Bush to seek amendment on flag

House, Senate split on flag-burning decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush said Tuesday he will seek passage of a constitutional amendment to counter a Supreme Court decision that went "too far" in allowing political protesters to burn the American flag.

"Flag burning is wrong. Protection of the flag, a unique national symbol, will in no way limit the opportunity nor the breadth of protest available in the exercise of free speech rights," he said at a White House news conference.

The announcement drew mixed reactions from Congress and civil rights groups. Some viewed Bush's action as a necessary defense of the flag but others feared a constitutional amendment could run against the First Amendment guarantees of freedom of expression.

House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois said he has "an instinctive conservative's dislike" for amending the Constitution but believes it proper in this case.

"Unfurl the flag, fly it, flaunt it, argue about it if you want to, but don't desecrate it — that's all we're asking," he said. "Surely that view reflects the common sense of the American people."

But Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said Bush's proposal could ultimately undermine the Constitution and weaken the Bill of Rights.

"I take second place to no one in my respect for the flag," he said. "But the issue decided by the Supreme Court is not whether flag burning is repulsive."

Ira Glasser, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, charged that Bush is violating his inaugural oath and vowed that his organization would oppose the amendment.

"George Bush has violated the oath he took to uphold the Constitution, and while he pretends with his proposal to honor the flag, he desecrates the freedom of speech that the flag represents," Glasser said from New York.

At the news conference, Bush said he has "the greatest respect for the Supreme Court," but declared "The importance of this issue compels me to call for a constitutional amendment. We are beginning consultations with members of Congress who hold similar views."

House Speaker Thomas Foley, who opposes a constitutional amendment, said the House would "calmly" hold hearings on the issue and study possible ways to reach the same goal through a law.

Bush said, "As president I will uphold our precious right to protest, but burning the flag goes too far. ... I believe that the flag of the United States should never be the object of desecration."

The president took a far less alarmist view of recent

Supreme Court decisions viewed by civil rights leaders as setbacks for affirmative action and other programs, characterizing the issues addressed by those rulings as "technical."

Saying he is confident "nothing in these decisions jeopardizes" the principle of equal opportunity, Bush said, "If the decisions actually turn out to hamper civil rights enforcement ... obviously, I would want to take steps to remedy the situation."

On other domestic issues, Bush refused to blame anyone for the unfolding influence-peddling scandal at the Housing and Urban Development Department during the Reagan administration.

Fast food services possible next year

By Micki Delhaute McGowan

Two fast food restaurants may open in the Student Center next year if the Undergraduate Student Government proposal is approved by the Student Center board.

Tim Hildebrand, USG president, said if approved, the restaurants will open July 1, 1990.

"We want to have a hamburger place and a pizza place, and maybe even an ice cream shop," Hildebrand said. He said the new restaurants would be located in what is presently H.B. Quick's, and in either Market Place or Pizza Pete's.

The Student Center board will be taking bids in February from restaurants interested in locating in the Student Center. The two restaurants with the best offers will be the bids the Student Center will accept.

John Corker, director of the SIUC Student Center, said the Student Center has a contract with Marriott through May 30.

"We are going to look at many kinds of options," Corker said.

He said fast food restaurants would be one option the Student Center would consider. "We want to have a diversity of services and we open seven days a week,"

Corker said.

The profits the Student Center would receive from the new businesses would pay for new additions to the Student Center, Hildebrand said.

One interested restaurant is McDonald's.

Steve Short, supervisor of McDonald's, said McDonald's is "very interested (in a Student Center location). We've been trying for a long time to get in there."

Short's family owns the three Carbondale McDonald's.

Hildebrand said the goal for putting new restaurants in the

7 women honored for service

Seven women have been chosen to receive the University Women of Distinctions Award, according to Uma Sekaran, coordinator of University Women's Professional Advancement.

The award will be given for the first time this year to honor women who have contributed to the advancement of the University, Sekaran said.

"The award is not only a personal honor, but will help all women at the University by providing positive reinforcement for their efforts," Charlotte West, associate director of athletics, said.

West will receive the award along with Elizabeth Eames, professor of philosophy; Marion Kleinau, professor of speech communication; Karol Abrams, weather observer at Air Institute; Joann Marks, staff secretary at the College of Liberal Arts; Shirlene Holmes, doctoral student in speech communication; and Marilyn Karaffa, doctoral student in health education.

The women were selected according to their achievements in their

Council's denial will not alter Hill House's plans

By John Walby
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council denied Tuesday Hill House's request for an unofficial vote that would indicate the council's position on the facility's planned relocation.

Pressured by state mandates, Hill House's Executive Director Malisa Janes asked the council for a "straw" vote, which would not commit the council but would give Hill House a strong indication on the facility's status.

The denial by the council doesn't change the facility's plans made Monday at a Hill House board of director's meeting. The board decided at its meeting not to wait for a decision from the council on whether the facility can continue with plans to relocate on Park Street in Carbondale.

"Any further delays are running the risk of us (Hill House) not having a licensed facility when we need to have one in place," Janes said Monday.

The board approved the action of ranking other relocation options outside of Carbondale.

"I've been talking to a lot of mayors, a lot of city council members, and school board people, and city engineers, and real estate people all over Southern Illinois looking at the options," Janes said.

"We, of course, all along have had secondary choices and the time is now to actively start pursuing some of those second choices to see if, in effect, we would get the same kind of reception," she said.

Janes said Hill House has been trying to win approval for the Park Street site for more than three months now, having met with staunch opposition from residents of the Brush Hill subdivision, which is adjacent to the site on Park Street.

Residents from Brush Hill claim the relocation of the facility, which is used for the in-patient treatment of adolescents with drug or alcohol problems, would jeopardize their safety, lower the value of surrounding property and cause road safety concerns.

Seniors, kids get together

By Micki Delhaute McGowan
Staff Writer

As senior citizens watched, children paraded around in wigs and clothes many sizes too big.

Rainbow's End preschoolers were making their routine visit to the Elderwise adult day care center, at the Carbondale Senior Citizens Center.

Every week, the group heads to Elderwise to visit its elderly friends.

Many Carbondale children do not have grandparents nearby, and many elders do not live near their grandchildren. These two generations have the opportunity to interact with each other through the program.

When the program began six years ago, Liz Schill, director of adult day care, said, "It was kind of scary to the children."

Some of the preschoolers had never been around elderly people and "it was a different experience for them," she said.

Their fears quickly faded. "Now they are not the least bit afraid," Schill said.

Evie Wexler Mylan, director of Rainbow's End, said the program "benefits the children because of contact with the elders. It gives them an ongoing experience with the life cycle."

Mylan said the program gives children and adults the opportunity to build relationships with each other. "The seniors love to have the kids come," Schill said. "Some of them just sit and wait for the kids to get here."

Edna Rosemand, a senior citizen who is at the center four days a week, said the day the children visit Elderwise is one of her favorite days of the week. "I think it is really nice that they come to see us," Rosemand said. She said she enjoys making hats and participating in crafts with the preschoolers.

Beulah Fisher, another senior citizen who attends Elderwise, said she enjoys being with the children. "Some of their games I don't know how to play, but I play the ones I know," she said.

Neal Jones, a senior citizen, said, "I like to do anything they (the children) like to do."

The preschool usually plans activities the children normally do at Elderwise and the seniors can participate if they want to, Schill said.

Sometimes the preschool and Elderwise plan activities together. The children and elder adults play games, solve puzzles and participate in arts and crafts projects, Schill said.

Jessica, a preschooler wearing a large curly wig, said, "I like to dress up here."

Cameron, a four-year-old, said going to Elderwise is "fun." His favorite activity at Elderwise is dressing up in costumes.

When the children are back at Rainbow's End, they have the chance to pretend that they are elderly, just like their friends at Elderwise. Mylan said Rainbow's End has gray-haired wigs and old clothes that the children enjoy dressing up in.

By Theresa Livingston
Entertainment Editor

When society evolves, so do its forms of expression.

As an artform, comic strips such as Pogo and Doonesbury have always been a good social barometer, forecasting social trends and more.

However, until recently most of the traditional strips have focused on men and male problems, with female characters invariably being, at best, supporting characters or, at worst, little more than shallow good-looking window dressings.

So it follows the latest step of comical evolution would be in the form of Hermoine, the Modern Girl and her rambling monologue, "A Modern Girl's Guide to Everything."

Billing itself as an indispensable guide to life for single women, this slim volume of acerbic wit is a realistic, though caustic, look at life's trials and tribulations through feminine eyes.

Hermoine, created by Australian Kaz Cooke, is a "post-virginal Cathy" who was named after a Harlequin romance. She is a hip, happening woman with a feisty shock of spiky red hair, funky clothes, a perennial pair of cool, black wrap-around shades and above all, an attitude with a capital A.

For Hermoine is no shrinking violet. She's one opinionated, liberated woman.

For example, under the heading of "True Luv and Romance," she discusses the different types of specimens which comprise the male sex, including, among others, Mr. Approximate-Fake Feminist (the typical jerk masquerading as the supposed New, Sensitive Man after reading the right books), Mr. Sleaze-Schmucko (who reads the wrong books) and Mr. Right (which Hermoine thinks should be heralded by a "glowing green light which would save an awful lot of tears, telephone bills and time devoted to new hairstyles during emotional crises.")

Book Review

The prose continues on in that vein, as Hermoine covers everything from first dates to lost innocence to fashion (complete with a glossary to help the reader decode key fashion clichés) to politics to culture. The commentary is punctuated by witty cartoons as she candidly covers "actual, honest-to-God, no-getting-around-it, nitty, gritty sex," contraception, sexual etiquette and "PMS as a legal defense in any homicide."

However, this brand of humor is not for everyone. Hermoine's observations are definitely from a female perspective, for although this book has been highly amusing to my women friends, prompting shrieks of laughter, the men I showed it to were not amused at all. They were, however, incredulous.

"Is this the way women really think?!" they asked.

If they only knew.

Freedom of speech above mere symbol

ONE PERSON, Gregory Johnson, who chose to burn the American flag as a form of political protest, has, as most everyone now knows, been protected by the Supreme Court. The court ruled 5-4 that the action, regarded as "expressive conduct," was protected by the First Amendment's right of free speech.

Since that ruling, the issue has struck the emotional chords of many individuals across the country, and continues to resound.

It seems ironic to many that Johnson should be protected by a country toward which he has shown disgust.

What the court has judged is that it was not the country or the flag that disgusted him; it was a political administration. He thought burning the flag during the 1984 Republican Convention was the most effective way to express himself and his beliefs about the Reagan administration.

THE OFFICIAL American flag has existed since 1777 as a symbol of the rights and freedoms upon which our country is built. One of those freedoms allows individuals to express their opinions.

Many people are expressing their disapproval of the Supreme Court's ruling on this matter. The Senate, in a 97-3 vote, has approved a resolution expressing its disappointment at the decision, and pledged "to seek ways to restore sanctions against such reprehensible conduct."

There are two ways to restore sanctions: by amending the constitution, or by changing the composition of the Supreme Court.

President Bush has announced that he will call for a constitutional amendment to protect the flag.

THE AMENDING process — the more likely of the two to occur — is time and energy consuming, and is financed by the American taxpayers.

Gregory Johnson's action should be judged as a legal, not an emotional issue. The leaders of our country have critical, legal issues to address to protect and improve the well being of the citizens of the country the flag represents. In seeking an amendment, time for citizens is forfeited for time for the flag. It is the citizen's right to decide how that time should be spent.

The Illinois Senate approved a bill Monday that will, if passed, outlaw the placement of an American flag on the floor. The crime, a felony, will be punishable by up to six years in prison. This seems to show Illinois' position on the importance of the flag.

OUR CONSTITUTION, a product of our forefathers, has worked for over 200 years. Amendments have been added to improve the product which in turn protects its users — Americans.

The amendment passed would function to protect the sacredness of our country's symbol at the cost of abandoning a fundamental right — freedom of expression.

The men who fought under the flag gave their lives not for the flag, but for the freedoms it represents.

While not many Americans want to see their flag burn, they must realize that the rights the flag stands for are more important than the emotions it arouses.

The flag is important as a symbol. Should it be more important than the rights represented? We think not.

State's Attorney deplores 'outrageous decision'

Court protects flag-burners! Apparently our U.S. Supreme Court has gone off the deep end by ruling that burning the American flag, as a form of political protest, is protected by the Constitution's free speech guarantees.

This has got to be one of the most outrageous decisions ever handed down by any Court in history.

It is also impossible for me to imagine that our founding father's intended the 1st Amendment's guarantee of free speech to evolve into what it is today — the last ditch haven of safety for derelicts of our society, such as flag-burners and pornographers.

With the ruling, the Court threw out the conviction of Gregory "Joey" Johnson, a member of the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade, and his sentence of a year in prison and a $2,000 fine. My first impression was that the Court had, in effect, barred all future prosecutions for such acts. However, in my opinion the Court left prosecutors a loophole.

In order for somebody like Mr. Johnson to get away with such a despicable act he would have to prove the flag-burning was a legitimate political protest. My point to any person who might be inclined to desecrate the American flag in Williamson County is — you will be arrested and prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. If some judge wants to throw the prosecution out so be it. But rest assured that I won't let a flag-burner get away without a fight. I hope that all other prosecutors in Illinois will adopt the same attitude. — Charles R. Garnati, State's Attorney, Williamson County

'Christian oath' drawback to Pledge of Allegiance

I am deeply concerned about the attitude revealed recently in Mr. Dyer's June 20 letter about Ricky Sherman and the Pledge of Allegiance.

In his letter, Mr. Dyer repeatedly quotes from the manifesto of his world-view, the Bible. He uses its passages to show how young Ricky's ideas are blasphemous and sinful. He's also right, as far as that goes. Ricky Sherman is a sinner by Mr. Dyer's standards.

But Mr. Dyer would have us believe Socialism is an institution of a republic without a state sponsored oath under God. This is not only a gross misunderstanding of English, it's a slap in the faces of our founding fathers, who understood the importance of an individual's free choice in religious matters.

The phrase: "...under God" does in fact imply a state sponsored religion in the most general sense. It does not say Allah, or Vishnu, or Buddha, or Eris. It is a Christian oath. I agree with Ricky Sherman's objection to it.

Mr. Dyer should remember religion's place in a free society. It is his providence to decide how he will behave and believe, not mine, and vice versa. — Andrew C. Hendricks, freshman in electrical engineering

Chinese intellectuals sought by authorities in crackdown

BEIJING (UPI) — Up to 100 leading intellectuals connected with the democracy movement or linked to ousted Communist Party chief Zhou Ziyang are being sought by authorities in a nationwide crackdown on dissent, Western diplomats said Tuesday.

Sources in Hong Kong said at least five intellectuals listed on a most-wanted list have escaped China through the British colony, indicating an escape route had been established to aid those fleeing the repression.

Two Americans, a student and professor, accused of participating in pro-democracy activities, were given 72 hours to leave China as 15 new arrests were reported in the massive sweep against remnants of the democracy movement. The Americans were the first foreigners expelled for joining protests.

In addition, U.S. officials said at least 11 American missionaries had their passports seized and were told to leave China by June 30 after being detained in the southwestern city of Kunming for distributing religious literature.

Police in Shanghai, meanwhile, were investigating a dynamite blast on a passenger train that killed at least 24 people and injured 11 others, Beijing Radio said.

The blast in a toilet on a third-class carriage could not immediately be tied to dissidents or to public anger over the brutal June 3 military assault in Beijing that ended the 22-day peaceful student occupation of Tiananmen Square.

But an official of the Public Security Bureau in Shanghai told United Press International the possibility of sabotage was being investigated.

Western diplomats said between 30 and 100 leading intellectuals associated with the democracy movement or with Zhao were being actively sought for arrest.

On the national level, West served as president of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, which grew to have more members than the NCAA before the two became consolidated.

The outlook for women in athletics is bleak, according to West, with under 50 percent of women coaching women's sports, and only one woman in the United States holding an athletics director position.

"The number of women pursuing careers in athletics has declined because women are not accepted into high administrative positions," West said.

Elizabeth Eames, another woman who will receive the award, is an internationally known expert on philosopher Bertrand Russell. In 1977, she Eames also helped establish Women's Studies at the University.

Marion Kleinau helped implement and develop the oral interpretation and creative dramatics specializations offered at the undergraduate and graduate levels in the Department of Speech Communication.

Kleinau also established the Calpre Stage at the University, an instructional laboratory for students in oral interpretation and creative dramatics.

Similarly, Joann Marks, who received the Civil Service Outstanding Service Award in 1982, has given direction to many students in their academic choices.

Hill House, faced with a July 1, 1990, deadline by the state, has to find an alternate site to accommodate the number of residents the facility has presently.

A lawsuit was filed Friday against the city by John Rendleman, the attorney representing opponents of the relocation project.

The lawsuit contained a complaint for a declaratory judgement and a temporary restraining order.

The declaratory judgement asked that a judge decide whether a super majority vote, which is four of five votes, was needed for passage instead of a simple majority of three of five votes. The Jackson County Court decision is pending.

The temporary restraining order sought to prevent the council from deciding on the special use permit for Hill House's relocation project, but Judge Richmand denied the request.

The facility, which houses 40 residents, would have to be reduced to approximately 24 residents if relocation would fail, according to Ben Edwards, regional manager for the Illinois Department of Substance and Alcohol Abuse.

Janas said if the facility was forced to relocate out of Carbondale, the 30 jobs held at the present facility and the 10 proposed positions after the expansion would have to move with the facility.

She said Hill House's employee salary payroll is at $1 million.

The council decided to hold a special meeting at 7 p.m. Monday in the city council chambers to discuss the matter further.

Student Center is "to draw more students and the community into the Student Center."

Chris Schwelle, director of the student center at Illinois State University, said when McDonald's opened in ISU's student center in 1982, the flow of traffic increased dramatically. "It was the difference between night and day," he said.

The students were much more receptive about coming into the student center, Schwelle said. McDonald's was so popular that the ISU student center added a Dairy Queen in 1983 and Garcia's Pan Pizza in 1987. Schwelle said, "We're much better off than we ever were with a food service."

University student center is presently under renovation for a McDonald's. Hardee's used to be in EIU's student center and had a fast food restaurant and also did catering. Joanne Gossett, EIU's student center director said.

"We had a fast food restaurant that ran everything and we had problems. We had a catering service that ran everything and we had problems," Gossett said. EIU has decided to solve this problem by opening its own catering service, separate from its fast food restaurant.

Rich Madison, student center director at SIU-E, said that SIU-E operates its own food service.

The story concerning legislation for the protection of organic farmers left out that the bill has been passed by both the Illinois House and Senate. An amendment was added, therefore the bill will go back to the House for a second vote. The Daily Egyptian regrets the error.

Child pilot in Moscow wants to meet Gorbachev

MOSCOW (UPI) — The 11-year-old American pilot who flew to Moscow on a round-the-world trip said Tuesday he wants to tour Red Square and meet Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev during his stay in the Soviet Union.

Tony Aliengana, of San Juan Capistrano, Calif., landed his single-engine Cessna-210 at Sheremetyevo Airport Monday at 3 p.m., flying in from Leningrad with his father Gary, his mother Susan, sister Alaina, and a Soviet boy Roman Cheremnykh.

Aliengana, who two years ago became the youngest pilot to fly across the United States, brought greetings from American children including 75,000 letters and a 1,000-foot-long scroll signed by 250,000 kids.

Aliengana said he hoped to take back a similar scroll signed by 250,000 Soviet children and present it to President Bush.

"I'd like to go to Red Square," he said. "I would like to meet Gorbachev."

Soviet officials said the Aliengana family would go to the Kremlin on Wednesday, but they did not know whether Gorbachev would be available to meet the visiting Americans.

Gary Aliengana, a pilot who trained his son, said Tony has been able to handle the long journey.

"I'm very proud of my son," he said. "I admire how he handles the plane. I don't need to touch the control stick because Tony does everything himself."

Aliengana said the journey, called "Druzhiba (Friendship) '89," was set in motion when he wrote to Gorbachev.

"Esteemed Premier Gorbachev," he addressed Gorbachev, whose actual titles are president and Soviet Communist Party general secretary. "I would like to fly to your country. It will be a flight of friendship."

Aliengana's landing at the Moscow airport, where he was greeted by scores of Soviet schoolchildren, contrasted dramatically with daredevil West German teen pilot Mathias Rust's unannounced landing on Red Square on May 28, 1987.

Rust, 19, when he landed his Cessna sport plane near the Kremlin, was sentenced to four years in a Soviet labor camp and subsequently released and deported after serving about a year of his term.

Rust also said he had made his flight in the cause of peace, but a three-man tribunal found him guilty of malicious hooliganism, violation of flight rules and illegal entry into the Soviet Union.

When Aliengana opened the cockpit door of his Cessna, reporters from Pravda, the party's official newspaper, deluged him with questions.

Aliengana is scheduled to leave Moscow on Saturday for the city of Kubyshev on the Volga River, a 475-mile flight on the next leg of his voyage across the Soviet Union.

His itinerary will take him through 12 Soviet cities.

KGB agent dies in Soviet Union three years after fleeing America

MOSCOW (UPI) — A U.S. naval intelligence analyst who defected to the Soviet Union has died three years after fleeing the United States, according to official news reports Tuesday describing him as a KGB spy who carried out "important special assignments."

An obituary in the Red Army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda said KGB agent Glenn Michael Souther died Thursday at 32. It did not give a cause of death for Souther, who disappeared from the United States in mid-1986 during an FBI espionage investigation.

The official Tass news agency also did not report the cause of death.

"The leadership of the KGB published an obituary in Krasnaya Zvezda newspaper after the sudden death of Soviet intelligence agent Mikhail Orlov (Glenn Michael Souther)," Tass said, while the Krasnaya Zvezda obituary expressed condolences "to the relatives and friends of Orlov."

The use of Souther's Russian name indicated he adopted it upon surfacing in the Soviet Union last July, when he requested and received political asylum and citizenship.

Tass indicated Souther, who said he was a native of Munster, Ind., had been a veteran operative for the Soviets, apparently specializing in spy satellites.

"For a long time, he performed important special assignments and made a large contribution to ensuring Soviet state security," Tass said.

Souther was on active duty in the U.S. Navy from January 1976 until December 1982. He then joined the naval reserve, where he was a photographer's mate first class working as an aerospace intelligence analyst with a high security clearance.

In Washington, a U.S. official said at the time of his defection, Souther was working in the Fleet Intelligence Center in Norfolk, Va., with access to highly secret information about the operation of the U.S. fleet.

Social problems a concern for kids in program

By Irene Oploh
Staff Writer

"There are very few shelters for the homeless that are paid for by the government," Jeremy Green, a seventh grader from Mt. Vernon said, "and the money that should be going into this area is now used in other places."

Green is one of several students studying the problem of homelessness in a 'problem solving' class at the University's Challenge to Excellence program.

Students created characters and assumed roles as an exercise to become familiar with problems of homelessness.

Greg Shields, an eighth grader from Gorham, portrayed an immigrant from Cancun, Mexico, whose family was separated in a hurricane. His wife drowned, and son suffered brain damage from a blow by a tree branch.

Thanks to "We're for Immigrants," created by the class and shelter volunteer Angela Povolish, a seventh grader from Murphysboro, Shields' character was assisted in finding work and shelter.

"We're for Immigrants" office building would shelter the homeless in the basement and provide some jobs for the unemployed, Povolish said.

The students designed manufactured homes which used alternate sources of energy to lower costs for low-income families.

Challenge to Excellence, sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, is offered through the College of Education.

The week-long camp is part of the University's "Summer ... Southern Style," an academic program designed to meet the needs of the pre-college population, Barbara Emil, conference coordinator at the Division of Continuing Education, said.

The program began last year to complement the sports camps has expanded to include more classes suitable for younger kids.

The College of Engineering and Technology is offering career orientation programs for women and minorities.

Classes offered in the College of Communications and Fine Arts include drawing, photography and air brushing.

Company fulfills special needs for disabled, elderly

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

Looking for a wheelchair that can move you around in a standing position? Or how about an electric fishing rod that automatically reels in the big one?

Disabled people with special requests like these, or everyday equipment needs, can call Abledata, an information net located in Springfield.

"We've been here about five years now," Cathy Cates, administrative assistant at Abledata, said.

Cates said Abledata, a federally funded program, uses over 60 databases nationwide to collect new product and research information for persons with disabilities.

"We don't charge Illinois residents for the service," Cates said. "I don't think there are many state agencies like that."

Ellen Bradley, assistant coordinator at disabled student services, recently used the service for the first time.

"We had a student who needed a very specific item — a door opener," Bradley said. "We have very generic information here, but they were able to send us tons of material on this specific item."

The center receives about 2,400 requests for information a year. Cates said so far the center has had enough money to research all of them.

Abledata can refer people to funding agencies as well, Cates explained.

Instructors extend holiday weekend

By Jackie Lay
Staff Writer

Although the Independence Day holiday does not begin officially until July 4, some SIU-C instructors will be canceling classes Monday.

"Technically, teachers are supposed to hold classes on the scheduled days. On the other hand, face reality, if a lot of students won't be there then it's up to the instructor," Gregory White, associate dean for the College of Business, said.

Marvin Kleinau, acting dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, had other ideas, though.

"Teachers have an obligation to the students to fulfill the contract of the syllabus," Kleinau said. "My hope would be that every class would be taught by the syllabus."

Marty Will, space administrator at admissions and records, said he could not condone teachers for not having class because classes are expected to be held when scheduled.

Competitive art exhibition to feature dimensional work

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

The Associated Artists Gallery, a cooperative of about forty area artists, is sponsoring "Self-Images," its first open competitive art exhibition for artists 18 years of age or older.

The deadline for entries is Aug. 12.

According to Bonnie Moreno, the gallery's publicity director, artists of all experience levels are encouraged to enter. Moreno expects that faculty members, art students, talented amateurs, and professional artists will be among the entrants.

"There are many people in this area who are very good artists," she said, referring to the contest's large pool of potential competitors.

The competition is open to two-dimensional art, such as paintings and drawings, as well as three-dimensional art, such as sculpture and ceramics. The works may be representational or abstract and must have been completed within the last year.

Entries should not exceed 6 feet by 6 feet, or weigh over 100 pounds. Two-dimensional works must be ready for hanging, either framed or mounted on glass with clips. Three-dimensional work should be self-supporting.

Artists must hand deliver their works, along with entry forms, identification labels and fees, to the gallery by Aug. 12 between the hours of 12:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Entry forms and labels are available at the gallery, located at 213 S. Illinois Ave.

The competition will be judged by Don Carver, director of the Paducah Art Guild Gallery in Paducah, Ky. Carver will select works to be displayed in an exhibition that will run at the Associated Artists Gallery from Aug. 22 through Sept. 16.

Artists chosen to exhibit work will be eligible to win either a $200 Best of Show Award, a $100 Merit Award or one of two $50 Merit Awards. The awards will be funded primarily through a non-refundable entry fee of $10 for members of the gallery and $12 for non-members.

Moreno said that artists will be encouraged but not required to put their works up for sale. The gallery will receive a 30 percent commission on all works sold. Prize-winning artists will have a particularly good chance of selling their works, Moreno said.

Moreno said in past exhibits, the prize-winning works of art were usually sold.

"It's really to the artist's advantage to win," she said.

Keaton, Nicholson to be celebrated for years to come for 'Batman' roles

Scrrips Howard News Service

Where are we? Gotham City, a brooding, darkly comic fantasy designed to suggest a Manhattan of the future already here. Laws are without force. There is extravagant wealth among the ruins.

But just as "Batman" doesn't exist in real time — there are computers and TV, but clothing from the '20s and '30s mixed with the latest fashions — neither is the setting a real place. Skyscrapers share space with medieval castles and art deco rooms.

Michael Keaton as Bruce Wayne and Batman, the stalker of evil, and Jack Nicholson as mobster Jack Napier who becomes the demonic Joker, give performances that will be talked about for years.

However, the people who "ive "Batman" the overall quality that makes it unlike any other big summer movie are director, Tim Burton, production designer Anton Furst and composer Danny Elfman.

Will you love it or even like it?

Maybe yes, maybe no. Movie companies and their marketers keep saying that audiences demand the familiar. Thus, this summer we are being indulged with a record number of tired sequels.

"Batman," however, is so original and unexpected that you are required to accept the unfamiliar.

No one should go expecting a film in any way like the campy 1960s TV series. Bob Kane's 1939 comic strip has closer connections. We see Bruce Wayne (Batman) as a child, for example, watching his parents murdered by a street thug.

The plot contrived by Sam Hamm and Warren Skaaren is mostly functional, but the screenplay in which they've clothed it is mostly inspired. Expect the logic of fantasy and the dream, not realism.

Warner Bros. gave this expensive project — the budget was reportedly $35 million — to a relatively unknown director. Whatever the immediate box office verdict, Tim Burton has reason to be proud of his first major movie. "Batman" soars.

TRANSAM, from Page 16

BikeCentennial, now in its 15th season of offering group bicycle tours, has developed over 16,000 miles of bicycle routes all over North America.

Most of the routes are self-contained camping trips, meaning the cyclists carry everything they need — tents, sleeping bags, tools, food, water, clothes — on their bikes. Most of their belongings are carried in panniers, which resemble a cowboy's saddlebags. All told, the average cyclistotourist hauls about 35 to 40 pounds of gear.

Later this summer Phillips will be a trip leader for a BikeCentennial tour called the New Englander, which goes from Bar Harbor, Maine to Burlington, Vt.

At 130 miles in 14 days, the New Englander is less ambitious than the three-month TransAm journey, but Phillips said the trip will still be a challenge.

"There are some pretty good climbs," he said. The trip takes cyclists through the White Mountains of New Hampshire and the Green Mountains of Vermont.

For Phillips the main reason for getting on a bike for a long, self-contained tour is simply just to say he's done it. "I enjoy traveling with the group ... I get into enjoying the trip," he said.

During the days, most of the cycling groups spread out and ride as individuals. But they end up in a pre-determined spot at night and swap stories about that hard hill or the big dog that tried to eat spokes.

"Arrival is not the goal," Phillips said. "Having fun along the way is the goal."

Most of the cyclists who embark on the summer-long TransAmerica journey are in a state of transition. The average age of TransAm trippers is 30 and nearly most of them are in a middle-life crisis.

Blizard explained the aura of the long-distance tourist, saying: "We are fulfilling a lifelong dream ... leaving our lives behind."

Russ Battaglia, a forty-something TransAm biker, left his job as a telecommunications engineer for his bicycle. "I told my employer I wanted a three-month leave of absence to take a bike trip and they said it wasn't good business practice" to give people three months off at a time, so I quit."

Now Battaglia is riding his second TransAm. "I'm going to make a left at Portland and head down the coast," he said. "I'm going to make this trip last a long time."

Jane Kassis, a recent graduate of Clemson University, said she's biking to "take a break before I get a job. After this, it's the real world."

McEnroe rallies from behind to continue tourney

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — John McEnroe rallied from two sets down for the first time in his career Tuesday to avoid a first-round loss to Darren Cahill on a day rain paid a familiar visit to the Wimbledon Championships.

The three-time Wimbledon conjured some of the magic from his vintage years to down his Australian opponent 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 8-6, earning a standing ovation from a packed center-court crowd of 14,500.

"I don't ever remember coming back from two sets down," McEnroe said after his 3-hour, 22-minute match. "In the past I guess I wasn't put in that position very often."

The victory by the 30-year-old New Yorker at the $5.3 million tournament overshadowed the women's opening day in which the top four seeds — Steffi Graf, Martina Navratilova, Gabriela Sabatini and Chris Evert — won in straight sets.

Zina Garrison, the No. 5 seed from Houston, beat Japan's Kimiko Date 6-1, 6-2 in a rain-interrupted match.

Among the men, No. 8 Tim Mayotte defeated Paolo Cane of Italy 7-6 (7-2), 6-0, 6-1 and No. 11 Brad Gilbert fought from a two-set deficit to tie it

2-2 with Australia's John Fitzgerald when play was halted for the day.

Cahill reached the semifinals at last year's U.S. Open. McEnroe lost to another Aussie, Wally Masur, in the second round of last year's Wimbledon.

Bullet thwarted by golf ball

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — A robber at the Davy Crockett Golf Course fired his gun at Oliver Anthony on the eighth green, but a spare golf ball in Greem's pocket stopped the bullet.

"The golf ball saved my leg and it might have saved my life," said Anthony, 61, of Memphis, who was playing golf on the public course Sunday with his wife, Donalene.

Anthony was chipping onto the eighth green when a robber with a gun appeared and demanded his money.

"I told him he better put that gun away before I wrapped a club around his head," Anthony said. "Then he started shooting."

He said the robber fired four or five shots and then ran without any money. Anthony and his wife ran to the clubhouse to alert police. Later, he noticed a hole in his pocket.

"There was a bullet hole in the side of my pocket, and we thought maybe a bullet ricocheted off my car keys," Anthony said. "When I emptied my pocket, there was the golf ball with the bullet in it."

"There was a complete imprint of the ball on my leg and the skin was broken a little," Anthony said.

Police Capt. Joe Holt said no arrests have been made and he confirmed Anthony's story.

"The bullet struck the golf ball dead-center and lodged in it," Holt said. "It's got to be luck on the golfer's part that the bullet didn't hit his leg."

Matuszak died of accidental overdose of painkiller

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former Oakland Raiders defensive lineman John Matuszak's death June 17 resulted primarily from an accidental overdose of a prescription painkiller called Darvocet, the coroner's office said Tuesday.

An enlarged heart and bronchopneumonia also contributed to his death, said Bob Dambacher, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County Coroner's Office, which released details from its autopsy and laboratory tests.

Tests also detected a small amount of cocaine in his system but that "was not considered to have contributed to his death," Dambacher said.

Matuszak, 38, died as he was being rushed to St. Joseph Medical Center in Burbank from his Hollywood home.

Matuszak's parents, Marv and Audrey, issued an angry statement saying they were aware of their sons chronic pain and "resulting use of drugs" but lashed out at "the scoundrels in the medical profession who recklessly dispense prescription drugs and the parasites of society who distribute illicit drugs from back alleys to fashionable condominiums."

Matuszak was taking Darvocet, a prescription painkiller, which contains Darvon and Tylenol, for an undisclosed ailment, Dambacher said.

"The cause of death has been determined as acute propoxyphene intoxication," a result of the Darvon in the pills.

Carbondale is paradise to bicyclists

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

To some bicyclists, Carbondale is known for two things — its bike shops and its pizza joints.

After roughing it on the road for weeks at a time, Carbondale is paradise to cyclists traveling cross country, surviving on convenience store fare. It's the only town for at least a three day's ride that has full services, i.e. bike shops and pizza.

"We eat for about $35 a day," says Rob Blezard, a leader of a seven-cyclist group that started in Williamsburg, Va. When the group hit Carbondale, it splurged and ate pizza.

"It's kind of nice to save money and then reward yourself with pizza," Blezard said, after substituting for most of his three-week journey to Carbondale on "mostly pasta, rice and potatoes" cooked over a small, backpackers' stove.

Blezard, probably well on his way through the Rockies, is riding on a major byway for bicycle tourists, known as the TransAmerica Trail, which runs right past Carbondale. The route begins or ends — depending on which way you are riding — in Williamsburg and goes to Astoria, Ore.

Carbondale, being a college town, has thousands of bicycles already. But each summer a different breed of bike — a touring bicycle, the semi-truck of the biking world — rolls through, spends a couple of days then is on the road again.

Mark Robinson, the Bike Surgeon, said he estimated that about 250 bicycle tourists come through Carbondale on their way east or west each summer. And probably just about every one of those cyclists leaves here with a Bike Surgeon toothbrush and sponge stuffed somewhere in their gear.

Tourists eat pizza, fix bikes, rest easy

Graphic by Mary Ann Rutledge

The 4,500-mile TransAmerica Trail, created in 1976 by BikeCentennial, a non-profit organization created to map out a cross-country bike route to celebrate the nation's bicentennial, takes bicyclists three months to complete. Carbondale is a suggested rest stop on the journey because of its abundant bike shops and services.

Many of the cyclists ride in organized groups as Blezard is, but many also ride alone. "We see a lot of independents come through here," Robinson said.

Because of its bike shops (four) and abundant services (about 10 pizza joints), Carbondale is a suggested layover on the TransAmerica Trail, giving cyclists a chance to take care of themselves and their bikes.

In Carbondale, taking care of themselves is easy, as Dan Phillips, an avid local bicycle tourist, opens up his home to TransAm groups passing through. "It's nice for them to step out of the shower into a house rather than a field," he said.

"This is the largest town they pass through between Charlottesville, Va. and Newton, Kansas, says Phillips, who is the keeper of "The Log of Passing Through," a spiral notebook that contains words of thanks and inspiration from all the cyclists who've had some of his hospitality.

Phillips, an assistant professor in the University's School of Music, said he has played host to two TransAm groups so far this summer, and plans to have at least two more — one this week — by the end of August. He started the tradition towards the end of last summer.

"Dan has started a great tradition here," Blezard said. These words are reflected by others in "The Log of Passing Through."

At Phillips' house, the cyclists get all the comforts of home — a far cry from waking up in a campground in a tent. Usually the first thing the cyclists do is take a shower, then do laundry, Phillips said.

When cyclists stay at Phillips', his garage resembles a bike shop, with wheels, chains and various other bike parts strewn everywhere. They spend much of their time cleaning and checking their vehicles over, he said.

"They spend a lot of time with their bikes (while staying in Carbondale) because when they leave they have the most demanding sections of the trip to ride through," Phillips said.

For cyclists heading west, the narrow roads and steep, rolling hills of Missouri provide a challenge. Heading east, Kentucky and Virginia prove to be rough.

The cyclists ride through the Rocky Mountains, but the roads are far better there than Missouri, Phillips said. By the time roads were built in the Rockies, heavy equipment was available to build gradually inclining, graded roads.

The 4,500-mile TransAmerica Trail was organized in 1976 by a non-profit organization called BikeCentennial, which was formed for the purpose of mapping out a transcontinental bike route as a way of celebrating the nation's bicentennial.

Bob Smith, Saluki football's new head coach is not taking the summer off to relax even in his team is. For him, football goes on all year.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but summers are a very busy time for us," Smith said, adding that the summer was a time of evaluation. "We set our goals in the summer for the season."

The new coach is spending much of his time trying to fit the pieces together for a competitive team. Formerly an offensive line coach at the University of Illinois, Smith came to SIU-C in January, replacing Rick Rhoades, who left to take a job as an assistant for Alabama football.

Smith and his football staff are incorporating the knowledge they gained about the team during spring practice into their plans. "We spend the whole summer redoing or adding to the offense and defense," explained Smith.

The staff tries to work out its basic game plan in advance of the upcoming season, Smith said. One of the primary tools being used is last season's game films.

"We spend much of the summer breaking down game films," Smith said. The staff breaks down the plays that the other teams ran and the defenses they used in every situation in the search for tendencies.

"If our offensive staff is studying a team, we study every defensive move in every situation." The hope, Smith said, is that they will find some clue as to what the other team will do and capitalize on their weakness.

However, Smith notes that all the teams are trying to gain the same edge making the game a bit more complicated. He claims that the days when coaches ran their same game plan no matter who they are playing are only memories.

Advanced technology, the use of computers and video tape have all found their place in the football agenda. Smith admits that the use of these has "made football a rather complicated game for most coaches."

The advanced technology

also helps the football staff with mailing lists — mailing lists specifically used to contact future recruits.

"We work on recruiting juniors with potential or upcoming seniors in high school during the summer."

Smith started out his summer in contact with high school athletes with a high school football camp here.

Smith says to combat the grind he tries to have everyone on the staff to take at least a week off during the summer. And he knows when to take his own advice. "I'm going with my family this weekend to Minnesota."

Cubs lose! Pirates threaten to sweep Chicago series

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs, in first place by 3½ games last week, are caught in a tailspin.

Mired in a team batting slump, the Cubs lost their fifth straight, 5-4, Tuesday to the Pittsburgh Pirates, matching their longest skid this season.

"We're just not playing real good baseball right now," said veteran right-hander Rick Sutcliffe, 9-5, who was roughed up for four first-inning runs that allowed the Pirates to pull away. "This club will bounce back. Those four runs were just too much."

Sutcliffe last Thursday shut out the Pirates in Pittsburgh. At the end of the day, the Cubs held a 3½ game lead in the National League East. With Tuesday's loss, Chicago dropped to 1½ games behind first-place Montreal. The Expos played host to New York Tuesday night.

The Pirates, who had lost eight straight to the Cubs until this recent roadtrip, have won four straight overall, matching their season high, and will go for the sweep over Chicago at 1:20 today.

"We're just trying to get back in synch," said Pirates manager Jim Leyland, whose team has been decimated with injuries. "We're just trying to play and win as many games as we can. If we're fortunate enough that somebody doesn't play real good that's ahead of us, we've got a chance to sneak back into it."

Randy Kramer, 2-4, allowed two runs and five hits in six-plus innings. He also picked up his first major league hit, a single, and stolen base. Bill Landrum recorded the final five outs for his seventh save.

The Pirates jumped on Sutcliffe with four consecutive hits to start the game. Barry Bonds opened with a single, and Jose Lind and Andy Van Slyke each doubled. Barry Bonilla then drilled an opposite field triple to score Van Slyke for his 36th RBI. Bonilla scored on Wilson's groundout to make it 4-0.

Sutcliffe settled down to strike out six and allow only four more hits before being lifted for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

The Cubs pulled to 4-2 in the bottom of the first. Jerome Walton opened with a single and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Andre Dawson. Damon Berryhill doubled in the second run with two out.
