Experts: Vietnam, gulf wars different

The Persian Gulf war won't be another Vietnam-the two wars are different wars, experts say.

Although the wars themselves are fundamentally different, what remains the same is public support of the U.S. administrations.

"Both Vietnam and this war started out being popular," said Joseph Lepgold, assistant professor of international affairs at George-town

University in Washington, D.C.

Egyptian refugees: Baghdad 'a lifeless shell'

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Baghdad resembles a lifeless shell, its once-vibrant streets empty and its electricity, phone service and water cut off in most areas, Egyptians returning Thursday from the missileravaged Iraqi capital said.

Latest census shows city growing, but students not accurately counted

By Leslle Colp Staff Writer

Latest U.S. Census Bureau figures show Carbondale is growing, but students still may not be accurately counted, city officials

The U.S. Census Bureau notified the city earlier this week that its official population is 27,033, an increase of 619 people since the last census. Preliminary figures released last summer listed its population at 25,690.

But all of Carbondale's student population is not accounted for in se latest figures, Donald Monty, Carbondale community development director said, because many students did not mail in census forms and were gone for the summer when census takers went door to door.

When the summer figures were released, Carbondale was listed with an 8-percent vacancy rate, the amount of unoccupied residencies.

"The vacancy rate was clearly higher than it should have been," Monty said.

The city can not dispute the vacancy rate, Monty said. Gail Krmenec, geographer for the Censis Bureau, said cities can not dispute vacancy rates because the rates are likely to change. Monty said although he is not sure exactly what the vacancy rate should be, his office contacted landlords after the preliminary figures were released and confirmed his belief that the vacancy rate was too high

Salukis stick Bradley with defense

The Salukis teased the Bradley Braves Thursday night.

After completely controlling the first half, the Salukis fell asleep in the second half, but awoke to slam the door on Bradley 79-69.

"The second half I think we just had a lapse," sophomore center Ashraf Amaya said. "We did a good job overall, but we didn't dominate as much as we should

In the second half Stuckey showed why he leads the Valley in scoring, hitting 17 of hit 24 points in the final half.

The only bright spot for Bradley in the first half was the consistent performance of junior center Xanthus Houston who had 19 points on the night and nabbed 11

The win boosted the Salukis above the .500 mark in the Missouri Valley Conference at 3-2. 9-7 overall. Bradley fell to 2-4 in the conference, 4-12 overall.

Amaya kept up his usual dominance against Bradley. He led all Saluki scorers with 24 points and pulled down seven rebounds.

"I think the difference in the game was probably Amaya and Shipley," Bradley coach Stan Albeck said. "I thought both of those kids really played awfully well. They got Southern off to a very good start and put us in a hole being 10 down.

The Salukis continued to be plagued by turnovers with 17. Luckily for them, Bradley handed it back just as many times

Poor free throw shooting has also been a nightly characteristic of the Salukis. They were able to hit seven of eight from the line in the last minute and a half, pushing their percentage to 68.

Bradley took its first lead at 13:45 in the second half, 52-51. But Amaya stormed back with a monstrous dunk to put the Salukis back on top and bringing the crowd

After a Bradley turnover, junior sharp-shooting guard Matt Wynn brought the ball back and hit a -pointer to keep the crowd

"I think emotion got into the game when Ashraf (Amaya) got the dunk," SIUC coach Rich Herrin said. "That put the crowd back in the ballgame.

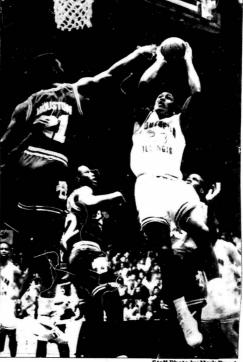

The Braves were able to tie the ame one more time, but then the Salukis took over with a 12-6 run in the final four minutes

"I think college basketball is a game of momentum and certainly it's a game of runs," Albeck said. "Yo 'll have a spurt during the

"We did get the shot we wanted," SIUC head coach Cindy Scott said. "But give Drake credit, they played very well on defense and shot well too."

In a nip-and-tuck affair, the Salukis were playing catch-up all evening. Despite stellar performances by the two teams respective stars, Rakers and Drake's Jan Jansen, neither team could seem to pull away.

Jensen lived up to her billing as one of the nation's top scorers, as she poured in 26 points.

Saluki swimmers hope to slice Razorbacks at Recreation Center

Saluki swimming and diving teams are preparing to dive into their first home meet of the new year Saturday at the Recreation Center.

Their opponents are the Arkansas State Razorbacks, whose program is almost opposite of the Saluki's with its women ranking No. 12 in the nation and SIUC's men ranking 20th.

The Razorback's men, like SIUC's women, are a young team and trying to build from a strong

"You would have to feel their women and our men will be favored in the meet," Saluki swimming and diving coach Doug Ingram said. "But anything is sible. Arkansas is coming off two Southwest Conference meets last week, so we may be catching them at a good time."

One thing Arkansas State does not have is SIUC's quota of injuries. All three of the woraen divers have been plagued with injuries this year, two with broken bones and the other with a sprained foot. Contributing to SIUC's problems is the fact that team captain Laine Owen did not return this semester because of personal

The Salukis are coming off a holiday trip to Spain where they trained and competed with several international teams. A few Salukis placed in the top three finishers, and junior Tonia Maharia and sophomore Brian Gargan placed among the top three in total individual points.

Saturday's meet, which begins at 1 p.m., will be SIUC's first since competing in Spain since the meet last weekend against Northwestern

"From the racing aspect, it is almost like starting the season over again," Ingram said. "We are anxious to get things going again."

Animation celebration a 'wonderful' creation

By Tracy Sargeant Entertainment Editor

Film Review

Only in the minds of animators can steel wire, clay and sand take on a life of their own. Fortunately, the 22nd International Tournee of Animation brings the imaginations of aspiring animators to the big screen.

The tournee is showing at 7, 9:30 and 11:30 p.m. this weekend at the Student Center Auditorium.

The show runs about two hours and is worth seeing more than once. The 18 films represent 10 countries, giving the audience various insights into politics, artistic impressions and just plain humor.

Overall, the International Tournee of Overall, the International Tournee of Animation is a wonderful look at the latest up and coming artists of the '90s.

up and coming artists of the '90s.

It includes something for everyone.

Although many of the films deal with adult themes, the rest is enough to keep even children's attentions.

The best work of the show is by far "The Cow."

Influenced by Russian writer Andrei Platonov, "The Cow" tells the simple story of a family in a depressed area of the Soviet Union.

Their only possession, their cow, gives everything to the family—until they sell her calf for money.

The characters' movements are created in an interesting way. At times the fig:res look like flat moving clay images, with a chalk-like crayon drawing in the background. Possibly actual movie film was shot and the actors were drawn on the film from the original picture.

The film is touching and the use of light very intriguing. It's no wonder it was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Animated Short in 1989.

Another favorite is the "Juke-Bar," which uses puppet animation.

Cockroaches dance in the animated feature"Juke-Bar," p 101 of the 22nd International Tournee of Animation, showing this weekend at the Student Center.

A horde of cockroaches, who live in a sleazy afternoon diner, enoy a wild night of partying after the owner instals a Wirlitizer juke box.

Although the scenes when the pesky bugs go dancing to the music of the juke box become repetitive, the surprise ending is enough to keep the audiences' interest nimed.

Two of the short films contain social and political messages—"The Coiling Prankster" and "Balance."

and "Balance."

"The Coiling Prankster" is about a man who first enjoys the simple pleasures of life but becomes paranoid about keeping all surrounding influences out and his world in. Ultimately, he surrounds himself with nothing but misery. He is so intent on crushing the outside influences that he ignores and abuses the things he loves.

The animation is all done with wire and it

The animation is all done with wire and it is really amazing how the three-dimensional objects seem to come to life.

The man first builds a garden but when he finds crows in his crops, he makes a

When wild hogs trample this garden, he uses the wire to build a fence. When children run through his yard, he builds a dog out of the wire to keep them out. Eventually he builds a fortress, and even dissembles the garden which once gave him pleasure to defend himself from the outside.

"Balance," on the other hand, can be looked at from a political standpoint. Five dominating figures stand in the middle of a level surface. If one takes a s.ep, the surface becomes unbalanced and tilts one way or the other. The rest of the figures must adjust so the surface becomes level again.

If looked at in terms of the figures as top political leads and the surface as the fate of the world, the film's meaning becomes

The figures find a box and become possessed by it, each wanting to have it. This causes chaos and instead of working together causes chaos and instead of working together to keep the balance, they strive to satisfy their included desires.

Not all of the films have heavy themes. "Rat and Cat" has many slapstick elements and is more or less in the Tom and Jerry format.

"A Very, Very Long Time Ago" is the problems with early evolution. "Sand Dance" features just that—dancing sand figures.

And "Plymptoons" are short coloredpencil animations that are scattered in between longer film animations. If the Far Side cartoons were animated, they would be Plymptoons.

Super Bowl Sunday offers a little diversion

BATTLE FATIGUE IS NOT unique to the war front. It is common on the home front as well.

People are forming support groups to help pull each other through tough emotional times. They also are looking for diversions from their stress.

Many Americans are turning to the make-believe world of movies and television. On Sunday, hundreds of thousands of people will watch Super Bowl XXV and forget about the Persian Gulf, at least for a couple of hours.

ENTERTAINMENT HAS HISTORICALLY played an important part in wartime as a means of relieving depression at home as well as on the battle grounds. The USO and Bob Hope began travelling overseas to entertain troops during World War II.

But the decision to go ahead with the football game has come under criticism by many who claim it is insensitive and inappropriate to be entertained when the country is engaged in military warfare.

BUT IF THE SUPER BOWL wasn't broadcast, what would be aired in its place? With the exception of CNN, 24hour war coverage is simply not financially possible for even the major networks.

Even if round-the-clock coverage was possible, it would not be mentally healthy for people to be bombarded with news of war every time the TV or radio was turned on.

Security concerns can't be disregarded at an event where thousands of people will be stationed in one place for about three hours.

MAXIMUM SECURITY precautions have been coordinated by the stadium's professional security force over the past several months. Metal detectors, machines have been moved into place.

The Goodyear Blimp will not be making its usual appearance in an effort to maintain a five-mile secured air space around the stadium. Security personnel have even gone as far as restricting people from bringing in umbrellas.

THERE IS A NEED for diversion in this country right now and it is a need that can be in part fulfilled by Super

Sports mentality trivializes war

After our first night of bombing baghdad, I cringed as reporters described the event as being like"a hundred Fourth of Julys"-as through this were a harmless spectacle. I became more unsettled watching ABC's video graphics, which made the whole thing look like an arcade game. But last night, the MacNeil/Lehrer On Newshour, a guest commending the efforts of our fighter pilots said—I kid you not—"this is their said—I kid you not—"this is their Super Bowl." It is moments like these that make me want to leave the planet.

Nothing I've heard thus far regarding this war has so frightened me as this metaphor. Blatant pro-war statements (eg.

I'm old enough to vividly, and painfully, recall a newspaper photograph of Vietnamese children burned from napalm, screaming, running from their burning village. That is the reality of war game.

A sports mentality toward war invites us to act upon our most basal drives: fear, aggression, territoriality. I pray that we reach a point soon where we, as individuals and a nation, act from higher motives of peace, compassion and unity.—Bret R. Bergman, graduate, educational psychology.

Bush ignores peace group until letter

I was surprised by President Bush's references to Amnesty International in his recent letter to college students. His is a belated concern for human rights in Iraq. Can anyone remember his reaction, at the time, to Saddam Hussein's murder of Kurdish children with chemical weapons? It was about the same as his reaction to the massacre in Tianeman Square: The president was mute.

Now he uses the name of Amnesty International in his justification for going to war. Three of his allies are Syria, Israel and Saudi Arabia.

Syria has long been accused by Amnesty of using torture. Many prisoners have been languishing in prison near Dam; cus for over 20

Wives and other family members are sometimes held hostage until a wanted man turns himself in.

In Israel, about 10,000 people have been detained without charge or trial. Others have been beaten while in the hands of Israeli forces or tortured. Over 600 Palestinian civilians, including children, have been shot dead by Israeli forces, suggesting excessive use of force

Thousands of Yemenis have been arrested in Saudi Arabia, some tortured, for no apparent reason other than their nationality or suspected opposition to the Saudi government's position on the

On the other side is Iraq. There is no doubt that there is a human rights emergency in Kuwait. Torture is routine in Iraqi facilities.

Soldiers break limbs, beat prisoners senseless and pull hair, fingernails and toenais out. Electric shock torture is common.

Mr. Bush is right; Saddam Hussein is a brutal man. But the president only seems to have discovered this fact on Aug. 2,

We've been saying it for years.

ove it or leave it' message unjust

I would like to say something about the "honk to support the troops" group that you showed in Friday' paper with the caption,

"One a seven cars didn't honk."

When I passed by on Friday it sounded to me like only one in four did honk. What it really seemed the group was looking for was support for the war and the president.

Those of us who disagree with Bush are made to look like we don't support the troops as a result On the contrary, I'd rather support them at home.

Unfortunately, one group member had to pull out the old Hitleristic "love it or leave it" crap on one of the signs. I thought we had gotten rid of that narrowminded phase in the dark ages.

At the risk of sounding like the film "Born on the Fourth of July," I do love it. But, as with a family member, I have no problem telling it when it does wrong Countering barbarism with barbarism is wrong. Bombing Baghdad and risking the lives of innocent Iraqi citizens as well as American journalists is wrong. Escalating it into a free-for-all, with Israel, Jordan and others ready to join, is going incredibly overboard.

I don't understand what supporting these actions, under the excuse of liberating Kuwait, has to do with loving this country.

Most of these people probably never heard of Kuwa't before it was invaded. They also looked like a group who would never have the financial need to join the army, including Mr. "Love it or Leave

If he so fervently supports this stupidi:y in the Mideast, why doesn't he join the troops in the desert? How many of his fellow flag wavers would really give up their comfortable college lives to support troops in battle?—Tim Braman, senior, cinema and photography.

Malls may maul small businesses

he battle between the Carbondale and Marion malls is heating up, but the casualties in this war may be the small businesses.

The Illinois Centre Mall, located at the crossroads of Interstate 57 and Illinois Route 13 in Marion, is quickly becoming a reality, and that has some economists and business officials predicting doom for the small businesses in the area. Richard Hahn, a former economist with the Illinois Small Business Association, said a new mall can mean "instant death" for some small businesses

When large malls move in an when large malls make in an area, there is a shift in the economic impact of the area," Hahn said. "When people can satisfy their buying needs in one place, they quit going to the small stores that are usually scattered throughout the city."

He said the completion of the new mall will be especially hard on small businesses in the area because the University Mall is so close in proximity.

"Southern Illinois has depressed economy and can only sustain so many businesses," Hahn said. "With two substantial malls located within 25 miles of each other, something will have to give. Unfortunately, that something may be the small businesses."

He said only wealthy small businesses can afford to relocate in a mall. None of the downtown stores from Marion have yet decided to move to the new mall.

Thomas Gutteridge, dean of the Collage of Business and Administration, said the stores in Marion that did not have a "market niche" may be in big financial

"The smaller stores will probably experience some fallout and some bankruptcy," Gutteridge said.

He said Marion's business center may become as desolate as the dov ntown area in Carbondale.

The once-thriving business hub of Carbondale's downtown area, located at the far end of South Illinois Avenue, is a ghost of its former self.

Chick Vaught, revenue officer for Carbondale, said the University Mall had a definite impact on the downtown area and some small businesses moved from the downtown area into the mall.

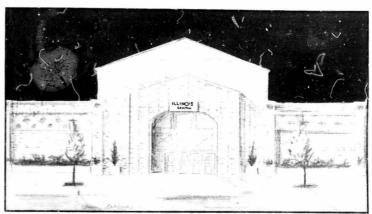

"The mall brought a lot of new stores into Carbondale," Vaught said. "And with that the economic emphasis shifted to the east end of

That shift, however, also brought a 25 percent increase of sales revenue along with it.

Vaught said the mall, however, was not to be blamed entirely for the demise of the downtown area. Because the downtown was a far walk from campus, the area was steadily losing student revenue.

But Carbondale city officials are working to resurrect the downtown

Graphic by Jay Wilson

Artist renedering of the Illinois Centre Mall in Marion that will open in August.

A Downtown Development Plan is in the works to move City Hall, along with city business offices, and possibly a civic center to the downtown area

Vaught said the implemented plan could stimulate a daytime business climate and some stores may move back into the area. He said he did not know whether or not this would, in turn, stimulate additional night business.

And this extra revenue could come in handy for Carbondale when the Marion mall is completed.

While Vaught said sales revenue is up 10.4 percent from this time last year, a court document compiled by city officials revealed that Carbondale could lose about $300,000 a year in sales revenues when the Illinois Centre Mall becomes a reality.
In fact, in 1989 Carbondale

officials initiated a lawsuit against Marion for using tax increment financing incentives to lure businesses away from Carbondale, such as the Sears and Robuck Department store

The lawsuit contended that Marion officials and Antonia Investments, the mall developers, were using the TIF incentives to financially hurt Carbondale.

The lawsuit was thrown out of court in pre-trial hearing in 1990 by Circuit Judge Thomas Haney because he said the lawsuit would incite "intercity warfare." A similar lawsuit, however, filed by Marion businessman J.D. Castellano and niversity Mall officials are getting out their big guns as they prepare to battle against the Illinois Centre Mall.

The University Mall may be losing the Sears and Robuck department store, but it's gaining 90,000 square feet that include a venture and a 12,000 square foot food court.

Debbie Mack, marketing director for the mall soid the $42 million recession of the mall, said the $42 million expansion of the Venture and food court is near completion.

In addition to the expansion, the mall has undergone a complete metamorphosis on the inside and outside, which is completed except for the environmental graphics such as benches and trees inside the mall.

For months, signs asking patrons to "Pardon Our Dust" donned the walkways of the mall as the renovations were taking

But, obviously, the dust and debris didn't bother the consumers.

Mall revenue sales increased 10 percent during the renovations, Mack said.

Although Mack would not comment on what store would replace the Sears store when it leaves in August, former mall manager John Korey said it was possible a Famous-Barr would take its place.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said the city is helping fund the renovations and the expansions, which sport a steep $45 million

He said the city is contributing $8 million from enterprise zone benefits and sales tax

Enterprise zone benefits include waiving property taxes for the first five years and 50 percent of the taxes for the second five years. Hoffner said this will total about $4 million.

The additional $4 million will come from the city's rebate of a portion of sales taxes. Hoffner said he was excited about the new expansions and renovations, but he did have some reservations about the competition between Carbondale and Marion.

Marion mall to bring 110 new stores to area

By Lisa Miller

outhern Illinoisans may be shocked when they enter the Illinois Centre Mall for the first

At least, that's what construction manager John Sudman said he thinks will happen when the mall is scheduled to n in August.

If 20-feet-tall tropical trees and 16-foot palm trees in the mall can be considered shocking, he might be right.

"This mall will surprise a lot of people," Sudman said. "The city of Marion is really going full blast with this project."
Not only will the new mall have towering trees, but the 220,000-square-foot structure also will have marble fountains and 110 stores new to the region including a Dillards, Sears, a Pharmore, a Target and a food court

Sudman said the $65 million dollar mall is 65 percent completed and the workers are presently working on the Construction is moving along on schedule and the entire mall should be completed on schedule, he said.

And keeping revenue in the area is exactly what Marion Mayor Robert Butler hopes the new mall will do.

"We're hoping the new mall will bring lots of new traffic into Marion," Butler

He admits the new mall will increase the competition with the downtown area, but he said he doesn't think the it will drive out any of the small busines

"It's a competitive world," Butler said. "The small businesses will have to stay on

Ray Saathoff, employee of Antonia Investments, the co-developer of the project, said the new mall is strategically located near Interstate 57, the furthest-reaching interstate in Southern Illinois.

Saathoff said he expects a lot of new revenue to come from the Mt. Vernon area as well as towns south of Marion such as Cairo.

He said a lot of revenue goes out of Southern Illinois to shopping malls in St. Louis, Cape Girardeau, Paducah and Evansville, but the new mail will help keep the money in the area.

We believe a lot of business can be recaptured and kept in the Southern Illinois area with the new mall," he said.

The developers also estimate that the new mall will bring in about 3,300 new jobs to the area

Getting the mall to this point has been a struggle, Butler said.

Plagued with lawsuits contending that Marion was illegally using tax increment financing bonds to fund the mall, Marion officials abandoned the TIF financing

Judge Thomas Haney ruled that Marion was using TIF bonds illegally to develop an area that was not blighted.

The TIF Act exists to permit cities to redevelop blighted areas that are deteriorating and will not bounce back economically without tax incentives.

Haney said the Brocking property, where the mall is being built, was prime real estate property that is not blighted and had experienced significant private growth over the past 15 years.

Butler said the developers, Antonia

Investments and the Edward J. De Bariolo Corp., will be financing the project.

GPSC approves tax surcharge resolution

resolution calling permanent reinstatement of a permanent reinstatement of a temporary state income tax surcharge will be sent to constituency groups at SIUC and to state legislators, said Charles Ramsey, GPSC president. The resolution was passed at the Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting Wednesday night. Ramsey, the primary writer of the resolution, said he was very pleased with the vote.

The tax surcharge, which gave funds to public universities, school districts and local governments, provided SIU with $7.8 million in fiscal year 1991.

Ramsey said copies of the resolution will be sent to Undergraduate Studer t Government, the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Council, the Alministrative and Professional Staff Council and the Civil Service

Council and the Civil Service Employee Council.

He said he would talk with SIUC President John C. Guyon later in the week and try to get faculty support for the resolution.

While this may look like an obvious issue, the need for the surphage on state income far in programs are in their third year of use at the school and presently involve 59 students, principal Frank Puttman suid.

"i'm glad he came to see the preschool program," Puttman said. "It's one of the most important areas of working with families and children."

On higher education, Edgar stressed the importance of renewing a temporary income tax surcharge for necessary funding.

"Higher education is still a bargain in Illinois," he id. "I hope we don't see remember tuition increases, but if the surtax is not continued, the 5 percent increase proposed by IBHE will scem

It would take a 25-percent increase in tuition to replace the surcharge tax funds. This translates into a $390 tuition increase on the $1,529 current tuition at SIUC, Hodel said.

Ross Hodel, deputy director of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, said higher education is very dependent on the income tax surcharge.

"Overall $111 million was generated for education by the tax surcharge," Hodel said. "For SIU it means almost $8 million to the Carbondale campus.
"If the surtax is not made permanent there would be a substantial amount of funding that would have to be taken out of the budget. Eight million dollars supports a lot of people," he said.

The income tax surcharge gives tuition levels stability, even though a five-percent increase is expected for the 1991-92 academic year, Hodel said

"I expect tuition would increase even with the surcharge tax, but in small increments at the inflation level or less," he said.

Despite the problems facing higher education, the early signs of the Edgar administration look 'Given the fact he's only been in office one week, his education transition team has been very good," Hodel said. "He's taking education very seriously and making it a priority. The early signs are very positive.

Although Edgar said he was happy at the success of early education programs, he admitted there are problems in education and other state agencies.

The Illinois Department of Children and Family Services has several problems that need more attention instead of more money, he

"We're not going to change the problems overnight. They have developed over several ye s," he said. "More money is not the answer. We need to look at basic policies and start over.

Getting students into the education program and ready to learn in the key to a better education system, Edgar said. "It's terrible to hear of people dropping out of high school, but many don't drop in," he said. "If a child comes to kindergarten already behind it's hard to catch up."

The problem plaguing education in Illinois has been funding, but money is only a factor, not a tee of success, Edgar said.

"The battle will be to keep from losing money for educational funding," he said. "If the surcharge is but made permanent we will see hundreds of millions of dollars lost from education '

"We have to close the gap in education," Edgar said. "Money from the surcharge goes to the poorer school districts. We need the surcharge to help close the gap, but won't happen overnight.

To get education reforms underway, Edgar said state agencies must set examples.

"I cut the budget for the governor's office by 10 percent," he said. "Not all offices can do this, but there are areas where we can cut back spending."

Some of the Egyptians, quoted Thursday in the newspapers Al Ahram and Al Gomhuria, said the Iraqi capital reminded them of pictures of war- ravaged Berlin in the aftermath of World War II.

It's no longer fit for daily life," said Mohammed Dawoud El Mersi. "There is no food or drinking water and the markets are all closed."

The Egyptians said that the allied bombings had successfully wiped most important military buildings and vital governmental installations in the city.

"There was fire and destruction practically everywhere," said Magdi El Shahatt, an Egyptian laborer.

One woman said she awoke in the middle of the night and from the middle of the night and from ther window saw the defense headquarters, television building and studios of Radio Baghdad burning to the ground.

Another Egyptian, Samir Ibrtahim El Dosoukki, said he had heard that many of Saddam Husseins elite Republican Guard had been killed when bombs destroyed the bunkers where many were sleeping.

He also said he had learned from dcam's relatives that a secret, camouflaged runway had been created in the El Jihad district, 5 miles from Baghdad, so the Iraqi leader and his chief deputies could flee the country in the event of Many of the Egyptians recalled vividly the early morning hours of Jan. 17, when U.S.-led allied bombers swooped on the Iraqi capital, taking out military command posts and vital governmental installations. "It was past midnight but Baghdad lit up like daylight," said Sobhi Amin Megally, who was startled awake by the ear-piercing sounds of air raid sirens, followed by the muffled sounds of bombs landing on buildings. "When I got up in the morning I saw some dead bodies lying in the streets and people lined up in front of hospitals."

Megally and other Egyptians said that Iraqi air raid sirens only sounded after the bombing attacks had begun, an indication that the U.S. -led fighter planes had succeeded in paralyzing Iraqi radar during the first assaults.

The returnees, most of whom fled Baghdad shortly after the first allied assaults, said the city's 4 million residents are living under extremely difficult circumstances midst massive aerial attacks by allied hombers.

Ron Emery prevailed.

Haney ruled that Marion officials vere illegally using TIF bonds to develop an area that was deteriorating, as mandated by TIF laws

Pat Curry, field representative for the University's Office of Economic Development, said there are many indications, such as the rising unemployment rate, that the local economy is growing slower and it may be difficult for the small businesses to survive.

"When the new mall gets built, the small merchant will be the first at a competitive disadvantage, Curry said.

But heated competition between the two malls could spell big bargains for consumers. The mall wars could turn into price wars.
"Each mall will be trying to attract the consumers with special bargains, and the prices will inevitably go down," Curry said. "The consumer can only benefit."

while the consumers are benefitting and the small businesses are struggling, the Marion Chamber of Commerce will do everything possible to offset the economical damages of the new mall.

Sam Shelton, president of the chamber, said he didn't know at what the extent of the damage will be, but he wants to help keep it positive for the local merchants. Promotions and additional advertising can help the small businesses.

While most of the clothing store owners in Marion said it is too early to speculate on how drastically the new mall would affect their business, Ruby Murray, owner of Murray's Ladies Apparel, located at 205 E. De Young, said she wasn't too worried about competition from the new mall.

"I'm just going to keep on doing what I'm doing," Murray said.

She said she may increase advertising for her shop, which has been in downtown Marion for more than four years, when the new mall is completed.

Charlotte Cash, owner of Bainbridge Jewelry Co., located at 800 Tower Square Plaza in 'Aarion, said she will not expand her advertising.

"I wish I had a crystal ball I could look into to see what would happen with this new mall," Cash Cash said she did plan to work with other store owners in the downtown area to keep their businesses alive despite the mall.

Cinema students to compete for $3,000 in film

By Sherri Wilcox Staff Writer

SIUC cinema students will compete this weekend for use of $3,000 in 16mm film

Four cinema professors will consider students on the basis of prior performance, film idea, and prior performance, film idea, and reality of budget, said Loren Cocking, cinema and photography faculty member.

SIUC received the $3,000 product grant from the Eastman Kodak Company, "in recognition of academic excellence in the support of the future generation of film makers."

The department, which has won similar Kodak grants for photography for the past fifteen years, is thrilled to be awarded for their achievements in cinematography, said David Gilmore, department

The grant is intended to expand the film-making opportunities of CP students, said David Harney of Kodak awards several grants each year to schools across North America. Las, year, Kodak donated more than $100,000.

"We are happy to make it possible for SIU's film program to extend its reach beyond normally budgeted film production projects," said Joerg D. Agin, vice president and general manager of the Motion Picture and Television Products division of Kodak.

The cinema faculty decided to award a large portion o the materials to selected students for use in projects that they will begin shooting this semester. "We hope to be able to fully fund raw materials for several films over the next few semesters," said Cocking

AIDS now No. 2 killer of younger U.S. men

ATLANTA (UPI) which has killed more than 100,000 Americans since the first cases were reported in 1981, has become the second leading killer of young U.S. men, federal health officials

In 1988, AIDS was the third leading cause of death among men ages 25 to 44 and by 1989, the disease had become the second leading cause of death for that age group, surpassing heart disease, cancer, spicide and homicide, officials said.

"Unintentional injuries," which include homicides, remained the leading cause of death for that age group in 1989, the last year for which figures were available.

"The (AIDS) epidemic is really taking a toll now," said Dr. Ruth Berkelman, chief of AIDS surveillance of the federal Centers for Disease Control. She reported the new statistics in the CDC's Morbidity and Mortality Weekly

The ailment also was taking an increasing toll among women, who were largely spared the brunt of the disease in the first years of the

By 1988, AIDS and other infections caused by the AIDScausing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, ranked eighth among causes of death of women ages 25 to 44, the CDC said.

Overall in 1989, AIDS accounted for 10 percent of all young adult deaths.

giving up the joys of being a college senior made the decision difficult. He plans to return to Notre Dame to earn his degree.

"I would like to thank everyone who supported me through this ordeal," Ismail said.

"It was really rough. This decision was not made overnight. It has been really trying. I feel like I lost 50 pounds.

Track teams compete in meets across states

The SIUC men's and women's track and field teams are dividing up this weekend to compete in three invitationals across three Eleven members of the men's team will compare today and Saturday in the East Tennessee State Invitational while the rest of the team will compete today in the Eastern Illinois Invitational.

The women's team is heading Jonesboro, Ark. for the Arkansas State Relay meet Saturday. Men's coach

Bill Come 1 said the invitational at East Tennessee State w'il feature some of the best track and field athletes in the country. This is a very prestigious meet as a lot of the best athletes will be participating," Cornell said. "Very high standards must be met to be accepted in this meet.'

Cornell is anticipating exceptional performances from sophomore high jumper Darrin Plab and junior hardler Ea

Williams.
Last Saturday at the Saluki Invitational Williams ran the second fastest time in SIUC history in the 55-meter hurdles with a time of 7.30. Plab has been practicing hard to better his NCAA qualifying jump of 7-61/2.

Darrin will be competing against some of the best in the United States," Cornell said, "He will be competing against club athletes as well as collegiate performers

Women's coach Don DeNoon said he put together different combinations of immers so all members can gain experience at the

"I think we'll fare pretty we'll in the meet," DeNoon said. "We're going to attempt to compete in all

"Since the meet focuses mainly on relay races and has fewer individual events, we put some of our better people together in com ations to run some of the relay, but you can't run all the best

The concept of team unity as a goal is difficult to contemplate.

"As long as we don't have any problems, that's all I care about," said New York's Mark Collins and Lawrence Taylor, Carl Banks, Parcells ..

The Bills' history is welldocumented: receivers Chris Burkett and Ronnie Harmon outraged Bills quarterback Jim Kelly with dropped passes. Kelly, in turn, alienated his receivers.

Burkett was traded and Harmon was left unprotected. In between those exits, Kelly injured a shoulder last year and blamed tackle Howard Ballard for missing a block. (Ballard is still a Bills

They were soon nicknamed the Bickering Bills.

Imagine the Giants' equivalent: Phil Simms blaming Mark Bavaro for dropping a pass and Jumbo Elliott for missing a block? Ottis Anderson publicizing it? Lawrence Taylor resented? Ludicrous.

Witness the Giants linebackers three days before the game making a homemade Super Bowl Week video—"Independent Players Network."

The Bills' low point came in the first round of the 1989 playoffs with a loss to Cleveland in which Harmon dropped a pass with eight seconds left. The turning point came when the Buffalo players left holding hands.

You put your differences aside when you walk out on the field and that's what we did this year," Bills All-Pro defensive end Bruce Smith

They also put the ball in the end zone more than any team in football, and that's all the Giants care about.

"Kelly's got a great rapport offensively with his players,"
Taylor said.

So the Bills' high-strung so the Bills linguisting talent refined their edges and sharpened their skills. The unflappable Giants added a deeper secondary, big-play receivers and
