidential palace as scores of riot police kept away protesters.

Pinochet, smiling and waving, wore his military uniform. A fireworks display spelled out the word "SI," urging a vote of "yes" in the plebiscite.

Pinochet's speech was filled with anti-communist statements similar to those that have become standard fare in Pinochet's public addresses.

Pinochet went to a chapel in the presidential palace and prayed after the junta's meeting, an aide said.

Burma asks for help

RANGOON, Burma (UPI) — Burma's socialist government, besieged by a popular protest movement, appealed to civilians to help restore order Tuesday as persistent rumors swept Rangoon that military leaders were considering intervention.

Rangoon-based diplomats said large numbers of troops were camped on the outskirts of the city, leading students and other political activists to speculate a coup could be imminent.

"It could come in the next day or two," said one Western diplomat. "Several scenarios are being discussed."

He said one scenario was that hardliners within the armed forces would proclaim a military government, then promise to hold an election sometime in the future.

The diplomat said retired military strongman Gen. Ne Win, a 1962 coup leader who resigned as president and party leader in July citing months of unrest and an economy in tatters, was "still in charge" of the army and appeared to be waiting for the right moment to make his move.

Ne Win's successor, Sein Lwin, lasted 17 days in office, resigning amid widespread protests. Civilian Maung Maung then was appointed as president but the demonstrations have continued.

Diplomats said military authorities appeared to be trying to avoid any large-scale confrontations with anti-government demonstrators until Sept. 12, when an emergency congress of the Burma Socialist Program Party is scheduled to approve a referendum to end the one-party system.

They also said student leaders have recommended that people "soft peddle" demonstrations until the party congress in the interest of law and order.

A Western diplomat said several hundred demonstrators gathered near the American Embassy in downtown Rangoon Tuesday morning demanding "democracy now" and chanting "down with the party."

State-run Rangoon Radio said labor unrest had caused food shortages and "exorbitant prices."

Soldier killed in tank crash during drill

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — One American soldier was killed and four others wounded in a live firing exercise by tanks, the army announced Tuesday.

The Army's V Corps said the accident occurred shortly before midnight Monday at the Grafenwohr training area, about 30 miles northeast of Nuremberg, during simultaneous live firing by a platoon of M-1 Abrams tanks and M-3 Bradley tanks.

"Two of the Bradleys were inadvertently hit by rounds fired from an Abrams tank," the announcement said. "One of the Bradleys caught on fire."

Two soldiers, Pfc. Michael R. Williams and Pfc. Thomas S. Nelson, were evacuated to the Nuremberg hospital for treatment of first and second degree burns. The army said they were in stable condition.

SERVING TIME: Serving in the National Guard may not be chic for politicians, but it hasn't caused problems for Nebraska safety Mark Blazek.

"I didn't have to have anybody make any calls for me," said Blazek, referring to controversy surrounding vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle. "My father and myself joined up at the same time in January 1985."

Blazek, a former walk-on and native Nebraskan, enlisted in the National Guard for financial reasons. "I knew I could afford the first year (of school)," he said. "But after that I wasn't too sure what I'd do."

An Academic All-American, Blazek serves one weekend a month — except in the fall — and two weeks during the summer. He was recently promoted to E5 Sergeant.

"I was in for six years," said Cornhuskers Coach Tom Osborne, a veteran of the U.S. Army and National Guard, "and I left below that level."

Nevertheless, Blazek said he won't be pulling rank on Osborne.

BOWLED OVER: Orange Bowl representatives were in attendance at the Aug. 27 Kickoff Classic, won by Nebraska 23-14 over Texas A&M. "We're here to support the Big Eight," Orange Bowl Committee president Jim Barker said. Asked if the committee had a preference for a host team this Jan. 2, Barker replied: "Yeah, we're rooting for Nebraska. Oklahoma's been very good to us the past few years, but change of scenery is good every now and then."

g Ten rivals form alliance fight corruption by agents

LUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — and Michigan, two long Big Ten rivals, have i forces in the battle st unscrupulous sports s.

te Rep. William Schuck, umbus, announced plans -day to introduce ation to regulate agents. e same time in Detroit, a igan legislator, State Michael Bennane, was ncing a similar measure ns to introduce.

: two legislators hope bills will set the standard e nation in dealing with orts agent profession.

Schuck, flanked by Ohio State football coach John Cooper and two Columbus financial experts — Dan Clevenger and John Sestina, who worked with him on the legislation — said his bill would help athletes spot disreputable agents and eliminate the "bad apples" in the sports agent business.

"Professional athletes are particularly vulnerable to smooth-talking operators because they routinely earn large sums of money at a relatively young age," said Schuck.

Kim Schall (center), a freshman walk-on, trying to become the Salukis' defensive specialist, serves during Tuesday's practice. Schall is a defensive specialist.

Walk-on hoping for a spot

By Lisa Werna
Staff Writer

A defensive specialist on a volleyball team doesn't see much playing time. But when the match is on the line, the specialist will be one of the first off the bench.

Freshman walk-on Kim Schall is trying to be the defensive specialist on this season's team.

Schall realizes she probably will not dress for Thursday's opening match because only 12 players can be in uniform. But she said that she remains hopeful and is excited about the match.

Schall is the shortest player on the team at 5-foot-3, but that fact doesn't bother her in the least. "It's the story of my life," she said.

Although she was the setter on her high school team, she said she likes the challenge of defensive specialist.

Sonya Locke, the team's assistant coach, pointed out the importance of having an accomplished defensive specialist on the team.

"You know, the defensive specialist can be priceless," Locke said, "because digging and passing can be more important than hitting."

The defensive specialist brings enthusiasm in the game during an intense moment, Locke added.

As for Schall's performance so far, Locke was impressed.

"She packs a big game," Locke said. "She has some adjustments to make but she's doing a good job. She has a chance, she is aggressive enough."

Schall came to her first practice a few days after the other players had already arrived. Except for her former teammate from Mattoon, 5-11 freshman Stephanie Newman, Schall said she felt uneasy not knowing the other players.

"It was really weird (walking on late) because everyone already knew each other," Schall said.

So far, things are looking up for Schall.

"She's stuck with it," Locke said.

Olympic woes worry South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Confronted with a possible invasion of pickpockets, a malfunctioning scoreboard and gripes of inadequate practice space, Olympic officials are scurrying to prevent last-minute calamities at the Summer Gam.s.

While Sports Coordinator Moon Dong-hu hurriedly replaces equipment and appeases athletes' complaints, authorities are on the watch for 807 criminals sought by the Paris-based Interpol and the United States and West German branches of the international police organization.

Warned that the thieves may be headed to Seoul to cash in on spectators too entranced to protect their wallets, a police spokesman said: "Were on alert against the possibility that pickpockets might come here disguised as tourists."

Immigration officials at Kimpo International Airport have been told to check for any suspicious arrivals through computer screening.

Domestic pickpocketing has risen sharply in recent months, as police have been preoccupied with controlling student unrest and beefing up security at the Olympic sites in the event of possible terrorist attacks. But officials made it clear pickpockets have become another top priority.

Visitors from nations with diplomatic ties do not need entry visas to stay for less than 30 days during the Olympics.

Sports Briefs

Crouse suffers wrist injury

Senior nose tackle Brad Crouse suffered an injury to his wrist in the Salukis' football practice Tuesday. The extent of the injury is unknown coach Rick Rhoades said.

"It was fallen on during an inside drill," Rhoades said. "It may not be anything, but we are concerned right now."

Water polo to start season

The water polo club will have its first meet at the University of Missouri-Rolla Tournament on Sept. 9 and 10.

Coach Bill Donovan has a squad of 16, but is still looking for members. Interested persons should contact Donovan at 549-6152.

Boosters to hear Rhoades

The Saluki Boosters Club will meet noon Thursday at the Ramada Inn in Carbondale. First-year football coach Rick Rhoades will be the featured speaker.

Brown looks to set pace

Coach said junior will see results of offseason training

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Cathy Brown worked very hard the first two years she competed for the women's cross country team. Now in her third year she will start to see the results of her efforts, Coach Don DeNoon said.

"I feel she has worked very hard the past two years and this could be her year," DeNoon said.

Brown has had to endure physical problems which started when she made the transition from running at Tri-Valley High School to the college level.

"In high school we ran about 30-40 miles a week and then we had to adjust to running between 45 and 55 miles a week here at SIU," she said.

Brown started having problems because of the added running.

"The problems started out as shin splints, but toward the end of the season I suffered stress fractures in both legs," she said.

Brown, who also runs the 5,000- and 10,000-meters, missed most of the track season her freshman year because of her injuries.

"I went through a lot of therapy and it seemed like it took forever for the fractures to heal," she said.

Brown went through water therapy, which required her to run in water over her head.

"The reason we run in the water is to lessen the shock on our knees," she said. "We wear floats on devices which keep us above the bottom and then we run in place without touching our feet on the ground."

Brown's sophomore season was a trial. At one point she was six pounds overweight because of an inconsistent diet.

This year, Brown said she has trained hard over the summer and during the first couple of weeks back at school. She did additional exercises to strengthen her legs and added extra calcium to her diet. She also has moved in with a fellow teammate, senior Jane Schumacher, who serves as a mother hen.

"Yeah, it is nice having someone there who understands what I'm going through," Brown said. "Jane goes through the same daily routine I do, so when I take a nap in the afternoon, after getting up at 6:00 in the morning for early running practice, she knows what I'm feeling."

The small size of the cross country team also helps, especially after enduring 67 miles of training runs last week.

"We become real close because we go through so much together right from the start of the season," Brown said.

Brown said she will try to Cathy Brown, left, has overcome injuries to run in this, her junior season. Running alongside Brown is sophomore Michelle Sciano.

set a good example for the freshmen, especially at Saturday's meet because team captain Lisa Judiscak will be sidelined with a back injury.

Brown said she goes into each meet with different ideas of what she would like to accomplish, but one thing always remains the same and that's her relaxed, non-worried approach.

"Sure there is always a sense of nervous anticipation before a meet, but it is only natural," she said. "The main thing for me to do is not worry too much, to stay at a certain point where I know I'll run well."

Judiscak out with injury to back

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The women's cross country team will be opening its season without standout senior Lisa Judiscak.

Judiscak, the team's top runner, is suffering from a back injury which will keep her out of this weekend's triangular meet with Murray State and Eastern Illinois.

The extent of her injury has not yet been determined and testing over the next couple of days should tell exactly how long she will be out of the lineup.

Judiscak, a top four finisher in seven meets last fall and fourth on the all-time school cross country list, has missed practice the last ten days.

Coach Don DeNoon said he still feels he can field a winning team, and he is looking for solid performances from junior Rosanne Vincent and senior Jane Schumacher.

DeNoon said he has seven or eight runners who will be competitive without Judiscak, and he hopes these athletes will carry the rest of the team.

"This first meet is more of a feeling-out process to see where we stand as a team, and see how well the incoming freshmen can do," DeNoon said.

Other Salukis to look for are junior Cathy Brown, sophomore Lisa Schmelling and sophomore Dona Griffin.

Illinois State hungry for overdue league victory

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Illinois State is starved for a Gateway Conference victory The Redbirds' last was 38-28 over Indiana State late in 1986.

The only drought more severe is that being experienced by Midwestern farmers this year.

After the Redbirds went 0-6 in the conference and 3-7 overall, Illinois State said goodbye to its coach of seven years, Bob Otolski.

Then the school said hello to new head coach Jim Heacock.

Heacock came to Illinois State from Washington, where he was the defensive line coach for the past five seasons. Before that he was at Bowling Green and Muskingum, where he graduated in 1970.

Though Heacock is schooled in defense, his main task is the selection of a quarterback.

This is no easy chore, considering there are three candidates. They are junior incumbent Pat Williams, sophomore Brad Fuller and redshirt freshman Brian Rogers.

"Quarterback is an area that has to improve," Heacock said. "We have to get performance out of our quarterback to be successful. It's a three-man race between Fuller, Williams and Rogers, and we're looking for one of them to stand out."

The rest of the backfield is set. The combination of sophomore fullback Vic Northerm and senior tailback Ron Westmoreland is ready to

In the western movies, when it looked as if the horse was going to die, they shot it.

But this isn't the attitude Gov. James Thompson is taking toward the Hambletonian.

"If we have anything to do with it, Hambletonian will return to Du Quoin," Thompson said during a press conference Tuesday.

"The Hambletonian Society has a lot of sentiment for Du Quoin."

The Hambletonian, one of the races in the harness racing's triple crown, was run at Du Quoin until 1980, when it moved to the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

Attempts to get the race back to Du Quoin failed earlier this year, for, what Thompson has called, "the wrong reasons."

But there is still hope, Thompson said.

In a proposal discussed by Thompson and Meadowland officials during the Republican National Convention, a new Hambletonian event would be added for pacers.

Under the plan, while one race was being run at the Meadowlands, the other would be run at Du Quoin. The races would alternate sights each year.

The alternating sights proposal is very similar to the late proposal Illinois made to the Hambletonian Society in June. The society did not consider the late proposal in making their decision to keep the race in New Jersey.

"We thought the issue was over. If the Meadowlands wants to participate in a pacer-trot concept, that would be a major boost to our efforts to get the Hambletonian back to Du Quoin," Jim Skilbeck, an aide to the governor, said.

Thompson called the proposal a good opportunity for the Hambletonian Society to expand their influence.

"A lot of people would like that idea," he said.

Thompson said he would be sending Skilbeck to discuss the proposal with officials at the Meadowlands this fall.
