Area day-care moves to Rec

By Christiann Baxter
Staff Writer

A day-care center for children of SIUC students, faculty and staff has lost its lease and will be forced to terminate its infant and toddler program until another location is found, said Director of Student Development Nancy Hunter Pei.

Rainbow's End will continue its program for children ages 3 to 10 at a temporary location in the Student Recreation Center, Pei said.

But Cheryl Walton, program director of Rainbow's End, said infants and toddlers cannot be placed at the Rec Center because of Department of Children and Family Services requirements for meeting fire marshal codes.

Rainbow's End has the full-time equivalent of eight infants and 10 toddlers, she said. The program currently has 89 children enrolled. Usually about 69 are enrolled during the fall and spring semesters.

Pei said the situation is "devastating." A shortage of full-time day-care during the summer is a problem that compounds the situation, she said. "We've got a lot of parents who are very upset," Pei said.

Rainbow's End leased the Lakeland School building from the Carbondale School District, Pei said. The University was notified in fall 1990 that the school district would take back the building when the lease ran out on June 30. The building is needed for the Carbondale elementary schools, she said.

Walton said as of last week, there still seemed to be some options for a permanent space to move.

"We kept thinking, all along, that permanent space was going to be identified," she said.

Rainbow's End has been looking into potential locations, such as churches and the Carbondale Senior Center, but the buildings have not

Sexist words left out of new dictionary

But many ready to debate over 'politically correct' definitions

By Christine Leninger
Staff Writer

The new Random House Webster's College Dictionary goes an extra mile to be sure that all groups of society are accounted for in its "politically correct" definitions.

"Politically correct is a term including feminism and racism but not only just those two issues. All forms of oppressive language are covered in this dictionary," said Roland Person, assistant undergraduate librarian of Morris Library.

"Many mistakenly think the dictionary is a collection of controversial terms. It is a college dictionary with added usage sections geared toward trying to help people not use oppressive language," Person said.

For instance, any job-related term ending in "man" such as mailman or chairman is followed by a "see-man." When looking up "man usage," it reads, "The use of generic MAN alone and in compounds is declining. Critics of generic MAN maintain that its use is sometimes ambiguous and often slighting to women."

A new entry is included in the dictionary for women's history. "Herstory,"

SIU reprieve may be 'fund' in research

By John Patterson
Staff Writer

As state funds dwindle, SIU is looking for other ways to make up the financial difference and research is a big part of the answer.

Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research Benjamin A. Shepherd said acquiring research money will become an even more important activity than ever because of budget cuts.

Research can help make up the difference that will be left behind if budget cuts are made, Shepherd said.

Since 1986, research grants at SIUC have grown from $26 million to more than $72 million.

Shepherd said he fully expects the amount to increase for fiscal year 1992.

"In large measure we depend on external funds to make the marginally good become excellent," he said.

Research funds help pay the costs if graduate students, workers and equipment used.

Republics vie for freedom in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared independence from Yugoslavia Tuesday night despite warnings by Western nations and the federal government that the moves could lead to civil war in the ethnically divided Baltic country.

The federal government responded by directing the military and the police to enforce Yugoslavia's internal borders.

In Zagreb, the Croatian Assembly passed a package of four decrees that invalidated the federal constitution in the republic. The legislature's chairman, Zarko Domljan, said

SLOVENIA (1.5 million people) and CROATIA (4.7 million) want independence to escape domination from SERBIA (8.5 million).

The military was directed to enforce the borders. The United States says it will not recognize the independence declarations.

University salaries continue to lag for women

By Annette Holder
Entertainment Editor

While women are being paid "thirtysomething," men continue to earn "fortysomething" and more. Clifford Adelman, director of the Division of Higher Education in the Office of Research in the U.S. Department of Education, discovered in his "Women at Thirtysomething" report that women are not recognized for their achievements as much as men are.

The report, conducted by the U.S. Department of Education, followed 22,600 graduates from the Class of 1972.

The study discovered women earned higher GPAs in high school, college and graduate school and earned higher grades in math than men, yet women continued to earn less.

A bill sent to Gov. Jim Edgar Tuesday requiring all state government workers earn the same is not receiving support by the governor. He said he has problems with the possible costs and vagueness of the plan.

At SIUC, tenured associate professor Norma Ewing,

Ph.D. and chairwoman of the Department of Special Education, earns $62,424 yearly, and tenured professor William Eaton, Ph.D. and chairman of the Department of Educational Administration and Higher Education, earns $67,632 yearly. Elaine Vitello, Ph.D. and dean of the College of Technical Careers, earns $75,492 yearly, and Harry Haynsworth, Ph.D. and dean of the School of Law earns $125,004.

Edberg foiled by rain again

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Martina Navratilova made a stuttering start to her Wimbledon title defense Tuesday but fared better against the conditions than men's champion Stefan Edberg, who was frustrated by rain for the second straight day.

Third-seeded Navratilova, mindful of the the nightmare of her 1974 first-round defeat, woke up in time to snatch a 4-6, 6-2, 6-4 victory over South African Elna Reinach, preserving her hopes of a 10th Wimbledon singles title.

Navratilova's unexpectedly tortuous one hour, 45-minute match kept Edberg off the court too long for him to complete his match before the rains returned.

Edberg, whose scheduled championship opener was washed out Monday, followed Navratilova on Center Court.

The Swedish world No. 1 had taken a two-set lead against Switzerland's Marc Rosset when a downpour caused play to be abandoned for the day.

Only 28 of Tuesday's 65 scheduled matches were completed, leaving a major backlog following the loss of Monday's 66-match program.

Organizers, trying to make up the deficit, have advanced the start of Wednesday's play by 90 minutes on the outside courts and one hour on Center Court and Court One.

American John McEnroe and Australian Pat Cash, both former champions, advanced to the second round.

McEnroe, title-holder in 1981, '83 and '84, overpowered Brazilian Jaime Oncins 6-1, 6-2, 6-4 and 1987 champion Pat Cash defeated Jeff Tarango 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. McEnroe, at No. 16, was the only seed among the men to complete a match.

The top seeds scheduled for action Tuesday in the women's event were fortunate to beat the rain.

Navratilova's struggle was in stark contrast to top-seeded

German Steffi Graf, who defeated Sabine Appelmans of Belgium, 6-2, 6-2 on Court One.

Fourth-seeded Spaniard Arantxa Sanchez Vicario outplayed Germany's Barbara Rittner and fifth-seeded American Mary Joe Fernandez scored a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Petra Kamstra of Holland.

Before becoming another statistic in Navratilova's distinguished record as the nine-time champion's 100th singles victim at Wimbledon, Reinach came close to causing a major upset.

The 34-year-old champion was broken for the third time in the deciding set to trail 3-4 but managed to wriggle free more by determination than skill.

Wimbledon serves up high prices

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — It's probably just as well that the winner of the men's singles title at Wimbledon will pocket almost $400,000 in prize money — he'd need most of it to buy himself a souvenir of his fortnight at the All England Club.

Well, admittedly, prices are not quite as steep as that — but at $65 for a bottle of Veuve Cliquot Vintage Reserve champagne and $5

Wisconsin ballplayer signs on with SIUC

By John Sommerhof
Staff Writer

The Saluki baseball team has signed another high caliber Wisconsin ballplayer.

Pete Schlosser signed a national letter of intent to play at SIUC after a rocky start toward his college baseball career.

He previously had signed with the University of Wisconsin but was freed after the Badgers dropped their baseball program.

"It was really frustrating," Schlosser said. "I had a full ride, the school is real close to my home and they have an excellent academic program."

"However, I am looking forward to a warmer winter than we have in Wisconsin," he said.

Oconomowoc High School coach Pat Neary said Schlosser handled the setback like a pro.

"I was really impressed with the way that Pete handled losing his scholarship to the University of Wisconsin," Neary said. "He didn't use it as a crutch and feel sorry for himself; he just chalked it up as experience."

Neary said getting a scholarship and academics played a very important role in Schlosser's choice of schools.

"When I came down to Southern I was really impressed by the facilities, coaching staff and the academic programs at Southern," Schlosser said. "I think the competition in the Missouri Valley Conference will be a higher standard than any other conference I could of played in."

Schlosser also was drafted by several Big 10 teams, including the University of Illinois and the University of Minnesota and MVC teams Bradley and Wichita State.

The Saluki baseball team is hoping Schlosser can fill the shortstop position Kurt Endebrock left open after signing with the Oakland A's.

Schlosser said, "I like both third and short stop and don't care where I get to play."

Not only is Schlosser an outstanding infielder, but he also hit .441 in the Oconomowoc lead-off spot and set a record for his high school with 32 runs scored and 11 doubles.

"Pete is a fine athlete with great speed and a great arm and I think he would of been a great asset to any college team he played for," Neary said.

Schlosser was an All-Conference player his junior and senior years.

The right-handed batter also was the Little Ten Conference Player of the Year.

He lead the Oconomowoc High School to a 20-3 record and a second-place finish in the Wisconsin Division I State Tournament.

SIUC Full 'F' Tilt team finds challenge in sport

By Rob Neff
Staff Writer

Ian Weidner dives for a plastic disk thrown low and in front of him at his Ultimate Frisbee team's practice.

He catches the disc and skids a yard across the grass before jumping up to get back in line at an open field south of Abe Martin Field.

The Makanda resident is doing 'zontals', the Ultimate term for a horizontal dive for a disc.

Weidner is a veteran on Full "F" Tilt, the SIUC Ultimate team.

"It's the greatest team sport ever," Weidner said. "It's a real sportsman like game. You referee yourself and honor the other team's call."

Ultimate is a game that combines basketball, football and soccer and uses a disk instead of a ball.

The field is similar to a football field, but it is 70 yards long and 40 yards wide with 25-yard end zones at the two ends of the field.

The object of the game is to pass the disk to a teammate in the end zone to score one point.

Games usually are played to 21 points, but a team must win by a margin of two points.

The game is started with a pool, which is similar to a kick off in football.

The players of both teams line up on their end zone lines. The defensive team throws the disk as far as it can, and the offensive team tries to recover it and move it up the field by passing back and forth using one of three passes.

The passes used in Ultimate are the backhand, the two-finger or forehand and the overhead.

The backhand is thrown the way most people throw a disk,

China struggles to maintain 'most favored nation' status

BEIJING (UPI)—Premier Li Peng Tuesday threatened painful economic retaliation if China loses its most-favored-nation trade status with the United States, warning the low-tariff agreement is a "two-way street." President Bush has rescinded China for MFN, but members of Congress irked by China's human rights, trade and arms sales policies are pushing bills either to withdraw the status or impose conditions on its renewal. Removal of the status would sharply raise tariffs on Chinese imports to the United States and could cost China billions of dollars in lost sales. In a 20-minute speech on the state of the Chinese economy, Li alternately appealed for annual U.S. extension of MFN to China and warned Washington of the consequences if the status is not renewed. Li pleaded for unconditional extension of the status during the speech.

Bomb explodes on Belfast street, wounds 15

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Two police officers and 13 civilians were wounded by a bomb that exploded close to the U.S. Consulate in the center of Belfast during the Tuesday lunch hour, the Royal Ulster Constabulary said. According to witnesses, two men threw a bomb at RUC officers as they walked from behind a bomb-proof security screen at a police station opposite the consulate in Queen's Street. The pedestrian street was crowded with lunchtime shoppers and no warning had been given. Civilians seized two men who allegedly threw the bomb and turned them over to police. No organization claimed responsibility for the attack, but police said they believed the Irish Republican Army had carried out the bombing and that the consulate was not a target. Two police officers were shot and killed by the IRA outside the police station.

Gunmen open fire on train, killing 6 in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Black gunmen opened fire Tuesday on a train crowded with black commuters traveling from the township of Soweto, killing at least six passengers and wounding 18 others, police and railroad officials said. Shortly before dawn, the gunmen boarded the crowded train transporting mostly blue collar commuters from Soweto to Germiston, an industrial suburb of Johannesburg. The attackers opened fire on the passengers about 5:45 a.m., said Ian Bleasdale, spokesman for Johannesburg's transit authority. At least five people aboard the train, including three women, died from bullet wounds, police spokesman Col. Tienie Halgryn said. Halgryn also said another person was found slain along the tracks. The bodies of two other men were found mangled near the train route.

Plans still unclear for U.S. bases in Philippines

SUBIC BAY NAVAL BASE, Philippines (UPI) — Hundreds of troops armed with shovels and wheelbarrows scooped up volcanic ash coating Subic Bay Naval Base Tuesday, and President Corazon Aquino said U.S. plans for American bases were unclear after Mount Pinatubo's eruption. "There is still no certainty regarding the intentions of the United States regarding the workers and further use of the bases," said Aquino, asked by reporters in Manila about the fate of Subic and Clark Air Base and their 70,000 Philippine laborers. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the volcano damage would certainly affect future negotiations over the largest U.S. military facilities overseas. "We are concerned about it, particularly the enormous cost associated with cleanup and a return to operation there," Fitzwater said.

Deaths of poor children preventable with aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The World Health Organization said Tuesday more than 60 million children in poor nations will die over the next 10 years from pneumonia and the effects of diarrhea. Some 30 million of those deaths can be prevented if the political will to do so is found. In a new report released simultaneously in Washington and Geneva, Switzerland, the U.N. agency said that 3 million children in developing nations die each year from pneumonia, the vast bulk of the 4.3 million children who die from various Acute Respiratory Infections. Additionally, WHO said, 3.2 million children under the age of 5 die each year from the effects of diarrhea. And WHO said up to $1 billion each year is wasted on inappropriate treatment of the two killers, especially the marketing of often useless anti-diarrheal drugs and cold remedies.

A group of Palestinian students hope speakers will help educate SIUC students about the plight of Palestinians around the world, said a General Union of Palestine Students member.

Senate decides to let death penalty stay alive

By Leslie Col,
Staff Writer
and United Press International

The Senate voted Tuesday to keep the death penalty alive.

U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, disagreed and voted for the provision to the bill that would substitute it with a sentence of mandatory life in prison without any chance of release.

David Carle, spokesman for Simon, said Simon feels the life in prison provision would be better for taxpayers and prisoners.

Jackson County State's Attorney Charles Grace was not available for comment, but Brocton Lockwood, a Murphysboro defense attorney, said he agrees the death penalty is not the best alternative.

"I'm not big on killing people," he said. "I wouldn't want to do it, and I wouldn't want to watch it done."

Lockwood said he does not agree that the death penalty will decrease the prison population.

"It doesn't detour crime," he said. "If crime continues at the same rate as it has since 1978 until 2035, one half of the population in Illinois will be behind bars and the other half will be watching."

Although there has been a federal death penalty for years, no executions have been carried out because the laws don't meet the guidelines set by the Supreme Court in 1972.

President Bush urged Congress to act on his bill and said defeat of the amendment was "another disappointment."

"Our bill, in my view, would help fight violent crime and assist law enforcement officials by relieving many of the frustrations of the current system," Bush said. "My view is the American people are tired of watching hoodlums walk and seeing criminals mock our justice system with these endless technicalities."

There are 50 death penalty provisions in the bill, some which

The case of a SIUE Bursar's Office cashier charged with embezzling $234,000 has once again been continued with no set date for the actual trial.

Candice F. Wanzo, 28, of Centralia was charged with the felony and her bank accounts frozen May 23 after an annual internal audit discovered the missing money, said SIUE spokesman Sam Smith.

A preliminary hearing was held

June 3 where Smith said Wanzo pleaded not guilty. Madison County Courthouse workers would not confirm the plea, but did say the freeze had been continued until the next hearing on June 21.

On Friday the case was again continued because the attorney assigned to the case resigned, but it was unconnected to the case, said Marty Head, secretary in the Madison County felony division.

Until the case is reassigned no trial date will be set. Smith said the audit is continuing with a review of procedures by SIUE police.

Low blood reserves dangerous for area

WHEN IN A desperate situation the best thing for people to do is roll up their sleeves and get to work on the problem. That's exactly what the Red Cross is asking of SIUC faculty and students to help with the blood shortage Southern Illinois is experiencing.

Vivian Ugent, Southern Illinois blood drive coordinator, said the area Red Cross has been in a desperate situation since the middle of May, with an inventory 20 percent below normal level.

The depleted blood supply poses a larger danger at this time of year because farm, traffic and sports accidents increase with summertime activities and also because most patients wait until the summertime to schedule surgeries.

AREA HOSPITALS HAVE no blood on reserve and only are able to supply it for emergencies and surgeries.

Although SIUC's original goal for the blood drive this week was 635 pints, 735 pints is needed to get the blood levels at area hospital's out of the red.

This is an achievable goal for SIUC.

Of course, there are always reasons not to give blood—a dreaded fear of needles, no time, the inconvenience. But with lives hanging in the balance all of these excuses lose their relevance.

It's time to get to work SIUC. Roll up those sleeves and give.

Campus recycling reaching for goals

GOALS. IT'S A SIMPLE word, but it sums up why people go to college. A good education bridges the gap between people and their goals.

SIUC has made a goal to recycle. A year ago SIUC began a campuswide recycling program. This week the Campus Recycling program hit its first milestone—recycling 100 tons of waste.

This accomplishment is one to be proud of, however, more work is needed before the campus meets the long-term goal required by the Illinois Solid Waste Management Act. The act requires all universities to recycle 40 percent of their waste by the year 2000. SIUC recycles 3 to 5 percent of its waste.

THE GAP STANDING between this goal and its achievement is volunteers. Students can bridge this gap.

The recycling program is staffed entirely by students, with the majority working on a volunteer basis. But there are not enough volunteers to keep up with timely collection of wastes campus offices save for recycling.

If the recycling program is going to thrive and meet its goals more campus involvement will be needed.

If students truly want to reach the goal of a cleaner environment, it's time to prove it by donating their time.

Edgar needs to support financial aid for elderly

The determination of Gov. Jim Edgar to put the state financial house in order is commendable. But the Illinois State Account cannot be balanced on the back of nursing home residents.

He has announced that he wants to cut the Medicaid rates in Illinois by $7.50 a day. It should be pointed out that Medicaid rates in Illinois are already among the lowest in the country. To date, the state government is owing hospitals, nursing homes, pharmacies and other health care providers more than $250 million in back payments. The financial situation of some local nursing homes in the state is so bad that they cannot meet their bi-monthly payroll deadline due to reimbursement delays by the Department of Public Aid.

To make matters worse, the governor is proposing to reduce what is already inadequate. As a concerned individual, I am imploring the governor, to reconsider his stand on this vital issue. Nursing home patients should not be blamed for the financial woes of the state. They deserve adequate care in terms of medicine, food, clothing and shelter.

Also, the health vendors should not be made culprit. They have important obligations to the patients and their workers. Patients' emotional and physical needs have to be met and employees have to be paid promptly.

Employees in hospitals, nursing homes and other health care institutions are well underpaid, still they have to carry out their daily routine regardless. Cutting Medicaid payments will aggravate the already tense situation.

The governor and his advisers need to get out of Springfield and visit rural nursing homes in the state to assess the problems of patients and their caretakers. A one-hour visit to a local nursing home (rather than relying on reports from senior advisers) will testify to the fact that $7.50 per day reduction in Medicaid payments is unjustified. Such a visit will help the governor to strike a fair and acceptable deal with health care providers.

Politicians should support provisions for financial assistance to the elderly for their survival and well being. There is no reason whatsoever to reduce or delay their Medicaid reimbursement. In fact, they should get more. The financial pressure on health care vendors should be relieved by prompt payments of Medicaid bills by the state government.—Jeremiah O. Elugbadebo, graduate student.

Fellow students better than any tutoring service

"Back in my day..." Don't you hate it when a letter begins that way? It means the writer is about to offer advice based on experiences that occurred before most of your readers were born.

This letter is no exception. It's addressed to the people who want the university to provide more tutors.

Back in my day, (yes, before you were born), we had all the tutors we needed in our fellow students.

We found people all over the University who could help us when we needed it. We also found people who needed our help. By helping each other, we made friends with people we never would have known otherwise.

I could add that we learned a lot more from each other than the subjects we studied. It would be pointless, though. As soon as you see a beginning like "Back in my day," you know an ending like that is inevitable.—Larry Roemer, Junior, English.

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors. The letters space will be a forum for discussion of issues of public interest. Open, civil dialogue is the aim. Letters may be edited for length and content. Letters of fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Letters will be limited to 300 words. Letters that the editors deem objectionable because of potential libelous material or because extraordinary bad taste will not be published. Access to the letters space will be afforded to as many writers as possible to encourage diversity of points of view. Editors may impose, at their discretion, a limit on the frequency of publication of letters by an author. met the necessary fire codes, Walton said.

The fire marshal's code requires operations with over 50 children to have a fire wall, a smoke detection system connected to the main alarm in the building, two exits to the main floor and a pull alarm system connected to the fire department, she said.

The renovation of a building to make it meet all of these requirements would be very costly, Walton said.

Rainbow's End charges fees on a sliding scale basis, Walton said. Students, who tend to have low incomes, paid reduced rates for their children, she said.

Pei said student parents who get a discount are "really going to be hitting."

Walton said there is an extremely crucial need for infant and toddler programs.

"I feel responsible," she said. "I feel like they're my kids. I just maintained hope that there would always be a place for us."

Walton said she is referring parents of toddlers and infants to other day-care centers, but the higher cost of those centers will be a financial burden on student parents.

Student Affairs and the College of Education are working on finding permanent space for Rainbow's End, she said.

"I want to emphasize that the University has not quit on this," Pei said.

Rainbow's End has a goal to reopen, said Walton.

"Hopefully by fall, something will be solved," she said.

Two full-time staff members will be laid off because of the situation, Pei said.

Head Start, which also operated in the Lakeland building, is sponsored by the College of Education.

Head Start doesn't operate in the summer, so it has until September to find a new location, Walton said.

differentiates from history as being women's history.

Heightism and weightism are new terms geared toward not discriminating against short, tall, thin or fat people.

Some SIUC faculty are not in favor of the new dictionary.

"I understand the impulse for this type of dictionary, but usually a dictionary reflects common usage of language. The new Random House dictionary is trying to model language after it," said political science instructor Michael Ester.

"This type of dictionary makes people in the University uncomfortable for what can be accepted as far as language is concerned although I do believe in free speech," Ester said.

Others welcome the new dictionary as a refreshing change.

"This dictionary reflects language changes that have been coming about for years—this is not a new thing. It is a healthy thing because it shows a change in the language," said Bruce Appleby, an English professor.

He also said the dictionary shows alternative uses of old words that may be oppressive to certain members of society.

"The dictionary just happened to come out in a time when it is fashionable to be politically correct. The dictionary will blow over, but the issues it represents will never die," Appleby said.

The dictionary is predicted have good sales potential.

Elisabeth Perry, assistant manager at Waldenbooks in the University Mall, said the dictionary should really do well in Carbondale "because of it being a college town. It seems that anything political will go over well in Carbondale."

Perry said copies of Random House's new dictionary are not available to the public yet, but as soon as it is Waldenbooks probably will have it.

RESEARCH from Page 1

But research also will go through a "belt-tightening" period because of state budget cuts.

"Cuts will leave us anemic and drawn," he said, "frustrated and searching for morale."

Although research funding is expected to increase, Shepherd said it will be hard to continue the search because of a tighter budget.

Fewer dollars means it will be harder to support grant applications, travel and phone calls.

Budget restriction also will affect faculty members who will have to work harder to keep pace with the research increases.

"It's hard to ask faculty to do more with less," he said.

Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs Donald W. Wilson said research has become more and more a part of the University.

During the last 20 years SIU has seen state funding drop from nearly 70 percent to the current level of about 43 percent, Wilson said.

The difference has been made up in tuition income and other non-appropriated income such as research funding, he said.

Private fund-raising done by the SIU Foundation also has helped ease budget cuts, he said.

The foundation reached the $10 million in endowments level in March. It raises money privately for SIUC needs, including scholarships, research and equipment.

SIUC entered private fund-raising in 1982, he said. At that time, the University was raising about $1 million a year in endowments. The foundation is expected to raise $100 million between fiscal years 1990-2000.

The increase in research funding raises questions of corruption and misuse, but Wilson said he isn't worried about possible problems that other universities have gotten into.

Stanford University has been the most publicized case of mismanagement of funds, where federal funding for research was used to meet costs for construction.

"You always try to have the systems in control," Wilson said. "Obviously as more money becomes available the chances of something happening increases, but worry is too harsh a word."

Croatia is now "a sovereign and independent state."

In Ljubljana, the Slovenian Assembly passed virtually identical independence decrees that also would strip the Communist red star from the republic's flag and its coat of arms.

In Zagreb, Domljan said Croatia and Slovenia should "form the alliance of two independent, sovereign states" and with all the other Yugoslav states which respect each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. The republics also said they would seek international recognition.

In Belgrade, the federal government of Prime Minister Ante Markovic convened an emergency session later in the evening after the Federal Chamber of the Yugoslav Parliament directed all federal bodies, including the military and the police, "to prevent the re-cutting of Yugoslavia and changing its borders."

Slovenia and Croatia said they would withdraw their deputies from the Federal Chamber but would keep deputies in the Chamber of Republics and Provinces of the Yugoslav parliament. The chamber deals with nationwide issues; the other house deals with internal issues of the republics.

Slovenia, with the population of 1.9 million, and Croatia, with 4.7 million people, want the six-republic Yugoslav federation of 23 million dissolved into a common market-style association.

Fines for alleged tampering put coal mines in deep dust

By Jennifer Kulier
Staff Writer

Five Southern Illinois coal mines have been fined over $10,000 each for allegedly tampering with dust sample cassettes intended to protect coal miners from black lung disease, according to an announcement by the Secretary of Labor.

The fines were assessed as a result of citations issued by the Mine Safety and Health Administration, said Secretary Lynn Martin.

The largest fine of the five was received by Zeigler Coal Holding Co. for tampering which occurred at its Spartan mine in Randolph County. Zeigler was fined $136,800 for the alleged violation. Zeigler also was fined $25,500 for tampering with dust samples at the No. 11 mine site in Randolph County.

Representatives of Zeigler are currently contesting the allegations of tampering, said Deborah Herndon, manager of government affairs and communications for Zeigler.

"We are not certain that the dust sample cassettes were tampered with intentionally by anyone," said Herndon.

Herndon said the company can't determine if allegations of wrongdoing are true unless the Department of Labor gives them further information.

"The Department has not made clear the basis for these allegations. We don't know how or why the cassettes failed to reflect the level of dust at the mines," she said.

Other coal companies in Southern Illinois charged with tampering include George Kelm Holding Co., which was fined $35,000 for tampering violations at its Mine No. 21 in Saline County.

British Petroleum Co. was fined $12,600 for tampering at Mine No. 21 and $12,000 at Mine No. 25 in Franklin County.

Under a federal law designed to protect coal miners' health, mine operators are required to periodically take dust samples.

The tests are conducted by using a sampling pump to collect respirable dust from the mine air in a sealed, preweighed filter cassette which is then submitted to MSHA.

The amount of dust collected on the cassette's filter shows whether a mine operator complies with the protective standards for miners.

Long overdue tribute: Parade for Korean vets

NEW YORK (UPI) — More than 5,000 middle-aged Korean War veterans marched down Broadway Tuesday through a flurry of ticketape in the first parade in their honor in the 38 years that have passed since the end of the conflict known as "the forgotten war."

The midday observance served as a footnote to the Operation Welcome Home parade which honored the heroes of the Persian Gulf War and paid special tribute to the previously unsung veterans of the Vietnam War.

It couldn't compare in size or fervor to the June 10 "Mother of All Parades," but it had a spirit of its own as a celebration much deserved but long deferred.

"I think plans for the Korean War vets suffered because of the Persian Gulf War, but the vets are still very happy about it," commented Joseph Fitzpatrick, a spokesman for the parade commission, who noted that half of the nation's population hadn't been born when the Korean War ended in 1953.

Some 181,000 residents of the New York City metropolitan area served in Korea, the largest number from any locale.

The event marked the 41st anniversary of the undeclared war.

SIUC graduate inspired by family, creates art signifying experiences

By Annette Holder
Entertainment Editor

Some stairs, a frame and a garden may make an incomplete house, but it makes a complete University Museum exhibit for an SIUC graduate.

Brian Scott Stevenson, from Ohio, said the inspiration for his Masters of Fine Art's exhibit was his family, but he hoped people could draw from their own experiences and come up with their own meaning for his exhibit.

Stevenson exhibited three of his pieces inside the museum and one was shown outside the museum door. With stair steps designed for use in three of the exhibits, the art is interactive with the observer.

Stevenson encouraged participants of the exhibit to walk up the steps of "She Said, Rockhead Not Rocket...Restive." This exhibit features four stair steps leading to a roof with shingles.

"There Was A Fire Once!" is a sculpture with nine solid wood beams placed upright on rust-colored gravel. In the center beam is a carved-out hole.

Stevenson said the hole in the center of the middle beam could signify a lot of different meanings to various people.

"It could mean love, passion and a fire in the heart," Stevenson said. Lissa Machler from Montana said "There Was A Fire Once!" uses familiar materials like wood that create a warm piece that she wanted to reach out and touch.

"The exhibit is architecturally clean and pleasing to the eye," she said.

Stevenson said his sculpture "From A Family of Four," a large tent made of muslin, is about growing up in his family. The tent signifies shelter provided by family, the coal on the bottom of the tent signifies energy and a large bowl inside the tent contains cable and small stones, signifying intertwined memories.

John Foster, graduate in ceramics from Florida, said because of the religious connotations in "From A Family of Four," he discussed with his friends if he could go inside the tent.

"You Want to Go Where," displayed outside the museum entrance, is another interactive sculpture. It features a staircase with a narrow entrance, but the staircase is wide at the top. Stevenson said this signifies the corporate world because it is hard to get in, but at the top there is freedom.

Juliana Taylor, from Mahomet, said unlike most art exhibits she admires from a distance, she liked participating in this exhibit.

Stevenson's sculptures can be purchased for $1,988 to $1,991, the prices signifying years. He described the sculptures as invaluable and did not think they would sell in this area.

The exhibit is on display until July 8. University Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1:30 to 4 p.m. Sunday.

Croatia, Slovenia not recognized as countries by U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States, declaring its continued support for the territorial integrity of Yugoslavia, reiterated Tuesday that it will not recognize the independence declaration of Croatia.

The Croatian Assembly passed independence decrees Tuesday in defiance of pleas from the Yugoslav federal government and Western countries to stay within a unified country.

The Slovenian Assembly also went into session to adopt independence decrees.

Secretary of State James Baker was in Belgrade Friday urging leaders of the Yugoslav republics to stay within the federation.

He said the breakup of Yugoslavia "could have some very tragic consequences" and warned about the possibility of "history repeating itself."

Baker's statement in Belgrade was referring to the 1914 assassination by a young Serbian nationalist of a Habsburg archduke, an event that triggered World War I.

"We will neither encourage nor award secession," a State Department official said Tuesday. "The United States continues to recognize and support the territorial integrity of Yugoslavia."

The official said the United States will be reviewing along with European countries and other members of the international community ideas concerning how "to promote dialogue and prevent violence in Yugoslavia."

Earlier Tuesday, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler noted that the United States has the same non-recognition policy toward Slovenia.

the reason women earn less than men is because jobs involving mathematics are traditionally occupied by males, who earn higher salaries. She said women entering occupations traditionally held by men earn higher salaries.

Pedersen said in a written response that courses in human services and humanities led to jobs usually considered appropriate for females, like teaching and nursing, but also meant a lower salary.

Shirley Kinley, assistant dean of the College of Business and Administration, said she thinks the wage gap is shrinking.

She said women traditionally have not been allowed to advance as quickly as men, but the younger generation now in the job market are beginning to see a change.

Men still earn 29 percent more than women. But women who take at least eight hours of college math will earn 4.5 percent more than men. Division C higher Education Director Clifford Adelman said because math teaches reasoning, women who take math are valued in the work place.

The Department of Education study also found women are smarter and work harder than men and have a more enthusiastic attitude about their job.

150-year-old ship wreckage discovered in Lake Erie

The Atlantic was carrying 600 people when it collided in heavy fog with another ship and sank on Aug. 20, 1852. Only half of them survived but the ship and its valuable contents were believed lost forever.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The wreckage of a luxury steamship that sank nearly 150 years ago in Lake Erie with up to $60 million in gold coins aboard has been discovered in what archaeologists said Tuesday may represent one of the more significant shipwreck finds in history.

The Atlantic was carrying 600 people when it collided in heavy fog with another ship and sank on Aug. 20, 1852. Only half of them survived but the ship and its contents were believed lost forever. A private salvage firm based in Los Angeles, using sonic radar, discovered the ship's wreckage in 1989 but withheld announcing the find until legal details could be ironed out.

On Tuesday, the company, Mar-Dive Corp., displayed some of the first items recovered from the ship, saying the find could be worth up to $200 million.

Steven Edward Morgan, president of Mar-Dive, also said the world's oldest submarine was found on top of the wreckage. He said it apparently landed there during a test mission a year after the sinking. The company plans to attempt to raise the submarine.

Dan Koski-Karell, director of the National Institute of Archaeology in Washington, D.C., described the find of the Atlantic as possibly the most significant discovery from the pre-Civil War era.

"It's a marvelous discovery," he said. "I've seen some of the artifacts and some are in exquisite condition."

Among the items on display were a glass lamp, children's leather shoes, iron tools, mittens and china.

Some of the items were found scattered around the wreckage while some were recovered from the deck of the ship. The vessel was found largely intact, except for an opening in its hull where it was struck.

Additionally, the salvage company estimates that up to $60 million in gold coins will be found on board. Divers have been unable to penetrate the ship's interior, but Morgan said that could happen late this year.

Archaeologists said mud and the fresh cold waters of Lake Erie helped to preserve the ship and its contents.

Morgan said he intends to sell most of what is recovered. As for the Atlantic, he hopes to raise and restore it and make it a traveling museum of pre-Civil War times.

Adelman said teachers tell their students that if they work hard they will be compensated for it. The females believe it and work hard, but the males disregard the advice and still earn more.

Pedersen said another reason women work harder and make better grades is because they are still striving for outside approval that they are doing well.

Sixty-four percent of the new entrants in the job market in the next 10 years will be women. Adelman said the United States is not going to improve its productivity without recognizing the contributions of women.

Chewing the fat: Experts ponder doctor's findings that say reducing fatty intake does not prolong life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A controversial study Tuesday challenged recommendations that Americans eat less fat, saying even if everyone did they would live only about three or four months longer on the average at the most.

The study suggested it may be more useful to put resources into getting people to quit smoking or drive more carefully to reduce deaths from cancer and traffic accidents instead of reducing fat intake.

"These results may be disappointing to those who believe that following a healthier diet will protect them from early death," said the study in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study was not aimed necessarily at discouraging people from eating less fat but instead to put the potential benefits into perspective, said Dr. Warren Browner of the University of California in San Francisco, who led the study.

"Most Americans would like to believe that if we only did all the right things we would live a long time and die happily in our sleep," said Browner, an assistant professor of epidemiology, biostatistics and medicine.

"But that isn't the case. We aren't going to live that much longer, even if we eat less fat," he said in a telephone interview.

"I'm concerned as a physician that people are now in the position of blaming themselves if something happens to them," he said.

Browner said he would recommend people reduce fat intake if they are at risk for heart disease or cancer.

The American Heart Association and the American Cancer Society recommend everyone consume only 30 percent of their daily intake of calories in the form of fat. Currently the average is 37 percent.

Fat can raise levels of artery-clogging cholesterol, possibly boosting the risk for heart attacks and strokes. Fat also has been linked to an increased risk for cancers, such as cancer of the breast, colon and prostate.

Using mathematical models,

Browner and his colleagues estimated if everyone reduced fat intake to recommended levels with the most optimistic results, the annual adult death rate of 2.3 million would be reduced by 42,000.

Spread out over the entire population, that 2 percent reduction in deaths would translate into an increase of three to four months in the average life expectancy, the researchers said.

But Dr. Daniel Nixon of the American Cancer Society said reducing fat in the diet had a variety of other potential health benefits aside from reducing the risk for heart attacks and cancer. "And even if it's only 42,000 deaths, that's something," he said.

Dr. Russell Luepker of the American Heart Association's council on epidemiology and prevention said the study ignores the pain and suffering that would also be prevented by reducing heart attacks and cancer.

"I think it oversimplifies it in a lot of ways," said Luepker, professor of epidemiology at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

The study noted that most of the death reduction would occur in men over age 60 and women over age 70 because those are the groups most with the highest death rates from fat-related diseases, they said.

"From a public health point of view, an increase of three months in life expectancy multiplied by 240 million Americans results in about 60 million years of additional life, although it would require about 90 percent of the population to modify its fat intake," they said.

"From the individual perspective, a possible gain of three or four months of life expectancy is less easy to comprehend, since those benefits would be greater for some persons ... but zero or perhaps negative for many others," they said.

Noting the "the median age of people who die in motor vehicle accidents is under 30 years," the researchers argued that "programs to reduce fatalities from motor vehicle accidents could have substantially greater beneficial effects on life expectancy."

Smuggler hid cocaine in rolls of fat

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — A 450-pound man was arrested for drug-smuggling after police found more than $30,000 of crack in the folds of his stomach.

Wayne Lewis, 23, of Miami was passing through the Tallahassee airport Monday evening when he caught the attention of two police officers patrolling the area.

"He fit the profile that they were looking for," spokesman Phil Kircofe said.

A body search revealed nothing but a drug-sniffing dog accompanying the officers "wouldn't settle down," Kircofe said. "He kept sniffing the guy's stomach so the officers searched him a little more thoroughly."

Friend testifies that accused killer confessed to setting arson blaze

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Cuban immigrant accused of setting the Happy Land Social Club fire confessed his guilt to a friend just hours after 87 persons died in screaming agony in the nation's worst arson blaze, a homicide detective testified Tuesday.

Taking the stand in before Justice Burton Roberts in state Supreme Court in the Bronx for the second day, Detective Andrew Lugo recounted his questioning of Arturo Martinez, who led police to Julio Gonzalez.

Gonzalez, 37, is charged with splashing a dollar's worth of gasoline inside the packed social club March 25, 1990, and throwing a match on it after a fight with his former girlfriend, Lydia Feliciano.

Feliciano, a ticket-taker, survived the blazing inferno at the unlicensed nightclub in the South Bronx jammed with Honduran immigrants and others.

"The victims, screaming to get out of the club which had barred windows and no back entrance, either were asphyxiated or burned to death."

Monday, Lugo testified at the pre-trial hearing that Gonzalez confessed to setting the fire, and on Tuesday the detective elaborated on Gonzalez's actions after the fire. Jury selection was expected to begin next month.

Under cross examination by Gonzalez' court-appointed lawyer, Richard Berne, Lugo said Martinez told him that about 12 hours after the fire he went to Gonzalez' rooming house and Gonzalez came out and sat with him in his car.

Martinez asked Gonzalez if he set the fire, Lugo testified.

"He said he did," Lugo quoted Martinez as saying. "Arturo said, 'Police are going to find out, because Lydia survived.'"

Gonzalez told Martinez if the police showed up to give them his address.

"Arturo said, 'You Must Cray, 87 people died,'" Lugo testified, "and Julio started to cry."

As he spoke, the detective was translated simultaneously into Spanish.

Gonzalez, smartly dressed in a gray sport shirt and slacks, listened without expression.

Drug dealers melt cocaine, transport in plastic objects

MIAMI (UPI) — Innovative smugglers melted down cocaine and mixed it with liquid plastic in a new technique that thwarted conventional drug detection methods, officials said Tuesday.

Instead of hiding the cocaine in hollow plastic parts, a method commonly used, the smugglers incorporated the cocaine into the plastic itself as part of the manufacturing process.

The mixture was then molded into parts resembling black plastic lens caps, but made up of 20 to 30 percent cocaine.

"We have seized what appears to be molds that are plastic molds that actually have the cocaine contained within the mold itself," said Lee Condon, a spokeswoman for the Florida Department of Law Enforcement. "Basically, it's a new way of smuggling cocaine into the country."

Drug-sniffing dogs and other conventional police tools failed to detect the cocaine inside the plastic plugs. But, after experimenting with confiscated samples, forensic chemists discovered the cocaine in the plastic by using sophisticated tests that included molecular scanning.

Investigators have not determined how much cocaine has been smuggled into the country in that manner, nor how long it has been going on.

More than 350 pounds of cocaine contained in plastic plugs was found during simultaneous raids Monday on an apartment in West Palm Beach and an apartment in Miami.

Along with the plugs, FBI and FDLE agents also found chemicals and equipment used in cocaine laboratories, said FDLE head Lonnie T. Cooper.

Egyptian male asks to be bellydancer after having sex-change operation

CAIRO (UPI) — Authorities said Tuesday they are considering a request from a former male medical student who underwent a sex-change operation to work as a belly dancer.

A spokesman for the Cairo Censorship Department, which issues permits to performers, said Sayed Abdel Latif — known as Sally after the operation — submitted a written application to work as a belly dancer after being kicked out of medical school.

Sally was a student at Al Azhar, the oldest Islamic university in the world, but was expelled because the operation was considered a "violation of the teachings of the Islamic religion."

Sally filed an official complaint against the university in the Cairo Courts on grounds of sexism and the case is pending.

Islamic fundamentalists argued strongly against the sex change.

Camera shows mother tried to suffocate child

HOUSTON (UPI) — A woman was jailed on injury to a child charges after a hidden hospital video camera twice caught her placing her hands over the face of her 7-month-old daughter in apparent attempts to suffocate the infant.

Police said Cathy Lanell Knighton, 23, told them she had stopped the baby's breathing several times because she liked the attention she got when she resuscitated the child.

Knighton was jailed in lieu of $20,000 bond and was undergoing a psychiatric examination.

Knighton's daughter, Latesha, was in the custody of Harris County Children's Protective Services.

Doctors said the child is too young to determine if she suffered brain damage in the incidents.

Knighton had been bringing the child to Texas Children's Hospital since her birth because of seizures and apnea, a disorder in which breathing stops, said Dr. Ralph Feigin.

Knighton's two other children — a 4-year-old girl and 3-year-old boy — are in the care of relatives. Both children are in good health.

Shutdown of nuclear plant rejected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a case with national implications, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission refused Tuesday to shut down a Massachusetts nuclear plant that critics charge is unsafe due to age-related deterioration of key equipment.

NRC officials rejected a request by anti-nuclear groups that the Yankee Rowe plant in western Massachusetts be immediately taken out of operation because of concerns about the structural soundness of the steel container housing the reactor.

While acknowledging concerns, the NRC ruled the plant was safe enough to continue operating until its next refueling outage, scheduled for April 1992.

The controversy has nationwide importance in that Yankee Rowe is scheduled to be the first nuclear plant to apply to the NRC for extension of its current operating

Yankee Rowe equipment deteriorating, considered unsafe to continue operation

license, which expires in 2000. It is the oldest commercial nuclear plant in the country, having begun operation in 1963.

Anti-nuclear groups charge the NRC's license renewal program will allow older plants such as Yankee Rowe to continue operating despite dangerous wear-and-tear on key safety equipment.

At Yankee Rowe, the antinuclear Union of Concerned Scientists charged the reactor vessel — a huge steel cylinder housing the reactor — does not meet NRC safety requirements for resistance to cracking.

A crack could lead to a serious accident because the vessel is filled with water essential for cooling the reactor. Loss of cooling water could result in the reactor overheating and the melting of uranium fuel, setting the stage for a major release of radioactivity into the environment.

Cracks become an increasing concern as a reactor ages because normal operations subject a reactor vessel to neutron bombardment that embrittles the metal.

NRC officials have acknowledged "uncertainties" about the durability of Yankee Rowe's reactor vessel. A safety analysis done by the agency in August 1990 concluded the vessel may not meet NRC safety standards.

In a letter to the Union of Concerned Scientists rejecting its request for an immediate shutdown, NRC officials said they had authority to evaluate the overall safety of each plant on a case-by-case basis.

"The failure to comply with a particular NRC requirement does not mean there is no longer reasonable assurance of adequate protection of the public health and safety," wrote Thomas Murley, director of the NRC's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

In a phone interview, Murley said the NRC's decision to allow continued operation was based in large part on calculations showing it was very unlikely that the reactor vessel would be subjected to stresses that might cause a crack.

The main concern is that the vessel might crack during a loss of coolant incident involving a leak or break in pipes feeding water into the vessel.

That kind of incident could trigger the reactor's emergency cooling system, injecting large amounts of cold water into the vessel.

House kills new stables for Quayles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seeking to make some political hay while simultaneously reining in government spending, the House voted "nay" Tuesday on building new horse stables in a Virginia national park for use by Vice President Dan Quayle and his family.

The House, by voice vote, approved an amendment offered by Rep. Peter Hoagland, D-Neb., to prohibit the National Park Service from using $42,000 for the construction of additional stables in the Manassas National Battlefield Park in the suburbs of Washington. The Secret Service claimed the facilities were needed because the Quayle family frequently rides there.

Members of Congress from both parties galloped into the fray to offer their horse-sense on the issue.

"Our people don't send us to this Congress to support this type of ridiculous expenditure," said Rep. Paul Kanjorski, D-Pa.

"If we could get (the vice president) to discontinue two rounds of golf on Saturday at Augusta (the exclusive home course of the Masters tournament in Georgia) at $27,000 a trip, that would be ... $54,000 and that would leave $12,000 for the (riding) lessons," Kanjorski added.

Space shuttle to put $100 million satellite in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The shuttle Atlantis was hauled to the launch pad Tuesday with the ship on track for takeoff July 23 to put a $100 million NASA communications satellite into orbit.

Carried by a powerful crawler-transporter, Atlantis completed the six-hour trip from the Vehicle Assembly Building to pad 39-A at 6:09 a. m., about an hour late because of heavy overnight thunderstorms.

Engineers spent the day Tuesday hooking up fuel lines, electrical systems and hydraulic lines to clear the way for tests to ready the spaceplane for blastoff. While July 23 is NASA's target, an official launch date will not be set until July 12, after a two-day review of ground processing.

In the meantime, Atlantis's five-member crew — commander John Blaha, co-pilot Michael Baker, Shannon Lucid, G. David Low and James Adamson — plan to fly to the Kennedy Space Center next Monday to review emergency procedures and to take part in a dress-rehearsal countdown scheduled to end July 3.

The primary goal of the 42nd shuttle mission, the fourth of six planned for 1991, is the deployment of a $100 million Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, or TDRS, built by TRW of Redondo Beach, Calif.

Engineers plan to load the TDRS satellite into Atlantis's cargo bay Wednesday.

TDRS satellites are used to keep shuttle crews in contact with mission control over at least 85 percent of each orbit, eliminating the need for ground stations scattered around the world. The satellites also are used by unmanned spacecraft, such as the Hubble Space Telescope and the recently launched Gamma Ray Observatory.

Three TDRS satellites — one is used as a spare — are currently in orbit, two stationed over the Indian Ocean and one stationed 22,300 miles above the equator off the coast of Brazil.

The satellite scheduled for launch aboard Atlantis will replace the primary Indian Ocean relay station, which in turn will go into orbital storage for use later as a spare. The satellites are leased from Contel Federal Systems, of Fairfax, Va., for about $20 million a year.

After deploying their satellite payload, the Atlantis astronauts plan to conduct a variety of relatively minor on-board experiments before landing at the Kennedy Space Center, weather permitting.

Bulls to charge through unfamiliar draft territory

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jerry Krause has spent six years trying to complement a world championship player. This will be the first time the Chicago Bulls' vice president of basketball operations will approach the NBA draft looking to complement a world championship team.

Krause came up empty in the 1990 draft, although the Bulls went on to win their first title in the team's 25-year history. Krause traded away the first-round pick to New Jersey for guard Dennis Hopson, whose first season with the Bulls turned out to be a bust.

Krause then used the team's sole remaining 1990 pick, a second-round, on European Player of the Year Toni Kukoc of Yugoslavia. Kukoc decided this summer to take a pass on the NBA and signed with an Italian pro team.

So what can Krause do with the team's sole 1991 draft pick, No. 26 overall, the second-to-last pick in the first round?

In previous drafts, Krause's blue chipper, Michael Jordan, has given his input, whether solicited or not. This year, the MVP of the 1991 NBA Finals said he would leave it up to Krause.

Krause, as usual, is not saying. "We're looking at all our options," he said, "but we think we'll get a good player at No. 26."

One popular theory has the Bulls packaging their pick, along with Hopson, the No. 3 pick overall in 1987, and 1989 first-round pick Stacey King for a veteran player. King, taken sixth overall out of Oklahoma two years ago, fell out of favor this season after reporting to camp out of shape. He later boycotted a practice while protesting for more playing time and found himself buried on the Bulls bench during the postseason.

Krause also has said the Bulls are presently over the salary cap after giving forward Scottie Pippen a five-year contract extension reportedly worth $18 million. Starting center Bill Cartwright and point guard John Paxson are eligible to become unrestricted free agents July 1 and backup forward/center Scott Williams is a restricted free agent.

Chicago also has to decide whether to pick up the option year on reserve forward Cliff Levingston's contract, worth a reported $1.35 million.

"We can't get into the free-agent market right now because we are capped," Krause said.

If his recent track record is any indication, Krause will be busy down to the wire. The last three years, he's made deals just prior to the draft.

In 1988, Krause sent rebounder Charles Oakley to the Knicks for Cartwright and a swap of draft choices.

In 1989, he traded Brad Sellers the night before the draft to Seattle for the 18th pick, then on draft day dealt Dave Corzine to Orlando for a pair of picks and swung a deal with Seattle.

School orders team to halt prayers

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (UPI) — Student athletes at Middletown High School have been ordered to stop praying aloud at football, baseball and basketball games, the city's superintendent of public schools said Tuesday.

"The word has gone out — this simply can't be," said Superintendent Alfred B. Tychsen.

The superintendent reported no complaints from parents or students after his decision received widespread attention this week.

Praying in school is against the law, whether in the classroom or on the ball field, "But they can have a moment of silence," Tychsen said.

The Connecticut Civil Liberties Union agreed.

The group said prayer violates the Constitution's separation of church and state, but a moment of silence is permitted, when players may pray silently, if they wish.

The group was not aware of any similar cases in Connecticut public schools, said Martha Stone, legal director of the ACLU.

The issue came to light in late May when the Middletown High School student newspaper, Blue Prints, disclosed that football and baseball players were praying before and after games.

Tychsen and other school administrators said they were not aware of the extent of the practice before the article appeared.

The superintendent immediately sent a memorandum to all coaches, ordering vocal prayers be banned next season, but allowing the moment of silence.

Neil Skene, who graduated last week from the high school, said the prayers were a regular part of the routine when he played football, basketball and baseball.

The football team would recite the Lord's Prayer before and after games, with players also asking for the safety of players on both teams, said Skene, who also prayed with his teammates on the baseball and basketball squads.

Palmer, Nicklaus officially join field for Kroger Senior Classic

MASON, Ohio (UPI) — The second annual Kroger Senior Classic got a somewhat unexpected shot in the arm with the announcement that both Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus officially have joined the field.

Palmer, who faded to finish 16th after an opening round 5-under par 67 in last week's PaineWebber Invitational in Charlotte, N.C., was encouraged enough to enter the Kroger event, July 5-7 at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center, north of Cincinnati.

Prior to Paine Webber, Palmer had talked of curtailing his 1991 schedule because he had been playing poorly this year.

Nicklaus, who has won four of the seven Senior PGA events he's entered since turning 50 early last year, will take advantage of a sponsor's exemption to play in the Kroger Classic.

"From day one, I said they'd both be here," said tournament chairman Burch Riber. "We were going to have the tournament anyway. Jack and Arnie only enhance it."

Nicklaus didn't compete in the required number of Senior Tour events in 1990 to retain his exempt status for open, full-field tournaments this year.

"There are a few reasons why I'm playing," said Nicklaus. "One, (former Taft Broadcasting chairman) Charlie Mechem is a great friend, and he had asked me to play last year and I couldn't. Burch Riber also asked me to do a few things."

Assuming you have a ticket to get in — basic cost $26.40 or $18.15 but selling for at least 10 times more than that on the black market — you can watch tennis (when it's not raining), eat, drink, buy things and go home completely broke.

Strawberries and cream, the traditional Wimbledon snack food, sells this year for $4.12 — not bad until you realize that all you get are six strawberries and a single dollop of cream.

And if you don't fancy any champagne to wash the strawberries down but prefer instead a Pimms No. 1 Cup, another Wimbledon tradition which tastes like sweet fizzy beer but packs a kick like Boris Becker's first serve, be prepared to pay $7.59 a pint. In most pubs, if you drink it at all, you'll pay no more than $3.20.

Wimbledon is big business — and the business gets bigger every year. Twenty years ago the daily program cost 35 cents; in 1981 the cost had risen to $2.47, and today it costs $4.95.

There is no doubt the size and quality of the programs have improved with time, and the current version is packed with articles and statistics — just the thing to while away the hours waiting for the rain to stop.

And of course when it rains, people need umbrellas. Streetwise entrepreneurs set up roadside stalls Tuesday morning offering umbrellas the size of handkerchiefs for $16.50. The same vendor was selling baseball caps emblazoned with the logo "Wimbledon 90." How much for this year's model?

with a backhand extension of the arm and a snap of the wrist.

The forehand and overhead are similar to each other. The disc is gripped with two fingers and thrown with a forehand extension and a snap of the wrist. The forehand pass is thrown at the same level as a back hand and the overhead is thrown above the head of the thrower.

A turnover occurs if a pass is incomplete or if the thrower takes too long to throw the disc.

Tony Ianno, assistant director of computing for the College of Education and captain of the team, says what makes the game really great is the running and non-stop action, along with the social atmosphere of play.

"It's a great form of exercise. There's a lot of running, and unlike like road running, it's easier on your knees and you get to play with other people," he said. "It's not only a team sport—we hang out together as a team. It's very much a social event. There's always a party at the tournaments."

Ianno has been playing Ultimate for about 12 years but some on the team have just started playing.

Tom Hollenhorst, a researcher in the cooperative wildlife research lab, has played only twice in his life.

He joined the team because he was looking for a fun way to get in shape.

"I think it's a lot of fun," Hollenhorst said. "It's a hell of a workout. You're running all the time."

Athletic ability helps, but a player does not need a lot of ability to be good at Ultimate, Weidner said.

"You really don't need to be big or fast to be good at Ultimate. You just need to learn the fundamentals."

Full "F" Tilt travels to tournaments about every weekend, but all tournaments are optional.

Anyone interested in playing Ultimate Frisbee should call Ianno at 549-8394 or Weidner at 549-7527 for details on practices and tournaments.

Cardinals extend contracts until '93

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals have extended the contracts of General Manager Dal Maxvill and Manager Joe Torre through 1993.

Team officials announced the contract extensions just before Monday night's 4-1 loss to the San Diego Padres at Busch Stadium.

"Both Dal and Joe have done outstanding jobs," said Fred Kuhlmann, the club's president and chief executive officer.

Maxvill was named general manager in February 1985.
