New communications dean sets goals

By Kenton Sanders
Staff Writer

Keith Sanders, who has been working with the University's financial woes, will face money shortages and other problems when he takes over Friday from CB Hunt Jr. as dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

The new dean said his plans include increasing outside funding for the college and establishing ties that would study links between high technology, communications, and the arts.

Hunt was fired in February 1980 after reports from the college's annual report that the college was facing a financial crisis. He was replaced by Sanders, who has been working with the college since 1980 as a member of the chancellor's staff.

Sanders, a professor in the Speech Communications Department, was named in May to succeed Hunt.
Dixon announces endorsement of Mondale in presidential race

By Niles Johnson
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Alan Cranston, a Democratic ally who has endorsed White House contender Walter F. Mondale on Tuesday, said he hoped Illinois would produce a Democratic national convention delegate and thuscontributors to the Mondale campaign, 10 percent of the delegate total, for nearly 12 years in a row. He said that in concert with campaign officials he decided it was time to make his "open secret" a formal announcement.

"The bulk of the active Democrats, the soldiers, are for Mondale," Cranston declared. He said the nomination "ought to be a party piece of business" and, adding that he is for Ohio Sen. John Glenn, said "Colorado Sen. Gary Hart in California Sen. Alan Cranston could capture a significant share of delegates in the state's March primary.

Cranston said Mondale had proven as Jimmy Carter's vice president that he is "a first-rate public servant" and "my far the best public speaker that we have in this panel who is running for president."

"I've known him for 20 years," Dixon said, "and I believe I can call him anytime I can walk into the White House and see him in 10 minutes. That means something to me.

Dixon said Mondale would score well among jobless blue-collar workers in the congressman's 5th industrial belt, and added that those Democratic primary voters would be divided. He said he was unsure what Chi. go Mayor Harold Washington might do of Cranston's early primary support for him.

Dixon said that even though they know a party boss or president can't do anything about the Illinois delegation at a convention are long gone, he would still like to see the March primary yield a contingent heavy for Mondale.

"If I could, frankly, I'd vote in the state for Vice President Mondale, then I would say that's a good vote," he said.

Reagan says he never saw Carter's file before debate

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan said Tuesday night that he never saw a line of Jimmy Carter's briefing material prior to the Bush campaign debate, and asked "since it never got to the debate, what purpose did it serve?"

At a White House news conference, Reagan displayed a two-page campaign brochure he said he had shown over to the Justice Department for review. He said the action was appropriate.

The White House had released copies of a two-page campaign brochure it claimed was copied and "virtually doomed" in a Senate investigation Wednesday.

"America's economy is beginning to sparkle," Reagan said.

Cranston said "I never knew until you people made it public in the press" that Carter campaign materials had been in the possession of his 1980 campaign aides.

"I never knew anything of the kind," he said. "As I recall the debate I don't recall any particular mention of economic growth." His aides have been made of that.";

Reagan said he wants the Justice Department to find out "who did what and if it was improper or illegal, then take action."

He said most of the Carter material he's heard about in recent days has involved questions and subjects hammered every day in public campaign speeches, not strategy papers or other inside information.

"We don't know how it was obtained," Reagan said. He asked whether it is stealing if a disgruntled aide in one campaign hands papers to a campaigner for the other side.

In his opening statement, Reagan said the budget stabilization is revising its estimate of economic growth this year from 4.7 percent to 5.5 percent. He said it will take bipartisan cooperation in Congress to sustain recovery.

Reagan said he had been consulting with the House bill to limit the tax cut for earners above the $50,000 range. Reagan declared the Democratic "tax cap must not and will not become law."

The president also urged Congress to concentrate on restraining domestic spending and said he will enforce that with vetoes as necessary.

News Roundup

Colorado River flooding continues

Federal officials pulled more plugs Tuesday on the mighty dams on the lower Colorado River to try to prevent uncontrolled overflows, and residents piled sandbags on hastily built dikes along the river in Arizona, Nevada and California to try to hold back the highest water yet from more than a week of controlled flooding.

The 1,000 people who had fled the flooding in Grand Junc­ton, Colo., were told they could go back home as the river began receding, if only by inches.

At least six deaths and 15 injuries in the United States and Mexico and 17,000 people were homeless from Tuesday's flooding brought on by runup from a record snowmelt.

Bridge collapses into river; 3 dead

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) - Three eastbound lanes of Interstate 95 collapsed Tuesday into the Minnion river 70 feet below, killing three people and injuring three others whose truck was trapped as the bridge splintered in the middle of the river.

Investigators said a steel pin designed to hold bridge sections together may have worked loose and caused the accident. A 500-foot section was sheared cleanly from the rest of the half-mile-long bridge.

Nearby residents said they had warned state officials for several weeks that the heavily traveled span was unsafe.

Another lottery ticket misprint found

PEORIA (AP) - Misprinted lottery tickets - first brought to light by Peoria Tom Burchell, who should receive $17,000,000 when he calls in to play them - have been circulating.

John Bowman, a garage supervisor from Mount Prospect, told the Peoria Journal Star on Monday that he got a misprinted $10,000 ticket a year ago and has since been in contact with Burchell's attorney in an effort to collect the money.

In both cases, a lottery computer said the tickets did not exist. However, state lottery officials agreed to pay Burchell, after determining his ticket was unaltered.

Cosmonauts link with space station

MOSCOW (AP) - Two Soviet cosmonauts linked their Soyuz 7 capsule with a Russian orbiting space station Tuesday and began experiments on "controlling large man-made complexes" in outer space, Soviet officials reported.

The official news agency said commander Vladimir Lyakhov, 50, who once held the record for the longest space flight, and rook Alexander Alexandrov completed the docking at 4:41 a.m.

The successful linkage, which Radio Moscow called a major operation, came two months after the crew of the Soyuz 9 mission missed a docking attempt and was ordered back to Earth.

Airport runway resurfacing may start as early as August by Joanna Hunter

Work could begin on the resurfacing of the Southern Illinois Airport runway as early as August, according to Airport Manager Gary Shafer.

David Carle, spokesman for U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-22nd District, said funds are at the state level and will be released in a few weeks. The work involves installing a six-inch asphalt overlay on a non-skid surface on the runway. Construction is expected to take about 20 working days and will be completed by E.T. Simonds Construction Co. of Carbondale.

E.T. Simonds' bid on the project was about 16 percent under the original construction bid, Shafer said.

The $873,000 grant received by the airport is based on the Federal Aviation Association's original estimate of $878,000 for both engineering and construction costs, he said.

The grant will fund 90 percent of the construction costs. The other 10 percent will come from the state of Illinois. The airport received the grant under the jobs bill passed by the state's General Assembly this year.

Because the dollar amount of the grant is based on the original estimate and not on the actual construction bid, some is still available for the airport to use.

This money will be used to begin construction of a non-skid surface on the airport's other runway. However, Shafer said, it will only be enough money to complete half the job.

The non-skid surface on the second runway will be completed upon the receipt of a second grant to the airport, he said.

Carle said the chances of the airport receiving a second grant look good.
Plan to divide SIU is a wasteful scheme

AMID GROWING pressure for a decision on a tax increase-proposal, it seems somewhat odd that the General Assembly would spend valuable time on legislation to create separate governing boards for SIU-C and SIU-Edwardsville.

But it isn't all bad. State Sen. Kenneth Rubbee has indicated that the plan is just a political ploy. If that's so, then the whole issue should be dropped.

The SIU divorce proposal was introduced last week by Senate President Philip J. Rock to amend a bill that would give Northern Illinois University its own governing board. The plan is in limbo now, but not yet dead.

RUBBEE, a Democrat from Makanda, believes that Rock intended "to amend the bill to death," effectively killing the NIU proposal by taking a measure on which was sure to raise the eyebrows of Republicans and Democrats alike.

And it should. When Gov. James Thompson is telling us that the state is in a financial crisis, and the Legislature is in the midst of considering state revenue, lawmakers have no logical reason to consider a proposal which would merely create a bureaucratic headache.

It would be wasteful. It would be costly. It would throw the SIU campuses into the chaos of administrative reorganization at a time when campus administrators have enough to worry about.

For that matter, so do legislators. They will soon have to decide which bad news to take home to their constituents — that they have to pay more taxes, or that the state will be cutting services to the fiscal bone.

It isn't going to be an easy choice. But political tactics such as the SIU divorce proposal are no way to solve the state's problems. It is the removal of NIU from the control of the Board of Regents, a three-university umbrella, which would be as much a move as the splitting of SIU. Chancellor Kenneth Shaw believes such a move would eliminate "a consistent approach to governance."

If that is so, Rock's amendment was needless. The bill as a whole has already been shoved aside, and with or without the SIU amendment seems likely to die of its own impracticality.

If that is not so, Rock's amendment is a strong indication that the SIU administration is interested in even more power, even more control, even more mismanagement of whatever money it has. The state would be better served by its officials spending their time and energy on things that really matter — the financing of the state government.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

We are outraged! The Student Center, supported by student fees, a tax of 75 cents per semester, has been invaded by the exclusion of the students. Specifically, the facility has inadequate cafeteria facilities and inadequate food. The students are forced to start eating in Thompson Woods.

All the students have been inconvenienced this past week by being forced into the Snack Area with no alternative.

We do not object to sharing the dining facilities with the students but do object to the use of the numerous athletic camp participants and other groups who have used the Snack Area in the past.

They must be removed from this area and put in the appropriate place.

Sincerely,

Surprise! U.S. as brutal as Soviets, perhaps more

Would a Superpower A in one region and Country S be proxy for B in the other. Both are hotbeds of trouble in the world today. Both P and S have the Catholic Church in strong opposition to oppressive governments in their respective countries. But in S, supported by B, theArchbishop was murdered by the government, hundreds of signatures down at his funeral, nuns have been raped and murdered and many priests have retreated as subversive elements.

In P, non-Church opposition leaders are interned and questioned. In S, opposition leaders suddenly disappear and are found tortured, mutilated and dead. In open protests still go on and the workers are on a slowdown. In S, open protests are met with machine gun fire.

In rioting in P, fewer than 100 have been killed. In S, about 35,000 have been killed in the last decade alone.

In P, military personnel from its patron A are not involved in operations against protesters, but in S, military advisers from A are actively involved in training, supplying and directing a war against the opponents.

Which superpower is the United States and which is the Soviet Union? Simple. Since B and its proxy A are the more brutal and oppressive pair, B must be the United States and A is Country Right? Wrong. It is El Salvador. A is the Soviet Union and P is Poland. The regions of influence are Central America and Eastern Europe.

In Poland Lech Walesa is still able to call press conferences in public and live, though under the watchful eye of the government. In El Salvador when five civilian leaders of the Democratic Revolutionary Front (FRD) called a press conference in 1989, they disappeared and were later found dead.

There is a myth that Eastern bloc countries cannot leave the influence of the Soviet Union while countries under the influence of the "Free World," that is the West, are free to choose the political path they wish to tread. Yet Yugoslavia and Albania have protected themselves free of Soviet influence ever since they gained independence. The Soviet economic rape of its region left the Soviet Union bases ring the Soviet Union. And the other is the U.S.

In the ’80s the world was static, the Soviet Union was more powerful. But with the destruction of the Warsaw Pact and the drastic reduction in military spending, the balance of the forces may have changed. And with the fall of the "Iron Curtain" and the lack of a superpower to dominate Central Europe, the U.S. may emerge as the true superpower.

Given these facts, it is surprising that the Soviets fear the U.S. as the new superpower. Given these facts, it is surprising that the U.S. fears the Soviets as the new superpower. And given these facts, it is surprising that the U.S. fears the Soviets as the new superpower.

Given these facts, it is surprising that the Soviets fear the U.S. as the new superpower.

When ARCHBISHOP Oscar Romero opposed the government in El Salvador, he was shot while saying mass in his own cathedral and the other atrocities followed. Yet in Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp is still able to negotiate with the government and his priests and nun group against government and marital law, even from the pulpit.

We need to yank our hypocritical heads from the sand and admit that we can do just as bad if not worse.

Starting the last great inclusion in U.S. society

IT IS almost demeaning to assure such nationalists that equity is "enlightened." In many cases, the handicap of handicapped children is not in the least the "least restrictive environment." Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act requires programs that are "readily accessible to disabled persons" means nothing to most Americans. Fifty-five million of us have some handicapping social attitudes. Americans are not as enlightened about handicapped children as are those who vote on the issue. They are currently excluded from fair social participation because of their handicap. Handicapped children are handicapping social attitudes.

A CONSERVATIVE research institute here (the Heritage Foundation) has shown the relatively few and mostly religious who have the highest potential to contribute positively to society.

Leave aside the philistine notion that any person who is different from you is "degenerated." The Philistines are not the conservative thought that something "wrong" with the 25 percent of all handicapped children were underserved. In fact, the average percent of all handicapped children who were more excluded from society's rewards, that are non-handicapped black children were in 1964. Now, some eight years later, we are invited to think that disabled persons are "scattered around the country." Handicapped children is not this what I think of as "America's meritocracy."

The PEAGAN administration's most serious self-inflicted wound has been its failure to practice creative, constructive, paralyzing sense. It has failed to recognize the power of the deficit. It has been shown that the PACs have no power, that there is a great deal of "favored" the disadvantaged people to have the success that they have had in such a short time:

"Let's stretch moral fiber."

I am writing this letter in reaction to two items I saw in the June 21 Daily Caller. The first item related to the "new" black economic development committee. The fact that this is a "new" black economic development committee is not the main point. The fact is that the Reagan administration has been allowing this to happen. It is a tragedy for the country. The morals of the community.

The Life to People who have been "attack" a woman's right to control of her own life for some time. I am not in need of the state at morality as it is.

We find ourselves equipped to deal with the entire world more than ever before. And we are constrained by the state at morality as it is.

To win one, we need to sacrifice the major population centers in the Northern Hemisphere, but this is not sufficient for the cities in the decline anyway -- and besides, the important thing is to save the way of life we have come to love.

Money will be stockpiled, and Congress and the president will be buried away in some secret hidey-hole until it's safe to come out again. The Russian government will keep in mind that there is more than half the population will be dead or dying. Thats why we need economic sanctions. That is why we need to hold by the way of life we have come to love.

Fund-raiser targets 100,000 alumni

By Ginsy Lee
Staff Writer

Potentially, her target is a population of almost four times that of Carbondale. But this population, SIU alumni, literally lives everywhere. Anne Carman, the new SIU Foundation director of annual giving, is hoping that she can encourage at least one in four of the 100,000-plus alumni to give to their alma mater on a regular basis.

Currently, about 10 percent of the alumni give regularly, while the national average is about 12 percent, said Carman, who came to SIU-C from the University of Missouri at Columbia where she was manager of annual giving since 1981.

"I'd like to have 25 percent of the alumni giving on a regular basis," she said. "The better public institutions range about that percent. How soon that will happen will depend on how fast we can get started."

People are interested in SIU, especially alumni," Carman said.

Her target will be "any graduate, all the way back."

And SIU alumni, she said, can be found "literally across the nation.

Carman, who holds three degrees from Missouri in teaching a master's and a doctorate in English, reached an alumni giving level of 1 percent at Missouri. But, she said, "I didn't get nearly as high as I wanted it to.

The federal and state squeeze on education, which makes Carman's job that much more crucial, but Carman looks at the situation positively.

"Historically, in tight times, when people realize the need for education and the shortage of funds for education, they give," she said.

THE GAY and Lesbian People's Union will meet at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Sierra Room at the Student Union. The summer program schedule will be discussed and plans made for the election of new officers.

THE HOSPICE Care Organization's monthly meeting has been changed to 7 to 8:30 p.m. on the first Wednesday of every month starting July 8 at Carbondale Memorial Hospital.

SYNERGY 18 offering a beginning training class for volunteers in cross-interviewing. Those interested in improving their communication skills, exploring personal growth and learning how a crisis center operates are needed by Synergy.

Classes meet in the evening and will begin after July 4. For more information, call 652-3324.

AN INTERVIEWING SKILLS WORKSHOP will be held at 1 p.m. Wednesday in 9-142, Woody Hall.

The workshop is offered by the Career Planning and Placement Center. Call 652-2381 or stop by 9-204, Woody Hall to register.

NZENGA, BLACK Women's Health Project of Southern Illinois, is sponsoring an alcoholism workshop, Elizabeth Harvey of the Alcohol Treatment Services and Robert Ledbetter, Carbondale police officer, will speak. The workshop will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Kewanee Community Center in the Center for the Arts and Crafts Room.

While her first step will be to coordinate a direct mail campaign with brochures and personal letters, Carman said she is also planning on conducting two telephone campaigns, or telefunds, this year.

"Steps will be done with the help of students who will call alumni asking for funds, while the other will be a alumni-to-alumni calls," she said.

"I think telefunds are fun," Carman said. "If you could hear the students talking to alumni who had graduated years ago — some even got job offers over the phone," she said, referring to telefunds she coordinated at Missouri.

Carman said the average individual donation through telefunds at Missouri was about $40, but donors can't be expected to just send in a check each year after the initial contact.

Her expectations have been raised," she said, and therefore, it is very important to call donors back each year.

A third way that Carman said she will use to raise funds from alumni is personal contact.

"That's someone's life situation and it requires a well-developed skill," she said. "As you go from direct mail to personal contact, the size of the gift goes up, but the effort to get it increases.

"There's an art of $1,000 or more," Carman said, "you have to be there to talk to the person.

Carman would also like to get the students more involved in fundraising by establishing a student foundation, something which was a big success at Missouri, she said.

Last year, the Missouri Student Foundation gave 12 scholarships with money it raised, Carman said. Students would make telephone calls through telefunds, as well as through mail solicitation, as a way of providing a better foundation of professors to cook dinner for students, she said.

"It was the club to belong to," she said. "But it's something the have to buy. It's not something that happens the first time.

As a donation to the immediate benefits of such a club, Carman said, students who help their school now will likely become better..." responsive to SIUC when they become alumni.

"If you get students working now, while they're in school, they become more responsible donors when they graduate," she said.

Carman is also interested in trying to encourage alumni chapters to sponsor students in their communities to come to SIU-C.

This sort of scholarship creates a sort of network of people who have a stake in the University, she said.

Anne Carman, director of annual giving for the SIU Foundation.

Carman, who was active in the Missouri Equal Rights Amendment Coalition during the mid-1970s, said that she had to put her ERA activities on the backburner when she began administrative work at Missouri.

Likewise, with her job at the SIU Foundation, Carman said there simply isn't enough time.

The work sometimes takes 80 or more hours a week, she said.

"And that's serious," she said. "It's more than full time," But, Carman said she believes individual achievements can help the cause of women's rights.

"It was as if I learned from my ERA experience that individual woman have to make individual achievements in order to keep progress moving," she said.

At SIU-C, as in her Missouri post, Carman will be looking for help from students, faculty, staff and alumni in her fund-raising efforts.

For the 100,000 alumni campaign, SIU-C will have a celebration on July 28 at 7:15 p.m. in the Student Center. Logos will be printed on the 32-person campaign poster. The poster will be donated to the winning student by the poster entry winner.

New Shawnee Solar director encourages use of program

By Paula J. Finlay
Staff Writer

More people should take advantage of the services the Shawnee Solar Project offers, according to the project’s new executive director.

“We’re here and open,” said Nancy Reed. “We want people to use it.” Reed began as executive director of the project June 1, replacing Hugh Muldoon who resigned from the position in mid-May. She received a bachelor’s degree in political science from SIUC in 1981 and is pursuing a master’s degree in public administration.

The organization has been around since 1978 and has been at its current location at 808 S. Forest St since December 1981.

Beginning in mid-July the project will have a “community tool chest” where tools for home improvement and weatherization can be borrowed or rented for up to three days, Reed said.

“We have everything from screwdrivers to shop vacuums to power tools,” she said.

Some of the larger power tools will have a rental fee ranging from 25 cents to $1. Checking out tools requires a $1 annual membership fee which covers use of the center’s resource center as well, Reed said. Tool safety and working instructions will be given with the tool check-out.

The Shawnee Solar Energy Center on South Forest Street is a working demonstration of conservation and solar retrofit that is open to the public. The retrofit house is a typical single family Southern Illinois house that the group transformed into an “energy efficient solar demonstration center,” she said. The house which does not have a furnace, is heated totally by the sun, Reed said. The center houses the project’s offices and resource center.

“We have probably the best collection of alternative energy resources in the Midwest,” Reed said.

The resource center, which is open to the public, contains over 1,400 volumes, Reed said. It has information on alternate energy sources, recycling, waste disposal, agriculture, education, and environmental policy, she said. Checking out books and other materials requires the annual membership fee.

The project is a non-profit organization funded in part by the City of Carbondale community groups and SIUC ILN. It leased the house on South Forest Street to the project in 1981 for $10 for three years. The group has applied for United Way funding as well, she said.

Most federal and state money is dried up,” Reed said. “There’s so many more things we could do that we’re capable of doing with better funding,” Reed said.

“We are working on a proposal for establishing more formal working and financial relationships with other agencies and institutions in the community and state,” she said.

The group encourages people to get involved in the project by putting finishing touches on the retrofit house or by doing graphics work, public relations, and library cataloging in the resource center, Reed said.

“We’re actively searching for volunteers,” she said. “It’s a good place to get some hands-on experience.”

The "force" was certainly with them when they were brought into the bookstores across the nation.

Nationwide sales of "Return of the Jedi" and other science fiction books have increased as a result of the related movies bearing the same titles as the books. Let's hope it is more than just a similar trend.

Last week five books related to the film "Return of the Jedi" were on the New York Times hardcover and paperback bestseller lists. And "CBS Morning News" this week ran a story on one of the "Jedi" books among the top three in fiction.

At the University Bookstore, books related to the science fiction movies generally sell well, according to Naomi Patheal, store manager.

"But the Jedi books did not sell as well as the books on the first two of the Star Wars trilogy," Patheal said. "Overall, though, the Jedi books usually sell as well as any other science fiction books."

Patheal doesn't believe that SIU-C's students go for the science fiction books as much as high school students do. More high school students than college students buy science fiction books at the University Bookstore, she said.

The University Bookstore offers more than 250 paperback and hardcover science fiction books. Usually, Patheal and her assistant order between 10 and 20 books of a particular title.

"We make orders at different times of the year," she said. "We have to make predictions and decisions. Sometimes we predict correctly, sometimes not so well."

The popularity of the books will probably remain high through early fall and for as long as the movies run, Patheal said.

"The popularity of the books can be attributed to the Star Wars craze," she said. "Sales of science fiction books will always be affected by the related movies."

Waldenbooks at the University Mall, one of 119 chains around the nation, also shows a similar pattern in science fiction books.

Sigurd Utgaard, a clerk at the store, said "Star Wars" books sell "out the door."

Utgaard said that about 100 copies of "Star Wars" paperbacks have been sold in the past week.

Marsha Musgraves, store manager, shares the same view as Patheal and Utgaard on the effect of the movies on book sales.

"The movies make a world of a difference," Musgraves said. "I don't think the books would have sold as well as they did if there were no movies on the same titles."

Military program specialist dies

Funeral services for 61-year-old John J. Brown of Belleville, a teaching specialist in SIU-C military programs, were conducted Tuesday at St. Peter's Cathedral in Belleville.

Mr. Brown, visiting assistant professor of industrial technology in SIU-C's off-campus Programs for the Military, died Saturday at Memorial Hospital in Belleville. He had suffered from cancer.

Mr. Brown joined the faculty in 1977 after serving nearly 30 years in the U.S. Air Force, reaching the rank of lieutenant colonel. He was SIU-C's first representative at Scott Air Force Base, one of the more than 40 military installations where SIU-C conducts programs.

Last year, he went to Great Britain to help establish the University's first overseas military base programs.

Mr. Brown lived in Belleville with his wife, Kathleen, and a daughter, Karen. Other surviving children, all of whom live out of state, are John, Brian, Kevin and Barbara Brown and Karen Hewko.

Burial was in Lakeview Memorial Gardens, Belleville.

"Oliver" comes to life Friday

By Terry Leveche
Staff Writer

"Oliver," the British musical hit based on Charles Dickens' novel, "Oliver Twist," will be the next presentation by the McLeod Theater Department. The musical will come to life at 8 p.m., July 3 and 7-10 in McLeod Theater. The production is a combined effort of the School of Music and the Theater Department, featuring a space orchestra to play the many songs that have become classics since the musical was first performed in London in 1960.

Lainel Bart adapted Dickens' dark, depressing tale of poverty and crime into a delightfully rollicking musical. "Oliver" traces an orphan boy's adventures from the starving deprivation of a workhouse run by cranky Mr. Bumble through an apprenticeship with mean undertaker Mr. Sowerberry, a school for juvenile pickpockets run by the dark and ghastly Fagin, and finally into a happy home.

Alban Dennis, a junior at Carbondale Community High School, will play Oliver. Alban is returning for his second year with the playhouse, and has been working in the Theater Department since he was 8 years old.

He garnered Johnson's admiration for his second year with the playhouse, and has been working in the Theater Department since he was 8 years old.

He has a lot of ambitions for the future. He said he'd like to be an architect and an actor, or a cook and an actor, "but they're both full time jobs, so I don't know."

"When I realize what I am, I think it'll be performance," Alban said.

Frank Trubile, a recent graduate with a Master's degree in educational leadership, has always been my favorite scenic designer. The show, "Oliver," is based on Charles Dickens' novel of the same name and has been a favorite of mine for a long time. Maybe it's because it's my brother's name, but I do really like the music.

The experience Alban has gained working in theater "makes it easier to work with. We're all still picking up and asking what to say," he said.

It has a lot of ambition for the future. He said he'd like to be a "happy" and "enjoyable" world of the 19th century. Mike Jones will be conducting the orchestra. The tickets for "Oliver" are $7 for adults and $6 for students and senior citizens. The tickets are available at the McLeod Theater Box Office in the Communications Building.

Patrolmen wear space suits to fool Japanese audience

HOUSTON AP - Four Houston police officers in white space suits - with bubble helmets and giant space-glove gloves, for a stunt aimed at convincing Japanese television viewers that Houston is the traffic cop that JFK landed on.

The stunt was a part of the Houston Police Department's attempt to attract Japanese viewers to the city. The stunt was performed in downtown Houston as part of a promotional campaign aimed at attracting Japanese viewers to the city.

The stunt was among several filmed in Houston by the show, which has an audience of 50 million people in Japan.
Second effort by Crenshaw misses mark set by first LP

By Andrew P. Zinner
Student Writer

Marshall Crenshaw burst upon the rock-n-roll scene last summer with a highly succesful debut album filled with infectious, all-American love songs that all frustrated young lovers could relate to.

His twangy guitar and straightforward lyrics were a timely relief from the cold synthesizer invasion that was then sweeping in on the charts.

As with so many brilliant debut artists, the New York-based singer has lived up to that first effort with his second LP, "Field Day." The clean, simple production that made his first work so accessible has been replaced by the more elaborate, busy sound created by producer Steve Lillywhite, whose credits include the very hot Irish band, U2.

Still, there are good songs on "Field Day." The less-disgusting Crenshaw fan will spot the flaws, but this is an album that grows on each listen. Especially nice is the danceable, bouncy "Love Me" loved by Crenshaw's brother, Robert, on drums. This tune typically has a Crenshaw song-writing style—simple, no-frills lyrics delivered with the over-used "love conquers all" rationale.

In a similar lyrical vein is the LP's opener, "Love Me Tonight." The Hook: "Love Me Tonight." "I love you, honey, you make me feel..."

Another interesting number is "Monday Morning Rock," which twists around the usual rock and roll mold by employing the virtues of Monday morning to make a statement. It's a good tune, but the hook is "I can feel the dance all night..."

While those songs are worth hearing, a couple clearly are not. They're almost like filler.

The student recital on Saturday night featured works by many composers, Bach and Villa Lobos to name a couple as well as two pieces composed by students. At the end of the recital each student was given a certificate of participation in the Second International Guitar Seminar. Santorsala's presentation on Tuesday night also was interesting in that Santorsala didn't speak English, but through a carefully planned presentation and an interpreter, the composer's genius of Santorsala became obvious to all those present. Those who came, left with a greater understanding of the relationship between maturity and music, as well as an improved sense of the wide realm of possibilities in music.

The three events of the seminar which were open to the public provided a unique view of classical guitar music performance and composition possibilities. The program should be continued next year and hopefully, more people will attend the presentations.

Students of the guitar as well as laymen can learn something while still being entertained.

Court rules some life terms might be ‘cruel and unusual’

The Supreme Court ruled Thursday that sentences of life in prison without parole for first time offenders convicted of relatively minor crimes, such as burglary or drug dealing, are cruel and unusual punishment. The court said such sentences are a violation of the Constitution’s Eighth Amendment, which prohibits "cruel and unusual punishments." The justices said they would use that amendment to strike down the life sentences handed down to some first-time offenders.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court struck down as cruel and unusual punishment Tuesday the sentencing of habitual offenders convicted of relatively minor criminal conduct to life in prison with no chance of parole.

By a 5-4 vote, the court said it was unconstitutional for South Dakota to impose a life term without parole for anyone convicted of four felonies, no matter how trivial. The court ruled that a sentence of life in prison without parole is too harsh for a first-time offender convicted of a series of minor crimes.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., writing for the majority, said the Constitution’s Eighth Amendment prohibits not only barbaric punishments, but also sentences that are disproportionate to the crime committed.

In a separate decision, the court ruled by a 5-4 vote that natural gas pipeline companies may use a pricing structure that could cost American consumers more than $2 billion in higher rates. The court said the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission was wrong when it interpreted the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act as requiring pipeline companies to use production costs as the basis for prices charged for gas produced from wells owned by the companies.

Instead, the court affirmed a 1981 ruling by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans that Congress intended to allow pipeline wells to command the same higher production-incentive prices that other drillers got under the 1978 law.

The high court’s decision drew immediate criticism from the Consumer-Labor Energy Coalition, a group that opposed the ruling. But it raised questions about the future of pipeline prices.

In the decision on punishing habitual offenders, the court threw out a sentence of life imprisonment without parole for Jerry Heim, last convicted of writing a phony $100 check. He had previously been convicted of eleven other crimes, including three liquor store burglaries, drunken driving and theft.

Heim, 36, when he received the life sentence in 1979, is in South Dakota State Penitentiary in Sioux Falls.

Heim was described in court records as an alcoholic who had spent much of his last 14 years in prison.

The court used Heim’s case to modify a 1980 decision in which the justices had said states were free to impose mandatory life sentences on habitual offenders, even if their crimes were non-violent and comparatively trivial.
Mormons fleeced by con men; Utah testing ground for frauds

By Michael White
Associate Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Con men and swindlers have found a testing ground in Utah, where they have fleeced millions of dollars from trusting members of the Mormon Church, authorities say.

Since 1960, as many as 10,000 investors have lost $200 million, according to U.S. Attorney General Ward, in cases that have been dubbed the “fraud capital of the world.”

Church leaders have turned to the pulpit and written word to teach the need for ethical business practices and have warned unsuspecting members to be cautious in investments. Relying on trust earned by the credibility of active church membership, shysters have bilked fortunes from brothers and sisters in the faith, often with promises of a quick, easy fortune.

“It seems anytime religion enters into a sales pitch, the promoter is able to bridge the gap from unbelievable to believability,” Ward said.

An intense public campaign has been put into action by state and federal agencies to make potential suckers wary.

“Up until making progress,” he said, “We've not been a large-scale fraud raise its ugly head here in the past year. If we can go two years and say that, that would be a mutual friend. The investor just works here, they take it on the road.” Ward said.

In a case still under investigation, several hundred people invested in a scheme to turn dirt into gold, he said. In another, a man sank $400,000 into a coal futures deal solely on the word of a man who claimed to be a mutual friend. The investor, Ozzie Miller, in a state the FBI testing ground for frauds, have lost $200 million in an alleged Pizazz scheme, in which original investors are paid from money conned from other victims.

“That trust, the wanting-to-be-helpful attitude, will hurt people if there is someone who wants to take advantage of their trusting nature,” said Elder Hugh Brown, Utah Attorney General Ward’s First Council of the Seventy.

“You know I would still want to be a trusting person. You just have to be careful.”

Tinted that their lives are part of a divine plan, Mormons tend to work hard and aim high.

Women swimmers send 3 to World Games

Pam Ratcliffe, perhaps the top swimmer on a SIU-C swim team loaded with Olympic prospects, didn't attain that status by staying in the pool and out of the classroom.

For combining excellence with academics, the junior swimmer was named this week to the CoSida-at-large academic All-American team, which is comprised of ten of the top female collegiate athletes in the country.

Ratcliffe will be in Edmonton this weekend at the World University Games, along with two other female Saluki swimmers, Janie Countz and Stacy Westfall, and former Rebel Roger Von Joanne.

Ratcliffe will swim the 100 breaststroke July 5 and the 200 individual medley July 6. Countz will swim the 200 free July 4, the preliminary 100 free the next day and then the finals of the 100 free July 6. Westfall will concentrate on the 200 fly July 7.

Meanwhile, Von Joanne will compete in the 200 individual medley July 5 and the 200 fly the following day.

Sonya Locke, of the SIU-C women's volleyball team, also has a chance to make it to the Games. She was selected as the first alternate to the first member of the American volleyball team, and will make the trip if any of the regulars are forced to withdraw.

At the National Sports Festival in Colorado, a less prestigious meet, swimmer Amanda Martin and volleyball better Lisa Cummings will represent SIU-C.

Elgarts concentrate on winning

By Dan Devere Sports Editor

John and Linda Elgart cycle competitively — not for fun, but more for bread.

"If every race I expect to win," said John Elgart, "it's one concerned with time. It's unimportant. What's important is who's fastest. It's our agreed.

"People don't congratulate you and clap you on the back when you win last. That's your reward."

John Elgart, who expects to win usually does. And Linda Elgart hasn't had the tough luck of finishing last since she took up the sport five years ago.

John Elgart has won seven of the nine races he's entered this year. Riding in the veterans category (16 and over), he has won six races in a row, the last win coming June 5 at the Illinois State road race. Last year he won eight races.

Linda Elgart has won five of her nine outings this year and placed first at Illinois State and sixth her last race out, at the Ambler, Pa. criterium. She is a former Illinois State Time Trial Champion.

As a serious cyclist, sheQuote almost all her time and money to her sport, most of which is spent on travel, the 34-year-old Elgart now owns a bike shop.

"It's completely different. It's not competitive," she said.

"It's more social."

On a tour one time, she was taken back by the types of people who ride — little kids, old people, people who kept stopping to eat and riders who took their time.

Neither Elgart has anything against that type of riding — it's just not for them. Rather, they've taken it with the competitive and strategic aspects of racing.

"As in any sport, once you get involved you get addicted," John Elgart, who spends between 15 to 20 hours a week in training, said. "You're always striving to be competitive. It's nice to have goals. Every year I've improved.

The Elgarts, married for a year and a half, both enjoy the thinking that goes with a race.

"It's not like running where everybody runs their own race," John Elgart said. "It's very strategic."

He said he can either stay with the pack and their sprint for the finish at the end, or he can try to get an early lead and run his opponents into the ground. The latter strategy loses the advantage of drafting and also the force of the wind, that he says can save 30 percent or maximum effort.

The cyclist, he said, is always aware of the rules and competition — whether he's racing or training. He said whether he should stay, whether he should follow the pack, or whether he should simply drop out.

The Elgarts are members of the SIU-C Phoenix cycling club.

Although not designed specifically for racers, the club has evolved in that direction and now has about 30 members, most students and mostly racers.

Most club members train together, usually going hard one day, then easier the next. John Elgart estimates that he rides about 250 miles a week.

Linda Elgart goes about 100 to 200. They combine sprint and distance work, with little running, and lift weight in the winter.

As a high school kid, John Elgart's participation in cycling was more modest. He used his bike to get to school. It was faster than taking the bus, he said, but mainly it was just something to do.

"I had a bike, but I didn't ride it in school high school, preferring to stay off the narrow, crowded streets of Philadelphia. Five years ago I was riding with her future husband and showed immediate promise.

When I first saw Linda I knew she would be a bike rider," he said. And to prove it she was. "It's the day after the first ride and bought her a pair of cycling shoes.

"I was kind of surprised," she said. "Here I was a cycling through and I hadn't even known how to start gears."

In her first criterium race she crashed and broke both collarbone.

"I thought, 'My God, what am I doing here.'"

John Elgart, a graduate student in philosophy, has thought about that a little bit, but refrains from an esoteric discussion of the sport. "I don't want to say any metaphysical b.s.," he said simply. "It's a sport where you test your physical and mental capacities."

Elgarts concentrate on winning

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Rockets, winners of just 14 games last season, grabbed 7-4 Ralph Sampson of Virginia and 7-4 Rodney Mc-Cray of Louisville with the first and third pick in the National Basketball Association draft.

In Sampson, the Rockets believe they have drafted a franc- making player. In McCray, they acquired a "team" player who will complement, by his defense, and pass the ball to Sampson.

Steve Birovich of Missouri went second to Indiana, which had earlier lost a coin flip with Houston for the right to take Sampson. Choosing fourth, San Diego took junior guard Byron Scott of Arizona State, while forward Sidney Green of Nevada-Las Vegas was taken fifth by Portland from Oregon.

Green, a 6-9, 235 pound for- ward, finished his Russian Rebel career as the school's leading all-time rebounder and scorer. Few other college players have his Credentials.

Later Chicago traded veteran forward Mark O'Brien to Kansas City for little point guard Ernie Whaley, taken as the 19th selection.

The trade still requires approval from the NBA.

The pick in the first round, by Detroit, was forward Antoine Carr of Wichita State, who will join former Shockers teammates Cliff Levingston with the Pistons. Other first- rounders were No. 5 Russell Helt of Indiana State, No. 9 Dale Ellis of Ten-nessase by Dallas, No. 10 Jeff Malone of Mississippi State by Washington, and No. 11 Derek Hooper of Illinois by Dallas.

Then came No. 12 Dell Walker of Arkansas by New York, No. 13 Whately, No. 14 Brian Williams of Portland, No. 15 Howard Carter of Louisiana State by Denver, No. 16 John Sanders of Missouri by Seattle, No. 17 Leo Raszynski of Syracuse by Philadelphia.
