African Studies set to be structured

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

A campuswide hearing will be held next week on the African American Studies Association program, formerly the Black American Studies program. James Scales, chairman of the task force examining the program, said.

Registered Student Organizations and students are encouraged to come and talk to us in planning for the AAS program," Scales, who also is the director of the career development center, said.

The task force will hold hearings Feb. 21 and 22. RSOs will be heard by appointment between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in the Student Center Missouri Room. The open hearings will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Student Center Video Lounge.

Scales said the University administration has said there will be an AAS program, and it is trying to determine how to structure the program.

Scales said the administration has unofficially agreed to remove the AAS program from the College of Human Resources, but it has not yet decided where the program will be housed.

The administration also wants to examine how many faculty members are needed for the program, he said.

"Although the faculty members may be the best, we have to realistically work with what we have now and build from there," Scales said.

Currently Luke Tripp is the only full-time faculty member in the program, and the University has denied him tenure. Adjunct professors from other curricula also teach classes in the program.

Franz Mullings, African American Studies Association coordinator, said the University hasn't hired two new AAS teachers it had promised to hire for the fall of 1988.

At last Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting, the AASA asked that action be taken on its proposals to improve the African American Studies program. Mullings was one of the authors of those proposals.

Mullings said the AASA wants a direct link to President John Guyon's office.

"Currently, nobody wants to take responsibility for the dismantling of the program. If it is connected with the president's office, there will be someone to hold responsible," he said.

President Guyon said the University administration is taking the AASA's proposals under advisement.

The AASA is asking for qualified instructors to teach classes and to reinstate the general education courses that were removed from the curriculum in 1983, Mullings said. He said he is positive about the general education classes making a comeback.

"The classes will come back," he said, "because we (the AASA) will keep applying pressure until they do."

Guyon said, "I have recommended courses on gender and ethnic studies for the general education department, but these courses are faculty prerogative."

Guyon said he was confident that there would be an African American Studies program in the future.

Larvester Gaither, Undergraduate Student Government vice president, said, "The main focus is who the University will hire to fill these positions. The students should continue to protest to make the administration take them seriously."

In August 1988, Jan Carew, a Northwestern University professor, was sent to SIU-C to

Steady rain leaves drains overflowing

By Phyllis Coon

Splashing in puddles could be fun for kids, but when the rain puddles on campus, students, faculty and staff only get wet feet.

The backup of a drainage system in front of a door at the Vocational Education Studies building on Chautauqua Road, Monday, forced employees to wade their way inside. Sherry Turpin, secretary and transcriber for the Military Program, said.

"No one could get in or out of the building without literally jumping over this big puddle," Turpin said.

The worker's problem was fixed when Physical Plant workers cleaned the drain, she said.

But if the drain hadn't been fixed the problem could have gotten deeper as forecasters are expecting at least another inch of rain before it stops this morning.

The rain is expected to redevelop this afternoon and continue off and on for the rest of the week. Karol Abrams, the University's chief weather observer, said.

In the past, when there was standing water in front of the door people would use the building's wheel chair ramp to get in, Turpin said.

"The ramp was stolen, and a real concern is that we don't even have access for people with disabilities," Turpin said.

Iran-Contra jury sent home, judge looks at new proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The judge in the Iran-Contra case, trying to resolve the impasse delaying Oliver North's trial, again sent the jury home Monday and set a Tuesday hearing to consider a new proposal for protecting classified data in the proceeding.

Prevented from starting North's 12-count felony trial by a Supreme Court order issued Sunday, U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell apologized for the inconvenience to the nine-woman, three-man jury. He admonished those 12 and six alternates against reading, listening to or watching any news about North.

Gesell also said without elaborating that independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh had made some "admissions" during the weekend, and after sending the jury home, the judge closed his courtroom to consider defense objections. That one-hour hearing broke up with all parties refusing comment on the matter.

Students to call president

By Miguel Aiba
Staff Writer

The United States Student Association leaders are urging students to call President George Bush asking him to "be a sweetheart to the education budget" this Valentine's Day.

Janet Lieberman, USSA legislative director, said students can call the White House comment line, (202) 456-7639 during regular business hours to ask Bush to be a sweetheart to the education budget, in addition to expressing their concerns about the budget.

Bush will release the full budget Feb. 21.

"Bush has promised to be the education president," Lieberman said. "We have to put the heat on."

The national phone-in day is the kick off event of the USSA Back to the Future campaign.

Complaints bring improvements to TCI

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The cable television company, TCI of Illinois, has made improvements in customer service at both its Carbondale and Cartersville offices after customers complained.

Neither the Carbondale nor the Cartersville offices will raise rates to pay for planned improvements in customer service, office managers said.

The cable system has been criticized by customers in recent months for not providing adequate service to Southern Illinois communities. The Cartersville office serves Marion, Herrin, West Frankfort, Cartersville, Harrisburg, Carlyle and Murphysboro but not Carbondale.

Students in the triads, Neely and Brush towers on the east side of campus get cable in hub and television lounges from the Carbondale office of TCI of Illinois, Edward Jones, director of University Housing, said.

University Housing paid $2,288.53 for the cable service in 1988, Jones said. With approximately 5,000 students in eastside residence halls, that breaks down to about 46 cents per eastside student.

TCI of Illinois customers have complained they have difficulty getting to talk to customer service representatives by phone.

Theresa Vincelette, Carbondale TCI office manager, said, "In July, we were having a phone problem. We were getting complaints that the phones were busy but our lines weren't tied up. So we changed our phone system and it's definitely helped a lot."

Moslems continue protests over publication of book

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Moslem demonstrators enraged over publication of a book they consider blasphemous continued their rampage Monday as protests spread to a second Pakistani city and into India, where one protester was killed and more than 100 others wounded. The violence in India brought the two-day casualty toll to six dead and 180 people wounded in the demonstrations over U.S. publication of "Satanic Verses."

Baker shapes nuclear issue, stages summit

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Secretary of State James Baker's quick visit to Scandinavian NATO countries Monday, produced the shape of a compromise on a knotty nuclear issue and set the stage for an allied summit in late spring. In the second day of a six-day tour of 14 nations, Baker spent about two hours in Copenhagen, Denmark, and two in Oslo, Norway, before flying back to his starting point, Bonn, for a late meeting with Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Soviets leave troops at Afghanistan airport

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — Fifteen Soviet paratroopers flew out of the capital Monday, leaving a token force of at least two dozen Soviet troops at the airport two days before all of Moscow's forces must be out of Afghanistan. In other developments Afghan rebel groups remained divided in their efforts to form a government to replace the Soviet-backed administration of President Najibullah.

Rebels down helicopter, kill 3 Soviet officers

MOSCOW (UPI) — Afghan rebels shot down two Soviet helicopters flying out of Afghanistan last week, killing three Soviet officers, the Pravda newspaper said Monday. The deaths of the two lieutenants and a captain in the destruction of the Mi-8 helicopter Thursday raised to at least seven the number of soldiers killed since the start of the Soviet troop withdrawal in mid-May.

Summit held to reactivate peace process

COSTA DEL SOL, El Salvador (UPI) — The presidents of five Central American nations Monday began a two-day summit, postponed five times in the past 13 months, in an effort to reactivate the faltering peace process in the region. The presidents of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua gathered at the exclusive Tesoretta Beach Hotel in Costa del Sol, 25 miles southeast of San Salvador.

Budget negotiators schedule another meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration and Democratic congressional leaders opened negotiations Monday, on President Bush's proposed 1990 budget, a plan defended by Bush as "realistic" but criticized by some lawmakers as vague. Budget director Richard Darman came to Capitol Hill, where he met with Senate Budget Committee Chairman Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., and House Democratic leader Tom Foley of Washington.

Kemp vows to attack poverty, urban decay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jack Kemp formally became part of President Bush's Cabinet Monday, vowing to attack the ills of poverty and urban decay with "an agenda of compassion and opportunity" as secretary of housing and urban development. Hailed by Bush as a man of ideas, Kemp, 53, who served 15 years in Congress, quoted Martin Luther King and Abraham Lincoln in accepting a broad mandate to find innovative solutions to the problems of the nation's cities.

Encore revue to perform 'Bound for Broadway'

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

The audience sees the finished product without ever knowing the hardships that a performer in theater goes through for every show, but the musical revue group Encore is determined to show everyone just what a show is really made of.

Encore, which is sponsored by the SIU-C theater department, will be putting on "Bound for Broadway," at 8 p.m. Feb. 24 and 25 at the Laboratory Theater.

"It's about why we do what we do," Lori Merrill-Fink, director and choreographer, said.

Four men and five women take the audience from a failed audition to a medley of highlights from the biggest and the best of American musical theater, Merrill-Fink said.

Acting, singing and dancing are all combined in musical theater. Although individual members of the Encore ensemble were cast for a specific strength shown in the auditions, each has to learn to do all three things together, Merrill-Fink said.

"That's what makes it so rough. It's been quite a learning experience for our students," she added.

She said the group has to learn the music and dance first and then learn how to make it real.

Making it real means feeling from the gut, according to Merrill-Fink.

"You have to act while singing and moving your feet and if you don't have it in the gut then it will be disjointed," she said.

Encore functions as a class since there isn't a class offered in musical theater by the Department of Theater, she said.

The show is highly entertaining and allows the SIU-C theater department to take a show on the road, Merrill-Fink said.

Encore was designed for tours and is booked the month of April.

'Marry-thon' ministers anticipate to tie 200 knots

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (UPI) — By midnight Tuesday, the Rev. Ed Taylor and four other ministers hope to have surpassed last year's record 113 Valentine's Day weddings in the 10th-annual, "round-the-clock" "Marry-thon."

Taylor, whose three wedding chapels in the Great Smoky Mountains tourist mecca are hot spots for quickie weddings, said he and his five assistants would like to perform 200 weddings this year, but they'll be happy with just beating last year's 113 ceremonies.

"Last year was a record for one day and night for us, and it took about all we had," Taylor said. "But we've been resting up so we won't give out this year. The love bug is here and he's bitin' everybody."

Not to be outdone, Taylor also is taking notice of the electronic age this year, allowing couples to renew their marriage vows in the comfort and privacy of their computer workshop.

"Anyone with access to Analysis System's (electronic) bulletin board can do it," Taylor explained. "They get a run-of-the-mill vow that prints out on their computer, and when it does, all they do is type in 'I Do,' and the deed is done. Then they get a printout of the whole thing."

Taylor, who attests to Gatlinburg's billing as "The Honeymoon Capital of the World," gets the lovebirds coming and going.

"The ceremonies range from a $125, no-frills affair, to the $2,000, champagne-and-caviar blow-out," Taylor said. "Of course, we're pushing volume, but if they want the full treatment, we've got it."

"Then, after they've tied the knot, we can whisk the happy couple to any one of six honeymoon chalets, complete with a Valentine-red, heart-shaped tub, in their very own white limo," Taylor said. "We leave nothing to chance in getting these couples off on the right, romantic foot."

The Gatlinburg Chamber of Commerce is fully behind the "Marry-thon" and has even lined the main street through the center of town with huge heart-shaped balloons.

Black History Month chance for learning

BLACK STUDENT organizations have a long and productive history at SIU-C. The tradition began with the Dunbar Society in 1925, whose aim was to promote "the literary, social and athletic side of the colored student." It continues today with the Black Affairs Council, which organizes and sponsors events for black students and organizations, as well as the entire campus and community, to increase awareness of African American heritage.

The Black Affairs Council has done a thorough job with one of its latest projects — planning activities to commemorate Black History Month.

THE THEME, "Black History Through Artful Eyes," traces the history of black Americans through film, theater, art and religion. A great variety of speakers and performers have been scheduled through the end of the month, providing an opportunity for all races to study black culture and the contribution blacks have made to this country.

Some of the upcoming events include Ruby Dee and Ossie Davis, a duet noted for its unique dramatic presentations of black prose and poetry; the Chocolate Chips Theatre Company from Chicago; the annual "Tribute to the Black Church" by I. D. Frazier; and a film series including "Raisin in the Sun" and "A Hero Ain't Nothing But A Sandwich."

THESE EVENTS, which cover a variety of areas culturally and historically, can be a catalyst to more harmonious relations between blacks and other racial groups by replacing ignorance with cultural understanding.

Guyon on right track in hiring minorities

CONGRATULATION TO President John C. Guyon for last month's award from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Guyon has done what none of his predecessors would: He has chosen two competent vice presidents to head up the student affairs and academic affairs and research, vice presidents who just happen to be black.

Harvey Welch Jr., vice president for student affairs, was the first black vice president in the history of the University and Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research, was the second.

Guyon at least embarked on the road of equitable hiring practices for blacks, and he deserves credit for the effort.

THE CHANCELLOR'S Office, on the other hand, remains nearly segregated, as only one staff person is black and never has there been a black vice chancellor for the University.

Indeed, where Guyon deserves praise for hiring in a few choice administrative positions, he, and University hiring practices in general, deserve equal criticism for neglecting women to fill the upper echelon of the administrative hierarchy.

There are no women in an administrative decision-making position, either in the president's office, chancellor's office or in a deanship.

So congratulations President Guyon, but our University still has a long way to go.

Opinions from elsewhere

Delaware County Daily Times
Need Money?

How about $874 a year ... just for the asking.

A campaign gotten underway to inform millions of low-income working families that government checks of up to $874 a year may be theirs for the asking.

"Money? For me? From the IRS? You're kidding!!!" read posters and ads aimed at spreading the word about the earned-income tax credit. ...

The IRS is concerned that millions of low income working families with children may miss out on a valuable benefit they have earned, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. ... The center is coordinating the campaign to make sure that all the 11 million families eligible for the tax credit get it.

About 6.3 million families claimed the credit on returns filed in 1987. If all those eligible claimed the credit this year, it would cost the U.S. Treasury about $6 billion.

Letters

Firearms should be controlled by state government authority

In the Feb. 6 edition of the DE, John Matuszek wrote a letter supporting the National Rifle Association's successful attempts to keep the firearm industry unregulated. Like many firearm advocates, Mr. Matuszek based his argument on the "right to bear arms" principle of the U.S. Constitution and the faulty notion that gun control will ultimately lead to the suppression of basic human rights.

Mr. Matuszek seemed to forget that the Constitution was written over 200 years ago, before the invention of the convenient bullet, concealable handguns and the efficient machine gun. If the framers had seen the technological advances humankind would make in an effort to effectively destroy life, then they never would have provided for the option to own guns.

Furthermore, Mr. Matuszek expressed even greater ignorance in his discussion regarding governmental regulation when he purported that if the gun industry became regulated, America's rights "to own a house or a car" soon would follow. This, however, is not the case in Great Britain or Sweden, where stringent gun control laws exist without the suppression of the civil liberties that Mr. Matuszek addressed.

Finally, Mr. Matuszek ends his rhetorical letter with the famous guns-don't-kill-people, people-kill-people argument (no firearm defense is complete without the argument). He wrote, "People should not be afraid of firearms. They should be afraid of the people who lack knowledge and respect of life. It is these people who make others suffer, not guns."

Mr. Matuszek, should the people who "lack respect of life" be allowed to possess firearms? Should society continue arming people like Lori Dan and John Hinkley? If you answer "no" to the above queries, then you believe in gun control and are a hypocrite. If you answer "yes," then you ought to consider the freedoms and rights of the thousands of Americans killed annually as a result of an underregulated gun industry combined with mental illness. Maybe guns ought not be banished all together (After all, how else will some of our greatest leaders be murdered?), but I feel that our state governments need to be more careful in gun licensing practices; we need gun control. — George P. Hampilos, senior, political science.

USG does much to help students

I suspect that we students all are at this University for primarily one reason: to better ourselves intellectually and socially in order to more easily attain our individual personal goals, whatever they may be. If, in fact, that is the case, ask yourself what, besides academics (classes), have you endeavored to attempt in order to improve yourself. If you're coming up short on extra-curricular activities, perhaps you may wish to examine all your available options.

The USG serves students' needs more so than any other organization on campus, although on the surface it may not always appear so. A cogent example of USG's work is organizing the three first-aid booths on the Strip during Halloween weekend. USG has completed work for the Brightway path and the new bridge by University Park. USG has registered numerous Registered Student Organizations and has been instrumental in helping those new RSOs begin their initial work. In addition, USG has worked closely with Carbondale and other areas within the Carbondale vicinity for the purposes of organizing activities fund-raisers and negotiating new ideas that affect the University and city.

These are but a few successful attempts to improve University and city life in which USG has participated. Of course, from reading the DE on a daily basis, one may arrive at the erroneous conclusion that USG is disorganized and unproductive. That simply is not the case.

This semester USG will strive to restore its credibility and have a positive effect on Carbondale, SIU-C and students. Presently, there are six senatorial seats available, as well as an opening for election commissioner.

I implore all interested students to visit the USG office (3rd floor, Student Center), and to come to the bi-monthly senate meetings.

Brian J. Anderson, junior, political science.

Not all pro-lifers are violent, closed-minded

Sam Gayle said in his letter published in the Feb. 2 DE that behind every pro-life activist, he finds a small-minded, closed-minded moralist. I take objection to this. Some activists do use very wrong, violent tactics in their protests, and I find this unconscionable, but to characterize all of us who value the sanctity of human life in this manner is ludicrous.

In reply to Mr. Gayle's question, "Is society so childlike and irresponsible as to be forced to be limited in possible courses of action." I say, "No society is so childlike and irresponsible that it refuses to accept the consequences of its actions? Namely having sex."

I understand that this can't apply to victims of rape and incest, but the great majority of women who have abortions don't fall in this category. If you don't want to become pregnant, exercise your free will in a different way — choose not to have sex.

If you do choose to have sex, you should not only be aware of the possible consequences, but have the integrity to accept responsibility for them. It's a scary thing, but you don't have to do it alone; caring, compassionate organizations are out there who can help you and give you the understanding and support you need. Abortion is not the only answer. — Gillian Mary Martin, senior, music.

assess the AAS program here and to make suggestions for improvement.

Among other things, Carew suggested the hiring of tenure track faculty and the development of a Third World cultural center to supplement the AAS programs.

"AASA agreed with Carew's recommendations, since they were things we were already discussing," Mullings said.

Mullings said money for the center would have to be allocated for in the University budget.

The AASA also agreed with Carew's recommendation for more African American faculty members in all areas, not just in AAS classes.

"We need more black staff members to serve as role models for black students," Mullings said.

Bill Hall, USG president, said the USG strongly supports the AASA because they represent students with a serious concern and some good ideas.

Penny Felton, USG senator, said she wished the AASA would have brought their new proposals to the USG before taking them to the board meeting.

"We are always looking at things like the Halloween proposals," she said, "but this is something that affects the University directly, so I wish we would have been able to know about their ideas first, and possibly help."

In April 1988, the USG passed a resolution supporting the AASA's proposals for three tenured faculty positions, the reinstatement of the AAS classes in the general education department, and autonomy for the program with a separate budget.

She said the USG is thinking of writing another resolution, since last year's is not working too well.

"I hope the AASA appeals to the USG to take up their cause," Gaither said.

He said Roger Ivy, a spokesman for the AASA, is scheduled to talk to the USG Wednesday night.

Physical Plant workers checked the drain, which goes into the building's basement, about a month ago, she said.

Two hours after the Physical Plant was called on Monday workers cleaned the drain, she said.

The amount of problems the University has with drains depends on the time of year, Earl Baskin, plumbing foreman, said.

"We usually get a lot of drains backing up earlier in the fall," Baskin said. "When the workers get the leaves raked up the problem usually clears up."

As for standing water on sidewalks, Baskin said if there is not a drain in the area grounds workers can't do anything.

"If there are low spots we just have to wait for the water to run off," Baskin said.

But another problem the University faces when it rains is roof leaks, he said.

Lining the wall between the press room and a hallway and composition room at the Daily Egyptian in the Communications Building are several trash cans slowly filling with rain.

In the press room, about 24 rolls of newsprint, which weigh about 900 pounds each, have been moved away from the wall as puddles creep closer.

"Physical Plant workers have put plastic sheeting on the roof to stop the water from coming in," Gary Buckles, Print Shop assistant superintendent, said. "They can't do anything to fix the roof until it stops raining."

Water damaged only one roll of newsprint, he said.

"But I think we can still use it," Buckles said.

The only concern with the leak is how much water has gotten into the building, he said.

"The water will be dripping for a couple of days," Buckles said. "There are other materials that might be holding water like the ceiling tiles. I know they are drenched with water."

The roof is flat so the water doesn't run off the building, he said.

"It's just a matter of keeping the water vacuumed up," Buckles said.

Duane Schroeder, director of the Physical Plant, said he is not aware of any other buildings on campus with roof leaks.

"Traditionally roofing is a continual problem," Schroeder said.

Lieberman said the campaign is meant to generate student interest and to bring back educational funding to what it was eight years ago.

"There has been an increase in dollars for the budget," she said. "But the funding has not kept pace with rising inflation."

Lieberman said Bush has proposed an additional $441 million to the $21.9 billion education budget as part of his new initiative plan, though only $15 million of the newly added monies were designated for post secondary education.

"It's looking worse for higher education," she said. "So far it's not looking very good for the education president."

Susan Hall, Undergraduate Student Government senator, said the student body needs to use its collective voice to express approval or disapproval of current decisions being made by the government.

"Bush needs to be aware of what students are thinking," Hall said. "We have to let him know we're watching."

Hall said another issue students should be concerned about is the minimum wage increase bill that will come out of committee review in March.

"The minimum wage has not been increased in many years," she said. "It's difficult to go to get through school as a minimum wage job."

The bill seeks to increase the minimum hourly wage to $4.65, in increments, by 1992.

"We have to let them know we're here and that we're concerned," Hall said.

TCI, from Page 1

She said the Carbondale office's new phone system has a heeping system. After one minute on hold, the phone beeps to remind the customer service representatives.

"It beeps so that no one is left on hold or gets cut off," she said.

She said the office has had no problem since switching to the new phone system.

Randy Brown, Carterville office manager, said, "We (The Carterville office) have purchased a phone sequencer to be installed in the next two weeks."

With the sequencer, customer calls are forwarded to available customer service representatives, Brown said. If all the representatives are busy, the sequencer puts the customer on hold until a representative is available, he said.

Brown said the telephone company will analyze telephone call traffic to determine how many calls have not been getting through the switchboard.

Vincelette said the Carbondale office also hired extra contractors during the peak installation periods in January and May when University students return to Carbondale.

Jones said students can report cable service problems to the residence hall staff, who will contact the Carbondale office.

"I haven't heard any complaints," he said.

The Carterville office expanded hours to 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and added Saturday morning office hours, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Brown said. Technicians are on duty 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. during the week, are on-call in the evening, and a technician is now available 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, he said.

Vincelette said the Carbondale office also has expanded hours. The office closes at 5 p.m. during the week but someone is available to answer the phones until 7 p.m. The office is also open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Correction

SIU's Board of Trustees approved a plan Thursday to remodel the coal research center in Carterville when it is taken off the list of shelters for the homeless. This information was incorrectly reported in Friday's Daily Egyptian.

The requirements for high school students entering SIU in the fall of 1990 will be three years each of English and math, two years each of a laboratory science and social science and one year of art, foreign language, music or vocational studies. This was incorrectly reported in Friday's and Monday's Daily Egyptian.

Female faculty, civil service employees, and AP staff are eligible for the University Women's Professional Advancement's Administrative Internship Program. This information was incorrectly stated in Friday's Daily Egyptian.

Retired journalism instructor has not slowed down in life

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

A former School of Journalism faculty member has collected his thoughts and has a few words to say about life after work. Make that one word: unorganized.

"You don't get done each day or each week what you sort of hoped you would," W. Manion Rice, retired journalism instructor, said. "You don't have anyone to answer to, so you don't have pressures to get things done."

That's not to say that he doesn't get things done. Rice is still active, both in the University and out.

As executive secretary of the Mid-America Press Institute, Rice is a working man. And he plans to remain one at least for another three years, he said.

Rice plans to end his reign after one more two-year term with MPI, after which the future of the University with Mid-America will be uncertain at best, he said.

"At the moment I see no one in this faculty who would, could or might do it. You know this faculty — Bob Spellman might be the only to take it."

Spellman teaches journalism law and has been with the University since 1985.

Rice also was the Obelisk II sponsor for 14 years, longer than anyone in the history of the book. His reign there ended in 1974.

"It's in about as bad a state now as it was the last year I was there," Rice said. "My only thought is to find the money and get out of this mess they're in."

Rice, 66, is active in sports — tennis, in particular. He plays most Saturdays during warm weather with other University employees, including George Brown, a fellow retiree from the School of Journalism.

"George is always a steady player. He never hits it too hard and he never comes up (to the net), but he'll put it where you ain't."

Brown retired in 1988, the same year Rice left. Brown and Rice have a combined total of 61 years of service at SIU-C.

Rice, who considers himself an inconsistent but fast tennis player, collected a new role in January with the birth of his grandson, Brian Manion Rice.

"The last word we had was that he was doing OK — spitting up a bit. He's a big kid and he's going to have to eat a lot." Of course.

Rice and his wife, Bennie, have three children: Craig, Brian's father; Matthew and Carol. Of the three, two are lawyers — much to Rice's approval.

"If I ever get in trouble they had better bail me out," he joked.

Rice said he has enjoyed the freedom retirement has given him. He and his wife plan to go to Florida next week.

Class cut due to low enrollment

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

SIU-C's beginning sign language class has an unusually high enrollment but the intermediate class has been canceled due to low registration. Cynthia Tinsper, sign language instructor, said.

The intermediate class, which was to meet at 6 p.m. Tuesdays from Feb. 7 to April 18, was canceled by the Division of Continuing Education because only three people were enrolled.

"Enough people are interested in the intermediate class, but we can't get them all together at the same time," Tinsper said.

The beginning sign language class, however, has 40 students this semester, double the usual number of participants. The enrollment is so large that it was split into two classes.

Tinsper said most people who take sign language classes either want to learn an extra language or know someone who is hearing impaired. One student works in an emergency room and wants to be able to communicate with hearing impaired people in case the need arises.

"The more people who know sign language, the less hearing impaired people will be cut off from the world," Tinsper said.

Tinsper, who is certified with the Registry for Interpreters of the Deaf, said the intermediate class was designed to expand vocabulary and to include more usage.

14 pharmaceutical pallets stolen by 3 masked gunmen

CHICAGO (UPI) — The FBI Monday sought three masked gunmen who stole 14 pallets of pharmaceuticals worth a reported $750,000 from a West Side warehouse.

FBI spokesman Bob Long said the three invaded G.J.P. Enterprises early Sunday morning and made off with 14 pallets of drugs that were stacked on a loading dock.

"They tied up three employees," Long said. "The drugs were taken out on a straight truck that was at the dock. One of the three stayed behind with the hostages. A short time later they returned with the truck and with 14 empty pallets.

"The three then stole a 1977 Ford semi-tractor trailer and a 48-foot refrigerator truck."

Health service: Discuss sex before the close encounter

Condoms a good method for extra safety during sex

Whether you are worried about pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases, condoms are a good method for adding extra safety for those who choose to be sexually active.

The week of Feb. 14 to 21 has been declared National Condom Week. The goal of this week is to reduce the incidence of STD's, including AIDS and unintended pregnancy in the United States by increasing the proportion of sexually active men and women who use condoms correctly and consistently.

WHILE SEX is on most people's minds some of the time, talking about it is very difficult for many. The slogan "better safe than sorry" has never carried more weight than it does today.

Unless you have resolved to live your life sexually abstinent, the topic of sex has to be raised sometime before the close encounter.

Sex is no longer only a question of morality, but a question of life and death.

While most people agree that sex should be discussed prior to the encounter, the timing of when to bring up a frank discussion regarding birth control and STD's can be frightening for many.

WE HAVE all heard suggestions. Some suggestions sound OK, practical, realistic, do-able, but there are secret places within all of us where our worst fears lay.

We imagine scenes of horrible embarrassment and rejection. The awful truth is no matter how tactful you are or appropriate your timing, a small minority are going to be shocked or disgusted when you intrude into their romantic fantasies with practical realism.

Comfort yourself with the knowledge that you may not want an intimate relationship with someone who could not talk about safe sex.

QUESTIONING YOUR potential new partner about their past sexual history is not enough. In a recent survey, as reported in "Contraceptive Technology Update," 46 percent of the persons responding admitted to lying to a new partner about their sexual past in order to have sex with them.

In reality if you are the one to bring up the topic of health and safety, you are most likely to be met with the gratitude and relief you would have felt if your partner had done it first.

If there is a mutual desire for an intimate sexual relationship, the discussion of a shared concern can only add to the intimacy of the relationship.

IF THE ABOVE conversation takes place at the beginning of a potential relationship, all the more better. Many men and women found that by using condoms they can reduce their health worries.

The increased security, well-being and relaxation can make sexual expression more pleasurable and intimate.

The Wellness Center will be sponsoring a table at the South end of the Student Center on Feb. 13 and 14, 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. with information of STD's, AIDS and birth control.

Japanese business in Midwest states jumps in one year

CHICAGO (UPI) — The number of Japanese businesses in the Midwest increased 16 percent between October 1987 and October 1988, representing more than 12,000 new jobs for Midwesterners, consular officials said Monday.

It was the sixth straight year of continued growth in Japanese direct investment in the Midwest states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Michigan got 52 new Japanese businesses during the 12 months — the most of any of the five states. Indiana, Illinois and Ohio also showed increases with only Minnesota showing a net loss.

The survey showed employment by Japanese firms jumped 88 percent in Indiana during the year. In Ohio, employment increased from 9,496 to 16,097, the largest number of new jobs and a 70 percent jump. Japanese employment in Illinois increased 23 percent.

"The reasons for the increases were the high value of the yen in reference to the dollar, the availability of transportation and the central location of the Midwest," said Haruhiko Shibuya, consul general in Chicago.

Tuition increases still rising with no leveling off expected

Scripps Howard News Service

Parents will be digging deeper into their pockets to send their sons and daughters to college next fall.

Some schools already have announced tuition increases ranging from 8 percent to 12 percent, and forecasters say there is no sign that the cost of college will begin leveling off in the 1990s.

"I wouldn't be surprised if we're looking at 8 or 9 percent again next fall," Julianne Thrift, executive vice president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, said.

"It's another big year for tuition increases," Lee Fritschler, president of Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., where tuition will rise 9.5 percent in September, said.

Two neighboring schools, Gettysburg College and Franklin & Marshall College, will raise tuition 9.9 percent for the 1989-90 school year.

At Syracuse University, a private school in upstate New York, tuition is rising 12.5 percent as part of a plan to bring faculty salaries up to the average level of 30 "comparable" universities.

Financial aid at Syracuse will increase 22 percent in an effort to cushion the shock for families with limited income.

But much of the cost will be borne by parents, if they can afford it, or by other relatives if they cannot.

"There is increasing evidence that grandparents are paying a significant portion of tuition," David Ellis, president of Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., said. Tuition increases are likely to be lower in the West, where private colleges have stiffer competition from publicly supported universities.

"Kids in Texas grow up wanting to go to the University of Texas. They don't grow up wanting to go to Yale," Elaine El-Khawwas, vice president for research at the American Council on Education, said.

That makes it more difficult for private colleges in the Western states to charge $15,000, $18,000 or $20,000 for room, board and tuition.

The American Council expects tuition to rise an average of 6 percent at public colleges and 8 percent at private schools in the fall.

But those estimates are likely to be on the low side. Fritschler said tuition increases could range from 7 percent to 15 percent.

Advice given to women on romantic strategies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rebecca Sydnor is a romance consultant who ruffled Zsa Zsa Gabor, snagged a husband through the personals, and has women pin notes in intimate places to remind them of their priorities when playing the dating game.

Around Valentine's Day, she said in an interview, the love business booms from women trying to establish a relationship, rekindle a flickering flame or break free from a dead-end romance.

"Valentine's Day is similar to Christmas in that it can be very depressing for women who are alone or women who are involved with the wrong man and wonder if they can do better," said Sydnor, who gives both private sessions and group seminars for women looking for mates.

If you're in a relationship, she said, use Valentine's Day to inject some old fashion romance — a candlelight dinner, a backrub and a nice gift such as chocolates.

"If a man doesn't tend to be romantic, you have to teach him," she advises. "Provide him with a good example this Valentine's Day and ask him to reciprocate. Chances are he'll be eager to do so."

For women hunting a dream mate, Sydnor provides step-by-step strategies for meeting men and moving a courtship forward. Her method, she said, is similar to the way big business "headhunters" recruit executives they want to hire.

"Finding a man is as serious a task as finding a job — it takes both planning and implementation," Sydnor said. "Yet many career women who attend my seminars think that love is something one stumbles into."

Here is her advice for women starting a new relationship:

■ Don't give too much too soon, it will scare a man off.

■ Set limits. Don't be so available or forgiving that he loses interest.

■ Don't disclose too much from your past. A little mystery is tantalizing. As in a job interview, don't reveal your bad points.

■ Don't be nice all the time. Men are challenged by a little cruelty, bored by unconditional love.

"Men are brought up to feel uncomfortable with too much security and commitment," Sydnor said. "To keep the man interested, you must be self-assured and provide him with a challenge."

Sydnor's non-nonsense approach to romance upset Zsa Zsa Gabor recently when the two were talking about relationships on a national television talk show. Gabor, who disagreed with Sydnor that women shouldn't live with a man before marriage because it placed them in a weak position, left the show on a commercial break. Sydnor said she didn't agree with Gabor that men should be pampered.

"She turned to me and said, 'I think you're a calculating woman and I hate calculating women, and I won't stay here and argue,'" said Sydnor of Gabor's abrupt departure.

"What works for Zsa Zsa is fine, but not every woman is a movie star or has natural beauty. My approach is geared toward the everyday woman," said Sydnor. "I don't think it's calculating to plan your romance. It's intelligent. Why leave such an important thing to chance?"

On her arrival in Northern California from Nashville, Tenn., in 1982, Sydnor took courses in the psychology of love, designed strategies for meeting men and placed a personal ad that read:

"Attractive blonde belle, complete with pale skin, soft drawl and parousel seeks the Rhett of her dreams. If you're attractive, athletic, 32 to 45, emotionally stable, and financially secure, I'd like to show you a little Southern hospitality."

Sydnor said she ad got 70 responses, which she screened down to seven, one of which turned out to be her husband, Neal, a physician.

An important element of her program, she said, is having women prepare a "shopping list" of the non-negotiable things they seek in a man and then use it when evaluating potential courtships. She also gives women stickers with notes they can pin to their bras and other intimate places to remind them of their goals, including one reading: "Stop! Have you bonded yet?"

Poshard given education award for leadership

By Marc Blumer
Staff Writer

Congressman Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, was honored by Illinois educators Monday as Outstanding Lay Leader in Education.

The local chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, the largest international education society in the world, presented Poshard with the award during a luncheon at the Student Center.

Poshard, a former teacher, school administrator and regional director of higher education in Southern Illinois, said, "The award means a great deal to me. It is always an honor to be recognized in the field of education."

"Candidates for the award are nominated by people in the field of education. The award is given on the basis of what the candidate has done to advance education in Illinois," John McIntyre, SIU-C faculty member and awards chairman for the society, said.

McIntyre added that Poshard, among many other educational programs, "initiated Challenge to Excellence, which is a summer program for gifted students in the Southern Illinois area."

The program, run through SIU-C, brings in local students during their summer vacations to give them the opportunity to participate in various academic activities, such as seminars.

"I want to provide leadership for educational issues. Advocate groups need to be organized to promote education. We need to get parents and local leaders involved (in these groups). Springfield needs to hear from someone else besides educators," Poshard said.

Some key issues addressed by Poshard during the luncheon included public apathy towards educational issues and the high number of gifted students in the area who settle elsewhere.

Another problem addressed by Poshard was the territorial attitudes of local students. Poshard said he feels that students growing up in Southern Illinois tend to think of themselves only in relation to their own community.

Local students are often not aware of problems existing in other communities in the region, Poshard said, and the concerns of Southern Illinois need to be understood by all.

First lady campaigns to aid kids

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Barbara Bush is using the national attention she gets as first lady to aid interests close to her heart, including abused children, illiteracy and needy women.

"She has accepted the fact that there is an intense spotlight on her at all times as the wife of the president," said Anna Perez, Mrs. Bush's press secretary. "And so what she would like to do is use that spotlight to do some good."

Mrs. Bush's assistance to a Valentine's Day campaign for abused children in the Washington area brought a flood of responses. On Sunday, members of the Washington Capitals hockey team delivered more than 10,000 Valentines to the wards of Children's Hospital here.

The cards, along with cash and pledges that are expected to total $140,000, poured into the headquarters of the Have-A-Heart drive after a radio appeal by Mrs. Bush. She taped the message at home during the hectic days just before her husband's inauguration.

"It really made everything work," said Richard Tubbs, who directed the Have-A-Heart campaign. "The impact on the morale of campaign workers was just tremendous. It's the best you can find in America when she took the time to reach out."

A number of radio stations in the Washington area requested copies of the appeal and donated prime time during commuting hours to air her request for support.

Funds from the drive will go to the Child Protection Division of Children's Hospital and the Washington, D.C., chapter of Childhelp USA. Mrs. Bush is Childhelp USA's 1989 national honorary chairman.

Local organizations often have benefited from Mrs. Bush's assistance.

Survey tests sex awareness among students on campus

Health centers stir knowledge on condom week

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

To commemorate National Condom Week, Feb. 12 through Feb. 18, the Wellness Center along with the Student Health Assessment Center is conducting a condom attitude survey in the Student Center.

The results are posted as they come in on a large poster in the south end of the Student Center.

So far, the general reaction to the survey has been positive.

"Most people who have taken the survey feel that condoms are a good precaution and should be used with a new (sex) partner," Kris Labyk, coordinator of the Student Health Assessment Center, said. "More than half of the people taking the survey today have been male."

In addition to the condom surveys, a quiz on sexually transmitted diseases also was given.

"The quiz was designed to see how much people know about sexually transmitted diseases," Jaime Shaw, graduate student in sexuality services, said.

"By looking over the results of these quizzes, it's amazing how much people don't know about these diseases."

formation on birth control and sexually transmitted diseases also are being distributed through today in the Student Center.

The Wellness Center also will hold a workshop at 7:00 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Illinois Room called

"How Safe Is Sex?."

In 1979, David Mayer, a student at U.C. Berkeley organized the first National Condom Day on a university campus. The idea of National Condom Day spread to other universities and in 1980 National Condom Day became National Condom Week.

Mom moons son's teacher in classroom

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — A woman who hoisted her dress and "mooned" her son's junior high school teacher in front of his class during an argument showed poor judgment but is innocent of criminal lewdness, the Utah Court of Appeals ruled Monday.

The judges, in a unanimous opinion, overturned the 5th Circuit Court conviction of Marie Serpente on a charge of lewdness involving a child, because her buttocks was covered with undergarments.

"Ms. Serpente's unorthodox gesture of defiance undeniably demonstrates poor judgment but simply does not match or even come close to the magnitude of conduct expressly prohibited under state law, Judge Judith Billings wrote.

The incident occurred April 4, 1968, when the woman went to her son's school to protest his being detained after school two days earlier. The youngster then injured his ankle while walking home in the dark.

Serpente confronted school administrators and teachers, including the instructor of her son's algebra class, whom she "arranged while class was in session.

"Shocked by the incident, the algebra instructor requested Ms. Serpente to leave the classroom," Billings said. "As she was leaving the room, Ms. Serpente suddenly stopped at the door, raised the back of her dress at the teacher, and said, 'To you, sir!'"

Westerns expert to lecture, early Duke films to be shown

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

John Wayne rides back onto the silver screen Wednesday night when F.M. Nevins, an expert on the Hollywood "B" Western, brings two of the Duke's earliest films to the Morris Library Auditorium at 7 p.m.

The general public is invited and admission is free.

Nevins, a professor at the St. Louis University School of Law, will lecture prior to the screenings of "King of the Pecos" (1936) and "Wyoming Outlaw" (1939).

He will also welcome questions from the audience, Tony Williams, assistant professor of cinema studies, said. The Department of Cinema and Photography is sponsoring the event.

"We hope this can be an event for the whole Carbondale community and not just a department event," Williams said.

A reception for Nevins, organized by the SIU Press, will be held at 6:30 p.m., shortly before the lecture.

Nevins is an authority on Hollywood Westerns of the 1930s as well as an author of crime fiction. His forthcoming book is called "The Films of Hopalong Cassidy."

He is the biographer of 1940s writer Cornell Woolrich. Woolrich's works were made into the films "Phantom

Rats contaminate food in Chicago warehouse

CHICAGO (UPI) — Federal officials Monday seized some 500,000 pounds of food from a warehouse contaminated with decomposing rat carcasses, entrails and blood and filed suit to seize the food.

An investigator said cats living in the warehouse had killed and partially eaten some of the rats infesting the space. In some cases, however, the cats had left the heads and entrails of the rodents, some of which were found decomposing atop food cartons.

Some food also was contaminated by rat droppings, inspectors said.

The warehouse supplied rice, flour, sugar, fortune cookies and other Oriental cooking ingredients to restaurants and grocery stores.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederick Branding said the infestation was discovered within the past two weeks during a routine city inspection. Inspectors placed an embargo on the food while they prepared legal action against the warehouse owner.

Suit was filed in U.S. District Court to have the food destroyed. However, if the owner can prove some of the food worth about $250,000, can be saved, that portion could be reconditioned for sale, Branding said.

4 individual wins lead men's track to 3rd place

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's indoor track team had four individual first-place finishes en route to a third-place performance at the five-team Eastern Illinois Quadrangle.

Indiana State won the meet Saturday with 86 points and the host Panthers were second with 71½. SIU finished with 65 points.

Eric Pegues ran to his best 400-meter time of the year, taking the event in 48.97 seconds.

"Eric believes he can defend his conference title (in the 400)," Coach Bill Cornell said. "He is running very smart races lately."

Other first-place finishes include Eric Bomball in the shot put, Paul Burkinshaw in the 1,000-meters, and Demetris Theocharous in the high jump.

Mike Michels vaulted to a conference best 16-2½, in the pole vault. Cornell said that Michels is over the shoulder injury that slowed him down earlier this month.

The surprise of Saturday's meet was the third-place long jump finish of Guy Sikora.

"This was Guy's first jump of the season and it's right up there with the best in the conference," Cornell said. "It surprised me, it helps to make up for the loss of (Brian) Bradley."

Bradley is out for the season with an injury.

With only 12 days before the Missouri Valley Conference championship meet, the Saluki runners are trying to get their injured and ill back on track.

Kevin Steele is hampered by the flu. Leonard Vance and Larry Holloway are slowed by foot injuries.

Cornell believes that the way that the next two weeks of practice go will play a major factor in the conference meet.

"The weather has to be better for us to get in some good practice," Cornell said. "Last week it was too cold to practice on the track. That set us back. We are going to have some pretty intense workouts this week and next week we will work lightly to get rid of the aches."

Saturday the Salukis will get a look at conference foe Illinois State in Normal. Cornell said Illinois State must be considered the favorite going into the conference meet.

"They (ISU) are a stacked team," Cornell said. "In the high jump alone they have four guys who can go over seven feet. They have to be the favorite right now. I have got the lineups pretty much set for conference. We might have a few surprises for ISU come conference time."

Raske, Philippou narrowly miss NCAA standards

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's track team traveled to two invitational meets this weekend to prepare for the upcoming Gateway conference meet Feb. 24 and 25.

Thursday the runners headed to Arkansas State for an unscheduled meet. The Salukis brought only 16 athletes to the non-scored event.

"We went to Arkansas to give us an extra workout to prepare for conference," Coach Don DeNoon said. "The bad weather has kept us from the track this past week so I decided to go down to Arkansas to get some of our athletes some extra indoor training."

Kathy Raske and Rosanne Vincent led the small Saluki squad with a pair of first-place finishes.

Raske won the 55-meter hurdles with a personal best time of 7.96 seconds, just off the NCAA qualifying standard of 7.90.

Vincent took first in the 800-meter run in a time of 2:14.14. Both Raske and Vincent set new meet records with their performances.

Saturday the squad traveled to the Golden Track Shoe Invitational at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. The Saluki women faced a number of formidable opponents, including Wisconsin, Minnesota and Purdue.

Wisconsin took first with a score of 138½, SIU followed with 103 points and Minnesota was third with 88 points.

The Salukis were led by Christiana Philippou who set a school record in the long jump, taking first place with a leap of 19 feet 3¾ seconds. Philippou also turned in a second-place performance in the triple jump, going 39-11¼.

DeNoon said he thinks Philippou should win both events at the conference and also should qualify for the NCAA's.

"Christiana's triple jump is a given win at conference and the long jump shouldn't be a problem either," DeNoon said. "Every week she gets closer to the NCAA distances."

DeNoon said that things look good for the conference meet and that he is pleased at the shape of the team.

"We are sharp right now. Just a few more people have to get healthy to make it perfect. We have the potential to take the top three spots in a good amount of the events."

Hockey team relying on bid to keep final season going

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Extended life for the field hockey team now depends on an invitation from the national indoor tournament selection committee.

Field hockey was cut by the University in December.

The Salukis took third at the United States Field Hockey Association's regional indoor meet at Ball State Saturday. Only the top two finishers — Ball State and Northern Illinois — are guaranteed spots in the national tournament.

Invitations for open slots will be offered March 6. SIU-C has already entered its application for consideration.

"I thought we did well," Coach Julie Illner said. "We

"Fatigue was a factor against Ball State and Northern. Both times we had a lead, and the momentum turned quickly and we were out of it."

—Julie Illner

played well together. The thing that hurt us, though, was that we were not in the shape we needed to be in."

The Salukis had no difficulty in pool play, beating Eastern Kentucky 4-1, the Ball State

"B" team 3-0, and Central Michigan 3-0.

In the winner's bracket, the Salukis beat Central Michigan 3-1 and Ohio 7-0, but lost to Ball State's "A" team 5-1.

In the loser's bracket of the double-elimination tournament, the Salukis beat Kent State 5-1. However, Northern Illinois came back for a 4-1 victory in the semifinals.

"Fatigue was a factor against Ball State and Northern," Illner said. "Both times we had a lead, and the momentum turned quickly and we were out of it right away."

Illner said her team should have no difficulty playing at the national level of competition should a bid be offered.

maybe I'm not cut out for success."

Locke's heart is not soft. It's big, and open to anyone who wants her friendship and loyalty. Those are admirable traits, and they have been the foundation to a string of successes in the realm of human relations that those who run this institution do not appreciate.

The University hardened its heart long ago, and has demonstrated in this and previous decisions that it values neither friendship or loyalty. Its achievements have been the loss of three intercollegiate sports since 1986, an athletics department divided along sexist lines, continuing charges of discrimination and the proliferation of attitudes that belong in the 19th century.

Even in the hiring process, it again showed where women's athletics stacks up in the scheme of things. The football program named its head coach within 10 days of its vacancy. Emergency hiring powers were granted to Athletics Director Jim Hart so the deadline of the national signing day could be met.

For volleyball, though, it took 37 days to find a new coach. In addition, the hiring comes three days into the signing period. Most of the top recruits have defected to other schools because the vacancy was unfilled. The athletics department contends that the hiring process for volleyball was thoughtful and cautious, but the delay has meant a wasted recruiting season.

In other words, Saluki Athletics doesn't deserve what Locke has to offer. But she wants to stay, and that decision has to be respected.

She has already called Hagemeyer.

Locke's example is a good one to follow. If she's willing to accept Hagemeyer, then those concerned about the volleyball program should,

But one must wonder what could have been done had Locke gotten the head job. She at least deserved the chance.

only let you bounce it once.

"I can find no advantages to the way we played then. I was happy when they changed the rules," said Stinson, who got to try the modern version of the game in a reunion play-day Saturday, which included a free throw contest, 3-point shooting contest, and a three-on-three tournament.

Stinson said Davies organized the teams from the Women's Athletic Association intramural clubs, picking the best players for the varsity. The team would go to either Cape Girardeau, St. Louis, Normal, Charleston or Macomb, where day-long round-robin tournaments were held.

Stinson, who at 5-8 is as tall as some of the smallest guards today, said she would create quite a stir when she got off the bus and the other teams saw her.

"People would say 'Look how tall she is.' Now look at the giants they have now," said Stinson, pointing out players like all-time leading scorer Char Warring and Olympian Connie Price, who were in attendance.

"I can find no advantages to the way we played then. I was happy when they changed the rules."

—Barbara Stinson

The reunion featured players from many eras. Janice Dale and Sharyn K. Russell from 1954-58 were among the pre-modern era.

From the first teams coached by Charlotte West and JoAnne Thorpe were Paula Von Gerichten and Linda Hoffman (1963-66), Mary Ann Griot (1965-68) and Hall of Famer Tomi Smith (1964-68).

Four members from West's 1970 team that finished fifth in the Women's National Invitational Tournament in Boston took part: Carol Sterns Cole and Hall of Famer Bethel Stout (1966-70), Hall of Famer Marie Ballard (1969-73) and current women's tennis coach Judy Auld (1970-72).

From the 1970s teams coached by West and Maureen Weiss: Former Homecoming Queen Denise Barron (1970-73), current official scorer Vicki King (1972-76), Pam Berryhill-Simmons (1973-76) and Kathy Escue and Marg Winsauer (1974-76).

From the early 1980s teams coached by Cindy Scott: Lynn Williams (1976-80), Beth Stevenson, Susan Wright and Pam Mann (1980-83), Price and Warring (1980-84), and Ellen O'Brien, Linda Wilson and Petra "Pistol Pete" Jackson (1982-86).

Salukis among four teams fighting for Valley title

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

With two weeks of the Missouri Valley race remaining, title hopes have narrowed to four teams with the Salukis among those looking to claim the crown.

Creighton entered Monday night's game with Wichita State leading the MVC at 8-2. The Shockers were in second place at 7-3.

SIU-C came into Monday night's action in a tie for third place with Tulsa, both at 6-3. The Salukis are 17-7 overall, the Golden Hurricane 14-10.

Of the four teams, the Salukis face the biggest challenge in their trek for the No. 1 spot. SIU-C travels to Creighton Thursday, returns home Saturday to host Tulsa, travels to Tulsa Feb. 23, travels to Wichita State Feb. 25 and hosts Illinois State Feb. 27.

Creighton seems to have the easiest go at the title. In addition to facing SIU-C, the Blue Jays play host to Indiana State Feb. 18 and travel to Drake Feb. 27.

Wichita State travels to Tulsa for a big contest Thursday. The Shockers travel to Indiana State Feb. 23 before rounding out their Valley schedule with the Salukis.

Tulsa's assignment is nearly equal to the Salukis. The Golden Hurricane tips off with SIU-C two times, Wichita State, Drake Feb. 20 in Des Moines and host Bradley Feb. 27.

Cruising into Omaha, Neb. Thursday, the Salukis will be coming off a one week break and an 82-78 victory over Indiana State at the Arena Feb. 9. The Salukis have a four-game win streak in MVC play.

Senior Kai Nurnberger said the break has given the team a chance to absorb just where things will stand when they return to action.

"Since we have not played this week, we can look and see how other people are playing and see what the situation will be like once we start playing again," Nurnberger said.

"Our fate is in our own hands. We know we control our own destiny and can make it happen."

Nurnberger said the Salukis 84-74 loss to Creighton Jan. 23 is a good motivator for what would otherwise be a tough road assignment.

"Maybe (the break) will help us get better prepared for Creighton," Nurnberger said. "They got the one here, now we have to get it back."

Freshman Tony Harvey said the team's attitude is positive coming into the last five Valley games.

"Most of us feel we can win (the MVC) if we play hard the last few games," Harvey said. "We know they will all be tough games, but we feel we can beat Wichita on the road, Tulsa we haven't seen yet and Creighton we feel with a few key baskets could have meant the difference between a win or loss."

Harvey sees the break as a chance for the Salukis to rejuvenate their attitudes for the final stretch.

Former player appreciates changes

By Troy Taylor

Only someone like Barbara Stinson is fully aware of the great strides that have been made in the evolution of women's basketball.

That's because Stinson, who was in Carbondale to take part in the 75th Anniversary reunion of former players, was a member of Southern Illinois Normal University's women's team from 1944 to 1947.

Stinson, a retired school teacher from Morton, who is married to SIU Hall of Famer Quentin Stinson (who was on the 1946 national championship team), vividly recalls the uniforms her team wore.

"They were all cotton dresses, bloomers, and a white overdress with long sleeves, a belt and pleated skirt," Stinson said.

Although the on-court apparel is in strong contrast to today's short pants and tank tops, so were the standards prescribed by then-coach Dorothy Davies, the matriarch of SIU women's physical education and athletics department, who died last May.

"When we went away on road games, we were required to wear white gloves, long skirts, hose and heels," Stinson said. "Then Doc Davies would get on the bus and say 'Now remember, you are young ladies first and sports women second.' She was always very specific about that."

Six-player basketball — a version extinct except for a dwindling number of girls teams in Iowa — was the only game played by women then. It requires three players on offense, three on defense, and restricts players from crossing midcourt.

"The most exasperating rule was that you couldn't take the ball away, you could only intercept passes," said Stinson, who was a defensive player. "I would get three fouls right away because I would try to steal it. Of course, once you had the ball, you had to pass it because they would

University misses out on Locke's qualities

Sonya Locke, assistant volleyball coach, is faced with a major decision.

About 4 o'clock Friday afternoon, Associate Athletics Director Charlotte West informed Locke, who was one of four candidates up for the vacant head coaching position, that Notre Dame assistant Patti Hagemeyer had been chosen instead.

So Locke, 27, can remain as an assistant, a position guaranteed by West prior to the interview process, or go elsewhere. Locke wants to stay, but she doesn't want to make a fuss.

The last thing Locke wants — yet expects to happen — is an outcry by advocates of Affirmative Action protesting the hiring of Hagemeyer over Locke, who is one of the few black coaches in the athletics department.

"I want this to be a positive time for the players," said Locke. "I want it to be over. I don't want it to continue to linger."

"I really think there's going to be a lot of controversy, maybe not from the press or such, but some people aren't going to like the decision."

Locke has put the program and the athletes she has recruited the past few seasons before her own ambition. As a player, Locke was always praised for sticking to the concept of team goals first, individual accomplishments second. She is taking an unselfish approach again.

"You know, people tell me my heart is too soft, that I haven't hardened it enough to be successful," Locke said. "But if that's what it takes to be successful, then

Hagemeyer says recruiting can be salvaged with work

The volleyball team's recruiting season is not a total loss, new head coach Patti Hagemeyer said Monday.

"We are not desperate yet," Hagemeyer said in a telephone interview from her office at Notre Dame, where she has been an assistant coach for three seasons. "We just need some time to get in sync."

Hagemeyer was hired Friday, three days after last Wednesday's national signing date. Because of the vacancy, the Salukis have received no letters of national intent.

"There will be a lot of (U.S. Volleyball Association) tournaments in the next few weeks," Hagemeyer said. "We should be able to get a good look at some unsigned players then."

Assistant coach Sonya Locke attended such a tournament over the weekend. However, Hagemeyer said she will not offer any scholarships until she is aware of the team's present needs.

"I don't know what we are looking for," said Hagemeyer, who will arrive in Carbondale either Wednesday or Thursday. "I want to see a couple of practices before I sign players."

The last time Hagemeyer saw the Salukis in competition was at the Saluki Invitational Sept. 10, when Notre Dame beat SIU-C 15-8, 15-4, 15-5.

"As far as specifics, I don't remember much about individual personnel."

Bill Callahan to get Smith's nod as football's offensive coordinator

Bill Callahan will be named offensive coordinator for the Salukis' football program at a press conference at 10:30 this morning.

Callahan comes to the Salukis from Northern Arizona, where he was offensive line coach from 1967 to 1968. Callahan was offensive line coach at Illinois from 1963 to 1966.

With Callahan, head coach Bob Smith has selected a second assistant from Northern Arizona's program. Phil Meyer, an offensive assistant hired Feb. 3, quit his job at Flagstaff, Ariz., Jan. 31 to join Smith at SIU-C.

Meyer held the offensive line coach position at Illinois from 1962 to 1963.

The hiring of Callahan completes Smith's six-man staff. In addition to Meyer, the Salukis will be guided by Gerry Hart, defensive coordinator, Stanley King and Ralph Young, defensive assistants and Sam Venuto, wide receiver coach.
