Seal Issue Deferred By Council

Reaction of the members of the University Student Council to the proposed changes in the University seal was mixed, according to John Paul Davis, chairman of the council.

The council saw the proposed changes at its Jan. 30 meeting. Davis discussed the matter in a letter he wrote to Ralph W. Ruffner, project coordinator and assistant coordinator of General Publications and designer of the new seal, to make a presentation of the seal to a campus-wide assembly, according to the letter.

"General reaction within the council toward the proposed changes was mixed," the Davis letter said. "Actually, there was no definite opposition or any degree of enthusiasm over the changes."

In closing the letter, Davis pointed out that a seal is very closely identified with the University itself and is also a link in connecting alumni to their University.

He said: "We must take care to assure ourselves that whatever emblem is finally chosen will be attractive, appealing, and meaningful to those students who will serve, into the future, as the University's greatest supporters and greatest associates. We must be reasonably sure that the University seal 'means' Southern to students today and to students tomorrow."

The Carbondale student government is now considering asking Albert B. Mifflin, chairman of the council, and other alumni for their reaction to the draft seal. A committee will be appointed to recommend a new seal to the council, Davis said.

Mike Seeger Trio To Give Concert

Here on Feb. 19

The New Lost City Ramblers, led by Mike Seeger, will perform an afternoon concert at 3:30 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 19 in the SIU Multipurpose Auditorium. Seeger is a younger brother of the noted American folk singer Pete Seeger.

Other members of the group are John Cohen and Tracy Schwarz. All members of the trio are accomplished musicians and performers on several stringed instruments.

Tickets for the concert, which is being sponsored by the Campus Folk Arts Society, can be purchased at the information desk of the University Center, or from members of the society.

Olympians Tumble 92-64 at Arena

Southern picked up its fourth straight victory Thursday night by rolling easily over the Purple Hurricanes, 92-64.

The Salukis moved ahead as many as 18 points in the second half and were never threatened throughout the contest. They led 42-27 at the half.

George McNeill led the scorers for Southern with 20 points. Fred Houston followed with 18 and Roger Allen with 16.

Southern outscored its Lat American opponents, 35-17, from the field and held a 46-39 rebound advantage.

But it can't be spring yet: Unidentified SIU students walk to classes in sweaters, light jackets and cutoffs, a sure sign that spring weather is on the way. The showers, which brought out waterproof coats, should end today.

Advance Registration Warning Repeated for Present Students

Doors May Close on Noncompliers

Students who are presently enrolled in school and fail to advance register for spring quarter, will face the possibility of not being able to stay in school.

Herbert W. Wohland, assistant registrar, warned Thursday that no provisions are being made to take care of continuing students who fail to advance register.

Previously, several days were set aside in registration and sectioning to accommodate students who failed to advance register.

"Students have been warned continuously," Wohland said, "and if they still fail to advance register, then they will have to take their chances extending to Feb. 20.

Students who do fail to advance register will have to stand in line with persons wishing to get program changes as the start of the quarter. It is anticipated that because the program changes processed each quarter, students who try to register at the beginning of the quarter might not complete the process in time to be accepted into class by some instructors. Wohland said.

The time set for advance registration has been extended, according to Wohland, and all students have ample time and opportunity to complete advance registration.

Registration and sectioning has recently changed its system of processing form by selling HM computers to facilitate handling of student registrations.

The IMB's have speeded up the processing time and the Registrar's Office feels there is no reason for continuing students to fail to advance register before the end of the designated time.

Path Not Predictable

Area Situated on Fringe of Tornado Alley; Twister 'Season' Lasts From Now to June

By Pam Gleaton

Southern Illinois is once more a fringe area. According to Floyd F. Cunningham, director of the SIU Climatolog laboratory, the area is on the "fringe" of Tornado Alley, the section of the United States which statistics show is most often struck by tornadoes.

The southern border of the section is northeast of Austin, between 90 and 150 miles from Carbondale.

Area residents will be concerned about tornados and severe weather until the end of June. The season, if that's what you call the period in which chances of having a tornado are high, began the first of this month.

The St. Louis office of the Weather Bureau, a agency which provides severe weather information for area Civil Defense units, has announced a new name for its tornado alert.

The bureau has adopted the term "tornado watch" for alerting the public to possible development of tornadoes. It uses radar to watch clouds in the area and decides when a watch warning should be given.

Cunningham said that tornado clouds form when very warm humid air from the Gulf of Mexico and cold air from the arctic meet on the earth's surface. He said that if they meet above the ground the same type tornado clouds can form, but will do no ground damage.

The new watch, which replaces the old "tornado forecast" alerts, is a much better term, according to the Weather Bureau. It describes exactly what should be done: "Be on the alert and ready to take precautionary action if a tornado does form.

"If a tornado is sighted, the bureau will issue a tornado warning, giving the county's name, location, its direction and its speed, so those in its path can take cover." Oliver K. Halderson, coordinator of the SIU Safety Center, said that the best thing for students to do if they hear a tornado alert is to listen for weather reports and to watch the weather channel.

There are several severe weather shelter areas designated on campus. Halderson said to go to the nearest ones if possible because they offer the best protection.

If at home, the best place to go for protection against a tornado is the basement.
Baptist Students Gain Friendships

For residents in nursing homes at Murphysboro and Carbondale, Norma J. Meyer of Centralia and a group of her classmates at SIU are close friends.

Miss Meyer, chairman of the mission committee at the Baptist Student Center, and 13 other Baptist students go to the nursing homes twice a week. The students sing special selections of church music and give talks. Miss Meyer, a 19-year-old junior majoring in music, said the Baptist Student Center has offered these services for more than 10 years. Among the students taking part are Dale R. Catter, Charles S. West, Norma J. Meyer, Revie E. Turner, Jennifer A. Holm, Brenda J. Doty, Louis Crenshaw, Maria J. Lauer, Jesse W. Garrison, Philip L. McKown, Raymond J. Wheatley, Roberta S. Ramsay, Loyda L. Elam and Michael H. Marks.

Gamma Delta Sets Banquet Sunday

Gamma Delta, Lutheran student group sponsored by the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, will hold its annual winter banquet at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the Jackson County Country Club.

Guest speaker will be Carl Zacharias of Red Bud. He is active in youth work in Southern Illinois.

Tickets for the banquet are available from any of the officers of Gamma Delta or at the Lutheran Student Center, 700 S. University.

Roderick R. Oldehoeft and Rodney R. Oldehoeft and Robert L. Blanchard are in charge of banquet arrangements.

Music Department Gets Talent Deep in the Heart of Dixie

Gloria Ann Barringer, who is appearing in the comic opera "Gianni Schicchi," went the long way around to get her part.

Last year she was a freshman at Winston-Salem State College in North Carolina. She attended a piano concert at the college by Ruth Slenczynska, artist-in-residence at SIU, Edwardsville campus. She and two seniors asked Miss Slenczynska for auditions.

Impressed by Miss Barringer's talent, Miss Slenczynska told her of the cooperative exchange program for students and faculty between SIU and Winston-Salem, and suggested she apply for an exchange scholarship for study at SIU in music.

Last fall, when Miss Slenczynska was presented in a recital on the Carbondale campus, she was surprised to have a second back-stage visit from Miss Barringer, by then enrolled in an exchange scholar in music at SIU.

Although she auditioned before Miss Slenczynska is piano, she also told her she was interested in singing. Now she is a member of the University Choir, the Southern Illinois Oratorio Choir, and the Opera Workshop, directed by Margrethe Lawrence, former Metropolitan Opera Company dramatic soprano.

There was a truism at the first of this century that the sun never set on the British Empire. Now our University seems to be trying to set the same sort of goal. A sunburst pattern design for a new University seal has been sent to the University Council, the Student Senate, and the Faculty Senate for endorsement. Perhaps it is time for the University to have a new seal and certainly all parts of the campus, even the new stadium north of Colden, should be included. But all after, even the most loyal alumnus must admit that the sun does set on the University.

The sunburst, designed by Albert B. Mifflin, assistant director of General Publications, looks as though he had been caught in several Jet streams, not to mention being hit by Luna 9 and Gemini 6 abroad.

Mifflin has been quoted as saying that the new seal would "symbolize the University as it is, not as it was."

Right to Protest Not Denied; Invalid Argument Condemned

In Thursday's Daily Egyptian, a letter from Carl Courtnier, chairman of the Students for an Athletic Senate, appeared in answer to my editorial concerning the validity of a motion of George Paluch to be the yes-man of the Faculty for the Campus Senate.

In answer to these comments, I wonder if the paragraph seven of my editorial which appeared on this page last Thursday, "We do not deny your right (Mr. Paluch) to protest these matters in which you feel your position to be correct, but we do condemn you for ignoring the obvious facts."

The whole point of the editorial was that Mr. Courtnier should not be a rubber stamp for the Faculty, but that his basis for opposition to the bill was unjust. The results of a student referendum showed the majority of those who voted were in favor, which Mr. Paluch refused to recognize. The point is that if one desires to express his disapproval, he should at least have a valid argument to back him up.

Mr. Courtnier closed his letter with a suggestion that the campus newspaper's drama critic, Pam Gleaton, write on the right side up?

"order of light" up.

As for the sunburst design, it is infinitely better to have it right side up.

Villain Foiled By 2nd Urn

Poor Timothy Ayers, he lived for the challenge of the circle cutter to get a cup of coffee in the Oasis in the University Center.

But alas and alack, the Slater Food Service has foiled the villain and his dastardly deed. No longer can Mr. Ayers sneak into the coffee line and steal the 250-pound, football player (which I really doubt he would do in the first place) and then glot over his success.

A second coffee urn has been added to the west side of the serving aisle in the Oasis. That would surely put an end to any attempts to get a cup of coffee with little or no waiting.

The two coffee lines move rapidly. The students are happy. But there is still an intense cutting competition. It's a bad day at Black Rock for Mr. Ayers.

But, I'm happy. Thank you Slater Food Service. The express coffee line is appreciated.

Blood Type File Urged

To the editor:

Our University is now in a position of opportunity which does not often come to centers of higher learning in the United States. Let me suggest that we take advantage of it quickly.

At present we have no foot­ball coach, and soon we will have no stadium. What better time could there be to give up the sport?

Athletes now holding foot­ball scholarships could be al­lowed to continue, and would have increased time for study. That would surely not be an inapposite use for scholarships, though the idea may be novel.

Then we could use the $200,000 earmarked for a new stadium for the purchase of library materials, making their study even more rewarding. Without a football team we would have no need for a new coach, and without a new coach, we could be spared the pain of his resigna­tion in two to four years. If we hesitate, the oppor­tunity to make these im­provements will be lost. Surely all will agree to give up football now in the sensible course.

Drama Reporter

Disjudges Play, Gorelik Asserts

To the editor:

I am happy that your re­viewer found "Lysistrata" a bad production. However, the review was not as wrong as your typical of the Daily Egyptian's drama criticism. The method of "I know, but I'm maybe" is not of service to our Depart­ment of Literature, its produc­tions or its audiences.

Cite one example of mis­judgment: your reporter men­tioned the scene shared by Peter Goetz and Maurice Aylton, giving all the kudos to Goetz. It is not the playing of Mr. Goetz, but the subtle, humanly, brilliantly varied performance of Miss Aylton that makes this scene extremely funny. Miss Aylton can only be discouraged by your review while Mr. Goetz earns nothing and is left dead in his corner.

We are about to begin work in a beautiful new theater. It would be a good thing if the campus newspaper's drama criticism made similar progress.

Department of Government
Civil disobedience, the nonviolent defiance of law, threatens to become a recurrently disturbing part of the American scene. Carried far enough, it could mean nothing short of revolution.

We should make no mistake about it. Such "self-help" is the taking of law into one's own hands. No matter how nonviolent at the start, it leads almost inevitably to resort to force. In the end, it must lay us open to rule by the most violent group, might making right. It has no constitutional sanction. It poses the strength of the democratic process, imperils the very foundation of our ordered society.

Yes, it is a habitually used weapon. But, its habitual use can gain for it a kind of respectability. That is why it is especially unfortunate that the popularity of our national progress towards equality in civil rights, though vindicated by court and legislature, has had to be initiated and accelerated by simultaneous direct, nonviolent action. This is clearly the case, though the Supreme Court, bending to meet a mass of people's political problem, has validated much of the civil disobedience by finding many of the laws against which it has been directed unconstitutional.

The Bar Looks at Civil Disobedience

And for the future, civil rights leaders, cynical and impatient with the pace of the law, have already claimed that "extraordinary methods" are required—and have begun to force action against discrimination in education, employment and other areas. They insist the essentiality of these ends justifies the questionable means.

No doubt the contravention of this boldness has even helped to bring about the much-publicized current spate of draft-card burning by some in the name of opposition to our Viet Nam policy. That well illustrates how such practices spread.

The violations of law involved are justified by no "higher law" as claimed by its apostles. The so-called instances of past civil disobedience which are usually cited prove no such thing. Where they have won responsible sanction, almost invariably they fall within one of two main categories.

The first involves the challenging of laws within the channels of a legal system which itself affords the individual the right to do so. The repeated testing of the validity of the birth control laws, the famous Zenger freedom of the press case, some of the civil rights activities in the face of restrictive rules, these are bona fide examples of trials of the validity of laws made in an orderly fashion through our courts. They were not abandonments of the path of law.

The other is activity by an indigenous population, be it in Ireland, in the India of Gandhi or in colonial America, against the tyranny of a foreign oppressor. In each, force was pitted against the force imposed on the governed without their consent.

This points up that no government can long enforce its laws if they do not have at least the acquiescence and respect of the majority of its citizens. The risk of rage replacing reason is too fun for the admonitions of those in authority prevents needed reforms. This is especially true when there is social and political pressure, the manipulation of exemplary laws to thwart their purposes. Such obstruction provokes desperation and causes the methods of coercive action to be abused as enemies. The outcome is civil disobedience.

The preventive is a healthy dose of democracy. We must be staunch in guaranteeing full freedom for the peaceful expression of unpopular views, no matter how illegitimate or immature they may appear to be. The age-old right to petition for redress of grievances, to put questions, throw down challenges, seek to bring about an orderly change in law, are the very essence of what our government is all about.

Nor are these rights to be sidestepped by yielding to threats of possible violence, reprisal taken as a form of political coercion as bad as civil disobedience.

Civil disobedience cannot flourish in the presence of ease. If it is used only to gain a desired end, if it is restrained if the tri-avenues of citizenship, participation in government, the right to vote and the right to serve on juries are inviolate.

As lawyers, our first order of business is to see to them for all our people. It is enough for us to strive for them daily for our individual clients in their private conflicts. Justice, on the executive, legislative and judicial levels, needs to reflect the participation of the entire citizenry.

Only in a government which oppresses its people can there be moral justification for the anarchy of organized mass disobedience. The latter is too dangerous a subject to decide on the basis of lip service. We must choke it off by the very breadth of a viable, responsive democracy itself.

The Daily Illini Looks At . . .

The Great Manpower Myth

The ever-expanding manpower demands of an ever-expanding war (one senator estimates 600,000 men in two years) has focused national attention upon the Selective Service System.

Last weekend a series of regional conferences of Selective Service System directors was held. On Sunday, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of the Selective Service System, said guidelines for drafting college students would be issued "in the near future."

These guidelines will be used next year.

Most observers presume these guidelines will reinstate the testing of college students or class standing as a pre-requisite for a student deferment.

Already college students are beginning to feel the pinch. Local boards have reclassified some students deemed "not making satisfactory progress toward their degrees."

Satisfactory progress can be defined by the local board as low grades, time in school or staying out of school for a period of time to work for lack of funds.

It is also possible to lose a student deferment if a student is "socially troublesome," a violation of college conduct rules.

These are the simple facts of life for male college students.

John Hammack, Illinois Selective Service director, said in November he thought the manner of drafting was "sometimes unfair."

Even Gen. Hershey admits the system is unfair. Gen. Hershey states the tests will favor students with a science or mathematics background. Gen. Hershey says a class standing will favor students from easier schools.

If the Selective Service System were a market, it would be equally unfair, "sometimes unfair."

Then, why is it allowed to continue?

Hammack answered this question in November. He said "because it's the best system presently available."

Critics of the draft system have been asking for reform of the Selective Service System since World War II.

The Selective Service System is an independent agency in the executive branch of the government. Its role is defined by Congress. Congress should investigate the system for possible overhaul of the entire system.

There are five facts Congress should consider when and if they are to overhaul the drafting system.

Fact one—there are already 900,000 men classified I-A.

Fact two—draft calls for recent months have hovered around 30,000 per month. The latest New and Orderly draft this past month involves 30,000. I-A's come into the pool every month (19-year-old enlisted men) who have lost their deferments.

Thus, the pool remains constant.

Fact three—the Army's efficiency of handing out extra cards and mental tests has been challenged by many critics of the system. In other words, the number tested at any one time is not a reflection of the I-A's in the draft pool.

Fact four—men classified I-A before their physical are drafted only if they are "fit." It fits no one to explain the 40 to 45 per cent of the pre-induction physicals or mental tests, although only one-fifth of the men in uniform are classified as "combat soldiers." The pool could increase if those who flunked were assigned to military units other than combat units.

Reforms come slowly in the manpower area.

So far they have never come in the draft.

The "shortage of manpower" (the need to draft college students) seems to be a myth.
SIU to Keep Loan Program
Until Notified By Washington

SIU will continue to administer the National Defense Student Loan program as it is in the past until official word comes from Washington to phase it out, Frank L. Adams, director of Student Work and Financial Assistance, said.

The Johnson administration has decided to phase out the old program, replacing it with a new guaranteed loan program.

The new guaranteed loan program would have banks and other private commercial firms handle the lending and collecting.

Adams said, “In the Higher Education Act we haven’t received the guidelines for the guaranteed student loan program. The Financial Assistance Office has made its application to the federal government for the same loan program we have this year.”

He added that if there is a change in policy all students affected by the change will be notified.

Adams said, “Collection of the loans has been a problem under the National Defense Student Loan Program, but SIU has not had the collecting problems of other schools.”

“We don’t make as many loans because of the numerous student work programs,” he explained.

Adams feels that in the future there will be two loan policies, one from the colleges and one from the banks and other private firms.

Fraudulent Entry

SIU Guards Against Phony Transcripts

University of California officials recently were charged by seniors that one of their prime medical school applicants, nearing graduation, actually was a fraud.

He had enrolled with the finesse of a crook, his work was admired by his contemporaries and he received unqualified recommendations from his major professors. But when he took his oral to graduation, he fled into the grace of a strict wreck. Utterly official began checking and found out that he had used phony credentials to get in.

One might say that "anything can happen at the University of California," but what about this kind of a Vereduin to Aid Pollution Council Jacob Veredun, professor of botany, will serve as a consultant to "The Erie Technical Committee." The committee, which is under the umbrella of the United States Public Health Service, will be investigating the influence of nutrients and algae on the general problem of water pollution in Lake Erie.

The main area of concentration of the committee will be the study of problems caused by the large influx of phosphorus into the lake over a period of covering the last 20 years.

Fungus growth is commonly supported by yeast extracts. Pappel's and Schmid's paper brings the total number of yeast extracts studied to 24.

Roommates: Their Cause and Cure

You'd think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, nobody would have found a cure for roommates yet. But no. Roommates remain as big a problem today as they were when Elan Maker founded the University of California.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Maker started his institution some years earlier.)

And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Maker built two buildings on a hill, a dormitory and a campus.

He built a harem that seated 100,000. Eventually, the harem was adopted by the German army motto CAVE MUSIA -- "Watch out for moose." The dormitory was converted to a bowling alley weighing machine, and a sixteen-chair barber shop.

(This was last feature -- the barber shop that, alas, broomed. Maker's efforts to create an early-20th-century body, being drawn chiefly from the nearby countryside, were found to be a trifle self-serving...)

Fulbright, Kennan Fear New U.S. Stand

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. J.
W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and former diplomat George F.
Kennen joined Thursday in expressing fear that this week's joint U.S.-South Vietnamese declaration may have raised an added obstacle to a negoti-atated peace. The expressions of care came at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing.

Fulbright, the committee chairman and a critic of admistration policy in Viet Nam, told Kennan:
"It seems to me we have further committed ourselves to a point where any sort of a negotiated settlement, short of outright victory, could be called a betrayal of a commmitment." Kennan, a former ambassador to Moscow and Yugoslavia, said:

It gives me a very, very uneasy feeling to read the joint declaration.
"If it does seem to me that we can, that if we want to develop the utmost prospect of a peaceful solution, we should have maintained the independence of our position."

Fulbright and Kennan voiced doubts that the South Vietnamese leaders who joined in the Honduras declaration after the dedication of President Johnson’s enthusiasm was not chilled by a twenty degree wind, more, and until the period of mortality’s, shower of raw eggs from leftwing activists.

Soviet Scientists Say Moon Can Hold Men

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "cold war GI Bill" more costly than the administration wanted was sent to President Johnson Thursday with the unanimous endorsement of Congress. It would set up a permanent system of education and other benefits for veterans who served more than six months in uniform, and would be of immediate benefit to an estimated 31/2 million veterans discharged since the Korea GI benefits program expired on Jan. 31, 1955.

The House, in passing the bill Monday 341 to 0, reduced somewhat the education benefits called for in a version the Senate had passed last July.

The cost is estimated at about $335 million for the first year and about $500 million annually for five years when the outlays would level off.

The administration figured its proposal would have cost $150 million yearly.

The bill would provide for education payments ranging from $100 to $150 monthly, depending on the number of dependents. Payments would be made directly to veterans, who could choose their own schools. Unlike the GI bill of World War II, this one does not cover tuition costs.

Veterans with six months or more of active duty since Jan. 1, 1955, could collect money of education payment for each month in service, with a maximum of 36 months.

U.S. Casualties Now Total 2,005

WASHINGTON (AP) — The total of U.S. servicemen killed in Viet Nam, on the basis of estimates $335 million, which the Department of Defense has passed the 2,000 mark.

A weekly statistical summary showed that the total of those killed increased by 107 for the week ended last Monday night, bringing the cumulative total since Jan. 1, 1964, to 2,003.

The number of wounded climbed sharply over the previous week, increasing by 706 to a new overall total of 9,658. The new current total of servicemen missing in action is 164, an increase of 12.

Georgia Legislator Remains Unseated

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A Federal court, in a split decision, refused Thursday to strike down a ruling by the Georgia House of Representatives which barred him because of statements opposing U.S. policy in Viet Nam and the military draft.

Judge Griffin B. Bell, of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judge Lewis R. Morgan upheld the House in denying Bond his seat last Jan. 10.

Chief Judge Elbert P. Tuttle of the 5th Circuit dissented. The majority opinion held that the seating of Bond was a question to be decided by the House, whether the wisest course was followed is not for us to say. The judgment of the Court is not to be substituted for that of the House," the opinion said.

SIU Wins Women's Division In State Badminton Meet

The SIU Badminton Club, sponsored by the Women's Recreation Association, took all the honors in the women's competition of the Illinois Intercollegiate Badminton Tournaments.

Nine schools competed in the two-day meet held Saturday and Sunday at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston. Over 100 men and women entered the tournament.

The girls who won championships are Margaret Stagner in women's singles; Mary Jane Dameron in consolation singles; Karen Brandon and Mary Ann Grove in doubles competition, and Sue Roberts and Toni Smith in consolation doubles.

On the men's side, Joe Pratt and Don Holmes lost their second-round matches in the singles division. Pratt is the Badminton Club president.

Karen Brandon and Warren Owens lost their semifinal match in mixed doubles. Also taking runner-up honors were Charlotte West and Peter Johannes in consolation mixed doubles.

The Women's Recreation Association will be host to the Southern Illinois Basketball Sectional Saturday. Competition will start at 8:30 a.m. and continue until 3 p.m.

Should Tornado Hit Campus, Go Into the Nearest Shelter

Halderson said that if there is space between the person and the ground there is a good chance of the tornado winds lifting the person and carrying him away.

There is no way to predict the path of tornadoes. They skip around and only touch the ground in certain places, so that an area in the direct line of the tornado or storm may be left untouched.

Halderson added that the Civil Defense warning system on campus is very good. A. Frank Bridges, coordinator of the SIU Civil Defense system, has described the SIU program to other colleges and universities.

For 41 Years

J. Henry Schroeder, 68, former SIU professor of industrial education, died Thursday in Doctors Hospital of a heart attack.

Schroeder served on the university faculty for 41 years before his retirement in August, 1964. He was chairman of the Department of Industrial Education from 1940 to 1946.

He obtained his bachelor’s degree at SIU, master’s degree at the University of Iowa, and did advanced work at the University of Missouri.

Prof. Schroeder was an elder in the First Christian Church, Carbondale, and served on the church board for many years.

He is survived by his wife Harriet, two sons, J. Henry Jr., and Duane, and a daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Brewer of Carbondale.

The funeral will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the First Christian Church with burial at the Pleasant Grove Memorial Cemetery.

Friends may call after 4 p.m. today at the Huffman Funeral Home, Carbondale.

Anyone interested in the competition should contact Gary Summers, No. 71/2 St., Main St., Henderson.

Registration ends March 10.
Print by Instructor Chosen for Exhibit

A four color silk-screen print by Gerald Cross, instructor in design, has been selected for showing in the 15th annual National Print Exhibition at the Brooklyn (N.Y.) Museum. Cross, who is working for a master of fine arts degree in the Department of Design, is from Tulsa, Okla.

Exhibition officials said jurors selected 180 prints from 2,000 submitted from 48 states. The show is regarded as one of the top showcases for American printmaking art.

Cross' serigraph, "Quadrate," is one of a series he is working on to "translate the visual characteristics of the tetrahedron into visually consistent patterns."

Cross received a bachelor of science degree in architecture from the Rhode Island School of Design. He has shown previously at the University of Colorado, Carnegie Institute of Technology and Denver Museum. The Brooklyn show will continue through May 29.

SIU Press Publishes 4 Books by Faculty

Four SIU faculty members are among the authors listed in the spring-summer book publication list of the Southern Illinois University Press.

The books by SIU authors are:

"General Grant by Matthew Arnold, with a Rejoinder by Mark Twain," edited by John Y. Simon, associate professor of history.

"Marti on the USA," a series of essays selected and translated by Luis R. Baralt, professor of philosophy and Spanish literature.

"Numbers In the Land of Hand," a book on the new-math numbers system by Harold Lerch, associate professor of elementary education and mathematics.

"Perspectives in Mental Retardation," a collection of European and American readings in the field, edited by Thomas F. Jordan, chairman of the Department of Educational Psychology and Guidance.

Simon's book presents for the first time in one volume a literary Donnybrook of the 1880's. Englishman Matthew Arnold criticized Grant's use of the English language and Mark Twain, speaking for outraged Americans, delivered a caustic rejoinder.

Jose Marti, called the "Father of Cuban Independence," wrote a series of news articles and essays during a 15-year sojourn in the U.S., starting in 1880. Bartol, who fled Cuba in 1960 and came to SIU, has selected many never-before-translated into English for "Marti on the USA."

"Numbers in the Land of Hand" is designed to acquaint children aged 9-12 with the new number system, as a preparation for advanced mathematics.

"Perspectives in Mental Retardation" compiles "the most significant literature on the subject...in depth and scope never before available in a single volume," according to Press Director Vernon Sternberg.

Also on the list of 19 titles is "North Atlantic Areas," by the late Charles Colby, research professor of geography at SIU from 1931 until his death last year.

Colby's book, to be published in May, carries a forward by SIU President Delyte W. Morris. Preston James, former president of the Association of American Geographers, in a pre-publication review, calls it "a valuable contribution to economic geography."

The representation by SIU authors in the largest in any seasonal listing by the press since its origin in 1956. The press' first book was also one by Colby—"A Pilot Study of Southern Illinois."

Amble to Address Education Group

Bruce R. Amble, assistant professor of education, will present a program on the phrase reading training with elementary and junior high grades at 3:30 p.m. today in the faculty lounge of the Wham Education Building.

This is the seventh seminar in a series of education seminars sponsored by the Educational Research Bureau of the College of Education.

Pine Hills is Center of SIU Plant Study

By Richard Livert

Pine Hills, about 35 miles southwest of Carbondale in Union County, has been described by Robert H. Mohlenbrock, chairman of the SIU Department of Botany, as one of the finest botanical areas in the state.

The Pine Hills area occupies about 8,000 acres, SIU is devoting about 400 acres to development of a field station.

The area's name comes from the fact that it is one of two places in Illinois where the shortleaf or yellow pine grows wild. Pine Hills shows a natural relationship to both the Appalachian and Ozark mountain ranges and is of great scientific value, said Mohlenbrock, because of the wide variety of plants.

The swamps in the area are covered with water throughout the year. Mohlenbrock pointed out that the plants are characterized southern and include swamp cornwood, swamp red maple, water locust, water hickory, butternut, oak trees, birch and dogwood.

Another major section of Pine Hills is the deep, shaded woods. Mohlenbrock said it is completely covered with wild flowers in April and May, with the most noted being the native prairie and shade. Characteristic trees here are beech, sugar maple and tulip.

The ridgetop woods are extremely dry. Trees here are beech, sugar maple, and oak varieties.

The limestone bluffs, an exposed group of cliffs, also harbor distinctive plants.

The lichen prairie, which are treeless areas in the ridgetop woods, harbor prairie plants typical to Nebraska.

Mohlenbrock said there are more flowering plants to be found at Pine Hills than at any other locality in Illinois. Mohlenbrock and John Voigt, of the Department of Botany, have recently published a list of all the flowering plants known to occur at Pine Hills. They report 977 kinds, 34 percent of the 2,900 flowering plants known in Illinois. Those which have their only Illinois occurrence at Pine Hills include two kinds of Ozark dogwood, two kinds of sedges, two grasses, a wild plum and a type of pea vine.

William C. Ashby of the Department of Horticulture and Ralph Kelting, former chief of the Pine Hills station, discussed the vegetation in the Pine Hills Field station in a 1963 article. Mohlenbrock said that there have been 28 kinds of ferns in Pine Hills, representing 32 percent of the 88 ferns known to occur in the state.

One of these, the black spleenwort, has not been found anywhere else in Illinois. The fern study, conducted by Mohlenbrock and former SIU student Jane Hinners Eng, was partly supported by a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Their work was published in the American Fern Journal in 1964.

The swamp areas provide a rich supply of algae. Although the algae study is just beginning, Mohlenbrock describes the results as amazing.

Since Sept. 31 algae not previously thought to exist in Illinois have been discovered in the Pine Hills area.

A study conducted in 1962 and 1963 by Mohlenbrock and Kenneth Weik, a doctoral candidate in botany, intensively studied one small group of swimming algae from the swamp. Before their study 11 different members of this group had been found in Illinois, but Weik and Mohlenbrock turned up another 20 species of Pine Hills algae in 1964.

Although very little was known about Illinois lichens, a combination of plants composed of algae and fungi in Illinois. Then Al Skorepa, a graduate student in botany, began a survey of southern Illinois lichens, including the Pine Hills varieties.

No intensive study has been made of Pine Hills mosses, said Mohlenbrock, but occasional collections from that area indicate that a wealth of species occur.

Jerry Strider, an undergraduate in botany, is making preliminary investigations of Southern Illinois mosses.
Big Sam Silas Watches Diet, Hates Beer

NFL All-Pro Is Hitting Books Like Lineman

By Mike Schwebel

Sam Silas first wanted to become a doctor, then decided on physical therapy, and finally settled on becoming a professional football player in the rough and rugged National Football League.

Big Sam, who played his collegiate football at Southern Illinois, was drafted in the fifth round of the American Football League draft by the Boston Patriots in 1961. He was the fifth draft choice of the American Football League. Silas return to Southern during the off season to keep hitting the books, something he does with the same zeal of hitting an opposing lineman. He received his master's degree last summer and now plans to work for a doctor in physical education.

"After my playing days are over, I would like to lecture on the university level," he said. "I would like to get across the importance of exercise. In this way, I could try to prevent health problems, instead of curing them as a doctor would." Silas keeps himself in superb condition the year around. He tries to work out every day, lifting weights for strength and running distance for heart endurance. He watches his diet, staying away from all fat, "even if it means throwing half of a steak away."

Sam Silas is a student of football and loves his studies. How long would he like to play professional football? "Until I'm 65," he quipped. And somehow, when you look at him, it doesn't seem so funny. He just might do it!

Flag Presentation Slated for Today

President Delyte W. Morris has been invited to attend a flag dedication ceremony at 3 p.m., today in University Park. Silicon Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will present a United States flag which has flown over the Capitol in Washington to residents of the area.
