$1.56 billion allocated for higher education

Gov. James R. Thompson said he would recommend $1.56 billion in appropriations for higher education, $90 million less than the Illinois Board of Higher Education requested.

Despite a record high increase in educational funding during fiscal year 1990, the budget allocations will not cover Illinois' higher education needs this year.

SIU Chancellor Lawrence K. Petit said although higher education will be allocated $437 million more than last year, a 2.9 percent increase, the additional money will not offset the inflation rate, which will be about 4 percent. Petit said if the state legislature adopts the governor's budget for higher education and no more, three existing problems will continue to get worse. The problems, which will not only affect the University but instillations of higher learning, include:

- serious salary problems;
- a backlog of newly-approved programs by the IBHE that will not receive funding from the legislature;
- a backlog of capital projects approved by IBHE, many of which will not receive state funding for six or seven years.

Petit said he will not know if there will be enough flexibility for reallocation until he sees Thompson's entire budget.

"I'm still hoping we won't have to raise tuition," Petit said.

Richard D. Wagner, executive director of the IBHE, said he agreed with Petit concerning the problems Illinois universities will face if the budget isn't changed.

"The governor's budget will require that salary increasers for faculty and staff and support for student financial aid be scaled back significantly," the IBHE's recommendations, Wagner said.

Furthermore, the budget will not provide additional state funding for important initiatives dealing with undergraduate education, workforce preparation and minority education.

Professors win Circle Award for poetry

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Rodney Jones' third book of poetry proved to be more than just a "Transparent Gesture." "Transparent Gestures" was awarded the National Book Critics Circle Award for the most distinguished book of poetry published in 1989.

Richard Peterson, English department chairperson, said the award is very prestigious in the poetry world.

"This is the most spectacular award anyone has ever won in the department," Peterson said. "It is the Academy Award of poetry." Jones said he was thrilled with winning the award but waiting for the final decision was "more nerve-racking."

Jones' book was one of five reviewed by a board of 24 directors for the National Book Critics Circle award.

Other categories for the award included fiction, non-fiction, biography, autobiography and criticism.

Jones explained "Transparent Gestures" takes a reflective look at individuals who try to maintain their own form and are put under strong pressures to conform to society's rules.

"This is more of a musically-sad song," said JONES, Page 6

Americans kidnapped by rebels in Colombia

Daily Egyptian Wire Services

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Two U.S. citizens were kidnapped in the Medellin area in separate incidents Monday night and Tuesday by the country's most dangerous leftist rebel group, officials said.

Librarian David Kent of Indianapolis was abducted at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Bello Horizonte sector of Medellin by unidentified men driving a taxi and a jeep, police said.

Police said they believed the leftist National Liberation Army was behind the kidnapping.

Library director James Bonnell of Lodi, Calif., was kidnapped at 6 p.m. Monday on the La Cancha ranch, 18 miles south of Medellin, by heavily armed men driving jeeps.

Officials said the men identified themselves as members of the National Liberation Army and said the kidnapping was to protest the visit of President Bush, who is scheduled to attend Thursday's anti-drug summit in Cartagena.

The rebels told Bonnell's family, also at the ranch, that he would be released in five days.

The President is to meet with the presidents of Colombia, Peru and Bolivia to put together a hemispheric strategy to halt the production, transport and consumption of cocaine.

Rushdie still in hiding a year after death threat

By Jackie Spinner
Features Editor

Salman Rushdie went into hiding last Valentine's Day after receiving a death-threat valentine from the leader of Iran. One year later, the Ayatollah Ali Khamenei still wants Rushdie's heart, or at least his head.

Iran's new spiritual leader Friday raised the executive order of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on the British author for his book, "The Satanic Verses," following renewed outcry from Muslims around the world who call Satanic Verses "blasphemous."

The Western celebration of love hasn't changed anything, Rushdie, still fearing for his life, remains in hiding, protected by Scotland Yard's Special Branch.

"The book is blasphemous," University Religious Studies Professor Riauddin Zobairi said. "Rushdie has said the book was fiction. If it was fiction, he would have changed the names or places.

But Zobairi said Muslim scholars are divided over whether Rushdie's blasphemy warrants a death sentence.

"Ancient Islamic law says that Rushdie should die even though he is on soil in England (where Muslims are not in rule.) Modern scholars say that because he is not on Muslim soil, he should not be killed.

‘Buster’ Douglas declared champion

NEW YORK (UPI) — James “Buster” Douglas won undoubted claim to the heavyweight championship Tuesday when boxing’s two other governing bodies declared him the rightful successor to Mike Tyson.

The International Boxing Federation already recognized Douglas as champion, but that was announced one-third the crown. The World Boxing Association granted formal approval Wednesday with the World Boxing Council set to follow later in the day.

The rulings came on the same day billionaire developer Donald Trump acknowledged an agreement with promoter Don King for a Tyson-Douglas rematch in Atlantic City, N.J., June 18. However, no contracts have been signed.

Such a rematch would push aside No. 1 challenger Evander Holyfield. He was signed to fight Tyson for $12 million on the same date and at the same site, the Atlantic City Bally’s, but no agreement has been reached for Tyson-Douglas to be promoted on that card.

"We’re far, far, far from a deal," said Dan Duva, Holyfield’s promoter.

The developments all spring from Douglas’ shocking 10th-round knockout of Tyson in Tokyo Sunday, touching off confusion across continents among fighters, promoters and officials, with tens of millions of dollars at stake and the credibility of boxing’s authorities on the line.

King is the promoter for Tyson and Douglas. The spike-haired promoter and Tyson were to appear at a news conference Tuesday in New York. Announcement of a Tyson-Douglas rematch would no doubt rekindle Holyfield’s interest.

"It’s news to me if they are going to do it," Holyfield said. "Buster Douglas is bound to fight Evander Holyfield."

The IBF, recognizing Douglas as champion immediately after his 10th-round knockout of Tyson, with the WBA and WBC with holding judgment until Tuesday.

At Braverman, a spokesman for King, says the WBC has chosen to recognize Douglas, but there was no direct confirmation. The WBC, with close ties to King, said it would make a decision today.

King’s prediction over Douglas by the two governing bodies stemmed from the protest lodged by Tyson.

The IBF is a smaller and less powerful promoter and want restitution because Douglas received a low point against Tyson when the two men fought in the eighth round.

Colleen Heimstead’s effort consistent factor for Salukis

By Greg Scott

Colleen Heimstead has had peaks and valleys this season, but her work always is a consistent factor.

The Saluki sophomore point guard is dedicated to her team and the role she plays on it. Part of that dedication includes arriving at practice earlier than other Saluki players.

If Saluki Coach Cindy Scott begins practice at 3:30, Heimstead will be in her practice gear and ready to go at 3 p.m.

Scott acknowledged Heimstead’s attitude toward the basketball program.

"Colleen is out there shooting around even before practice every day," Scott said. "She’s really a very self person. She wants to be good and wants the team to be good.

Scott said Heimstead’s attitude toward the basketball program.

"It’s not just to keep the team set around, shoot or just relax a little bit before practice or games," Heimstead said. "They give me a hard time being early but I don’t mind it. It’s part of me and I’ve always been that way growing up."

Heimstead’s main attribute is her unselfishness. She does what is needed to help her teammates. This includes anything from helping a younger player with a question to readying a team member for a game.

"I encourage them and try to keep them ready," Heimstead said.

"I do what I can to help them out,“ Scott said.

Heimstead’s hard work usually pays off at the free throw line. She shoots 86 percent from the charity stripe and is ranked fifth in the Gateway Conference.

Heimstead’s clutch performances have been instrumental during the SalUKI’s drive toward a Gateway title. In the Salukis’ 61-56 victory over Bradley Feb. 5, Heimstead had 13 points, 5 assists and was 5-for-7 from the line. In the Salukis’ 49-48 victory over Drake Thurday, Heimstead guarded a career-high 2 rebounds.

But Heimstead has experienced tough moments this season.

Despite her hard work ethic and devotion to the team, Heimstead still is a young player learning.

"It’s hard to get down on her because of her determination," Scott said. "At times Colleen doesn’t make good mental decisions and she has to learn as a sophomore. We expect a lot out of Colleen, and I think the fans are hard on her.

Heimstead’s one shortcoming is her perimeter shooting. She has zero 3-pointers per game, which leads the team.

But Scott, a former point guard at Memphis State, said the point guard will be a little more consistent as a sophomore.

"Posts guards take a lot of criticism because they have the ball so much," Scott said. "It looks like a bad pass from a point guard, but it may not be their fault. Sometimes the other players won’t cut to the ball.

Heimstead is one of two Salukis to start all 25 games this season.

Arizona baseball fans fear impact of players lockout

PHOENIX (UPI) — Just a year ago, Arizona baseball fans were fleeing of lineup to see the Cactus League to arch-rival Florida.

Now, with the major league owners threatening to lock out the players, Arizonans may find out what it would be like without spring training.

Seven teams train in Arizona with an eighth just across the border in Palm Springs, Calif. Their estimated annual economic impact on the state — $145 million — was enough to get the attention of the governor’s office in 1989 when rumors surfaced that the federal government was trying to lure some of these teams to Florida.

Those threats seem to have disappeared, but baseball management is holding a special task force, created by one-time softball star Gov. Rose Mofford, spent months studying the Cactus League and recommend ways to keep the teams in Arizona.

"The Cactus League baseball would be an economic tragedy," said the group’s final report, issued last June.

A lockout would not be the "tragedy" on the same level of the loss of the league, but local business owners have no doubt it will be felt.

"A real impact is going to have to be done on a lot of non-profit type of organizations that manage stadiums in the Valley that derive revenue from parking, concessions and program sales," said Steve Snyder, the executive director of the Tempe Chamber of Commerce.

"It’s going to hurt in that respect very much."”

A lockout that will be hurt is the Cactus, a civic group that operates Scottsdale Stadium where the National League champion San Francisco Giants train.

"The bottom line is the Cactus makes donations of about $200,000 in local revenue," said Bob Howard, the Cactus’ 1990 baseball chairman.

"In terms of the local charity, they will suffer."

Proceeds from the annual first spring training game, matching Cactus with the Los Angeles Angels, go to the Salvation Army, the Arizona State University Relief Fund for victims of the devastating

Tadzhikistan violence spins out of control; tanks sent in MOSCOW (UPI) - Anti-communist snipers battled riot police Tuesday in the Tadzhikistan capital and tanks were sent in to quell the rising mutiny. The death toll rose to 37 and flights airlifted Armenians from the pogrom-torn city. Despite the presence of tanks and imposition of a state of emergency, protesters in the capital Dushanbe attacked the headquarters of the Tadzhik Communist Party's Central Committee and demanded that the largely Moslem republic's leaders resign.

Kohl, Mordow agree German unity near

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — The leaders of East and West Germany agreed Tuesday that unity is drawing closer but gave no indication they had agreed on a process of joining the two states. Visiting East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said at a news conference that a commission would be formed to discuss a West German proposal for reunification — widely seen as a major step toward political reunification.

Bush labeled an "environmental hypocrite"

BOSTON (UPI) — President Bush is an "environmental hypocrite" who has abandoned a commitment to help with the 56.5 billion cleanup of heavily polluted Boston Harbor, environmentalists charged Tuesday. Bush used the harbor for a damaging national television spot in his presidential campaign against Gov. Michael S. Dukakis during the summer of 1988. "George Bush used the Boston Harbor to sell himself as the environmental president," National Taxic's Campaign Fund Director Gary Cohen said.

Drexel board votes to file for bankruptcy

NEW YORK (UPI) — The board of directors of Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc., the junk bond powerhouse that seemed invincible during the takeover-crazed 1980s, voted Tuesday to file for federal bankruptcy protection. The firm said the petition was expected to be filed Tuesday evening in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in the Southern District of New York. Drexel Burnham: Lambert Group, the parent company, said it will seek protection from its creditors, but the firm's broker-dealer arm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc, and other subsidiaries will be excluded.

Truitt to file libel suit against media groups for coverage

TAMPA, Fla. (UPI) — A sailor targeted in a U.S. Navy probe into the explosion aboard the battleship USS Iowa that killed 47 people said he was joined by several colleagues "for nothing more than a name," Kendall Truitt. 22, a native of Marion, Ill., and his lawyer, Ellis Rubin of Miami, said Monday the suit against Time, Newsweek, the Washington Post and NBC will be filed by March 1. Truitt is seeking "several millions of dollars" in damages, Rubin said. In four weeks last year, Truitt was briefly labeled a hero in the media to being identified as a suspect in a murder investigation with possible homosexual overtones.

Cadet eyes flying jets in Texas

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

The minute Michael Pyburn took control of a T-37 jet trainer two years ago, he knew he would never be content sleeping the rest of his life flying propeller engine planes.

"There's no comparison," the 21-year-old said, "not even worth managements. I've been definitely been spoiled by the jet. It's much more exciting than flying the propeller engines.

Pyburn, former cadet corps commandant of the University AFROTC detachment, will finally get his chance to test Air Force jets for a living this summer after graduation.

Pyburn is one of 60 flyers, chosen from more than 800 pilot candidates, who have been selected for the Euro-NATO Joint Jet Pilot Training Program at Sheppard Air Force Base in Texas.

He will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Force at Sheppard, and Pyburn and other pilots will receive their wings and become Air Force pilots.

"I'm signing up for the next nine years," Pyburn said, "one year for training and eight years of active service.

"There are no big bucks in this for me. It's really more of a feeling inside, getting to fly those jets," he said.

Pyburn said he signed up for the NATO jet pilot training because he believes the program guarantees that he will fly a fighter.

"I know I'll get one of four planes, the F-15, F-16, A-10 or the F-14. These are all fighters, You've seen Top Gun. Well, they're like the planes in that movie. There are cargo planes and the tankers, but any real pilot wants a fighter," Pyburn added.

The Air Force offers the best kind of flying. Speed is part of it, but the jets have more maneuverability than any other types of planes.

"That's the main reason I like to fly, for the pure thrill of it. And there is that experience of freedom," Pyburn said, noting that he took his first aviation class during his sophomore year in high school in his hometown of Downer's Grove.

Pyburn said the selection committee for the jet training program looked at his grade point average, his performance as cadet corps commander and his number of flying hours.

Mandela's freedom crucial for S. Africa

"NELSON Mandela is free! Amandla! Power to the people!"

These are the wonderful words that Monday prompted joyful celebrations and near hysteria from Mandela's supporters around the world. The leader of the African National Congress (ANC), South Africa's newly legalized opposition party, had been jailed for more than 27 years on anti-government and sedition charges.

Mandela, 71, for several years has been the focus of intense media attention. A lawyer and leader of radical political groups since the 1940s, Mandela, his wife Winnie and their comrades and followers have worked tirelessly against the blatant injustice and prejudice of apartheid (or "separateness") that plagues their troubles. Indeed, Whites constitute less than one-fifth of the country's population, but control every aspect of South African life under this unfair and immoral system of government.

The ANC seeks a one-person, one-vote system to replace apartheid. The new system would be dominated by South Africa's 28 million blacks. South Africa's current leader, F.W. de Klerk, wants to institute a new constitution against the blatant injustice and violence and bloodshed. By advocating a rebellion through political and legal rights for blacks, but provide the 5 million whites with some sort of veto over major decisions.

The bottom line is that South Africa needs racial and economic change. Mandela's freedom is the key to implementing these changes.

Several attempts throughout the years have been staged to gain Mandela's freedom, including his writing campaigns, pleas to the United Nations and all-star benefits.

Pop stars did their part, banding together in 1985 to release "Free Nelson Mandela," the song, which raised money for Mandela's release, eventually went to No. 1 on the charts in Great Britain and the artists established a defense fund for Mandela out of the profits.

Despite such international efforts, the world's most famous political prisoner remained in jail. The South African government under F.W. Botha repeatedly offered him his freedom, but both he and his ANC activities, Mandela refused.

Even the United States government got in the act when, as a response to Mandela's plight and other inhumane acts of repression, it imposed economic sanctions against South Africa.

Economic relations between the two countries can only legally resume when all legal restraints and regulations based upon color bias are repealed or amended, all political prisoners such as Mandela are freed and the South African government agrees to meet with black leaders, especially those who advocate a rebellion through political reform instead of guerrilla warfare, Mandela can set the tone for a peaceful South African future.

Apartheid wrongfully divides South African society into a caste system based on color, creating a giant schism in the national character that has created too much senseless violence. It's time to recognize the mistake and start a rebellion through political reform instead of guerrilla warfare, Mandela can set the tone for a peaceful South African future.

The South African government needs to represent all factions of the population, regardless of race, creed or color. These protections are taken for granted by most Americans, but South Africans are acutely aware of their absence. The rest of the world should applaud their struggle for freedom while simultaneously helping to augment these peaceful changes.

In response to Mr. Bennett I would like to say that enforcing our current drug laws is indeed imposing greater costs on our society than do the drugs themselves. Legalization of drugs would not only bring in revenue for treatment and education programs, it would also free manpower to do battle with the big guy and the black market.

No one is asking for surrender. Proponents of legalization see it as a new approach. We feel it is time to try something else since the current approach is not working. Just look around and you can see that it is not.

I would like to tell you just a few benefits the Netherlands has realized with its permissive approach to drug use in that country: A 1/3 reduction in heroin addiction; an extremely low incidence of AIDS among I.V. drug users; a decline in marijuana use; and Crack (cocaine) has had little impact in the Netherlands.

The Netherlands treats drug abuse as a health problem, not a legal one. Any drug can be abused, prescription or not, and this behavior, whether or not it will use them are addictive, or become addicted. Isn't it time we bring the addicts "above ground" and within reach instead of driving them underground and beyond help? Let's turn our efforts toward drying up the intense demand for drugs by treating it as a health concern instead of failing at drying up the supply.

The decision rests with you, the people. Do we continue to spend billions of tax dollars on a program that has not succeeded in over twenty years, or do we demand our money applied to one that may work?" - Jack Ward, senior in psychology.

Read the Bible to get true story

Just before Christmas break, a number of students were discussing the merits of the Bible and Christianity. One of these students stated some "facts" which are simply not true.

I would like to say that the Bible was originally written in code, this is quite an oversatement, unless you consider ancient Hebrew, Aramaic, and Greek to be forms of code. The content of the Bible is straightforward and free ofany prophecies or dreams. They may be symbolic and difficult to understand, but they were not written in code to hide their meaning. Their ultimate meaning is clear.

Secondly, the Bible has NOT been altered significantly during the past 2000 years. Ancient documents, dating back to the second century B.C., provide evidence of the Bible throughout the centuries with very little change. Minor variations exist among different translations, but the meaning and intent have remained intact. Your main excuse is that you don't believe in the Bible because it is outdated.

Being a Christian requires faith, but it does not have to be a faith with no basis. The Bible's main purpose is to lay a foundation on which you can build your faith.

Don't take someone else's word for what the Bible says. Read it yourself. God does not require us to stop using our brains to believe in Him.

Regarding translation, it is the lies about modern English grammar and word usage.

Get the New International Version or one of the paraphrase versions such as the Living Bible. They are much easier to understand, and that is the point, isn't it?

One final piece of advice for beginning Bible readers: always read the New Testament first.

Think about what you're reading. Suppose a doctor, a lawyer, an Internal Revenue agent, and two fishermen each told you an amazing story. Who would you believe? Everyone knows that fishermen are notorious liars and lawyers and government agents are probably not far much better.

But what if all you were telling me was the same story? Wouldn't that give it a bit more credibility? This is exactly what you will find in the New Testament.

Luke was a Greek physician who set out to carefully investigate the life of Jesus and write an orderly account of what you were reading. About all you get to know about Jesus until he literally "saw the light" and received a special revelation from the supposedly dead Jesus.

Sure, you can sit and pick and find some of the things you think are wrong in the text, but these amount to nothing compared to the consistent truths that are revealed.

Ask yourself, why did these men write these things? Was it a fair contract with some book publisher? Is a big-money move deal? Why would a person write about this story about Jesus? What did they get out of it?

About all they got for their trouble from this world was starings, beatings, imprisonment, exile and probably martyrdom? Is there really only one logical reason why they would write and continue spreading their story in the face of such persecution and danger and the story is true. Read it! -Michael

Bush claims economy healthy, but deficit exists

Bush fielded while America burns. Yes, burns up and deteriorates nationally and economically, e.g., in Illinois alone during the 1990 about 140 plants closed leaving some 18,000 or so jobless, but yet Bush brags that our "economy is very healthy!"

We have a huge deficit; are the government and national security the world, yet we are healthy economically. It does not add up correctly nor does it make common sense. And yet the public is inundated daily with the lies about democracy and security.

Bush, this week, was observing war games carried out by our soldiers in a camp in California. We were practices against Soviet troops with Soviet-like weapons.

Will our leadership never wake up to see the reality of our foolishness of the "Star War Dream." (See photo, Bush admiring a model of Brilliant Pelelites, an orbiting satellite which will gather intelligence.) The cost of this continued military buildup is beyond reason. We need to be gathering reasons as to why we need the military the way it is. And we have to ask for this abuse.

O.K. Enough complaining, and on to the solution. Did you professors know that the equipment exists to turn your class handouts and notes into synthetic speech and braille in a matter minutes without retying? That a scanner will put printed material into computer memory, accessible by word processing, and then send to a braille printer? And that this equipment is so inexpensive by contemporary standards its ridiculous?

What we need is for some faculty and administrators to step forward and take an active role. Additionally, there is an advocacy group being established to lobby for changes in the s rvice delivery system. Anyone interested in part of this effort should contact me at Rehn Hall, 3 in the Trinity Alhambra, doctoral student, rehabilitation.

Disabled on campus disadvantaged

It has become increasingly evident that many of us with visual impairments are justifiably agitated by the lack of adequate service delivery system for persons with disabilities.

Quite frankly, we are sick and tired of being forced into the forefront of society. "Oh, I'm sorry. I need help. Do how do I go about doing library research? How do you go about doing research? You main frame? Where is the adaptive equipment on campus where the service nor the equipment exists. I can honestly say that if it were not for the efforts of a small handful of volunteer and paid readers, this would kiss into this education goodbye.

It is difficult not to sound bitter when you have to fight complacency and negative attitudes on every issue. Take track of an adequate service delivery system for persons with disabilities.

We have a huge deficit, are the government and national security the world, yet we are healthy economically. It does not add up correctly nor does it make common sense. And yet the public is inundated daily with the lies about democracy and security.

“I will definitely support changes in the budget,” Thompson said.

Timompson, who will deliver his official budget proposal March 8, said the state legislature had to raise taxes last year and spend down the budget this year to give higher education the largest increase ever.

“Just to keep a family savings account, the balance can only be spent down once before it’s gone,” Thompson said. “If the savings have been used to finance ongoing faculty expenses, any increase in revenues equal to the savings drawn down will be consumed by the current state of living.”

geage,” Jones said. “This book begins with a series of portraits and it ends with a dark poem about expressionism and language.”

“I like to work with expressions of language in a unique way,” Jones said.

Jones said his interest in poetry stems from his love of language.

“I studied poetry under several different teachers,” Jones said. “I think I read more poetry than fiction and non-Fiction combined.”

Jones, who has been teaching for five years at StU-C, says he enjoys teaching and being able to see students change over time.

“I like to teach other people who like to be taught,” Jones said. “It’s neat to hear about students out of 10 years down the road who turned out to be very good writers.”

Jones has received several other awards including the Kenyon Review Award, a Peter E. Lavon Young Poet Award, a Guggenheim fellowship and a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts.

“We are not against argument to express an opinion, criticizing rules and systems with scientific evi-

Nahiru said, "In a larger sense, he defamed Islam to the Western public. We have nothing against freedom of speech in scholarly works. Satanic Verses is not a scholarly work."

Abu-Anas said Islamic law allows Rushdie to feel sorry for his sin and try to correct what he has done.

Campus soda price increase due to rise in wholesale price

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

When searching for exact changes for soda machines, quarters are not the only coins sought out anymore. Add nickels to that list now.

The price increased to 55 cents for a can of soda from campus vending machines Monday. The price had remained at 50 cents for the past five and a half years, Harry Wirth, director for service enterprises, said.

Under the terms of the contract, Wirth said, the vending service may raise its price if the price of the product increases by 10 percent. The University’s vending contractor, Cameco Co. of 1520 Industrial Rd., was given permission to raise the price beginning Monday.

Soda can sales raised $165,000 for students last year.

The increased cost of both aluminum and product ingredients have caused the wholesale price of soda to increase about 10 percent, John Rains, financial department employee for the Pepsi Cola Bottling Co. in Marion, said. The bottling company supplies SIU-C through Cameco Co.

The aluminum used in making the cans, purchased from a company in Warrenton, Mo., has increased significantly in the last six to eight months, Rains said.

Two product ingredients, the concentrate and the sweetener, also have experienced a recent cost increase, he said, which made it necessary to reflect it through the wholesale price increase.

Soda can sales raised $165,000 for students last year. A little more than 20 percent of each sale, about 11 cents per can, and 25 percent of the sales from the Student Center goes into an income pool to defray housing expenses in housing such as room and board charges, Don Balistrero, assistant director of business for housing, said.

At the Student Recreation Center, the money from the machines is put into the Student Recreation account, which is part of the operating budget.

Earth poses for portrait with planets
United Press International

NASA's hardly Voyager 1 probe, 3.7 billion miles from Earth, aimed its aging cameras back toward home for a historic, once-in-a-lifetime family portrait showing seven of the solar system's nine planets in an unprecedented mosaic.

"This is not just the first time, but perhaps the only time 'or decades that we'll be able to take a picture of the planets from outside the solar system," said Voyager project scientist Edward Stone of the California Institute of Technology.

With Earth showing up as little more than a bright speck against the star- dusted backdrop of an unimaginably vast cosmos, the "picture of the century" will be more important symbolically than scientifically.

"Almost certain to be trie, the old stuff about 'planets Earth,' and 'spaceship Earth,'" said imaging scientist Candy Hansen at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

"But to have something that graphically demonstrates this little rocky, fragile body out there amongst its neighbors, I think is going to be a powerful statement."

Twelve years outbound from Earth, Voyager 1's two 1970s-era television cameras were scheduled to take a series of 64 photographs of the home solar system over a four-hour period beginning at 8:15 p.m. EST.

"The situation is well in hand," said U.S. Ambassador Thomas McNamara, who described the presence of a military force as "the usual presidential contingency."

"It is not an extraordinary (secuurity) effort on our part," he said at a news conference in Cartagena. He conceded, however, that "there's always a risk when you put four presidents together, but that risk is not excessive."

In Washington, the Pentagon announced that the assault ship USS Nassau and the escort destroyer USS Sampson arrived off the coast of Colombia Monday. The 830-foot Nassau normally carries a complement of 1,900 fully armed Marines, the Navy said. But the Navy and U.S. officials refused to say exactly how many Marines were aboard for the Colombian trip.

The U.S. assault ship would, in conjunction with the Colombian navy, supply helicopters to fly Bush and his entourage from the Barranquilla airport to the summit site in Cartagena.

A Pentagon official said that, while the Nassau and Sampson are there mainly for those types of logistical purposes, "if anything happens, they would be prepared."
McDonald's makes bid to replace H.B. Quick's; McPizza a maybe

McDonald's may add to its list of "billions served" if installed in the Student Center by fall semester.

Representatives of McDonald's spoke Tuesday as bidders of the latest fast-food restaurant in the Student Center. The restaurant would replace the area currently occupied by H.B. Quick's.

McDonald's proposed spending about $900,000 in renovations, according to Student Center Director John Coker. Remodeling would include walls, fixtures, seating and the ceiling.

The proposed remodeling schedule would call for construction to begin on June 4 and end in the week of Aug. 13. Tim Toderoff, Undergraduate Student Government and Student Center board representative of the food service committee, said McDonald's was "the only fast-food service to be taken seriously" at this time.

"There was a real positive attitude coming out of there (the presentation)," Toderoff said.

McDonald's would offer a new item, McPizza, on a trial basis.

Five other companies are bidding for food service contracts in the Student Center. Each company recommends the installation of a pizza oven and an ice cream or yogurt operation, Coker said.

Pizza Hut, which is currently contracted to the Marriott food service company, could be replaced with a different pizza restaurant if Marriott loses its contract in May.

The five bidders are Marriott, ARA campus dining service, Campus Company, Dala food service and Service America Corporation.

Steve Mamel will use his political humor to entertain the Comedy Cellar audience at 9 tonight in the Student Center Big Muddy Room.

Mamel, from Chicago, started in comedy 5 1/2 years ago when he entered the "Catching a Rising Star" Light Beer for Miller contest at the University of Wisconsin at Madison and took third place.

From this moment on, Mamel played an active role in the field of political humor.

With a degree in journalism from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, and editorial experience with USA Today and other newspapers, it is no wonder why Mamel has such a complex look into the humor in today's government.

"Bring your brains," advises Mamel, whose stand-up routine will include a comical look into apartheid, racism, the deficit and current events.

Mamel, who tours college campuses with The Funny Bone Campus Network, also tours the comedy club circuit across the United States, including performances at "The Improv" in Los Angeles and "Catch a Rising Star" in New York.

Mamel appeared in the 1989 M\''V "Spring Break Comedy Special" and is keeping his eyes open for future opportunities to do television.

The faculty Senate will not deal with the appointment process of Marvin Kleinau from acting dean to dean for the College of Communications and Fine Arts until a request for approval is made.

"We will deal with it as an issue when it comes from the vice president's office," Donald Paige, Faculty Senate president, said after much discussion on the subject at the senate meeting Tuesday. "We will discuss it when it comes to us and vote on it that time."

Gretel Chapman, faculty member, read a letter from the IEA-NFA questioning the search process for a new CCFA dean and the proposed changing of Kleinau's acting dean title to dean without input of the faculty.

"It was my intention to ask the senate and the graduate council to reply to the issue of dropping the (acting dean) title," Benjamin Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs, said. "If they don't object, I intend to drop the title July first."

The University first conducted a search for a permanent dean last spring, Kleinau served in an interim capacity this year.

Our first search was negative," Larry Busch, faculty senate, said. "We didn't like any of the candidates who came in. I have seen no error or omissions in the proceeding.

We're very fortunate to have Marvin Kleinau as our acting dean, and he is just that. He is doing this as a community service that he will not return after next year."

The department chairs polled their faculty members, resulting in a 120-18 vote in favor of asking Kleinau to stay on next year, Shepherd said, and Kleinau wanted the title change to dean.

"I thought it was a reasonable thing to do," Shepherd said. "We never hire (permanent) deans on a term basis."

Kleinau would be hired for only one year as dean, Shepherd said, which means he could not stay in that position for a longer term.

A second search to be conducted next year during both the fall and spring semesters looks promising, Bush said.

"This time we have the advantage of time," he said. "Last time things were rushed. We're confident we can find a good individual."

In other business, the senate passed a resolution amending the StU-C spouse travel policy. The amendment specifies that spouse travel be funded only by direct grant funds and unrestricted or gift foundation funds.

Another resolution passed stating that Social Work be affiliated with an academic unit of its choice upon agreement of the academic unit, for voting purposes in the Faculty Senate.

Also passed was a resolution recommending Pat Jarzone, faculty member for the rehabilitation institute, be placed on the StU-C substance abuse committee.

The Judicial Review Board election was conducted at the meeting after being postponed from the December meeting. Gela Waters, Norman Vetira and Chandra Banerjee were elected for two-year terms. Marvin Zeman was elected for a one-year term.

The number of members on the JRB was increased from five to six this year. These members will be elected every year for two-year terms beginning next year.

During the Faculty Status and Welfare Committee report, committee chairman Donald Garner said he has submitted a proposal to the administration to resolve the issue of changing the student conduct code and is awaiting an answer.

Also during the committee report, the issue of the proposed Faculty Club was discussed.

"We should start calling it the University Center, because it will be a meeting place in a collegiate atmosphere where one can conduct appropriate business," Garner said.

Committee member Walter Henneberger said the new plan for a University Center would call for an building connected to the Student Center costing in the range of $190,000 to $200,000. Henneberger discussed the plans with University architect Allen Haake.

"We're probably better off under the old plan than we were under the old plan," Henneberger said. "The cost would be about what they would have been in the Student Center. We would have been paying rent forever (under the old plan)."

The planned addition would be about 2,000 square feet, he said, with a large student lounge, a bar and a piano. Some questions were raised as to whether or not this would provide adequate space for certain bigger occasions.
Prep seniors using fewer drugs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Illegal drug use among high school seniors declined again last year as the popularity of cocaine plummeted to its lowest level since the mid-1970s, a federally financed survey showed Tuesday.

University of Michigan researchers, who conducted the study for the National Institute for Drug Abuse, said the decline occurred despite a significant increase in the number of students who said it was easy to obtain drugs.

"The broad trends we are seeing are due almost entirely to demand, not supply," said Lloyd Johnston, principal researcher for the survey.

The report was issued two days before President Bush's drug summit with the presidents of Peru, Bolivia and Colombia in Cartagena, Colombia.

Drug policy director William Bennett told a news conference the survey is evidence that progress is being made in cutting demand and that more action is needed on supply.

"These statistics suggest that for high school students, drugs are still an all-too-available commodity," he said.

The 15th annual report was based on surveys filled out by class of 17,000 seniors. For a 10th year, 1,200 college students and 6,600 other high school graduates who had responded to previous studies were surveyed again by mail.

The study said the percentage of seniors who ever had used an illegal drug fell for the seventh straight year to 30.3 percent, from 33.9 percent in 1988.

The percentages of seniors had used any form of cocaine either in their life, in the last year or in the last month fell to their lowest levels since 1976.

Johnston acknowledged the student survey was unlikely to find heavy crack users.

"What may be most significant here is the fact that drug use is not heavily penetrated the mainstream populations of American young people and that the initiation rates among them appear to be on the decline," Johnston said.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Narcotics Committee, said the survey was of "extremely limited value" because it did not include data on high school dropouts who are at the "core of the drug crisis."

Use also fell in 1989 for alcohol, marijuana, amphetamines, barbiturates and Quaaludes. More students used PCP, and the use of inhalants, such as glue and nitrous oxide, and of cigarettes was about the same as in the early 1980s.

Among the study's findings were:

• Amphetamine use fell despite reports about the popularity of "ice," smokable methamphetamine. Four percent of seniors and 1 percent of the college students regularly used amphetamines, down from 12 percent in 1980. Only 1.2 percent of seniors used "ice" in the last year, but 3 percent had done so in the West.

• Regular use of PCP increased from 0.3 percent to 1.4 percent of seniors. But use remains lower than in earlier years.

• Ecstasy, included in the survey for the first time, was tried by 3.3 percent of 17- to 21-year-olds and was used regularly by 0.4 percent.

• Three percent of the seniors, 4.7 percent of males and 1.3 percent of females, had used anabolic steroids, also included for the first time.

• Marijuana was used regularly by 17 percent of seniors, down from 37 percent in 1979. Daily use was down among all groups.

• Tranquilizer, barbiturate and methamphetamine use was so low that in some cases barely any usage was found. Less than 0.1 percent of the college students regularly used methaqualone, or Quaaludes.

The 15th annual report was based on surveys filled out by class of 17,000 seniors. For a 10th year, 1,200 college students and 6,600 other high school graduates who had responded to previous studies were surveyed again by mail.

The study said the percentage of seniors who ever had used an illegal drug fell for the seventh straight year to 30.3 percent, from 33.9 percent in 1988.

The percentages of seniors had used any form of cocaine either in their life, in the last year or in the last month fell to their lowest levels since 1976.

quake that occurred just as the third game of the Series was to start.

The exhibition was expected to be a sellout as I would have raised about $50,000 to help the quake victims.

The overall impact of the loss of spring training is one that is harder to pinpoint, according to Howard. "I think it's awfully hard to assess," he said. "Someone who had planned a trip to Scottsdale and planned to see a few games, is he going to cancel his whole trip? I'm not so sure."

"Quite a few folks might come (to Arizona) anyway," Snyder thought the loss of tourism might be more significant. "We know we have a very large following of baseball fans here in the Valley and naturally without spring training we're going to lose an untold number of visitors that would typically spend a little bit of their vacation in Arizona," Snyder said. "I know there are a lot of them that come to Arizona just to see baseball."

While most of the Arizona spring training teams are centered in the metropolitan Phoenix and Tucson areas where their absence would have less impact, the San Diego Padres are a more important economic factor in Yuma.

Bob Tippett, baseball chairman for the Caballeros de Yuma, which operates the Yuma stadium, said motels and hotels in the area already are booked for weekend Padres games. Yuma is only about a four-hour drive from San Diego so many Padres fans take weekend trips, unlike the baseball fans in the rest of the state who usually come for a week or more.

"We will miss those 5,000 people coming over from the coast," said Tippett.

He estimated that when the Padres draw 7,000 fans for a Saturday or Sunday game, about 5,000 are from California.

Yuma, which has one of the state's highest unemployment rates, will survive, Snyder said, although the Caballeros will have to cancel their next community improvement project, hotels and motels will see higher vacancy rates and the companies holding concession contracts will be hurt.

Negotiations encouraging

NEW YORK (UPI) - Baseball's labor negotiations took an encouraging turn Tuesday, with both sides agreeing to consider suggestions from Commissioner Fay Vincent.

With spring training scheduled to begin in two days, management's chief negotiator Chuck O'Connor and union chief Don Fehr said they would meet with their respective groups Wednesday. Fehr emphasized he had no way of knowing whether Vincent's suggestions would lead to progress in the talks.

Heimstead, from Elk Mound, Wis., was a third-team All-Stater in high school. She averaged 22.3 points, 12.3 rebounds and 4.8 assists to lead Elk Mound to a 24-2 record and the state semifinals. Heimstead, who played for her father Ted in high school, holds career records at Elk Mound for scoring (2002), rebounds (1999), steals (359), assists (347) and field goal percentage (.506).

Heimstead said playing for her father was a pleasant experience. "I really enjoyed having my dad as a coach," Heimstead said. "He pushed me so much and made me what I am today."

Like a number of the Saluki players, Heimstead is successful in the classroom as well.

Heimstead was valedictorian of her senior class in high school. She has a 3.8 grade point average in biological science.

"When I'm not on the court, I'm studying," Heimstead said. "I take time to do other stuff. But you have to study as much as you can because there's no much time to do anything else."

Heimstead is not known for her quickness or flashy moves on the court. But her readiness and intelligence make up for it. "Colleen isn't the quickest player, but she makes up for it in other ways," Scott said. "As she matures, she will learn to do that even more."
