HUD secretary will fight urban aid cuts

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

When Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel Pierce meets with President Reagan this week, he will have the blessing of many state and local officials.

Pierce is scheduled to meet with Reagan on Thursday to fight expected cuts to urban aid programs, including Community Development Block Grants and Urban Development Action Grants.

The CDBG and UDAG programs were budgeted $4.2 billion for 1982 and are used by nearly 3,000 cities, including Carbondale, nationwide.

It was reported last week that the Office of Management and Budget will request elimination of the CDBG and UDAG program by 1984, starting with a 30 percent cut in funds for fiscal year 1982 and an additional 50 percent cut for 1983. These proposals are in addition to a 12 percent cut in CDBG and UDAG funds requested by Reagan in September.

While there has been no official administrative or congressional action on the proposals, officials in Carbondale are concerned by the talk of reductions and possible elimination of the programs.

Carbondale has a commitment from HUD for $1 million in CDBG funds annually through July, 1984. The money is used for health and child care services, housing rehabilitation, capital improvements and the city's energy program.

The city also has been awarded about $2 million in UDAG money to purchase and clear land for the proposed downtown convention center.

Don Monty, director of community development, said that while the UDAG money committed to the city is not in jeopardy, a reduction in CDBG funds would make it difficult to maintain CDBG-funded programs.

Monty said it is not known how the cuts, if approved by Congress, would be implemented. He said many CDBG funds have already been committed to small cities like Carbondale, and HUD officials have urged states to honor those

Poland under martial law

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's new martial law regime flew Solidarity leader Lech Walesa to Warsaw Sunday for talks aimed at heading off a nationwide strike urged by union militants defying proclamations of a state of emergency.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban told foreign reporters that Walesa, leader of the Soviet bloc's only independent union, was being treated with all due respect, and was not under arrest.

Martial rule was proclaimed early Sunday after Solidarity called for a nationwide vote on whether to retain communism.

Authorities were reported to have interned an estimated 1,000 people around the country.

The new military regime announced that all but religious meetings were banned, the right to strike or protest suspended, sale of gasoline prohibited and unofficial distribution of information outlawed. All normal communications in the country were cut, and the nation's borders were sealed.

The state-run news media reported about 200 demonstrators at the Solidarity building in the capital were dispersed with fire hoses. It was the only reported street agitation in the otherwise apparently calm city.

The East German news agency ADN quoted Urban as saying at the news conference that Walesa was among the Solidarity leaders interned, but the agency apparently was mistaken. Other accounts, including one broadcast by Poland's state radio, quoted Urban as saying explicitly that Walesa was not interned.

In Washington, President Reagan said the United States had made it clear "how seriously we would view any interference in Poland" by the Soviet Union. Reagan told reporters, "We're monitoring the situation. Beyond that I can't have any comment."

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig announced in Brussels, Belgium, that he was canceling a Middle East trip to return to Washington on Monday and keep watch on Polish developments.

The State Department in Washington held separate talks with Soviet and Polish diplomats. Details were not known, but the U.S. government has expressed concerns in the past over the possibility of Soviet intervention to end 16 months of labor unrest in Poland.

Troops and armored personnel were deployed across Warsaw. Outside the capital, travelers said, long columns of army trucks, tanks, amphibious vehicles and jeeps lined the highway from Gdansk. Police set up checkpoints and stopped civilian vehicles for identity checks.

Urban did not say with whom Walesa met, but informed sources said it might be Stanislaw Ciosek, minister for trade and union affairs, and that the session could be a prelude for a meeting with Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski Monday morning to head off the threatened general strike.

Urban gave no figures for those detained, but informed sources said about 1,000 people had been interned, meaning held in isolation or under house arrest without charge.

VP candidates rate fund raising importance

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

All three candidates for the vice presidency for University relations at SIU-C agree that improving the University's fund-raising efficiency will be their primary concern.

The agreement ends there, though.

One candidate would concentrate extensively on developing funding ties on a regional basis, emphasizing SIU-C's service to the region. Another would aim primarily at developing funding ties with businesses interested in the University. The third would attempt to develop donors from among the University's alumni.

The candidates are William J. Farrell, 45, presently the associate vice president for educational development and research at the University of Iowa; Stanley R. McAnally, 45, assistant vice chancellor for development at the University of Missouri at Columbia; and Arthur V. Ciervo, 52, director of public information and relations at the Pennsylvania State University system.

The candidates were selected by a 12-member search committee after a three-month search. The post was vacated May 12 by George Mace, who resigned to take a one year leave of absence as an executive consultant with the American Council on Education.

The decision now goes to President Albert Sonit who is expected to choose a new vice president in January.

Future of schools up to states, high official tells educators

By Vicki Olgatey
Staff Writer

While educational standards and quality need to be tightened, the second highest official in the U.S. Department of Education said it's up to the individual states to design curriculum and find the finances to back them.

Elam Hertzler, executive assistant and chief of staff to the secretary of education, told a conference of Illinois educators Friday that the Reagan administration doesn't think a "national ministry of education" should exist to tell state officials what to do.

Hertzler spoke at the conference in the Student Center at the invitation of U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District. Hertzler replaced Secretary of Education Terrel Bell, who cancelled his scheduled appearance because of illness.

"There is a renewed emphasis and interest on the quality of education," Hertzler said. "But to demand quality is one thing, to get it is quite another."

Hertzler said educators should be concerned with declining test scores and the tendency of high school and college students to shy away from math, science and foreign language courses.

Poland crisis reduces options for restoring national order

By Marc Rosenwasser
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW — The decision by Warsaw authorities to declare a state of emergency Sunday has reduced the number of steps that can be taken to restore order in Poland without Soviet military intervention.

The Kremlin has been pressing for more than a year — without success — for Polish authorities to take strong measures against the independent union Solidarity and its reform movement. So Soviet leaders were bound to be pleased that Poland's premier, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, declared military rule on Sunday in response to a call by the union Solidarity for a referendum on Poland's form of government.

A Soviet official, who asked not to be identified, said Sunday it was "high time" for such a decision.

The action appears to clear the way for a showdown between Polish authorities and Polish reformers — a development likely to reveal whether the Polish Communist Party has the power to run the country.

If the Polish party does not wield sufficient power — if Jaruzelski's decision is met not with a return to order, but with a new outbreak of strikes, or even fighting — then the Soviets might feel they have no other choice but to intervene militarily.

"This is the Polish action that the Kremlin has been demanding," said a Western diplomat, suggesting that if Jaruzelski does not succeed in restoring order, then the Polish leadership will be out of cards and it will be time for the Soviets to play their hand.

The Soviet official said he believed that if Polish authorities do not prevail, "friendly assistance" — Soviet military intervention — will be necessary.

The Kremlin has resisted military intervention despite 16 months of unprecedented turmoil — and reform — in the Soviet-bloc state.

Acting as a serious constraint now on Soviet military intervention, as it has throughout the crisis, is the impact such a step would have on East-West relations.

The United States and its Western European allies have warned repeatedly through the Polish events that Soviet intervention there would have the gravest consequences on all aspects of relations.

Intervention question addressed

Reagan gives Soviets warning

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Sunday the United States has made it clear to Moscow "how seriously we would view any interference in Poland" by the Soviet Union.

Reagan made the comment after U.S. officials summoned Soviet and Polish diplomats to the State Department Sunday in the wake of the Polish communist government's crackdown on the Solidarity labor movement.

"Everyone views it seriously," Reagan said upon returning to the White House from Camp David. "We're monitoring the situation. Beyond that I can't have any comment."

The president refused to answer questions from reporters about possible U.S. action in the wake of the crackdown. Nor would he say what message he would send to the people of Poland.

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Sunday at a news conference in Brussels, Belgium, that the United States was aware of a rising level of tension in Poland, but "we had no information to suggest that there would be this sweeping imposition of martial law...All of the Western parties were surprised...I know the United States was..."

Reagan returned to Washington Sunday after spending the weekend at the presidential retreat in Maryland, where he was kept abreast of the events in Poland.

Apparently referring to diplomatic exchanges before Sunday's events in Poland, Reagan said messages have been sent "by, I think, almost all the free world several times" to the Soviet Union.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the crackdown is the "showdown" the Soviet Union wanted between the Communist Party in Poland and the country's defiant Solidarity movement.

Kissinger said in a television interview that the United States should not hold any more arms control talks with the Soviets until the situation in Poland is clarified.

Stockman's try to cut agencies nixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department has beaten back an attempt by Budget Director David Stockman to gut three agencies that promote sales of American goods overseas and keep track of U.S. industrial trends.

Deputy Commerce Secretary Joseph Wright said Commerce officials and the president's budget review panel reached an agreement last week that the government "should be involved in trade development."

Fatal accident linked to metal fatigue

CHICAGO (AP) — Metal fatigue is suspected as the cause of an accident last week that killed five construction workers in Chicago's Loop, the head of the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement said.

James Zagel said Saturday that examination of four rods used in a wire basket which gave way showed "at least one (rod) broke above the weld and below the connection with the cable." The rods are three-fourths of an inch wide.

Five men died Friday and a sixth was injured seriously when the basket they were being hoisted in fell about 100 feet into a dirt excavation pit.

Sakharovs starting recovery stage

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov and his wife appeared weak and shrunken after a 17-day hunger strike in their Gorky exile, but they have eagerly started on the road to recovery, their daughter-in-law said Sunday.

"They looked very weak and very pale," said Liza Alexeyeva, who returned to Moscow Sunday morning after visiting the Nobel laureate and his wife, Yelena Bonner, in their hospital suite in Gorky.

Oil chiefs hope Reagan changes mind

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — American oil company executives said Sunday that while they still hoped President Reagan would reconsider his order that all U.S. citizens evacuate Libya, they did not expect that he would.

"We have more or less resigned ourselves to this, although we're hoping the government will reconsider," a senior executive told The Associated Press.

County Republicans are short on candidates

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

Monday is the last chance for candidates to file for the county races, but Republicans, who currently dominate the county board 8-6, are apt to lose their leadership if more party members do not file for seats being vacated.

All of the board's 14 seats, two for each of the seven districts, are up for election, as well as the county clerk office, treasurer and sheriff.

Democratic incumbents Robert Harrell and Shirley Booker face no challengers for the county clerk and treasurer offices, but two-term incumbent Jackson County Sheriff Don White faces several opponents, two from his own party.

White was acquitted last year of four counts of official misconduct and two counts of theft in connection with the alleged theft of jail food and gas and the removal of his son's arrest records from county files.

William Kilquist, investigator for the county state's attorney, and Raymond Mileur, a 26-year-old former marine, are the Democrats who have filed for sheriff's office.

Republicans George Taylor and William Maurizio also filed for the post.

Taylor is a mechanic at Taylor Automotive in Murphysboro and has two years of experience as a sheriff's deputy for the county. Maurizio was an Illinois state trooper for 25 years. He ran against White in 1978, but lost.

Republicans William Shuffleberger of District 2, Doug Erickson from District 5, Mary Nell Chew from District 7, and Robert Crim and Joan Holcomb, both of District 4, have all said that they won't run for re-election to the board.

However, Board Chairwoman Chew said if she files for any post it would be for the treasurer's office.

Shufflebarger and Holcomb said they have time demands elsewhere. Crim, a retiree from the Air Force, said his search for a job in the private sector may take him elsewhere. Erickson, an SIU-C faculty member in the Accountancy Department, cited problems with some courthouse employees as one reason for not running for re-election and added that he wants to go on sabbatical in 1982.

Republicans who have filed for the board are: incumbent Irvin Phoenix, for District 1; William Gollither, V. R. "Spike" Erickson, and incumbent Larry Lipe to District 2; appointee Robert E. Edwards for District 3; and Nelson R. Gilman for District 5.

Erickson served for over a decade on the Jackson County Board of Supervisors, the predecessor of the county board. He is a car salesman at Southern Ford Inc.

Edwards was appointed to the board recently, after Republican Kay Blackwell resigned to take a job out of the county.

Gilman is a maintenance worker for Giant City State Park and a union steward for earlier this month to interview for the job and meet members of the University community.

Farrell spoke for all the candidates when he said "I think the number one task of the vice president for university relations can be summarized in two words — fund raising."

Farrell said that generating increased funding from the private sector will be necessary to maintain high standards at the University in the future. He would especially make use of SIU-C's tradition of research and service in the Southern Illinois region to increase funding.

"I think what we're talking about is that if the University serves the region, and I think it does, it's fair to ask for some reciprocal support from within the region," Farrell said.

Successful fund-raising would depend, in part, on recognizing this "give and take" relationship and capitalizing on it, Farrell said.

"It's a matter of making the interdependence of the region and the University apparent to people," he said

Some fund-raising efforts would be directed at industries which make use of SIU-C graduates as well, Farrell said.

Getting to know the needs of businesses and trying to meet those needs with academic programs would be a major part of fund-raising efforts under McAnally.

"We need to find out what kinds of program business might be interested in seeing us develop," McAnally said. "Many businesses make contributions on a kind of quid pro quo basis, and we would try to meet their needs."

McAnally would also try to make use of alumni to promote ties with donors in business and industry.

Developing donations from alumni would be the main thrust of Ciervo's attempt to generate funds, since alumni are traditionally a school's strongest supporters.

"About 85 percent of your donated money comes from alumni, compared to 10 percent from foundations and 5 percent from business," he said. "You've got to keep that in perspective when you're seeking funds."

Ciervo would also try to expand the number of possible donors to who would not necessarily be alumni.

"You need to keep detailed files on potential givers, invite them to University functions, and develop ties between them and the University," he said. "That's what SIU-C hasn't done enough of in the past."

Two of the candidates, Ciervo and McAnally, felt some expansion of the staff at the office of University relations would be needed before effective fund-raising could be undertaken.

"You have to expand your staff, first of all, because it just takes people to get the work done," Ciervo said.

McAnally agreed, saying, "There is no question that expansion would be needed in the actual area of fund-raising, because it is clearly understaffed."

Sticking to his guns

This response refers to Mr. Christopher Kade's opinion stated in his Dec. 10 column. In that column, he states that an irrelevant comment was made when I referred to one city council member's comment that students should not vote in Carbondale.

I agree with Mr. Kade's overall assessment of the Dec. 7 City Council meeting. A great number of people, including students, businessmen and city officials, with the exception of Todd Rogers, got out of hand. I, too, got carried away by the emotion of the issue.

However, I feel much more at fault for my "prodigal son" comparison than on my reference to the student vote issue. The comment about students voting I had thought about in great detail prior to the meeting. I believed it to be a relevant issue when deciding who should bear the brunt of the tax.

True, such a policy of discouraging student voting is not that of the council. I never said it was. But for one public official to believe—solely a philosophy justifies that such a viewpoint be brought to public scrutiny if that individual is voting on an issue negatively affecting the student populace of a community.

If I had to do it over again, I would stick to my guns.

I am not perfect. I enjoy working at my student trustee position. Yet I am still learning when and how to express both my convictions and the convictions of those I represent. Not being infallible, I make mistakes. In Mr. Kade's opinion, I made a mistake this time.

I disagree. I have to, in order to live with my conscience, stick to and articulate my principles no matter if they are "crowd-pleasers" or unpopular.

The press' criticisms of my functioning is welcomed. It keeps me on my toes. Please realize that Mr. Kade and I disagree on this one issue. That does not change my feeling that this semester's DE is simply the best of the 13 semesters I've seen while attending SIU. The editorial viewpoint by John Schrag of Sept. 9, 1981 on Reagan was particularly outstanding. —Stacy Irvin, SIU-C Student Trustee.

Waytz column was cruel joke

On Wednesday, Dec. 9, Ruth Waytz stated in her Viewpoint, "Beating dead horses can become an art," that she gets a "cheap laugh" from letters written to the DE on such "overdone, repulsive and offensive" issues as abortion, gun control, University policies, drug abuse and Reagan's failing economic plan, and apparently wishes that these letters and issues would go away so that she can read "Doonesbury" in peace.

Ruth states that all of these issues "have been discussed to death" and that the subjects are just "dead horses."

When I was a kid, I used to cover my eyes and say "You can't see me." I firmly believed that since I couldn't see anybody, they couldn't see me. I stopped playing this game long ago, but it seems that Ruth still does.

When someone holds a gun to the back of your head and rapes you in Thompson Woods, you'll raise a pretty big fuss. You won't be able to just close your eyes, or read Doonesbury and expect all your problems to disappear.

People don't just write letters to the DE to "ramble and spout." The people who write are not in decisionmaking positions and they are trying to let the people who are in those positions know how they feel.

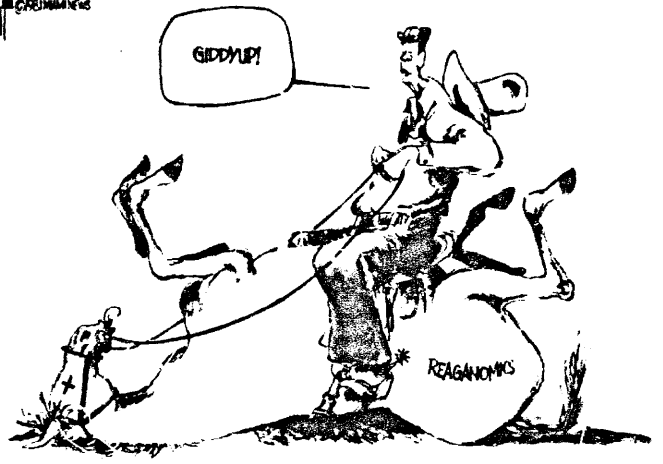

In the real world, it takes communication, commitment, conflict and compromise to solve problems that can and will affect many people.

If you don't want to live in the real world and care about decisions that can affect your life, then perhaps you had better check out of it and get a job as a character in a comic strip.

You may feel that your Viewpoint article was just poking fun or joking around, but it turned out to be a very cruel joke.

By the way, your article missed the two most offensive and revolting issues that the people of the earth face today. I'm not surprised though, since the vast majority of the world, (including you), is plagued by both of them: ignorance and apathy. —James Janacek, Cinema and Photography.

A billion here and there... taxes need not be dirty word

THERE ARE two sides to every story, so the journalistic maxim goes, and there are two sides to every budget. Most of the budget talk we have heard lately has dwelled one-sidedly on reducing federal spending. Not nearly enough has been said about increasing federal revenue.

An unpleasant reality has to be faced: Unless Congress and the president will agree on major cuts in defense spending, no significant savings are in prospect on the expenditure side. Nothing much could be done to Social Security payments; nothing at all can be done about interest on the debt. Grant-in-aid programs for states and localities have been cut to the point that governors and mayors are howling in pain. The secretaries of energy, education, commerce, housing and labor — to mention only a few — are balking at further reductions.

MEANWHILE, the recession continues, the rate of unemployment rises and guesstimates on the deficit for the current fiscal year are climbing out of sight. Some working papers at the Office of Management and Budget, leaked to reporters last week, presented the horrendous possibility of $71 billion in cutlays, $622 billion in income, and a deficit of $109 billion for the year.

Such a monstrous deficit, representing 14 percent of expenditures, would not be badly out of line with other deficits for recent years. In constant dollars, we have survived such deficits before. But few persons think in also be doubled. Over five years, this would bring in $10 billion. If taxes on beer and wine were doubled, credit another $6.5 billion.

THUS FAR, Congress has refused to consider a limit on the income tax deductions we take for mortgage interest and consumer interest. A $5,000 cap on mortgage interest would produce an additional $35.6 billion. Abolition of the consumer interest deduction would improve revenues by $39.6 billion.

Congress also has declined to increase user fees for internal waterways, general aviation, Coast Guard services and deep-draft navigation. The modest increases asked by Mr. Reagan would produce more than $19 billion over a five-year period.

BUT LOOKING to the future, a good many steps could be taken to improve the situation on the revenue side. The steps could be taken, that is, if Congress has the courage to take them.

Over a span of five fiscal years, revenues could be increased in this fashion:

The federal gasoline tax is now 4 cents a gallon. Every penny of increase — up to a point — would produce another billion dollars in revenue. A not intolerable 2-cent boost would produce $10 billion over the five years.

Suppose the present 8-cent-per-pack tax on cigarettes were doubled. This would produce an estimated $9 billion.

The present liquor tax of $1.5 per proof gallon could

A WINDFALL profits tax on deregulated natural gas could be a big bonanza — anywhere from $50 billion to $125 billion depending upon the way in which a tax were structured.

Such a tax increase would require a high level of political courage, a characteristic for which Congress is not widely acclaimed, but in one combination or another they would go far toward reducing the prospective deficits.

A billion here and a billion there, as Everett Dirksen used to say, it all adds up. The point is that we don't have to tolerate mountainous deficits in the out-years. We can improve the picture, if we try. —(c) 1981, Universal Press Syndicate.

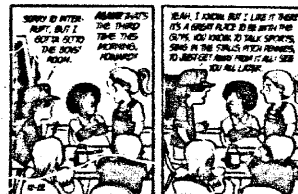

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau:

Jack Daniel's Band revives spirit of a simpler America

By Joe Walter
Entertainment Editor

It harked back to a simpler time. A time where most Americans lived on either farms or small towns.

It was also a time of less alienation, when most people who lived in small towns or around them knew each other and would gather on the weekends to hear the town band play.

That was the spirit that Mr. Jack Daniel's Original Silver Cornet Band brought to Shryock Auditorium Saturday night.

This act is a re-creation of the original band that was financed and equipped by the famous whiskey distiller around the turn of the century for a cost of around $300. The present band's equipment and settings cost around $30,000.

The setting was Lynchburg, Tenn. circa 1905. The conductor, Dave Fulmer, came out to set the scene. His narration, done in a folksy, sincere style, gave one a nice, pleasant feeling as the musicians gathered around the podium cluster by cluster.

This business and the downhome atmosphere was effectively portrayed by Fulmer and his musicians as they recreated the weekend summer and Christmas concerts under the townsquare gazebo.

The summer concert performance took place during the first act. The band played selections such as "Shenandoah," "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," "How to Build a Band," "Mr. Jack" and others. This new orchestra, made up of professional musicians, probably sounded better than the original band, made up of amateurs who worked in and out of Lynchburg, and who in all likelihood probably did not have a horn that sounded as crisp as the one in this band.

The original band also probably did not use as much slick stage business as this re-creation, but one risks losing sight of the effect an act such as Mr. Jack Daniel's Silver Cornet Band has when only analyzing it purely from an intellectual perspective. The effect has a sure-fire way of tugging at the heartstrings of all who are cast under its pleasant spell.

During the seasonal part of the show, the band played orchestrated versions of Christmas carols. For a finale, Fulmer encouraged the audience to sing along with the band with the lyrics that were included in the programs. At first, the audience half-heartedly joined in but it gradually warmed up as artificial snow dropped from holes in the auditorium ceiling.

Fulmer's warmth, charm and rapport with the audience made the performance seem truly special and gave the event some magic chronicling a time when Christmas was less commercialized — until one walked outside the auditorium into the lobby where T-shirt salesmen hawked their wares.

Not that I mind someone making an honest buck, but why not records? That would have seemed more appropriate than to succumb to the tacky T-shirt craze.

3,000 rabbits killed in Idaho

MUD LAKE, Idaho (AP) — Fresh snow Sunday left few traces of a bloody massacre of thousands of jackrabbits as farmers mapped plans for another assault on the long-legged hares devouring their crops.

A stench filled the air near a slaughter pen where an estimated 3,000 rabbits were rounded up and clubbed to death Saturday by about 800 men and boys wielding baseball bats, tire tools, nightsticks and golf clubs in a line about two miles long.

It took farmers until midnight to skin the rabbits for two Nigerian students who want to ship the meat back to Africa to sell.

Ovin Twitchell, chairman of the Mud Lake Farmers' Rabbit Committee, said other rabbit drives are planned, but he gave no definite dates. "Now we are going to have some rabbit drives," he said. "That one was for the news media, the next one is for us."

The farmers had hoped to kill 15,000 jackrabbits, which are blamed for destroying $5 million in crops this year during a rabbit population boom that occurs about every 10 years.

Twitchell said Sunday he was pleased that no citations were issued. Law enforcement officers had warned rabbit herders they could be found guilty of misdemeanor violations for cruelty to animals.

On latest album, The Cars present a far different animal

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

Shake It Up, The Cars. Elektra Records, Reviewer's Rating: 3 stars (4 stars tops)

Most people know The Cars for bouncy new wave pop songs like "Let the Good Times Roll" and "Just What I Needed." However, the band that has emerged on the last two albums is a far different animal.

The first two albums were graced by vibrant and optimistic songs, which were largely responsible for exposing a mass audience to new wave.

But on the third album, "Panorama," The Cars took a major swing away from the snappy pop style to a more deliberate, almost droning sound. If anything, "Panorama" seemed to indicate that The Cars were better at snappy pop music.

On The Cars' new album, "Shake It Up," they become more comfortable and equally adept at the slower, droning style. "Panorama" was uneven, almost schizophrenic, in its division between the droning and the pop styles. The music was divided in two directions, with both forms suffering as a consequence.

But the musical direction has solidified on "Shake It Up." Only the title song is purely in the style of the band's early pop music. And, while that song will probably be a favorite among Cars fans, the rest of the album offers plenty of music to enjoy as well.

To match the slower, more depressing sound of the music is the more pessimistic, pessimistic tone of the lyrics. As usual, it's impossible to pinpoint what songwriter/guitarist Ric Ocasek is saying in the songs, but there is certainly a disturbing feel to the compositions.

Take "Victim of Love" and "Cruiser," two of the more pop-styled, but still understated songs on the album. Here Ocasek gives the listener an idea of the theme of the songs, but uses such ambiguous phrasing that no conclusions can be drawn from the lyrics.

These songs are fairly typical of the quality of "Shake It Up." "Since You're Gone" and "This Could Be Love" contain some of Ocasek's most comprehensible lyrics to date. The former features a slow, throbbing beat and vocal interpretation that leaves the listener feeling the futility of the lyrics.

Hearing The Cars continue in the more droning style will undoubtedly disappoint fans attracted to the band's early music. But The Cars deserve credit for not falling back on the successful formula of snappy pop songs.

And The Cars' ability to adapt to new styles should give reason to believe that there will be more quality music on forthcoming albums.

Family life worrisome in Poland

EDITOR'S NOTE — The following, filed before the imposition of martial law in Poland, is based on interviews with a Polish couple who told how they coped with food shortages and cared for their two children, including 5-month-old Kuda, "born in a very bad time."

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — For the average family, life in Warsaw has been one of never-ending shortages and lines, problems with feeding, clothing and schooling their children and worries about the future.

But since the formation in July, 1980, of Solidarity, the independent trade union, life also included the freedom to talk about such things.

Solidarity's future was thrown into doubt early Sunday with the imposition of martial law in Poland.

"It's not a normal life we live, it's improvisation," said Anna Gornas, 30, who lives with her 35-year-old husband Janusz in a two-bedroom apartment or the outskirts of Warsaw.

"Most of the people are frustrated and give up, but we still fight," she said in an interview last week in the couple's sparsely furnished living room. "But for how long yet?"

Fighting for the Gornas family involved lengthy shopping trips for the basic necessities of life, a keen eye for a well-stocked store without a line out front and the desire to do what needs to be done to get what they want — or at least what they need.

But it's hard. Gornas, a member of the Communist Party and Solidarity, said he spends three hours a day commuting to his night job at a computer center. He has no car, and transportation in this capital of 1.5 million is on the brink of collapse.

Mrs. Gornas, who worked as an "information specialist" at a factory until she had her second child, Kuba, five months ago, is on maternity leave and housebound with the baby most of the time.

Food is a major expense and hard to find. Pork is rarely available at state markets where the official price is the equivalent of only 70 cents to 85 cents a pound. At private markets, where it is more available, the price is $4.25 a pound. Eggs cost $5.60 a dozen in the private markets and $1.87 at the state markets, when available.

Gornas said he had found a way to beat the lines. He said that while riding the bus, "I watch carefully where they are delivering stuff and if I see a place I jump out and get things without waiting."

But, he said, "Last month I signed up on a waiting list for meat at 5 p.m. for next-day delivery. I stood in line all night and finally bought four kilograms (8.8 pounds). The average waiting time for meat is three to eight hours.

Mrs. Gornas said her day is spent caring for the baby.

Sale of former home of Sinatra attracts few buyers

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) — An auction of the four-story brownstone that was home to a young crooner named Frank Sinatra attracted only about 10 people — and none offered to buy.

"Nobody said anything," said Karen Gordon, the broker handling the sale here Saturday.

Bids were to open at $150,000. Sinatra was 17 and just beginning his career when his parents, Anthony and Natalie Sinatra, bought the building at 841 Garden St. on Dec. 23, 1932.

The auction was scheduled to coincide with the entertainer's 56th birthday. The brokers, the Century 21 Gordon Agency of Jersey City, had a birthday cake and a gathering of old neighborhood friends of the Sinatras at the sale. Sinatra did not attend.

Ms. Gordon said she believed the reporters who came to cover the sale may have "really frightened" bidders.

New form simplifies financial aid

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

SIU-C students will be able to apply for all available public financial aid with one form when they file ACT Family Financial Statements for 1982-83.

"Last year, students had to use two forms," Joe Camille, director of the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, said. "One was for Basic Grants, Campus-Based Aid and the Student Work Program, and another form was used for Illinois State Scholarship Commission awards."

The new forms enable students to apply for ISSC awards at the same time they apply for other forms of aid.

Campus-Based Aid consists of National Direct Student Loans, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, and Student to Student Grants.

Camille said the forms were consolidated to the ISSC program money.

"It was done to make it easier on students, of course, and to save money by decreasing the cost of administration in the ISSC program," Camille said.

The new forms will allow the ISSC to use student need analyses performed by the state government in making awards, Camille said. This will save the ISSC the cost of performing need analyses, he said.

Camille advised students to apply for all forms of aid when they fill out the forms.

"You might as well apply for all of the aid at one time when you file now," Camille said.

Decision on status of Iranian group to come in spring

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

The Office of Student Development will wait until the beginning of the spring semester to make a decision on the status of the Moslem Student Society, an Iranian student group whose recognized student organization status was revoked on Dec. 7 by the Student Senate.

The senate revoked the RJS status of the Moslem Student Society to punish the group for its involvement in a fight on Sept. 4 in the Student Center with the Iranian Moslem Association. According to SIU-C police, even people were injured in the fight, which broke out after pro-Ayatollahi Khomeini students, including Iranian Moslem Association members refused to allow anti-Khomeini students, including members of the Moslem Student Society, to speak at a memorial service.

Nancy Harris, director of the OSD, said she will conduct a hearing "within the first two weeks" of the spring semester about the fight and the status revocation recommended by the senate.

"It's just about as easy as applying for only one, and your chances are better."

It is necessary when filling out the forms to include SIU-C's school code - 1144 - and a $6 processing fee according to Camille.

To apply for Basic or Pell Grants, students should answer

"yes" to question 74 on the form, Camille said. To apply for ISSC awards, students should answer "yes" to questions 74 and 75-A. Students who wish to apply for Campus-Based Aid or become eligible for the Student Work Program should answer "yes" to question 75-B and complete Section H.

Priest fears Polish return to terrorism

CHICAGO (AP) — A high-ranking Polish priest in the Roman Catholic Church here said Sunday he hopes events in Poland will not return the country to the "terrorism" he said the Polish people experienced during the rule of Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin.

"We fervently pray that what has happened in Poland today will not lead to bloodshed, will not lead to a return to the days of the terrorism the Polish people experienced during the era of Joseph Stalin," said Alfred Abramowicz, one of two auxiliary bishops in the Archdiocese of Chicago.

Abramowicz made his comments in English during a mass in Polish at Five Holy Martyrs Church, a mostly Polish congregation on Chicago's South Side. Chicago, with an estimated 600,000 Poles, has the largest Polish population of any city outside Warsaw. Abramowicz was commenting on the Polish government's imposition of martial law Saturday night and arrest of leaders of the independent labor union, Solidarity, which has made Poland's communist government and the Kremlin edgy since its establishment last year.

During Stalin's rule from 1929 to 1953, the Soviet Union gained increasing influence over the government of neighboring Poland, and Poles suspected of disloyalty to the Soviets were removed from power. Some Polish political leaders and Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, then head of the Roman Catholic Church of Poland, were imprisoned.

Abramowicz, 62, called the weekend reports of the crack-down and arrests in Poland "disturbing news."

Water shortage hits West Texas

FABENS, Texas (AP)—Every other day or so, Ellen Wilson hitches a 1,000-gallon tank trailer to her truck and drives into the tiny community of Fabens. There she fills her tank with the most precious commodity in the area—water.

For four years, Wilson and her family have been living in an arid area of a Rio Grande valley near the Mexico border. All of their water for drinking, washing clothes and bathing comes from a 3,006-gallon cistern she keeps filled by trips into town, more than seven miles away.

"Four wells have been dug out here in our area over the years and the water was just terrible," Wilson said. "This whole valley is in trouble." Wilson's water woes are a microcosm of the problems plaguing the area around El Paso.

Most of the underground water is undrinkable, containing salt and other chemicals, at the same time available water resources are being used up by a rapidly growing population.

El Paso currently is embroiled in a lawsuit with New Mexico to get water from an aquifer that is located in New Mexico just over the Texas border. City planners allocate carefully which areas of the valley can be provided water from the city, without causing shortages.

The result is that people living outside water districts must fend for themselves in the struggle to get adequate, drinkable water supplies.

"Nearly all of the people on the farms out here have to haul water," Wilson said. "Some of them have wells, but the water eats all of the plumbing out and just ruins everything."

Fabens' water district evolved from a privately-owned water system purchased about 20 years ago, said O.C. "Buddy" Brown, manager of the water district.

"The people in this district obligated themselves when they formed this district through bonded indebtedness," Brown said.

City Council to discuss amusement tax proposal

By Bob Bendurant
Staff Writer

SIU-C students will have an opportunity to find out the City Council's reaction to student views in opposition to a proposed amusement tax.

At its informal meeting at 7 p.m. Monday, the council will discuss opinions it heard at a public hearing Dec. 7 on the tax.

At the hearing, various alternatives were suggested to the "pass-on" tax proposed by the city administration to be levied on the receipts of motels and hotels, eating and drinking establishments, movies and arcade games.

The tax is to be levied to help fund the debt service of the proposed downtown parking garage, part of a planned hotel-convention center project.

The council will also consider Monday a $140,000 guarantee to the convention center developers.

The resolution would require the city to pay the developers $140,000 if the land for the convention center is not cleared within a year after receiving the federal funds to do so.

A $2 million Urban Development Action Grant from the department of Housing and Urban Development is expected to be released in January for buying and clearing the land.

City Attorney George Kiriakos has submitted a draft of an ordinance to the council which would establish "quick take" procedures for eminent domain projects, of which the proposed convention center parking garage is one.

The council will also hold a public hearing on a proposed ordinance to establish a stricter policy on parties which disturb the peace and held both landlords and tenants accountable.

Reagan's latest budget cuts could be a 'Pyrrhic victory'

By David Espe
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has the extra billions in budget cuts he pushed Congress so hard to pass — but in dollars as well as symbolism, they're worth far less than the victories he won in spring and summer.

This time, Reagan was forced to meet Congress more than halfway, and ended up with $4 billion in cuts from domestic programs when he really wanted $8.4 billion.

Even part of the $4 billion in cuts is suspect. Several officials say the savings could evaporate later this year if the programs cost more to run than the administration says they will.

"There are probably a few mirrors in there," cuts that may turn out later not to save any money, said one Senate official who asked not to be identified by name.

"The largest 'mirror' calls for 'savings' of about $400 million in Social Security, Medicaid and unemployment insurance. The actual benefits paid out under these programs would not be affected, but administrative savings would be ordered.

News Analysis

In another year a cut of $4 billion would be hailed as a major accomplishment; in 1981 it shrinks to almost insignificant.

Last spring, Reagan asked for and received $35 billion in budget cuts, almost exactly according to his script. He also sought and won a three-year cut in personal income taxes that was the economic centerpiece of his 1980 presidential campaign.

But in the "$16 billion fall offensive," the second round of austerity recommendations that dates to Sept. 24, he hadn't fared as well.

In part, that's because Reagan reversed himself and asked Congress to defer action on cutting benefit programs and raising taxes. But key members of the House and Senate already said there was little inclination to pass them.

The president backtracked on Social Security, preparing to ask for cuts but then pulling back because of opposition in Congress. And, lawmakers have yet to act on his call to cut the nation's defense buildup by $2 billion.

Congress also is leaving a stronger imprint than it did last spring and summer on how the spending cuts are being apportioned.

"I think the president's met us more than halfway this time," said Senate Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska. "To reach $4 billion, he agreed to some of our priorities, but we agreed to his numbers."

Reagan was forced to accept a last-minute reduction of about $400 million in his foreign aid package. House Republicans felt the cut was necessary to get support of southern Democrats for the full bill.

The president also agreed to additional spending for social programs to please the moderate to liberal Republicans in the House. Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., estimated the amount was $730 million more than the administration sought, even if it was less than the Democratic majority wanted.

"I think we did pretty good," said Conte, who made no secret of his dissatisfaction with some of Reagan's proposals.

County investigating fatal auto accident

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

Jackson County Sheriff's deputies are investigating an accident that occurred Saturday night in northwestern Jackson County in which a Malden, Mo., woman was killed.

Deputies identified the victim as Norma Willis, 57, a passenger in a car driven by her husband, Charles Willis, 58. Mrs. Willis died in surgery at 10:05 p.m. Saturday at St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro. Willis was listed in stable condition Sunday. Deputies said the accident occurred at 5:40 p.m. at the intersection of Illinois routes 151 and 3. The Willis' car allegedly ran through a stop sign and was struck broadside by a southbound vehicle driven by Vernon Meyr, 50, of Altomberg, Mo.

Shortly after the wreck, a northbound car driven by Ahndre Beckman, 21, of Ava, struck the Meyr vehicle which was immobilized on the highway as a result of the initial collision. Beckman was not injured.

SIU-C student dies in home fire

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

An SIU-C student was killed early Sunday morning after he was unable to escape a fire that engulfed his home in rural Murphysboro, according to Jackson County Sheriff's deputies.

Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale pronounced dead at the scene James P. Shem, 25, of Wides Village No. 11, Murphysboro, from burns he received in the fire and from smoke inhalation. Shem was a native of Oriland Park.

Deputies said that Shem was trapped inside the house by flames and was unable to leave the premises. Two other occupants of the house, James Frantell and Theresa Irwin, both SIU-C students, were able to get out through windows. They were transported to Memorial Hospital in Carbondale and then transferred to the SIU-C infirmary at the Health Service where they were both listed in satisfactory condition Sunday afternoon.

Firemen said the home was completely engulfed by flames when they arrived on the scene at about 7:55 a.m. The fire, MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government newspaper El Nacional said Sunday that preliminary investigations show the explosion aboard a Nicaraguan jetliner at Mexico City's international airport may have been accidental.

The paper, quoting unidentified technicians, said the explosion may have been due to "intense heat."

Mexican civil aeronautics officials have not ruled out the possibility of a bomb, however.

The explosion Saturday ripped through the luggage compartment of the Boeing 727 belonging to the Nicaraguan airline Aeronica and left a gaping hole more than one yard in diameter on the left side of the fuselage. Five people were injured in the blast including Capt. Augusto Roman and flight attendant Matilde Fitoria.

have been accident

The theory that a terrorist bomb had caused the explosion came into doubt late Saturday after investigators apparently were unable to find traces of any explosive device aboard the plane or among the debris.

Aeronica flight 527 was scheduled for San Salvador and Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, with 117 passengers booked. It carried a crew of eight.

Vietnam vet discusses exam for Agent Orange aftereffects

By Jerry Harkavy
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — The questions go back nearly 15 years, recalling images of forgotten places like C Zone, Dak To and Quang Ngai Province.

The processing clerk logs dates and places, setting the stage for questions about possible contact with Agent Orange, the toxic herbicide used during the Vietnam War to clear jungles and destroy enemy food supplies.

Any direct skin contact with the spray? Ever drink contaminated water? Were eating utensils affected by the spray?

The interview by Mike Baker is the first step in my Agent Orange screening examination, a two-hour physical now being given to veterans who served in Vietnam.

Like hundreds of other vets in Maine, I signed up for the exam, eager to allay any health concerns and contribute to the pool of information being gathered by the Veterans Administration about possible health damage resulting from the widespread use of the defoliant.

In 1967, I was 24, serving as an Army information officer with the 173rd Airborne Brigade and later the Americal Division. Although I spent most of my Vietnam tour at brigade or division headquarters, I occasionally went out with infantry companies to take pictures or accompany TV crews.

As I recall, most troops were aware that we were using defoliants, but if anyone had any health concerns about sprays they were well-kept secrets.

Not surprisingly, time had dulled my memories of Vietnam, leaving uncertainties about how to respond to some of Baker's questions about contact with Agent Orange. He assured me that was not unusual.

"The only ones who really remember are the ones who were sprayed on directly," he explained as he entered my responses on a coded form.

"At the end of each month we send this code sheet into Washington, and it's fed into this computer, called the Agent Orange registry," Baker added.

My appointment for the screening, at a sprawling VA hospital complex in Togus near Augusta, was made through James Tukey, who heads the state's Agent Orange Information Committee.

Luckily, I have had no medical problems since my tour in Vietnam ended in early 1968. But Agent Orange, the toxic defoliant used extensively during the war, has been suspected of causing birth defects and ailments ranging from skin conditions to cancer.

As of last month, 65,000 veterans nationwide have undergone screenings, and 10,500 have filed claims for disability, VA officials say. About 1.6 million Americans served in Vietnam.

Nearly 800 Maine residents, out of an estimated 16,000 who served in Vietnam, have been screened at Togus. The percentage taking the exam is "considerably higher" in Maine than in most other states, said Donald L. Wert, medical administrative officer at Togus.

Wert said various groups in Maine, including the VA and service organizations, have been taking part in well-publicized campaigns to alert Vietnam vets about Agent Orange.

A VA spokesman in Washington said veterans wishing to take the physical could call their local Veterans Administration office listed in the white pages under U.S. Government, and ask for the Benefits Counselor.

"I'd rather have a veteran come in and be examined than to stay home and worry and wonder that something might be wrong," he said.

The screening, which is similar to a routine annual physical, includes no specific test for Agent Orange. Dioxin, the highly toxic substance in Agent Orange, can be detected through a biopsy of fatty tissue where the substance is stored.

The physical includes a check of height, weight, pulse and blood pressure, a medical history and a comprehensive examination by a doctor. Finally, there was a chest X-ray and a series of lab tests.

The long-distance mating call. If the girl next door is no longer next door, you can still whisper sweet nothings in her ear.

Just pick up the phone. Then pour your heart out, long distance. It's a nice way to keep a burning love hot. (Or to rekindle an old flame.)

Say all you want about absence making the heart grow fonder. You'll soon discover that the best thing for a long-distance relationship is long distance.

Scholars coming to rescue of cultural exchange programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Past recipients of Fulbright scholarships are riding to the rescue of the prestigious award and other cultural exchange programs facing President Reagan's budget axe. So far, they have made some progress in convincing Congress.

Fulbright alumni and other scholars argue that the exchange programs are a good way to educate future foreign leaders about America.

An appropriate bill now before the Senate would not only restore all the cuts, but also would add an extra $9 million for the Fulbright scholarships and direct the administration to spend the money. A bill restoring the cuts has already passed the House.

Reagan, however, has vowed to make his cuts stick. Congressional sources say they're getting no signals on whether the administration is willing to exempt the exchange program from the cuts.

In response to Reagan's fall directive for every federal agency to chop 12 percent from its budget, the International Communications Agency wants to cut its cultural exchange program and not the Voice of America and other ICA broadcast operations.

ICA spokesman Henry Ryan said his agency hopes Congress and the administration will prevent the cuts from being made.

But should ICA reductions occur, he said, the agency has decided they must come in exchange programs.

ICA has postponed cutting $25.0 million from the $48 million planned for scholarship programs and $11.5 million from the $19.8 million for visitor exchange programs.

The biggest single cut would slash $19.8 million from the $41.9 now ticketed for the Fulbrights.

Named for former Sen. J. William Fulbright, the scholarships have brought about 85,000 students from other countries to the United States since World War II and have sent about 45,000 Americans abroad to study.

The Arkansas democrat, who was chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for many years, says the program gives foreign students, many of whom become leaders, an understanding of America.

And he once testified that he doubts the late President Lyndon Johnson would have escalated the Vietnam War had Johnson been a Fulbright alumni and known more about Asia.

"If he had lived in Asia for a year under this program, he would not have engaged in that conflict, I believe," Fulbright told a House committee three years ago. "This can apply to anybody in a powerful position. I think it's one of the reasons there is so much sympathy and understanding abroad for this country."

Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., chairman of the House Africa subcommittee, said during a House debate that the cuts will close down virtually all Fulbright programs in Africa that have "paid off with the creation of a moderate pro-Western government in Zimbabwe."

Wolpe said five of Zimbabwe's 15 Cabinet members are Fulbright alumni, as are 25 other Zimbabwe officials.

The ICA says the cuts would eliminate scholarships in 61 of the 120 countries in the program, wiping out nearly all in Africa and many in Asia, the Middle East and South America. Fewer of the European scholarships would be eliminated.

Ryan said Europe is not being favored. Instead, he explained, longstanding treaties and agreements would prevent cuts there.

With lobbying from scholars, Congress is likely to pass legislation blocking cuts in the exchange programs.

Arthur P. Dudden, executive director of the Fulbright Alumni Association, says Fulbright alumni and other scholars have worked with the congressional committees that would have the most influence on blocking the cuts.

More than 4,000 alumni, and all U.S. University and college presidents, have been urged to send mailgrams opposing the cuts to the committee members, Dudden said.

The lobbying has fallen on friendly ears. Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., R-Conn., floor manager of the appropriation bill to block the cuts, has been a supporter of exchange programs as a way to win foreign friends.

A bill before the Senate would appropriate $8.5 billion for the State Department and other agencies, including $101 million for exchange programs and expansion of the Fulbright program. That's $9 million above what the administration originally proposed and which has been approved by the House.

Weicker repeatedly tells about visiting Cuba's 75 schools for foreign students, particularly one where 600 students from South-west Africa Namibia "are being educated courtesy of the Soviet Union and Cuba."

"They are going to go back to Namibia and they are going to become doctors, lawyers, judges, some of them heads of the military," he said at a recent hearing. "We are not, I repeat not, going to go ahead and influence the direction of the world through jumping in at the last hour of the last act with an arms shipment."

YMCA to offer mini-courses

Several mini-courses will be offered by the Jackson County YMCA during the semester break.

Two series of CPR courses will be held daily from Dec. 21 to Dec. 24. The first session is from 9 a.m. to noon and the second is from 1 to 4 p.m. A $2 fee covers the cost of the equipment. Participants must be 13 years of age or older.

A mini-course entitled "Fitness Fantasia" will run Dec. 21 to 24 and Dec. 28 to 31 from 8 to 9 a.m. at the YMCA. The fee for the eight sessions is $5. The course is for those who have participated in a similar course previously.

Special developmental swim and aerobic exercises classes for children are also being offered. The classes are designed to help promote body fitness and stimulate motor skills.

The programs will consist of six lessons running from 8:45 to 9:45 Dec. 21 to Dec. 30.

Fees range from $3 to $9, depending on membership status. Registration information is available from Doris Heinz at the YMCA.

The brightest ideas in the world are here to play.

Taxi driver robbed by man wielding pistol

A taxi driver was robbed Thursday evening of about $24 and his coin changer by a lone gunman wielding a .38 caliber blue steel automatic pistol, according to Carbondale police.

Ronald D. Ingersoll, 33, of 805 W. Freeman, an employee of the Yellow Cab Co., told police that while he was parked in the 400 block of East Chestnut Street a man approached him and demanded money. The incident occurred at 6:11 p.m.

Police described the suspect as a negro male, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing about 145 to 150 pounds, 25 years of age and wearing an army fatig jacket and an orange ski mask.

Democrats filing for the board are: incumbent Tross Pierson for District 1; Robert L. Koehn and Kenneth Jarrett for District 2; Harry Browdy and incumbent Eugene Chambers for District 3; Blaney Miller and Darnecea Moultrie for District 4; Kay Allen and appointee Donald Meltzer to District 5; Mae Nelson and Natalie Trimble, both District 6 incumbents; and Gene Dybvig and Georgeann Hartzog to District 7.

Koehn, from Gorham, is a part-time agriculture teacher at Mississippi Valley Unit 166. Jarrett, from Jacob, is a township supervisor for Fountain Bluff and an installer and repairman for the Egyptian Telephone Cooperative.

Browdy served eight years as a Murphysboro City Council member until 1981 and is a former Director of Murphysboro's Emergency Service and Disaster Agency.

Miller was Carbondale's city commissioner of police from 1951 to 1959, and after that he was Carbondale mayor until his 1967 mayoral defeat to David Keene. Moultrie is a member of the citizens' advisory committee to the Carbondale Development Block Grant Program and is currently a secretary at SIUC.

NATO meeting is good and bad

for United States
URBANA (AP) — Betty Gordon, 55, doesn't mind the midnight phone call every December from a loud bunch of college kids.

In fact, she loves it. The call from University of Illinois students — generally singing "Jingle Bells" at the top of their lungs — marks the beginning of a unique annual service called Dial-A-Carol.

News Analysis

"I wouldn't miss that call for anything," said Gordon, who helped create Dial-A-Carol 20 years ago. "If it were 3 o'clock in the morning, I wouldn't mind."

But, the students at Snyder Hall were right on time at midnight Saturday with their call to Gordon. She now works at another dormitory and doesn't even know any of the students at Snyder Hall.

Others who want a Christmas greeting must call the dorm at 217-3332-1882. Carols are played on a record player for most customers, but the students always deliver a live performance for Gordon.

Corbis Reed, one of the students on the second floor who operates the service, expects 3,000 calls by the time the phone lines are taken out Dec. 22.

"We just want to do something to relieve the tension of finals week and to spread the joy of the Christmas season," Reed said. "Everyone here really gets involved in it."

Residents of the dorm spend several hundred dollars of their own money on the project and take turns manning the phone lines, answering calls from people as close as campus and as far away as Alaska, Hawaii and Australia.

"A lot of the long distance calls are from alumni all over the country who call to find out if we're still doing this," said Reed.

Concert brings medieval feel to SIU

Julie Gundagnoll
 Staff Writer

THE GUESTS began arriving about 6:30 p.m. They had been invited to the castle to attend the royal couple's fifth annual Madrigal Dinner Concert, a traditional Christmas celebration in medieval England.

As they approached the banquet hall, they were greeted by the faint music of recorders and tambourines.

The music came from just outside the castle, where the king's musicians softly played wedding music on wooden recorders as they sat on a platform festooned with evergreen branches. Their leader kept rhythm with a tambourine. A harpsichordist joined in to complete the medieval ensemble.

The music was delightful, but the guests had thoughts of roast beef and plum pudding on their minds. Many were relieved when the musicians left the platform, the castle doors swung open and the madrigal dinner began.

THIS IS the fifth year the Madrigal Dinner Concert series has been held at SIU-C. Last week's affair, held Wednesday through Sunday nights, was a collaborative effort by students, faculty, administrative staff, the Student Center food service and other Carbondale citizens.

Upon entering the massive banquet hall, the guests were greeted by the sight of brightly colored banners hanging from the ceiling, decorated with unicorns, lions and crosses.

The gray stone walls of the castle were enriched by old velvet draperies hung over arched entryways. Sights of Christmas trees, each about 15 feet tall, flanked a long banquet table at the front of the banquet hall, their branches sprinkled with tiny white lights.

AFTER THE GUESTS had seated themselves at round tables, a trumpet fanfare proclaimed the arrival of the king and queen and their company. The procession wove through the tables toward the front of the dimly-lit hall, chanting: "We Three Kings."

The Madrigal Singers Wednesday night performed Christmas songs in front of an appreciative audience at the Madrigal Dinner held in the Student Center ballrooms.

Leading the procession were two court jesters clothed in paisley-print and solid-colored velvet, bowing and flourishing melodramatically to herald the entrance of the royal couple.

The king wore heavy, purple velvet robes. His crown was purple and gold, inlaid with colored jewels. The twinkle in his blue eyes seemed to grow brighter each time his loud, hearty laugh rumbled forth. His shaggy, chestnut brown beard and rosy cheeks added to his robust look.

The fair-haired queen walked serenely beside him. Her face had a sad, timeworn beauty, and her robes glittered with silver thread.

ABOUT 15 LORDS and ladies followed. All were dressed in robes and capes of lush velvet and shining silk, trimmed with gold braid and beads. The colors in their costumes were vibrant — royal blues and purples, deep browns, olive greens and bold reds. The lords wore velvet caps adorned with pheasant feathers, and the ladies wore elaborate headdresses trailing wispy veils.

All in the royal train took their seats at the long table, in front of a backdrop depicting a pastoral view from a feudal castle. Snow-covered, forested hills could be seen through the huge windows that opened up behind the royal table.

When everyone was seated, a mealtime prayer was said. Then waiters wearing tunics and tights ceremoniously brought in the steaming wassail bowl on a board as the company sang, "Here We Come A-Wassailing."

And as the guests walked through the castle doors to leave, they stepped out of Merrie Olde England and into the Student Center and 1981.

commitments. However, Monty said if the cuts are severe enough there won't be enough money to honor the commitments, and elimination of the programs would cut off funds for all municipalities.

The City Council last week elected City Manager Carroll and Mayor Hans Fischer to contact federal officials and voice opposition to the cuts.

Some of the strongest opposition to the proposed cuts has come from the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

A spokesman for the Washington-based organization, who asked not to be identified, noted that the proposals are unofficial and cannot be implemented without congressional approval.

The spokesman said he did not believe — as many observers first thought — that the administration merely leaked the proposals to the press to test public reaction.

"I don't think this is a fake treat," he said. "The OMB wants to take as much as they can get."

He said even though initial congressional reaction to the official proposals has been very negative, he expects they will be made.

"The problem with the president's recommendations is that immediately become the basis for negotiation," he said. "I'm fairly sure that Congress would reject a proposal to completely eliminate the CDBG and UDAG funds, but they might settle for the 30 percent cut next year."

U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-94th District, agreed that Congress is more likely to reduce CDBG and UDAG funds than to completely eliminate the programs.

"While I don't completely discount the possibility of seeing the programs eliminated, I think the greater danger is that they will be crippled to the point where they are no longer effective."

Simon, a strong supporter of the grant programs, also agreed that the president, by asking for a big cut, increases the chances of getting a smaller compromise cut.

"I don't think that the House would support cuts at the proposed levels," he said. "But if the administration asks for a 30 percent cut, they may get a 15 percent cut."

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., "definitely opposes" any further cuts to urban aid, according to his press secretary, Wade Nelson.

"The senator thinks that any additional cuts to either the CDBG or UDAG funding would be unnecessary and undesirable," he said.

Kathy Lydon, press secretary for Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said the senator has not yet taken a stance on the proposed reduction, but is opposed to eliminating the programs.

Drug smugglers moving to 'safer' place

FOUR LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Big-time drug smugglers may be setting up operations in the comparative safety of Broward County in hopes of escaping Miami's spiraling crime rate, federal officials say. Drug Enforcement Administration agents said two men they arrested here last week reported they moved their cocaine-smuggling operation "because it was too dangerous in Miami."

"They mentioned that they felt safer operating here in Broward County because of the rampant violent crime in Dade County and in Miami, said Frank White, the DEA supervisor here. "Drug dealers don't want to get ripped off either."

high school graduation and college entrance exams should be tightened, a move he thinks will be an incentive to students to learn more.

Hertzler said states should arrange reciprocal school standards that would enable students to move to different school systems with greater ease. However, he emphasized that the federal government should have no role in this. Hertzler's statement was in line with Reagan's proposed plan to dismantle the Department of Education.

The teaching profession is facing a crisis because teacher education programs are not producing enough high-caliber teachers, Hertzler said. He said bright college students are avoiding the teaching profession because of its low monetary and professional rewards.

But he said funding that might enable teaching salaries to be raised is scarce. President Reagan has asked that the federal education budget be cut by 4 percent.

"Education, from our point of view, is going to have to get by on less from the government," Hertzler said. "But we would like for education to not have to tighten its belt more than anyone else."

Because of funding cuts, educators will have to design creative ways to attract excellence to the teaching profession, Hertzler said.

Hertzler said earlier at a news conference that student financial aid is likely to be cut in the fiscal year 1983 budget because "you have to go where the money is."

It was reported last week that the Office of Management and Budget has proposed slashing the Pell Grant program, aimed at 2.5 million low-income college students, from $2.6 billion to $1 billion.

While Hertzler said he anticipates some severe cuts, he declined to confirm the figures, stating that the budget is still in "discussion stages behind closed doors."

Bears thrash Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — Vince Evans threw three touchdown passes, the last two within a minute and a half in the third quarter, as the Chicago Bears posted a 23-6 victory over the Oakland Raiders Sunday.

The victory boosted Chicago's National Football League record to 5-10, while the defending Super Bowl champion Raiders fell to 7-8.

Oakland had been eliminated from playoff contention on Saturday when a New York Jets' victory over Cleveland knocked the Raiders out of the race for a wild card berth.

Evans, who hit Rickey Watts with a 42-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter, found Watts again with a 3-yard scoring pass that gave Chicago a 14-6 lead with 6:41 left in the third quarter.

Barely a minute later, Alan Page of the Bears recovered a fumble by Raiders quarterback Marc Wilson on the Oakland 22-yard line. Three plays later, Evans passed 22 yards to rookie Ken Margerum for a touchdown.

Early in the fourth quarter, the Bears scored a safety by gang-tackling Wilson in the Raiders' end zone.

se." Scott said. "We're still not shifting right and we're also not putting enough pressure on the ball."

On the offensive side of the court, Scott thinks there are still some problems.

"We're still turning the ball over too much," she said. "Most of them are unforced, it's just sloppy play on our part at times."

The Sahajis built a 45-23 lead which enabled Scott to go to her bench. The bench played a little sloppy, so Scott put the starters back in, built the lead up to 20 and went to the bench again.

"We're seeing a whole lot of depth," Scott said. "The people are coming off the bench and doing a good job, and the starters are doing a good job for us, too."

Faber was SIU-C's offensive weapon, scoring 27 points and pulling down 10 rebounds. Price dominated the inside and put in 16 points and muscled 11 rebounds.

Plab who has been averaging 18 points per game was held scoreless in 15 minutes of play.

Freshmen Cheri Bacon started her first game and responded by scoring 11 points, getting five rebounds and coming up with several steals.

Bacon played well enough to earn her a starting spot in

Monday's game at Louisville

According to Scott, Louisville is the quickest team her team will face this season. To counter, SIU-C will use their "Southern Style" fast break offense, but Scott is a little worried because they're still not running the ball very well.

ball if it wasn't for Barb's setting.

Locke celebrated her joy with her teammates Saturday night and said that it was the only way she could have enjoyed her new honor.

"Barb and the rest of the team came over and we popped a few corks," Locke said. "We must have had 10 bottles of champagne. It wouldn't have been right without my teammates there. They're the greatest. There was just no way I could have sucked all this in by myself. None of this would be possible without them."

IM polo titles decided

The Knothole Gang edged the Egyptians Divers 17-16 Thursday night to take the Co Rec Division A intramural inner tube water polo championship.

Jackie Follmer and Beth Wood each had six goals for the Knotholers. Team captain Kevin Muenz had two, John Sliter had two, and Tom Sweeney had one.

Mary Jo Boner and Carey Dodson paced the Divers with four goals apiece.

The Co Rec Division B title went to Up Periscope, which beat the Clad 15-12.

Colleen Brennan splashed in 12 goals for Up Periscope. Frank Wiedner steered in two, and Steve Hendrickson scored one.

Jeff Plimpton paced the Clad with seven goals. Sheila Rambson and Bob Gregory each had two, and Dave Krone had one.

The championships ended this year's inner tube water polo season. Intramural seasons now underway are basketball and mini soccer.

Two swimmers, relay squad qualify for AIAW national meet

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

Two individuals and a relay team qualified for the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national swimming tournament at the SIU-C Time Standard Invitational held at the Recreation Center pool Saturday.

The 200-meter medley relay squad has qualified for the AIAW national tournament. Paula Jansen, Amanda Martin, Barb Larsen, and Pam Ratcliffe qualified by swimming a time of 1:48.3 Saturday.

Two Salukis qualified in the 500-meter freestyle during the invitational. Jamie Coontz had a time of 4:55.69, and Larsen had a time of 4:34.39.

"We had a good meet as we expected," Coach Tim Hill said. "We competed heads up with people who beat us in events last year."

The 200-meter medley relay is the 12th AIAW national event the Salukis have qualified for. Qualifiers will compete in the national meet in Austin, Texas, which will be held March 17 through March 20.

"Our goal is to finish as one of the top three teams in the nation," Hill said. "The University of Texas was last year, and since then they've recruited three world-class sprinters. They're the favorites, especially since they'll be swimming in their home pool."

Besides the University of Texas, Hill sees California-Berkeley and Florida State as top contenders in nationals. The Salukis have one more meet, in January, before the competition.

"Our sprinters have to work on speed, and our distance swimmers have to work, too," Hill said. "January's meet in South Carolina will include Florida State, so that'll give us a chance to compare with them."

Hill said he'd have a better chance in January to predict how his team will fare at nationals.

"We'll have more times to look at from other schools then," he said.

Hill's swimmers won't be waiting around until January to prepare for nationals, though.

"When they go home after finals, I've asked them to work out once or twice a day," Hill said. "They'll come back Jan. 27, when they'll work hard for 10 days—they'll put in the hardest 10 days of work of the year."

Besides Saturday's qualifiers, several other Salukis have qualified for nationals events.

Coontz has qualified in the 200-, 500-, and 1,650-meter freestyle and the 400-meter individual medley. Martin has qualified in the 50-, 100-, and 200-meter breaststroke.

Ratcliffe has qualified in the 50- and 100-meter breaststroke and in the 100-meter IM. Tracey Terrell and Sandra Bollinger will compete in the national three-meter diving competition.

Larsen has qualified for the 50-, 100-, and 200-meter butterfly and the 500-meter freestyle.

The 800-meter freestyle relay team of Coontz, Larsen, Ratcliffe, and Laura Brown has qualified, and so has the 400-meter medley team of Jansen, Martin, Larsen, and Brown.

Saluki guard Beth Stevenson tried to outfox the Chicago-Circle defense in Saturday night's game at the Arena.

Cagers play 'give and take' against Wildcats and Circle

By Keith Mascitti
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team won a game and gave one game away this weekend at the Arena.

In Friday's game against Northwestern, the Salukis were ahead for the first thirty minutes of the contest, but ended up on the short end of a 63-58 score. The Salukis came back Saturday night and dumped Chicago-Circle 77-59. Friday was a pretty dismal evening for the Salukis they let the game slip from their grasp. To top it off, Coach Cindy Scott had her car stolen later that evening.

For a six minute stretch late in the second half the Salukis only scored two points—on free throws—while the Wildcats scored 12 and went from five points down, to five points up.

The Saluki offense folded in the second half. SIU-C shot 56 percent from the floor in the first half and a horrendous 29 percent in the second half.

The Salukis also froze at the free throw line. In the first half they shot a respectable 75 percent, and a 55 percent in the second half.

Scott was the first to admit that her team beat itself.

"We were not composed tonight," Scott said. "We never got into our offense. We lost the game from the foul line.

"We missed a bunch of easy shots," she said. "We just didn't play well in the second half. I think it was our game and we gave it to them. We did a good job rebounding," she said. "If we could shoot free-throws we could win."

SIU-C's defense was nothing to write home about either. The Salukis outrebounded the Wildcats 46 to 29, but the Wildcat offense worked the ball well to the inside, the Saluki defense didn't shift to cover the open player, and the result was easy bank shots for Northwestern.

"If we had shifted like we were supposed to, it would have been no problem," Scott said of the Wildcats' working offense. "Our defense was pathetic for 10 minutes of the second half.

Another problem SIU-C was plagued with was turnovers. The Salukis gave the ball up 26 times compared to 16 for Northwestern.

Guard D. J. Plab led in scoring with 18, but only scored six in the second half. Forward Sue Faber was next with 11 points and 12 rebounds. Guard Beth Stevenson scored eight points and dished off seven assists, and added some life to the otherwise deceased Saluki offense.

Center Connie Price scored only six points but grabbed 13 rebounds.

Northwestern was led by Patricia Vanderbush with 15, followed by Amy Prichard with 14. Wildcat guard Connie Erickson scored 10 points but had to be careful of her play due to foul trouble. She hit two shots from 20-feet plus when the Salukis looked as if they were trying to come back.

Saturday, SIU-C looked like a resurrected team as it dumped Chicago-Circle by 13 points. The score was closer than the game really was.

The Salukis slowed down their game and exhibited a good patterned offense and took shots from the outside which in turn opened up the inside.

SIU-C's defense looked much better than it did the night before by forcing Circle shot to from the outside, but didn't give much up inside.

"We played good but we still have some holes in our defense

Men cagers to battle unbeaten, taller ISU-E

By Bob Morand
Staff Writer

The men's basketball team, recovering from a 97-51 thrashing by the University of Evansville last Wednesday night, will play another Evansville team Monday night.

The Salukis will play Indiana State University-Evansville, a Division II school. Although ISU-E is unbeaten with a 6-0 record, it barely squeaked by SIU-Edwardsville Saturday night, 61-60.

Although a Division II school, ISU-E has had success with its basketball program in the past couple of years. Last year, the Eagles made it to the first round of the post-season playoffs, and the year before they went as far as the semi-finals.

Under new Head Coach Creighton Burns, ISU-E will face the Salukis with a bigger lineup, according to SIU-C Coach Allen Van Winkle.

Van Winkle said the Eagles' main threats are 6-7 forward Kelly Williams and 6-6 guard-forward Jeff Pennington, who he termed as ISU-E's "best player." Williams led the Eagles with 18 points against SIU-E, and Pennington added 14 more in Saturday night's win.

"We don't have the big people that they do, so we're going to have to rebound much better than we did last week," Van Winkle said. "They are a quick and aggressive team, who like to press."

The Salukis were outrebounded by Evansville 49-32 Wednesday night, which didn't give SIU-C much of a chance to get its offense established. The Salukis shot only 32 percent from the floor and 38 percent from the free-throw line against Evansville.

"We're definitely going to have to shoot better than we did last week," Van Winkle added. "We'll need to come out and play hard and be aggressive in every way, especially being the smaller team."

Complementing Williams and Pennington in the ISU-E starting lineup are 6-4 forward John Brown; 6-7 center-forward Cully Nelson; and 6-2 guard Mark Block.

The Salukis will start center Charles Nance, 6-6; and forwards Darnell Jones, 6-5; and Ken Byrd, 6-3. At the guard positions, Johnny Fayne, 6-4, and James Copeland will start. Fayne led SIU-C with 11 points against Evansville, while Byrd added eight. Rod Camp, Jac Cliatt and Fayne each had five rebounds apiece.

Although Van Winkle has the starting lineup picked for the ISU-E game, he says that a "variety of lineups" will be ready to play Monday so he can test which players are producing better.

Discipline among the team members is another area in which the Salukis must improve, Van Winkle added. Three of the players were late for the bus to Evansville last week, which prompted Van Winkle to make last-minute adjustments with the starting lineup.

Van Winkle also pledged that the team would face some "spirited" practices in order to prepare for Monday night's game.

"We've had two or three real good practices," he said. "Last week was a situation where we had to discipline a couple people, so we need to come out and play hard."

After Monday's game, the Salukis have a break until Friday night when they play Loyola University in the Chicago Cageland Classic Tournament at the Rosemont Horizon.

Sonya Locke named SIU-C's first volleyball All-American

Saluki volleyball player Sonya Locke has been named to the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women All-American volleyball team, making her the first volleyball All-American at SIU-C.

Locke was named to the 12-player team during the AIAW Division I national tournament which was held in Tallahassee, Fla. Wednesday through Saturday.

The junior middle blocker had been waiting to hear the results of the voting since Wednesday, but Coach Debbie Hunter told her by phone from Florida that she was "sworn to secrecy" and couldn't tell her anything. Locke waited through Thursday and Friday and was supposed to get the final word Saturday around 9 p.m., but she elected to go to the women's basketball game at the Arena instead.

She finally learned of her selection when public address man Greg Springer announced the results during the women's basketball game between the Salukis and Chicago-Circle Saturday night. The junior middle blocker let out a yell and was mobbed by her teammates who all were attending the basketball game. She also received a lot of applause from the crowd and a "thumbs up" sign from her roommate basketball player Connie Price.

"When Greg said 'AIAW volleyball,' I knew what he was going to say," Locke said. "I thought 'Oh my God, I don't believe it.'"

Locke was aware that her coaches thought she could make the team but she was not as positive.

"Everyone had more confidence that I would make it than I did," a sleepy Locke said Sunday afternoon. "When DH told me she had nominated me, I didn't think I would get it. I had heard that I had a good chance because I was the top vote getter in the regional tournament and that a couple of the other state coaches had nominated me. My stats helped too."

The Salukis placed third in the Region V tournament and ended the season with a 30-17 record. She led SIU-C with 411 kills and made only 97 errors. She also led the team in blocking with more than 400.

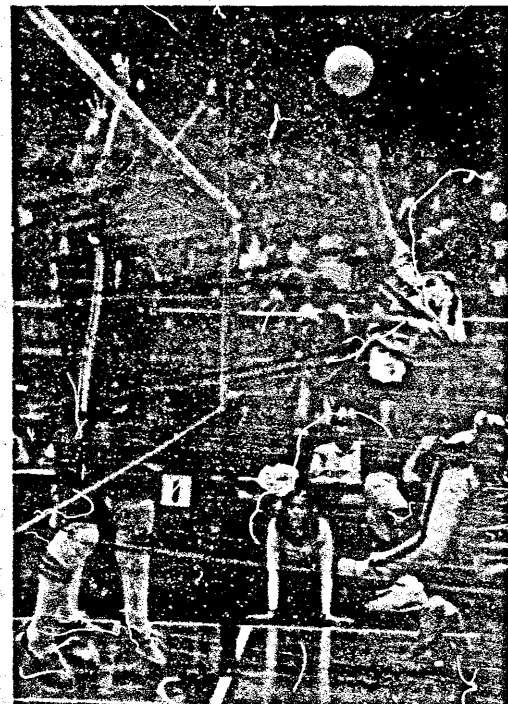

Locke also played on the silver medal-winning Midwest team at the National Sports

Festival held during the summer. The South Bend, Ind. native has also been nominated for the six-player Broderick All-American team, which is composed of players from both the AIAW and NCAA.

Despite all of the accolades, Locke said a large portion of the credit should go to her teammates, especially the team's setter Barb Clark.

"People don't understand how important a setter is," Locke said. "I couldn't hit the
