Six students in race for trustee post

By Vicki Olgeaty
Staff Writer

Six people are vying for the chance to serve the remainder of Stan Irvin's term as student trustee.

Irvin resigned at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday. The winner of the special election, to be held Feb. 22, will serve until June 30.

According to student trustee election rules, a petition, complete with the signatures, addresses and identification numbers of 200 students, had to be turned in to the election commission in order for a candidate's name to appear on the ballot.

The six candidates who turned in petitions by the deadline at 5 p.m. Friday are: — Sharon Hutcherson, law student.

— John Kelly, senior in accounting and finance.

— Alex Miceli, graduate student in history and political science.

— Surya Prasai, sophomore in political science.

— Laurie Walton, senior in economics.

— Gordon Wayman, graduate student in political science.

There will be no spot on the ballot for write-in names.

Walton had been an undergraduate representative to the election commission, but resigned to run in the election, according to John Strem, election commissioner.

Strem said Friday that all candidates were in good academic and disciplinary standing.

"All the petitions appear to be valid," Strem said. There were no "obvious errors," such as failures to list last names, identification numbers or addresses for any of the 200 names.

"We're not going to run all the names through admissions and records unless someone makes a written challenge to any of the petitions," he said.

The winner of the election will serve with a student trustee representing SIU-Edwardsville and seven other trustees appointed by the governor. None of the trustees are paid, but all are compensated for expenses incurred at board meetings.

Student members do not have binding votes, but do have advisory votes.

Student trustees do have the right to participate fully in discussion, make and second motions, attend executive committee meetings where confidential information may be discussed, and receive all mailings to board members, according to Irvin.

City fund hearing slated Monday night

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The annual scramble for city funds is on.

A public hearing will be held Monday evening to give Carbondale residents the chance to make recommendations to the City Council and staff regarding the distribution of federal revenue sharing funds in the 1983-84 fiscal year.

Views expressed at the hearing will be considered in the preparation of the city budget, which will be submitted to the council in April and presented at another public hearing April 11 before the council votes on it on April 18.

The hearing Monday evening, which will be held at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College St., will allow outside agencies and organizations to request city funds. According to the city's finance department, there is $840,288 in unappropriated revenue sharing funds.

According to a memorandum from Don Monty, director of community development, as of last week six outside agencies had requested city funds for fiscal year 1983-84, which begins May 1.

The agencies that have requested funds so far are: The Social Service Program of the Attucks Community Service Board, The Coordinated Youth Program of the Attucks Community Service Board, The Council on Problems of the Aged, Inc., The Jackson County Community Mental Health Center, Youth Services Program, The Carbondale Women's Center and the Carbondale Public Library.

All these agencies except the library have received some form of city funding in the past, according to Monty.

In a separate memorandum, Monty expressed concern for the city's Health Clinic and Child Care Program. Both of these city-operated programs in the past have relied partially on federal Community Development Block Grant funds.

The CDBG funds have fallen victim to budget cuts in Washington and Monty stated that in his opinion "there is no reasonable expectation that any CDBG funds will be available for Child Care and Health Programs after August 1984."

Monty noted that the Illinois Family Planning Council is also expected to cut funding to the Health Clinic. He asked that the council and city staff keep city-operated activities in mind when outside agencies are requesting city funds.

"We have arrived at the time when the city must ask itself where its priorities lie in social services delivery," he stated.

USO to begin higher ed funding probe

By James Derr
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization has agreed to form a task force to work with Chancellor Kenneth Shaw to study the use of funds for higher education at SIU-C.

USO President Jerry Cook met with leaders from recognized student organizations Sunday to propose the task force, saying "It is imperative that the students have a voice in these decisions."

"There have to be more funds for higher education," Cook said. "We will have a tuition increase of at least 10 percent and there is nothing we can do about it."

Cook said that while the USO is "philosophically opposed" to tuition increases, the task force should have a big influence on where the additional revenue should be spent.

"While we don't favor a tuition increase, we are supportive of finding additional resources to help higher education in Illinois," Cook said.

One such resource is a tax increase that the Illinois Board of Higher Education supported at its meeting in January.

"It is time for a tax increase to help higher education in this state," Cook said. "We are at a turning point and we need to do something real to get our point across."

Cook received support for the idea from leaders of the Student Programming Council, Thompson Point Executive Council, and Hall Councils from Neely, Schneider and Mae Smith Residence Halls. USO Senator Joel Natkin was selected as coordinator of the task force.

Cook also briefed the leaders on the status of USO's fight to reinstate the operating hours of Morris Library that were cut in August. USO Vice President Fritz Levenhagen said the USO is still fighting to keep only the first floor open the extra hours, although it would like to see the whole library remain open.

"We think the library is the best study hall on campus," Levenhagen said. "We think the first floor option is a reasonable compromise, and we hope to get it through."

Levenhagen said the USO will work with Vice President for

Sharon out of defense post; gets new Israeli Cabinet job

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet accepted Ariel Sharon's resignation as defense minister Sunday but retained him as a minister without portfolio, prompting opposition charges that the decision defied the Beirut massacre commission's recommendations. Prime Minister Menachem Begin will take over the Defense Ministry temporarily after Israel's Parliament, the Knesset, approves the reshuffle Monday or Tuesday, Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor announced.

Cabinet ministers belonging to the factions in Begin's ruling coalition said that keeping Sharon in the Cabinet avoided the need for early elections. But opposition parties protested that the reshuffle of portfolios disregarded the inquiry commission's intention that Sharon leave the Cabinet.

The small Communist Party submitted a no-confidence motion to be debated this week, but the government is expected to defeat it.

The Labor Party, the largest opposition group, said it might organize public demonstrations to put "moral pressure" on the government to fire Sharon.

The inquiry commission charged Sharon with personal responsibility for failing to foresee a massacre when he ordered Lebanese Christian militiamen to mop up Palestinian resistance in Beirut's Sabra and Chatilla refugee camps last Sept. 16-18. It suggested he resign or be fired.

Sharon gave Begin his resignation after the Cabinet decided last week, after three emergency meetings, to adopt all the recommendations of the Kahan Commission, named after Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan who headed the four-month investigation.

Cabinet ministers said Begin wanted to replace Sharon with Moshe Arens, Israel's ambassador in Washington, but needed time to arrange this transition with his coalition partners.

Arens declined Sunday to say whether he had been approached about the job.

Speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press" in New York, Arens said it would be "entirely inappropriate" at this time to do so.

"I'm not in a position to comment to you... as to future plans and future possibilities," he said.

Sharon's resignation was a paralyzing setback to the career of the flamboyant ex-general.

News Roundup

Hinckley in hospital after suicide try

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., found innocent by reason of insanity of shooting President Reagan, was hospitalized in serious condition Sunday after an apparent suicide attempt, authorities said.

Hinckley, connected to a respirator, may be in danger of dying, but "he is stable and we believe he'll be all right," said Dr. James Levy, president of Greater Southeast Community Hospital, where Hinckley was taken. "We will not be able to tell you for certain for the next 24 to 48 hours whether he's out of the woods."

The incident was at least the third apparent suicide attempt by Hinckley since he shot and wounded the president and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel in March 1981.

Two men nabbed in Eto shooting

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men charged in the gangland-style shooting of reputed gambling boss Ken "Tokyo Joe" Eto were arrested by FBI agents early Sunday, hours after they were released on bond by local authorities.

John Gattuso, 47, a suspended Cook County sheriff's deputy, and Jasper Campise, 67, were arrested at their suburban homes and charged with federal firearms and civil rights violations stemming from the shooting, according to FBI spokesman Ronald Elder.

Authorities declined to say why they decided to re-arrest the pair.

The two were arrested by local authorities Friday and charged with attempted murder in the snooding of Eto.

Search goes on for ship survivors

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Rescuers searched the cold seas off the Virginia coast Sunday for nine crew members missing after a collier loaded with 27,000 tons of coal capsized and sank during a gale, killing at least 24 people.

Meanwhile, a former crewman of the Marine Electric said the ship had a history of mechanical failures and should have been scrapped long ago. The vessel lost a propeller and a rudder in separate incidents in the past five years, Calvin L. Johnson, a former fireman and engineman aboard the ship, told the Wilmington News Journal on Saturday.

Three crewmembers of the Marine Electric were rescued and 24 bodies recovered after the accident Saturday.

Gramm's GOP victory is 'mandate'

DALLAS (AP) — Rep. Phil Gramm, who quit the House after fellow Democrats ousted him from a budget panel, says the special election victory that sends him to Washington as a Republican gave him his "strongest mandate" ever.

Gramm, a supporter of President Reagan's economic policies, said in a telephone interview that his victory Saturday over 10 opponents in the 8th Congressional District represents "the first gunfire of the 1984 elections, and we won the first battle."

East digs out; new storm looms

Bulldozers and snowplows cleared arteries Sunday through the giant cities of the Northeast immobilized by a record blizzard that killed at least 63 people, and major airports opened in time to get thousands of stranded travelers home for Valentine's Day.

But a new storm was heading up the East Coast, after dumping snow, sleet and ice pellets on northern Georgia and much of South Carolina, and the National Weather Service said the mid-Atlantic Coast States could expect the same "or even worse."

"The storm will continue moving northeast during the night and is expected to spread another blanket of snow along the mid-Atlantic Coast by late tomorrow," the weather service said Sunday.

The Blizzard of '83, which dropped up to 3 feet of snow from North Carolina to New England on Friday and Saturday, was blamed for the sinking of a coal ship in which 24 crewmen were killed off the Virginia coast and 39 other deaths in 10 states.

In cities such as New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, many streets remained clogged with abandoned cars and trucks that were hopelessly mired in waist-deep snow. Officials said it was unlikely all lanes would be cleared by rush hour Monday morning.

As thousands of workers and machines chewed at mounds of snow, bitter Arctic air surged into the region, pushing the mercury below zero in scattered areas from Pennsylvania to Maine. It was 12 below in Concord, N.H., and 1 above in Baltimore, a record for the date.

Florida, meanwhile, was deluged with heavy rains, with 3.5 inches falling in Fort Lauderdale.

Movie theater fire kills 66 in Italy

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Fire raced through a Turin movie theater Sunday night, killing at least 66 people and injuring dozens of others in the crowd of 500. Police Chief Antonio Farelli reported.

The death toll soared when firefighters found more than 20 bodies in a second-floor bathroom and in rooms used by the management for offices or storage, he said. Police have not determined the exact number of injured.

Most of the victims were young people. The bodies were placed on the snow-covered sidewalk outside, and hundreds of people gathered as parents searched for their children.

Police said the fire might have been caused by a short circuit or by fireworks set off as a joke by youngsters celebrating Carnival, which is being observed throughout Italy.

Many of the young people in the theater were dressed in costumes and makeup for the festival.

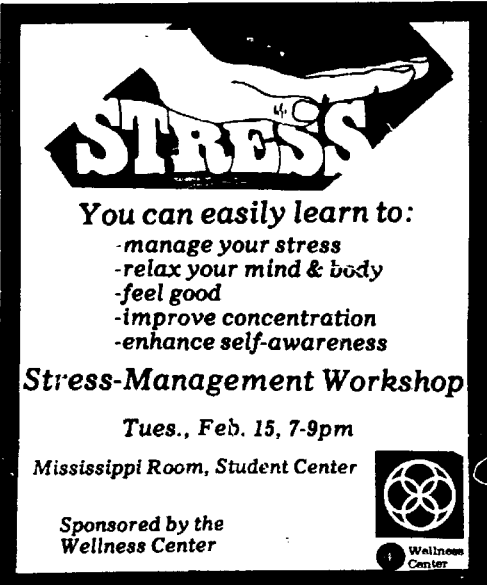

Fire department officials said the flames quickly spread over the theater's wooden seats with plastic covers in the main auditorium, creating deadly smoke that billowed into the balcony section where most of the bodies were found.

The theater can seat 1,000 people.

Firefighters reported many of the victims were asphyxiated, but said others were crushed in the panic to escape, or burned.

The Italian news agency ANSA quoted witnesses as saying many of the people in the balcony first rushed to a stairway leading to the ground floor, but turned back because of the heavy smoke.

Southern Illinois jobless rate increases two percent in 1982

By Terry Levecke
Staff Writer

Unemployment in Southern Illinois counties rose two percent in 1982 to 13.5 percent — almost four percent higher than the national average.

The unemployment situation in Jackson County is better than in most other counties in Southern Illinois. The county's annual rate increased by 1.2 percent to 10.7 percent, only one percent higher than the national figure of 9.7 percent.

The area's highest unemployment rate was 24.8 percent in Hardin County, near the Kentucky border.

Southern Illinois' unemployment rate increased less than that of the state as a whole. Illinois' jobless rate increased by 2.8 percent to 11.3 percent, according to figures released last week by the Illinois Job Service.

Southern Illinois' unemployment situation, compared to the state overall, is looking better than in recent years, according to Labor Market Economist Mike Vessell of the Illinois Job Service.

Counties south of St. Louis have been running among the highest unemployment rates in the state, but this year some have dropped from the top 10 to the top 20, according to Vessell.

Jackson County's figure remains one of the steadiest in the area because of the presence of SIU-C. Other counties with large public employers such as Randolph, where Menard Correctional Center is located and Johnson County, home of Vienna Correctional Center, showed rates of 10 percent and 13.1 percent respectively.

A real hot rod

If you couldn't find your Daily Egyptian Friday, the charred remains of this Plymouth Fury may explain why. The car, belonging to the SIU-C Travel Service, is, or was, used by the DE to deliver bundles of papers to drop-off points. Early Friday, the car caught fire in a parking lot in the northwest corner of the Communications Building, taking about 2,900 newspapers up in smoke with it. No one was injured.

Williams found guilty in murder trial

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

After deliberating for over six hours Thursday evening, a jury found Patrick K. Williams guilty of murdering Benjamin E. Dockins last September, said Jackson County State's Attorney John Clemons.

The jury began its deliberation at about 3:30 p.m. and returned the guilty verdict at 10 p.m., Clemons said. Jackson County Circuit Judge William South revoked

Williams' bond, which was set at $100,000.

A sentencing date has not been set, but a sentence could be handed down in about a month, Clemons said.

Testimony in Williams' trial began Tuesday in Jackson County Circuit Court as Clemons tried to prove that the 19-year-old Williams helped his former co-defendant, Edward L. Buchanan, beat Dockins, 57, to death on Sept. 9.

Buchanan, 20, of 307A Oak St. in Carbondale, entered a negotiated guilty plea on Dec. 29 and was sentenced to 20 years in the Menard Correctional Center.

Williams' attorney, Thomas Mansfield, tried to convince the jury that Buchanan, not Williams, beat and strangled Dockins and that Williams' only involvement was to resist sexual advances made by Dockins.

Williams, of 1115B E. College St. in Carbondale, is being held in the Jackson County Jail.

Cable cars ripped off tracks by high winds in Italian peaks (CHAMPOLU, Italy (AP)) — Powerful winds ripped three cable cars off their tracks during a blizzard Sunday and dropped them 150 feet onto a mountainside at a fancy ski resort, killing eight adults and two children, police said.

Police and rescue officials said two others were seriously injured in the accident. They said all the dead and injured were Italian.

Six skiers died instantly in the crash, four others died of injuries after rescue squads pulled them out of the snow and two more were listed in serious condition at local hospitals.

More than 200 police, firefighters and members of ski-borne rescue squads raced to the scene of the crash near on the Alpine slope at Champolu in the northwestern province of Aosta, between Italy's frontiers with France and Switzerland.

Carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police, hovered in two helicopters for nearly five hours to winch four people to safety from a fourth car swinging wildly in the driving snowstorm. The state-run RAI television network said the rescued people were Italian and French.

The crash occurred at 11 a.m. (15 a.m. EST) at the 8,100-foot level of Colle Sarezza peak, rescue authorities said.

I wanted laughter, not a war

Andrew Herrmann

things are funny and other people think other things are funny but, apparently, few readers thought "If the U of I closes, who'd miss them?" was funny. What do you want in a free newspaper anyway? Benny Hill?

MAYBE I DID, as some letter writers have suggested, over-generalize about the average U of I student maybe I do have a weird view of things. Regardless, I still have the same feelings towards the University of Illinois that I had last week.

If the earth were to open up in Champaign (or is it Urbana) and the whole U of I would slide into it and disappear, I for one wouldn't miss it.

And I would still take anything that Southern has over the U of I. I'd match our students, our instructors, our campus and our town against theirs anytime.

But I don't want to let you go on a sour note — if you still think that's a sour note — so I'll pass on this little joke I heard last week: How many U of I students does it take to change a light bulb? Two. One to get the ladder and one to call Mommy.

Well, like I said, some people think some things are funny and other people think other things are funny...

BOY, NOW I KNOW how that Serbian guy who shot the Archduke of Austria must have felt. One questionable move and, bang, people start fighting each other. World War I starts and before you know it 10 million people are dead. And the Serbian? He went down in history as a jerk and probably had to bop around town wearing sunglasses (as you see I am today), lying low and asking himself, "What did I do?"

I was just glad we had last Friday off because I don't think I could have handled any more love letters, phone calls and comments about my column on the U of I. It was bad enough being called ridiculous, childish, hedonistic, uneducated, hate-filled, dangerously ignorant, a bigot, a scumbag, a disgrace to the DE, an idiot, a blithering idiot, an obvious idiot and a thorn in the side of SIU-C by strangers. But when my mom called and said I'd almost given my dad a heart attack, well, let me tell you, that hurt. That hurt more than my girlfriend leaving me and my cat running away from home.

But you know something? I didn't learn a thing from this. That's because I still don't know what all these people are so hot about. I wrote something tongue-in-cheek and it seems that most people would have preferred that I just cut my tongue off completely. Well, maybe I did learn that satire is full of pitfalls for a writer.

HEY, PEOPLE. Cool out for a minute, will ya? I'm really not the blithering idiot that some of you think I am. I'm just a writer trying to lighten up a much too uptight student body — add a bit of humor to your Monday mornings. I look around and I see this worried look on some of my fellow classmates' faces and hear them mumbling things like "...need an A to pass..." and "...I'll never get a job..." I hear this stuff and I just want to scream, "HEY TRY TO RELAX! STOP BEING SO SERIOUS! LIFE IS ROUGH BUT YOU'LL MAKE IT! LAUGH A LITTLE!"

It didn't work. "If the U of I closes, who'd miss them?" made people mad. It backfired and I'm sorry about that. But I don't regret writing it. I wasn't trying to be mean or hateful. I was trying to be humorous. My intention was good.

Humor is a funny thing. Some people think some

Letters SIU-C a good school; so is U of I

When reading the DE, most of what I find on the editorial page, though often controversial and provocative, is fair and entertaining. However, when the page editor is allowed to print slanderous remarks unchecked, I feel compelled to respond.

As someone who has had the privilege of attending both SIU and U of I I feel that I can more justly assess the similarities and differences between the two schools, than one who merely observes the few students who make passage on the Amtrak. The year that I have spent at SIU has been a rewarding experience in many ways. There exists here the opportunity to meet people of all walks of life as well as virtually all parts of the world. These people are, with slight exception, exceedingly warm and friendly, and make Carbondale a good town for everyone. Unfortunately, not all are willing to accept those who are in any way different!

The University of Illinois, like Southern, has a diverse enrollment, and through the years has developed many fine curricula in the arts and sciences. In all my years at the U of I, I never once came across what could be described as the "average" student, for he or she doesn't exist. Those described as typical by Mr. Herrmann are out part of the many groups of students who attend that school. Hopefully someday Mr. Herrmann will realize that people are no better or worse than others, simply because of their appearance or lifestyle. It is his type of attitude that only serves to further animosity based on ignorance. Whenever people from both schools interact, and no longer consider the other to be "alien," it is obvious that we are all similar. — David E. Wear, Graduate Student, Geology.

Impeach Andrew Herrmann

Andrew Herrmann is a thorn in the side of SIU-C.

As editorial page editor of the DE, his ability to express sensible commentary is null and void. Within the span of one month he has managed to alienate another Illinois university, most of the foreign students here on campus, and anyone with enough nerve to select their own wardrobe.

Nobody really cares what Andrew thinks of leg warmers, unless he has a penchant for wearing them himself.

And what of Andrew's gripe about understanding foreign students? Most of SIU-C's foreign clientele probably speaks English better than our blithering idiot editorial page commandant.

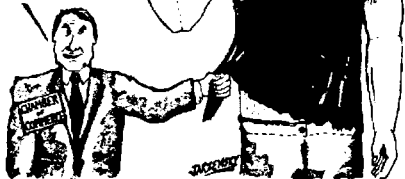

Most notably, Andrew has made an even bigger fool of himself in front of all SIU-C at the cheap expense of the problems had by the University of Illinois. Their financial worries are just as real and threatening as our own. But the SIU-C community does not waste its time demoralizing U of I, as Andrew Herrmann does, because the people at SIU-C have class. We know we have an edge over other universities, but we also know that bragging and insults are no way to prove it. Moreover, Andrew has gone out of his way to disregard the journalism practices of fairness, public interest and objectivity.

The DE is a respectable campus paper that demands an editorial page editor who practices good journalism ethics, has moral integrity, and has a critical judgment tempered with intuitive insight.

As for you Andrew Herrmann, you have my vote as this year's poster child for birth control. — David Sheets, Freshman, Journalism.

ALL WE GOTTA DO IS PRETTY HIM UP AND PROMOTE HIM SO WE CAN LEECH THE LIVIN' PROFITS OUT OF HIM.

Tame Halloween, but not for profits

THE WORD about Halloween in 1983 from Carbondale businessmen is "let's have a festival." It would improve the city's image — and provide a few extra dollars.

The city's image needs some polishing when it comes to the annual bash. In the past, it has been a nightmare for city officials. The Chamber of Commerce is to be commended for wanting to improve the annual downtown party.

Talk of discouraging it, ending it, downplaying it or phasing it out has been turned around by local businessmen. City officials, however, would still just as soon give the "festival" to Murphysboro or Marion.

But the only success the city has had in downplaying the celebration has been to reduce the number of participants — from an estimated 15,000 in 1979 to 10,000 in the past couple of years. But there is no evidence to indicate that the celebration is dying out; in fact, it seems Halloween will haunt the city for eternity.

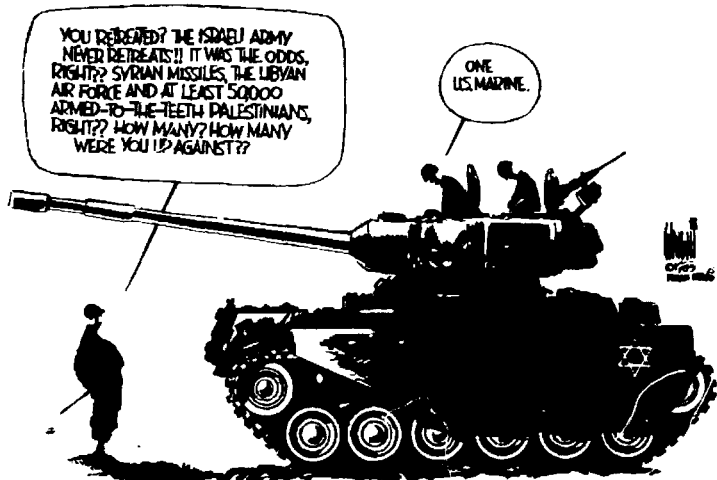

IN THAT CASE, businessmen say, let's take advantage of it. There are profits to be made. Halloween could indeed become a multi-faceted weekend of entertainment complete with races, parades, costume contests and a concert — the Mardi Gras of the Midwest.

One word of caution to those who look at Halloween with dollar signs in their eyes — the weekend should be a festival with races for youths on bikes, not for cashiers ringing up sales at bloated prices.

Parties are for enjoyment and the last thing participants want is to be hawked by vendors on the street who offer hot dogs for $2 or six-packs for $4.50. Participants in Halloween do so to blow off steam — the celebration falls halfway through fall semester for students. Taming the Halloween "beast" doesn't mean putting it on a leash and having it fetch the newspaper.

There is money to be made and businessmen are sure to make it. The city probably could join in the party if it would just wake up and smell the pumpkin pie.

The best could be made of what many consider a bad situation. But let's not make this into a nightmare for those who just want to have a good time.

Did you apply for U of I, Herrmann?

In response to the article, "If the U of I closes, who'd miss them?" of Feb. 7, by Andrew Herrmann, it was the most ridiculous and childish letter I have ever come across. Mr. Herrmann, why do you hate the University of Illinois so much? Could it be sour grapes? I have a suspicion that you tried to get into the University of Illinois and couldn't quite cut the mustard.

After moving to Southern Illinois about 2½ years ago, I decided to further my education. SIU was the closest institution. It didn't take me long to find out that people here really dislike the University of Illinois. I can't understand it. During my whole career at U of I, I never knew anyone who hated SIU. The only thing I ever heard about SIU was that it was a "party school". I don't necessarily think that that's a compliment. Somehow, I don't feel that parties should be first priority at an institute of learning followed by education.

Contrary to this, Mr. Herrmann seems very proud of the fact that everyone at Southern is into partying. He says "...the Southern male couldn't give a crap about "quarter-quartets" unless its a "first-barrel of beer." I'm sorry to hear that you view life so hedonistically, as only a time for fun, parties, with no serious work towards the future. You obviously hate people who work towards a better future for themselves, that care about their appearance, and are not into parties as much as you. It would be interesting to see you after you graduate (if you make it that far) in the personnel department of one of the "Fortunate 500" firms, with your "punk haircut and Levis with holes in them and SIU shirt", your breath reeking of stale beer and a recently smoked cigarette. I hope the U of I graduate behind the desk gives you as much respect as you give him.

Not all the people at the University of Illinois are like those people you say you see in the train with the coiffured hair and designer jeans. Somehow, I don't remember ever wearing pink lipstick or pink fingernail polish, carrying my matching pink luggage. I feel, Mr. Herrmann, that you see what you want to see with your biased little mind. I feel that the people here are the same as at U of I. In fact, I went to classes here two years and no one ever picked me out of a crowd as being a U of I graduate. If U of I people are so obvious, seems like I would have stuck out like a sore thumb.

Grow up, Mr. Herrmann, knock that chip off your shoulder, and look at the real world. It isn't all that bad, really. — Mary Sanders, SIU-C alumna.

Debunking U of I myths

Being a University of Illinois alumnus of the School of Accountancy, naturally I was disturbed by Andrew Herrmann's column, "If the U of I closes, who'd miss them?" As a consequence, I would like to take this opportunity to rebut the unfortunate myths he has advocated concerning the U of I student.

Myth No. One: You implied that it is tough going to Southern due to the negative socio-economic repercussions precipitating from slanderous anti-Southern propaganda of the U of I student. In actuality, this phenomena increases the Southern student's employment opportunities at the expense of the U of I student. Since most personnel directors are flunkies who wind up in personnel because they can't make it anywhere else in the corporate environment, these directors prefer to hire Southern graduates inasmuch as the Southern graduate is less of a threat. Furthermore, the inflated grade point average of the Southern student adds a degree of statistical merit to the personnel director's decision.

Myth No. Two: The average arrogant U of I "male-jerk" wears leather tennis shoes. These aren't leather tennis shoes you idiot! They're Gucci loafers!

Myth No. Three: U of I women "yap, yap, yap," about sororities. Don't let all that talk of betas, deltas and thetas fool you: U of I women are so intelligent that they're actually discussing the variables to a complex physics equation.

I hope this letter succeeds in ameliorating the relations between the students of these two great universities. — James C. Rundbloom, C.P.A. Student, SIU School of Law.

Cartoon to the Editor

EDITORIAL EDITOR ANDREW HERRMANN
BRAINSTORMING AN IDEA.

Hatred of U of I isn't too healthy

One man with so much hatred. That's not healthy. If one considers him or herself first class, it doesn't matter what others think. Mr. Herrmann, you could have spared yourself much emotional trauma by attending U of I. Your worries would be over. No longer would the ways of these "so called jerks" bother you because you yourself would be one of them. Before writing that journalistic trash, did you ever consider that students at SIU have family and friends attending U of I.

Who are you to sit in the judgement seat and condemn ones way of living. Actually Mr. Herrmann, your editorial gave the impression that all who attend SIU are uneducated, drunken bums. I wouldn't give you the time of day either with the upturned nose you must possess. Stick to news editorial, and leave the childish outcries to the preschoolers. — Jeff Michels, Senior, Advertising. Editors note: This letter was signed by eight others.

SIU not second-rate of U of I

After reading Andrew Herrmann's article on the University of Illinois, I had to stop and think if SIU really is second class. I realized that you can't judge a university by one article or one man's opinion, especially when the conclusion Herrmann draws may be the results of faulty thinking.

First, he complains of being labeled as second-rate just because he's a Southern student. He says the only reason for this is because U of I students tell people we are. I'm not sure they have that much authority. Certainly if they did, that would be a first-class trait, one they don't have.

Then he gives a description of SIU students as slobs with punk haircuts only concerned with quarter barrels of beer. He also claims we say things like "find another seat faggot" and "U of I sucks." No doubt these are quotes from Faulkner. I wonder if Herrmann can see where the second-rate stereotype stems from and what keeps it going? Articles like Herrmann's speak about Southern with greater authority than U of I.

I don't think Southern has a reputation of being second-rate, nor do I wish that the earth would open up and swallow up the U of I. There is room in Illinois for both universities, but maybe not enough room for Andrew Herrmann. — Richard Heise, Senior, Psychology.

U of I aliens just like us

You talk of U of I students as if they are aliens. I wonder where you find your basis for these stereotypes. I've spent a lot of time at U of I. I know many people there. I've sat through classes there and I've met people in social as well as scholastic settings. I've even taken Amtrak through Champaign and I don't recall any people of your description on the trains. What you don't seem to realize is that those aliens from U of I are just like us in that they are from the same towns and neighborhoods as SIU students. When you talk about the concealed nature of U of I students, you're talking about a small population of people that can be found anywhere, including SIU. U of I and SIU are two different schools but the students are, for the most part, the same.

When I visit U of I, I wear my SIU jacket and I've never felt that I was second class, as you put it. On the contrary, most people there seem quite interested in the qualities of SIU. The ongoing competition between the lifestyles of two schools is, for the most part, created by people like you.

Incidentally, your description of the average SIU student is, to put it lightly, quite narrow.

Perhaps if you put your bias for U of I behind you next time you are in Champaign, you would see the town and school for what they are, just another college campus, better in some ways, worse in others, different in some ways, similar in others. — Tom Hubner, Junior, Accounting.

Only at SIU-C

Only at an overgrown high school like SIU-C could Andrew Herrmann rise to a position which even remotely resembled one of responsible leadership. Regarding his editorial comments on the University of Illinois (DE Feb 7): a puerile attempt at humor by an obvious idiot. — Bruce Warren, Graduate Student, Radio and Television, U of I class of '77.

Comic or bigot?

Mr. Herrmann are you trying to be a satirical comic or a bigot? Surely you are not serious in your stereotyped image of University of Illinois students that you portrayed in your Feb 7 editorial.

I once went to U of I and I have met the type of people you refer to in your article. I have also met those same types of people down here. Likewise I have met amiable people in both places. You must be an expert in judging personalities of people on trains.

I wonder if you have the capacity to hate every student at the University of Illinois, how do you feel about blacks in this country or people from foreign countries? It seems, Mr. Herrmann, that you could fill the editorial page with more constructive or informative journalism than your own bigoted attitudes. — Austin Nelson, Senior, Biological Sciences.

Herrmann sets DE progress back

Over the fall semester, I thought I'd seen a marked improvement in the Daily Egyptian's treatment of some of the minority groups represented on campus. This semester, though, one staff member seems to be on a one-man campaign to undo it all. I'm referring to Andrew Herrmann's series of thoughtless, insensitive editorial columns.

First, in his Jan. 31 feature, he suggests a new fad: "speaking English in the Student Center (attention international students)". Mr. Herrmann: do you have the courage to leave your home, family, and friends thousands of miles behind, come to live in an alien culture among people who are often ignorant or hostile to your presence, and try to cope with learning under an unfamiliar educational system — all while using a foreign language? I know I don't, and I have a lot of respect for anyone who does. Is it so hard to understand why it would be more comfortable for someone to use a more familiar language when talking with friends in a private conversation whether it's being conducted in English or pig Latin or Morse code?

Then, in his Feb. 7 diatribe against the University of Illinois, Mr. Herrmann has his SIU student hero telling the U of I student who has boarded HIS train to "find another seat faggot." Granted, the column was apparently intended to be humorous and tongue-in-cheek (no comment on how well it succeeded). But would it have been as amusing to say "find another seat nigger"? "find another seat like"? Would it have been printed? The word "faggot" is no less offensive to a significant number of DE readers. Derogatory language like this simply has no place in responsible journalism.

Short of outright censoring his material, can't someone persuade Mr. Herrmann to keep his bigotry to himself? Mary McGhee, Graduate, Higher Education.

Miss Illinois finds success and connections on the road

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

The road to Atlantic City and the Miss America Pageant from the small Southern Illinois town of Mount Carmel is a long one, but for Jaleigh Jeffers, 21-year-old, 5-foot-7, green-eyed SIU-C senior and Miss Illinois, it has been a road paved with gold.

"You meet a lot of people through the pageant that have connections," Jeffers said at an appearance with the Saluki Shakers, Thursday, at the Regis Salon in the University Mall — another in a long string of appearances she has made throughout the state — and a lot of doors are opened for you."

Jeffers started competing in pageants in 1980 in pursuit of a $1,000 college scholarship and won the Miss Wabash Valley pageant while attending Wabash Junior College. She then transferred to SIU-C and won the titles of Miss Southern Illinois and Miss Illinois, only to finish "out of the top ten" at the Miss America Pageant this past September.

Miss America was just another pageant to me. I didn't get nervous until I got home and realized I was watching myself compete on national television."

After graduation in December, Jeffers, a senior in accounting, will start work in the St. Louis offices of Arthur Anderson and Co., the world's largest accounting firm. Presently, she keeps an apartment in Chicago and models in between her engagements.

Her appearances as Miss Illinois have been as varied as a chamber of commerce meeting in Elgin, a downstate local pageant and the Illinois State Legislature.

Because of the scholarship-oriented nature of the pageants, Jeffers defines her position as an advocate for education. In her speech before the legislature and at a reception held for her by Gov. Thompson afterward, she stressed the importance of higher education to Illinois lawmakers and lobbyists.

Elizabeth Taylor says no plans to wed

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite rumors reported in a London tabloid, actress Elizabeth Taylor says she has no plans for an eighth marriage.

The London Daily Express reported Tuesday that Miss Taylor was engaged to marry Victor Gonzales Luna, 55, a Mexican lawyer. The newspaper said the wedding plans were disclosed by Luna's daughter, Irma.

Chen Sam, Miss Taylor's spokeswoman in New York, issued a statement saying the report "has no basis in fact."

The spokeswoman said Miss Taylor and Luna were friends and had spent Christmas and New Year's together.

Miss Taylor, 50, is currently in Toronto filming "Nobody Cries for Me."

Killer Bees show reggae rhythms

By Terry Levecke
Staff Writer

The heavy percussion and rhythmic guitar beat of reggae rock'd J's small bar Thursday night, as The Killer Bees passed through Carbondale.

The above-average talent of The Killer Bees was on display to a packed bar. The band, traveling all over the Midwest and Southwest, made their first stop in Illinois this year at T.J.'s. The six-member band, on its way to Chicago to play at the well-known club, Tuts, was well received at their Carbondale debut.

The band gets its heavy reggae influence from artist greats Bob Marley, Third World, and Steele Pulse, to name a few, and from the band's lead singer Cleveland Williams, who is from Kingston, Jamaica.

Williams is backed up by strong musicians throughout. Percussionist Michael Johnson kept the reggae flavor with rim shot riffs off his timbale and sporadic rhythms on cow bell.

Malcom Welber boogied on lead guitar, with Stan Hoffman jamming on keyboards. Jim Malsh on bass and Randy Giunes on drums.

They exchanged the spotlight with good solo jams in some of their songs. The band plays one-third originals, according to keyboardist Stan Hoffman. Those originals sounded just as good as the rest and blended into a slur of Marley-influenced beats.

After being together for two years the band may be on their way to the stardom every band hopes for with a jingle they are supposed to do for Budweiser, Hoffman said.

"When you hear a reggae 'This bud's for you,' that'll be us," he said.

Their originals are written by Williams, Welber and Johnson who come up with a rhythm or main idea and then let the other members adopt the tune to their instrument, Hoffman said.

The other members of the band are from Shreveport, La., and are glad to be away from the New Orleans Mardi Gras for once. "We've played it so many times, it's nice to somewhere else," Hoffman said.

Hoffman said the band is happy to be working as much as they are, saying that other bands from their area are out of work more often than they are working.

Everyone in the band is optimistic about the future. "We could all be working somewhere else," Hoffman said. "But we all love each other and wouldn't want to be anywhere else."

Hoffman's statement is reflected in the band's performance, which was tight yet diversified.

To prepare for her second try at the Miss Illinois Pageant, Jeffers beeced up her 15 years on the piano by using all of her electives at SIU-C for intensive classical training.

"Half of the judging is based on talent," she said. "The first time I competed, I saw that I didn't have the knowledge or experience on the piano to really be up to that level of competition."

"So the second time, I chose my song ten months ahead of time and played it every day, but when I played it in the preliminary rounds of the competition, I still left off the last two pages."

The competition also includes a seven-minute interview in which five judges quiz the contestants on current events, politics and state trivia. Some of the questions asked included the name of the president of Mexico, the positions of U.S. political leaders and events surrounding the Falkland Islands crisis. "I read every newspaper, Newsweek and Time Magazine I could find and watched Good Morning America everyday," Jeffers said. "The dumb-blondie image would never make it in the Miss America Contest."

Raitt concert an enjoyable treat for all

By Thomas Sparks
Entertainment Editor

Concert Review

Many things can be said about John Raitt's performance in Shryock last Thursday, and none of them would be bad. From the opening strains of "One Alone" from "The Desert Song," to the end of the surprise encore of "The Quest" (better known as the impossible dream) from the "Man of La Mancha," the performance had a special quality.

Raitt presented a musical autobiography of his career, a career that has included leading performances in some of the best-known musicals of this century. In his rich baritone voice, Raitt treated the audience to renditions of his favorite songs from those musicals.

Along with each song, Raitt had a favorite anecdote to tell stories about the strange things that can happen to a musical comedy actor. He related a story of the first time he met Doris Day before they began filming "Pajama Game." He broke one of her ribs while rehearsing a scene.

He spoke of the hardest thing he ever had to do on stage lay motionless for five minutes following the death scene in "Carousel." For each classic song he performed, Raitt told an equally classic tale.

Raitt interspersed the beautiful love songs with up-tempo numbers, always acting each piece, just as if the number had been lifted out of the musical and transported alone to the stage.

Raitt was fair. He sang songs from his hits and songs from his flops, "artistic successes," as he called them. Most of the numbers were well-known to the older audience that had come to see an artist many of them identified with.

Especially beautiful were Raitt's tender renditions of "If I Loved You" from "Carousel," and "There Once Was a Man" and "Hey There" from "The Pajama Game." Both are musicals that Raitt is most identified with. He originated the role of Billy Bigelow in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Carousel" in 1945. He emerged from "Carousel" as one of the most notable male leads on Broadway. Raitt also starred as Sid Sorokin in "The Pajama Game" during 1,060 performances.

Also stirring were Raitt's favorite numbers from his "artistic successes," the title tune from "Magdalena," "A Portrait I Wear in my Heart" from "Three Wishes for Jamie," and the classic, "Here's that Rainy Day" from "Carnival in Flanders."

During the "Pajama Game" sequence, Raitt brought out Nancy Gillispie, secretary of Southern Illinois Concerts, and sang the lovely "There Once Was a Man" to her while she sat looking rather embarrassed.

Accompanying Raitt was his "one-man orchestra," pianist Victor Savant. Savant opened the second portion of the show by performing selections from Berlin's "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue." Savant, though an accomplished pianist, had one major drawback — his playing was often too bright for Raitt's voice. Raitt was performing without a microphone, and during some of the more tender moments, his baritone was covered by the piano.

Throughout the evening, Raitt proved his versatility by doing an admirable job with many difficult numbers. He adopted a thick Greek accent for "I Am Free" from "Zorba," and even sang "Figaro's Aria" from "The Barber of Seville."

Raitt did perform one number he had not originally performed in a musical. He sang "If Ever I Would Leave You" from "Camelot." The number is performed in the musical by Lancelot, and Raitt was always tapped to portray King Arthur so he "spent a lot of time being frustrated when Lancelot sang."

By far, the highlights of the evening were "Soliloquy" from "Carousel" and Cole Porter's "So in Love" from "Kiss Me, Kate." "Soliloquy" tells the tale of Billy Bigelow discovering he's about to become a father and pondering the future of his child. Raitt's performance was emotional and had the audience on edge.

The Porter number has to be considered one of the best love songs ever written and stands by itself. When a beautiful voice like Raitt's sings such a powerful song, the result can best be described as magical.

The audiences favorites, though, appeared to be the soulful renditions of the title number from "On a Clear Day" and "Meditation" from "Shenandoah." Both were rendered with a sense of feeling that is almost a Raitt trademark. Raitt's scheduled closing number, though not from any musical, was no less stirring than anything else he had performed that evening. He closed with the traditional song "Shenandoah," which is not in the musical of the same title.

The entire evening from start finish can best be described as an enjoyable treat that left no one wanting. Raitt thanked the audience for "allowing me to ramble through 45 years of my life." He was the one that should have been thanked.

Fats visits veteran's hospital

By Patrick Williams
Staff Writer

He walked around the pool table in the fluorescently-lit recreation room, sinking billiard balls almost as fast as he spun stories to the gathering of pajama-clad veterans.

Minnesota Fats, self-billed as the "world's greatest pool player" paid a visit to the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Marion Saturday as part of an annual national salute to hospitalized veterans.

"If I wanna play, I'm gonna make it," Fats told the group of about 60 onlookers. And the times he usually wants to play is when there is money riding on the game.

"I can't play for fun," he said, "I never could." But he played for free for over two hours Saturday, demonstrating trick shots and the flamboyant patter that made him famous.

"You can bet the hospital I'll make it," Fats, whose real name is Rudolf Wanderone, said as he set up a trick shot that would sink four balls in four different pockets at the same time.

He made the shot. They kept the hospital.

Bob Thomas, acting head of voluntary services at Marion, said the VA likes to have celebrities come in during the salute, which is in its tenth year. "We had Paul Simon once," he said, but the patients seemed to enjoy Fats better.

"Fats, he can come in here and show what he's famous for," Thomas said.

Tom Darnell, Disabled American Veterans representative at the center, who arranged the appearance, said "Fats is one in a million" for being willing to do volunteer work.

And, according to Fats, a million is the number of different stories he has.

He told one about a man who jumped out of a second-story window after losing a couple of thousand dollars. Letting Fats couldn't sink a trick shot.

"A cop came up and asked, 'Who threw him out the window?'"

"Nobody," Fats responded, "he went out of his own accord—and he was a much wiser man after that," he added.

During the demonstration, Fats kept up a constant dialogue with his audience, recalling names of men they knew, and who he at one time or another had cleaned out.

"I broke every Greek that ever lived," he said at one point, referring to Nick the Greek, a card shark.

Minnesota Fats (right) shakes hands and talks with Pat Holt, of Mayfield, KY... a patient at the VA hospital in Marion.

Warm winter weather not so rare

By Bobby Rosene
Student Writer

Where's the snow? It's the middle of February and there's no trace of a substantial snowfall to be found.

The fact is that a Southern Illinois winter without snow is not unheard of, and temperatures that stay above freezing are also common.

Meteorologists say we've just been lucky—that is, if you're a lover of this type of winter.

Doyle Horsley, meteorologist and geography professor, says people are fickle when it comes to weather. "People tend to associate freakish things with the norm and adapt to them," he said.

"The issue of a person's comfort comes into play when you talk about what's normal and what's not," said Horsley.
"People in Florida are complaining about the 55-degree weather they are having. To us, that's not normal, but we'd be glad to take it."

This winter is the first since 1967 that Southern Illinois hasn't experienced snow of any consequence, said Horsley.

The average temperature for January is usually 28 degrees but the past month's average was 33.8, two degrees from a record average.

Horsley warned that averages can be deceiving because of winters like the one of 1931-32, when the average temperatures from November to February were 56, 46, 44, and 47 degrees respectively. "There are faults with averages," said Horsley. "You have to look at the separate seasons and months to get true norms. An average winter is rare."

Fellowships go to 21 faculty

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

The University Research Committee has selected 21 faculty members to receive Summer Research Fellowship awards.

The awards, which consist of either one month or one-half month's summer salary, are intended to promote research campuswide.

Committee chairman Steven Blache said the 11-member committee reviewed 68 applications for the award and he said the reviewing process required much time and deliberation.

"It is a difficult task because a lot of very fine proposals were submitted," said Blanche, a faculty member in communication disorders and sciences. "We really wish there were more funds for more awards."

Blache said that before considering the fellowship awards, the committee considered requests for mini-sabbatical awards. He said ten faculty members of 33 who applied received mini-sabbatical awards consisting of one week's salary.

The committee then spent several weeks considering fellowship proposals, and Blache said the proposals with "the most broad-based support among all constituencies" made the final round of choices.

Blache also noted that the proposals dealt with research in a wide variety of fields including anthropology, mathematics and biology, and "there was a good dispersion among the recipients."

The Summer Research Fellowship award recipients are:

George Mavigliano, art; Richard Lawson, English;

Robert Corrucini and Richard Rands, anthropology; Aristotel Pappelis and Raymond Stotler, botany; Herbert Hadler, chemistry; Barry Prizant, communication disorders and sciences.

Najim Rubayi, Aslam Kassamali, Bijan Jabbari, electrical sciences and systems engineering; Margaret Epro, foreign languages and literature; Tien Wei Wu, Stanley Zucker, history; Mark Lee, law; Kath Pericak-Spector, mathematics; Ronald Schmeck, Dennis Molfsee, James O'Donnell, Robert Radtke, and Rudy Lorber, psychology.

Those faculty who wish to review the successful applications may do so at the Office of Research Development and Administration. The research fellowships have been awarded for the past three years.

Makanda takes a bite out of crime

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

Wayman Presley insists Makanda's crime watch program could work anywhere.

Makanda, after all, has set a pretty good example. Within six weeks of implementing a crime watch program, the small town south of Carbondale of 300, caught five criminals and has been crime-free ever since.

The secret? Cash rewards for information leading to arrests and convictions, Presley said.

"Someone puts the money up and then everybody kicks in a little to pay it back," said the 86-year-old owner of Presley Tours in Carbondale.

Two cash rewards, totaling $1,500, have been given to anonymous callers since the program started in August 1981, he said. All five people arrested received felony convictions.

Presley, who has lived in Makanda all his life, explained how the program works.

Anyone wanting to supply information about a crime calls a phone number which has been publicized in the area. They may, if they wish, disguise their voices.

The caller is given a code number and told to call again when the person has been convicted.

After this, the caller and crime watch committee arrange a place to leave the money. Presley said once he wrapped 25 $20 bills in plastic and hid them next to a stop sign.

The committee decides how much each reward will be.

"Once, though, I offered a guy $300 for information about a crime and he refused it, stating it was his duty as a citizen," Presley commented.

Bill Kilquist, Jackson County sheriff, helped Presley organize the program.

"For that area, crime was relatively high," he said, "with a lot of vandalism and problems with some drug groups."

The citizens were concerned enough to do something about it, Kilquist said.

And Presley said Makanda citizens have taken further steps to prevent crime through a "community telephone alert."

"If the mayor, for example, wants to send out a message, he calls five telephone numbers and on down the line until everyone has been contacted," he noted.

Someone saw two men walking through town one day he said, and soon "they had suspicious eyes watching them."

Kilquist agrees a crime watch program could work in areas such as student populated sections of Carbondale but said, "citizens education is a lot easier."

A few non-student areas of Carbondale used to have such programs, Kilquist said. But he noted, "At times there was a lack of interest by the public. And Jackson County is a transient type area, which may have led to the fizzling of the programs."

These programs seem to work better in "more stabilized areas," he added, and almost need a full-time worker to keep up interest and keep it current.

To operate the programs, Kilquist said personnel "to motivate, coordinate and operate it," are needed.

Presley pointed out that in larger communities, a program doesn't need a lot of people.

Advertise that there is a program, he suggested, and just let criminals know people are watching, although they won't know how many.

Kilquist said he would be willing to help people set up crime watch programs or talk about crime prevention.

Organist believes in musical discipline

By Duane Schombert
Staff Writer

Acknowledged by many as one of the finest organists in America, Marianne Webb, professor of music, believes a great musician has the ability to take a musical score and fuse what the composer is trying to express with his own personality.

Music is aesthetically pleasing in that it combines harmonious sounds in order to communicate, Webb believes.

Although she allows other people to judge her musical "greatness," Webb is thankful for "the gift from God" she possesses.

"Whether I'm great isn't as important as the fact that I'm working to the best of my ability and achieving the best I can," she said. "Talent is a gift and people have it in varying degrees. I have a responsibility to utilize my gift in my field. The greater the gift, the greater the responsibility for developing it."

Webb's gift for music emerged at the age of three.

Her family owned a piano and she would play pieces as she heard them on the radio. Eventually, Webb began formal piano lessons and gave her first recital when she was four. At 14, she became interested in the organ.

"A person doesn't choose music. Music chooses the person and then it becomes a way of life," Webb said.

For Webb, this way of life includes teaching. She has concentrated for the past 18 years at SIU-C on helping students develop a strong musical foundation.

"I can't imagine life without the teaching aspect. I had professors who cared about me as a person and about my future. They helped me build a career and I intend to do the same for my students," Webb said.

Webb believes music, like most vocations, requires hard work and determination.

"You have to practice to play," Webb said. "The music field is a field where employment is not readily available like computer science. If a student is going to be top-notch in music, he has to work hard."

Whenever Webb encounters a student who is not serious about music, she tries to persuade him to venture into an academic field better suited for him.

In order for a student to produce quality work, Webb believes he must possess discipline. Webb links discipline in music with discipline in athletics.

"A musician cannot stay up all night and expect to practice well the next day, just as an athlete can't stay up all night and then expect to win a basketball game," she said.

Webb believes musicians, like athletes, are always in training and that a good musician should take care of himself and make sacrifices in life.

"As a musician, I have given up parties and sacrificed vacations for recitals. I also don't drink because it interferes with finger coordination," she said.

Like athletics, Webb believes music is a release from a person's worries. It is like therapy.

"Athletic events are a wonderful release for a person who can go to a ball game and bellow and holler. Music is an opportunity to lift a person out of a very mundane existence. It dusts the world with magic," she said.

When Webb was hired at SIU-C in 1965, she said the School of Music lacked direction.

"Southern was a tremendously exciting place in 1965. The faculty was growing in leaps and bounds. Money seemed to be no problem, as opposed to today," she said.

"However, our music department needed a strong administrator. We were floundering and we didn't know what

...ose. But the Blue Jays were one of five from outside the three-point line.

"Our conditioning came into play," said Walker, one of four Salukis, along with Jones, Goins and Johnny Payne, to put in more than 38 minutes of playing time.

Walker, starting to score consistently of late, stayed out of serious foul trouble and had a team high 17 points. Goins had 13 and steadied SIU-C down the stretch. Benny Smith had 12, a Jones hit 10 points.

SIU-C shot 45 percent, a recent outing for them, and kept the game close with tough defense. In the first half it was a trapping 1-3-1 zone, for most of the second half it was old fashioned man-to-man defense.

The 1-3-1 featured Goins and Harry Hunter, who got his third start of the year. Goins played the ball up top and trapped on the baseline, and Hunter started in the middle, out by the free throw line, but ranged all the way across the court.

Jones said there was no single key to the 1-3-1.

"If one person slacks off it really looks bad. Everybody's got to work hard."

Especially the 6-9, rail-thin Hunter, whose infectious enthusiasm and hustle has made him a crowd favorite. He had six points, nine rebounds, and even blocked a shot by 7-0 Benoit Benjamin before fouling out with 6:21 to go in the second half.

Benjamin, one of the top freshmen in the nation, had 17 points, 11 rebounds and five blocked shots.

"You can't take it in there shabby. If you do you'll get it back in your face," said Hunter.

Guard Vernon Moore also had 17 for the Blue Jays, hitting seven of nine from the field and adding five assists. Creighton started Benjamin and 6-11 Joe Bresnahan on the front line, in part prompting Van Winkle to start Hunter.

"When we come back from warmups, the lineup's on the board," said Hunter. "It was a shock to me as well as the people. I got to go out there and board. Whatever points I get that's a bonus," said Hunter, who had the crowd of 2,669 following his every move.

Creighton coach Willis Reed had a closed door talk with his players after the game, and admitted that he wasn't all that pleased with the way his team played.

"I think the 1-3-1 did bother us," he said. "But I think we did have some good shots. We just missed them."

Creighton shot only 43 percent, and got out rebounded 41-34 by the smaller Salukis.

Reed thought his young team had experienced a letdown after its stunning victory over 17th ranked Illinois State last week.

"I think the players were basking in their glory," said Reed.

After Saturday's game, the Salukis were doing the same thing.

and Pie Walker, and then sealing the triumph with free throws. The Salukis made 10 of 11 free throws in overtime.

"We did exactly what we were supposed to do," said Jones, who missed his first nine shots before finding the touch that made him one of several Saluki heroes. "I think they panicked when they got down."

It was Jones who triggered the Blue Jays' collapse. First he hit a lone right side jump shot to start the overtime, and then, from the same seconds later, he found Walker underneath for an easy layup. Walker converted a free throw. Jones hit a pair of free throws on the next trip. Goins scored on a driving layup, and the Salukis were in the driver's seat.

They led 59-52 at that point, with two minutes left, and only the threat of Creighton three-point shots made the game

...we were doing. Each faculty member was going in different directions instead of pulling together."

But with the arrival of Robert Roubos, director of the School of Music, cohesion became the rule.

"Roubos has given us direction and harmony. Faculty members work better together," she said. "The administration did what they needed to do and we are now feeling and seeing the rewards in terms of competent music majors."

During her interview for employment at SIU-C, Webb was informed that the rebuilt 1890-pipe-organ purchased from a church in Rockford might be replaced.

"When I came here, I started to work on that project. Fortunately, money was not tight," she said. "If President Delyte Morris was convinced something was important for the growth of the University and community, he would support it." In 1971, a new recital organ was purchased for Shryock.

About 140 undergraduates and 25 graduate students are enrolled in SIU-C's School of Music, according to Webb. She said these figures, comparatively low for a music department, do not discredit the department.

"Our department is certainly not ranked in the top 10, but we have a good school of music because we have some hard working and capable faculty," she said.

The School of Music recently underwent internal and external reviews to determine its academic standards, emerging with "excellent reviews," Webb said.

Webb, who remains at SIU-C because her husband, David Bateman, is a professor in administrative science, said. "It would almost be impossible to find two good positions at another school. Perhaps if I had not married in 1970, I would have gone to teach somewhere else."

Webb also believes that music is "the spice of life."

"You can hear hard rock, acid rock, Lawrence Welk or the Robert Shaw Chorale. There is something available for every individual today. Unfortunately," she said, "the cost of tickets are expensive."

While some music is beyond Webb's "musical world," she does support the current trend toward new and innovative ideas in music.

"There's always the avant-garde area where people are constantly experimenting. Some of it is off-the-wall," she said. However, Webb believes an element of musical experimentation needs to exist because "there is currently a quest for excellence" in music.

"The best teachings in music are occurring in America, as well as the best performances. We've finally achieved a status of being superb musicians," she said.

Arthur Poister, with whom Webb studied at Syracuse University in New York, is the person Webb contends has influenced her teaching and personality.

Poister, hailed "the greatest organ teacher over the last 30 years" by Webb, had an exuberant personality.

"He was a superb teacher and I learned a great deal from him," Webb said. "He was interested in students and his energy for music was all-consuming. He had a tremendous enthusiasm and love for what he did."

Webb "would dearly love to make contributions to the organ like Poister did." In the meantime, she is working on her life-time goal.

"When I was young, I wanted to reach the top," she said. "I wanted to be a fine concert artist, a good teacher and have impact on students' lives. I've performed at recitals which have led to bigger concerts. I have played and taught at national and regional conventions. I hope I can continue to make that type of contribution to the organ world."

Webb said "I have to continue to improve my teaching and grow as a musician. Stagnation is death. If a person does not continue to learn and keep up with the latest in performance practice research, then he will not remain at the top very long. I keep up with new knowledge and pass it along to my students and have that knowledge reflect in my own music."

Men gymnasts score big, but lose to Illini, Iowa State

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Despite suffering its first two losses of the season, the men's gymnastics team continued its quest for a berth at the NCAAs.

With a 278.30 Thursday and a 275 Saturday, the team stayed among the top 10 in the country, but couldn't top its opponents as Illinois went 280.05 and Iowa State hit 279.40.

Brian Babcock remained undefeated in all-around competition, going 57.60 Thursday and 57.75 Saturday.

On their way to earning their highest total of the season Thursday, the 8-2 Salukis made other changes in the record book.

Herb Voss tied the mark held by Brian Babcock with a 9.75 on pommel horse, Tom Slomski bettered his record to win the rings with a 9.75, and Babcock raised the horizontal bar record to 9.85.

The Salukis had several high scores and few major breaks, but the Illini countered with their own strong depth and outstanding performances to outdo their hosts. Not much could beat a 9.85 on high bar, but Charles Lakes hit a 9.9 to do just that, as did Kevin Oltendorf on pommel horse.

Other individual event winners for SIU-C were Babcock on floor exercise, 9.65, and Brendan Price on vault, 9.65. Other highly scored, strong sets came from John Levy, 9.8 on high bar, Babcock, 9.7 on pommel horse and 9.6 on rings and vault and Kevin Mazeika, 9.55 on high bar.

Except for a few breaks, the Salukis responded to the pressure and importance of the meet against Illinois and it was the same type of meet at Iowa State, Meade said.

In Ames, Iowa, Babcock won the pommel horse, 9.7 and parallel bars, 9.45. He also tied with Levy on high bar, 9.7, and Price on vault, 9.65.

Since overall record, ranking in the regions and average of top three away scores and two home scores all figure into the NCAA selection process, the 275 at Iowa State was good, Meade said.

The Salukis will try attempt to better their away marks when they travel to California this week to meet top level teams.

percent from the floor, and never came close after half-time. With a 38-32 lead at intermission, the Cardinals never looked back, opening up a 14-point lead midway through the final period.

Jackie Spencer came off the bench to lead Louisville with 14 points. Devita Caesar, who fouled out with 1:02 remaining in the game, added 13 points and eight rebounds to the winning cause. Rosalind Smith and Valerie Gay combined for 24 more.

On the losing side of the court, Char Warring tied for game honors with 14 points. Sue Faber notched 13 points and pulled down a game-high 12 rebounds, but also turned the ball over six times. First-time starter Linda Wilson contributed nine points, a temporary collegiate-high for the Niles freshman.

Saturday night, however, was a stark contrast to Friday's forgetful contest. Tennessee-Martin entered the Arena with a 15-6 mark. They were fortunate to leave with a 15-7 record. The Lady Pacers were out of the game long before halftime, and the Salukis racked up their biggest win of the year, 79-39.

"We needed a game like this," Scott said. "We were real down after last night's loss. We needed a win to get us ready for Monday."

Two non-starters tied for game honors for SIU-C. Sophomores Kim Frick and Eleanor Carr each netted a career-high 12 points, while Wilson once again set a personal high with 10 points. Junior D.D. Plab added 10 to round out the Salukis' double-figure scoring. Warring continued to have an outstanding weekend on the boards, adding 10 rebounds and nine points to the total.

Angela Reeves (10) and Sandra Lise (10) combined for over half of the hapless Lady Pacers' output.

Monday's contest is a must-win situation for Scott, whose squad now stands 4-2 in GUCAC play. With half of the remaining six games being conference contests, Scott believes that a clean slate henceforth is the only way of assuring the Salukis of a top-three seeding in the March tourney.

"It's going to be a tough ball game. If we lose, it will inrow have into the seeding. We're going to take them very seriously. Peggy Jackson and Barbara Graves are great shooters, and we're going to have to stop them."

Jackson and Graves were the primary factors when the Sycamores nearly upset the Salukis in Terre Haute three weeks ago. The duo combined for 32 points in ISU's 63-60 loss, countering a 27 point output by the now-injured Connie Price Warring, who was recovering from a scratched eyeball, sa' out that contest, but will play Monday while Price dons the bench role.

"Connie had 27 points up there. Obviously, we won't be getting those," Scott said. "But with or without Connie we're a good ball club. We need a win. I hope it comes through Monday night."

Saluki Notes— Monday night's contest will honor Valentine's Day by offering two-for-one tickets to mixed couples. Just show up at the gate with your favorite Valentine and receive two tickets for the price of one.

Netters open season with wins

By JoAnn Marciszewski

The women's tennis team continued in its ways of the fall season by opening the spring round with two wins this weekend.

Coach Jucy Auld's team revenge a 2-7 fall loss by edging Memphis State 5-1 on Friday, and then beat Gateway Conference opponent Wichita State 6-3.

The two wins increased the team's year mark to 15-2, and indicated the team is ready for a good spring season, perhaps even better than that in the fall, Auld said.

"This early in the season, it was good in not just beating them, but in having everyone playing well," she said. "They were hitting the ball well."

The team has been practicing three days a week indoors, and doing a lot of running and conditioning work since returning to school in mid-January, according to the coach. Both the physical and mental aspects of the game were in good shape over the weekend.

"If we had to go from January to the end of February without a match, that would have been a long time without competition, and these meets really provided an incentive," Auld said. "They were mentally ready to play. "We have a really good team situation, too. Everyone was encouraging each other and we're not counting on just one person to pull through."

In singles play against Memphis State, Lisa Warren lost to Stacey Seamens, 7-5, 0-6, 2-6; Alessandra Molinari defeated Wendy Sturm, 6-2, 6-4; Mary Pat Kramer lost to Rene Wickum, 4-6, 4-6; Stacy Sherman lost to Rose Grasso, 6-1, 6-7, 4-6; Heidi Eastman defeated Linda Kleinaitis, 6-0, 6-1, and Maureen Harney defeated Angie Powers, 6-2, 6-3.

In doubles, Warren and Eastman defeated Sturm and Grasso, 1-6, 1-6; Allen and Sherman defeated Seamens and Wickum, 6-0, 2-6, 6-2, and Molinari and Kramer defeated Chris Daney and Kleinaitis, 6-2, 6-4.

Against Wichita State, Warren lost to Sandy Sadler, 2-6, 2-6; Molinari defeated Suzanne Deam, 6-1, 4-6, 7-5; Kramer lost to Sally Webber, 5-7, 2-6; Sherman defeated Jill Braendle, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5; Eastman defeated Molly Main, 7-5, 6-4 and Harney defeated Cheryl Dimitt, 6-4, 6-1.

Eastman and Warren lost to Sadler and Webber, 1-6, 2-6; Sherman and Allen defeated Main and Braendle, 7-5, 6-4, and Molinari and Kramer defeated Deam and Dimitt, 6-1, 6-2.

The 2-0 netters will continue their spring season in two weeks at a tournament at Eastern Kentucky.

Roxanne Carlton turned in a standard time in the 400 IM in 4:29.22, finishing second to teammate Stacy Westfall.

The Salukis' 200 free relay of Royalty, Peel, Westfall, and Ratcliffe reserved a spot at the national meet, clocking in at 1:35.5 behind Royalty's record-breaking lead-off split.

Janie Coontz made the national cut in the 1,650 free in 16:51.26, an event in which she was already ranked. Freshman Linda Bell qualified in the 100 IM in 58.96, a new pool record.

Junior Barb Larsen earned a ticket to the national meet in the 50 and 100 fly, turning in times of 25.80 and 56.82.

Vanderbilt dumps netters 6-3

By Ken Perkins

The young man be getting restless in Carbondale.

Coach Dick LeFevre's netters want to win and win big, but are finding out that inconsistency can be a team's worst enemy.

After losing the opener to Northwestern, they ran over Murray State 6-3 and slipped by Kansas 5-4.

Saturday, riding on a two-match winning streak high, they lost to Vanderbilt 6-3.

Oh, the young have so much to learn.

"But they are coming along," LeFevre said in defense of his two seniors, two sophomores and array of freshmen.

"It's quite encouraging to see them play well each time out. You've got to remember it's tough to beat some of these teams. Your young guys are always playing upperclassmen. And I'll tell you, two and three years experience means a lot."

Saluki freshmen Per Wadmark wouldn't know about such trivial matters. Playing the team's No. 1 player each match is tough for anyone, but Wadmark, Salukis No. 1 player, pushed his individual record to 3-1 with a win over John Evert 7-6, 6-3. The fact that he was facing Chris Evert-Lloyd's brother didn't mean a thing. He had no trouble polishing off the younger Evert.

"That's a good record," LeFevre said of Wadmark's worksheet. "It was a real good win over a very fine player."

That goes ditto for No. 2 player John Greif. He beat Chris Huff, who played No. 1 singles for the Commodores last year and briefly this year, 7-5, 6-4. Greif evened his individual mark to 2-2. The two wins at the top of the order was somewhat of a surprise to LeFevre.

"It is so tough to win at number one, two and three singles," said LeFevre, "and I just figured that our strength was mostly at the bottom half of the lineup. But we have been winning up front."

The Salukis have been doing quite well up front. They ripped Kansas at one, two and three singles and beat the Com-modores top two as well.

But Vanderbilt, who beat the Salukis 8-1 last year, captured singles the rest of the way. No. 3 player David Filer fell to Robert Lorndale 6-2, 6-2; Gabriel Coch lost to Jon Shepperd 6-3, 2-6, 7-5; Rollie Oliguino was beaten by Tom Tommey 6-4, 7-6 and Paul Rasch took it to the third set before losing to Dan Stewart 7-6, 6-7, 6-1.

The Salukis captured only one of three doubles matches. The freshmen duo of Wadmark and Oliguino defeated Evert and Shepperd 6-4, 6-4. But the senior pair of Filer and Greif fell to Huff and Lorndale 6-4, 6-2 and Coch and Rasch lost to Tommey and Stewart 6-1, 6-4.

The Salukis, 2-2, will take a week off before returning to action against state rival Illinois on Feb. 25.

Women swimmers grab GCAC title

Tim Hill's Saluki swimmers blew their competition out of the water and made several pool records things of the past en route to capturing the inaugural Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference championship at the Recreation Center pool over the weekend.

SIU-C headed the GCAC field with 1,067.5 points. Illinois State was the closest team to the Salukis, chalking up 528.5 points, followed by Western Illinois (391) and Eastern Illinois (300).

The meet scores also counted for the Saluki Invitational, which included Tulane. SIU-C led the way with 996 points, followed by Illinois State (458), WIU (348), Tulane (335) and EIU (250). Prior to the meet SIU-C had qualified for NAAs in 10 events, and Hill said he expected to qualify for five more over the weekend. By the time finals were over Sunday night, the Salukis had qualified for nationals in 17 events, catching even Hill by surprise.

"I'd say we've had a pretty good meet," the Saluki coach said. "We've really shown some signs of speed. I expected for us to meet NCAA standards in some events, but I didn't think we'd make it in that many."

"It's extremely satisfying to see this many of the girls make the NCAA cut," he said. "I think what's really helped us was holding time men's and women's meets together, because it's generated so much excitement, enthusiasm and crowd support."

SIU-C's 200 medley relay of Pam Ratchliffe, Linda Bell, Rene Royalty and Laura Peel qualified with a time of 1:48.02, breaking a pool record in the process.

Freshman Stacy Westfall continued to prove herself, making the NCJA cut in three events and swimming two perfect times on the season. Westfall knocked off a pool record by placing first in the 500 freestyle in 4:52.08, a time that is her best this season, qualified her for nationals and will probably rank her nationally in that event.

Westfall clocked in at 2:07.47 in the 200 individual medley, a personal best and NCAA cut that will give her a national ranking. She also qualified in the 400 IM, another event she will gain ranking in.

"I expected Stacy to swim fast this weekend, but not that fast," Hill said. "She's exceeded our expectations for this point in the season."

Carrie Perkins, who finished the 200 free in 2:07.00, had a good meet, according to the coach.

herself with her performance. "I'm really happy with how I've done," she said. "I'm glad I swam so well, but I certainly didn't expect it."

Freshman Rene Royalty also compiled an impressive slate by Saturday night. She turned in a personal best time of 57.04 in the 100 butterfly, a time that will rank her nationally. Later Friday night, though, Royalty swam the same event in a time trial in 56.55, an NCAA qualifier that could put her as high as seventh in rankings.

Royalty also put herself in the nationals in the 50 fly, swimming a season best 26.04 that will put her in the top 20 in the country. She made a third NCAA cut with her split time in the 200 free relay, 23.7, which is also a new pool record.

"I'm pretty pleased with how I've been swimming," she said

Sunday morning. "I hadn't expected to qualify in the 50 free. I wasn't really excited about this meet, not like I am for NICS, but after my first races things started falling into place."

Amanda Martin made the NCAA cut in a time trial in the 50 breaststroke in 30.51, the event in which she holds the

Saluki effort nets overtime win

Creighton was on Cloud Nine after a stunning 12-point upset of Illinois State earlier in the week. For SIU-C, a painfully-earned overtime win over the indifferent Blue Jays did the same thing. SIU-C beat Creighton 70-60 at the Arena Saturday, turning a defensive struggle into a rout in the last five minutes.

For an overmatched team that hasn't had much but a 7-14 record to show for a lot of hard work, the victory was a godsend. It snapped a two-game losing streak and was only SIU-C's second win in 10 games. It also puts them back in the playoff picture.

SIU-C is now 3-9 in the Missouri Valley Conference, tied for ninth with Indiana State. And in the MVC, ninth place is the last seed for the tournament.

"Let me compliment the players," said Saluki coach Allen Van Winkle. "They did a nice job. I'm just happy for them. They haven't had as many enjoyable moments as they should have. We sit here happy today but the efforts have been the same. They've played like that a lot this year."

SIU-C trailed by as many as six in the first half, and went into the locker room trailing 27-24, after failing to score for almost eight minutes late in the session.

In the second half, neither team ever enjoyed a lead of more than five points. It was tied most of the way, including the end of regulation when Darnell Jones hit a 15-footer to send it into overtime. Creighton had four shots at winning the game, and Dennis Goins then missed a half-court heave at the buzzer.

In overtime, SIU-C ran away, getting early points from Jones

Cagers to face GCAC foe after splitting weekend

It's a long and winding road, and a rocky one at that, to the NCAA tournament.

In less than two weeks, the Saluki women's regular basketball season will be history. In that lapse of time, they will play six games, two of which they will enter as the underdog. Should Coach Cindy Scott be able to squeeze 20 wins out of her 15-6 club, it is entirely possible that they would receive an at-large bid to the 32-team tournament. That, however, would only be necessary should SIU-C fail to win the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference post-season tournament, the winner of which is automatically invited to the NCAA festivities.

The scramble down the stretch begins at 7:35 in Davies Gymnasium, when conference rival Indiana State comes into Carbondale with vengeance as its motive. And although the showdown takes place on Valentine's day, there will be no love lost between the two teams.

Loss No. 6 was tacked on Friday night, when the upstart Louisville Cardinals came to town and embarrassed the Salukis in front of the home crowd by a 70-61 count. Scott's squad shot a season-low 37

Depth helps swimmers topple foes

On its way to winning the 15th Annual Saluki Invitational, the men's swimming and diving team set seven meet records and won 12 of the 18 events.

The team scored 769 points to top the eight-team field. Illinois was second with 479, followed by Tulane, 371; Missouri, 365; Purdue, 343; Iowa State, 266; Bradley, 173 and Eastern Illinois, 121.

The picture for performances at the National Independent Conference championships and the NAAs gets brighter and brighter as the quality of depth, better on this SIU-C team than it has been in the past, shows through, according to Coach Bob Steele.

"This meet is a good indication of our strength," he said. "We had many more people in the championship finals in each event than ever before. It's not that the other teams aren't good, the quality of the competition is better than before. Everyone is just swimming fast."

The Salukis racked up the points throughout the line-up. Taking firsts in meet record times were the relay teams. The 800 freestyle relay team finished in 6:45.53; the 400 medley relay team, 3:24.97; the 400 free relay, 3:04.74.

Keith Armstrong was a triple winner, going 20.81 in the 50 free, 45.34 in the 100 free and 1:39.97, a meet record, in the 200 free.

Also taking firsts were Conrado Porta in the 100 and 200 backstroke, 52.27 and 1:52.52; Pablo Restrepo in the 100 breaststroke in a meet record time of 58.05, and Anderz Grillhammar in the 1,650 freestyle in a meet and school record time of 15:21.60, and the 500 freestyle, in an NCAA qualifying time and meet record time of 4:49.11.

The diving squad is also pulling some weight around. The Salukis monopolized the three-meter competition, taking the top three spots. Each of the three in that competition, Nigel Stanton, Jim Watson and Tom Wentland, surpassed the point total needed to qualify for the zone regional meet on that board. Another strong Saluki diver, Johnny Consenium, missed the meet because of an injury, but should be ready to dive against Arkansas next weekend.

Stanton, a freshman from England, went into the finals far above the crowd with 372.20 points and continued strong, receiving six-and-a-halfes to eights from the five judges through the last three dives. Stanton finished with 531.20.

Jim Watson placed second with 520. In second after the semi-finals, but down by 22.60 points after missing a few dives. Watson came on strong during the finals to narrow the gap.

"Coming off four or five days of sickness, Jim dove like he's capable of," said Coach Denny Golden. "Eight and nines are not unusual scores for what he can do."

Golden was especially enthusiastic about Wentland's performance. Wentland had missed a few dives for fives during the semi-finals and came out of there with 325.20 and in fifth.

"When he went into the finals, he needed 150 points on three dives to qualify, and he ended up making it by five," Golden said. "He did what he had to do, everything and more. He keeps getting better and better."
