F-Senate to review new tenure rules

Only six days after the adoption of new tenure rules, the Faculty Senate on Tuesday directed a committee to propose new amendments, more in line with its original guidelines.

In a resolution approved 15 to 7, the senate agreed that the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee should review the tenure document okayed by the Board of Trustees last Thursday.

Joann Paine, associate professor in political science, said the group's recommendations should match the Faculty Senate's tenure policy approved last year.

Paine, who introduced the motion, said teachers "see too many uncertainties" in the new document, which the board adopted 4 to 3.

Under the new rules:

—Only assistant, associate and full professors are eligible for tenure. The senate had voted to allow instructors to receive tenure.

—The vice president for academic affairs and research must review all recommendations for tenure made by an academic dean. The senate's document prohibited the vice president from denying tenure to teachers approved by their dean.

—A teacher's tenure rests in their academic units, rather than in the University as a whole.

—All teachers seeking tenure must do teaching, research and service.

The senate representative to the committee which proposed the final set of rules for SIU voted against the resolution, but objected to system-wide guidelines on tenure the board also approved.

David Bateman, associate professor in administrative sciences and the representative, said the umbrella policy was "administrative gobbledegook and a waste of taxpayers' money."

Bateman noted that the system-wide rules, which were written by the board staff, received no faculty input.

In other action at the last meeting of the year, the senate voted to re-open debate on a proposed library policy which cuts the loan period of periodicals from one week to three days, with one renewal.

The senate last month endorsed the rule by a vote of 5 to 4, with one abstention, but, Marvin Kleinau, assistant professor in speech, said a quorum was not present.

The issue will be discussed at the next meeting Jan. 17, along with a recommended document on promotion standards. An open hearing on the document will also be held Feb. 21.

The senate also: —Recommended James Sullivan, professor in vocational education studies, as a member of the search committee for an assistant to Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research.

The position was left vacant when Don Wilson accepted the job as SIU budget director.

Capitol chatter

radio and television, were among those who chatted with Percy, who was in town Saturday to attend the coal conference.

Incumbents head hopefuls in primary ballot filing

The State Board of Elections has released the names of candidates filing for placement on the 1978 primary ballot and, in Southern Illinois, incumbents top the list.

Four legislators from the 58th District have filed for re-election, and three incumbents from the 59th district have also applied for a place on the 1978 primary ballot.

Sen. Kenneth Buzbee, D-Carbondale, leads the list of incumbents from the 58th District, which includes Carbondale and Jackson County.

Incumbent state representatives Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, Vincent Birchler, D-Chester, and Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, have also filed for re-election to their 58th District seats.

In the 59th District, State Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, and representatives William Harris, D-Marion, and Robert Winchester, R-Rosiclare, filed for re-election Monday from the district, which includes Williamson County and Marion.

Other candidates seeking election in the 59th District include George Williams, a Marion Republican who, if nominated will oppose Johns; Democratic State representative candidates James Rea of Christopher, Ronald House of Benton; Wayne Samuels of Sesser, and William Grindle of Herrin; and Republicans James Crommenes and Angus Mack Gaither of Metropolis.

Candidates are required by law to file petitions for placement on the primary ballot before 5 p.m. Dec. 19. The 1978 primary will be held March 21.

Senate candidates chosen in the primary will represent their party in November general elections. Candidates for the Illinois House are chosen in the primary, with the two top vote-getters from each district receiving a place on the November ballot.

Corps lists area dams 'high hazard'

By John Jenkins
Staff Writer

The dams across Kinkaid and Cedar Lakes are ranked second and eleventh respectively on a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers list of the 15 most potentially hazardous dams in Illinois.

According to Ferd Stauch, public affairs officer for the corps Chicago office, all 15 dams are classified "high hazard." This doesn't mean the dams aren't safe, but it does mean if the dams failed, loss of life would probably occur, he said.

Kinkaid Lake is about four miles west of Murphysboro while Cedar Lake, the city's water supply, is about five miles south of Carbondale.

Tom Wells, an engineer for the City of Carbondale, said he was unaware that the Cedar Lake dam was on the list. "I think the dam is in good condition," Wells said. There is some surface erosion on the dam's surface, but it's worked on annually and the condition is improving, he added.

The city's engineers check the dam about once every two months, Wells said. Lake manager Tom Harris, said he is out there about twice a week.

Inspection of the first 15 dams is scheduled to begin Wednesday, according to Stauch and Andy Blystra, a corps engineer who will be on the inspection team.

The 15 dams were chosen because of their size and their close proximity to a populated area, Stauch said.

Stauch said eventually 936 dams in the state that are over 15 feet in height or that hold back at least 50 acre-feet of water will be inspected.

An acre-foot is the amount of water it takes to cover an acre of land one foot deep.

The inspection team will be made up of people from the corps and the Illinois Division of Waterways, Stauch explained. The team will include a hydrology engineer, a geologist and design and construction engineers.

Stauch said the team will start at Dunlap Lake Dam which is one mile upstream of Edwardsville.

The team will review design and construction data that's available on each dam as well as checking for seepage, leaks, cracks, erosion problems, trees or bushes growing on the dams' faces and damaged or inadequate spillways, according to Blystra. All of these are a sign of poor maintenance or potential weakness.

Blystra said one of the problems the corps is having is that they don't know how many high hazard dams are in Illinois. The list of 936 dams was made with the help of U.S. Geological survey maps and some of them are 25 years old.

"Part of the inspection program is to get the public involved," Blystra said. The public can help the corps find some of the dams that are in bad shape, he said.

Bruce Barker, chief of the Bureau of Program Development for the Illinois Division of Waterways, said that one of the problems involving dam safety is that a dam might have been adequate for an area when it was built but isn't safe now because of changes in conditions downstream.

An example of this would be a dam built in an area that didn't have people living downstream, Barker said. Since there wasn't anything downstream to be destroyed there wasn't a need to build the safest dam possible, he added.

Other major problems Barker said are dams with inadequate spillways. If the spillway on an earthen dam couldn't handle the flood of water during a storm, it could cause the water to flow over the top of the dam.

Dams usually fail when this happens, Barker said.

Federally owned dams won't be included in this inspection because they receive periodic inspections regularly, Stauch explained.

There are three federally owned dams in the area, Crab Orchard Dam, Little Grassy Dam and the Devils Kitchen Dam. Devils Kitchen and Crab Orchard dams are rated high hazard and Carbondale is the town that is closest downstream.

These dams are in good shape according to Jerry Uptake, assistant project manager at the Crab Orchard Wildlife refuge, but the emergency drains on Crab Orchard and Little Grassy are inoperable. They could be fixed in about a week if there was an emergency and the lake had to be drained, Uptake said.

The 15 dams to be inspected include: Dunlap Lake Dam, Madison County; Kinkaid Lake, Jackson County; Pickneyville Reservoir, Perry County; Raccoon Lake, Marion County; Fast Fork Lake, Richland County; Marion Lake, Morgan County; Mauvaise Terre Lake, Morgan County; Petersburg Lake, Menard County; Vermillion Lake, Vermillion County; Spoon Lake, Knox County; Cedar Lake, Jackson County; Lake Decatur, Macon County; Holiday Shore Lake, Madison County; Lackport Dam, Will County and Apple Canyon Lake, Jo Davies County.

Lottery to be held at Mall

SPRINGFIELD. — The weekly drawing of the Illinois State Lottery Goldstrike and $1,000,000 Bonanza games will be held at the University Mall at 12 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 15. The Mall will be the 29th stop on the Lottery Showmobile tour this year, which has been bringing weekly drawings to cities throughout Illinois.

Richard W. Carlson, Illinois State Lottery superintendent, said that Chicago TV personality Bob Hale will pick the weekly set of four 2-digit numbers in Gold Strike and the winning numbers and colors for the 50-cent $1,000,000 Bonanza game.

In the weekly Gold Strike drawing, four sets of 2-digit numbers are selected, which the player tries to match with five 2-digit numbers printed on the right half of the Gold Strike ticket. Players matching any two of the four 2-digit numbers win $2, while those matching three numbers win $20 and people matching all four 2-digit numbers win $4,000.

The Weekly 50-cent Bonanza game drawings of numbers and colors identify winners of up to $5,000 and qualifiers of prizes of up to $1,000,000. In addition to the Bonanza game prizes, more than $65,000 in daily prizes is being awarded in the Lottery's Instant Bingo game.

With the purchase of the $1 Instant Bingo ticket, players actually get two Bingo games (an Instant Bingo ticket and a Bingo Collectors Card) for the price of one, with 25 different ways to win. In the Instant Bingo ticket, a player rubs off the word Bingo and matches the four numbers revealed against those in the Bingo ticket. A detachable stub on the bottom of each Instant Bingo ticket has a concealed letter number combination which the player reveals to play on the Bingo Collectors Card.

Coal panel meets to negotiate strike

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three-member negotiating committees met briefly to discuss a new nationwide coal contract, focusing on the key issue of the striking United Mine Worker union's depleted benefit funds.

The funds are in precarious financial shape and a key union demand in the talks is for industry to replenish them. The issue is tied to industry's desire for greater labor stability.

"We think we're making progress and we just met for clarification on funds," Harrison Combs, general counsel for UMW, said after the session.

The nationwide UMW strike, its 10th in 40 years against the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, is in its ninth day.

The talks came after bargainiers met for less than two hours on Monday before recessing subject to the call of federal mediators. Officials on all sides said the recess was to allow time for the negotiating teams to reassess their positions.

Mediators involved in the talks have relied at times on meetings of small bargaining subcommittees to deal with issues before the full bargaining committees takes them up.

Sources close to the bargaining said the fact that union and industry representatives were ready to meet again so soon indicated a serious desire to negotiate an end to the strike which began more than a week ago.

Despite the continuing talks there seems little hope that a swift settlement is in sight.

The talks have focused consistently on industry's insistence on labor stability, a demand for a more reliable work force in an industry plagued by wildcat strikes.

Sources on both sides emphasize that the "labor stability" question consists of several parts, none of which can be settled until all the parts are agreed to by both parties.

Both sides emphasized the delicacy of the discussions.

Farmers strike begins; effects remain uncertain

A loosely-organized new farmers' group calling on farmers across the country to go on strike starting Wednesday. But whether—and when—the strike will threaten food supplies is unknown.

One reason is that the strike has its greatest support among grain producers, mostly in the Midwest and West. Grain can be stored, so it could take a long time for shortages to show up.

In Texas, for example, where strike organizers claim heavy support, most grain elevators already are well-stocked.

On the other hand, areas producing perishable products — the ones that could put a quick dent in supermarket supplies — are showing less interest in the strike. If they strike, these farmers will have to dump milk or watch produce spoil.

So a number of officials and spokesmen for agriculture-linked businesses predict that dairy farmers, even in the Midwest, will not take part to a great degree, nor will California's fresh produce growers.

"It's impossible to keep milk off the market and these farmers aren't going to dump it," says Ken Tvaden of Land O'Lakes, a major milk processor in Minnesota. "The dairy farmers have been doing reasonably well in the past few months and they're not about to throw it away."

"I don't see the strike as having any impact on our stores," says Ralph McCotter, a spokesman for King Sooper, a 32-store Denver supermarket chain. He points out that wheat and grain farmers are the most enthusiastic about the strike. However, he adds, "if the strike involved citrus growers, in 48 hours we'd be out of produce."

The group calling the strike is 90 days old, bases itself in the wheat-producing hamlet of Springfield, Colo., and calls itself American Agriculture.

It has no membership rolls, and there is no way to gauge its size.

Its gripe is with farm prices. It has called on American farmers to keep their products off the market and to stop buying farm supplies until officials in Washington act to bring farm prices to 100 percent of parity.

At full parity, farmers theoretically have the same purchasing power for the items they sell as their forebears had early in this century.

City attorney attacks new ethics code

By Andris Straumanis
Staff Writer

The newest version of Carbondale's proposed code of ethics, which is scheduled for action next Monday doesn't have any teeth in it, says City Attorney John Womick.

The City Council discussed the proposed code Monday night in an informal meeting at the Eureka C. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow.

Council members generally approved of the code, but Womick told the council, "I don't like it. It's got a lot of problems."

He said he didn't like how the ordinance allows for the chance a council member could be accused of the appearance of conflict of interest, rather than actual unethical actions.

The new version of the code came out of a meeting held in November in which council members, using a handbook from the International City Managers Association, directed the city attorney's office to write the ordinance.

The city attorney's office had previously presented two drafts of an ethics code, but the council had felt both were inadequate.

The ordinance covers all city officials and employees, whether elected or appointed, as well as members of the various boards and commissions established by the City Council.

The ethics code deals with conflict of interest and fair and equal treatment.

An ethics board is called for in the code. The five-member board would serve as an advisory body to the council.

Womick said he was against the idea of the board. He said he would not want the board to decide what was unethical under the code's guidelines.

"When a lay board tries to enforce it, tries to administer it, it is going to run into all kinds of problems," Womick said.

Although the council had no major problems with the proposed code, it did decide to add a section which would permit the City Council, with the advice of the ethics board, to take alleged violations to court.

The council also decided that it will circulate the proposed code among those which the document affects, as well as various business organizations in the city, before adopting the ordinance.

Free parking is now permitted on S. Illinois Ave.

Free parking will be permitted on South Illinois Avenue starting Tuesday until Christmas, the City Council has decided.

At its informal meeting Monday night the council was told by Mayor Neal Eckert that several Carbondale residents had asked him if the city would allow free parking in the downtown business district, as it has in the past.

City Manager Carroll Fry said an ordinance would be needed to lift the requirement of paying the meters. But City Attorney John Womick reminded the council that last year it had permitted free parking.

'Birds of Prey' fly high

Parachute Club to enter nationals

By Steve Kropla
Staff Writer

"The Birds of Prey," the SIU Sport Parachute Club's competition skydiving team, will face schools from around the country Dec. 28-30 when they participate in the Collegiate Nationals Parachute Meet in Deland, Fla.

Tom Halley, former club president and team captain, said, "40 to 50" schools are expected to attend the annual meet, which determines the best collegiate parachutists in the nation.

Halley conceded that top honors will ultimately go to the country's top military schools—the U.S. Air Force Academy and the U.S. Military Academy at West Point—but he said SIU has a good chance of placing well against non-military colleges.

Among the "Birds" goal is to turn in the best performance in the three competition categories from an Illinois university, Halley said.

A bitter rivalry has developed between SIU and the Illinois State University team in recent months. Halley said, and the team has set its sights on outshowing ISU.

"The Illinois State team has a good man in advanced accuracy, and that's the only real threat they pose to us," Halley said. ISU is also expected to enter a four-man relative work team, Halley said. Northern Illinois University will probably enter only the accuracy competition, he said.

He said it is not known if Eastern Illinois University will send a team, but added that some individual students from EIU might enter. Last year, EIU skydiver Ken Gano placed 17th over-all, the best showing by an Illinois collegiate jumper.

SIU has been absent from national competition since 1973, when the meet was held at Southern Illinois Airport. Despite heavy rainfall, the SIU team took first place, Halley said.

This year, SIU will enter all three forms of competition: relative work, accuracy and style.

Competing on the four-man relative work team will be Halley, a senior in chemistry; Mike Harfst, senior in engineering; Larry DeKock, senior in art; and Dan Burkett, junior in chemistry.

Harfst and DeKock will both use Stratostar parachutes, while Burkett will use a Stratocloud, Halley said. Both types are high-performance "ram jet" square canopies.

Halley and the other team members will use either Para-Commander (PC) or American Papillon parachutes. Those are conventional round canopies, though designed for high-performance competition use.

In the relative work competition, the four-man team exits the aircraft, individually, then "flies" to each other in free fall to join in a "star" formation. The event is timed, and the object is to form the star as quickly as possible.

The tentative roster for the novice (25-100 jumps) accuracy category is John Noak, a freshman in chemistry and biology; Bruce Brooks, a senior at STC; Dan Thomas, a sophomore in administrative science; and Dave Swierczek, sophomore in computer science.

Harfst will also compete in the master's accuracy class (500 jumps or more), and Burkett will enter advanced accuracy (80-500 jumps).

In the accuracy event, the jumper exits the plane at 2,500 feet, opens his parachute, and then attempts to glide it to a landing on a four-centimeter disc known as a "fischet."

The team will drive to Florida a week before the meet to get in some good-weather jumping and to familiarize themselves with the Deland drop zone.

There is a difference!!!

To whom does SIU 'belong'?

A news story in Monday's Daily Egyptian about an open forum Thursday night between President Warren Brandt and students has caused some controversy.

In that story, reporter Jean Ness quoted President Warren Brandt saying to students at the forum: "This is my University, not yours." President Brandt denies making that statement. How it got into print deserves an explanation.

By its very nature, a forum involves considerable give and take among those present. Reporting the comments of 50 persons is a challenging task. Ness used a note-taking practice that's standard among reporters: In her notes she used a "Q" to identify questions from students, and a "B" to label President Brandt's replies.

When Ness submitted the story to Editor-in-Chief Steve Lambert, Lambert questioned the accuracy of the quote above. Ness referred to her notes from the meeting. Her notes revealed no "B" or "Q" beside the specific quotation in question, but it immediately followed remarks she had noted were made by President Brandt. On that basis and at that time, Ness was sure her notes were correct, and the Daily Egyptian printed the story.

On Monday, President Brandt denied making the statement attributed to him. Several students who attended the forum called the Daily Egyptian newsroom questioning the accuracy of the quote. Some of those who called said a student, not President Brandt, had said, "This is my University, not yours." Other students reported hearing President Brandt make the comment.

Because of the questions which had arisen, Ness rechecked her notes and again noted there was no "B" before the quotation to indicate that she had heard—or thought she heard—Brandt make the statement. Further verification was impossible, because a WSU-TV tape recording of the forum had been destroyed. For these reasons, the Daily Egyptian printed a retraction in Tuesday's paper.

It's easy to see in retrospect, of course, that the accuracy of the quotation should have been checked further. Corroboration should not have depended solely on another look at the reporter's notes—and if questions about the accuracy could not be resolved, the quotation could have been deleted. The quotation was relevant to the discussion that took place at the forum but was not essential for readers' understanding of the discussion.

But journalistic miscues aside and although the source of the quote remains in dispute, one thing is clear: Whoever would make such a statement is wrong, for neither the president nor the students "own" the University.

During the forum, President Brandt said, "You come here to learn, not to tell us what to do. You can't tell us what to do." Brandt may have been trying to say that his job as an administrator is to decide what students need, despite what they say they want.

The concept of "en loco parentis"—which is what Brandt expressed—is an anachronism that was discarded during the sixties. It deserved to be scrapped. As consumers of education, and as those who foot part of the bill, students have a right to help determine that experience.

And since students have a vital stake in their future, which in large part hinges on their education, it is imperative that student wants and needs be considered in the give and take of setting University policies.

What is a University and to whom does it belong? SIU is not just a collection of books, buildings and microscopes, although it is that. It is not just students, administrators, civil service and support workers, although it is that. Neither is it just football games, keggers, rock concerts and snake dances down Illinois Avenue, although it can be that, too.

A university is all these things and more. It holds the wisdom of our past, and is the brightest promise for our future. As such, it "belongs" to everyone seeking truth. But no person—not student, not university president—can claim exclusive ownership.

Even administrators believe in Santa Claus

By Tom Casey
Staff Writer

The rain was falling for the fourth time that day as I walked to the side entrance of Anthony Hall, the drops soaking through my K-Mart parka. I approached the door with care, making sure not to slip on a month-old patch of crusty snow near the glass.

Once inside, I walked slowly down the stairs, turning at the bottom toward a light at the end of the hall, where the sound of a tiny orchestra playing "The Little Drummer Boy" on a radio was coming from a small janitor's closet.

Perry Como was crooning a meaningful "Pa Rum Pa Pum Pum" as I approached the closet, sticking my head around the corner of the door to see if anyone was inside.

"Kid!" a familiar voice said, greeting me with a smile and a toast from a styrofoam cup of egg nog.

"Hi, Seymour," I said, unzipping my parka as I entered the closet. "Doing a little early celebrating?"

"Naw, I'm just finishing off the last of the refreshments from the office party the bigwigs had upstairs." The janitor took a sip of the yellow brew and frowned. "Damn it, they sure don't make this stuff like they used to when Morris was here. Man, that was egg nog! This junk couldn't work up a red nose on Rudolph the Reindeer!"

I sat down on an overturned garbage can near the door. "You mean the administration had an office party? Bet it got a little wild, huh?"

Seymour shook his head. "Naw, not really. A couple of the executive types got together and sang 'White Christmas' until the legal counsel came up and told 'em to cut it out or they'd be in violation of the new copyright law, and one of the vice-presidents kept making mistletoe jokes with one of the affirmative action types, but it was all pretty tame. Mostly they sat around and worked on the document."

"Document? What document?"

Seymour waved his hand. "Aw, it's nothing, really. It's just the annual Yule Appropriation Document for FY Current. They do it every year."

"Yule Appropriation Document? What's that?"

"Nothing big, kid. You probably wrote one yourself when you were little. It's just a fancy name for a letter to Santa Claus."

I stared at him in disbelief. "You mean the administration actually writes letters to Santa Claus?"

Seymour took another sip of egg nog. "Sure kid, they've been doing it for years. Hell, all the universities do it. I've heard U of I's been writing 'em since 1904. How do you think they got into the Big Ten?"

"But why, Seymour?"

"Money, kid. The Old Man decided that we oughta start doing it one year after the governor and the higher ed board cut the budget." Seymour laughed. "You oughta see the thing, too. I've been fishing 'em out of the cans for years, and they're real doozies."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, for one thing, it's not your average letter. They do it the official way. They start with a listing of financial and equipment need from each college in the place, and then they do a department-by-department breakdown listing of what the offices want. And then they toss in a line item analysis of last year's presents. They call it the Christmas Contingency Fund Outlay."

I shifted on the garbage can. "And they write all this stuff up and mail it to Santa Claus?"

"Mail it? Naw, kid, they don't do that sort of stuff. After they get the analysis stuff written, they send it to the legal counsel and he checks it for interstate commerce and tax problems. If it's OK there, the Old Man signs it and they bring it to the Board. If the Board approves the request, they give it to the External Affairs guy, and he goes up to the North Pole and lobbies for it."

"And he comes back with the presents?"

"Naw, he doesn't handle that end. That's Santa's job."

"Oh, he comes in with the reindeer and the sleigh and gives the presents out, right?"

Seymour looked at me with a frown. "Kid, you just don't understand the way the system works. Do you think that the unions around here would let an independent operator like Santa Claus make deliveries on campus? Why, if he and his reindeer set one hoof on University property the labor crews would be out on the picket lines before you could say Ho Ho Ho!"

"Yeah, I guess they would," I agreed. "But if Santa doesn't deliver the stuff, who does?"

"General Stores, kid," he said. "They grab a couple of University trucks and meet Santa in some parking lot north of here, and they sneak the stuff back on campus."

"And the General Stores people pass it out?"

"Not yet, kid. It's still gotta go through disbursements. They inventory the stuff and type up a form on it. Then the Old Man signs it and they go back to the Board with the list at the next monthly meeting. The Board approves the stuff, and then the departments make requisitions out on the stuff before Stores gives them any of it."

"Sounds complicated."

"I guess it is, kid, but everybody in the place has to follow the procedure or they don't get any of the stuff."

I stood up from the garbage can. "Why's that, Seymour?"

"Nobody wants to buck the system, kid," he said, handing me a cup of egg nog. "If they do, the bigwigs have ways of finding out. Here, take a look at this."

He handed me a crumpled memo from the President, which he had obviously fetched from a garbage can in the building. "TO ALL DEPARTMENTS," it read. "We're going to find out who's naughty or nice. We know when you've been bad or good, so we strongly recommend that, for more efficient distribution of appropriated resources, you be good, for goodness sakes."

Seymour lifted his cup. "It never fails. Merry Christmas, kid."

Basic Grant applicants who attended SIU during the fall semester should submit their 1977-78 eligibility report to the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance by Friday to receive payment for the fall term.

David Zubin, visiting instructor in linguistics, recently participated in a national colloquium on discourse and syntax at the University of California at Los Angeles. He presented a paper, "Discourse Function of Morphology," at the colloquium.

State Sen. Ken Buzbee will speak before the Sierra Club at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Carbondale Savings and Loan Community Room at Poplar and Main streets. He will talk on Illinois energy policy.

Dinh-Hoa Nguyen, professor of linguistics, recently chaired a panel on "Language Planning and Linguistic Innovations" at the annual meeting of the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages. Nguyen also presented a paper, "Terminological Work in Vietnam," at the meeting, which was held in San Francisco.

Two films produced by SIU cinema and photography students were recently shown at the tenth anniversary celebration of the American Film Institute, held in Washington, D.C. The films, "1912 Belanca," by Greg Steiner and "In Search of a Plot," were among the works presented by eight colleges and universities selected.

Council may finance bike project

By next spring bicyclists in downtown Carbondale will be able to lock their vehicles to their choice of 14 city-installed bicycle racks, if the City Council decides today to finance the project.

The council discussed the proposed project at Monday night's informal meeting. The plan calls for installing five-bicycle racks at various locations along South Illinois Avenue, and at two areas off the avenue.

Tuition bill loses support

By Jim Luthar
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Support for a college tuition tax credit faded Tuesday as congressional leaders sought a final vote on Social Security legislation that would mean substantially higher payroll taxes in the next 10 years.

Enactment of the Social Security measure, aimed at providing new financial stability for the retirement system's trust funds, has been held up by a dispute over the proposed $250-per-student tuition tax credit.

The tax credit provision, attached to the Social Security legislation by Sen. William V. Roth, R-Dei., triggered a feud between House and Senate negotiators.

Congressional leaders indicated on Tuesday they were making progress in breaking the deadlock and clearing the way for a final vote on Social Security before the Christmas recess.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., displayed his optimism by scheduling a Wednesday morning session of the Senate-House conference committee on Social Security. The panel had broken up in disagreement over the tuition credit last Friday.

On the House side, a leadership aide said the Rules Committee is ready to give whatever clearance is necessary to allow the House to take a final vote on Social Security on Thursday.

"I'm highly optimistic," Long told reporters after the Senate Finance Committee had discussed Social Security and other problems for two hours. "I think an agreement will be reached. I think we will have a Social Security bill."

In all the maneuvering, there was increasing evidence the Senate would drop its insistence that the tuition-credit amendment remain a part of the Social Security bill. Because President Carter so badly wants the Social Security legislation, backers of the credit say, he could not veto the measure even though he opposes the credit.

A majority of the House conferees have said they are so opposed to the credit and that they can never vote for it, even if it to otherwise would kill the Social Security bill for the year. There is no indication any House conferee is ready to vote for the credit.

The last time the conferees met, the Senate delegation voted unanimously to support the credit.

Faced with the likelihood that the tuition credit would kill the Social Security bill for the year, a majority would vote to jettison the credit.

License requests to be reviewed by liquor board

The Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board will meet at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the City Hall courtroom, 607 E. College St., to review the revised plans for the Hangar liquor establishment at 511 S. Illinois Ave.

The board will also review a request from Ernest Fligor for a Class B license for the Southern Barbecue restaurant, 220 S. Illinois Ave. The license would allow the sale of beer.

The board will review a request from the owners of The Club, 408 S. Illinois Ave., to transfer their liquor license to 304 and 305 S. Illinois Ave. The Jackson County Health Department will report on Carbondale liquor establishments for October and November.

The police department will also report on liquor establishments from June, July, August, September and November.

Girl sole plane crash survivor

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) A 3-year-old girl, trapped for 35 hours in the wreckage of a small plane with the bodies of her parents and brother, was rescued Tuesday by searchers who found her "mumbling and groaning."

Rescuers unstrapped Shera Sneed from the back seat of the plane, which had crashed on an 1,800-foot hill about 50 miles northwest of San Antonio, and took her to a nearby hospital where doctors found she had a fractured arm and leg.

The plane had been spotted Tuesday morning by a helicopter, and a rescue team headed for the site in four-wheel drive vehicles.

The searchers also found the bodies of Shera's father, San Antonio attorney Gerald Wayne Sneed, 33, her mother, Susan Parr Sneed, 32, and Shannon, her 5-year-old brother. The family had been returning home from a visit to Shera's grandparents.

"Shera was just mumbling and groaning when we got there," said Dan Waters of First Texas Flying Service, a family friend and the first at the scene. "It was nothing you could understand. She had a few abrasions but other than that she looked pretty good."

Waters said he tried to comfort the girl but she did not recognize him and apparently did not know what had happened.

The plane crashed Sunday night during a persistent drizzle. Air traffic controllers in San Antonio had received a distress signal from a plane reporting that it was low on fuel and was attempting to reach the Kerrville airport.

Spencer Treharne of the First Texas Flying Service said the plane apparently came within about 20 feet of clearing the hill.

"He knew the Kerrville airport and was trying to get in," Treharne said of Sneed. "When the engine started to sputter he could not get in. The hill is on the boundary of the airport you might say."

The crash site was three miles northwest of the airport.

Sheriff Paul Fields said the nose of the aircraft was buried in the loose dirt.

The Carbondale Police Department offers a "house watch" for Carbondale residents who are away for any length of time.

By filling out the form provided and sending it to them, your house or apartment will be watched by the police force.

The address is: Carbondale police, 610 E. College St., Carbondale; Attention Crime Deterrence Patrol.

Police also provide a checklist of things to do before you leave town to further protect your valuables.

The list includes such suggestions as removing any and all valuables from your residence and placing them with someone you trust.

Police delay may lead to suspension

Eas: St. Louis (AP)—The police chief have been threatened with suspension by Mayor William E. Mason because neighbors of a rape victim say it took officers around four hours to go to the scene.

If Public Safety Director Arthur J. Wilson and Police Chief Curtis Smith "do not find anyone to reprimand, I'm going to suspend them," declared Mason today.

Neighbors said they called police a little after 4 a.m. Sunday to say a 60-year-old woman had been raped twice and robbed.

Two subsequent calls also failed to bring police, even though officers were told that the suspect had fallen asleep in the house and was still there, the mayor said.

Then neighbors called Detective Sgt. Vernon Anderson, Mason's chauffeur and bodyguard, who lives nearby.

Anderson went to the house and arrested the man, Everett P. Scruggs, who was charged with rape and robbery.

"Anderson himself called the police station," said Mason, "and it still took one hour after that before anyone was sent. He called me and I called down there and it was 30 minutes after I called that someone arrived."

Residents of the northeast side get together for a "fire and brimstone" revival.

Revival: old religious tradition

This is the last in a series of articles dealing with Carbondale's northeast side.

By Michael Ganssman
Staff Writer

Dressed in their Sunday best on a stormy Wednesday night, about 30 residents of northeast Carbondale entered The Olivet Freewill Baptist Church, 407 N. Marion St.

The men are in suits and some women are wearing sequined hats and long dresses.

They came to "wash their souls" in an old fashioned fire and brimstone revival. Some came alone, some with kicking and crying children, some with gray hair and canes, some with umbrellas. They entered the small brick church around 7:30 p.m.

From Oct. 24 to Nov. 4 the church—one of 11 churches in the predominantly black neighborhood—held a revival hosted by Rev. Cecil Hall of Indianapolis, Ind.

The bespectacled, gray-haired Rev. Hall stayed with members of Olivet's congregation during the two weeks he was in the northeast side.

By 7:45 p.m. the aqua-painted pews are one-third filled with an all-black congregation. "Revivals are an old tradition in this neighborhood. Grandma, grandpa, mom and dad have all attended revivals, learning to depend on God, so will their children," said the Rev. Richard Daniels of Hopewell Missionary Baptist Church, 400 E. Jackson.

"The tradition has and always will be a part of their lives," Daniels said.

Revivals are seasonal. He'd during the spring, summer and fall.

the revival is looked upon as a harvest time or build up before winter, Daniels said.

Living across the street from the Baptist Church she attended as a child, Joyce Bryant remembers the day she was baptized by submersion in a small pool under the pulpit, at a revival.

"I was elated, happy and ready to bury the old me and come out the new me," Bryant said.

Outside the church, two teenage girls who went to revivals when they were little because their mothers made them wandered through the neighborhood.

"We're looking for somebody old enough to buy us some beer. Are you old enough?" one of the girls asked.

Inside the church the balcony was empty. Only the first 10 pews were populated with a mostly over-30 crowd as Hall thanked a woman seated in the church for the "fine meal you prepared for me today."

Two elderly women strolled in late. One was humming the strains of an unknown spiritual.

Hall's sermon ran half an hour. Old men sitting with their hands folded listened to Hall talk about how some people reject Christ.

To make more clear his sermon, Hall told the story of "Old Joe."

The story began with Old Joe finally coming to a revival. Hall continued the story, saying, "While Old Joe was at the revival he heard a voice saying 'give up all, give up all.'"

"But Old Joe rejected the voice and started home through the forest. In the dark forest, he again heard the voice saying 'give up all.'"

"And Old Joe shouted, 'I don't know where you are or who you are, but you're disturbing me with your tellin' me to give up all.'"

Hall then asked the congregation not to reject Christ and his command to "give up all" as Old Joe had done.

"Maybe someone in this church tonight is a backslider. But he should come to Christ while the blood is running warm in his veins," Hall preached. Sweat trickled down his face.

"And some parishioners shouted 'Amen! Yes Sir, Jesus! Yes Sir! Jesus, amen!'"

Hands clapped a steady tempo, feet beat a syncopated rhythm and Hall's voice changed from moderate modulations to thunderous shouts.

He dropped to his knees. His hands reached toward the ceiling as the congregation shouted, "Lord give us a revival... Lord give us a revival... Lord give us a revival, and let it begin with me!"

One woman in the front row frantically wiped her tear-stained face with a pink handkerchief. Her arms flailed as she swayed in her seat screaming "Yes sir, Jesus, yes sir." The congregation began singing hymn no. 281, "When We All Get To Heaven." "Sing the wonderful love of Jesus sing of his mercy and his grace. In the mansions bright and blessed he'll prepare for us a place."

One old man kept time with his foot. Hall smiled as he shouted, "That will be a beautiful day, children! When we get there!"

The revival was brought to a close with a prayer.

"Thank you Jesus," Hall led the congregation, "for that of time religion."

"Thank you Jesus for opening doors no man can shut."

"Thank you Jesus for shutting doors no man can open."

After the final "amen" echoed through the church, a circus atmosphere erupted as neighbors embraced neighbors.

Minutes later the people left the church and disappeared into the darkness shrouding their poorly lighted neighborhood—the northeast side of town.

Author of how-to book uses insight to job hunting

By David Paris
Staff Writer

"What Color Is Your Parachute?"
by Richard Nelson Bolles.
Ten Speed Press, Berkeley, Cal., revised 1977.

"How to" books are something to usually be skeptical of, for good reason: there's bookshelves of bad ones on the market. However, "What Color Is Your Parachute?" a job hunter's manual, is an exception to that rule. Beside being filled with relevant information about the horrors of looking for a job, it is also very readable and worth picking up for its entertainment value alone.

"Give me a fish and I will eat for today; teach me to fish and I will eat for the rest of my life." (Ancient Proverb) is Bolles opening. That opening gains significance as the book is read because Bolles spells out in statistical and psychological terms just what it takes to reach full potential in employment. Although Bolles doesn't make the situation seem easy, he does the challenge the reader. Warning: "This book isn't for someone who really doesn't want to work."

Bolles dispels the reader's job hunting myths with the swift and precise skill of a surgeon removing a tumor. "Our society has taken pity on the job-hunter and career-changer, and invented all kinds of helps for him and her, in their plight: federal-state employment agencies, classified ads, job counselors, computerized job bands, and so forth. None of these work very well; in fact, the number of people who turn to any of them, without getting a job, is simply mind-blowing," he writes.

Bolles points out that what it takes to get a job is the guts to meet and talk to potential employers. He explains what the average employer wants in an applicant. He makes the job interview seem like a test and he gives the job-hunter an idea of what is going to be on it. He also supplies many of the answers.

Not only does Bolles tell the reader how to get a job, he also helps the job-hunter decide what kind of job he or she wants and where they would like it. He helps the reader identify priorities and skills. He provides exercises and drills to help reach these conclusions.

Bolles even included a chapter on the financial pitfalls involved in seeking help to find employment. He identifies the different types of help available and explains how to separate the expert from the inept. However, he suggests that the reader try his method first before bringing out the big money for the professional.

The typographical design of the book and illustrations are a bit overdone in places, but even that seems to add a personal flavor to the work. More than anything else, Bolles gives the secure impression that the reader isn't the first one to go through the discouraging process of job-hunting. Bolles relays the feeling that he has a personal stake in whether the job hunter is successful or not.

You are setting out on an exiting (if somewhat difficult) journey, whether you be 16 or 60. The light-hearted tone of this book is not intended to deny the seriousness of all this for your life's activity; but is intended, hopefully, to make the journey a little lighter and enjoyable. Who should job hunting be dull?" Bolles writes in the introduction. In this finely written book, he accomplishes his aim.

Police investigate burglary of office

An undetermined amount of cash was taken in a burglary of the Evergreen Terrace area office, University police said.

Police said a cigarette machine was pried open Monday and the cash box stolen. Also taken was a metal box containing refund money.

Dog goes home for the holidays runs 650 miles

ELGIN (AP) — Jesse, an Irish setter, has come home for Christmas—finding her way back 650 miles from Nebraska. It took her six months.

"When we opened the front door Monday, there she was on the step," said Keith Millikan, 19. "She looked skinny and shabby. But she let out a few barks and came inside."

The dog belongs to Keith's 23-year-old brother, Jack, who got her three years ago when she was about a year old.

Last June, Jack was en route to California when he had an auto accident on Interstate 80 near Lincoln, Neb. He said he blacked out, and his dog, who was traveling with him, ran off.

Jack said witnesses told him they saw the dog limp away from the wrecked car toward the North Platte River.

"She had no address tag on her collar," said Jack. "But I just knew she would get back somehow. I kept telling everyone, but they wouldn't believe me."

Keith said his brother was away from home on his produce truck route when Jesse returned.

"When he got in last night, there was Jesse on the front room floor," said Keith. "Jesse wagged her tail and licked him. It was quite a reunion."

Jack is convinced that Jesse "just sniffed her way back home." But Dr. Lester Fisher, director of Lincoln Park Zook in Chicago, said this would be impossible.

"Now and then we hear of lost cats or dogs traveling great distances to come home," said Fisher. "How they do it remains a mystery."

FBI arrests 5 for conspiracy

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Two FBI agents who infiltrated the ultra-secret political underground say they trained in the desert with a tiny band of revolutionaries who were preparing a new campaign of violence.

According to an FBI official, the group "was talking about assassinations, about sniping, about blowing up buildings, about putting a bomb under the seat of some judge's car."

Five persons, including the 62-year-old "patriarch" of the leftist underground movement, are now in custody, facing arraignment Wednesday on charges stemming from an alleged plot to bomb the office of Rep. John Briggs, R-Calif., an outspoken opponent of homosexual rights.

Though the FBI was able to arrest five persons allied with the radical Weather Underground, leaders of the revolutionary group, such as the best known, Bernardine Doherty, remain fugitives.

"If we knew where they were, we'd pick them up tonight," says one FBI official.

Leftist sources say the FBI may have decided to finally "surface" its undercover agents out of frustration for the failure to locate better known radical leaders.

On Nov. 19, Richard Giannotti and William Reagan ended their long undercover work with the five arrests, exposing a rare view of the left-wing activists' secret, and sometimes violent, life underground.

The undercover agents say they began working with five revolutionaries last May, directing firearms training in a secluded Mojave desert area, and receiving instructions on explosives from two women who led a small "combat team." One agent said misinformation on firearms was pur-

Skeleton may be that of missing girl

HARRISBURG, (AP) — A skeleton found by woodcutters in a remote area south of here Sunday may be the remains of a missing teen-ager, State's Attorney Walden Morris of Saline County said Tuesday.

The only clothing found near the skeleton was a striped sweater, which the parents of Beth Ann Headricks, 15, said she had often worn.

Miss Headricks disappeared last July 27 after she was seen getting into a car.

"Circumstances indicate foul play, but there is no evidence at this time to prove it," Morris said.

The state's attorney said investigators also discovered a stocking and an item that may be a hair clip.

Dr. A.J. Venables, an Evansville, Ind., pathologist, said the bones were that of a white female, 14 to 17 years old.

Investigators said the body had been in the gully between the old Penn Central Railroad tracks and an abandoned streetcar line for not longer than six months.

Morris said investigators were sun-adding a spr- from New Mexico who may be able to reconstruct facial features of the skeleton to aid identification.

Dental records of Miss Headricks were incomplete, said Morris, so identification from that source would be inconclusive.

At the time of her disappearance, police were holding a suspect, but said today they knew where he was now if they needed him.

Illinoisan found guilty of murder, conspiracy

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — A jury found Bruce Webber guilty Tuesday of first-degree murder and conspiracy in the fatal shooting of Shirleen Howard of Winona.

The prosecution contended the Rockdale, Ill., man, formerly of Winona, got a $3,500 payoff from Donald Howard, 34, now being held in the Winona County jail.

Both Webber, 36, and Howard were charged with conspiracy and first-degree murder for the Aug. 13 fatal shooting of Shirleen Howard, 32.

The prosecution and defense made closing statements Tuesday, then Winona County District Judge Glenn Kelly instructed the jury on points of law for 25 minutes. The case went to the jury shortly after noon.

Defense attorney Steven Goldberg told the jury in closing remarks that what the prosecution alleged was a partial payoff of cash and a diamond ring may have been an undercover operation between the two men.

Goldberg also described a trip to Winona from Illinois by Webber and a buddy in the Aug. 11-13 period as a "sex and drinking affair."

The defense counsel said a mailed package which the state traced from Howard to Webber about 10 days after the slaying may have actually been a payoff to Webber for a fencing operation — meaning barter in stolen goods.

The prosecution produced testimony indicating Webber received a package of some $1,500 in cash and a diamond ring.

Goldberg said Webber and Ralph Goff, Joliet, had gone to Winona by way of Rockford, and that Webber had spent the night with a woman who testified in court. Also, said the defense lawyer, the men had boasted about associating with some "go-go girls" the night of Aug. 12.

Webber had not taken the stand in his own defense.

In his closing statement earlier, Winona County Attorney Julius Gernes suggested the jury should not be "awed or frightened" by the term "reasonable doubt" in weighing evidence.

Gernes said that overcoming reasonable doubt requires "such proof as an ordinary man or woman would act upon."

Defense of Skokie Nazis hurts ACLU

CHICAGO (AP)—While a Nazi group trying to march in a predominantly Jewish suburb says 1977 has been its best year ever, the American Civil Liberties Union says it has suffered its heaviest losses ever because it defended the Nazis.

"This whole thing is fraught with irony," said Illinois ACLU Executive Director David Hamlin, whose budget, staff and membership has been cut by 30 percent. Nationally, the ACLU budget is facing a 15 percent reduction.

"This is the most serious threat the ACLU has ever faced," said Franklin Haiman, ACLU national secretary. "Never before have we lost this many members at one time over one issue."

In contrast to the ACLU's financial setbacks, the Nazi group, the National Socialist Party of America, says its financial and membership strength has greatly increased since the group began trying to march in Skokie last May.

The Nazis refuse to disclose their membership total, but a national convention in Chicago last summer attracted fewer than 50 delegates. The Chicago Nazi headquarters is usually staffed by Collin and two or three young aides.

"The big change...is that the average common man has come out more openly on our side...financially and otherwise," said Frank Collin, the NSPA's national coordinator. "Everywhere I go people recognize me and come up and say keep up the good work."

Collin said his group's chapters in Chicago, Dallas and San Francisco have shown significant membership and financial gains this year, although he refused to discuss specifics.

Collin said he has more funds for travel so he can help organize other Nazi organizations around the nation.

An estimated 40,000 of Skokie's 60,000 residents are Jewish, including thousands who survived or lost relatives in World War II German death camps. Last May, Collin's group began trying to demonstrate for "white power" in front of the Skokie Village Hall.

An injunction preventing the Nazis from displaying the swastika in Skokie is under review by the Illinois Supreme Court. A federal court judge is expected to rule within the month on the constitutionality of three Skokie ordinances that bar the Nazi march. A suit filed by a group of concentration camp survivors is also in the state court system.

Fewer males enrolling in college, survey finds

By Michael Dean
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Young men are finding college less attractive, even though that's where the women are, a Census Bureau study shows.

The report released Tuesday suggested fewer men are enrolling because they are not eligible for GI education benefits or they no longer need Vietnam war draft deferments.

It speculated another reason may be that young men now consider a college education less important.

The proportion of 18- and 19-year-old men who have completed one year of college declined from 13.6 percent in 1970 to 10.9 percent this year, the report said.

However, during the same period, a higher proportion of women the same age completed the same education, increasing from 12.9 percent to 13.2 percent.

Larry Suter, who heads the education statistics branch, said women have exceeded men in education at that age group for three years. But any gains they are making are caused mainly by declining male enrollments, he said.

Among 20- and 21-year-olds, men with a year of college education dropped markedly from 46.8 percent in 1970 to 38.5 percent in 1977. Women gained from 35.8 percent to 38.4 percent.

The larger gap in the 18 and 19 age group may be because women enter college at an earlier age, Suter said.

Council to approve '78 slate

The year's final City Council meeting, a formal session, is scheduled for Monday.

The first gathering of 1978 is scheduled for Jan. 9 and will be a special formal and an informal meeting.

Approval of the council's calendar for next year is set for Monday's meeting. The unapproved calendar lists the dates for town meetings as follows:

- Southwest Carbondale, March 12.
- Northwest Carbondale, June 28.
- Southeast Carbondale, Sept. 25.
- Northeast Carbondale, Dec. 13.

Judge dismisses suit against women who backed ERA

PEORIA (AP)—A suit charging the International Women's Year Commission with unlawfully picketing at the homes of Illinois legislators was dismissed by U.S. District Judge Robert D. Morgan Wednesday for insufficient evidence.

"You just have a battle you cannot win," Morgan told Alton attorney J.F. Schliably, husband of Equal Rights Amendment foe Phyllis Schlafly.

Six Republican state legislators filed the suit at the request of Stop-ERA, headed by Mrs. Schlafly. They charged the Women's Year Commission illegally lobbied for passage of the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Both sides in the dispute agreed there was picketing at the homes of legislators after a leaflet urging such action was distributed at a Women's Year Conference June 11 at Illinois State University in Normal.

However, Morgan ruled the sole issue in the bench trial was whether the lobbying was sponsored or paid for by the Washington-based commission.

Redbirds to test women cagers

By Bud Vandernack
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team will get a break from the sport over the Christmas break but the players have a more assignment before they can roast chestnuts over an open fire. The women will travel to Normal Saturday to face the Illinois State Redbirds, the defending state champions, in a 1 p.m. contest at University High School.

The mission will not be an easy one for Coach Cindy Scott's troops, who have a 1-1 record. The Redbirds return many players from a year ago, led by 6-3 Senior Charlotte Lewis, a member of the 1972 Olympic team. Lewis has been mentioned often as an All-America candidate and Scott says the four-year starter has the ability to substantiate her rave notices.

"She has great jumping ability and has a nice turnaround jump shot," Scott praised. "She is probably the best rebounder in women's basketball. But she is an up-and-down player. She doesn't use her ability as well as she should."

Scott said the Redbirds like to accommodate Lewis' scoring ability close to the basket by playing a pattern offense. The Saluki mentor said the Redbirds may run with the ball on occasion, but they will run a patient offense much of the time.

The Redbirds are coached by Jill Hutchinson, and Scott is highly complimentary of her ability. She said that Hutchinson's guidance has had much to do with the past success of Illinois State.

"She gets the maximum out of the talent that she has," Scott said. "Even when I was a player (at Memphis State) I respected her coaching ability."

Scott said the Salukis will try to force the Redbirds into committing turnovers by using a half-court trapping press. When they are not pressing on defense, the Salukis will play a 1-3-1 zone extensively.

SIU will go with the same starting lineup that was used in the games against Central Missouri and Indiana. Bonnie Foley and Sue Faber will play the post positions, while Lynn Williams and Jeri Hoffman will occupy the wing positions in Scott's 1-3-1 offense. Sue Schaeffer will start at the point-guard position.

Scott said she hopes to get more scoring from her forwards against Illinois State. She said she is looking for an improved offensive performance from Williams. The 5-7 sophomore from Coasta Mesa, Calif. scored only 10 points in the first two games, but Scott said she is capable of high-scoring games every time she walks onto the court.

The first-year coach knows that the Redbirds will provide a stern test for her team, but she is not conceding the game.

"We have been playing very aggressive basketball in practice lately," Scott said. "I'm confident and the team is confident. They want to prove just how good they are and there is no better way to do that than by beating the state champs."

The Illinois State game will close out the 1977 portion of the schedule for the women cagers. Their next action will be Jan. 11, when they will travel to Tennessee-Martin.

Take command of your future as an officer in the U.S. Navy.

There aren't many men in this world who can qualify for command of a ship. Few positions of responsibility are harder won... earn more respect... and offer a greater sense of personal accomplishment.

Think you've got that something special it takes to work toward this kind of position... and to master the rigorous training and discipline that will be required of you?

If you can honestly answer "yes" to this question... and can back up your "yes" with a good solid educational background... and meet the other qualifications demanded of a Naval officer, then the Navy will give you every opportunity to work your way up to a position of command.

There's no better time than now to find out if this is the kind of future you're looking for. And if you're the kind of man the Navy is looking for.

Eagles beat SIU in overtime, 76-75

By Steve Conran
Staff Writer

Georgia Southern's Phil Leisure connected on a 25-foot jump shot from the top of the key with just five seconds remaining in overtime to give the Eagles a 76-75 come from behind basketball victory over SIU Tuesday night at the Arena.

With the score knotted at 67-67 at the end of regulation, Matt Simpkins gave the Eagles the lead with a 20-foot jumper with just 10 seconds gone in overtime. But the Salukis' Gary Wilson, high scorer for SIU with 27 points, sandwiched two quick buckets around a driving layup by Wayne Abrams to give the Salukis a 73-69 lead with three minutes left.

The Eagles came right back as the games' high scorer, Kevin Anderson, who scored 28 points, scored on a three-point play and a tip-in to give the Eagles the lead. Al Grant gave the Salukis their final lead of the evening as he scored from the side of the lane seconds before Leisure's heroics.

SIU had possession of the ball and a chance to pull the game out with four seconds left but failed to get a shot off after calling timeout.

"We wanted to throw the ball as deep as we could," said SIU Coach Paul Lambert about the Salukis in-bounds play. "We normally don't like to call timeout because the defense is scattered and we like to get the ball up-court."

Anderson, who hit 13 of 24 for the game, also had three teammates in double figures as John Fowler scored 12. Leisure ended up with 10 and Bobby Shields contributed 10. Another important factor in the Eagles win was in the offensive rebounds column. Georgia Southern came up with 18 offensive boards to just eight for the Salukis and cashed in with several tips ins and layups.

SIU needed a free-throw line jumper by Milt Huggins with 11 seconds left to tie the score at 67, despite holding several big leads in the second half including a 12-point bulge, 63-51, with just seven minutes remaining.

"We stopped doing the things that got us the lead," Lambert said. "We didn't hit the backboards and didn't shoot well."

Wilson, who scored 17 points in the first half, gave the Salukis that 12-point edge on a slam dunk which also drew him a technical foul and seemed to inspire the Eagles.

"When we fell behind by 12, we told our players to be patient and not try to get all the points back at once," said Eagle Coach J. B. Searce. "We told our players that they were taking bad shots."

After that talk with his players, the Eagles outscored the Salukis 16-4 the rest of the way. The Eagles record improved to 3-2 for the season while SIU's dropped to 2-3.

The scoring summary of the SIU-Georgia Southern game (field goals, free throws, rebounds, total points, listed in order):

Basketball team to play seven games during break

By Jim Misunas
Sports Editor

While most SIU students work or rest during Christmas break, the Saluki basketball team will be busy—playing seven games until school resumes Jan. 16.

The Salukis travel to Los Angeles to play UCLA Friday. SIU has played the Bruins once. In December 1975, the Bruins owned SIU, 81-60. Bruin Ralph Drollinger scored 16 points and collected 11 rebounds to lead the win. Teammate Marques Johnson added 14 points and 15 rebounds. Mike Glenn scored 13 points to lead all scorers.

The 1975-76 Bruin team was 28-4 and placed third in the NCAAs, losing to eventual champion Indiana.

UCLA, which has won 11 straight Pacific 8 basketball titles, is ranked No. 8 in the country behind Missouri Valley Conference (MVC) member Indiana State, which is ranked No. 7.

First-year UCLA Coach Gary Cunningham figures to start one senior, two sophomores and two juniors against the Salukis. Cunningham assumed the head coaching reins after last year's Coach Gene Bartow resigned after a two-year record of 52-9.

Raymond Townsend, a 6-3 senior, starts at one guard while 6-2 junior Roy Hamilton starts at the other.

Kiki Vandeweghe, a 6-7 sophomore, and David Greenwood, a 6-10 junior will start at forwards for the Bruins. Gig Sims, a 6-9 sophomore will start at center.

Saluki Coach Paul Lambert says the team played well last weekend at the Mar-hall Memorial Invitational, but will be faced with an even greater challenge at UCLA.

Lambert said, "Playing at UCLA will be a difficult situation, but I think our team is looking forward to the game. We don't have anything to lose."

The Salukis then return home for a Dec. 31 game against William Jewell and a Jan. 2 contest versus Evansville. Both games start at 1:05 p.m.

SIU travels to Indiana State, Jan. 4 and Bradley Jan. 7 to open the MVC season. Drake visits the Arena Jan. 9 and Tulsa Jan. 14 for 7:35 p.m. home games.

Christmas wishes provide relief for sports figures

The Christmas holidays are the perfect time to shower needy people with all kinds of gifts. Well, sports figures sometimes qualify as needy people. Don't think for an moment that John McKay and the rest of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers weren't needy persons prior to last Sunday's win over New Orleans.

While McKay's Christmas wish has already been granted, many sports personalities are still in need of things which would make their holiday seasons more enjoyable and peaceful.

The Daily Egyptian believes that everyone should get what they need and deserve on Christmas. In the interest of providing a public service, In the Bleachers is publishing its Christmas wishes for many of the top sports figures, both locally and nationally.

To Gary Wilson—A copy of the new book, "10 Easy Lessons in Bird-Hunting." Wilson and the rest of the Salukis will be facing a Bird named Larry in the Valley opener Jan. 4, and this Bird is a difficult one to shoot down.

To a Bird named Larry—A temporary case of the Sports Illustrated cover jinx during the Jan. 2 game and again on Jan. 19. Other than that, best wishes for a successful season.

To Paul Lambert and the rest of the Valley coaches—A decision by the television brass to cancel "The Larry and Harry Show" because some episodes of the program might be hazardous to the health of coaches and opposing players. (The "Larry and Harry Show" is the name given to Indiana State's talented forward duo of Bird and Harry Morgan.)

To Lyman Bostock—A copy of the bestseller, "How to Be a Millionaire and Still Hit .337."

To Woody Hayes—An advanced course in sports photography. The final chapter teaches the aspiring photographer how to take a punch and not miss a shot.

To Rod Carew—A formal letter which would introduce him to a few unidentified baseball writers. He may need a formal introduction because despite hitting .388 and fielding his position well, some writers still refused to vote for him in the American League All-Star balloting. What more does a player have to do?

To Bill Walton—An ample supply of kumquat juice to help him get through the NBA season without injuries this year.

To all Big Ten football coaches—Television sets with which they can watch the Oakland Raiders and other teams that are not afraid to pass the ball. At the current time the forward pass is considered off limits in the Big 10.

To Richie Zisk—Some places in Texas where he can play his accordion and do the polka.

To Steve "Congo" Conran—Dinner with Jimmy The Greek. The two master prognosticators probably have much to talk about.

To Gene Bartow—A plane ticket that he can use to fly to Los Angeles to visit his friends in the UCLA Alumni Association.

To Inge Renner—Some California sunshine to bring back to Carbondale with her after the holidays.

To Bobby Knight—A job with Ringling Bros. Circus. It is rumored that he can handle a chair and a whip fairly well.

To the National League owners—A 20-year sentence of being locked in a room with Charlie Finley unless they adopt the designated hitter rule.

To Bill Veck—A surplus of cash that he can use to sign Bobby Bonds so he will not say "Na, Na, Hey, Hey, Good-bye" after the season is over like Zisk did.

To Cindy Scott—Some fans to fill the empty seats in Davies Gym. If the fans are hiding, she would like them to stop.

To Rey Dempsey—A reincarnation of Andre Herrera for next year's team so that he will not have to count the successive scoreless quarters.

To Kermit Washington—Some rock 'n' sock 'em robots to play with while he is sitting out a two-month suspension for rearranging Rudy Tomjanovich's facial features.

To the Chicago Bears—A safe deposit box the size of Walter Payton to protect their most valuable property.

To Vern Rapp—A full-length version of the Hungarian Rhapsody to atone for the loss of Al Hrabosky.

To Reggie Jackson—A better relationship with Billy Martin and George Steinbrenner to make it easier for the World Series hero to enjoy his new candy bar.

To Julius Erving—Some of Walton's Kumquat juice to use to instill some teamwork in the 76ers. It didn't hurt Portland.

To all readers of In the Bleachers—A restful and entertaining holiday season.
