Budget cut may force SIU into lower division

By Jacqui Koszczuk
Staff Writer

SIU-C may lose Round 1 in its fight for a diverse men's athletics program with top NCAA division status—if the program is forced to abide by proposed budget cutbacks released Tuesday.

Men's Athletics Director Gale Sayers has trimmed an over-budgeted $146,000 from this year's request after an athletics advisory committee asked that he spend according to projected income. Cutbacks will not be necessary if more money comes in.

According to NCAA guidelines, SIU-C needs 12 men's intercollegiate sports to keep its Division 1A status.

News Analysis

Water polo appears on the budget for the first time, ending months of planning to add a 12th sport.

But now other sports are threatened by the dangerously low funding spelled out in the contingency budget. Sayers said the proposed cuts in wrestling and tennis would, in effect, "eliminate them for future years."

All sports would be hit, and some would be operating on about 80 percent or less of what Sayers originally estimated it would cost to keep them going. Football and basketball were dealt softer blows since they are money-makers and thus constitute "the meat of the program," Sayers said.

The proposed cutbacks in Sayers' contingency budget are:

Football: $5,000 less than the original request, down to $297,445. That is a 15 percent increase over last year's football budget, but Sayers said that it would not provide for maintenance of practice fields and that there may not be enough supplies to make it through spring practice.

Basketball: A $10,000 cut to $101,372, 8.5 percent less than requested and less than last

WINI appeals, tempers flare

By Michael Monson
Staff Writer

Tempers flared Tuesday when the manager of radio station WINI of Murphysboro appealed the administration's recent decision to award exclusive broadcasting rights to SIU-C men's football and basketball games to the Saluki Sports Action Network.

In a tense meeting that lasted for two hours, Dale Adkins, WINI's general manager, and his attorney, Donald Elmore, frequently clashed with George Mace, vice president for university relations, about whether the SSAN has firm commitments from St. Louis and Springfield radio stations which Mace has claimed to be part of the network. They also disagreed about whether the disputed radio commitments were an important factor in Mace's final decision.

The SSAN was awarded the exclusive two-year broadcasting rights on June 25. The fledgling network, headed by flagship station WEBQ in Harrisburg, pledged to pay $30,000 to the University over the next two years. WINI appealed the decision the next day under state bidding and procurement procedures.

Adkins said Mace had frequently cited the scope of the SSAN's proposed broadcasting signal as a major factor in Mace's decision. Adkins said Mace had based his decision on "false and misleading information" and at one point questioned whether the procedures followed by the University had been "truly ethical."

Adkins said he had talked with several of the station owners listed by Mace in a

Groups offer heat relief to elderly

By Dave Powers
Staff Writer

Senior citizens seeking refuge from the heat should find ample assistance thanks to the Jackson County Housing Authority, the Carbondale and Murphysboro Senior Citizens' centers and the Carbondale Rotary Club.

The housing authority has opened the doors to the community rooms in the county's four senior citizen high-rise apartment buildings around-the-clock, and the Carbondale Senior Citizen Center is prepared to extend its hours to accommodate those suffering from the heat.

Although the Murphysboro Area Senior Citizens' Center has made no special plans to help senior citizens deal with the heat, Director Martin Schmidt said his organization is helping to accommodate some requests for fans. The center also is keeping tabs by telephone on Murphysboro senior citizens through its Outreach program, he said.

The Rotary Club's Senior Citizen Committee is collecting the names, addresses and phone numbers of people willing to lend fans to needy senior citizens.

The city is also monitoring the situation and keeping close contact with the Carbondale senior center, according to Randy Jackson, the city's public information officer. The city would become directly involved only if other facilities are overrun, Jackson said.

Such a situation seems unlikely, however, since most area senior citizens apparently are faring well. J. Murray Lee, chairman of the Rotary Club Senior Citizen Committee, who helps man the phones at the county Community Health and Development Crisis Network, said that some 20 "assurance calls" Tuesday to senior citizens found all to be with either fans or air conditioning.

Reports are similar from the housing authority and senior centers. Vicki Duckworth, a clerk with the housing authority, said the senior citizens in Murphysboro not living in the high rises, are "looking out for each other" to make sure no one succumbs to the heat and Schmidt said attendance at the Murphysboro center had increased significantly as the temperatures have risen.

However, Janet Procter, social services director at the Carbondale center, said she is concerned because the people with the most need may not be reading newspapers or listening to local radio stations where announcements of shelter locations are being made.

Procter said the center is urging people to let them know of anyone living in an isolated area so that a check of their situation can be made. The center had received no reports of problems as of Tuesday, she said.

The Carbondale senior citizens center is located at 606 E. College, and the Murphysboro center is at 17 N. 14th. The high rises are located at 300 N. Seventh and 200 11th in Murphysboro and 300 N. Marion and 1425 old W. Main in Carbondale.

Those wishing to lend a fan through the Rotary Club can contact the Carbondale Senior Citizens' Center at 457-4151. Lee said fans will only be borrowed as needed and not collected until then.

'Cool' names aren't enough

Jack

Stan

"I sit in the shade and drink big glasses of lemonade."

How 'cool' people try to stay that way

Sometimes even a snowman can't keep his cool, no matter how much he tries.

People with "cool" names are having just as much trouble keeping cool as everyone else during the present heat wave. A few of them shared their secrets on how to beat the heat.

Nell E. Frost of Carbondale is celebrating her 79th birthday Wednesday. A Jackson County resident all her life, she said she doesn't recall a summer as hot as this one.

Rhonda Ice of Murphysboro is awaiting the birth of her first child this fall. She says the summer's heat has influenced her; now, she said, she craves cherry Cokes with extra cherries.

Jack Snowman, assistant professor of education, said, "There are times in weather like this when I wish I could live up to my name. I would melt away and come back in December."

Stan Winter, senior in design, said, "I fly up to my parents' cabin in Wisconsin on weekends. At least I would if they had one."

 year. Sayers said cuts in recruiting "will be devastating" and basketball "simply will not be in competition for good athletes" for next year.

Baseball: A $5,000 cut to $54,500, which is not enough to maintain the baseball field, and the schedule of games would be cut, Sayers said. "It's hard to envision a winning season with these handicaps," he said of the 8 percent cut from his first request and the 8 percent drop from last year's budget.

Track: A $9,500 cut to $51,815, which is 15 percent less than the first budget and 16 percent less than last year. "This sport has already been hurt by the loss of an assistant coach ... the only area that can be cut is meat scheduling," Sayers said.

Wrestling: A $10,000 cut to $20,900, 32 percent less than the first estimate and less than last year. At this level, Sayers said, scheduled events would be dropped this year.

Tennis: A $10,000 cut to $14,901, a 40 percent drop from the first request and last year's budget. Scheduled meets would be cut on all "professional travel, meals and lodging funds," Sayers said.

Swimming-Diving: A $7,532 cut to $20,400, 27 percent less than the original request and last year's budget. "The awards banquet and awards will be eliminated" among other cuts, Sayers said.

Golf: A $3,000 cut to $12,087, 20 percent less than the first request and last year's funds. A training trip and a scheduled meet in Florida would be dropped, Sayers said.

Gymnastics: A $6,000 cut to $30,200, 17 percent less than the first request and 12 percent less than last year.

The program's salary pool would be cut by $36,400, meaning the elimination of an assistant track coach, an assistant sports information director and all graduate assistants, Sayers said. About $8,000 in student wages would also be dropped.

Funds for championship playoffs were cut by $3,000 to $17,000. Sayers said this cut followed cutbacks in the individual sports, which would enable fewer of them to qualify for playoffs.

The administrative account would see an $8,000 cut, affecting awards, contingency funds, and office supplies.

Scholarships would not be affected, even if cut by the planned $10,478, because the first estimate was too high. "We had fewer out-of-state athletes than originally projected," Sayers said.

W.D. Klimstra, a member of the advisory Intercollegiate Athletics Committee, said the cuts "threaten some sports and endanger the concept of a broad-based program." The committee is caught in a Catch-22 position in its efforts to maintain a balanced budget while trying to keep the program's diversity alive.

letter published on June 25 in the Southern Illinoisian. He said the owners said they had no intention of broadcasting SIU-C sports.

Adkins said spokespersons at radio stations WGNU in Granite City and WJEM and WTAX in Springfield all said they had no plans to join SSAN this year.

Mace said the University had asked for only a "proposed and tentative network," and "there is nowhere in the bid proposal a request or requirement of firm commitments." At one point, Mace reminded Adkins of a statement that the WINI owner had made regarding the need for non-binding commitments in the bid proposals.

Mace said if the SSAN is unable to meet its commitments to cover the St. Louis, Springfield and Chicago areas, "then the University will then seek someone else to do the job." In his opening remarks, he noted that there is no requirement for the University to submit any proposed broadcast contract to the bidding process in the first place.

Adkins argued that the University has no recourse if the SSAN is unable to follow through with its promises to expand coverage of Saluki sports events.

The appeal was heard Tuesday by Robert Gentry, SIU-C's chief business officer. Under the state's bidding procedures, a university's chief business officer must decide any appeal. Gentry said he will rule on WINI's appeal next Tuesday.

No contract will be signed until after Gentry makes his final decision, Mace said.

DISASTER AID SOUGHT

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Gov. James R. Thompson asked President Carter on Tuesday to declare seven Southern Illinois counties disaster areas because of damages from severe winds June 20 and July 2.

The counties included in Thompson's request were Franklin, Jackson, Perry, Randolph, Saline, Union and Williamson.

Hospitals: 5 deaths may be heat-related

By Diana Peader
 Staff Writer

The sweltering heat searing much of the Southern and Midwestern United States, which has claimed 34 lives in Illinois and 654 lives in 16 states, is taking its toll in Southern Illinois.

Five heat-related deaths have been reported in Jackson and Williamson counties, and hospitals in the area report daily cases of heat exhaustion and ailments such as heart conditions aggravated by the heat.

A spokeswoman for Marion Memorial Hospital said a man brought to the hospital died Monday, apparently of heat exhaustion. Further information was not released.

Emergencies have been declared in several states because of the heat. President Carter ordered federal officials to make $6.73 million available to six states to provide relief to poor people in life-threatening situations, the Associated Press reported.

The states to receive aid are Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Kansas.

Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale said two deaths in the county so far can probably be attributed to the high temperatures and humidity plaguing the area. The high temperature recorded Tuesday was 105 degrees.

A 79-year-old woman who died in her home in Vergennes was probably a victim of the heat, Ragsdale said.

He said the woman had been working outside and was found in her home, which was closed up and not air conditioned.

He said a man in his 60s died at St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro of a heart attack, possibly brought on by the heat.

Williamson County Coroner Jim Wilson said three deaths in the county have definitely been related to the heat. He said the heat may have been a catalyst in other deaths of persons with heart or respiratory conditions, but this could not be positively determined.

The deaths involved elderly women, Wilson said. He said one was 68, one 74 and the other 88 years old.

Both coroners expressed fears that more deaths will be attributed to the heat if the heat spell continues.

Memorial Hospital of Carbondale reported about nine possibly heat-related cases. Six of those were people with respiratory conditions probably aggravated by the heat, according to a hospital spokesman.

A spokeswoman for Herrin Hospital said about five people with heat-related illnesses have been admitted to the hospital. She said most of the cases involved people who did not have air-conditioned homes and did not have the homes sufficiently ventilated.

A spokesman for Marshall Browning Hospital in DuQuoin said three to five cases of heat-related problems per day have been treated at the hospital since the onset of the record-breaking heat spell.

The spokesman said the cases have involved all age groups, from small children who were playing outside in the heat to elderly people whose homes are not adequately ventilated.

The Veterans Administration Hospital in Marion reported three cases of heat exhaustion in the last three to five days, and the United Mine Workers of America Union Hospital reported at least three heat-related cases. The UMW Hospital spokeswoman said more undocumented cases of illness may be related to the heat.

Although many of the treated cases involved elderly people, the hospital spokespersons said people of all ages are susceptible to the heat. They recommended increased intake of liquids and salts, and advised people, particularly those with other physical ailments, to stay inside well-ventilated or air-conditioned buildings.

Cellar license renewed by liquor board

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

Dugout Industries, Inc., which operates The Cellar, was given the "benefit of the doubt" by the Local Liquor Control Commission when it approved the renewal of the tavern's Class A liquor license.

Because The Cellar had failed to return its license application to the city's Liquor Advisory Board by its April 30 deadline, for subsequent approval by the LCC, the license was not renewed during the Commission's June 23 annual license renewal meeting.

The business was, therefore, without a license and was forced to close its doors for three weeks.

The Liquor Commission reconsidered the license renewal Monday night. Though the Commission renewed the application with a unanimous vote, it was not without hesitance.

Commission Chairman Hans Fischer said he was tempted to issue a reprimand to the tavern owners for not having filed for their license in time.

"But, I have now concluded that I will give them the benefit of the doubt. We will explain the procedure to them and hope that they will follow it next year," he said.

Dugout Industries had been negotiating for the lease of the building which houses the business at 101 W. Monroe at the time license applications came due, Fischer explained.

After the LCC failed to renew The Cellar's license on June 23, the business filed an appeal with the State Liquor Control Commission, according to Fischer.

Fischer said he was beginning to resent persons going to the state commission every time a decision is made based on local perceptions. "A liquor license is a local privilege. The state cannot issue licenses."

Commissioners Susan Mitchell and Archie Jones echoed Fischer's concern.

"It would be better for everyone, if these things were brought forward in a timely manner," Mitchell said.

Released hostage has multiple sclerosis

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Richard Queen, the hostage freed by the Iranians because his illness baffled them, is suffering from multiple sclerosis, his doctors announced Tuesday. One expert said the stress of captivity probably brought on the attack of the nerve disease.

When told of the diagnosis, Queen "took it very calmly," said Dr. Jerome M. Korcak, the State Department physician in charge of Queen's care. "He showed almost no emotional reaction at all. He discussed it intelligently with us."

Anderson meets with French Premier

PARIS (AP) — Independent U.S. presidential candidate John B. Anderson met with French Premier Raymond Barre on Tuesday in a curtailed electioneering program on his first day in France.

Barre, a conservative former economics professor, has been a sharp critic of President Carter's administration and the architect of France's austerity and tight-money economics.

Aides to Anderson expressed disappointment that President Valery Giscard d'Estaing did not plan to meet with the candidate. But some expressed the hope that the French president might accommodate him for a brief last minute interview.

Reagan retreats from anti-union stance

DETROIT (AP) — In a bold overture to lure traditionally Democratic union members to the Republican Party this fall, Ronald Reagan is retreating from anti-union stances that have riled labor leaders.

Trying to bridge the historic chasm between the GOP and most of the nation's 24 million union members, the Republican presidential nominee-in-waiting has assembled a group of advisers — including a Teamsters official — to promote his candidacy in union halls and labor leaders' suites.

Iran seals borders, hunts conspirators

By The Associated Press

Tehran radio said Tuesday the revolutionary regime was sealing all of Iran's land, sea and air borders for a week in an effort to track down conspirators in an aborted anti-government plot who remain at large.

Confirmation of the report by the government-run radio could not be immediately obtained from Iranian authorities or other sources.

Such a lengthy closing of all points for entering and exiting Iran presumably could cause severe economic hardship in a country already burdened by Western economic sanctions. The Iranians need a steady flow of food imports and depend on their oil exports for revenue.

Reviewing 'How to review...'

After getting some severe remarks from the public about several Daily Egyptian record reviews, news editor Ken MacGarrigle and Jeff Calvert figured they could have with their little sarcastic "gem" in July 14th's issue entitled "How to destroy—er, review—an album." Well, guys, I'm sorry to say this but I guess the public is getting the last word again.

First of all, I'm not one of those human beings who will write that less-than-intelligent statement, "I don't know much about music..." Sorry again, but this individual knows something about that wonderful noise that oozes from the radio. Not only did you take a cheap shot at making the readers look bad, but you even made an attempt at downgrading virtually every top band in the process.

Before I defend the readers, I'd like to lift up the spirit of good music which you just totally destroyed. I can't see how you can actually write an article on how to teach record reviewing and stand up for the points those DE reviewers believe in. Time and time again, we have heard negative comments about some real outstanding albums.

The business is not an easy one, and what you said about being in the hearts of record store employees is true. So why must you constantly get on their bad side?

I can't get down on you too much about the creativity, but when you gave the examples for the elements of critiquing it was my responsibility as a music lover to write this. Again we hear a negative comment concerning "Rush." If you would take a break from your Willie Nelson or Joan Baez jam sessions some nights and discover what true rock music is constructed of, you probably wouldn't say "Rush's Giddy Lee could be used to subdue wild beasts." The man is good at what he does and is even better when doing it with the other band members.

So if getting down on the vocalist isn't bad enough, the next element of destruction is in the lyrics. When you consider that an LP has two sides with an average of four to five songs per side, you have to realize that not every song is going to be written and performed perfectly. So now you tell everyone to nitpick and find the most off-the-wall lyric so they can make the band members look like total fools.

Now it was time to pick on the producers. How can you say that a band that produces its own music doesn't trust anyone else to let an obnoxious piece of material into public? Take a look at the producers of Albums by The Who, Pink Floyd and Styx. All were produced by the artist and were hardly considered obnoxious music by the public.

So now it was time to put the true music lovers down. I'm sure if one of us wanted to commit physical harm to you but could not because we don't know where you live, we would call information with baseball bats in hand. We don't write because we can't find you, we write because we're giving the music industry the respect it so richly deserves.

I also wish you would give credit where credit is due. There's nothing like stealing a line verbatim from a past letter in reference to a recent Kinks review. But why should I get down on you, for that, after all, "Album reviewing is no Mickey Mouse operation." Sound familiar?—Wayne Parratore, News Director, WIDB

Press making too much of ERA

DETROIT—There must be 10,000 scribes in town, gathered together from the 50 states and a dozen foreign capitals, and we're getting desperate. With nothing left to say about a Republican vice presidential choice, the press corps has been driven to its penultimate last resort: the platform.

The ultimate last resort, of course, when all else fails, is a contest over rules. That point won't be reached. But for want of hard news, the scribes have been making molehills. They have been slugging over the fight—or "battle," or "struggle," or even the "shoot-out"—over a plank dealing with the Equal Rights Amendment. That is how bad things are.

My own growing conviction is that nobody gives much of a damn about the ERA anymore. This is an old bone with nothing left to gnaw on. Except for a hard core of militants for, and militants against, everyone else has gone home. Not a single state has ratified since Indiana in 1977. The movement is dead in the water.

But we have to write about something. Very well. The GOP's embarrassment dates from the party platform of 1940: "We favor submission by Congress to the states of an amendment to the Constitution providing for equal rights for men and women." The trouble with that plank, it was unequivocal. On nine subsequent occasions the authors were as reckless. The 1976 platform asserted that "the Republican Party reaffirms its support for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment." How can the party back away from that commitment without actually retreating?

It ain't easy. There wouldn't be a problem if it weren't for Ronald Reagan. Last January our Leader waxed eloquent on his record as governor of California in promoting equal rights for women: "We enacted laws to prohibit discrimination on account of sex in employment, real property transactions, and the issuance of insurance; to permit a woman to obtain credit in her own name; to give the wife equal rights with regard to community property; and to equalize the wife's rights in administering the estate of a deceased spouse."

Then the governor took a breath: "However, I do not believe that the 'Equal Rights' Amendment to the federal Constitution is the answer to the problem." Trouble with that statement, it was unequivocal. Mr. Reagan added, quite accurately, that the proposed amendment "would not in itself redress inequalities." The amendment would serve only to increase the legislative powers of the courts. His better idea would be annually to review federal laws that subvert women's equal rights, and to work for their revision or repeal.

This is the approach that some of us have been urging all along. It makes sense to me. By its own terms the ERA would not become operative until two years after ratification. At that time an era of interminable litigation would begin, as one test case after another were filed in the courts. The amendment is not self-executing. Unlike other recent amendments, such as the 26th, guaranteeing 18-year-olds a right to vote, the ERA is woefully unclear. Who really knows what is meant by "equality of rights under the law"? It would be up to judges to say—and 114 years after the 14th Amendment, judges still are trying to figure out what is meant by "equal protection of the law."

The Reagan approach offers a wise, prudent, attainable plan for gradual correction of the ills that remain. He is proposing that normal political processes be permitted to work their way in this minefield of explosive emotions. Let gender-based laws be isolated and examined; most of them, it will be found, are largely innocuous. Free of the pressure for constitutional change, legislators should be able systematically to revise or to repeal those statutes that sanction significant, invidious discrimination.

It is immaterial, or so it seems to me, what the platform writers finally come up with. The platform that is adopted here in Detroit is not binding upon Republican candidates for state legislatures anyhow—and state legislators are the only ones who have a vote on ratification of the ERA. In brief, the platform fight is much ado about mighty little. But if you have to fill up 800 words to meet a deadline, it will suffice.

Teens clear trails, fight bugs during summer jobs with YCC

By Ann Becker
Staff Writer

Twenty-four teenagers from all across the state, are not spending their summer in the typical fashion. Instead of lifeguarding at the local swimming pool or flipping hamburgers, they are working eight hours a day at hot and sweaty manual labor at Gum Ridge in the Shawnee National Forest.

The "foresters" are working through the Youth Conservation Corps, a federal program that gives over 2,800 teenagers, ages 15 to 18, summer employment and a chance to learn about forest lands at various camps established in the Eastern region of the Forest Service.

Daryl Waller, camp director at Gum Ridge, said, "Basically the teenagers want summer employment and a chance to spend their time out-of-doors."

According to Waller, about one out of 55 applicants is selected from a random drawing by a computer in Washington, D.C. Those chosen come from a mix of urban and rural backgrounds and have a variety of work experience.

Tom Baker, works director at the camp, said that generally the campers come in with the idea that it is going to be a fun camp.

"They generally haven't done much strenuous labor before," he said.

The campers' day starts early, as the work begins at 7 a.m. Baker explained that three crews rotate work on three camp projects, one of which keeps the forest trails in condition by clearing them of fallen trees and debris and repainting trail markers.

In the timber stand improvement project, small and less desirable trees are cleared out by girdling, a process in which strips of bark are removed from the tree's trunk and the tree eventually dies. This is done to allow more growing space for healthier trees that are to be used in logging.

Another project involves pouring concrete in the construction of patio blocks to be placed around visitor information centers in the forest so that they are more accessible to the handicapped.

"We teach the campers how to work, as well as give them a variety of jobs," Baker said. "We rotate crew leaders to give the campers different work experience with different people."

Proposed strip mining legislation finds little support at local meeting

By Dave Powers
Staff Writer

The proposed Illinois Surface Coal Mining Conservation and Reclamation Act found little support among speakers at a public meeting Monday night in Ballroom C of the Student Center.

Four representatives of the Illinois Department of Mines and Minerals were on hand to gain citizen input before the regulations are submitted to the federal Office of Surface Mining.

The regulations, which are intended to bring the state in line with federal strip mining guidelines, must be submitted to the OSM by Nov. 3, according to Linda Ross, administrative assistant to Douglas Downing, superintendent of the Land Reclamation Division of the state Department of Mines and Minerals.

Armed with written statements, speakers took to the podium quoting specific segments of the book-length act, which they thought were less stringent than required by federal law. One speaker opposed the mining of prime farmland altogether and one speaker opposed segments of the proposed act on the basis that they were too stringent.

Those who spoke against specific segments of the proposed act included a representative from The Illinois South Project, Inc. and the Reclamation Coalition. A spokesman for the Peace Commission of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Belleville said his group was totally against the regulation. Lawrence Mohr, a Perry County farmer, who said he lives near two strip mine operations, also delivered a public statement questioning the legitimacy of the act.

Only William Clark Ashby, a professor in the SIU-C botany department, formally took issue with portions of the proposed regulations which he considered too stringent. Specifically questioning the reclamation standards, he said the requirement of returning the layers of soil just as they were removed was "too rigid," since it precluded the possibility of improving the soil through strata placement.

Ashby said the high-clay soil of Southern Illinois could be improved by this method. "In California they are spending thousands of dollars per acre to get what we get free," he said.

A representative of the Illinois division of the Peabody Coal Co. was the sole industry representative on hand. The speaker submitted a written statement which he said "supported the view of the Illinois Coal Association." The ICA was scheduled to go on record supporting the proposed regulations at a public meeting in Springfield Tuesday night, despite certain misgivings, according to its President Joe Spivy.

Spivy, who said the ICA is "a firm believer in states' rights," said the regulations were the "best we could do," although the proposed act is "not geared to Illinois" and "full of loopholes." The ICA is supporting the National Coal Association in its court battles to change the 1977 federal law which brought about the need for new state regulations, he said.

Charles Sheketoff, who spoke on behalf of the Illinois South Project Inc. said that unless his groups' recommendations are incorporated in the proposal, "we will advocate in the highest halls of government that the program" be disapproved.

Specifically, Illinois South Project questions concerned the reclamation of prime farmland, cropland, pasture land and high capability lands; the process for designating lands unsuitable for mining; public participation for review and comment on coal mine permit applications; and the state's procedures and staffing for inspection of mines and enforcement of the regulations. Sheketoff called the proposals "inadequate."

Vernon Caupert, chairman of the Reclamation Coalition and associate director of the Perry County Soil and Water Conservation District Board, said various segments of the proposed regulations required clarifications to bring the act into compliance with federal regulations.

Caupert, who said that 10 percent—or some 30,000 acres—of Perry County have already been affected by surface mining, said, "It is very important that the strip mining that is done in the future assures Perry County residents of the highest possible standards of reclamation, and the minimum number of exemptions and loopholes which could further aggravate the loss of agricultural land."

The spokesman for the Justice and Peace Commission of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Belleville, said the diocese is "opposed to the mining of prime farmland at all."

YCC crews fight bugs, poison ivy as they clean up forests and lakes

Even though the temperature may creep over 100 degrees, the campers wear bright yellow hard hats and steel-toed shoes for safety measures. "One thing we stress is safety," Baker said. "Although the campers find it difficult to adjust to the bulky, uncomfortable safety equipment."

The camp has a good safety record, according to Waller, and in the three years he has been with the camp there have been no major injuries. He said that the biggest problem has been poison ivy.

The poison ivy, manual labor and heat are things that the campers did not expect, said John Mausey, a work crew leader.

"Many of them haven't been out in the forest before. They didn't expect to find the mosquitoes and the poison ivy. I think they expected to be in a park and pick up a few leaves," he added.

During the four week session the "foresters" stay on top of the grassy ridge, accessed by a narrow gravel road and surrounded by the forest. Included at the camp are five A-frame cabins where the campers live, three white trailers which serve as the camp kitchen, a small environmental museum and the work director's office. A pavilion with picnic tables serves as an outdoor dining room for the evening meal and shower stalls are located at the edge of the camp.

When the campers are not working in the forest, Waller said that he tries to structure most of their time. Campers fix their own breakfast in the kitchen each morning and prepare a sack lunch to take during the day. The evening meal is prepared by a cook, with the help of the campers, and eaten outside under a pavilion. On Monday evenings laundry is done and on Thursday evenings campers have a chance to go swimming. They also have the responsibility of keeping the camp grounds clean. Other activities have included a field trip to Garden of the Gods and weekend sports competition against another YCC camp.

At the YCC camp, environmental education is considered as important as learning to work well with others. Elaine Middendorf, a SIU-C senior in zoology, serves as Environmental Education Coordinator for the camp. She spends time at work sites to answer questions campers may have about natural phenomena or to give information about the site. Each week she has a lesson on the environment and an in-camp speaker on ecology.

Middendorf said that a rewarding part of her job is the interest which the campers show in the forest. "Often they are hot and tired, but I find a lot of them really get into learning about this," Middendorf said.

Carbondale police are obeying recent 'strip searches' ruling

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Police Department policy concerning "strip searches" of prisoners are in apparent compliance with a recent ruling by Illinois Attorney General William Scott.

Scott ruled in a formal legal opinion on July 3 that police can remove a person's clothing only when they believe that the person is concealing contraband or a weapon.

The ruling came in response to a request from the Woodford County State's Attorney Richard M. Baner, who asked about the use of a "medical information sheet" by that county's Sheriff's office. The form was used to note any scars, tattoos or other markings on an arrested person, and required police to examine the person's unclothed body during booking procedures.

Scott's ruling said the routine use of the form without a belief that the person was concealing contraband or a weapon would violate Illinois laws because it would allow strip searches of persons arrested for minor traffic and regulatory offenses and misdemeanors.

The Carbondale police policy, in effect since March 23, 1979, provides for strip searches only when one of three conditions are met.

The Carbondale policy permits searches when police have reasonable grounds to believe that a prisoner is concealing contraband or evidence of a crime on his or her person, when police believe a weapon is being concealed, or when a court has issued a warrant for a search of the person's body. The policy also states that the preferred procedure is to obtain a search warrant.

Captain Tom McNamara said the Carbondale police regularly conduct a "pat-down" search of arrested persons to discover weapons and contraband and require a prisoner to empty any pockets during the arrest procedure, but strip searches are not part of police routine.

"I can't remember the last time we had a strip search here. Our prisoners are taken to the Jackson County Jail for holding, so we don't normally search anyone beyond the pat-down and pockets," McNamara said.

Deputy Willie Mason said that anyone going into the Jackson County Jail is strip searched during booking to prevent weapons or contraband from being brought into the jail. Scott's legal opinion permits strip searches of prisoners before they are placed in a cell even when they are not suspected of concealing a weapon or contraband. Such searches are allowed to insure the security of officers and the jail premises, according to the opinion.

Mason said that the searches are always conducted by a police officer of the same sex as the prisoner, and that scars, tattoos or other markings on a person's body that can be used for identification purposes are noted on the booking paperwork.

Residents won't even THINK of parking illegally

LUMBER CITY, Ga. (AP)—The traffic sign says, "Speed Limit 19," and another sign warns "Thou Shalt Not Park Here."

To make sure everybody gets the idea, still another sign declares: "Don't even THINK of Parking Here."

What gives in this tiny southeast Georgia city?

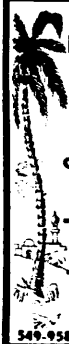

"It's that salesman," says Mayor Hugh Harris, not naming the culprit. "I buy stop signs and posts and things like that from a salesman who comes through here once in a while. And he's always showing me these unusual signs. And then the city council lets me buy them."

The first signs imposing a 19 mph speed limit began appearing in the late 1960s, not long after Harris took office. Townspeople grinned at the comments from out-of-towners, and the signs became something of a practical joke.

Boys from Brazil learn new ideas at swim camp

By Andrew Zliner
Staff Writer

The SIU-C swim camp, which has been going on throughout the summer, has an international flavor this week. The one-week session is being attended by two Brazilian swim clubs, consisting of 42 swimmers between the ages of 13 and 16.

The two clubs, the Pinheiros Club from Sao Paulo, and the Minas Tennis Club, from Belo Horizonte, receive much work and learn new ideas about swimming, according to SIU men's swim coach Bob Steele. He said each swimmer is filmed and, in the evening, they view themselves and learn where they are making errors.

The young athletes are kept busy, attending workouts from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., where they work on skills and get filmed; at 1 p.m. for dry land exercises like stretching; and from 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m., where they work out and incorporate different games to improve their water performance, according to Steele.

He said a large reason for the two Brazilian clubs to come here is the presence of Rick Powers, former women's swim coach here, who spent eight years in the South American nation and speaks fluent Portuguese.

Powers explained that swimming in Brazil is relegated to the wealthy. He said facilities there are good, adding that outdoor pools are more prevalent because of the mild climate.

Another reason for coming to SIU is the amount of individual instruction given to each swimmer, said William Lima, coach of the Pinheiros Club, through the interpreting Powers. Lima added that in the past his club went to a camp in Miami and wasn't satisfied with the attention given to each swimmer.

"The training they got there was no different than what was happening back home," Powers explained. "Our filming facilities here are not available to the coaches in Brazil."

Besides the advantage of the films, Steele said coming to SIU gives the Brazilian coaches new ideas on training methods, since there are many different ways to train for the various strokes utilized in swimming. Additionally, he said the swimmers watch "stroke movies" of some of the best American swimmers.

Steele said the camp has been operating here for seven years, going on throughout the summer. This summer, 170 swimmers will have gone through the program, he said. The camp is for elementary and high school students. Six coaches participate in the training process, Steele pointed out.

According to the swim coach, integration between the Brazilian swimmers and their American colleagues is encouraged to force communication and make them feel like friends, not strangers.

The camp will end Saturday and feature concluding time trials and a swim meet, Steele explained.

New lady cage aide appointed

By Scott Stahmer
Staff Writer

A former collegiate basketball star at Pennsylvania State University has been tabbed by women's basketball coach Cindy Scott to be the Lady Salukis' assistant coach for the 1980-81 season.

The new assistant is Jennifer Bednarek, a three-year starter at FSU and the holder of 13 Lady Lion scoring records. Bednarek, who was hired by SIU as a teaching assistant in the Physical Education Department, replaces Denny Kelly.

Bednarek, 22, recently graduated from Penn State, where she made the Kodak All-East team twice and was nominated for the Margaret Wade Trophy as a junior. A shooting guard for the Lions, she averaged 19.3 points per game during her junior season.

Bednarek saw little action as a senior, however, because of an early-season injury. She believes this will help her adjust from being a player to being an assistant coach.

"There are a lot of things I have to learn," she said. "But I had some experience sitting on the bench because I was injured last year."

Before attending Penn State, Bednarek played for Paramus Catholic High School in New Jersey. At Paramus, she played with Anne Donovan, a 6-8 center currently playing for AIAW champion Old Dominion.

One of Bednarek's primary responsibilities, she said, will be recruiting. She hopes to sign players from Eastern high schools, which produce some of the top women basketball players in the nation. Currently, most of the Salukis are from the Midwest.

"One of the reasons I came out here was to start Eastern recruiting," Bednarek said. "Eastern basketball is a little different than Midwestern basketball. I'll help with recruiting all over."

Bednarek said she will go along with whatever strategy Scott decides to use.

"I'm adaptable to whatever Coach Scott is playing," Bednarek said. "We played a running game at Penn State, and the man-to-man defense, so that's what I'm used to."

Former Penn State standout Jennifer Bednarek has been named assistant women's basketball coach.

Bednarek currently is familiarizing herself with the Lady Saluki program by working with Scott at this week's women's basketball camp at the Arena. She's had a chance to watch the five recruits (Rosalyn Bartley, Connie Price, D.D. Plab, Char Warring and Susan Wright) SIU signed last spring.

"So far, I'm impressed," Bednarek said of the new players. "The recruits she has coming in are excellent. There's a lot of potential out there."

Bednarek accepted the SIU opening even though she was drafted by Tampa Bay, an expansion team in the Women's Professional Basketball League. She decided to join SIU because of the WPBL's instability and her ambition of becoming a head coach in the future.

"I'd like to become a head coach," she said. "This will be excellent experience for me. Some people said to me, 'Why don't you become a head coach,' and I said I didn't know where to begin."

Scott is happy with her new assistant, but added that "we hate to lose Denny."

"She's got a lot of contacts out East," the fourth-year head coach said of Bednarek. "But her responsibilities will be recruiting in general, not just in the East. As far as other areas, she'll have a say in them. We'll be just about equals."

IM golf tourney a hot affair

Under Monday's wilting heat the intramural golf tournament was held at Midland Hills Golf Course with David Logel, senior in accounting, winning the low scratch championship with a score of 82.

In the handicapped score divisions, Gary Will, senior in industrial technology, shot an 85 to win the A-flight championships. Charles Pless, junior in finance, won the B-flight division with a score of 102.

But the heat seemed to be the real winner of the one-day tourney. Jeanne Paratore, intramurals director, said only seven people played in the tournament and she blamed the low turnout on the heat.

Logel said he got tired on the back nine from the heat. He said he made the turn after the first nine tied for the lead with a score of 39, and he thought it would take another 39 on the back to win it. Not knowing that he had won his division, Logel said he threw his ball into the water in disgust of the 43 he shot on the back nine.

Injured Saluki to have day of honor

By Ed Dougherty

Even though SIU does not face Eastern Illinois University in football until 1:30 p.m. Saturday Sept. 13, the kick off for Mark Hemphill Day is underway.

SIU Assistant Athletics Director Fred Huff began a fund-raising drive Tuesday that will attempt to generate at least $20,000 for the former SIU football player.

Hemphill, a St. Louis native, has been paralyzed from the chest down since he was injured last season during the Illinois State game.

"We're doing this to help a man who is going to have a hard time in life for a long time," said Athletics Director Gale Sayers.

According to Huff there are three main goals of the fund-raising drive: to raise at least $20,000 for Mark Hemphill for therapy and other expenses; to have the first sell-out crowd in McAndrew Stadium history since it was enlarged to seat 20,000 people; and to show total

This is just one of the brochures being used to drum up support for Mark Hemphill Day.

Support for football coach Rey Dempsey.

Using the slogan of "Make a mark for Mark!," Huff unveiled a three-tiered donation plan. Plan A: purchase tickets to the SIU-ETU football game, in which $2 of the $6 price will be donated to the Mark Hemphill Fund. Plan B: purchase tickets for the game and distribute them to underprivileged children in Southern Illinois, with $2 going to the fund. Plan C: a donation directly to the fund.

Several plans have been devised to stimulate participation in Mark Hemphill Day, including the use of bumper stickers, buttons and decals.

Bumper stickers will be used to arouse interest in the day. The buttons will be given to every person who contributes $5, and the decals will be given to persons buying six tickets or donating $20.

To honor Hemphill when he returns to SIU an all-American rooting section will be created. The section will be made up of two people from every zip code and community in Southern Illinois, Huff said.

To encourage student support there will be 100-mile run Thursday Sept. 4 from the Gateway Arch in St. Louis to McAndrew Stadium. A relay system will be used comprised of members of the SIU cross-country team. Huff suggested that David Lee would be the best candidate to begin the Mark Hemphill Road Run which will end in a pep rally at McAndrew Stadium.

Huff also said he would like to see a separate campaign put on by students and various student organizations.

In addition to SIU's efforts, Pepsi-Cola bottling company of Marion will donate its concession receipts from the day's game. John Coker, director of the Student Center, said a portion of the Student Center's concession receipts will be donated. And Norbert Bartosik, president of the DuQuoin State Fair, said part of the fair's gate receipts from SIU Day also will be donated.
