Hate chalk stirs up campus

Investigation into incident underway

RYAN VOYLES Daily Egyptlan

A police investigation is onng after a piece of racist grafnti written in chalk was discovered Thursday morning near Lawson

University spokesman Rod Sievers said campus police are investigating the situation, though he was unsure what charges could be filed.

The grafitti Kappa Kappa Kappa: whites only" was first reported to campus police around 10 a.m., said Sievers. He said it was quickly washed off and a police report was filed soon afterward.

Father Joseph Brown, director of Africana studies, said the racist graffiti troubled him.

"We don't know who put that on the ground ... but all I know is if the public space makes me feel uncomfortable, that's terrorism - I don't know what other way to put it," he said. "It's anonymous, threatening behavior that tells me I'm not safe and should not be comfortable."

Brown said though he has not personally come into contact with racial attitudes, he has noticed a rise in racism through online anonymity.

The meanness of language, and the hatefulness of the expressions has really disturbed me," he said. "So I haven't heard or seen signs or things written on the sidewalks and walls, but I do feel like the mean-spirited discourse in the Internet stuff. And that's the one area that has really bothered me for the last year or so."

Andy Morgan, coordinator of student development and adviser for fraternities and sororities, said there is no group named Kappa Kappa Kappa on campus. He said the entire greek community was embarrassed someone would portray their groups as racist.

"We were pretty embarrassed, thinking, "Who could do this?" Morgan said. "Someone could consider this a prank, but you could easily look at this as a hate crime, too.

Budget puts brakes on shuttle bus service to airport

While most students sleep, Romann Frost has already crossed cumpus to catch the earliest van service to take him to his aviation

Saluki Express Route 3, which traveled to Southern Illinois Airport in Murphysboro, was eliminated due to budget concerns, said Leri Stettler, director of the Student

"No student fee increase was aproved for this service; therefore we had to eliminate a route (route 3) to stay within the budget," she said. We made the choice to eliminate this route based on last year's rider6 Si inconvenient for them to get rid of our route because it is an important route for kids to get to dass. said Frost, a sophomore from Seattle studying aviation technology. "There should not be any reason necessary to eliminate the original route." But David NewMyer, chairper son of aviation management and flight, said there have been organizational issues with transporting aviation students to and from the npus, with vans leaving students behind and not getting students back in time for their other classes.

The (service) cuts were made over the summer," NewMyer sald. We (department of aviation management, flight and aviation technology) had no input. We want to make sure the students are serviced."

Frost said the substitute service is ridiculous. The main problem is the time gaps between departure and arrival timés, withholds him from making it to other classes on time.

Sigler: 'Parking an issue of convenience, not availability'

LAUREN LEONE Daily Egyptian

Todd Sigler said students should be able to find parking this early into the semester, though it may not be at the most convenient

There are 11,864 total parking spaces available, said Brian Mager, administrative assistant for traffic decal stickers are issued annually to faculty, residents, visitors and students, as previously reported by the Daily Egyptian in 2004.

But not all of these parking spaces are available to students. Mager said.

According to SIUC's Parking Division, there are 357 handi-capped spaces; 180 visitor only; 15-minute/loading/unload-

There are 2,224 blue parking spaces available to faculty and staff; 1,845 green parking spaces are available to only on-campus residences; 2,039 yellow parking are available for visitors, community and student Recreation Center users; 8,200 are available to red commuters. Although there are over 8,000 red spaces available, a little ower 6,500 red decals were sold in syffamse see PARKING | 4-3-3-3-4

2010, Mager said.

Red commuters have a higher umber of spaces available than the rest because those students are allowed to park in green and yellow spaces as well, he said.

SIUC's Parking Division also does not have a cutoff num stop selling decals, Mager said.

Since student organizations were outside Wednesday, night chalking, or drawing logos and messages on the sidewalk with chalk, someone probably took advantage of the available chalk, Morgan said.

"We're thinking people just left some pieces of chalk out, just a little bit, and someone found it and started writing with it," he said.

Other student organizations had graffiti on their chalk drawings as well, including material Morgan said was offensive to women, but the Kappa logo was the only racial one. He said it was the worst sort of attack he has seen since coming to the university 18 years ago as an undergraduate.

There's been some stuff before. but never something this preva-lent," Morgan said. "Some people might think it's a Joke, but I think it's a pretty cowardly way to show off your free speech."

Morgan said while he hopes this never happens again, the way the campus community came to gether against the racial graffiti was reassuring.

"Hopefully we can make this teachable lesson for everybody.

that even something like this can be hateful and hurtful to people, and that something we don't accept on this campus."

Brown said it is important not avoid the issue, but to stand strong and do something about it.;

"When we see what is disturbing, we don't just walk over it," he said. "We stop, we pay attention and we deal with it. That's what we're on this campus for - We confront these things and choose responses that are proactive, moral and concerned about those people who are the victim of it. We can all do something about it."

Veterans take advantage of federal money

Daily Egyptian

Chris Piha said more veterans are taking advantage of federal money provided by Chapter 33 of the G.I. Bill which allows veterans to get their tuition and fees paid in full.

Piha, Veterans Center courdinator, said this is the third semester student veterans at SIUC have had access to the federal money, which covers the veterans' tuition and fees. He said the number of students using Chapter 33 has been increasing with each semester.

In the fall 2009, 158 veterans received their Chapter 33 benefit. Last semester alone we had 186 veterans who received it, and I predict this semester to be much higher," Piha said.

Piha said the more student veterans who use Chapter 33, the more it helps the school budget.

He said when a student veteran uses the Illinois Veterans Grant, the school is stuck with the bill because it is an unfunded mandate, but if student veterans use Chapter 33, their tuition and fees are covered by Piha, who is a veteran himself, said starting college could be a stressful time for veterans on they get out of the military. He said the Veterans Center on campus has a serious commitment to helping veterans early on and throughout their college career.

The Veterans Center is completely staffed by veterans, which makes a difference in the way services are provided, Piha said. He said the center is used to primarily deal with only educational issues but since the program's expansion in the past year it can help a veteran with just about

PARKING

Based on the numbers, red commuters can park in 69 percent of the available space; residence with green decals can park in 17 percent of the available space; and yellow decals, which includes visitors and Recreation Center users, uses roughly 16 percent of available space; Most of yellow decal parking its available near Abe Martin Field and SIU Arena.

All across campus, there are high-demand, high-traffic areas, said Sigler, director of public safety.

"It's more of an issue of conve-

"It's more of an issue of convenience than availability," he said.

Mager said he believes there are no major difficulties with parking at the beginning of the semester. However, he said when students haven't taken time to look over their class schedule beforehand, it becomes an issue.

"They need to look out for not only for parking lots close by but also for nearby alternative locations," he said. "This is useful when a student is running late for class."

Thompson Point, where there is mainly staff, resident and handicap parking, is one of the more problematic areas for traffic violations, Sigler said.

Whittney Sinks, a senior from Harrisburg studying English, said it's nearly impossible to park at the parking garage near Faner Hall.

"I used to try to park on top of the parking garage but that's pretty much a dream," she said.

Designated blue lots, such as the one beside Lawson Hall, are other areas commonly violated, Sigler said.

"People with red decals think it's just a little bit closer than the one directly across the street," he said. "It's not four blocks away."

Sinks said parking in that lot is difficult during certain times of the day.

"I would come at least thirty minutes early and have to circle around multiple times just to find someone pulling out of their space," she said.

Sinks said despite having difficulty finding a parking spot, she has never received a warning or citation.

In the first week of the semester, campus police issue warnings, rather than citations, to students who park in lots with the wrong decal color, Sigler said. But that will change soon.

"As far as parking with the wrong color decal and getting by with only a warning, that period is over," Sigler said.

He said campus police try to give students a reasonable time period early in the semester, but hand out citations as soon as officers see students violating more often.

"We keep every citation, even warnings, on file and if someone continues to violate in the same area, we would know and start issuing tickets," Sigler said.

Campus police have a low tolerance for violators in certain parking areas such as assigned, restricted and handicapped, he said.

"Even in the first week of the semester, there's no reason to allow people to violate those areas," he said. "And they may end up with a citation. We want people to comply on their own, but unfortunately it's the nature of the beast."

Sigler said he believes the parking dilemma is a matter of convenience.

There's a belief there's a parking problem when in reality, it could be there are some places on campus where parking is more limited, he said. "If you don't find a space there, it just means you may have to park further away."

Sean Hartin, a freshman from Champaign studying aviation technology and management, said he does not have much other means to get to the airport. "This is kind of inconvenient for me because I want to get to campus much sooner." Hartin said. "It's going to be more work."

Out of the 340 students attending the airport daily, more than 10 percent of those students depend on transit service, NewMyer said. Roughly 39 students have used the service consistently, he said.

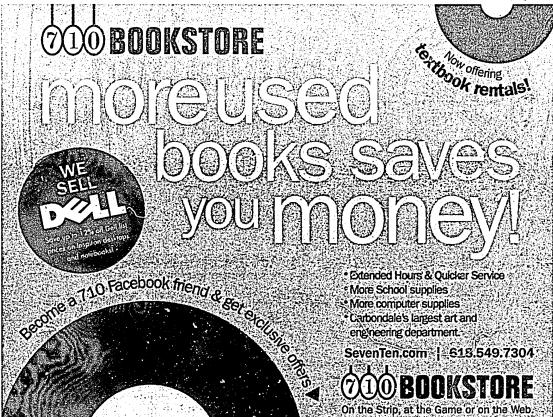

Larry Dietz, vice chancellor of student affairs, and Don Rice, interim provost, have offered limited funding for a van service to get the semester started until the magnitude of the issue is known.

"We are not planning to reinstate this year due to budget cuts in the Saluki Transit program," Dietz said. "We also hope to include a modest increase in the Mass Transit fee for next year to accommodate the demand. With a modest increase in the Mass Transit fee and based upon demand, a bus could be provided next year."

As the Tech Center is built and with more students utilizing that facility, it is likely that the demand will increase and the school will do their best to accommodate new demand if the funding is approved, said Dietz.

"(The route) should be reinstated and they should find other unnecessary things they can get rid of because this is very important to the aviation students," Frost said.

Bus, budget prioritization a must at SIUC

SENIOR STUDYING AVIATION TECHNOLOGY

It may puzzle some minds to see the enrollment at SIUC continue to decline while our competing neighbors taunt us with record-breaking numbers in that department. With all the anti-administration sentiments that have filled the past couple of isover of the DF, this statistic is not that alarming and might, in fact, be predictable, as SIUC seem to have forgotten about one of its key constituents - the students.

I absolutely agree with the writer of the guest column in Wednesday's issue, that we students are the ones ultimately affected by sharp budget cuts, regardless of what anyone has said to

While the image of this university is being masqueraded by a $83 million project already in progress, what I have to say may seem pale in comparison. It may even be so petty that most officials at SIUC may not even be aware of this concern.

But to me, and more than 40 other students distressed by it, this is more newsworthy than the suspense of whether an elite few can get to drink beer at the football game.

I am talking of course about the drastic rescheduling of the Saluki Express, specifically the elimination of Route 3 that many of us aviation students have depended on for years to get to classes at Southern Illinois Airport, which is about a 20-minute drive

Unsurprisingly, when I inquired, cuts in the budget were the excuse given for this elimination.

With more than 300 students between the two departments of Aviation Technologies and Aviation Management and Flight, each paying at least $48 or more as the Mass Transit Fee - depending on if you are out-ofstate or international - students pay more than $14,400 each semester for transportation that they are not get-

All the while, students who are not en registered at SIUC can take hourly bus rides to John A. Logan College. After several students approached the chair of the Department of Aviation Technologies, who was not even informed of the cancellation, he, with the help of the dean of College of Applied Sciences and Arts, partially reinstated the transportation to the airport three times daily with just two stops: Mae-Smith Hall and the airport.

Although this is certainly better than nothing, this is impractical and definitely unfair to those students with aviation majors who live at places like Thompson Point as well as those who moved into off-campus apartments to get closer to the bus stops on the route ules, students may even need to take the bus more than three hours in advance of their class and may need to wait up to four hours after the class ends — a prime example of SIUC taking care of its students.

Personally, I think that it is a shame that we do not live in the glory days of SIU, because somehow I don't think that students from 40 years ago would have allowed something like this to be determined, in secrecy, by people who never have to take the bus. At this point, I don't know what's more insultee the fact that our own school seems to have foreotten about us, or the fact that new stops on the bus route, such as Buffalo Wild Wings, were deemed more important than our classes.

Student services, area resources make SIUC home

ROSEMARY E. SIMMONS COUNSELING CENTER DIRECTOR

The number of years you've attended this university is not what determines if SIUC feels like home.

Whether you're a freshman or a senior, the major factor that makes SIUC home, versus an institution at which you are receiving your degree, is a sense of belonging. A primary factor that determines if students stay at their university, transfer or drop out is having a personal connection with at least one other person. Students who have found their niche stay. Students who believe they don't fit in are more likely to leave.

So, how do you begin to feel like you belong? This challenge will be different for each of you.

Factors such as where you came from, personality style and cultural background will all influ your approach in making SIUC our home.

The most important principle in creating that sense of belong is to keep a balance of the familiar while taking risks to take advantage of new opportunities.

Continue to be involved in activities that are meaningful to you. Keeping with familiar routines s maintain a sense of continuity in life, helping us feel safe and secure. We need that feeling of safety to learn and to have the energy to try new experiences.

Keep in touch with your closest friends and family members. Share with them your excitement, anxiety and new experiences.

Oil spill highlights bigger ocean policy issues, dangers

ROSERT RICHMOND

The recent tragedy in the Gulf of Mexico has focused our nation's attention on the challenge of balancing competing uses of our marine resources. The threat from oil spills, however, is just one of the problems our oceans face today.

Fortunately, July 19, President Barack Obama recently signed an executive order establishing a new unified national ocean policy. This new national policy has the potential to dramatically improve the state of our oceans - providing us with an invaluable tool, the National Ocean Council, to untangle the maze of laws and regulations that govern everything from reefs to offshore energy

Coral reefs, among our world's most striking natural treasures, pro-vide a prime example. Over the last 36 years I have witnessed their extensive degradation, as pollution, global warming and destructive fishing practices continue to take a tremendous toll on these fragile ecosystems and the people who depend on them.

These reefs provide economic benefits for many U.S. communities, valued at hundreds of millions of dollars each year. Nearly half of all federally managed fish populations depend on coral reefs and adjacent habitats for a part of their life cycles.

federal legislation. Existing though, is largely outdated."

Our oceans are managed by more than 140 laws and 20 agencies, in a disjointed system with often conflicting goals. An integrated national ocean policy will not dean up our oceans or restore depleted resources overnight, but it is a key step forward.

Reefs and other marine ecosysns cannot truly be managed. Fish, corals and other sea creatures will do what their genetics dictate. We can, however strive to manage human activitles responsible for degrading and devastating marine ecosystems.

Obama's plan presents an invaluable insurance policy on the future health of our oceans with the charge to make decisions on the use of our limited marine resources based on the best available biological, physical, economic and social sciences. Today's mistakes will only increase the hardships felt tomorrow and become more costly to fix the longer we wait.

Pakistani Taliban hint at possible attacks on foreign flood relief workers

The Associated Press

MIR ALI, Pakistan — The Taliban hinted Thursday they may launch attacks against foreigners helping Pakistan respond to the worst floods in the country's history, saying their presence was "unacceptable." The U.N. said it would not be deterred by violent threats.

The militant group has attacked aid workers in the country before, and an outbreak of violence could complicate a relief effort that has already struggled to reach the 8 million people who are in need of emergency assistance.

Pakistani Taliban spokesman Azam Tariq claimed the U.S. and other countries that have pledged support are not really focused on providing aid to flood victims but had other motives he did not specify.

Behind the scenes they have certain intentions, but on the face they are talking of relief and help. Turiq told The Associated Press by telephone from an undisclosed location. "No relief is reaching the affected people, and when the victims are not receiving help, then this horde of foreigners is not acceptable to us at all."

 He strongly hinted that the militants could resort to violence, saying "when we say something is unacceptable to us, one can draw one's own conclusion."

1 in 10 homeowners with a mortgage is at risk of foreclosure

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The jobs crisis is putting more Americans at risk of losing their homes.

One in 10 households has missed at least one mortgage payment, and more than 2 million homes have been repossessed since the recession began. Few expect the outlook to improve until companies start to hire steadily again and layoffs ease

And while there was some good news Thursday — a modest decrease in the number of Americans filing for jobless benefits for the first time in a month — the figure is still too high to bring down the unemployment rate.

So the housing crisis goes on, even though the average rate on a 30-year mortgage fell again this week to an all-time low of 4.36 percent.

"Ultimately, the housing story, whether it is delinquencies, homes sales or housing starts, is an employment story," said Jay Brinkmann, the top economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association.

FDA says salmonella found in feed sold to both farms at center of massive recall

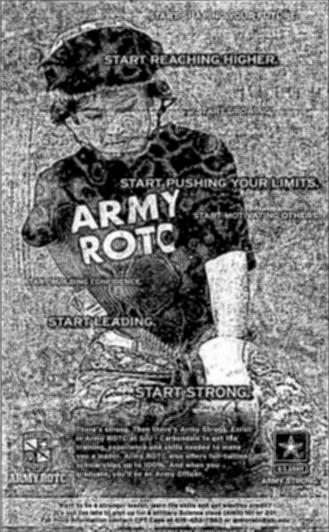

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Food and Drug Administration officials say they have found positive samples of salmondla that link two lova farms to a massive egg recall.

FDA officials said Thursday that investigators found salmonella in chicken feed at Wright County Egg that was used by that farm and also Hillandale Farms. They also found additional samples of salmonella in other locations at Wright County Egg. More than 550 million eggs from the two farms were recalled this month after they were linked to salmonella poisoning in several states.

Also Thursday, the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said that there could now be as many as 1,470 illnesses linked to the outbreak, about 200 more than previously thought.

Sherri McGarry of the FDA's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition said the salmonella found at Wright County Egg matches the fingerprint of the salmonella found in many of those who were sickened. She said the tests indicate that contaminated feed is a source of the outbreak but possibly not the only source.

Attacks in North Afghan raise fears that Taliban are expanding beyond southern strongholds

The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan. — Eight Afghan police gunned down at a checkpoint. Campaign workers kidnapped. Spanish trainers shot dead on their base.

A spurt of violence this week in provinces far from the Talibanis main southern strongholds suggests the insurgency is spreading, even as the top U.S. commander insists the coalition has reversed the militants' momentum in key areas of the ethnic Pashtun south where he Islamict movement was born. Attacks in the north and west of Attacks in the north and west of the country — though not militarly significant — demonstrate that the Taliban are becoming a threat across wide areas of Afghanistan even as the United States and its partners mount a major effort to turn the tide of the nearly 9-yearold war in the south.

The latest example occurred Thursday when about a dozen gunmen stormed a police checkpoint at the entrance to the city of Kunduz, about 150 mlles (240 kilometers) north of the Afghan capital, Kabul. Eight policemen were killed, provinctal police chief Abdul Raziq Yaqoubi said.

Also Thursday, a candidate in next month's parliamentary elections said 10 of her campaign workers were kidnapped while traveling in the northwestern province of Herat, 450 miles (725 kilometers) west of the capital.

WASHINGTON — Glenn leek says it's just a coincidence his testoring Honor rally on Saturday at he Lincoln Memorial will take place in the anniversary and at the site of dartin. Luther King Jr.'s famous "I faw a Dream speech. But he's hardy apologizing for the connection.

This is going to be a moment that ou'll never be able to paint people as atters, racists, none of it, he says of he event featuring Sarah, Palin and ther conservative political and cultural figures. This is a moment, quite monetly, that I think we redaim the left lights movement.

Some civil rights veterans are skeptical.

"When we heard about Glenn Beck, it was puzzling," the Rev. Al Sharpton said. "Because if you read Dr. King's speech, it just doesn't gel with what Mr. Beck or Mrs. Palin are representing."

Beck, a popular figure among tea party activists and a polarizing Fox News Channel personality, is headlining the event; and Palin, the 2008. Republican vice presidential nomlines and a potential 2012 president carifulate, will be a prominent speaker. But Beck told his television guidence again on Thursday that it's not about politics.

Salukis to get new | What's a tradition worth? facilities next year

NICK JOHNSON Daily Egyptian

Though a track wasn't included in the plans for Saluki Stadium, Athletic Director Mario Moccia said the university's track and field teams may not have to wait long for new facilities

The men's and women's track teams will use McAndrew Stadium this season before being moved to a new complex next year, Moccia said

Saluki Stadium, the new home of Saluki football, was part of the university's $83 million Saluki Way project. The project also includes renovations to the arena and construction of multiple student services buildings.

Head Track Coach Connie Price-Smith said not having a track in Saluki Stadium won't adversely affect her teams.

We are looking forward to having a new facility. Price-Smith said. "We don't have Demolition of McAndrew Stadium will begin in December with the removal of the grand stands, with plans for the rest of the facility coming down soon after, Moccia said. Until then the stadium, which had been the home of the football team since 1938, will also be used by the marching band and as a recreation sports area, he said.

Moccia said there are no official land use plans yet for the McAndrew site, but possibilities include an Alumni Center or other sports facility.

Tom Weber, director of media services, said the site is a valuable piece of real estate in the heart of campus.

It will continue to be for whatever foundation is built," Weber said.

Big Ten says $10 million

The Associated Press

Despite some evidence to the contrary, the guys who run college football can count

So although there will be 12 teams in the Big Ten Conference by 2012 - and 10 teams in the Big 12 Conference, for that matter - don't be distracted. That's not the kind of math they get worked up over.

What they worry about histead is how many move zeros can squeeze onto the TV rights checks. That's the reason college football looks like a garage sale at the State game, but they're wrong.

It's a rite of fall in these parts, a game that's been played more than 100 times, usually as the culmination of the regular season and often with something beyond civic pride on the line. But making it just like any other game on any other fall weekend helps clear the way for realignment and a championship game in the Big Ten — which, with a full house on hand and a healthier TV sports market. could add something like $10 million a year to the conference's bottom line.

We've had those debates, It's a good one," Commissioner Jim Delany told the Chicago Tribune earlier this week. "The question is whether you want to confine a game that's one of the greatest rivalries of all time to a divisional game."

The answer is almost certainly yes, though Delany won't say so yet.

We have not discussed this with our TV partners," he said.

Freshmen, transfers in spotlight as Salukis take on tough conference

Daily Egyptian

Five new faces will join this season's men's golf team, yet coach Leroy Newton said he is confident his team will finish in the top five for most of his tournaments.

He said he thinks his incoming players, which include three transfers from junior colleges, will start off slow but quickly improve to put the Salukis in contention for the Missouri Valley Conference champlotship. Newton said he sees Southern as one of the top teams in the MVC alongside Wichita State, Missouri State and Drake.

Junior college standout David Griffin, a senior, will help lead the Salukis, as they won't be returning any seniors of their own.

Newton said sophomores Jake Erickson and Jeffrey Miller had good summers in Illinois Golf Association tournaments and has high expectations for them to play better than last season.

Junior Richie Williams, of Gulfort, Miss., looks to be one of the players to have an immediate impact on the team, Newton said. He sald-he also expects junior Jared Harp, of Benton, to shoot well this ence) the last five out of six or seven years. They've always got a good team," Newton said.

Miller said lie shot only a couple of good scores last season but played and learned more about golf during the summer. He said former senior Patrick Schell, who works at Elickory Ridge Golf Course, helped him with his putting and straight shots.

A member of the man's golf team misses a put Feb. 26 at Hickory Ridge Golf Course in Carbondale. The team will compete Sept. 13 in the Wasioto Winds Kick-off Tournament in Pineville, Ky. The Salukis have three returning and five new members this season.

They've probably won (conference) the last five out of six or seven years. They've always got a good team.

This summer I actually lost a uple of golf tournaments because of bad decisions. That's what it takes to learn how to play better golf, to have something dramatic to happen to you." Miller said.

Newton said the team would tournament they played had every golfer been consistent. Aside from Griffin, George Tate, Richie Williams and Jared Harp should be key players on this season's team.

Tate said he focuses on his game

it only leads to a bad game.

You just have to stay calm beuse you can't play golf when you're frustrated," he sald

Tate and Miller said they are anxpionship this sesson and hopefully qualify for the NCAA regionals.

"Last year, we were close. (We've) been knocking on the door for a while. I would love to win this year one swing at a time and doesn't because I know it'd be a huge step think long about bad shots because ... for our golf team and for SIU as far as men's golf goes," Tate said.

"It made me feel like America was safer."

Southern's international swimmers said they knew little about Carbondale but each had his or her own likes about the town.

Castro said she enjoys Carbondale's small on atmosphere, and that it isn't as dangerous to live in as parts of Brazil.

Silveira said she likes the flexibility she has in Carbondole with her class and practice schedule. She said everything she needs is accessible in town and everyone is friendly.

"I think the best thing (is) you can walk verywhere in (Carbondale). That's one thing I wasn't used to because I lived in a big city in Brazil," Madeira said.

Perez said he likes that residents show support at swim team meets and other sporting

Southern's international swimmers said they've been to many American cities and, for the most part, the U.S. lived up to their econceived notions.

Madeira and Perez both said their favorite U.S. city is Chicago. Madeira visits his sister in Chicago for Thanksgiving each year.

The only bad thing about Chicago is the weather," he said.

After visiting Los Angeles, Castro said it was her favorite American city.

Though they quickly acdimated to American hure in general, the internation! swimmers all agreed the language barrier was the most difficult

The hardest thing was language in the be-ginning because when I first came here I didn't speak English very well," Silveira said.

GOLF

The Rushing sisters and Jenny Bernhardt are the three newcomers to the team. They will join Alisha Matthews, Meg Gilley, Alex

Anderson, Shaina Rennegarbe and Amber Philips. Matthews led the 2009-10 team with a stroke average of 79 and recorded three top-ten finishes. Anderson, a senior from Swansea, was the only upperclassman last

"Last year we had a rebuilding year. We didn't have any seniors," Daugherty said.

Daugherty, who has been the women's olf coach for 25 seasons, said this is the deepest the team has been in her time as coach. She said the best team she led was the 2007 Missouri Valley Conference champions. The 2007 team consisted of six players who could carry the load on any given day, Daugherty said. This year, she said there's eight players like that.

The players know they have a chance of furning around the program's reputation, Matthews said.

Matthews said the Salukis will not have any ressure from teams in the conference because the other teams don't think SIU can do much. The team has to prove itself, she said.

We know we can do it. We've just fallen short the last two years," Matthews said. "(With a) new team, new people, I think there's going to be a lot of good things seen from us this year."

Seas own Landon Donovan, Major League Soccer has also bn and Rafael Marquez to help boost the popularity of the spo egin competing with the other major sports leagues?

Unertains love their football and baseball, so I know no sport will ever ace those. However, by bringing in higher-profile players like Henry Akrquez, and with an even stronger showing from team USA at the World Cup. I do believe it's possible for our home-grown league to no into more and more livide or come.

NICK JOHNSON: Injohnson@dailyegyptlan.com

Screen's a fun sport to play, but it is incredibly boring to yearth. I can tell you one soccer player's name and wouldn't care if I forgot it. Some childhood games should stay on the playground, and soccer players should forget about million dollar professional contracts. Soccer will never touch hockey, much less one of the big three.

BRANDON LACHANCE

Not quite yet. There are lots of youth programs and Little league soccer teams that help promote the sport. However, football, baskethall and baseball will continue to have a grasp over the majority of the American public.

International athletes adjust

Maze

BRANDON COLEMAN Daily Egyptian

For most people living in an international country, being surrounded by people with different cultural values would warrant a difficult process of acclimation.

But five SIU swimmers from Brazil, Egypt and Mexico said they didn't experience culture shock.

Freshmen Isabela Castro and Luisa Silveira, sophomores Marco Madeira and Mazen Aziz, and junior Cesar Perez have been in the United States for more than a year. Each one said he or she noticed some cultural differences between the U.S. and their home countries, but not enough to make them feel uncomfortable.

"In Brazil when we say hello, we kiss twice but here everybody shakes hands," Castro said. "People are a little bit different. We Brazilians like touching and hugging."

Silveira, also of Brazil, said peoples' behaviors and greetings in the US were odd.

All five athletes said he or she was familiar with American customs based on media feeds, visits to friends and family who live here, as well as through exchange student programs. Aziz, of Egypt, said he met with head swim coach Rick Walker during a competition he had in Rome last year.

Madeira, of Brazil, visited Carbondale on multiple occasions to see his sister Isabel Madeira who swam for 51U from 2005 to 2009.

"I came here twice before I came to college to visit my sister so (America) wasn't a big shock for me. Madeira said.

Perez, of Mexico, said Southern's high number of international students helps negate any culture shock feelings. In Brazil when we say hello, we kiss twice, but here everybody shakes hands.

- Isabela Castro freshman

Madeira said the concept of sports and college, more importantly swimming as a team sport, intrigued him. He said in Brazil academies and athletics are completely separate.

Perez and Aziz said the same was true in their countries.

"In Mexico, swimming for me is more of an Individual sport," Perez said. Aziz said his grade point average is much higher in the U.S. as opposed to Egypt because sports and academics are combined here.

Castro said she was excited that her exchange family in Utah didn't lock the doors and windows every night.

Twins plan to rush to top of rankings

BRANDON LACHANCE Daily Egyptian

With help from freshmen twins, the women's golf team plans to move up the conference rankings after finishing seventh in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament last spring.

the Salukis. Head Coach Dlane Daugherty said the Rushings seem to be a good fit with the talented nucleus of last ieeeson's team, which finished in the top five just once in nine tournaments. — Ashleigh Rushing freshman The sisters have swung clubs ogether for 10 years and said

The sisters have swung clubs together for 10 years and said they are excited to be in maroon collared shirts. Ashleigh Ruthling said golding with her sister has added something special at each stage of golf tournaments, from childhood to high school. She said it is weird when Cassle and her have similar scores or make the same kind of shot after they discuss their previous rounds.

Daugherty said she's had trouble telling the Rushings apart but is doing better the more she sees them.

"Ashleigh is supposed to be the one who likes pink, but Cassle shows up wearing pink, so they play mind games with us," Daugherty said.

Daugherty said she will play with the Rushings on Saturday to see if differences in their golf game will help her determine who is who
