Task force: Close SIUC Halloween

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Halloween Task Force passed several motions including recommendations to close the University and raise the bar entry age to 21. Monday night. The motions will appear on a preliminary report which the committee will vote and make changes on next week.

After lengthy discussion on whether to close the University for a two or three day period or for one week, the Mayoral/Presidential task force decided to include both options with the pros and cons for each as a case statement in its final report.

Jean Paratore, associate vice president of student affairs, said closing the University is something a lot of administrators and faculty members are opposed to.

"It is a disruption to the educational process and to have to stick in a break to get rid of a rowdy party is really horrible."

Officials proclaim annual festival

By Michael D. DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As the sounds of bongos filled the Student Center and grasped the attention of curious students, SIUC officials and community leaders proclaimed International Festival Week Monday afternoon.

Those attending the annual proclamation included SIUC Vice President Benjamin Shepherd, Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said the international festival contributes to education and a better understanding of different cultures among students that is not readily available in the average curriculum. Over 600 students from area schools attended Monday's proclamation.

"All the organizers for this festival are to be congratulated and thanked for the opportunity that you have presented to the young people of Carbondale and the surrounding areas," Dillard said.

"SIUC and the city of Carbondale are very proud of their international students, scholars and faculty," he said. "The '95 festival is the 21st cultural contribution to the University, Carbondale and Southern Illinois."

According to Shepherd, SIUC ranks second in international student enrollment among Illinois universities. Shepherd said SIUC has historically been a leader in international education.

"This confederation of global citizens from around the world that we are hosting here today adds to our [SIUC] luster and the quality of our experiences here," Shepherd said.

"There are three virtues we want to contribute to during this year's celebration: cooperation, better understanding and mutual respect through education," he said.

James Quisenberry, director of International Programs and Services, said the international

Residents want deposit refunds from owner

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Residents of the Rawlings Street Apartments (formerly the Pyramid Apartments) have had trouble getting their damage deposits back from a former owner, and the location of their money is a mystery.

Chibang Wang, a graduate student in public administration from China, said he deposited $150 for his six-month lease, which expired in December, and though he has moved out of the building, he does not know if he will ever get the money back.

"I don't think it's fair," he said. "I want to do something, but I have only been here (in America) for a year, and I'm not familiar with the legal system."

Student legal representative Steve Rogers said about a dozen residents, some still living in the building, have filed complaints, but the legal service will probably not file a lawsuit.

When John Rosati saw Amy Johnson moving into her parents' new house in St. Charles, he ran to her and pulled her hair.

"We were in junior high and I saw her walking with her mom and grandma, and I pulled her ponytails," he said. "It's been love ever since."

Rosati, a senior in advertising, said he and Johnson, also a senior in advertising, have been dating since high school. They now live together, work together and are talking about marriage.

CHINA'S POPULATION PROMPTS ENFORCEMENT — BEIJING—China's population will reach 1.2 billion this week, five years earlier than the government had planned, prompting concern that current population-control efforts are not working well enough — and a major new drive to enforce the official policy of one child per family. Government officials said that even though China's controversial policy has slashed the country's birth rate, the population continues to grow by 1.1 percent a year.

PRIME MINISTER LAUNCHES RUN FOR PRESIDENCY — PARIS—French Prime Minister Edouard Balladur Monday formally launched his run for the presidency, vowing to accelerate reforms in response to criticism that his cautious leadership style has failed to defuse the threat of a social explosion. Unveiling a manifesto that defines his presidential priorities, Balladur announced that he aims to restore faith in French institutions by holding a referendum within six months that would expand civil rights and restrict a president to a single seven-year term.

BUSINESS IN FORMER SOVIET UNION DIFFICULT — Chevron Corp. confirmed Monday that it has cut spending on the giant Tengiz oil field in Kazakhstan for the second time in a year, dramatizing the difficulty of doing business in the former Soviet Union. Chevron's investment, the largest to date by a Western oil company in the former Soviet bloc, has been stalled by disagreements over financing a pipeline to get the oil to world markets.

DRUG SEIZURE AT MEXICAN BORDER PLUMMETS — SAN DIEGO—The amount of cocaine seized from Mexican trucks and cargo at the border plummeted last year, as U.S. Customs Service officials pressed on with a program to promote trade by letting most commercial cargo enter the United States without inspection. Not a single pound of cocaine was confiscated from more than 2 million trucks that passed through three of the busiest entry points along the Southwest border, where federal officials say most of the drug enters the country.

CLINTON PLANS ANOTHER ECONOMIC SUMMIT — WASHINGTON—President Clinton is making plans to try to duplicate the domestic economic summit in Little Rock, Ark., that engaged more than 300 Americans in two days of talk with the president-elect about economic concerns. An administration official said the White House is planning an economic conference with those who attended the original one. The forum is tentatively set for late March. The location is undecided, but it's more likely to be Washington than Little Rock.

ANIMAL KEEPER SAVES CHILD FROM FROZEN CREEK — WASHINGTON—When Eric Krussman got to Rock Creek here Sunday, all he saw was a child's coat floating under a thin crust of ice. Crawling out on the frozen edge, Krussman, an animal keeper at the National Zoo, punched through the ice and pulled out a 12-year-old boy who had slipped into the water more than 10 minutes earlier. Another man helped pull the boy to shore and started CPR while waiting for an ambulance. Despite being submerged for 10 to 20 minutes, the boy, whom police did not identify, survived and was in critical condition Sunday night at Children's Hospital.

New party forms to run for USG seats

By Amanda Estabrook
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A group of students formed a new political party in preparation for the Undergraduate Student Government election coming up.

The party, called Students First, is being formed by USG Senator Jamal Powell, who will be running for USG President and Monty Peerbhai, who will be running for the Student Trustee position. Students First is the first party to declare an interest in running.

The party has about eleven students running for senate seats on the party, Powell said. He said the

" We're not concerned with becoming city councilmen or Halloween scandals, but we are concerned with shifting the priorities to the students, especially the undergraduates. " group is still recruiting senate candidates.

Peerbhai, the chair of the party, described the party as a bread-and-butter, meat-and-potatoes, basic-issues party.

"We're not concerned with becoming city councilmen or Halloween scandals, but we are concerned with shifting the priorities to the students, especially the undergraduates," he said.

He said the party is concerned with the issues on campus but supports the student municipal candidates because he believes the students need a voice in the city also.

Peerbhai said the party platform is to make school more affordable and accessible and to improve the quality of education and the rate of placement after graduation.

"We want to put the interests, needs and desires of the students above the interests, needs and desires of the city or the administrators," he said.

To make school more affordable, the party would like to raise the minimum wage for student workers, change to a point system in the dining halls, and improve the service in the financial aid office, he said.

Powell said his main concern is to remove the cap on student wages. "They do not cap the salaries of the administrators, so why cap the students?" he said.

Peerbhai said the placement office places too many hurdles in

Young, old meet together to strengthen community

By Jason E. Coyne
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Imagine the elderly and the young gathered together to discuss solutions to important problems and needs facing their community. That is what the group Generations Connect is all about.

The last of 30 Generations Connect meetings in Illinois will be occurring today in Morris Library at SIUC. The group meetings bring to the forefront the needs of the entire community, both young and old. Fifteen members of the Saluki Volunteer Corps will meet with 15 members of the SIUC Emeritus Association. The round table style of discussions will focus on community service events that each group is involved in and how they can combine their efforts to make these services better, said Kathy Lorenz, director of Student Development which oversees the Saluki Volunteer Corps.

Activities in the University community have benefited both younger and older adults in the past.

SIUC Emeritus Association member Mary Simon coordinated a mentoring program for special admissions students in 1989. Students were given advice and direction by Emeritus volunteers, Simon said. Test scores for the students who participated in the mentoring program were higher than those who did not participate, she said.

"Communication is the real key and when people can exchange ideas it's a positive step," Simon said.

750 young people, older adults and representatives of organizations have participated in the program, according to Jane Angelis, director of the Illinois Intergenerational Initiative. By combining the expertise and spare time of the elderly with the energy of youth, many things can be accomplished for the community they share, Angelis said.

The Generations Connect newsletter stated that previous proposals submitted from meetings include seniors helping at Head Start, planning for a community day and fighting crime through awareness.

Generations Connect meetings have occurred from Rockford to Cairo and Rock Island to Chicago as part of the Illinois Intergenerational Initiative and the White House Conference on Aging.

Maralee Lindley, director of the Illinois Department on Aging, will be joining the group's final meeting on Tuesday, according to Angelis. Lindley will join Senator Ralph Dunn (R-Du Quoin), chairman of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, which will allot funds for the Illinois Intergenerational Initiative at a press conference following the group meeting.

At the press conference discussion will center on the importance of intergenerational activities and discuss the White House Conference on Aging to be held May 2-5 in Washington. Lindley serves on the national policy-making committee for the conference.

Angelis said the results of the meeting will be compiled with data from previous meetings into a report to be used as a resource for the White House Committee on Aging.

Once data has been analyzed,

Free tax help available to students

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For students who feel a little lost when it comes to taxes, or just want some reassurance that they filled out everything correctly, a group of accounting students are donating their time to help students with tax questions.

Beta Alpha Psi, a national honorary accounting fraternity, is taking part in an IRS program called VITA, or Voluntary Income Tax Assistance.

The national program allows qualified individuals to volunteer their time helping people prepare their taxes.

Beta Alpha Psi President David Jacquet, who works with the program, said the volunteers usually find a lot of mistakes students make which they can correct.

"No matter how many mistakes are made, it's never been more important for students to understand their taxes," Jacquet said.

"The IRS has some new rules and procedures concerning something called an Earned Income Tax Credit. EIC's are going to be available to a lot more students this year than in previous years," he said.

"Students need to know how they can get up to $300 dollars more off their taxes, and we can help."

Joe Pat Amponin, VITA coordinator, said volunteers will be helping students as well as people in the community.

"We are looking to help those people with a low or middle income who may have some questions about how to fill out their taxes," Amponin said.

"It's a good way for us, as accounting students, to gain experience, but more importantly, it's a good way to get into the community and help out by volunteering our

Forum examines major problems children face

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The League of Women Voters of Jackson County held a forum Sunday to determine how to deal with the risks today's children face.

"National Issues Forum: Growing Up At Risk" was the topic that league members and other concerned residents discussed.

Maggie Flanagan, a Carbondale City councilwoman and league member, moderated the 2 1/2-hour presentation at the Carbondale City Hall.

Children growing up in today's world are facing messages and problems from media and society their parents never dealt with, and many attendees shared their assessments and solutions to various situations faced by children.

SIUC volunteers aid area youths

By Dave Katzman

As the League Of Women Voters addresses the need to place volunteers in programs for youths, SIUC has a platoon of volunteers already helping children.

The Saluki Volunteer Corps, which formed in 1992, actively places student volunteers in programs helping Carbondale-area youths. The Corps has 1,800 students registered as volunteers who donate one to two hours a week when possible.

Kathie Lorenz, coordinator of Student

Development and the Saluki Volunteer Corps, said various agencies come to the Corps for help, and she listens for potential opportunities.

"I keep my ears open for volunteer opportunities throughout the community that students can participate in," she said.

About 90 SIUC students are involved with the Tutorial/Mentor Program, which places volunteers in virtually all Carbondale schools, Lorenz said.

"In some schools, they work alongside a teacher," she said. "Some of the older students work in the study halls. With the high dents in a Carbondale Community High School class, listed racism, abuse by parents/guardians and drug abuse as the three biggest problems they face.

Four possible solutions to dealing with the problems of troubled children were discussed.

The first solution, "Teaching Values," suggested that many of the problems kids have with society are based on their inability to distinguish right from wrong.

"Restoring Order" offered the theory that schools exist for the majority of good kids, and that troublemakers should either be expelled or moved to alternative schools.

The third proposal, "Providing Care," said that youths need to be fostered, rather than punished, to treat their problems. It was suggested that children who exhibit problems in school are reacting to problems at home.

"Building Futures" stated that changes in the family environment and opportunities can help overcome the lack of hope felt by many young people today.

Although participants found it hard to agree on ways to deal with certain problems, they all agreed that further discussion, planning and coordination are needed to figure out what community members can do to help children.

Graduates lack seat in chancellor search

THE APPOINTMENT OF A NEW CHANCELLOR to replace the retiring Chancellor James Brown is a crucial process for the University and its students. SIU has taken steps to expand student input in the process of choosing a new chancellor, but the school has not gone far enough. Graduate and professional students do not have the representation that they deserve on a search committee for the office.

The position of chancellor is the highest office in the administration of the SIUC and SIUE campuses. The SIU chancellor acts as a liaison between the SIU Board of Trustees and the two campuses. Brown and the trustees partially recognized the impact the office has on students; they changed board by-laws last semester to allow for two student representatives (instead of just one) on a search committee which will help decide who the next chancellor will be.

TWO UNDERGRADUATE REPRESENTATIVES, one from SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government and one from SIUE, were chosen by the board from a list of nominees to fill the two student seats on the committee. Graduate and professional students were left without a voice, however. The SIUC graduate and professional student population totals 4,259. The overall SIUC student population totals 21,811. This means about 20 percent of the overall student population may be without representation on the search committee.

Brown says there is no need for graduate and professional representation on the committee because there is not a major distinction between the interests of graduate and undergraduate students. Nothing could be further from the truth.

THE NEED FOR THIS GROUP OF STUDENTS to have representation on the committee becomes apparent when the direct impact the chancellor's office has on graduate and professional students is analyzed.

Professional colleges at SIU have recently received substantially higher tuition increases than undergraduate students have received. While Brown recommended a 3.5-percent increase in undergraduate tuition for fall 1995, the law school, medical school and dental school received hikes ranging from 14.9 percent to 16 percent. Contrary to Brown's argument, there is a very large distinction between the impact the office has on graduates and undergraduates. It seems reasonable that graduate and professional students should have a voice in deciding who the next individual will be who recommends tuition hikes.

FLAWS CAN ALSO BE FOUND IN BROWN'S argument when another factor is considered. The chancellor's office plays a key role in carrying out PQP, (Priorities, Quality and Productivity), an Illinois plan to cut back on spending in higher education. Academic programs cut as a result of PQP have primarily been in the doctoral and master's levels. Thirty-six master's and doctoral-related programs have been cut as a result of PQP since November 1992, while only nine bachelor and associate degrees were eliminated.

The chancellor's office directed cuts to be made in accordance with Illinois Board of Higher Education recommendations. The University is not obligated, however, to follow these recommendations. Graduate and professional students should at least be given the opportunity to recommend a chancellor who will not apply a political ax to their programs.

PRIOR TO 1991, BOARD BY-LAWS ALLOWED FOR undergraduate as well as graduate and professional representation on similar search committees. Perhaps it is time, for fairness' sake, to reimplement such a policy. Full student representation will only be achieved if the SIU Board of Trustees adds an extra seat to the search committee.

Letters to the Editor

Spectators should watch mouths

I am writing this letter on behalf of the loyal followers and supporters of Saluki basketball, commonly known as the Dawg Pound (the true Dawg Pound, that is). The purpose of my letter is twofold. Primarily, to convey my sincere apologies to Coach Herrin, the Saluki basketball team, and Southern Illinois University for the second technical foul which was called on the crowd at the Creighton game. The shout of "You suck!" came from a small group of fans who should not be associated with the true Dawg Pound. It was never our intention to degrade the reputation of the University or to hurt the team we come to support. The second objective of my letter is to illustrate the reasoning behind the first technical foul.

At the beginning of the year, the student body consistently yelled a profane chant after opposing teams were successful in their free-throw attempts. We were asked by Coach Herrin to stop the profanity, and we agreed, changing the cheer to "You suck!" The question the students want answered is why we are being threatened with a technical for this cheer. It seems that everyone is claiming the presence of profanity, when in reality it has been eliminated. The Dawg Pound feels we have been unjustly marked as disrespectful to the sport and degrading to the University. We knew the Creighton game was far out of reach, and we wanted to make a point about the unfair policy enacted by the MVC. This action would never have been taken in a close matchup, though during the post-game show, CIL-PM incorrectly inferred that it would. The first technical, therefore, was deliberate, yet the true Dawg Pound feels the second was inappropriate.

In closing, we are proud of our support of Saluki basketball. Many of us, like myself, have not missed a home game in two years.

We were booed by the alumni after the second technical, and we feel this was uncalled for, since many of them stay seated the entire game while we stand and cheer for two hours straight. We respect the alumni and the University, and hope this incident, which will not be repeated, does not tarnish the reputation of the Dawg Pound. Anyone with opinions, either dissenting or concurring, please call me at 549-9552.

Any suggestions or explanations relating to the reason for this unjust practice are also welcomed. Finally, congratulations to the Dawgs on the season. Chris Carr on his impressive milestone, and we'll see you in the Big Dance!

Foul language illustrates bad side of culture

After last Friday's (Feb. 10) front page, Gus Bode needs to have his mouth washed out with soap.

An incident related by another faculty member made the issue of this particular vulgarity more important to me.

She said that an international student was earnestly requesting feedback on a creative assignment, which had just been handed in.

The student said to the professor, "You'll tell me if it sucks, won't you?"

Is this the kind of cultural expression we wish to export around the world?

Life's magic unnoticed

When you rub the cheek of an Alzheimer's patient, they'll turn their head and start sucking, because they've forgotten they're not supposed to. This highlights the tragedy inherent in growing up. The world offers us such wonderful stimuli, and we train ourselves not to enjoy it. A falling leaf, a puffy cloud, shag carpeting, toes.

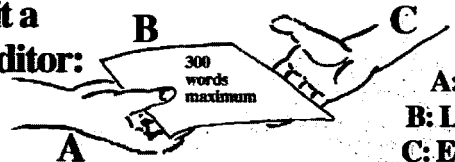

Every twenty steps to the Student Center, I scoop a pile of snow and form the world's most perfect snowball, destroying it against some sleeping tree. And each time I stoop to scoop, my friend yells, "What the hell are you doing, you Californian?" Stomping through acres of campus whiteness I discover no snowman. So are my frozen hands happier than my friend's hands warm in pockets? I think over the years the redundancy of this winter stimuli has tricked his mind into denying the magic of snow.

I figure if you can't enjoy the winter's enchantments, then you have forgotten what being human is. You are not chained to your television. You are not harnessed to your job, gender role or financial situation. You are the receptor of all that the world can offer. Every swaying yellow daisy, every crunchy dried leaf, every cold snowflake becomes you if you allow it. A little practice at being human, and you can even smell the snow.

student population enhances the cultural life at SIUC.

"We are privileged to have the number of international students we have at SIUC," Quisenberry said.

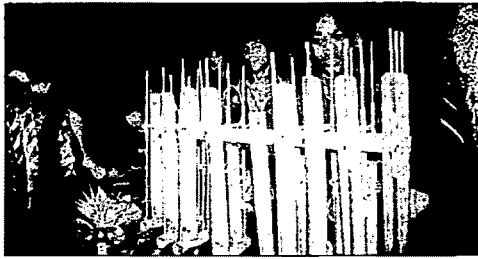

Wan Kamal Wan Napi, president of the International Student Council, said this year's festival is a product of the hard work and dedication of the SIUC students and faculty.

"All who got involved gave much of their time and energy and developed gratifying friendships and received experience to be used later in life," Wan Napi said.

"I hope this year's festival can provide an opportunity for us to get to know each other better and to exchange our views on matters of common interest for our mutual benefits," he said.

"To those who attend, the festival will be a cultural eye-opener to the world."

■ the task force also passed a motion to make keg possession illegal during Halloween;

■ a motion that the city and University allocate resources to promote a positive and effective public relations campaign to downplay the negative impact of Halloween on Carbondale; and

"The city and the University are in this together. They are going to have to walk hand in hand."

Jeff Doherty
City manager, Task Force member

■ a motion to enforce students convicted of a crime be subject to the Student Conduct Code was postponed until the next meeting with a request for more information on the code book.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said he believes the Halloween problem should be a shared responsibility.

"The city and the University are in this together," Doherty, a task force member said.

"They are going to have to walk hand in hand."

All the motions will appear on a preliminary report that the committee will vote on and make changes to at its Feb. 20 meeting.

Patrick Kelley, chairman of the task force and an SIU law professor, said the committee hopes to give its recommendations to President John Guyon and Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard by early March.

Students will be able to contact the CIA and the White House via the Internet during the Library Affairs and Intramural Recreational Sports Open House and Information Fair in the Student Recreation Center on Wednesday.

Through the Internet, people will have the opportunity to take advantage of information databases, but-letin board systems and organizations all over the world, according to Alisa Simpson, an employee of the library's Special Collections Department and co-planner of the event.

"People will be able to try anything they want," said Simpson.

The fair's purpose is to introduce people to the many resources of Morris Library by featuring demonstrations of a library CD-ROM, a multimedia project and an interactive video.

The multimedia project will include computer applications to instruct people on the use of Morris Library's resources as well as a problem-solving skills-developing program, according to Jerry Hostetler.

The interactive video presentation is a microcomputer-controlled laser disc that was developed by library staff members a couple of years ago, said Hostetler. The video is geared toward library orientation and will allow users to call up graphics and information about Morris Library's services and features.

There also will be an aquarium filled with library-related items. Students can win prizes including gift certificates, tickets to Saluki basketball games and various compact discs by accurately guessing the number of items.

The fair was planned by Simpson and David Koch with assistance from many other people, Stimpson said.

Chili and soda will be provided to people who attend the fair, which runs from 3-7 p.m. by the climbing wall on the lower level of the Recreation Center.

Donations for $1 will be accepted but are not required.

according to the newsletter, the results will be sent to the 30 Generations Connect locations with a request from them for three recommendations on how the Illinois Intergenerational Network can foster the activities in each community. All recommendations will be reviewed and then narrowed down to the four or five that will be presented to the Illinois Department of Aging, Illinois delegates and, ultimately, Washington.

According to the group newsletter, there have been three White House Conferences on Aging since the 1940's and each one has served as a catalyst for important new initiatives addressing the needs of the senior generation.

Police Blotter

Carbondale Police

■ Paul Smith, 53, of Carbondale, owner of Smith Dodge at 1412 W. Main, told police five cars in his lot were vandalized between 6 p.m. Feb. 10 and 11:30 a.m. Feb. 11. Police said one car had a damaged hood and the other four had damaged windshields. The damage is estimated at $3000.

■ Ersoy T. Baydede, 21, of Carbondale, told police his car was broken into between 1:35 and 2 a.m. on Feb. 11. The offenders allegedly pried open the sunroof and took two speakers worth $200.

University Police

■ University Police said Leonard C. Brantley, 40, of Alto Pass, was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol after they observed him driving erratically on South Wall Street at 1:36 a.m. on Feb. 12. He was taken to Jackson County Jail where he later posted bond and was released.

■ Mable B. Benton, 20, of Boomer, was arrested at 12:56 a.m. on Feb. 12 on a Jackson County warrant for failure to appear in court. She posted a $500 bond and was released.

■ Craig A. Bianchi, 23, of Wright Hall, was arrested at 12:53 a.m. Feb. 12 on a Jackson County warrant for failure to appear in court. He posted a $150 bond and was released.

■ University Housing officials told University Police someone threw a chair through a first floor window of Neely Hall at 2:07 a.m. Feb. 11. The chair and glass landed on a bicycle rack and damaged a bicycle belonging to Laurel L. Darren, 18, of Neely. The cost of damage caused by the incident is unknown.

■ University Police said they arrested Jason Howell, 18, of Neely Hall, at 10:52 p.m. on Feb. 10 for underage consumption of alcohol after University Housing officials called police to ask for help in handling him.

■ Randi R. Miller, 20, of Carbondale, told University Police his bicycle was stolen from a rack at the Engineering Building between 8 a.m. Feb. 8 and 12:30 a.m. Feb. 10. The loss is estimated at $150.

■ Hideyuki Ishigaki, 23, of Carbondale, told police his wallet was stolen from a locker in the Student Recreation Center between 6:40 and 6:50 p.m. on Feb. 11. The value of the wallet is unknown.

■ Steven M. Springer, of Carbondale, was cited for driving on the sidewalk on the north side of Lentz Hall at 9:50 a.m. on Feb. 10.

'Legends of the Fall': Exceptional acting

Wild adventure: Two brothers love one woman in epic set in Montana's Big Sky country.

By Kristi Dehority
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The wild, adventurous type always seems to die young, but in the movie "Legends of the Fall," that type loses all of the ones that he has loved.

Set in Montana during the early 1900's, the movie follows the life of Tristan Ludlow (Brad Pitt) and the love he shares with his two brothers for the same woman, Susanna, played by Julia Ormond. Tristan's character, of the wild and adventurous type, lies somewhere between that of his brother Alfred (Aidan Quinn), the straight and narrow, and Samuel (Henry Thomas), the dreamer.

Anthony Hopkins plays their father, a colonel in the army. With the onset of the first World War, Samuel has a desire to prove to his father that he is a man and a hero. Even though Hopkins disagrees with the boys' desire to go to war, all three enlist, leaving Samuel's fiancée, Susanna.

Tristan joins the army along with his brothers in order to protect Samuel. Before leaving, however, Tristan seduces Susanna, beginning the love affair that continues throughout the rest of the movie.

The graphic war scene gives the audience its first glimpse of Tristan's inner turmoil.

The scene after Samuel's death in which Tristan cuts out his brother's heart to release his soul is powerful, and sets the tone for the rest of the movie.

With Tristan's arrival home from the war and Samuel's death, Tristan and Susanna continue their love affair. The two fall in love, but eventually Tristan leaves again, this time to fight the guilt he feels for his brother's death.

The movie shows Tristan after

the war, sailing the seas and going to places like New Guinea and Africa.

To make a long story short, boy wins girl, boy leaves girl, girl marries his brother, boy comes back, boy marries cute little servant girl, servant girl is murdered, boy takes revenge. I won't tell you the ending, but it's good.

The movie attempts to be an epic and has a story line that sets a good pace for the movie. As one viewer put it, you can only have so many scenes of Pitt riding against the horizon, of which I think there were maybe five.

The movie was shot near Vancouver, and the scenery is one of the better parts of the movie. The family home snuggled between mountains, the bathing scenes in the river — the scenery adds to the epic quality of the movie.

Each actor puts in an exceptional performance. Anthony Hopkins does a great job as the father torn between his sons. Brad Pitt is perfect as the confused, tormented, grieving soul who can't seem to find any happiness.

Film on romantic side

This movie is on the romantic side but does offer a lot of action.

For all of you with boyfriends that won't take you to see this, don't worry — go with girlfriends. You'll appreciate the scenery a lot more. Happy Valentine's Day!

Saint Valentine's Day

Singles lonely on lover's day

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Once again, cupid has drawn his bow to strike the lucky with an arrow of love. But cupid has missed some SIUC students who will be spending Valentine's Day alone.

Charlotte Rivers, a senior in advertising from Anna, said one of the good things about being single on Valentine's Day is that she has no one she has to impress.

"I don't have to shave my legs this year," she said.

Rivers said this Valentine's day will definitely be different than last year's two-ringed circus.

"Last year I received two engagement rings for Valentine's Day," she said. "It was very confusing."

Rivers said she did not marry either, and that she just ended a relationship. So now that she is single she can spend more time with her true valentines.

"I have three children, and we are going to make heartshaped cookies on Valentine's Day," she said. "Men come and go, but my children will always be a part of my life."

Kiley Piercy, a junior in photography from Ottawa, said though Valentine's Day is a romantic holiday, it does not put him in the loving mood.

"It's just one of those days that remind you that you are alone," he said. "It's not like I am going to go out and try to find someone just to have a date for Valentine's Day."

Piercy said though the holiday reminds him he is alone, there are some good points to being self-sufficient.

"There is the whole aspect of being independent and not having to worry about getting someone something, and worrying if they will like it are not," he said.

"It will be just another ordinary day."

While couples will engage in celebrating the lover's holiday, Jason Cox, a junior in graphic design from Fairfield, said this is first time he can remember spending Valentine's Day alone.

"This year I will probably do nothing, and be a lot more bored than in the past," he said. "It would be nice like in the past if I had someone to buy for and go out and do something with."

Though Cox may spend the holiday alone, he said there is a special someone he would like open his heart to.

"There is someone who I would like to spend time with, but I haven't asked," he said. "Not as of yet anyway."

Patti Prost, co-owner of The Flower Box Inc. in the Murdale Shopping Center, said most of the secret admirer valentines she sends are from singles.

"It is more prominent now than at any other time of the year," she said.

Though being a secret admirer adds to the mystique of Valentine's Day, Prost said she does not encourage the concept.

"If you are going to spend that much money on flowers or gifts for someone, you might as well let the person know who they are from," she said. "At least send a card that may give the person some kind of a hint."

Prost said secret admirers are from a large range of people, but for the most part, they are single.

KIM RAINES—The Daily Egyptian

Traditional gift: Steve Takaberry prepares a bouquet of roses for Valentine's Day at Country Fair's floral department Sunday afternoon.

February 14 is anniversary of young couple's first date

For me, Valentine's Day means much more than giving a card and buying some candy. You see, it was five years ago today when I met a very special girl, in Vienna, Austria of all places.

when I was not allowed back into Cuba after returning from the Embassy in the Bahamas where I was on temporary assigned duty. I had a problem with my visa, which would take at least a week to ten days to fix, or so I was told.

Amelia was a young college student taking a semester off from the University of Maryland in Munich and visiting her parents who like myself, a 22-year-old Marine, worked at the American Embassy. We met one afternoon while I was on duty in the Embassy.

When I flew back to Miami and immediately called Amelia in Maryland and I asked her to fly down for the week so we could be together. We had not seen each other in seven months. She arrived at about noon on a Saturday.

I remember clearly our first date on February 14, 1990. We had dinner at a little restaurant called the Alte House in the romantic area of Vienna known as the Grinzinger district. Afterwards we went to our first movie together and saw the "Dead Poets Society" starring Robin Williams. At the time, we did not realize our first date fell on Valentine's day. It was pure coincidence.

That visit was short lived however. Not two hours after she arrived, I received a phone call telling me to catch a plane back to Cuba the next morning. Amelia was heartbroken. We had to cram a week into a 12-hour visit. It was the shortest week of our lives.

The next eight months we spent together in Vienna were filled with evenings on sidewalk cafes sampling wines or having coffee. We would often take walks into the hills that overlooked the city, sit in the grass and enjoy each other's company. We even traveled by train to Denmark.

Over the course of the next few years we lived out our engagement through letters and telephone calls. She was then at the University of Maryland at College Park, while the remainder of my tour was spent in Mexico City, Havana, and Bridgetown, Barbados.

Our happiness would be cut short in November when I received orders to report to the U.S. Interest Section in Havana, Cuba. Amelia was back at school in Munich when I called to tell her our ride on the carousel was slowly coming to an end.

During the three years we were apart we rarely saw one another. Those years would test our patience and understanding far more than we ever dreamed possible. Our faithfulness to one another was never in question and our willingness to endure was never a doubt. However, do not be so naive that you think time and spirit cannot harm a relationship.

With only a few weeks left together before going our separate ways, Amelia and I took a chance and got engaged. If we could ride out the storm, we would be married in May 1993, after my discharge. I was not allowed to be married as a Marine Security Guard. I even signed a contract stating I would remain single until I was done with my tour.

This Valentine's Day, Amelia and I will be together five years. In May we will celebrate our 2nd wedding anniversary.

The year I spent in Havana was perhaps our worst. I stress the word "our" because we both dealt with a lot of disappointments and let downs. I painfully remember one incident

As I look back on those years apart I realize it was a difficult time in our lives, but a time well worth the effort to achieve what we now have together, forever.
For Amelia and I, February 14th is not a day which evolves around expensive gifts. For us, it's about expressing our feelings and realizing how lucky we are.
—Michael DeFord, 27, is a sophomore in journalism and a reporter for the Daily Egyptian.

Gift-giving ideas for valentines

By Sean J. Walker

Some people will be rushing around today attempting to find the right valentine for their particular sweethearts. The gift list is endless, and there are many things to consider when looking for a valentine.

percent from $128 million in 1987 to $210 million in 1992.

Michele Ray, a junior in elementary education at Logan, said cards are nice, but she prefers flowers because they are pretty and sentimental.

"I give what I would like to get, and I am getting flowers," she said. "I like yellow roses because I like to be a good friend. I also enjoy being different from everyone else who buys the red roses."

Personalizing a valentine is part of the big picture and for the long-termers out there, getting more costly gifts may be the way to go.

Mike Wolgemuth, a freshman in aviation at SIUC, said his girlfriend hinted at what she wanted which made the gift process easier, but will cost him plenty.

National Condom Day urges 'safe sex'

By Kellie Huttes
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Observance coincides with Valentine's Day

A foil-lined heart full of chocolates, a dozen red roses and a fluffy white teddy bear are just a few Valentine's Day gift ideas for sweethearts this Feb. 14.

But a box of condoms also might be on the list as National Condom Day coincides with the day for lovers. SIUC students and sales personnel think all sweethearts should remember that the two days fit nicely together.

National Condom Week began in 1978 and is celebrated Feb. 14-21, but this year is a first for National Condom Day to be recognized by health organizations and universities.

Daniel Bao, an associate at the Condom Resource Center in Oakland, Calif., said David Mayer, a student at University of California at Berkeley started the week in 1978.

"Love is in the air and this is a week when people are thinking about becoming sexually active," he said. "We try to promote (safe sex) at universities, health centers and through AIDS activists."

Although SIUC has no programs or displays promoting the day or week, Bao said he has distributed information to places throughout the country.

Jada Hutton, a freshman in philosophy from Chicago, said condoms make good Valentine's Day gifts.

"Valentine's Day is for lovers and there's a lot of sex on campus, even though it's on a weekday, I don't think it's going to stop people from having sex," she said.

Hamilton Arendsen, a sophomore in political science and speech communications from Spring Green, Wis., said the condom day will hopefully remind people to use prophylactics on Valentine's Day.

"It seems strange to have condom day on Valentine's Day because people have candy and flowers on their minds," Arendsen said. "But as long as the word is out and people are in the mood it's a good reminder."

David Hoffman, vice president of Condoms Now, 11 W. Division in Chicago, said his store is stocking plenty of passionate products for both holidays.

"Anything red is usually a big hit," he said. "Lolly-condoms strawberry and cinnamon flavored body oils and mousses usually attract a lot of attention, but if it says novelty, it should not be used because it has no protection against pregnancy, STDs or AIDS."

Novelty items include edible and many colored prophylactics.

Hoffman said during condom week the store will be giving away condoms and promoting safe sex.

"It's good to get the word out to young couples about the week," he said. "Some people have a bad attitude about the whole thing, but condoms aren't hurting anyone, they're saving lives." Spencer's, in University Mall, has large displays of protective and stimulatory devices.

Tonight, Rosati and Johnson are planning to go out to dinner, then struggle at home.

Another couple with a lasting relationship also is talking about marriage.

Shanna Bridges, a junior in elementary education from Effingham, said she and Geoff Lewis had their first date almost four years ago at the Effingham High School Sweetheart Dance.

"He asked me to the Sweetheart Dance and we've been together ever since," she said. "We're together all the time, at home, at the library and for lunch."

Lewis, a senior in aviation management from Effingham, said he tries to do special things for Bridges for Valentine's Day and their anniversary.

"Since the 23rd is our anniversary, we do a little something for both," he said. "Something we both can afford."

Bridges and Lewis traveled to Effingham to work this past weekend and have classes tonight but will still find time to share the holiday, both said.

"We'll probably go to Garfield's for dinner then to a movie after class," Bridges said.

"I'll get her some flowers and maybe some candy," Lewis said. "You know, the usual."

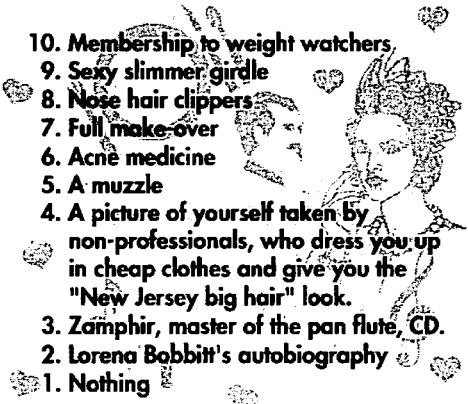

Although the two have discussed marriage, Bridges said they will wait until both are finished with college. Lewis wants an earlier engagement.

Dave Grunwald and Stephanie Peiffle, of Elmhurst, said their first date was set up by friends three years ago.

Grunwald, a senior in business management, business administration and biology said he and Peiffle, a junior in German, will go out to dinner and do something crazy at home.

While college students planned nights out, a husband and wife are staying home to relax with their new son.

Jonathan Newman, a SIUC assistant professor in zoology, his wife Stacy and son Griffin are planning to attend the international festival for lunch and spend the evening at home.

"We don't really lead an exciting life, but this is Griffin's first Valentine's Day and he's giving gifts to children in his play group," Stacy said. "I just got a diamond ring for our 10-year anniversary, so we're going to be taking it easy."

school students, they work in the after-school program sponsored by Carbondale Community High School.

Another program designed to help area youth is called Sensible Teens Explore Prevention.

"It's a mini-conference targeted at sixth graders at local schools that go to prevention workshops," Lorentz said.

The conference is hosted by the Adolescent Health Center and the Jackson County Health Department.

Prior to the corp's creation in 1992, Mobilization of Volunteer Effort (MOVE) was a registered student organization that provided volunteer work to the community. MOVE was formed by a grant from the city of Carbondale and SIUC.

Lorentz said MOVE was very similar to the Volunteer Corps, but it was staffed by students rather than a full-time employee. Since the purpose of the two organizations overlapped, MOVE was dissolved.

The Corps works in other areas of the community besides youth programs.

Students who volunteer their labor with a Saluki Volunteer Corps project receive a membership certificate. If they volunteer 30 hours of service, students receive one hour of credit.

time," he said.

The program, which Amponin said started around 24 years ago, is split into three operations. Students will be able to get help at the Student Center on Mondays from 5 to 7 p.m.

Beta Alpha Psi members will also be at the Federal Building on Mondays from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., and at the Senior Adult Center at the corner of Springer and Sycamore Wednesdays from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

"We are primarily trying to cover all bases," Jacquot said. "Every year the people we have helped have been very supportive of the program."

Jacquot said students shouldn't be afraid to file their taxes, even if they think they are going to have to pay the IRS.

"It's important for students to realize the fine the IRS charges for not filing is much higher than the fine for not paying," he said. "(The IRS) is very helpful in setting up payment schedules for those who can't pay. They're not so nice if you don't even file."

Director of the Senior Center Operation Lori Cundiff said working with people in the community has been a positive experience.

"The people we have helped have been great," Cundiff said.

Amponin said since the program started on Feb. 6, VITA members have helped a total of 12-15 people.

"Last year we had around 250 people take advantage of the program," Amponin said. "We expect to get much busier as the deadline for filing taxes approaches."

Anyone with questions about their 1040EZ or 1040A forms can stop by the Federal Building or Student Center or they can make an appointment at the Senior Center if they don't want to wait.

Amponin stressed that the program is not for those with businesses or any others who would need the help of a professional tax preparer.

office places too many hurdles in front of the students. He said there is too much paperwork and bureaucracy involved in just making an appointment with the office.

"It took six weeks for me to get my appointment with the placement office. It's a shame that our main resource for finding jobs is so inaccessible," he said.

As far as making school more accessible, Peerbhai said the No. 1 priority is to make the campus safe for women. He said he would like to see more Safuki patrolmen out at night, especially near Morris Library.

"If you are a male on campus you are pretty much free to move around as you want, but we want to make it safe for all students," he said.

He also said they would like to see more parking and more office hours for professors.

Currently professors are only required to have one office hour for every hour they teach. Peerbhai said he would like to see the professors have two office hours for every hour they teach.

"Most professors teach nine hours a week, times that by two and they would only be putting in 18 hours a week," he said.

"They receive a full-time paycheck, they should work a full-time job." He also said Students First is in support of a mass transit system and strict enforcement of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

A specific date for the USG elections has not yet been determined.

the Child Care Resource and Referral Program at John A. Logan College, discussed the Carbondale Area School-Age Initiative, a coalition of care providers for youth in the Carbondale area that is already trying to coordinate volunteers and programs.

"The goal was to increase and provide more activities for school-age children to reduce the latchkey population," she said.

"The strategy has now become, 'Let's look at what's already there, and then find where the holes are and fill in those gaps.'" Lynne Edmondson, president of the League of Women Voters of Jackson County, said the issue of children at risk was chosen for emphasis by the League at their national convention. She said that parents need to play a more active role in rearing their children.

"One really big problem is parents who don't have time for their kids, so their children aren't reaching their full potential," she said. "I think the most important thing is to have an ongoing dialogue with their children."

Input from the meeting will be integrated into a television program, "Early Intervention For Children: Communities in Crisis," airing April 14 at 8:30 p.m. on WSIU channel 8.

A strong Latin beat

Long-distance phone companies vie fiercely for Hispanic telecommunications business

Newsday

Competition for the Latino market has become especially fierce among long distance phone companies.

"The Hispanic telecommunications consumer spends twice as much on long distance calls as the general consumer does," said Al Quintana, an AT&T spokesman, adding that the average long-distance bill is $34 a month for Latinos, compared with $17 to $20 for the general market. He said about 82 percent of the Latinos who live in the United States are foreign born.

"Latinos love to talk and they love to get the latest word on what's going on at home," Quintana said.

Hispanic Business magazine reported that AT&T boosted its Latino marketing budget to $19.2 million last year, up from $6.7 million.

That includes a decision to sponsor a nationwide radio call-in show on the CBS Americas Radio Network called Buenas Noches America, which focuses on immigration issues.

It uses entertainer Jon Secada in its "True Voice" commercials for the Spanish language market instead of Whitney Houston. And it has signed deals with TVKO, a pay-per-view cable station featuring boxing, and Galavision, an international Spanish-language cable network.

Sprint more than doubled its spending to $6.4 million last year and MCI more than doubled to $5.4 million.

Hispanic-targeted ad spending up as firms recognize growing market

Newsday

NEW YORK—Sears started its own magazine aimed at Latino consumers.

AT&T nearly tripled its spending on marketing to Latinos last year—and it just hired singer Jon Secada to do Spanish-language commercials.

Both Nestle, the food and chocolate giant, and sneaker maker Reebok have hired a Latino advertising agency for the first time.

Many U.S. advertisers have stepped up efforts to reach the rapidly growing Latino market, saying that it's not enough to expect mainstream English-language ads alone to win them over.

"Interest in the Hispanic market has grown tremendously," said Delores Kunda, director of the Hispanic Unit at Leo Burnett, the Chicago-based ad agency whose clients include McDonald's.

Last year, U.S. companies spent an estimated $953 million on advertising focused on the Latino market, up 15 percent from 1993, according to Hispanic Business magazine.

"More and more companies are

"Interest in the Hispanic market has grown tremendously."

discovering there is a big market out there to advertise to," said Hector D. Cantu, managing editor of Hispanic Business.

The spending increase was especially strong among retail chains such as Sears, which spent $9.3 million, up from $5 million, J.C. Penney, which spent $7.8 million, up from $2.3 million, and Montgomery Ward, which spent to $5.2 million from $1.3 million, according to Hispanic Business.

"The Hispanic community is very family focused so it matches up well with what our store offers," said Bob Schamberg, vice president for marketing at Sears.

The chain has increased its spending on Latino marketing in each of the past four years. It began a magazine called Nuestra Gente (Our People), that it sends to consumers and it has even started running ads for other companies, including MCI.

Sears also substituted the slogan "Todo Para Ti" (Everything for You) for its English language "Softer Side of Sears." And it introduced Spanish-language owners manuals for products like refrigerators.

For many companies, not just the amount spent but also the approach and goals have changed.

"Over the years it has progressed from just being a nice-to-do community relations effort to a real business opportunity," said Marta Gerdes, director of Latino marketing at McDonald's, which according to Hispanic Business spent $11.2 million on the effort last year.

"Historically some advertisers figured that if you just put a Hispanic face up there that will be significant, but that is not enough and in some cases it is just superficial," said Jerry Florence, vice president of marketing at Nissan USA.

Devalued peso turning out to hurt Mexican manufacturing concerns

Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY—Antonio Simon Galindo knows that his customers are mad. He does not blame them, but there is little the label and packaging company owner can do to quell their anger over price increases.

"Everyone understands but no one wants to accept it," he said. "Many are reluctant, and I have apparently lost some contracts."

His family company, Ideas y Promociones, is one of those Mexican firms that was supposed to benefit from the 40 percent peso devaluation that has plunged this country into an economic crisis.

A weaker peso would make his products—labels and packaging for various Mexican-made consumer goods—cheaper and more competitive with foreign rivals, or so the theory went.

Nice theory. But the reality is that over the last decade, Mexican companies of all sizes, including Galindo's, have become dependent on foreign sources for the components and machinery they need. And the prices of those imports and the payments on the dollar-denominated debt they used to buy new equipment just soared, along with their other costs.

As a result, they are raising their own prices—and running into stiff resistance from customers. Even in the best of times, price negotiations between supplier and customer are hard-nosed. When a currency loses 40 percent of its value in a month, those negotiations can get downright nasty. When Mexican officials went to Nissan Motor Co.'s suppliers with an offer to pay a moderately higher those suppliers refused to accept the deal. They halted deliveries, causing parts shortages that forced Nissan to shut down its two Mexican assembly plants until new prices could be negotiated.

"LOW BACK PAIN MAY BE LUMBAR DISC PROTRUSION"

Seven out of ten people are bothered by a backpain almost everyday. Of these seven, two are innocent and are mild muscle strain. The other five are a serious disc and spinal problems. The serious type may be mild in the beginning, but can become severe and paralyzing. Anytime back pain persists over 2-3 days, and re-occurs at the slightest aggravation a disc problem may be developing. If you are troubled by re-occurring or severe back pain, listen to your body. It is telling you that a disc is under strain and interfering with normal nerve function. Listed below are just a few of the problems caused by this back pain or either nerve irritation:

Grozny civilians fear troops moving into city

The Washington Post

GROZNY, Russia—In her dark apartment in northeastern Grozny, Natasha has survived Moscow's punitive war against Chechen separatism in an oppressive cocoon of locked doors, rationed food—and fear.

The front line of the two-month-old war—a hurricane of shellfire that shatters buildings, homes and lives—has washed over this neighborhood and moved south to others. It should have been time for Natasha and the few neighbors who rode out the storm with her to emerge from their protective prisons. But in these haggard, shrapnel-pocked apartment buildings, it is too soon to relax.

Indeed, a new terror is stalking people here, most of whom are still struggling to cope with some savagery they have suffered or seen: They remain trapped in their hiding places by fear of attacks from Russian soldiers purportedly sent here to save civilians from a rebellion that Moscow says was organized by "armed criminals" and "gangsters." Residents of Natasha's neighborhood say that Russian soldiers, far from defending them, are accosting them on the streets and breaking into apartments, looting and killing.

So Natasha still lives largely in hiding, keeping windows boarded up, avoiding soldiers and unflinchingly locking every door between her and the street. "So far, they haven't come to my place," she said. "I pray to God each day that they won't come."

On Friday, a Russian armored

"I pray to God each day that they (Russian troops) won't come."

Natasha resident of Grozny vehicle drove through an informal street market, crushing tables and people and reportedly killing at least four local residents. Natasha said she rushed out to see what had happened, but a soldier forced her back, threatening to shoot her. A few minutes later, when another foreign journalist and I happened along, Natasha and a few neighbors quickly yanked us inside their apartment building.

Out of kindness for two bewildered visitors, the residents insisted it would be best if they hid us there. But out of caution, they asked, could we show some documents to prove who we were?

One young man suggested we stay with his family, but when he escorted us to the apartment, the man's father exploded with hysterical anger at the sight of strangers on his doorstep.

"Get out! Out!" he shouted, pushing us down the steps. "You'll only make trouble for us!"

Natasha apologized, the man was traumatized, she said, by having been visited previously by threatening Russian troops. "You'll stay at my place," she said.

Her neighborhood is about two miles east of central Grozny, which Russian artillery and warplanes have pounded into indistinct rubble. Near Natasha's building, a few walls have been blasted out or blackened by fire—but the big, boxy apartment houses are mostly intact, if largely vacant.

In buildings of 60 or 80 apartments, only a few are occupied, mostly by ethnic Russians or other Slavs, who unlike Grozny's native Chechens had no nearby relatives to flee to when Russian troops launched an all-out attack on the city Dec. 31.

Before the war, Natasha said, 50 people lived in the 14 apartments that make up her section of the building. "Now I'm the only one left."

...as frantic Russian mothers search Chechnya for sons killed, captured

Special to the Los Angeles Times

SURKHIKIII, Russia—Olga Ryabitsева was at work, keeping the books at a school in a village in Russia's Krasnodar region, when a strange man from Chechnya called her on the phone about her son.

"He said my son was a POW," Ryabitsева remembered. "He said: 'He was wounded, but he's past the worst. Come to our village and get him. We'll meet you.'"

Ryabitsева had known that her son Nikolai, 19, was fighting in Chechnya, but the call from the Chechens themselves was the first she had heard that he had been wounded, much less taken prisoner.

No sooner had she hung up the phone than her co-workers began taking up a collection for her trip. Her boss gave her time off and a month's salary in advance. Ryabitsева, 41, gathered her son's civilian clothes, kissed her husband and left for the war.

Hundreds of Russian mothers, and the occasional father, have come to Chechnya to look for their soldier-sons. They roam battlefields, turning over corpses to see the faces. They wheedle their way into basements-turned-POW-camps, to look hopefully for their sons among the prisoners, and to ask for news.

The Russian mothers are able to do this—unlike, say, American mothers during the Vietnam War or Soviet mothers during the Afghan War—because the war in Chechnya is a civil war waged on Russian territory, among Russian-speaking people with common memories and experiences.

Draftees in their teens have borne the brunt of the fighting on the Russian side. Although the Soviet Union has fallen, the Cold War-era peacetime draft continues to feed the Russian army. Every male who turns 18 is expected to serve a year and a half in the army, or two years in the navy.

Russian mothers have long actively opposed the draft because of the Soviet practice of hazing, where older recruits beat new recruits with the tacit approval of the army leadership. Now, with raw draftees serving on the front lines of a major and unpopular war, mothers hate the draft—and the army—more than ever.

"They say this war is worse than Afghanistan and will take five years," said Nadezhda P. Korobova, 42, a worker in a Moscow food-processing plant trying to explain why she left her job to travel 1,000 miles to a war zone.

Korobova's 18-year-old son is a marine, probably in Grozny, the Chechen capital and the scene of the war's worst fighting. She shows off a snapshot of him in his uniform and beret, standing before the red-white-and-blue Russian flag—but Korobova decided two weeks ago that she doesn't care.

"I packed his civilian clothes into a case and came here, to persuade him to run away from the army."

...and reports of looting by troops mount

Newsday

GROZNY, Russia—Malika Vanayeva trudged through the muddy moonscape of what had once been a paved street, wheeling a small cart of groceries in front of her, then paused as a Russian tank rumbled past in a spray of dirt.

At the edge of the road, a father and son picked at the remains of a bomb-blasted house, searching for wood that could be burned for heat. A few feet away lay a corpse half buried in the thick mud. Down the street, the hollow shells of burned-out apartment houses loomed against the sky.

"This is a nightmare," said Vanayeva, gesturing at the shattered remains of her neighborhood. "No one thought the Russian army would do this. We were expecting liberators, and we got robbers instead."

Vanayeva, 30, a government worker, is one of several thousand Grozny residents who remained in the Chechen capital through the bloody battles of January and early February.

Now, with the Russians in control of most of the devastated city and fighting confined to a small southern district, she and other survivors are emerging from their shelters during the day to forage for food and water, look for friends and relatives amid the rubble, and exchange bitter stories of Russian misconduct and abuse.

According to Vanayeva and several other Grozny residents interviewed Saturday, Russian soldiers

"Everyone is amazed at what the soldiers are doing."

Malika Vanayeva resident of Grozny routinely break into homes and loot the contents, carting away furniture, televisions, clothing and other valuable possessions.

And once the pale winter sun sets and the 5 p.m. curfew takes effect, they say, the Russians fire indiscriminately on the streets.

"Everyone is amazed at what the soldiers are doing," Vanayeva said. "Some of them help us, but most behave unconscionably. They come and take away furniture and rugs." "The soldiers rob apartments," said neighbor Tserver Isayev, 29, a welder. "They rob them even while the people are there. I've seen them chase people on the street and rob them."

Even in defeat, Shaq shines

Los Angeles Times

PHOENIX—The counter attack. This was no ordinary NBA All-Star game Sunday for Shaquille O'Neal, even if it felt that way to most everyone else. His team, the East, was outgunned by most valuable player Mitch Richmond and the West, 139-112, before 18,755 at America West Arena, but the Magic castle won something anyway.

Maybe it wasn't redemption. Maybe it wasn't an increased degree of respect among his peers—O'Neal is, after all, averaging 29.7 points, tops in the league, and 10.8 rebounds for an Orlando team that is six games ahead of its closest challenger in the Eastern Conference. But, to be sure, it was something.

"He was not going to let what happened last year happen again," said Anfernee Hardaway, his teammate for the day and the season. "He went out and had more fun."

He did because he made nine of 16 shots for a team-high 22 points along with seven rebounds in 26 minutes, a year after he was frustrated while making two of 12 for eight points in 26 minutes at Minneapolis. He did because he got a healthy diet of single coverage, a year after being regularly double- and triple-teamed as the West ran everybody but the vendors at O'Neal when he got the ball inside.

Thus a conspiracy theory was born. Players scoffed at any suggestion that they tried to freeze out O'Neal, as if to remind him that this league wasn't made on CD sales, but Shaq wasn't so sure.

"I don't get mad," he said when the subject came up a few days ago. "I get even."

Not that he was holding a grudge or anything.

Come Sunday, he had two baskets before the game was four minutes old. In between those two dunks, he dropped the ball off to Scottie Pippen for a dunk when Hakeem Olajuwon and Shawn Kemp did double.

carried over to the game tonight and we were lucky that everything was clicking like it did the last game," Hassell said.

McClendon said she is along with the team is playing the best basketball of the season.

"Today's game and last game combined were definitely the best I've played all year," she said.

With the victory SIUC improves 3-4 in the Missouri Valley Conference and 13-7 overall, while the Sycamores drop to 7-6 in the league and 10-10 on the season.

The Saluki women will hit the road when SIUC travels to Peoria to take on Bradley, Thursday.

McKinley, a forestry major at SIUC, said that staff members are guides for the trips. If needed, the leaders of the outings hold pre-trip planning meetings several days in advance to discuss the equipment needed and what people can expect from the trip.

McKinley also said that extra events such as the Giant City interpretive hikes and the owl prowls, bat prowls, and hayride have been added so groups can schedule for convenient times.

"We're trying to get dorm groups involved with the program," she said. "Times can be set up that allow students to participate when they can find time."

Greg Belska, a senior in recreation, is also a guide for the Outdoor Adventure Program.

"I really like working outdoors, and this is the perfect experience for me," Belska said. "This is something I want to do after graduation."

One of the next outings for the outdoor program is the Garden of the Gods Weekend Backpacking Trip, Feb. 25-26.

The trip provides a backpack tour of the bluffs and wilderness areas, with an overnight camp-out. The deadline to register for the trip is Feb. 21, with registration fees ranging from $13-$20.

Less than a month after last year's game, he criticized Chicago Bulls fans for booing him and wondered why they didn't boo Toni Kukoc, raising the question of racism. Then he was arrested for firearms possession when police found an unregistered gun in his car.

He refused to play the final 1.8 seconds of a playoff game. He said Bulls General Manager Jerry Krause "lies." He trashed the Bulls' handling of the Horace Grant situation. He asked to be traded. He demanded to be traded. He tossed a chair and received a one-game suspension. "I guess I would have done a few things differently," Pippen said. "But I did them and it's a part of life. I'm human."

The incidents snowballed and soiled the reputation of a player who instead should be praised for his diverse skills. Pippen may be the most talented non-center in the game. He leads the decaying Bulls in seven statistical categories. He's a player any team would love to have.

He is trying to play himself out of town, the same way Charles Barkley did in Philadelphia. Barkley was a pain in his final year with the 76ers. Fed up with losing and what he perceived to be a biased media, Barkley exhibited despicable behavior. He turned on his teammates, his coach and especially his owner. Finally the Sixers, having reached the end of their patience, didn't trade Barkley so much as they simply washed their hands of him.

But by doing that, the Sixers made one of the worst deals in recent memory. They received Jeff Hornacek, Tim Perry and Andrew Lang from the Suns. None of them starts for the Sixers today. Only Perry, a reserve with cobwebs, remains with the team. Hornacek is in Utah because the Sixers followed one bad trade with another, swapping him for an aging Jeff Malone.

Krause is no dummy. He wants and demands value for value. Pippen isn't going anywhere, not before the Feb. 23 trading deadline or beyond it, unless the Bulls get a pair of young up-and-comers plus some first-rounders in return.

"I'm thinking that I'm probably going to be in Chicago after the trading deadline," Pippen said.

And then?

"I'd be mad as hell."

Pippen added: "I don't want to be here the rest of the season. I'm hoping I won't be. I'm hoping teams are thinking about me. I'm still ready to get out of here. I'm looking for a different place, a different team, a different perspective on my career. The countdown is on. Just say I'm showcasing myself out here." The trading deadline is Feb. 23.

Heading into the All-Star break, Pippen is coming off a six-game road trip. He scored 34 points with 13 rebounds and 6 assists against the Los Angeles Lakers; 22, 11 and 3 against the Sacramento Kings; 28, 11 and 7 against the Phoenix Suns; 35, 11 and 6 against the Golden State Warriors; 26, 10 and 8 against the Portland Trail Blazers; 24, 9 and 9 against the Seattle SuperSonics.

"I realize the pressure I've put upon the organization by playing well. But they're being ridiculous on what they want," Pippen said. "I don't want to see a team give up all its players to get me. That wouldn't be right."

While Pippen simmers, the trade rumors swirl. Pippen to the Warriors for Latrell Sprewell and picks. Pippen to the Suns for Dan Majerle, Wesley Person and picks. Pippen to the Washington Bullets for Juwan Howard and picks.

Chances are, as Pippen said, he's going nowhere anytime soon.

So Sunday, he had to settle for the team he'll join for one game, the East squad in this year's All-Star Game. For Pippen, it provided a temporary escape from all the Bull.

"I'm not here to try to win an MVP this year," Pippen said. "I'm just here to have a good time."

sitting down with McDowell, Jackson, and Franco and working out deals that would keep the team's championship hopes alive.

When and if the strike is resolved, and the game's true professionals get back on the field, the only thing the Sox will have to show for its championship caliber team are peanuts sent from the Yankees from the McDowell trade and two post cards from the new Japanese league superstars.

As of now, the White Sox offense has been set back two years to the 1993 Western Division championship team that had Thomas as its lone feared bat.

That alone may not seem like too much of a decline, but subtract the team's ace pitcher from that and the White Sox are probably closer to mediocrity than championship caliber.

Too bad. White Sox fans were inches away from ridding themselves of 78 years of frustration, and as a Cub fan I know exactly what that's like and beyond.

Whether or not 1994 would have been the year for Sox fans will only be a mystery, one that would eat my heart away and bring me to tears if it happened to the Cubs.

Whew, I'm glad I'm not a White Sox fan.

Salukis' guard play uproots Sycamores

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC women's basketball team used a three-guard offense to its fullest potential, Monday.

Freshman Cari Hassell, sophomore Kasia McClendon and junior Nikki Gilmore scored 57 of the Salukis points in an 82-59 rout of Indiana State at the Arena.

Hassell scored 16 of her team-high 22 points in the first half, while McClendon did the job on both ends of the court scoring 18 points, grabbing seven rebounds and picking five steals. Gilmore added 15 points and five assists.

SIUC women's head coach Cindy Scott said the squad is coming together at the right time.

"I think this team feels very good about itself," she said.

"We've done some adjusting and they're very, very comfortable and are playing with tremendous confidence.

"I don't think they feel that anybody can beat them and that's a good feeling for our team as a whole."

Indiana State's head coach Kay Rick agrees that SIUC is been playing great basketball during this stretch.

"They're playing very, very hard, they've got quickness, they've got Hassell shooting the ball and they have the horses inside," she said. "Right now I'd say that they're one of the best teams in the conference without a doubt."

The Saluki women avenged a earlier loss at Terre Haute, Indiana on Jan. 14 when ISU beat SIUC 84-78, outscoring Southern 22 to 10 from the free-throw line.

This was a very big win for us because this was a team that beat us by six earlier this year," Scott said.

The victory gives the Salukis a three-game winning streak and improve to 9-1 at the Arena.

SIUC opened the game on a 19-2 run, eight of those points coming from Hassell.

The Sycamores cut the lead down to nine with 11:28 to go in the first half, but could not get any closer and trailed by 16 going into the locker room.

The Salukis extended its lead in the second half as Nikki Gilmore opened up the second stanza with SIUC's first six points.

Hassell, who scored 22 points in the Salukis last game against Illinois State on Saturday, said her momentum carried over into Monday's game.

"I think the game from Saturday

Despite players' strike, White Sox are losing

Thank goodness I'm not a Chicago White Sox fan, because if I was, I would have one leg over the mountain peak (otherwise known as the Comiskey Park balcony rail) contemplating whether or not I could handle another 78 years of waiting.

And who knows, maybe as I looked down at the playing field, I would envision Frank Thomas bolting around third like a wild boar straight toward a doomed catcher, guarding his team's World Series hopes with his life. I would picture the "Big Hurt" plowing into the catcher as pan the Atlantic Ocean where I would see the White Sox World Series hopes sitting.

But fortunately for me, my undying faith resides with the Cubs, who have failed to boast a World Series win in 87 years and were far from breaking the streak last year. In fact, the strike was a blessing for Cub fans who wanted to see their team's dying season shot and put to rest by any means possible. A team boasting a Cy Young Award winner in Jack McDowell, a big RBI producing clean-up hitter in Franco, and a quality all-around right fielder in Jackson is no more. The compilation of these losses should be deemed devastating. The team was once a World Series favorite, but only by a margin where the loss of one player such as Jackson could dampen their chances, much less the losses of McDowell and Franco as well.

Intramural programs offer activities to experience nature, great outdoors

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The 28-foot concrete slab with grips, visible from the lower level of the Recreation Center is referred to as the climbing wall. This challenge is a small part of the activities collectively called the Outdoor Adventure Program.

The Office of Intramural-Recreational Sports, where the outdoors program is based, offers a variety of activities designed for all nature lovers, from fishing, to backpacking and canoeing. The mission of the program is to "offer outdoor experiences for groups and individuals which are safe, fun, and require no previous experience."

The office heads both the Adventure Resource Center, which stocks literature, maps and guides for recreational areas all over the United States, and the Base Camp, which rents outdoor equipment for a nominal fee.

Chris McKinley, the student work supervisor at the Adventure Resource Center, said that the influx of students varies due to seasonal weather.

"We are usually busy on Fraturdays with people wanting to know where they can camp or canoe for the weekend," McKinley said.

Most activities for the program are listed on a calendar of events, with a brief summary of the event, fees and the numbers of people allowed on the trip. A few events are marked for disabled people who want to participate. Registration is provided at the information desk in the Recreation Center, and fees will be taken at the desk, also.

Pippen struggles for identity

Newsday

PHOENIX—A year ago in this event marked the last time, Scottie Pippen was totally at peace on the basketball court. He arrived in Minneapolis intent on carving a legacy for himself, and the '94 All-Star Game was a perfect vehicle.

Last year was Pippen's first without the suffocating shadow of Michael Jordan. He was on a desperate search for respect and, even more, an identity. He wanted visibility, too, judging by the candy-apple sneakers he wore. Those Cinderella shoes were a perfect fit, and so was Pippen, who scored 29 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and capped the game's MVP award.

But something happened after Pippen's baptism. The mantle that Jordan carried proved a bit too cumbersome. Pippen's leadership skills were questioned. He brooded. He became jealous. He rebelled against authority on the Bulls.

There haven't been many highlights for Scottie Pippen between All-Star appearances.
