Tearful remembrances mark memorial service

Candle light service held to honor memory of SIUC Aviation major

BRETT NAUMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The memorable moments among friends will never be the same for Matt Mitroff, Michael Allen, Corey Givney and all of the 60 people that gathered behind Warren Hall Monday night to mourn the death of Ean Aranza.

"Wednesday nights," a group of friends said in unison as their favorite time of the week with Aranza, a junior in aviation technology from the north side of Chicago.

Aranza died on Jan. 21 at Union Station in Chicago. His mother was dropping him off for his return train trip to SIUC. According to friends, Aranza's mother said he slumped over in the car, dying instantly. An autopsy was performed, but the cause of death is still unknown.

The mood was somber as people attempted to hold back their tears. Jason McArthur, an undecided sophomore with cerebral palsy, struggled to frame his words about Aranza, who he characterized as a good friend.

"People would make fun of Ean for sitting by me at lunch," McArthur said. "He told me that he didn't care what they thought."

As McArthur delivered these words the majority of the crowd lost control of their emotions, as tears began to flow freely.

Mitroff, Allen and Givney used to go out Wednesday nights with Aranza to Pinch Penny Pub where they would enjoy each other's company and play volleyball. The four SIUC students were a close-knit group.

The friends spent a lot of their spare time together. Allen said Aranza was like Ferris Bueller. He said they would always goof-off together.

"He used to hit golf balls into Thompson Lake," said Allen, an undecided sophomore from St. Peter.

Aranza, the fun-loving friend, was not above studying and received high marks in his classes. Robert Sanders, an instructor in aviation technologies, was impressed with Aranza's abilities and potential.

"He was a very good student," Sanders said. "He would have been a fine addition to the aviation industry."

At the memorial people formed a circle where scriptures were read and people fondly remembered the qualities of Aranza's character. One student lightly strummed the strings of a guitar as a lull drifted through the crowd of mourners.

As those in attendance spoke about Aranza everyone consistently said he was the type of guy who would befriend anyone. He remembered everyone's name and always said hello to people on campus and in his residence hall. He would always reach out to those he did not know and was described as a loyal friend.

Mitroff, a sophomore in economics and speech communication from Wheaton, expressed what many at the memorial tried to convey.

"Ean had a heart of gold," Mitroff said.

Tuition hike at U of I

Illini rise in cost may affect SIUC enrollment

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Recent University of Illinois tuition increases may affect SIUC, but to what extent remains to be seen.

The University of Illinois Board of Trustees raised tuition prices in a board decision on Jan. 18.

The plan increases tuition by 3 percent on the Chicago campus, 4 percent at Springfield and 5 percent at Urbana-Champaign. It also charges new students an extra $500 during their first year and $500 more their second year.

Although the increase is severe, it may not bring higher enrollment numbers for SIUC, according to University officials.

Walker Allen, director of Admissions and Records, said while price-sensitive individuals may choose Carbondale, it does not always work that way.

"For some people what you pay represents the quality, though that's not always true," he said.

Allen also said it is difficult to second-guess the situation before numbers start to change.

"We do know that SIUC is a great value for our students," he said, adding that the school's officials cannot afford everything they want to fix on campus.

dollar," Bost said.

With the cost of textbooks on the rise, the money is not going to burn a hole in students' pockets. Cal Wolff, manager of Saluki Bookstore, 701 E. Grand Ave., said students spend an average of $300 to $350 per semester.

"There was one book that the publisher increased the price $10 from one semester to another," Wolff said.

If the bill passes, it will help save students money but would probably not increase the number of textbook sales since most students just buy the minimum required for class,

Buying textbooks is a strain on LaTashia Sidener's pocketbook, but possible legislation may give her a little more money for more important college essentials — like groceries.

"It's because books cost a lot of money, and then you are always stuck with books you can't do anything with," said Sidener, a sophomore in health care management from Peoria.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, introduced a bill into legislation Jan. 10 that would eliminate the state's 5 percent of the total 6.25 percent tax rate on textbooks.

"It will save students five cents to every Wolff said.

According to a study done by Monument Information Resources, the average price of college textbooks is $68.15 new and $50.55 used.

"I think it will help — every little bit helps — but it is not a big dramatic thing," Wolff said.

If the bill is passed, a student that spends $300 on textbooks will save $15.

Bost said although textbooks generate a lot of state money from sales tax, he does not foresee the lost revenue causing the state financial problems. After the bill has been in place for a certain amount of time the fiscal impact will be studied statewide.

"It is minimal in encouraging students to get an education," Bost said.

Randy Johnson, manager of 710 Bookstore, 701 S. Illinois Ave., is concerned that the bill could cause more paperwork for the store, which could cause an added cost to students.

"More expenses would offset the game," Johnson said.

However, if the bill was written in such a way that it did not create more paperwork for the stores and saved students money, Johnson said he would support it. "I would not necessarily be against it, but I will hold reservation until I see how the bill is written," Johnson said.

Quina Donald, a freshman in secondary education from Chicago, said the money the bill would save her is not enough to make an impact. Donald's main source of income is part-time work at McDonald's in the Student Center, financial aid and her sister who helps pay for her textbooks.

"A little $15 won't make much difference to my sister," Donald said.

Sheila Edwards, assistant general merchandise manager for University Bookstore in the Student Center, said she would be supportive of cutting state's sales tax on textbooks as long as it did not advert the store's goal of serving students quickly during the busy book-buying season.

"Our goal is to have no lines in stores and I would be against it only if it caused turmoil at the checkout line," Edwards said.

ILLINI

According to Steve Rugg, associate vice president for planning and budgeting at UIUC, the price hike was necessary to continue quality and enhancement of university programs.

"Higher education in Illinois in general has had some good budgeting from the state, but the state has some needs outside higher education," Rugg said. "The increase is] to supplement what the state has been able to do."

Interim Chancellor John Jackson said because the University of Illinois was already well ahead of SIUC in tuition cost, the "gap will be even larger" with this new increase.

Jackson said the U of I's increase is necessary to rebuild their programs and SIUC will consider such a raise, although not quite as large.

The possible increase will be discussed at a spring Board of Trustees meeting.

The University of Illinois may also increase room and board and fees at the three campuses, by 4.5 percent and 4.9 percent respectively. That proposal will be decided at a March board meeting.

U of I increases will be used for staff raises, utility costs and general costs as well as more faculty members, more classes, an expanded library and computer software upgrades.

MCMA dean search heats up

Upcoming meeting may narrow list of candidates

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The search for the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts dean is progressing as candidates are being reviewed by the professors in the college.

The search committee will meet Wednesday to discuss the comments made by the departments, but no certain outcome can be determined at this point, according to Lyle White, chairman of the search committee.

"We've looked at the candidates and put some forth to the college for review," White said. "I'm not sure what the outcome of Wednesday's meeting will be."

"The sentiment on campus is to let external people come in with new ideas and I want to let my college be able to do that," she said.

The search began one year ago when former Dean Joe Foote stepped down. But the search was put on hiatus after two of the three finalists withdrew. The search was restarted last October and the position start date is July 1.

The search committee is made up of staff, alumni, constituency groups and representatives from the College's academic and service units.

Murphysboro police peacefully end standoff

Man brandishes gun, causes lengthy standoff

BRETT NAUMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Murphysboro Police Department successfully ended a three-hour standoff after a man barricaded himself in his house Sunday morning.

Daniel Kimmel, 26, fled into his house after police responded to reports of a domestic dispute in the 600 block of North 16th Street. A press release issued by the Murphysboro Police Department said Kimmel returned from the house with a gun causing officers to secure the area and initiate telephone contact with him.

After three hours of negotiation Kimmel peacefully surrendered. He was taken into custody and charged with domestic battery, unlawful restraint, unlawful use of weapons, resisting arrest and armed violence.

Kimmel was taken to Jackson County Jail after the standoff ended. Monday afternoon Kimmel appeared before Jackson County Judge David Watt. Watt set Kimmel's preliminary hearing for 9 a.m.

Feb. 21 and set his bond for a $1,000.

Illinois State Police and the Jackson County Sheriff's Department assisted the Murphysboro Police Department in successfully ending the standoff.

Master Sgt. Jeff Wittenborn of the Illinois State Police said he mainly assisted with backup of Murphysboro Police. He said his agency mainly kept onlookers out of the perimeter of Kimmel's home and handled regular patrol functions of the Murphysboro Police Department.

"We didn't really have an active role with the negotiation process," Wittenborn said.

Referendum challenged by student government

Courts could decide referendum battle

MARK LAMBIRO
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A three-member election board will hear objections to having two conflicting referendums on the April 3 municipality ballot today.

The objection was filed by student government officials Ed Ford and Rob Taylor last Tuesday. They are objecting on the grounds that the two referendums, regarding the ward system, contradict each other.

At the meeting the election board, which is composed of City Clerk Janet Vaught, Mayor Neil Dillard and Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan, will be discussing the process they must go through to resolve this issue. After the issue is cleared with the election board one or both of the referendums will appear on the April 3 ballot.

"We will be adopting rules of procedure that will set a time table for the next meeting," Vaught said.

The next meeting will give both parties a chance to have a written brief prepared and build their case. The meeting will be late this week or early next week, Vaught said.

Ford and Taylor filed the first referendum in December asking for the city to be divided into a ward system that would separate the community into four wards, which would each have a City Council representative.

The objection was to another referendum that was filed early this month that would also separate the city into four wards; however, it would also elect two members at large from the city.

Taylor also said the referendum he offered gives equal representation that the other referendum does not offer.

Taylor also raised the question of the fairness of the election board. He cited a potential conflict of interest with Flanagan, because she is running for re-election to the City Council and the referendum could affect her election, Taylor said.

Taylor said by having both referendums on the ballot there is a likelihood both referendums will pass. If this happens it would be left to the State board of election official Pat Freeman said if this happens it would be a first in the state.

Sexual Assault: How Preparation Could Stop An Attack.

Early last week, a Carbondale man was arrested after allegedly attempting to sexually assault a 23-year-old woman at 3 p.m. in a bathroom. While it is easy to wince in disgust at those type of incidents, it is also easy to think, "That would never happen to me."

The reality is that sexual assaults happen all the time. A Justice Department report released Friday estimates that 350 rapes occur each year on campuses where 10,000 or more women are enrolled. While 350 rapes may seem like a lot, it is estimated that only 1 in 10 rapes are even reported to the police.

With statistics like that, the reasons to take a self-defense course become increasingly clear. The SIUC police are making it easy by offering a four-week course in which two police officers who are trained in the Rape Aggression Defense System will teach women risk awareness and hands-on defense techniques.

The SIUC police officers who will conduct the course obviously take the safety of women on campus seriously. We congratulate the SIUC police and the Department of Public Safety and University Housing for showing how very important it is to be prepared for a possible sexual assault. We hope that the women on campus will reciprocate and take advantage of the opportunity. Registration is limited, but these initial classes must be filled. If demand is high enough, the class can be offered again later this spring and in subsequent semesters.

Every woman on this campus should be prepared to defend herself against a potential attacker. It can happen anytime, anywhere and to anyone. You may think to yourself, "I don't walk in dark alleys by myself" or "I don't jog on isolated paths in the morning." But statistics show that anywhere from 60 to 80 percent of sexual assaults occur in the perpetrator or victim's living quarters. What that means is that you are more likely to be sexually assaulted by the guy you invited in for coffee after your first date than a psychopath you meet in an alley. Of the 37 sexual assaults reported in Carbondale last year, 32 of the victims knew the offender.

Do not be naive and risk the chance of being the victim of a sexual assault. No one plans to be a victim. But if you're armed with self-defense skills, you are more likely to ward off an attacker—whether in an alley or in your living room.

Dennis Franz article gave SIUC much needed image boost

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to publicly acknowledge a member of the SIUC staff for doing a great service to all of us in the University community. He gave our image the needed boost about which we have all been talking. Greg Scott, with the SIUC Alumni Association, was the author of the recent Southern Alumni magazine's cover story on Dennis Franz. Franz is a four-time Emmy award winner for his role on the hit TV series, NYPD Blue and an alumnus of SIUC. Scott worked tenaciously for nearly a year and a half to get the interview with Franz. The issue went to over 160,000 alumni who are undoubtedly bursting with pride for their alma mater after reading Greg's story. Thank you, Greg, for reminding us that we have a great University and produce great graduates who perform at the top of their field.

The Super Bowl. These three words are enough to bring otherwise stoic men to their knees in genuflection. It is the culmination of an entire season's worth of Sundays spent in front of the TV, poring over statistics and following one's favorite team as it heads toward the Big Game. Men, who would normally not show the slightest emotion, break down in tears should a ball be dropped in the end zone. So, in the name of all that is testosterone-fueled, what happened this year?

Like many of us saddled with the burden of an XY chromosome, I gathered all the supplies necessary to facilitate true enjoyment of the game; beer, food, more beer, more food and finally, more beer. I placed my bounty within arm's length, and sweatpants were employed to accommodate the expansion of my already sizable girth, as well as easier execution of the Al Bundy-hand-in-the-pants maneuver. Depends were considered to reduce trips to the restroom, and therefore, away from the screen. To my wife's great relief, the Depends plan was scuttled.

So there I was, suitably prepared to revel in the single greatest sports event of the year. And then it started.

"The national anthem will be performed by ... The Backstreet Boys."

The Backstreet Boys?!?! Is this a gag? Some sort of Ben Stiller-directed farce? But it was them, BSB, in all their fey and foppish glory. That they weren't even audible most of the time was a relief, but still the insult to Football

My hopes were dashed and a new level of Dante's Inferno reached when N'Sync appeared. I just about said "Bye, Bye, Bye" to my dinner as the boy band (one of who just turned 30) started its act. The pairing of them with Aerosmith seemed like something out of South Park, a combination so ludicrous it had to be a joke. But it was all too frighteningly real.

When Britney Spears then appeared, I looked outside to make sure that the swarms of locusts I feared were on their way had not arrived yet.

What's on tap for next year? Mary Kate and Ashley with Black Sabbath? Or Hanson and the Rolling Stones?

Donations give SIU means to study tumors

BRENDA CORLEY
DAILY EGYPTIAN

A donation of equipment to SIUC worth $354,000 should give radiation therapy students a boost in their futures.

The Applied Sciences and Arts Building now has two 3-D Focus Treatment Planning Systems online, donated by Computerized Medical Systems Inc., a company in St. Louis.

The system will help radiation therapy students to better locate tumors, allowing them to deliver the right amount of radiation, leaving the patient with a higher cure rate.

The new system may also cut in half the time the patient is on the simulation table.

Steven Jenson, program director of radiological sciences, said the equipment will have radiation therapy students well trained by the time they graduate.

"It is an amazing set of software that will give the students training that is usually only at actual clinics and not the classrooms," he said.

The software uses the age, sex and size of the patient to determine how much radiation the patient needs.

This is the first time Computerized Medical Systems Inc. has donated to SIUC's Applied Sciences and Arts. Jenson believes it is because of the ties Scott Collins, an instructor in health care professions, has with the company.

"Collins performed in a long-term continuing education program at the company about two years ago," Jenson said. "He established a good relationship with them since that time, leaving SIUC in good standing with the company."

Mark Mayhew, a junior in radiation therapy from Carterville, looks forward to using the new technology.

"It's good that we will get quality training that a lot of people don't receive until they are already in the field," he said. "With the advanced technology, we will better represent the radiation program when we get out there."

Guy cheerleaders help raise spirits from sidelines

KELLY DAVENPORT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

You won't find poms or permsmiles among the boys of SIUC's cheerleading squad. And you think cheering is just for wimpy girls? Tell that to these guys as they hoist their counterparts overhead one-handed, toss them two stories up and catch them in cradling arms. All with the skill and precision of Marines.

And please don't ask them where they keep their skirts.

On Saturday, the Saluki squad — six men, nine women — hooted chants from the sidelines during SIUC's basketball game against Drake and tumbled into center court to form human high-rises with names like Liberties and Kewpics.

It's the guys who give this squad its edge, says captain Kelly Garman, a senior in commercial recreation from Charleston.

"They make it more athletic," she says. "Not just stupid little high school cheer stuff."

Practices four times a week for almost three hours keep the guys buff. And it takes up to a year to learn the special hand holds and lifting techniques.

As coach Nancy Esling points out, "it's not just some inanimate object up there." In fact, the girls range in weight from about 100 to 125 pounds.

And though the guys' athletic prowess makes the squad's stunts high-flying, they still field jeers from the stands.

When Roger Bernard's guy friends discovered his new job as a cheerleader, they plopped right down in the front row to catcall and poke fun.

"My sisters said, 'You're a little girl,'" remembers Bernard, a senior in biological sciences with an easy smile. But now the Chicago native accepts his role as male cheerleader, preferring it to his short-lived days on SIUC's football team.

"I think the fans are jealous," he says. "We're right down here on the court."

When assistant coach Robert Walker was teased about cheerleading in junior college, he'd retort, "I touch more T & A in one day than you guys get with your girlfriends in one week."

For Mark Wojciechowski, a senior in advertising, cheering's appeal comes from the vicarious rush of a slam dunk play.

"Say someone dunks and you jump up and the crowd stays on its feet — it makes you feel good," says the Lansing native, who joined the squad after a brief stint as a Saluki mascot. "Like you're not losing your voice for nothing."

Wojciechowski and girlfriend Garman know the sacrifices cheering brings — sore shoulders, pulled muscles, wrenched wrists. And after the games, the squad partners bring quarrels home.

"We have those thunderstorm days where we can't hit our stunts," he says. "That's the bad part of cheering."

But the family atmosphere and the trust the acrobatic cheerleaders share keeps them coming back to the court.

Greek Life: The final conflict

STACEY ROBINSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

They make up 6 percent of SIUC's population, but we see them everywhere, in the mall, in our classes, strolling at parties and strutting around campus with bold letters on their clothes. They are greeks.

This week is the beginning of campus-wide greek informationals on the SIUC campus, and interested students are encouraged to take part in learning about greek life and involvement.

But if you believe that deciding to go greek is an invitation to great hook-ups; a social life, popularity, free parties, friends you never knew you had and the right to wear cool gear with greek symbols, then many fraternities and sororities would try to convince you otherwise.

There are perks to joining the greek system, but that's not all there is to greek involvement. Greek members will tell you that there are many advantages and opportunities to becoming apart of the greek system.

The greek letter organization and members are named such because they were founded at a time when the collegiate greek society was the epitome of civilized life.

This so-called civilized life has grown successfully on many college campuses, and many students consider joining a greek organization at the beginning of their college careers, and some even earlier.

Jamal Brimage, a sophomore in visual communications from Chicago and member of Kappa Alpha Psi, said most of his mentors, teachers, and coaches in high school were part of a greek organization.

During his freshman year, Brimage decided to become a part of the greek system by participating in various events, researching and socializing with members of his fraternity.

"I had my mind set on going greek," Brimage said. "For short-term and long-term advantages."

The advantages that most greeks will speak of are leadership and networking skills, community service, brotherhood and sisterhood as well as the standards set by their individual organizations.

Each person becomes greek based on their own reasons. For some it is who they can relate to, some join as a tradition to carry on the legacy of family members who were greek, others see something unique in a particular chapter. Whatever the reason for joining, each person will make a life-long commitment to their particular fraternity or sorority.

Alice Van Slyke, a sophomore in university studies from Chicago and member of Delta Xi Phi, said the most influential reason she joined her sorority was because they were a multi-cultural sorority.

"You don't see too many greek organizations that have more than one ethnic background," Van Slyke said. "We promote multi-culturalism and invite anyone regardless of their cultural background."

Before Brimage and Van Slyke became apart of fraternity and sorority life they said they did their research and attended greek informationals. Resources like pamphlets, greek websites and greek sponsored events are good places to start, though the routine for getting information is not practiced by everyone.

Students like Marty Obst, member of Beta Theta Pi and president of Inter-Greek Council, said he found out about his fraternity by word of mouth, no research was involved.

"Most students join an organization because they identify with a group of people," Obst said.

Obst believes students would also benefit from learning time management skills, better study habits, leadership opportunities and meeting people.

Kelly Taylor's mother was a member of Sigma Kappa sorority. Taylor, a junior in speech communication from Springfield, had the opportunity to carry on the legacy but said she was not influenced by her mother's choice. Taylor, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, said each sorority and chapter is different on every campus.

Taylor said being in the greek system help her and her mother to balance numerous tasks, along with school, work and social activities. She also learned responsibility, organization and to communicate better, especially living in a house with 47 members.

"Being greek taught me everything school didn't about life," Taylor said.

The way greeks are perceived on the SIUC campus varies with different organizations.

The type of person you are effects the type of attention you get as a member of an organization, and members say that being greek does not always guarantee instant popularity. Fraternity and sorority chapters and members often receive different treatment from people, most of the time in a positive way.

Taylor said the greek system is powerful in some aspects and weak in others, as far as media representation and the misconceptions that non-greeks have. She recommends that students give the system a chance and get to understand it better.

Obst said that while they are still being plagued by stereotypes and negative perceptions like drinking and partying, the greek system on campus is improving.

Leadership, scholarship, community service and involvement are things cherished by greek members. Potential members are advised to check resources and get to know the greek system.

Greek community service

Initializing new projects and continuing in tradition

MARLEEN TROUTT
DAILY EGYPTIAN

As a young girl growing up in Guatemala, Sandra Soco personally experienced the trauma natural disasters inflict on Latin-American countries.

This is why Soco, president of Sigma Lambda Gamma sorority, organized relief for the masses who lost homes and families to the El Salvador earthquake last week.

"My family went through an earthquake in Guatemala, and I know it's really hard for people in poor countries to get back on their feet," Soco said. "This is something important for me because it relates to me, my culture and my country."

Students from several fraternities and sororities will be outside of Faner Hall today and Wednesday raising contributions for the Red Cross to aid victims of the disaster. President of the Inter-Greek Council Marty Obst is proud of the ongoing efforts made by the fraternities and sororities at SIUC and is excited about the new programs launching this semester.

"Community service is the best thing about the greek system," Obst said. "We do well over half of the Saluki Volunteer Core's community service hours with 24 greek organizations which is impressive."

The greeks will continue to participate in programs that have become traditions like Habitat for Humanity. They will become "Big Brothers" and "Big Sisters" and expand their role in Red Cross blood drives.

"It's pretty amazing how much blood is needed," Obst said. "When we get all the greeks behind it, we can get the word out to students better than some organizations because we're here on campus."

This fall will mark the third time greek participants in the "Book In Every Home" project. They raise money to buy new books and scatter book drops throughout the community to provide reading opportunities to Headstart children who can not afford to buy books.

Nancy Jackson, wife of interim Chancellor John Jackson, has worked with fraternities and sororities during her husband's stint as interim chancellor to ensure that less-privileged area children receive books.

"I know how important it is for Headstart students to have their own books, be able to take them home and read them over and over," said Jackson, who helped first-graders overcome reading difficulties while a school teacher. "I see [fraternities and sororities] working hard everywhere on a lot of different projects but they were super help on this project."

Obst believes "Book In Every Home" is particularly important so all children share in equal education.

"Reading has proven to be key in development," Obst said. "Who better than college students to help kids get started reading early on?"

Since community service is one of the principles of greek life we really encourage each other to help one another.

SANDRA SOCO
president, Sigma Lambda Gamma

Besides working together as a whole on bigger issues, each sorority and fraternity concentrates on separate philanthropic goals. Beta Theta Pi regularly helps clean up Southern Illinois. The Delta Zeta Charity Golf Tournament benefits local blind students. Soco's sorority and its brother fraternity Sigma Lambda Beta help tutor the migrant community, bridging the organizations' Latin roots.

"Since community service is one of the principles of greek life we really encourage each other to help one another," Soco said of volunteering at the migrant camps, which lead to her current job as a teaching assistant there. "It's a good feeling to know you're helping."

Week long campus blood drive

SARAH ROBERTS
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The nation may be experiencing a shortage in blood donations, but SIUC students are doing their part to provide relief, according to American Red Cross coordinators.

Carolyn Brune, a registered nurse with the Blood Collection Services division of the Red Cross, said the week-long campus blood drive has allowed the service to meet its goals for daily donations.

Smaller five-hour drives are taking place in various buildings on campus and generally attract 30 to 40 students each day. The final blood drive of the week will take place at the Recreation Center for more than nine hours and has a goal of at least 400 student donations.

The blood drives, which Brune estimates have been a campus fixture for more than 10 years, are sponsored by a variety of organizations and generally make a campus appearance each semester to pull in students, who make up about 25 percent of all donors.

"It's a really good environment here on campus because we can provide more attention to the students," Brune said.

The actual donation process takes about half an hour, and giving blood itself only lasts five to 10 minutes.

A potential donor is asked to fill out a registration form concerning basic health and lifestyle information.

A mini-physical follows, consisting of blood pressure, pulse and temperature exams. The body will replace the lost plasma within hours and the cells within a few weeks.

Following donation, blood is sent from the University to the Lindell Center in St. Louis where it is processed and screened for viruses as part of a blood safety study.

The blood is then sent to local hospitals in Southern Illinois and southeast Missouri where it serves cancer patients, accident victims and those suffering from blood disorders among others.

Brandi Hovorka, a junior in forestry from Rockford, said she donates blood every few months to help alleviate the shortage and because donating holds personal significance to her.

"My boyfriend was in a car accident a few years ago and was in a coma and needed blood donations," Hovorka said. "I think that has influenced me to donate blood, knowing that it can really help out in emergency situations."

• THE NEXT AMERICAN RED CROSS BLOOD DRIVES WILL BE FROM 11 A.M. TO 4 P.M. TODAY IN THE STUDENT CENTER AND FROM 11:30 A.M. TO 8:30 P.M. THURSDAY IN THE RECREATION CENTER. FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT VIVIAN UGENT AT 457-5258.

Teaching methods of the future

SIUC professors receive summer fellowships to improve teaching

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN

When Susan Fellemán saw one of her fellow cinema and photography professors carrying a huge stack of video tapes to class, she knew there had to be an easier way.

Fellemán and Jyotsna Kapur, assistant professors in cinema and photography, came up with the idea for an improved way to show movie clips to their classes. To make their dream a reality, they applied for a summer fellowship. The fellowship will give them the necessary means to make their jobs easier.

"It's not the first time it occurred to us that we had a problem and we knew we had to fix it," Kapur said.

Fellemán said their job is made difficult because they have to use different video tapes to give examples in class. However, their plan calls for the use of digital video clips to make a smoother transition from example to example and save some time in the process.

"All that time it takes cueing up, we can use it otherwise," Fellemán said. "It would give us an extra 45 to 50 minutes."

Fellemán and Kapur share the summer fellowships with Michael Batterman, instructor in the School of Art and Design; Daniel Dyer, assistant professor in the Department of Chemistry and Biochemistry; Regina Foley, associate professor in the Department of Educational Psychology and Special Education; Melinda LaGare, assistant professor in the Department of Architecture and Interior Design; and Raymond Wacker, associate professor in the School of Accountancy.

Other projects include LaGare's classes moving to Power Point presentations and adding a website. Foley will also add a website to her class with class-related bulletin boards and chat rooms.

The teachers will work on their ideas during the summer and bring them to life next fall. However, some of the professors like Foley can hardly wait until that time.

"I'm excited," Foley said.

Double homicide at Dartmouth

MARK BUBRISKI
THE DARTMOUTH (DARTMOUTH COLLEGE)

HANOVER, N.H. (U-WIRE) — News of the murders of two Dartmouth College professors sent shock waves through the College and the local community as law enforcement officials continued their investigation, releasing few details about the tragedy.

Autopsies performed Sunday by the state's chief medical examiner on the bodies of Susanne and Half Zantop confirmed homicide as the cause of death, New Hampshire Attorney General Philip McLaughlin said.

In a 4 p.m. news conference held Sunday at the Hanover police station, McLaughlin said the state currently has no one in custody, and he would not comment on any possible motives for the murders.

McLaughlin also declined to comment on any details of the homicides or how the bodies were found for fear of compromising the ongoing investigation, which is being led by the state police's major crimes unit.

McLaughlin said the person who found the bodies had a "perfectly good reason" to be at the Zantop residence, but would not identify that person. The police were alerted of the deaths by 6:48 p.m., according to the attorney general.

Three independent sources confirmed for The Dartmouth that the bodies were discovered Saturday around 6 p.m. by Roxana Verona, an associate professor of French and Italian languages and close friend of the deceased. Verona said that she had been invited to the house for dinner.

Verona herself confirmed for The Dartmouth that she was the first to find the Zantops. She declined to comment on what she saw because she said the police told her it could compromise the investigation.

This is the first murder in Hanover in almost a decade, and only the second in more than 50 years. McLaughlin assured local residents and friends of the Zantops present at the conference that the investigation was in "experienced" hands.

McLaughlin declined to say whether the Zantops were targeted or were victims of random violence. McLaughlin said that at this time he had no basis for alerting the public to possible risk, but he added he could not rule out the possibility of potential danger.

"At the present time, we simply do not have specific information," McLaughlin said. Officials will inform the community if a risk is determined, he said.

After the news conference, Hanover Police Chief Nick Giaccone told The Dartmouth that he could not say whether students were involved in the homicides or the investigation.

CHEERLEADERS

Greg Settle missed the camaraderie of high school sports and joined the squad on a bet from his cheerleader roommate who thought he was too scrawny to stunt.

Four years later, the straightforward senior in University Studies is the guys' captain — and his roommate hung up his megaphone long ago. But Settle still finds athletic fulfillment with cheering.

"I could shower with a bunch of nasty, sweaty guys," says the Malakanda resident. "Or I could hang out with a bunch of good-looking girls."

Besides the scenery, the guys say cheerleading's natural high keeps them motivated.

"It's like we're playing on the court, too," Berna'd says simply.

And to these guys, gender doesn't matter when the Salukis race out on the floor. Esling knows those human pyramids would crumble without broad shoulders beneath.

"The guys add that kind of attitude," she says. "Without cheerleaders, a basketball game would be pretty dull — you'd just hear the ball on the court and the squeaks of players' shoes. And that's no fun for anybody."

Oklahoma University's Raymond shoots down Nebraska

BRIAN CHRISTOPHERSON
DAILY NEBRASKA (U. NEBRASKA)

LINCOLN, Neb. (U-WIRE) - Oklahoma junior guard J.R. Raymond posed behind the three-point line, broad smile on his face, shooting hand extended to the basket.

He wanted Nebraska players to see the picture-perfect stroke that was killing them in pause mode.

"All day long," he mouthed to dependent Nebraska senior guard Cookie Belcher after one of his three-point bombs.

Maybe not all day long, but for the first half of Oklahoma's 77-66 win over Nebraska on Saturday, Raymond was the difference-maker and deserving of some post-shot gloating.

The OU guard knocked home 20 of his game-high 25 points in the first half. He scored 18 of those points from behind the arc, hitting six of eight shots from behind the three-point line.

"For the first time in a long time, I finally played the way I'm capable of playing," Raymond said. "I felt like everything I put up was going in."

Raymond has been especially hot of late, upping a 8.2 scoring average with hot shooting, scoring 25, 21 and 25 points in his last three games against Kansas State, Texas and Nebraska, respectively.

And oddly enough, Raymond's scoring success has unexplainably come after moving from shooting guard to the usually low-scoring position of point guard.

"I like to be at the point, so that I can be in control of the offense," Raymond said. "I'm looking for my shot when I throw it inside. I know he's going to kick it out to me, and I am out there licking my chops."

OU's inside-outside offense proved too much for Nebraska early, with Raymond's shooting and junior forward Aaron McGhee's dominance giving the Sooners an insurmountable 16-point lead at intermission.

Raymond was not able to duplicate his first half performance in the second stanza, scoring only five points from the free-throw line to ice the game.

"It wasn't what J.R. wasn't doing. You can't expect him to do the same thing in the second half," Oklahoma coach Kelvin Sampson said. "He had one of those first halves that you dream about."

For the first time in a long time, I finally played the way I'm capable of playing. I felt like everything I put up was going in.

J.R. RAYMOND
junior guard, University of Nebraska

Record crowd sees 'Bama edge Auburn

NICK PARSONS
THE CRIMSON WHITE
(U. ALABAMA)

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (U-WIRE) - The stage was set for a thrilling finish inside Coleman Coliseum.

No. 15 Alabama (16-3, 5-2 SEC) trailed cross-state rival Auburn (12-8, 2-5) 80-79 with under a minute to play in the game.

After a foul by Auburn's Marquis Daniels, Bama had 16.4 seconds to score. Rod Grizzard took an unattractive three-pointer that fell into the hands of Bama forward Erwin Dudley.

Auburn's Abdou Diame fouled Dudley, sending him to the line shooting two. Dudley hit the first trying the score, after which Auburn coach Cliff Ellis called a timeout. Dudley hit the second free throw, and Bama led 81-80 with 7.5 seconds left in the game.

Auburn's Jamison Brewer drove the length of the court, but missed the game-winning lay-up. Bama walked away with the one-point win in front of a record crowd of 15,316, the largest crowd to ever see a basketball game on campus in the state of Alabama.

"The crowd plays a big part in our team," Grizzard said. "They can give you some adrenaline to get through the game."

Alabama was able to grab key rebounds that allowed them to keep getting chances, including three on its final possession to get the win.

"What it really boils down to for us is that there were too many offensive rebounds (by Alabama)," Ellis said. "Those 13 offensive rebounds were tough to overcome."

The game itself was a game of runs.

Auburn's Adam Harrington set the early pace for Auburn, scoring eight of the first 10 Tiger points. Alabama found themselves down by 10 at the 14:30 mark 14-4.

At that point, Alabama's Mark Gottfried called a timeout, and inserted little-used sophomore guard Travis Stinnett who gave the Tide an immediate spark.

Stinnett, who came into the game averaging 4.9 minutes and 2.4 points per game, hit a three-pointer on Alabama's next possession, followed by a Gerald Wallace tip-in. Bama had cut the lead in half 14-9. Two more Stinnett threes pulled Bama to within one at 16-15.

The Tide grabbed its first lead at the 9:23 mark 17-16 on two free throws by Rod Grizzard. Stinnett hit his fourth three of the first half, surpassing his previous career high of nine. He was followed by a Kenny Walker lay-up to put Alabama ahead six. Grizzard and Wallace put the exclamation point on a 20-2 run with a loud dunk. Bama held a 24-16 lead.

Stinnett finished the game with a team high 17 points, hitting six of 11 shots.

"Coach always says to be ready because you never know when your chance will come," Stinnett said. "I was just glad to get in, and I was able to hit some shots."

Grizzard said Stinnett's performance was not surprising. "He just did what he always does in practice," Grizzard said.

Auburn's Cliff Ellis called a timeout, but couldn't stop the Tide run. A Doc Martin lay-in completed a 20-point swing and put Bama up 10, matching Auburn's 10-point lead earlier in the half. Auburn had 10 turnovers by that point on its offensive end.

By the time the run ended, Alabama had out-scored Auburn 29-8.

Auburn made a run of its own late in the first half, scoring nine straight to pull to within four 35-31. The Tide took a 42-35 lead into the locker room at halftime, thanks to a last second three off the hand of Terrance Meade.

Grizzard, the SEC's top scorer, finished the half with just two points. He had nine for the game.

Alabama rebuilt its lead scoring the first nine points of the half, going ahead 51-35.

"There were a lot of runs," Harrington said. "We got up big on them, then they got up big on us, then we came back."

From there Auburn began scoring in spurts, slowly drawing to within four points at 60-56.

A questionable over the back foul on Martin put Auburn's leading scorer Marquis Daniels on the free throw line. Daniels hit both shots, putting Auburn down by two with just under four minutes to go 75-73. Daniels then tied the score with a lay-up after a Bama turnover.

The teams traded baskets until Auburn's Adam Harrington followed with a big three to give Auburn its first lead since the first half 80-79. Then came the dramatic final seconds.

The win upped Bama's home winning streak to 14 in a row.

Dudley finished the game with 15 points, while Meade added 14. Martin ended with 11 for Alabama.

For Auburn, Harrington led all scorers with 21. Daniels scored 18, followed by Lincoln Glass with 14 and Brewer with 12. Bama returns to action Wednesday night at Vanderbilt. The Tide then comes home to face LSU on Saturday.

Recker gets revenge on Indiana

MELINDA MAWDSLEY
THE DAILY IOWAN (U. IOWA)

IOWA CITY, Iowa (U-WIRE) - Luke Recker said he couldn't lie: It felt good to beat Indiana.

"This is a very special win for me," he said. "I took a lot of heat and criticism when I decided to leave Indiana University, and that hurt."

"My family lives there. My friends live there. That's my home state, and if we would have lost this one, I don't think I would have been able to show my face in that state again."

With his 27-point performance in Iowa's 71-66 win over the Hoosiers on Jan. 27, Recker solidified his marksmanship status in the land of candy-striped warm-up pants.

After leaving Indiana two years ago and subsequently transferring his way back into the Big Ten at Iowa, the story began to unfold. Recker vs. his former teammates and coach - a plot so appealing that national television wanted to tell it. When Indiana fired Bob Knight in September some felt part of the excitement would be lost.

However, the game did not disappoint those looking for the anticipated emotion, but it was the Hoosiers (12-9, 3-4), not the Hawkeyes (16-4, 5-2) that opened the contest in strong form.

Poor Iowa defense, coupled with great offensive execution, allowed Indiana to establish as much as a 19-point lead in the first half. The Hoosier post presence of Kirk Haston and Jared Jeffries combined for 20 points and 15 rebounds in the first 20 minutes of the game. Haston recorded a first-half double-double.

Recker was the only Hawkeye in double digits with ten. Reggie Evans, normally on pace for his own double-double, notched just one point and three rebounds with four turn overs.

Iowa coach Steve Alford said he posted a message to Evans on the board, comparing Haston's statistics to those of Evans.

"Reggie takes that as a challenge, and usually he takes challenges very well," Alford said.

Judging by the opening minutes of the second half, Evans was not the only Hawkeye compelled by Alford's words.

Iowa came out of the locker room with increased defensive pressure, looking to push up the tempo. A relatively young, inexperienced Indiana team rushed their shots and turned the ball over, allowing the Hawkeyes, led by Recker, to cut a 15-point half-time deficit to four in less than four minutes.

The Hoosiers were dealt another blow when Dane Fife - Recker's designated defender - picked up his third and fourth foul around the 17-minute mark.

"Getting into foul trouble killed us," Fife said. "We had trouble adjusting to the way they called the game. We couldn't play Indiana defense. It's hard to stop somebody on the bench."

Iowa and Indiana traded the lead before Ryan Hogan completed a three-point play pushing the Hawkeyes ahead for good with just over ten minutes remaining.

After allowing Indiana free pass to the glass on both ends of the court in the first half, Iowa defenders contained Haston and Jeffries. The two each hit one second-half basket and pulled down just three rebounds.

"Defensively they did a great job of taking the ball out of their hands," Davis said. "I figured we would at least have the lead by the ten-minute mark."

With five seconds left in the game and Iowa up by five, Recker stepped to the line knowing that his new team would reign victorious and missed. He said perhaps he brought too much emotion to the game and it showed toward the end.

He still managed to find some satisfaction in the win, and more importantly, in the way his new team played.

MISSOURI VALLEY NOTES

Renn Named Men's Player of the Week

Matt Renn of Indiana State University was named the Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Week by a unanimous vote from the league's media panel on Monday.

Renn, a senior forward for the league-leading Sycamores, shot 71 percent from the field, 67 percent from three-point range and 80 percent from the charity stripe to average 22 points in the Sycamores two wins last week.

Indiana State defeated Drake 72-61 last Tuesday led by Renn's 27-point effort. He also grabbed 10 boards in the win. Saturday night, the Sycamores defeated Wichita State University 85-67, as Renn scored 17 points and recorded seven rebounds.

Bennett Named Women's Player of the Week

Carla Bennett of Drake University was named the MVC Women's Player of the Week for her role in leading the Bulldogs to two road league wins last week.

Bennett averaged 17.5 points, 11.5 rebounds and shot 64 percent from the field for the week.

Drake, which won an overtime game on the road at their league-leading Northern Iowa, is now in a first-place tie with Southwest Missouri State University.

Stanford breaks school record with win over Washington State

TIM KANE
THE STANFORD DAILY
(STANFORD U.)

PULLMAN, Wash. (U-WIRE) — You can hardly blame the Stanford basketball team if it doesn't want to come back to Pullman for a long, long time, considering what happened on Saturday.

To wit: A charter flight delayed due to bad weather in Monterey. An hour's drive south to another airport to meet the charter. An hour and a half wait as the plane was refueled. And a 30 minute wait for the team bus after arriving in San Jose.

Oh, and lest we forget, the Washington State Cougars decided to actually make a game of their contest against the No. 1 Cardinal earlier in the day, hanging around for the entire game before falling 72-61, the smallest margin of victory for Stanford other than the Duke and Arizona wins earlier in the season.

"We hadn't been challenged for a couple games," said head coach Mike Montgomery, "and I think we needed this a little bit. Obviously we're going to have to play better if we're going to continue to win."

Coming into the game as a 22-point underdog after losing overtime to California on Thursday, Washington State (7-10, 1-7 Pacific 10 Conference) seemed ripe for a steamrolling by Stanford (19-0, 7-0). The Cardinal was aiming to break the school record for best start to a season with its 19th straight win.

With cold shooting from the perimeter affecting the whole team, the Cardinal turned inside to Jason and Jaron Collins, and the twins delivered, each scoring 18 points, with Jason grabbing 12 rebounds and Jaron five.

"You have to do something with Jason and Jaron or you're going to be dead," said Jacobsen. "And that's what happened tonight. Jason and Jaron got hot, they realized all those shots were falling, and they wanted it."

But in the first half, Cougars head coach Paul Graham gave his best shot at shutting down Stanford's strong inside game. Going deep into his bench, Graham brought out a 7-foot-1, 301-pound Brazilian version of Shaq: junior center Paulo Rower, a favorite of the Friel Court crowd who hadn't played more than eight minutes in a single game, and only 20 minutes all season.

Rower's presence, at least initially, provided immediate dividends in the lane. Drives by Cardinal players were stopped short in the lane as Rower made them pass out to the wings, where typically reliable bombers Casey Jacobsen and Ryan Mendez were waiting to drop in 3-pointers.

"I've played basketball a lot of years," said Jacobsen, "and some nights you have it, some nights you don't. Some weeks you have it, some weeks you don't. This definitely wasn't my weekend, one of the poorer shooting weekends I've had, but I'm not worried."

Thanks to 11 points in the first half (of 23 total) from junior guard Mike Bush (the Cougars' most reliable scorer) and several beneficial bounces on the rim, Washington State managed to hang around for the duration of the half, and Stanford took only a 34-28 lead into the locker room.

"We were very frustrated on the floor and at halftime," Jacobsen said, "but [assistant coach Blaine] Taylor came in and said 'This is a situation we're going to have to deal with at one time or another, whether it be today, or a month from now.'"

Both Jaron and Jason Collins took Taylor's words to heart. The senior and junior, respectively, came out blazing at the beginning of the second half, scoring 15 of the Cardinal's first 18 points after the break. Taking advantage of Rower's slow feet, the twins moved around on the floor and made shots in the lane and baseline by shooting farther from the basket.

The players only discussed the 19-0 start, a new school record, after they were prompted by the media. Jaron Collins and sophomore Curtis Borchardt, who had 11 points and seven boards, shook their heads in unison when asked if anyone had talked about the record in the locker room.

"That's something for when we're done playing here at Stanford, when I can look back on my career," Collins said. "Right now we're concerned about winning the Pac-10."

Poliquin set a school record with her throw of 59-4 1/4.

"I really wasn't expecting to do that well," Poliquin said. "I just really feel like God blessed me."

The men's team fell into third place with a team total of 82 points, finishing behind Wallace State (Ala.) Community College and Eastern Illinois University.

"We feel at home and comfortable here," said Wallace State head coach

Stan Naruwski of SIU. "The people at SIU treat us so well."

Wallace State didn't treat the competition so well, finishing with a total of 138 points, easily ahead of Eastern Illinois (85.83 points) and SIU.

"I was upset with the fact that we lost to Eastern," said SIU men's head coach Cameron Wright. "We should have beat them."

Wright blamed injuries and some people "not doing their jobs" for the third-place finish.

"We are such a thin team that we just cannot afford anything to go on like that," Wright said.

I'm really disappointed that we didn't win, but I feel really, really good about some of the performances we had.

Junior forward Tyrese Buie provides the Salukis with an offensive spark off the bench with his patented mid-range jumpshot, connecting on all four field goal attempts in Saturday night's 65-61 victory over Drake. Now, SIU head coach Bruce Weber would like the Georgia native to improve on defense.

Tyrese Buie finds welcome role with Salukis

ANDY EGENES
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Tyrese Buie has a knack of just blending in. And oftentimes before opponents even recognize his presence, his 15-foot jumper has buried them.

Buie, a junior transfer forward from Savannah, Ga., has become this year's secret weapon for the SIU men's basketball team.

But he has had to face some adjustments along the way, both on and off the court.

Buie's resume caught the eye of college basketball coaches from around the country. He put up 19 points per game at Highland (Ill.) Community College en route to becoming the MVP of the Arrowhead Conference and was also named a third All-American team after his four-year reign at Savannah High School.

Now Buie has to learn to fit into a system where he's not the star player. Buie is averaging seven points a game and 3.6 rebounds in 19 games this season off the bench.

The Saluki basketball team could revive an inconsistent season if Buie remains a threat around the league.

"The way Tyrese has shot [the ball], we are starting to run plays for him," said SIU basketball coach Bruce Weber. "He's tough to match up on because the big guys are guarding him and he can pop out to 15 [feet] and can shoot that thing. We've also added some quick-hitter type things for him."

Those quick-hitters came last Saturday night when Buie shot a perfect 4-for-4 from the field, all on perimeter jump shots in SIU's 65-61 victory over Drake University at the SIU Arena.

The Salukis added six new faces to this year's roster and struggle to learn roles and find continuity for a team that has a 10-9 overall record and finds themselves in middle of the pack in the Missouri Valley Conference standings.

No one can appreciate Buie's contributions more than standout shooting guard Kent Williams. Williams has been hounded by defenders every game after being named MVC Freshman of the Year last season.

"He can score around the board and he can also hit the open jumper," Williams said. "And that's a shot that a lot of people don't think about anymore is that 15-foot jumper."

"It does take a lot of pressure off of me but he can score with the best of them too."

The way Tyrese has shot [the ball], we are starting to run plays for him. He's tough to match up on because the big guys are guarding him and he can pop out to 15 [feet] and can shoot that thing.

BRUCE WEBER
head coach, SIU men's basketball

"It's a nice quiet place sometimes, but it's got a party atmosphere," said Buie, who added that blowing off a little steam now and then helps him concentrate on his academics.

"So, I think it's a good fit for me."

But Buie can't help but to miss the warm Georgia weather.

"It's a lot colder here and I haven't quite adjusted to the snow yet," Buie said.

Tales from the woods

Outdoor shows: For good or ill?

Every year about this time, the avid outdoorsman gets that itch to be outside shooting or casting or carrying out some other form of outdoor activity.

So when late winter rolls by, a handful of outdoor shows come around to appease the outdoorsman's need to gear up for the upcoming season.

And while these shows may be more prevalent in cities like St. Louis and Chicago — where it seems like there are 20 different shows going on at a given time — Carbondale has the fortune of hosting only one, the Annual Spring Boat & Sportsman's Expo this Friday through Sunday at the SIU Arena.

Which is good. There is only so much we can take. We don't really need a separate show for every form of fishing and hunting, re: The Chicago Bluegill Expo or The St. Louis Squirrel Hunting Show. They may as well put them all in one.

Really, these "shows" are the equivalent of Star Trek conventions for fishermen, with Spock ears and Enterprise lapel pins replaced by a sea of camouflage and fishing rods. And while we may enjoy them, they are, in fact, no less ridiculous than William Shatner signing autographs for $10 a shot.

One of the main reasons I go is to take a look at the "mom & pop" fishing-lure booths, which oftentimes sell handmade baits that are not available at your local Wal-Mart. Some of these lure "inventions," are like gold. Of course, others, while carrying tags that equate to the hysteria of Banjo Minnow infomercials, have no place in anyone's tackle box. And I'm not talking about fishing lures with the Budweiser logo printed on them.

Javier Serna
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The sellers of these duds often come across like they've created the only lure you will ever need. Ever. In your lifetime.

Like the time a friend and I wandered around the show in O'Hare. Some guy had his booth complete with a kiddie pool full of water and logs and other things you would normally snag your lure on. And the man operated like a "carnie," using '50s slang with a southern twang, replacing the phrase, "Step right up," with something about how his lure was snag proof. And he went about proving it with his kiddie-pool demonstration until my buddy, Dustin, decided he could figure a way to get that lure snagged and discredit this man devoted to his lure.

The man hesitated to hand the rod over to Dustin, and for good reason. Soon, the crowd of onlookers that had gathered did witness the snagging of this snag-proof lure. And that couldn't have been good for business. It was funny though — the whole scene.

So at a more recent show, when a salesman tried to get Dustin and me to stop at his booth by talking up his invention with, "Never tie another knot," we just laughed.

The Show: starts on Fri. at 5 p.m.-9 p.m., Sat. 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Sun. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Admission is $4 with children younger than 12 free with an adult. Exhibitors will be selling everything from boats to hunting and fishing equipment and other outdoor-related merchandise.

Friday night's attendees will be able to register for a $500 cash giveaway, among other door prizes.

Some of the featured events include an antique collection of duck decoys, with SIU-graduate Ed Dunham of P&D Decoys on hand to show off his duck-carving skills.

There will also be a collection of antique firearms, many of which are privately owned. These guns are the real thing, with some dating back to 1886.

So check it out because you never know what you're going to find at these things, for good or ill.

Dawgs place well at Saluki Invitational

Poliquin sets new school record in hammer throw

JOSEPH D. JOHNSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Disqualifications and stiff competition dashed the SIU men's and women's track and field teams' hopes of winning the Saluki/McDonald's Invitational on Friday and Saturday at the Recreation Center.

The Saluki women were edged by Austin Peay, which took first place with 103 points, while the men's team finished in second place with 87.40 points.

"They did everything right," SIU women's coach Don DeNoon said of Austin Peay. "We did half the things right."

A huge blow was dealt to the women's squad in the disqualification of both distant medley teams. Both times they were disqualified for moving in and out of the exchange zones, which is prohibited in indoor track events.

"That took 10 and eight points away from us," DeNoon said. "There were positive results of the meet, as well."

"I'm really disappointed that we didn't win, but I feel really, really good about some of the performances we had."

One of those performances was a NCAA provisional qualifying hammer throw from senior Caryn Poliquin.
